And fare now wel I charge The no more,
But er I go, thus muche I wol The tel,
Ne shal no trewe lovir come in hel.

These othir ladies sitting here arowe
Ben in my balade, if thou const hem knowe,
And in thy bokis al thou shalt hem finde,
Have hem now in thy legende al in minde,
I mene of them that ben in thy knowing,
For here ben twenty thousande mo sitting
Than that thou knowist, and gode women al, 560
And trewe of love, for ought that maie befall;
Makith the metris of hem as The leste,
I mote gone home, the sunne drawith weste,
To paradis, with al this companie
And servin alwaie the fresh daïsie;
At Cleopatra' I wol that thou beginne,
And so forthe, and my love so shalt thou winne;
For let se now what man that lovir be Wol done so strong a paine for love as she;
I wote wel that thou maiest not al it rime, 570
That suche loviris diddin in ther time,
It were to longe to redin and to here,
Suffisith me thou make in this manere,
That thou reherce of al ther life the grete;
Astir these olde authors liste for to trete;
For who so shal so many' a storie tel,
Sey shortily, or he shal to longe dwell.
And with that worde my bokis gan I take,
And right thus on my legende gan I make.

Thus endeth the Prologue.

Here beginneth the Legende of CLEOPATRA Quene of Egypte.

After the dethe of Ptolemy the king,
That all Egypt had in his governing,
Reignid his suster Quene Cleopatras;
Til on a time bifel there suche a caas,
That out of Rome was sent a Senatour
To conquerin relmis, and bring honour
Unto the toune of Rome, as was usaunce,
To have the worlde at her obesaunce;
And sothe to saie, Antonius was his name;
So fil it, as fortune him ought a shame,
Whan he was fallin in prosperite, 10
Rebel unto the toune of Rome is he,
And or al this, the suster of Cæsar
He left her falsly, er that she was ware,
And would algatis han anothir wife,
For whiche he toke with Rome, and Cæsar strife.

Nathelesse, for sothe this ilk^e Senatour
Was a ful worthy gentil werriour,
And of his deth it was ful grete damage,
But love had brought this man in such a rage, 20
And him so narrow boundin in his laas,
And al for the love of Cleopatras,

That al the world he set at no value,
Him thought there was nothing to him so due
As Cleopatras for to love and serve,
Him rought^e nat in armis for to sterve
In the defence of her, and of her right.

This noble quene eke lovid so this knight,
Through his deserte, and for his chivalrie,
As certainlie, but if that bokis lie, 30
He was of person, and of gentilnesse,
And of discrecion, and of hardinesse,
Worthy to any wight that livin maie,
And she was faire, as is the rose in Maie,
And, for to makin short^e is the best,
She woxe his wife, and had him as her left.

The wedding and the feste to devise,
To me, that have itakin suche emprise
Of so many a storie for to make, 40
It were to longe, lest that I shoulde flake
Of thing that berith more effecte and charge;
For men maie overlade a shippe or barge,
And forthy to effecte than wol I skippe,
And al the remnaunt I wol let it slippe.

Octavian,

Octavian, that wode was of this dede,
Shope him an hoste on Antony to lede,
Al uttirly for his distruction,
With stoute Romainis, cruil as Lion,
To ship thei went, and thus I let 'hem faile.

Antonius was ware, and wol not faile
To metin with these Romaines, if he maie;
Toke eke his rede, and both upon a daie
His wife and he, and al his host forth went
To ship anone, no lengir thei ne stent,
And in the se it happid 'hem to mere,
Up goeth the trumpe, and for to snoute and shete,
And painin 'hem to set on with the sunne,
With grisly sounne out goith the grete gonne,
And hertily thei hurtlin al at ones,
And fro the top doune comith the grete stones, 60
In goth the grapinel so ful of crokes,
Among the ropis ran the shering hokes,
In with the polaxe presith he and he,
Behinde the maste beginnith he to fle,
And out againe, and drivith him or borde,
He stickith him upon his sper's orde,
He rent the saile with hokis like a sithe,
He bringeth the cuppe, and biddith 'hem be blith,
He pourith pesen upon the hatchis slider,
With pottis ful of lime, thei gon togider, 70
And thus the longe daie in fight thei spende,
Til at the last, as every thing hath ende,
Antonius is shent, and put to flight,
And al his folke to go, that best go might,
Fleeth eke the Quene, with al her purple saile,
For strokis, whiche that went as thicke as haile,
No wondir was, she might it nat endure;
And whan Antony sawe that avinture,
Alas (qð he) the daie that I was borne!
My worship in this daie thus have I lorne, 80
And for dispaire out of his witte he sterre,
And rose himsele anon throughout the herte,
Er that he ferthir went out of the place;
His wife, that could of Cesar have no grace,
To Egypt fled, for drede and for distresse;

But herkenith ye that spekin of kindenesse.

Ye men that falsely swerin many' an othe
That ye wol die, if that your love be wrothe,
Here maie ye sene of women such a trouth,
This woful Cleopatre' had made suche routh 90
That there n'is tonge none that maie it tel,
But on the' morowe she wol no lengir dwel,
But made her subtil werkmen make a shrine
Of al the rubies and the stonis fine
In al Egypt, which that she coude espie,
And she put ful the shrine of spicerie,
And lette the corse enbaume, and forth she fette
This ded corse, and she in the shrine it shette,
And next the shrine a pit than doth the grave, 100
And al the serpentis that she might have
She put 'hem in that grave, and thus she seide,
Now love, to whom my so'rowful hert obeide
So ferforthly, that fro that blisful hour
That I you swore to ben al frely your,
I menè you, Antonius my knight,
That nevir waking in the daie or night
Ye n'ere out of mine hert's remembraunce,
For wele or wo, for carole, or for daunce,
And in my selfe this covenant made tho, 110
That right suche as ye feltn, wele or wo,
As ferforth as it in my powir laie,
Unreprovable' unto my wifchode aie,
The same would I felin, in life or dethe,
And thilkè covenant, while me lastith brethe,
I wol fulfil, and that shal wel be sene,
Was ner unto her love a trewir Quene,
And with that word, nakid, with ful gode hert,
Among the serpentis in the pitte she stert,
And there she chese to have her burying,
Anone the nedirs gonne her for to sting; 120
And she her deth recevith with gode chere,
For love of Antony that was her dere.
And this is storial sothe, it is no fable.
Now er I finde a man thus trewe and stable,
And wol for love his deth so frely take,
I praeie God let our hedis nevir ake.

Here endeth the Legende of CLEOPATRA.

Here foloweth the Legende of THISBE of Babylone.

AT Babylone whilom fil it thus,
The whichè toun the Quene Simiramus
Let dichin al about, and wallis make
Full hie, of hardè tilis wel ibake,
There werin dwelling in this noble toun
Two lordis, which that were of grete renoun,
And wonidin so nigh upon a grene,
That there n'as but a stone wal 'hem bitwene,
As oft in grete tounis is the wonne,
And sothe to saine, that one man had a sonne, 10
Of al that londe one of the lustyist,
That othir had a doughtir, the fairist
That estward in the world was tho dwelling;
The name of everiche gan to othir spring,
By women that were neighbouris aboute,
For in that countre yet withoutin doute
Maidinis ben ikepte for jelousie
Ful straitely, lest thei diddin some folie.

This yongè man was clepid Pyramus,
And Thisbe hight the maide (Naso saith thus) 40
And thus by reporte was ther name ishovè,
That as thei woxe in age, so woxe ther love,
And certaine, as by reson of ther age,

Ther might have ben betwixt 'hem mariage,
But that ther fathirs n'olde it nat assent;
And thei in love ylike fore bothè brent,
That none of al ther frendis might it lette,
But privily somtimis yet thei mette
By sleight, and spakin some of ther desire,
As wrie the glede, and hottir is the fire; 30
Forbid a love, and it' is ten times so wode.

This wal, which that betwixt 'hem both ystode,
Was cloven atwo, right fro the top adoun,
Of oldè time, of his foundacioun,
But yet this clifte was so narow and lite,
It was nat fenè (dere inough a mite)
But what is that, that love can not espie?
Ye lovirs two, if that I shal nat lie,
Ye foundin first this lile narowe clifte, 40
And with a sounde, as softe as any shrifte,
Thei let ther wordis through the clifte pace,
And toldin, while that thei stoden in the place,
Al ther complaint of love, and al ther wo,
At every time whan thei durstin so.

Upon that one side of the wal stode he,
And on that other sidè stode Thisbe,

The

The swete founne of othir to receve,
 And thus ther wardeins wouldin thei disceve,
 And every daie this wal thei wouldin threte,
 And wist to God, that it were doun ibete,
 Thus would thei faine, alas! thou wickid wal,
 Thorough thine envie thou us lettist al,
 Why n'ilt thou cleve, or fallin al atwo,
 Or at the lestè, but thou wouldist so,
 Yet wouldist thou but onis let us mete,
 Or onis that we mightin kissin swete,
 Than were we curid of our caris colde;
 But nathèlesse, yet be we to The holde,
 In as muche as thou suffrist for to gone
 Our wordis through thy lime and eke thy stone, 60
 Yet oughtin we with The ben wel apaide.

And whan these idil wordis werin saide,
 The coldè wal thei woldin kisse of stone,
 And take ther leve, and forth thei woldin gone;
 And this was gladly in the evintide,
 Or wondir erly, lest men it espide.
 And longè time thei wrought in this manere,
 Til on a daie, whan Phœbus gan to clere,
 Aurora with the strems of her herte
 Had dryid up the dewe of herbis wete,
 Unto this clifte, as it was wonte to be,
 Come Pyramus, and aftir come Thisbe,
 And plightin trouth, right fully in ther faie,
 That ilke samè night to stele awaie,
 And to begile ther wardeins everichone,
 And forth out of the Cite for to gone;
 And for the feldis ben so brode and wide,
 For to metin in o place at o tide
 Thei settin markes ther metingis should be
 There king Ninus was graven, undir a tre,
 For olde painims, that idollis heried,
 Usidin tho in feldis to ben beried,
 And fastè by his grave was a wel,
 And shortly of this tale for to tel,
 This covenant was affirmid wondir fast,
 And longè 'hem thoughtin that the sonne last,
 That it n'ere gone undir the se adoun.

This Thisbe hath so grete affectioun,
 And so grete liking Pyramus to se,
 That whan she sawe her timè might ybe,
 At night she stalle awaie ful privily,
 With her face iwimplid full subtilly,
 For al her frendis (for to save her trouthe)
 She hath forsake alas! and that is routhe,
 That evir woman would ybe so trewe
 To trustin man, but she the bet him knewe;
 And to the tre she goeth a ful gode pace,
 For love made her so hardy in this case,
 And by the welle adoun she gan her dresse.
 Alas! than comith a wilde Lionesse
 Out of the wode, withoutin more arest,
 With bloody mouthe, of strangling of a best,
 To drinkin of the wel there as she sat.
 And whan that Thisbe had espyid that,
 She rist her up, with a ful drery herte,
 And in a cave with dredful fote she sterte.
 For by the mone she sawe it wel withall,
 And as she ran, her wimple let she fall,
 And toke none hede, so sore she was awhaped,
 And eke so glad for that she was escaped:
 And thus she sat, and lurkith wondir still.
 Whan that this Lionesse hath dronke her fill,
 Aboutin the well gan she for to winde,
 And right anon the wimple gan she finde,
 And with her bloody mouthe it al to rente,
 Whan this was done, no lengir she ne stente,
 But to the wode her way than hath she nome.

And at the last this Pyramus is come,
 But al to longè alas! at home was he
 The mone shone, men mightin wel ife,

And in his waie, as that he come ful fast,
 His eyin to the grounde adoun he cast,
 And in the sonde, as he behelde adoun,
 He saw the steppis brode of a Lioun,
 And in his hert he sodainly agrose,
 And pale he wexte, therwith h.s hert arose,
 And nere he came, and founde the wimple torne:
 Alas (qð he) the daie that I was borne!
 This o night wol both us loviris fle,
 How should I askin mercy of Thisbe, 130
 Whan I am he that have you slaine? alas!
 My biding hath you slainè in this caas.
 Alas! to bidde a woman gone by night
 In placè there as perill fallin might,
 And I so slowe, alas! I ne had be
 Here in this place, a furlonge waie er ye.
 Now what Lioun that is in this forest
 My body mote he rentin, or what best
 That wilde is, gnawin mote he now mine herte.
 And with that worde, he to the wimple sterte, 140
 And kiste it ofte, and wepte on it ful sore,
 And said, wimple, alas! there n'is no more,
 But thou shalt fele as wel the blode of me,
 As thou hast felte the bleding of Thisbe,
 And with that worde he smore him to the herte;
 The blode out of the wounde as brode asterte
 As watir, whan the conduite brokin is.

Now Thisbe, which that ne wist not of this,
 But sitting in her drede, she thoughtè thus,
 Yf it so fallin that my Pyramus 150
 Be comen hithir, and may me nat ifinde,
 He maie me holdin false, and eke unkinde,
 And out she cometh, and aftir him gan spien
 Both with her hertè, and eke with her eien,
 And thought, I wol him tellin of my drede,
 Both of the lionesse and of my dede;
 And at the last her love than hath she founde
 Ybeting with his helis on the grounde
 Al bloody, and therwithal abacke she sterte,
 And like the wawis quappe began her herte, 160
 And pale as boxe she woxe, and in a throwe
 Avisid her, and gan him wel to knowe,
 That it was Pyramus her hertè dere.
 O! who could writin whiche a dedly chere
 Hath Thisbe now, and how her here she rent,
 And how she gan her selfin to turment,
 And how she lieth and swounith on the ground,
 And how she wept of teris ful his wounde,
 How medlith she his blode with her complaint,
 How with her blod her selvin gan she paint, 170
 How clippith she the red ded corse, alas!
 How doth this woful Thisbe in this caas!
 How kiffith she his frosty mouthe so colde!
 Who hath don this? and who hath ben so bolde
 To slean my lefe? o speke my Pyramus,
 I am thy Thisbe, that The callith thus;
 And therwithal she listith up his hed.

This wofull man, that was nat fully ded,
 Whan that he herde the name of Thisbe crien,
 On her he cast his hevvy dedly eyen, 180
 And doun againe, and yeldith up the goft.
 Thisbe rist up, withoutin noife or boft,
 And saw her wimple and his empty sheth,
 And eke his swerde, that him hath don to deth,
 Than spake she thus, my woful hande (qð she)
 Is stronge inough in fuche a werke to me,
 For love shal yeve me strenght and hardinesse,
 To make my woundè large inough I gesse,
 I wol The folowen ded, and I wol be
 Felawe, and cause eke of thy deth (qð she) 190
 And though that nothing save the deth only
 Might The fro me departin trewily,
 Thou shalt no more departin now fro me
 Than fro the deth, for I wol go with The.

And

And now ye wretchid jelouse fathirs out,
We that ywerin whilom childrin your,
We prayin you, withoutin more envie
That in o grave we both motin lie,
Sens love hath brought us to this pitous ende,
And rightwife God to every lovir sende,
That lovith trewly, more prosperite,
Than evir had Pyramus and Thisbe,
And let no gentil woman her assure
To puttin her in suche an avinture
But God forbid but that a woman can
Ben as true and as loving as a man,

200

And for my part, I shal anon it kith,
And with that word, his swerd she tokè swith,
That warme was of her lov'is blode, and hote;
And to the herte she her selvin smote.
And thus are Thisbe' and Pyramus ago,
Of trewe men I findin but fewe mo
In al my bokis, save this Pyramus,
And therfore have I spokin of him thus,
For it is deinte to us men to findè
A man that can in love be trewe and kinde.
Here maie ye sene, what lovir so he be,
A woman dare, and can as wel as he.

Here endeth the Legende of THISBE of Babylone.

Here foloweth the Legende of Dido Quene of Carthage.

Glorie and honour, Virgile Mantuan,
Be to thy name, and I shal as I can
Folowe thy lanterne, as thou goest biforne,
How Æneas to Dido was forsworne
In thine Æneide, and Nafo wol I take
The tenour and the gret effectis make.
Whan Troie ybrought was to distruction
By Grekis sleight, and namely by Sinon
Faining the horse offrid unto Minerve,
Through which that many a Trojan must sterve, 10
And Hector had afir his deth apered,
And fire so wode, that it might nat ben stered,
In al the noble toure of Iliion,
That of the cite was the chiefe dongeon,
And al the coundre was so lowe ibrought,
And Priamus the king fordone and nought,
And Æneas was chargid by Venus
To flien awaie, he toke Ascanius,
That was his son, in his right hande, and fledde,
And on his backe he bare, and with him ledde 20
His oldè fathir, clepid Anchises,
And by the waie his wife Creusa he lese,
And mokil sorow had he in his minde,
Er that he could his felawship yfinde,
But at the last, whan he had 'hem yfounde,
He made 'hem redy in a certaine stounde,
And to the se ful fast he gan him hie,
And sailith forth, with al his companie,
Towards Itailè, as wold destine.
But of his aventuris in the se
N'is nat to purpose for to speke of here,
For it accordith nat to my matere,
But as I said, of him and of Dido
Shal be my talè, til that I have do.

So longe he sailid in the saltè se,
Til in Libye unneth arrivid he,
With shippis sevin, and no more navie,
And glad he was to londè for to hie,
So was he with the tempest al to shake;
And whan that he the havin had itake,
He had a knight was callid Achates,
And him of all his felowship he chese
To gone with him, the coundre for t' espie,
He ne toke with him no more companie,
But forthe thei gon, and left his shippis ride,
His fere and he, withoutin any guide.

So long he walkith in this wildirnesse,
Till at the last he met an huntireffe,
A bowe in honde, and arowis had she,
Her clothis cuttid were unto the kne,
But she was yet the fairist creature,
That evir was iformid by nature,

And Æneas and Achates she grette,
And thus she to 'hem spake, whan she 'hem met.

Sawe ye (qð she) as ye han walkid wide,
Any of my fultrin walke you beside,
With any wildè Bore, or othir best,
That thei have huntid to in this forest;
Ituckid up, with arowes in ther caas?

Naie sothly Ladie (qð this Æneas)
But by thy beaute, as it thinkith me,
Thou mightist nevir yerthly woman be, 60
But Phoebus sustir art thou, as I gesse,
And if so be, that thou be a Goddesse,
Have mercie on our labour and our wo.

I n'am no Goddesse sothly qð she tho,
For maidins walkin in this coundre here
With arowes and with bow, in this manere,
This is the relme of Libye, there ye ben;
Of whiche that Dido ladie is and quene,
And shortly tolde all the occasion,
Why Dido came into that region, 70
Of whiche as now me listith nat to rhyme,
It nedith nat, it n'ere but losse of time,
For this is all and some, 'it was Venus,
His ownè mothir, that spake with him thus,
And to Carthage she bade he should him dight,
And vanishid anon out of his sight.
I could folowin worde for worde Virgile,
But it would lastin all to longè while.

This noble Quene, that clepid was Dido, 80
That whilom was the wife of Sichæo,
That fairir was by ferr than the bright sonne,
This noble toun of Carthage hath begonne,
In whiche she reignith in so grete honour,
That she was holdin of all Quenis flour,
Of gentilleffe, of fredome, and beaute,
That well was him, that might her onis se,
Of Kingis and of Lordis so desired,
That all the worlde her beaute had ifired,
She stode so well in every wight's grace.

Whan Æneas was come unto the place, 90
Unto the maistir temple' of all the toun,
There Dido was in her devocioun,
Full privily his waie than hath he nome,
Whan he was into the large temple come,
I can not saine, if that it be possible,
But Venus had him makid invisable
Thus saith the boke, withoutin any lese.

And whan this Æneas and Achates
Haddin in this temple ben ovir all,
Than foundin thei depaintid on a wall 100
How Troie and all the lande distroyid was,
Alas that I was borne! (qð Æneas)

50

T t t t

Thorough

Thorough the world our shame is kid so wide,
Now it is paintid upon every side:
All we that werin in prosperite
Ben now disclaundrid, and in soche degre,
No lengir for to livin I ne kepe;
And with that word he braft out for to wepe
So tendirly, that routh it was to sene.

This freshe ladie, of the cite Quene,
Stode in the temple, in her estate roiall,
So richily, and eke so faire withall,
So yong, so lustie, with her eyin glade,
That if that God, that hevin and yerth made,
Would have a love, for beaute and godenesse,
And womanhede, and trouth, and semelinese,
Whom should he lovin, but this ladie swete?
There n'is no woman to him half so mete.
Fortune, that hath the world in govinaunce,
Hath sodainly brought in so newe a chaunce,
That nevir was there yet so frened a caas;
For all the companie of Æneas,
Which that we wenid have lorne in the se,
Arivid is nought ferre fro that cite,
For whiche the gretist of his lordis, some
By avinture ben to the cite come,
Unto that same temple for to seke
The Quene, and of her focour her beseke,
Soche renome was ther sprong of her godenes.

And whan that thei had tolde all ther distres, 130
And all ther tempest, and all ther hard case,
Unto the Quene apperid Æneas
And opinly beknewe that it was he;
Who haddin joie than, but his meine
That haddin found ther lorde, ther govirnour?

The Quene saw that thei did him soche honour,
And had herd oft of Æneas, er tho,
And in her herte she had rounthe and wo,
That evir soche a noble man as he Shall ben disheritid in soche degre, 140
And sawe the man, that he was like a knight,
And suffisaunt of persone and of might,
And like to ben a very gentilman,
And well his wordis he besettin can,
And had a noble visage for the nones,
And formid well of brawne and eke of bones,
And astir Venus had soche fairenesse,
That no man might be halfe so faire I gesse,
And well a lorde him semid for to be;
And for he was a straungir, somewhat she
Ylikid him the bet, as God doe bote, 150
To some folke of this newe thing is fore;
Anon her herte hath pite of his wo,
And with that pite Love ycame also,
And thus for pite and for gentilnesse
Refreschid must he ben of his distresse.

She sayid certis, that she sorie was,
That he hath had soche perill and soche caas,
And in her frendly speche in this manere
She to him spake, and saied as ye maie here.

Be ye nat Venus sonne and Anchises?
In gode faith all the worship and encrese
That I maie godely doen you, ye shall have,
Your shippis and your meine shall I save;
And many' a gentill worde she spake him to,
And commaundid her messangirs to go
The same daie withoutin any faile,
His shippis for to seke, and 'hem vitale,
Full many' a best she to the shippis sent,
And with the wine she gan 'hem to present, 170
And to her roiall paleis she her spedde,
And Æneas alwaie with her she ledde.

What nedith you the festis to discrive?
He nevir bet at ese was in his live,
Full was the fest of deinties and richesse,
Of instrumentes, of song, and of gladnesse,

And many' an amo'rous loking and devise.

This Æneas is come to Paradise
Out of the swolowe' of hell, and thus in joie
Remembrith him of his estate in Troie, 180
To daunsing chambris, full of paramentes,
Of riche beddis, and of ornamentes,
This Æneas is ledde astir the mete,
And with the Quene whan that he had ysete,
And spicis partid, and the wine agon,
Unto his chambir was he lad anon,
To take his ese, and for to have his rest,
With all his folke, to doen what so 'hem left.

There ne was courfir well ibridlid none, 190
Ne stedè for the Justing well to gone,
Ne large paulfrey, esie for the nones,
Ne jewill yfret full of riche stones,
Ne sackis full of gold, of large wight,
Ne Rubie none that shinith bright by night, 200
Ne gentill hautin faukon heronere,
Ne hounde for Harte, or wilde Bore, or Dere,
Ne cuppe of gold, with floreins newe ibette,
That in the londe of Libye maie ben gette,
That Dido ne' hath Æneas it isent,
And all is payid, what that he hath spent, 210
Thus can this worthy Quene her gestis call,
As she that can in fredome passin all.

Æneas sothely eke, withoutin lese
Hath sent to his shippis by Achates
Astir his sonne, and astir riche thinges,
Both sceptre, clothis, brochis, and eke ringes,
Some for to were, and some for to present,
To her, that all these noble thinges him sent,
And bad his sonne how that he should ymake,
The presenting, and to the Quene it take. 220

Repairid is this Achates again,
And Æneas full blisfull is and fain
To sein his yonge sonne Ascanius,
For unto him it was reportid thus,
That Cupido, that is the God of Love,
At prayir of his mothir hie above,
Yhad the likenesse of the childe itake,
This noble Quene enamoured for to make
On Æneas, but as to that scripture 230
Be as be maie, I make of it no cure,
But soth is this, the Quene hath made soch chere
Unto this childe, that wondir was to here,
And of the present that his fathir sent
She thankid him full oft in gode entent.
Thus is this Quene in plesaunce and in joie
With all these newe lustie folke of Troie,
And of the dedis hath she more enquired
Of Æneas, and all the storie lered
Of Troie, and all the longè daie thei twaie 240
Entendidin for to speke and to plaie,
Of whiche there gan to bredin soche a fire,
That selie Dido hath now soche desire
With Æneas her newe gest to dele,
That she hath lost her hewe and eke her hele.

Now to the' effect, now to the fruite of all,
Why I have told this storie, and tellin shall.

Thus I beginne, it fell upon a night,
Whan that the Mone upreisid had her light,
This noble Quene unto her rest ywent,
She sighid sore, and gon her self tourment, 240
She walkith, waloweth, and made many braied,
As doen these lovirs, as I have herd saied,
And at the laste, unto her sustir Anne
She made her mone, and right thus spake she than.

Now derè sustir mine, what maie it be,
That me agastith in my dreame? (qð she)
This ilke newe Trojan is so in my thought,
For that me thinketh he is so well iwrought,
And eke so likely for to ben a man,
And therwithall so mikill gode he can, 250

That

That all my love and life lieth in his cure,
Have ye nat herd him tell his avinture?

Now certis, Anne, if that ye redè me,
I woldin fain to him iweddid be;
This is the effect, what should I more seine,
In him lieth all, to doe me live or deine.

Her sustir Anne, as she that coud her gode,
Said as her thought, and somdele it withtode;
But hereof was so long a fermoning,
It were to long to makin reherfing, 260
But finally, it maie not be withstonde,
Love woll ylove, for no wight woll it wonde;
The dawning uprist out of the falte se;
This amorous Quene chargith her meinè
The nettis dresse, and speris brode and kene,
An hunting woll this lustie freshe Quene,
So prickith her this newè jolie wo,
To horse is all her lustie folke igo,
Unto the court the houndis ben ibrought,
And upon courfir swift as any thought, 270
Her yongè knightis hevin all about,
And of her women eke an hugè rout;
Upon a thicke palfraic, papirwhite,
With sadill redde, enbroudid with delite,
Of golde the barris, up enbossid high,
Sate Dido, all in golde and perreywrigh,
And she is faire, as is the brightè morowe,
That helith sick folkis of night's sorowe,
Upon a courfir, startling as the fire,
Men mightin tourne him with a little wire.

But Æneas, like Phœbus to devise,
So was he fresh arayid in his wife,
The fomie bridill, with the bitte of gold,
Govirnith he right as himself hath would;
And forthe this noble Quene, this ladie ride
On hunting, with this Trojan by her side.
The herde of Hartis foundin is anon,
With hey go bet, pricke thou, let gon, let gon,
Why n'il the Lion comin or the Bere, 290
That I might him ones metin with this spere,
Thus fain this yongè folke, and up thei kill
The wilde Hartis, and have 'hem at ther will.

Emong all this to romblin gan the heven,
The Thondir rorid with a grisly steven,
Doun come the rain, with haile and slet so fast,
With hevin's fire, that made so sore agast
This noble Quene, and also her meinè,
That eche of 'hem was glad awaie to fle,
And shortly fro the tempest her to save,
She fled her self into a little cave, 300
And with her went this Æneas also,
I n'ot with 'hem if ther went any mo,
The auctour makith of it no mencion,
And here began the depe affection
Bitwixt 'hem two, this was the firstè morowe
Of her gladnesse, and ginning of her sorowe,
For there hath Æneas iknelid so,
And tolde her all his hert, and all his wo,
And sworne so depè to her to be true,
For well or wo, and chaungin for no newe, 310
And as a false lovir so well can plain,
That selie Dido rewid on his pain,
Toke him for husbond, and became his wife
For evirmore, while that 'hem last shulde life:
And aftir this, whan that the tempest stente,
With mirth out as thei came, homeward thei went,
The wickid fame uprose, and that anon,
How Æneas hath with the Quene igon
Into the cave, and demid as 'hem list.
And whan the king (that Yarbass hight) it wist, 320
As he that bad her loved evir his life
And wowid her to havin to his wife,
Soche sorow' as he hath makid, and soche chere,
It is a routhe and pite for to here;

But as in love all daie it happith so,
That one shall laughin at an othir's wo,
Now laughith Æneas, and is in joie,
And more richesse, than evir was in Troie.

O selie woman, full of innocence,
Full of pite, of truthe, and continence, 330
What makid you to men to trustin so?
Have ye soche routhe upon ther fainid wo,
And have soche old enlamlis you beforne?
Se ye nat all how that thei ben forsworne?
Where se ye one, that he ne' hath laste his lefe,
Or ben unkinde, or doen her some mischefe,
Or pillid her, or boftid of his dede?

Ye maie as well it sene as ye maie rede.
Takith hede now of this grete gentilman,
This Trojan, that so well her pisin can, 340
That fainith him so true and obeising,
So gentill, and so privie' of his doing,
And can so well doen all his obeisaunce,
And waitith her at festis and at daunce,
And whan she goeth to temple', and home again,
And fastin till he hath his ladie sein,
And beren in his devisis for her sake,
N'ot I nat what, and songis would he make,
Justin, and doen of armis many thinges,
Sende her lettirs, tokins, brochis, and ringes. 350

Now herkenith how he shal his lady serve;
There as he was in perill for to sterve
For hungir and for mischefe in the se,
And delolate, and fledde fro his countre,
And all his folke with tempest all to driven,
She hath her body and eke her relme yeven
Into his honde, there as she might have ben
Of othir lande than of Carthage a Quene,
And lived in joy inough, what would ye more?

This Æneas, that hath thus depe iswore, 360
Is werie of his craft within a throwe,
And the hote ernest is all ovirblowe,
And privily he doeth his shippis dight,
And shapith him to stele awaie by night.

This Dido hath suspicion of this,
And thoughtin well that it was all amis;
For in his bedde he lieth anight and siketh,
She askith him anon, what The misliketh,
My derè herte, whiche that I lovin moste?

Certis (qð he) this night my fathir's ghoſte 370
Hath in my slepe me so forely tourmented,
And eke Mercurie' his message hath presented,
That nedis to the conquest of Itaille
My destinie is sonè for to faile, 300
For which me thinkith, brostin is mine hert,
Therwith his falsè teris out thei stert,
And takith her within his armis two.

Is that in ernest (qð she) woll ye so?
Have ye not sworne to wife me for to take?
Alas! what woman woll ye of me make? 380
I am a gentill woman, and a Quene,
Ye woll not fro your wife thus foul yflene,
That I was borne alas! what shall I do?

To telle in short, this noble Quene Dido,
She sekith halowes, and doeth Sacrifice,
She knelith, crieth, that routh is to devise,
Conjurith him, and profe'rith him to be
His thrall, his servaunt, in the best degre,
She fallith him to fore, and sownith there
Dischevilid with her bright gildid here, 390
And saith, have mercy, let me with you ride,
These lordis, whiche that wonnin me beside,
Woll me distroyin onely for your sake;
And if ye wolle me now to wife ytake,
As ye have sworne, than woll I yeve you leve,
To slaen me with your swerde, now sone at eve,
For than yet shall I dyin as your wife;
I am with childe, and yeve my childe his life,

O mercie

O mercie lorde, have pite in your thought,
 But al this thing availith her right nought,
 For on a night he sleping let her lie,
 And stole away into his cumpany,
 And as a traiteur forthe he gan to faile
 Towardis the large countre of Itaile,
 And thus hath he last Dido' in wo and pine,
 And weddid there a ladie hight Lavine;
 A clothe he laft, and eke his sworde standing,
 Whan he fro Dido stale in her sleping,
 Right at her bedd'is hedde, so gan he hie,
 Whan that he stale awaie to his navie.

Which cloth, whan felie Dido gan awake,
 She hath it kiste ful oftin for his sake,
 And said, swete cloth, while Jupiter it lef,
 Take my soule, unbinde me of this unrest,
 I have fulfilled of fortune all the course,
 And thus alas, withoutin his focourse,
 Twentie timis ifwounid hath she than,
 And whan that she unto her sustir Anne
 Complained had, of which I maie not write,
 So grete routh I have it for to endite,

400

410

420

And bad her norice and her fustrin gon
 To fetchin fire, and othir thinges anon,
 And sayid that she wouldè Sacrife,
 And whan she might her timè well aspie,
 Upon the fire of Sacrifice she sterre,
 And with his sworde she rofe her to the herte.
 But as mine auctour saith, yet this she seide,
 Or she was hurtin, beforne or she deide,
 She wrote a lettre' anon, and thus began.

Right so (qð she) as the milkwhite Swan
 Ayenst his deth beginnith for to sing,
 Right so to you I make my complaining,
 Not that I trowe to gettin you again,
 For well I wote that it is al in vain,
 Sens that the goddes ben contrarious to me,
 But sin my name is lost through you (qð she)
 I maie well lese a worde on you or letter,
 All be it I shall be nevir the better,
 For thilke wind, that blewe your ship awaie;
 The same winde hath blowe awaie your faie;
 But who so wol al this lettre' have in minde,
 Rede Ovide, and in him he shall it finde.

430

440

Thus endeth the Legende of DIDO Quene of Carthage.

Here foloweth the Legende of HYPsipyle and MEDEA.

Thou rote of false loviris Duke Jason,
 Thou fleer, devourir, and confusion
 Of gentill women, gentil creatures,
 Thou madist thy reclaiming and thy lures
 To Ladies, of thy scathliche aparaunce,
 And of thy wordis farfid with plesaunce,
 And of thy fainid trouthe, and thy manere,
 With thine obeisaunce and humble chere,
 And with thine counterfeitid pain and wo,
 There othir falsin one, thou falsid two
 O oftin swore thou, that thou wouldist die
 For love, whan thou ne feltist maladie,
 Save foule delite, whiche that thou callist love,
 If that I live, thy name shall be yshove
 In Englishe, that thy deceipt shall be knowe,
 Have at The Jason, now thin horn is blow.
 But certis, it is bothè routh and wo,
 That Love with false lovirs werkith so,
 For thei shal have well bettir love and chere
 Than he that hath aboughtin love full dere,
 Or had in armis many' a blodie boxe,
 For ay as tendre' a Capon eteth the Fox,
 Though he be fals, and hath the foule betraied,
 As shall the gode man that therefore hath paid,
 Although he have to the' capon skill and right,
 The false Foxe woll have his part at night.
 On Jason this ensample' is well isene
 By Hypsipyle', and Medea the Quene.

In Thessalie, as Ovide tellith us,
 There was a knight that hightin Peleus,
 That had a brothir, whiche that hight Æson,
 And whan for age he might unnethis gon,
 He yave to Peleus the govirning
 Of all his reigne, and made him lorde and king,
 Of whiche Æson, this Jason gettin was,
 That in his time, in all that land there n'as
 Nat soche a famous knight of gentillesse,
 Of fredome, of strengthe, and of lustinesse,
 Aftir his fathir's deth, he bare him so,
 That there n'as none that list to ben his foe,
 But did him all honour and companie;
 Of whiche this Peleus hath grete envie,
 Imagining that Jason might ybe

10

20

30

40

Enhaunfid so, and put in soche degre,
 With love of lordis of his regioun,
 That from his reigne he maie be put adoun;
 And in his wit anight compassid he
 How this Jason might best distroyid be Withoutin sclaudir of his compasment:
 And at the last he toke avisement,
 That to sende him into some ferre countre;
 Theras this Jason maie distroyid be,
 This was his wit, all made he to Jason
 Grete chere of loke, and of affection,
 For drede lest that his lordis it espide.
 And so bifell it, as fame ronith wide,
 There was soche tiding or all, and soche loos,
 That in an Isle, that callid was Colchos,
 That stonte beyonde Troie Estward in the Se,
 There was a Ram, which that men mightin se,
 That had a Flees of golde, that shone so bright,
 That no where was there soche an othir sight;
 But it was kept alwaie with a Dragoun,
 And many othir marvailles up and doun,
 And with two Bullis, makid all of bras,
 That spittin fire, and mochil thing ther was;
 But this was eke the talè nathèles,
 That who so would ywinnin thilkè Flees,
 He must bothe, or that he it winnin might,
 With the Bullis and with the Dragon fight.

50

60

70

And king Oëtus lorde was of that Ile.
 This Peleus bethought upon this while,
 That he his nevewe Jason would exhort
 To sailin to that londe, him to disport,
 And sayid, nevewe if it might ybe
 That soche a worship might befallin The,
 That thou this famous trefure mightist win,
 And bringin it my region within,
 It were to me grete plesaunce and honour,
 Than were I holdin to quite thy labour,
 And all thy costis I woll my self make,
 And chesith what folke thou wolt with The take;
 Let se now, darste thou takin this voiage.
 Jason was young, and lustie of corage,
 And undirtok to doen this ilke emprise;
 Anon Argus his shippis gan devise.

80

With

With Jason went the strong stout Hercules,
And many' an othir, that he with him ches,
But who so askith, who is with him gon,
Let him rede the boke Argonauticon,
For he woll tel a tale long inough.
Philocrates anon thei faile up drough,
Whan that the winde was gode, and gan him hie
Out of his countre, callid Thessalie.
So long thei sailid in the salte se,
Till in the Ile of Lemnos arived he;
All be this nat reherfid of Guido,
Yet saith Ovide in his Epistlis so;
And of this Ileland ladie was and Quene,
The faire and yonge Hypsipyle the thene,
That whilom Thoas doughtir was the king.

Hypsipyle was gon in her playing,
And roming on the clevis by the se;
Undir a banke anone espyid she
Where laie the shippe, that Jason gon arive;
Of her godnesse adoune she sendith blive
To wetin, if that any straunge wight
With tempest thiðir were iblowe anight,
To doen hem socour, as was her usaunce
To furthrin every wight, and don plesaunce,
Of very bounte, and of curtesie:

This messangir adoune him gan to hie,
And founde Jason and Hercules also,
That in a cogge to londe werin igo
Hem to refreshin, and to take the aire;
The morowning attempre was and faire,
And in ther waie this messangir hem mette,
Full conningly these lordis two he grette,
And did his message, asking hem anon
If thei wer brokin, or ought wo begon,
Or had nede of lodesmen, or of vitaille,
For of succour they sholdin nothing faile,
For it was uttirly the Quene's will.

Jason answerid mekily and still,
My ladie (qð he) thanke I hertily
Of her godnesse, us nedith truily
Nothing as now, but that we werie be,
And comin for to plaie out of the se,
Till that the winde be bettir in our waie.

This ladie romith by the cliffe to plaie
With her meine, endlong upon the stonde,
And findith Jason, and this othir, stonde
In speking of this thing, as I you told.

This Hercules and Jason gan behold,
How that the Quene it was, and faire her grete,
Anon right as ther with this ladie mete,
And she toke hede, and knewe by ther manere,
By ther arae, by wordis, and by chere,
That it were gentillmen' of grete degre,
And to the castel with her ledith she
These straunge folke, and doith hem gret honor,
And askith hem of travaile and of labor,
That thei have suffrid in the salte se,
So that within a daie, or two or thre
She knewe by the folke that in his shippis be
That it was Jason full of renomè,
And Hercules, that had the grete loos,
That soughtin the adventures of Colchos,
And did hem honour, more than before,
For with hem deled evir longir the more,
For thei ben worthy folke withoutin lese,
And namely moste the spake with Hercules,
To him her herte she bare, an he should be Sadde, wife, and trug, of wordis avisè,
Withoutin any othir affection
Of love, or othir imaginacion.

This Hercules hath this Jason so preised,
That to the Sunnè he hath him up reised,
That halfe so true a man there n'as of love
Undir the cope of heven that is above,

And he was wise, hardie, secrete, and riche,
Of these iii. pointis, there n'as non himliche,
Of fredome passid he, and lustichedde
All tho that livin, and all tho ben dedde;
Thereto so grete a gentillman was he,
And of Thessalie likely king to be,
There n'as no lacke, but that he was agast
To love, and for to spekin shamefast,
Him had levir himself murdir and die,
Than that men should a lovir him espie,
As woldè God above that I had give
My blode and fleshe, so that I might live
With the bones, that he had aught where a Wife
For his estate, for soche a lustie life
She sholdin ledin, with this lustie knight;
And all this was compassid on the night
Betwixin Jason, and this Hercules,
Of both these two here was a shreude lese
To come to house upon an innocent,
For to bedote this Quene was ther entent;
And Jason is as coie as is a maide,
He lokith pitoussly, but naught he saied,
But frely yave he to her counsaillers
Yeftis full grete, and to her officers;
As would God that I lefir had and time,
By processe all his woicing for to rime,
But in this house if a false lovir be,
Right as himself now doeth, right so did he,
With faining, and with every subtil dede;
Ye get no more of me, but ye woll rede
Th' originall, that tellith all the caas.

The sothe is this, that Jason weddid was
Unto this Quene, and toke of her substance,
What so him list, unto his purveiaunce,
And upon her begate he childrin two,
And drough his faile, and sawe her nevir mo.
A lettir sent she unto him certain,
Which were to long to writin and to sain,
And him reprovith of his grete untrouth,
And prayith him on her to have some routh,
And on his childrin two, she saied him this
That thei be like of alle thing iwis
To Jason, save that thei couth nat begile,
And prayid God, or it were longe while,
That she, that had his herte irest her fro,
Mote findin him untrue, and false also.
And that she muste both her childrin spill,
And alle tho that suffrith him his will;
And true to Jason was she all her life,
And evir kept her chaste, as for his wife,
Ne nevir had she joie at her herte,
But dyid for his love of sorowes smerte.

To Colchis comith is this Duke Jason,
That is of love devoufir and dragon,
As Matire appetith forme atwaie,
And from forme into forme it passin maie,
Or as a welle that were bottomles,
Right so can false Jason have no pees,
For to desirin through his appetite
To doen with gentilwoman his delite,
This is his luste, and his felidite.
Jason is romid forthe to the cite,
That whilom clepid was Jasonicos,
That was the maistrir of all Colchos,
And hath itolde the cause of his coming
Unto Ætæa, of that countre king;
Praying him that he must doen his affaie,
To gette the Flesc of golde, if that he maie,
Of whiche the king ailentith to his bone,
And doth him honour, as it is to done,
So ferforth, that his doughtir and his heire
Medea, whiche that was so wise and faire,
That fairir sawe there nevir man with eye,
He made her doen to Jason companie

At mete, and sittin by him in the hall.

Now was Jason a semely man withall,
And like a Lorde, and had a grete renoun,
And of his loke roiall as a Lioun,
And godelie of his speche, and familiere,
And coud of love the craft and art plenere
Withoutin boke, with everiche observaunce,
And as fortune her ought a foule mischaunce,
She woxe enamorid upon this man.

Jason (qð she) for ought I se or can
As of this thing, the whiche ye ben about,
Ye and your self ye put in mochil doubt,
For who so woll this avinture atcheve,
He maie nat wele astertin, as I leve,
Withoutin deth, but I his helpè be;
But nathèles it is my will (qð she)
To forthrin you, so that ye shall nat die,
But turnin sounde home to your Thessalie.

My right fair lady (qð this Jason tho)
That ye have of my deth or of my wo
Any regarde, and doen me this honour,
I wor wel that my might, ne my labour
May nat deservin it my liv'is daie,
God thankè you, there I ne can ne maie,
Your man am I, and lowely you beseche
To ben my helpe, withoutin morè speche,
But certis for my deth shal I not spare.

Tho gan this Medea to him declare
The peril of this case, fro point to point,
Of his batayle, and eke in what disjoynt
He motè stondin, of whiche no cature
Save onely she, ne might his lyfe assure;
And shortly, right to the poynt for to go,
They ben accordid full betwyxe 'hem two,
That Jason shal her wedde, as her true knight,
And terme yfet to comin sone at night
Unto her chambre, and make there his othe
Upon the goddess, that he for lefe or lothe
Ne shulde her nevir falsin nyght ne daye,

To ben her husbonde whyle he lyvin maye,
As she that from his deth him savid here.

And hereupon at night they mette yfere,
And doth his othe, and goth with her to bedde,
And on the morowe upwarde he him spedde,
For she hath taught him how he shal nat fayle
The flees to wyne, and stintin his bataile, 280
And savid hym his life, and his honour,
And gate him a name, as a Conquerour,
Right through the sleight of her enchantement.
Now hath Jason the hese, and home is went
With Medea, and trefours full grete wonne.
But unwyste of her fathir she is gonne
To Thessalye, with duke Jason her lefe,
That aftirwarde hath brought her to mischefe.

For as a traytour he is from her go,
And with her leste yongè childrin two, 290
And falsely hath betrayid her, alas!
And er in love a chese traytour he was,
And weddid yet the thirde wyfe anon,
That was the doughtir of the kyng Creon.

This is the mede of lovyng and guerdon,
That Medea receved of duke Jason
Right for her trouth, and for her kyndinesse,
That loved him bettir than her self, I gesse,
And leste her fathir, and her herytage;
And of Jason this is the vassalage, 300
That in his dayes n'as nevir non yfounded
So false a lovyr goyng on the grounde;
And therefore in her lettir thus she sayd,
First when she of his falsnesse him upbrayd,
Why lykid me thy yelowè here to se
More than the boundis of myn honeste?
Why lykid me thy youth and thy fayrnesse
And of thy tonge the' insynite gracynesse?

O! haddest thou in thy conquest ded ybe,
Ful mikil untrouth had there dyed with The. 310
Wel can Ovide her lettre' in verse endyte,
Whiche were as now to longe for to write.

Here endeth the Legende of HYPSPYLE and MEDEA.

Here foloweth the Legende of LUCRECE of Rome.

Owe mote I sain th'exilyng of kyngis
Of Rome, for ther horrible doyngis,
Of the laste kynge Sextus Tarquinius,
As saith Ovid, and Titus Lyvius;

But for that cause tel I nat this storye,
But for to prayse, and drawe in memorye
The very wyfe, the very true Lucrese,
That for her wifehode, and her stedfastnesse,
Nat onely that these panymes her commende,
But that yclepid is in our legende,
The gret Austyn, that hath compassioun
Of this Lucrece, that starfe in Rome toun,
And in what wise, I woll but shortly trete,
And of this thing I touch not but the grete.

Whan Ardea besiegid was aboute
With Romayns, that ful sterne werin and stout,
Ful longe lay the siege and litil wroughten,
So that they wer halfe ydil, as 'hem thoughten,
And in his play Tarquinius the yonge
Gan for to jape, for he was lyght of tonge,
And sayid, that it was an ydle lyfe,
No man dyd there no more than did his wife,
And let us speke of wivis, that is best,
Praise everie man his own, as him leste,
And with our spechis let us ese our herte.

A knight (yclepid Colatin) up sterre,
And sayid thus, nay, sir, it is no nede
To trowin on the worde, but on the dede,
I have a wife (qð he) that as I trowe
Is holdin gode of al that er her knowe, 30
Go we to Rome to nyght, and we shul se.

Tarquinius answerde, that lykith me;
To Rome they be comin, and fast 'hem dighte
To Colatyn's house, and downe they light,
Tarquinius, and eke this Colatine;

The husbonde knewe the eftirs wel and fyne,
And ful prively into the house thei gone;

Nor at the gate ne portir was there none,
And at the chambre dorè they abyde;
This noble wife fate by her bedd'is fyde 40
Discheveled, for no malyce she ne thought,
And soft wol, faith Livy, that she wrought
To kepin her from slouth and ydilnesse,
And bad her servauntes done ther besinesse,
And askith 'hem, What tidinges herin ye?
How faith men of the siege, howe shal it be?
God wolde the wallis were fallin adowne,
Myn husbond is to long out of this towne,
For whichè drede doth me sorely to smerte,

Right as a sworde it styngith to mine hert,

50
Whan

Whan I thinkin on this or of that place,
God save my lorde, I pray him for his grace;
And therewithal so tendirly gan wepe,
And of her werke she toke no more kepe,
But mekily she let her eyin fal,
And thilkè semblant fate her wel withal,
And eke her teris ful of honestè
Embelissid her wifely chastitè,
Her countinaunce is to her hertè digne,
For thei accordidin in dede and signe.
And with that worde her husbonde Colatin,
Or she of him was ware, came sterling in,
And sayid, drede The nat, for I am here;
And she anone up rose, with blisful chere,
And kyssed him, as of wivis is the wonne.

Tarquinius, this proude king's sonne,
Concevid hath her beautie and her chere,
Her yelowè here, her bountie', and her manere,
Her hewe, her wordis, that she hath complained,
And by no craft her beautie was nat fained,
And caught unto this lady soche desire,
That in his hert he brent as any fire
So wodely, that his witte was all forgotten,
For wel thought he she shuldè nat be gotten,
And aye the more that he was in dispaire,
The more he covetith, and thought her faire,
His blindè luste was al his coveting.
On morowe, whan the birde began to syng,
Unto the sieg he cometh ful privily,
And by himselfe he walkith sobirly,
The ymage of her recording alway newe,
Thus lay her here, and thus fresh was her hew,
Thus fate she, thus she spake, this was her chere,
Thus faire she was, and this was her manere;
Al this conceite his herte hath newe ytake,
And as the se, with tempest al to shake,
That aftir whan the storme is al ago,
Yet wolle the watir quappe a daie or two,
Right so, though that her formè were absent,
The plesaunce of her formè was present,
But nathelèssè nat plesaunce, but delite,
Or an unrightful talent with dispite,
For maugre her, she shal my lemman be,
Hap helpith hardy man alway (qð he)
What endè that I make, it shal be so.
And gyrtè him with his sworde, and gan to go,
And he forth ritt til he to Rome is come,
And al alone his way that he hath nome
Unto the houle of Colatin ful right;
Down was the sunne, and day hath lost his lyght,
And in he come, unto a privie halke,
And in the night ful thefely gan he stalke,
Whan every wight was to his rest ybrought,
Ne no wight had of treson soche a thought,
Whethir by windowe, or by othir gin,
With swerde ydrawe shortly he comith in
There as she lay, this noble wife Lucrece,
And as she woke, her bedde she feltin presse;
What best is that (qð she) that wayith thus?

I am the king's sonne Tarquinius,
(Qð he) but and thou crie, or noise ymake,
Or if thou any creature awake,
By thilkè God, that formid man of lyve,
This swerdè through thyne hertè shal I ryve,
And therewithal unto her throte he sterre,
And set the swerde al sharpe upon her herte.
No word she spake, she hath no might therto,
What shal she saine, her witte is al ago,
As when a wolfe findith a lambe alone,
To whom shal she complaine or make her mone? 120
What, shal she fightin with an hardie knight?
Wel wotte men that a woman hath no might;
What shal she crie, or how shal she asterte?
That hath her by the throte with swerde at herte;

She askith grace, and said al that she can.

No, wolt thou nat tho (qð this cruil man)

As wisely Jupiter my soule save
As I shal in thy stable fle thy knave,
And lay him in thy bedde and loudè crie
That I The fyndin in soche avoutrie; 130
And thus thou shalt be ded, and also lese
Thy name, for that thou shalt none othir chese.
This Romaines wives lovidin so ther name
At thilke tyme and dredidin so the shame,
That what for fere of slaundre', and dred of deth,
She lost at onis both her wit and breth,
And in a swough she lay, and woxe so ded,
Men mightin smitin of her arme or hed,
She felith nothing, neithir foule ne feyre.

Tarquinius, that art a king's heyre, 140
And shuldift, as by linage and by right,
Done as a lorde, and as a very knight,
Why hast thou done dispite to chivalrye?
Why hast thou done thy lady vilanie?
Alas, of The this was a vila'inous dede!
But nowe to the' purpose, in the story' I rede.
Whan he was gonne, and this mischaunce is fal,
This lady sent aftir her frendis al,
Fathir, mothir, and husbonde, al yfere,
And dischevilid with her herè clere, 150
In habyt soche as women usid tho
Unto the buryeng of ther frendis go
She fate in hal, with a sorowful syght,
Her frendis askin what her aylin myght,
And who was ded? and she fate aye wepyng,
A worde for shame ne may she forth out bring,
Ne upon them she durstè nat behold;
But at the laste of Tarquin she 'hem tolde
This ruful case, and al this thyng horrible,

The wo to tellin were impossible, 160
That she and al her frendis make at ones,
Al haddin folkis hertis ben of stones,
It might have makid 'hem upon her rewe,
Her hert ywas so wifely and so trewe,
She said, that for her gilte ne for her blame
Her husbonde shulde nat have the foule name,
That woldè she nat suffrin by no waye.
And they answerid al unto her faye
That they foryave it her, for it was right,
It was no gylte, it lay nat in her myght, 170
And saydin her ensamplis many one,
But al for naught, for thus she said anone,
Be as be may (qð she) of forgivynge,
I will nat have no forgifte for nothing,
But privily she coughtin forth a knife,
And therewithal she rafte her selfe her life,
And as she fel adowne she cast her loke,
And of her clothis yet gode hede she toke,
For in her fallyng yet she had a care
Leste that her fete, or soche thingis lay bare; 180
So wel she lovid clennesse, and eke trouthe.

Of her had all the towne of Rome routhe,
And Brutus hath by her chaste blode yswore
That Tarquin shulde ybanished be therfore,
And al his kinne, and let the peple cal,
And opinly the tale he tolde 'hem al,
And opinly let cary' her on a bere
Through al the towne, that men may se and here
The' horrible dede of her oppressioun.
Ne nevir was there kyng in Rome toun 190
Sens thylkè day, and she was holdin there
A saynt, and evre' her day yhalowed dere,
As in ther lawe: and thus endith Lucrese,
The noble wyfe, Titus berith witnesse.
I tel it for she was of love so trewe,
Ne in her wil she chaungid for no newe,
And in her stable hertè, sadde and kinde,
That in these women men may al day finde,

There

There as they cast ther hert, there it dwellith;
For wel I wote, that Christ himselfe tellith, 200
That in Israel, as wide as is the londe,
He so grete faith in al the londe ne fonde,

As in a woman, and this is no lie;
And as for men, loke ye, soche tyrannie
Thei done al daie, aslay 'hem who so list;
The trewist is ful brotil for to trifle.

Here endeth the Legende of LUCRECE of Rome.

Here foloweth the Legende of ARIADNE of Athens.

Minos infernal judge of Crete the kyng,
Now cometh thy lotte, thou comist on the
ryng;
Nat for thy sake alone writen is this storye,
But for to clepe ayen unto memorie

Of Theseus the gret untrouthe of love,
For whiche the goddis of hevin above,
Ben wroth, and wrath have takin for thy synne,
Be red for shame, nowe I thy lyfe beginne.

Minos that was the mighty king of Crete,
That had an hundrid cities strong and grete, 10
To schole hath sent his sonne Androgeus
To Athenes, of the whiche it happid thus
That he was slayne, lerning philosphie,
Right in that cyte, nat but for envie.

The grete Minos, of the whiche that I speke,
His sonnys deth is comin for to wreke.

Alcathoe' he besiegid harde and longe,
But natheles the wallis be so stronge,

And Nisus, that was kyng of that cite,
So chivalrous, that litil dredith he,

Of Minos or his hoste toke he no cure,
Tyl on a daie besil an avinture,

That Nisus doughtir stode upon the wal,
And of the siege behelde the manir al,

So happid it, that at a scarmishing,
She caste her hert upon Minos the king,

For his beautie, and for his chivalrye,
So sorely that she wenid for to die.

And shortly of this processe for to pace,
She made Minos to winnin thilke place,

So that the cite was al at his wyl,

To favin whom him list, or ellis spill.

But wickidly he quit her kyndenesse,
And let her drence in sorowe and distresse,

N'ere that the goddis had of her pite,
But that tale were to longe as nowe for me.

Athenis was this king Minos also,

As Alcathoe', and othir townis mo,

And this th' effect, that Minos hath so driven
Them of Athenis, that thei mote him yeven 40

Fro yere to yere ther owne childrin dere

For to be slaine, as ye shal aftir here.

This Minos hath a monstre', a wickid best,

That was so cruil, that without arest

Whan that a man was brought into' his presence

He wolde him ete, there helpith no defence;

And every thirde yere withoutin doute

Thei castid in lotte, as it came aboute,

On riche and pore, he must his sonne take,

And of his childe he must a presente make 50

To Minos, for to save him or to spill,

Or let his best devour him at his will.

And this hath Minos don right in dispite,

To wreke his sonne was set al his delyte,

And makin' hem of Athenis hys thral,

Fro yere to yere, while that he livin shal,

And hom he sailith whan this toun is won.

This wickid custome is so long yron,

Till that the king of Athenes Ægeus

Mote sendin his owne sonne Theseus, 60
Sens that the lotte is fallin him upon,
To ben devourid, for grace is there non.
And forth is ladde this woful yonge knight
Unto the countre' of Minos ful of might,
And in a prison fettrid fast is he,
Tyl that ilke time he shulde yfretin be.

Wel maist thou wepe, o woful Theseus,
That art a king's sonne, and damnid thus,
Me thinkith this, that thou art depe yholde,

To whom that savid The fro caris colde, 70

And nowe yf any woman helpè The,

Wel oughtist thou her servaunt for be,

And ben her trewe lovir yere by yere.

But nowe to come aien to my matere.

The tourè, there this Theseus is throwe,

Downe in the bottom derke, and wondir lowe,

Was joyning to the wal of a foreine

That longing was unto the doughtrin tweine

Of Minos, whiche that in ther chambris grete 80

Dweltin above toward the maistirstrete

Of thilke towne, in joy and in solas,

N'ot I nat howe, it happinid per caas

As Theseus complainid him by night,

The king's doughtir, that Ariadne hight,

And eke her sustir Phœdra, herdin al

His complainte, as thei stod in on the wall,

And lokid up upon the brightè mone,

'Hem listin nat to go to bedde so sone,

And of his wo thei had compassion, 90

A king's sonne to be in soche prision,

And ben devourid, thought 'hem grete pite,

Than Ariadne spake to' her sustir fre,

And sayid, Phœdra, my lefe sustir dere,

This woful lord's sonne maie ye nat here

Howe pitously he complainith his kinne,

And eke his pore estate that he is inne,

And giltylesse? certis nowe it is routhe,

And if ye wol assentin by my trouthe

He shal ben holpin, howe so that we do. 100

Phœdra answerde, ywis me is as wo

For him, as er I was for any man,

And to his helpe the best rede that I can

Is, that we done the gailir privily

To come and spekin with us hastily,

And done this woful man with him to come,

For if he maie this monstir overcome,

Than were he quite, there is none othir bote; 110

Let us wel taste him at his hert's rote,

That if so be that he a wepon have,

Where that he dare, his life to kepe and save, 110

Fightin with this fende, and himself defende;

For in the prison, there he shal discende,

Ye wote wel, that the best is in a place

That is not derke, and hath roume and eke space

To welde an axe, or swerde, a staife, or knife,

So that me thinkith he shulde save his life,

If that he be a man, he shal do so.

And we shal make him ballis eke also

Of

Of wexe and towe, that whan he gapith fast
 Into the best's throte he shal 'hem caste,
 To fleke his hongir, and encombre' his tethe,
 And right anon whan that Theseus sethe
 The best achekid, he shal on him lepe,
 To seen him, or they comin more to hepe.
 This wepon shal the gailir or that tyde
 Ful privily within the prison hyde;
 And for the house is crenclid to and fro,
 And hath so queintè wayis for to go,
 For it is shapin as the mase is wrought,
 Therto have I a remedy' in my thought,
 That by a clewe of twyne, as he hath gon,
 The same way he may returne anon,
 Folo'wing alway the threde, as he hath come
 And whan that he this best hath ovircome,
 Than may he flien away out of this stede,
 And eke the gailir may he with him lede,
 And him avaunce at home in his countre,
 Sens that so gret a lord's sonne is he.
 This is my rede, if that ye dare it take,
 What shulde I lengir sermon of it make?
 The gailir cometh, and with him Theseus;
 And whan these thingis ben accordid thus,
 Adowne sate Theseus upon his kne,
 O the right lady of my life (qð he)
 I so'rowfull man, ydamnid to the dethe,
 Fro you, whilis that me ylastith brethe,
 I wol nat twinne, aftir this avinture,
 But in your service thus I wol endure,
 That as a wretche unknow, I wol you serve
 For evirmore, tyl that min herte sterve,
 Forfake I wol at home min heritage,
 And as I said, ben of your courte a page,
 If that ye vouchsafin that in this place
 Ye grauntin me to havin soche a grace
 That I may have nat but my mete and drinke,
 And for my sustinaunce yet wol I swinke,
 Right as you list, that Minos, ne no wight
 Sens that he saw me nevir with eyenlight,
 Ne no man ellis shal me nat espye,
 So flily, and so wel I shal me gye,
 And me so wel disfigure, and so lowe,
 That in this world there shal no man me knowe,
 To have my lyfe, and to have the presence
 Of you, that done to me this excellence;
 And to my fathir shal I sendin here
 This worthy man, which that is your gaylere,
 And him so guerdon, that he shal wel be
 One of the gretist men of my countre,
 And if I durstè sayne, my lady bright,
 I am a king's sonne and eke a knight,
 As woldè God, if that it might ybe
 Ye werin in my countre allè thre,
 And I with you, to bere you companye,
 Than shuld ye sene if that I therof lye,
 And if I profir you in lowe manere
 To ben your page, and servin you right here,
 But I you serve as lowly in that place,
 I pray to Mars to yeve me soche grace,
 That sham's deth on me there motè fall,
 And deth and povertè to my frendis all,
 And that my spritè by night motè go
 Aftir my deth, and walkin to and fro,
 That I mote of foule traitour have a name,
 For whiche my sprit mote go, to do me shame,
 And if I clayme evir othir degre
 But ye vouchsafin to grauntin it me,
 As I have said, of sham's deth I dey,
 And mercy lady, I can naught els sey.
 A femely knight was this Theseus to se,
 And yongè, but of twenty yere and thre,
 But who so had yfene his countinaunce,
 He would have wept, for routh of his penaunce,

For which this Ariadne' in this manere
 Answerde to his profre and to his chere.
 A kyng's sonne, and eke a knight (qð she)
 To ben my servaunt in so low degre
 God shild it, for the shame of women al,
 And lene me nevir soche a case befall,
 And sende you grace, and sleight of hert also
 You to defende, and knightly seen your foe, 200
 And lene here aftir that I may you finde
 To me, and to my sustir here so kynde,
 That I ne repent nat to yeve you lyfe;
 Yet were it bettir that I were your wife,
 Sithe that ye ben as gentil borne as I,
 And have a relme nat ferre but fastè by,
 Than I suffrid your gentillesse to sterve,
 Or that I let you as a page to serve,
 It is no profite unto your kinrede,
 But what is that, that men n'll do for dred. 210
 And to my sustir, syth that it is so
 That she mote gone with me, if that I go,
 Or ellis suffre deth as wel as I,
 That ye unto your sonne as trewily
 Done her be weddid at your homecomming;
 This is the fynal ende of al this thing,
 Ye swere it here on all that may be sworne.
 Ye, lady myn (qð he) or els to torne
 Mote I be with the Minotaure to morowe,
 And havith here of min hertblod to borowe, 220
 If that ye wol, if I had knife or spere,
 I wolde it lettin out, and thereon swere,
 For than at erste I wot ye would me leve,
 By Mars, that is the chiefe of my beleve,
 So that I mightin lyvin, and nat faile,
 To morowe for to takin my bataile,
 I ne wolde nevir fro this placè flye
 Tyl that ye shulde the very profre yse,
 For now, if that the soth I shall you say,
 I have lovid you ful many a daie, 230
 Though ye ne wist it nat, in my countre,
 And aldirmoste desyrid you to se
 Of any erthly living creature,
 Upon my trouthe I swere, and you assure,
 This sevin yere I have your servaunt be,
 Nowe have I you, and also have ye me,
 My derè hert, of Athenis Duchesse.
 This lady smilith at his stedfastnesse,
 And at his hertely wordes, and at his chere,
 And to her sustir sayd in this manere. 240
 And sothely leve all sustir myn (qð she)
 Nowe be we Duchessis both I and ye,
 And sikerde to the regals of Athenes,
 And bothe hereaftir likely to be Quenes,
 And favid fro his deth a king's sonne,
 As er of gentilwomen is the wonne
 To save a gentilman, enforth ther might,
 In honest cause, and namely in his right,
 Me thinkith no wight ought us hereof blame,
 Ne berin us therfore an evil name; 250
 And shortly of this matir for to make,
 This Theseus of her hath leve ytake,
 And every point was performid in dede,
 As ye have in this covenant herde me rede;
 His wepen, his clewe, his thing that I have said,
 Was by the gailir in the house ylaide,
 There as the Mynotaure hath his dwellyng,
 Right fastè by the dore, at his entring,
 And Theseus is lad unto his dethe,
 And forth unto this Minotaure he gethe, 260
 And by the teching of this Adriane,
 He ovircame this best, and was his bane,
 And out he comith by the clewe againe
 Ful privily, whan he this best hath slaine,
 And by the gailir gottin hath a barge,
 And of his wiv's trefure gan it charge,
 X x x x
 And

And toke his wife, and eke her sustir fre,
 And eke the gailir, and with 'hem al thre
 Is stole away out of the londe by night,
 And to the countre' of Eupie him dight,
 Thereas he had a frende of his knowing.
 There festin thei, there daunsin thei and sing,
 And in his armis hath this Adriane,
 That of the best hath kept him fro his bane,
 And get him there a noble barge anone,
 And of his countre folke a ful gret wone,
 And taketh his leve, and homwarde sailith he,
 And in an yle, amiddis the wilde se,
 Thereas there dwellid nevir cature none,
 Save wild bestis, and that ful many one,
 He made his shippe alondè for to sette,
 And in that yle halfe a daie he lette,
 And sayd, that on the londe he must him reste,
 His mariners have done right as him leste;
 And for to tellin shortly in this case,
 Whan Ariadne his wife allepe was,
 For that her sustir fayrir was than she,
 He taketh her in his honde, and forth goth he
 To shyppe, and as a traitour stale away,
 While that this Ariadne allepe lay,
 And to his countre warde he sailith blive,
 A twenty dyvil way the winde him drive,
 And found his fathir drenchid in the se.
 Me lyste no more to speke of him, parde,
 These false lovirs, poison be ther bane.

But I wol turne againe to Adriane,
 That is with slepe for werinesse ytake
 Ful sorowfully her hert may awake.

Alas! for The myne herte hath grete pite;
 Right in the dawining awakith she,
 And gropith in the bed, and fond right nought.

Alas (qð she) that evir I was wrought!
 I am betrayid, and her here to reate,
 And to the stronde all barefote fast she wente,

270

280

290

300

And cryd: Theseus myn hertè swete,
 Where be ye, that I may nat with you mete,
 And might thus with the bestis ben yslaine?

The halowe rockis answerde her againe,
 No man she sawe, and yet yshone the mone,
 And hye upon a rocke she wentin sone,
 And sawe his barge ysailing in the se,
 Colde woxe her hert, and right thus sayid she;

310

Mekir than ye finde I the bestis wyld.
 Hath he nat synne, that he her thus begylde?
 She cried, o turne againe for routhe and finne,
 Thy barge ne hath nat al his meinè inne;
 Her couverchefe on a pole styckid she
 Ascaunce that he shulde it wele yse,
 And him remembre that she was behinde,
 And turne againe, and on the stronde her finde.

320

But all for naught, his way he is ygone,
 And downe she fel a swowne upon a stone,
 And up she riste, and kyssed in all her care
 The steppis of his fete, there he hath fare,
 And to her bed right thus she spekith tho:

Thou bed (qð she) that hast recevid two,
 Thou shalt answer of two, and not of one,
 Where is the gretir partè? away gone.

Alas! wher shal I wretchid wight become?
 For though so be that botè none here come,
 Home to my countre dare I nat for drede,
 I can my selfin in this case nat rede.

330

What should I tellin more here complaining?
 It is so long it were an hevy thing;
 In her epistle Naso tellith all.

But shortly to the ende tellin I shall,
 The Goddis have her holpin for pyte,
 And in the sygne of Taurus men may se
 The stonis of her corowne shynè clere.

I will no more spekin of this matere,
 But thus this false lovir can begile
 His trew love, the Devil quit him his while.

340

Here endeth the Legende of ARIADNE.

Here foloweth the Legende of PHILOMELA.

T Hou yevir of the formis that hast wrought
 The fayrè world, and bare it in thy thought
 Eternally, er thou thy werke began,
 Why madist thou to the slaundir of man,
 Or allbe that it was not thy doying,
 As for that ende, to makin soche a thing,
 Why suffredest thou that Tereus was bore,
 That is in love so false and so forswore,
 That fro this world up to the first hevin
 Corruptith, whan that folke his name nevin?
 And as to me so grisly was his dede,
 That whan that I this foule storie rede,
 Myne eyin wexin foule, and sore also,
 Yet lasteth the venyme of so long ago,
 That it enfectith him, that wolde beholde
 The storie of Tereus, of which I tolde.
 Of Thrace was he the lorde, and kyn to Marte
 The cruil God, that stante with bloody darte,
 And weddid had he with full blisfull chere
 King Pandion's faire doughtir dere,
 That hight Progne, the floure of her countre,
 Though Juno liste not at the fest to be,
 Ne Hymen, that the God of Weddyng is,
 But at the festè redy ben iwis
 The furis three, with all ther mortall bronde,
 The Oule all night above the balkis wonde,

10

20

That Prophete is of wo, and of mischaunce;
 This revill, full of song and full of daunce,
 Lastid a fourtenight, or little lasse;
 But shortlie of this storie for to passe,

30

(For I am werie of hym for to tell)
 Five yere his wife and he togithir dwell,
 Till on a daie she gan so fore to long
 To sene her sustir, that she sawe not long,
 That for desire she ne wist what to saie,
 But to her husbonde gan she for to praie
 For Godd's love, that she mote onis gon,
 To sene her sustre, and come ayen anon,
 Or ellis but she mote to her wende,
 She praied him that he would aftir her sende;
 And this was daie by daie all her praie,
 With all humbleffe of wifhode, worde and chere.

40

This Tereus let make his shippis yare,
 And into Grece hymself is forthe ifare,
 Unto his fathir in lawe gan he praie
 To vouchesafin, that for a moneth or twaie,
 That Philomela his wife's sustir might
 On Progne's his wife but onis have a sight,
 And she shall come to you again anon,
 My self with her I will bothe come and gon,
 And as my hert's life I will her kepe.

50

This olde Pandion, this kyng gan to wepe,

For
 1

For tendirnesse of herte for to leve
His doughtir gon, and for to yeve her leve;
Of all this worlde he lovid nothyng so;
But at the laste leve hath she to go,
For Philomela with fast teris eke
Gan of her fathir his grace to beseke
To sene her sustir, that her longith so,
And hym enbracith with her armis two,
And therewithal so yonge and faire was she,
That when that Tereus sawe her beaute,
And of arraie that there was none her liche,
And yet of beaute was she to so riche,
He cast his fierie herte upon her so
That he woll have her, how so that it go,
And with his wilis knelid, and so praied,
Till at the last Pandion thus ysaid.

Now sonne (qð he) that art to me so dere;
I The betake my yonge doughtir here
That bereth the keie of all myne hert's life,
And grete me well my doughtir, and thy wife,
And yeve her leve somtyme for to pleie,
That she maie se me onis or I deie.
And sothly he hath made hym richè fest,
And to his folke, the moste and eke the lest,
That with him came, and yave him yestis grete,
And him conveyith through the mastirstrete
Af Athenis, and to the se hym brought,
And tournith home, no malice he ne thought.
The oris pullith forth the vessil fast,
And into Thrace arrivith at the last,
And up into a Forest he her led,
And to a cave full privily hym sped,
And in this darkè cave, if that her lest
Or ne list nought, he bad her for to rest,
Of whiche her herte agrose, and sayid thus.

Where is my sustir, brothir Tereus?
And there withall she wept full tendirle;
And quoke for fere all pale and pituousslie,
Right as the lambe, that of the Wolfe is bitten,
Or as the Culver, that of the'Egle is smitten,
And is out of his clawis forthe escaped,
Yet it is still aferde, and sore awhaped,
Left it be hent eftsonis; so fate she:
But uttirle it maie none othir be,
By force hath this traitour ydoen a dede,
That he hath rest her of her maidinhede,
Maugre her hed, by strength and by his might.

Lo here a dede of men, and that aright!
She cryith sustir with full loudè steven,
And fathir dere, O helpe me God in heven;
All helpith not, and yet this false thefe
Hath doen his Ladie yet a more mischese,
For fere, lest that she should his shamè crie,
And doen him opinlie a villanie,
And with his sward her tong of kerfith he,
And in a Castill made her for to be
Full privily in prisone evirmore,
And kept her to his usage and his store,

So that she ne might nevir more asterte.
O sely Philomela, wo' is thine herte,
Huge ben thy sorowis, and wondir smerte,
God wreke The, and sende The thy bone.
Now it is time I make an ende sone.

This Tereus is to his wife icome,
And in his armis hath his wife inome,
And pitoussly he wept, and shoke his hedde,
And swore her, that he found her sustir dedde,
For whiche this felie Progne hath soche wo, 120
That nigh her sorowfull herte brake atwo;
And thus in teris let I Progne dwell,
And of her sustir forthe I woll you tel.

This wofull Ladie lernid had in youth
So that she workin and enbraudin couth,
And wevin in her stole the radèvore,
And it of women hath be wovid yore.
And sothly for to saine, she hath her fill
Of mete and drinke, of clothing at her will,
And couth eke rede well inough and endite, 130
But with a pennè she ne could not write,
But lettirs can she wevin to and fro,
So that by that the yere was all ago
She had ywovin in a stamen large
How she was brought fro Athenis in a barge,
And in a cave how that she was ybrought,
And all the thyng that Tereus ywrought,
She wove it wel, and wrote the storie' above
How she was servid for her sustir's love
And to a knave a ring she yave anon, 140
And prayid him by signis for to gon
Unto the quene, and berin her that clothe,
And by signis swore him many an othe
She should him yevin what she gettin might.

This knave anon unto the Quene him dight,
And toke it her, and all the manir tolde.
And when that Progne hath this thing behold,
No worde she spake, for sorowe and for rage,
But fainid her to gon on pilgrimage
To Bacchus temple', and in a little stounde 150
Her dombe sustir ysittyng hath she founde,
Weping in the castill her self alone;
Alas the wo, the constraint, and the mone
That Progne upon her dombe sustir maketh!
In armis everiche of 'hem othir taketh.
And thus I let 'hem in ther sorowe dwell,
The remenaunt is no charge for to tell,
For this is all and some, thus was she served,
That nevir ought agiltid ne deserved
Unto this cruill man, that she of wiste. 160
Ye maie beware of men, if that you liste,
For all be that he woll nor for his shame
Doin as Tereus, to lese his name,
Ne serve you as a murtherer or a knave,
Full little while shullin ye trewe him have,
That woll I sain, al wer he now my brother,
But it so be that he maie have none other.

Here endeth the Legende of PHILOMELA.

Here

Here foloweth the Legende of PHYLLIS.

BY prove, as well as by auctorite,
 That wickid fruite commeth of a wickid
 tre,
 That maie ye find, if that it likith you;
 But for this ende I speke this as now,
 To tellin you of false Demophoon,
 In love a falsir herd I nevir non,
 But it werin his fathir Theseus,
 God for his grace fro soche one kepin us,
 Thus these women yprayin, that it here.
 Now to the' effecte tourne I of my matere.
 Destroyid is of Troie the Cite;
 This Demophon came sailyng in the se
 Toward Athenis, to his paleis large;
 With him came many' a ship, and many' a barge,
 All full of folke, of whiche full many one
 Is woundid fore, and sike, and wo begone,
 And thei have at the siegè long ilaine;
 Behinde him came a winde, and eke a raine,
 That shofe so sore, his saile ne might not stonde;
 Hym were levir then all the worlde a londe,
 So huntith hym the tempest to and fro,
 So darke it was, he could no where ygo
 And with a wave to brustin was his stere,
 His ship was rent so lowe, in soche manere,
 That Carpenter ne could it not amende,
 The se by night as any Torchè brende
 For wode, and possith him up and down,
 Till Neptune hath of hym compassioun,
 And Thetis, Chorus, Triton, and thei all,
 And madin him upon a londe to fall
 Whereof that Phyllis Lady was and Quene,
 Lycurgus doughtir, fairir unto sene
 Then is the floure again the brightè Sonne.
 Unneth is Demophon to londe iwonne,
 Weke and eke werie, and his folke forpined
 Of werinessè, and also enfamined,
 And to the deth he was almoſte idriven,
 His wiſe folke counsaile have him yyeven
 To ſekin helpe and succour of the Quene,
 And lokin what his grace mightin bene,
 And makin in that lande ſome cheveſaunce,
 And kepin him fro wo, and fro miſchaunce:
 For ſike he was, and almoſte at the deth,
 Unnethis might he ſpeke, or drawin breth,
 And lieth in Rhodopeia hym to reſte;
 When he may walkin, him thought it was beſte
 Unto the Courte to ſekin for ſuccour;
 Men knewe him wele, and diddin hym honour,
 For at Athenis Duke and Lorde was he,
 As Theſeus his fathir hath ibe,
 That in his tymè was of grete renoun,
 No man ſo grete in all his regioun,
 And like his fathre' of face and of ſtature,
 And false of love, it came hym of nature,
 As doeth the Foxe Renarde, the Fox'is ſonne,
 Of kinde he could his oldè fathir wonne
 Withoutin lore, as can a Drake swimme,
 When it is caught, and caried to the brimme.
 This honorable Phyllis doth him chere,
 Her likith well his porte and his manere;
 But I am all agrotid here beforne
 To write of 'hem that in love ben forſworne,
 And eke to haſtin me in my Legende,
 Whiche to performè, God me grace yſende,
 Therefore I paſſin ſhortly in this wiſe;
 Ye have well herd of Theſeus the giſe,
 In the betraying of faire Adriane,
 That of her pite kept him fro his bane;

At ſhort wordis, right ſo Demophoon
 The ſamè waie, and the ſame pathe hath gon, 70
 That did his false fathir Theſeus,
 For unto Phyllis hath he ſwornè thus
 To weddin her, and her his trowth yplight,
 And pikid of her all the gode he might,
 Whan he was whole and ſounde, and had his reſte,
 And doeth with Phyllis what ſo that him leſt,
 As well I could, if that me liſtè ſo,
 Tellin of all his doying to and fro.
 He ſaid that to his cowntre mote hym ſaile,
 For there he would her weddyng appaile, 80
 As fill to her honour, and his alſo,
 And opinly he toke his levè tho,
 And to her ſwore that he would not ſojourne,
 But in a moneth again he would retourne,
 And in that londe let make his ordinaunce
 As very Lorde, and toke the obeiſaunce
 Well and humbly, and his Shippis ydight,
 And home he goith the next waie he might;
 But unto Phyllis again came he nought,
 And that hath ſhe ſo harde and ſore ibought, 90
 Alas! as the ſtorie doeth us recorde,
 That ſhe was her owne deth right with a corde,
 When that ſhe ſaw that Demophon her traied.
 But firſt wrote ſhe to him, and faſt him praied
 He would come, and delivir her of pain,
 As I reherſin ſhall a worde or twain,
 Me liſtè not to vouchſafe on him to ſwinke,
 Diſpendin on him a penne full of ynke,
 For false in love was he, right as his fire, 100
 The Devill ſet ther ſoulis both on fire,
 But of the lettre' of Phyllis woll I write
 A worde or twain, although it be but liſe.
 Thine hoſteſſe (qð ſhe) O Demophoon,
 Thy Phyllis, whiche that is ſo wo begon,
 Of Rhodopeie upon you mote complain,
 Ovir the terme yſet betwixt us twain
 That ye ne holdin forwarde, as ye ſaid;
 Your ancre, whiche ye in our havin laied,
 40 Hight us, that ye would comin out of doubt,
 Or that the Monè onis went about, 110
 But timis ſower the Monè hath hid her face,
 Sens thilkè daie ye wentin fro this place,
 And ſowir timis light the worlde again;
 But for all that, yet ſhall I ſothly ſain
 Yet hath the ſtreme of Scython not ybrought,
 From Athenis the ſhip, yet came it nought;
 And if that ye the termè rekin would,
 As I or othir true lovirs doe ſhould,
 50 I plainin not (God wot) before my daie.
 But all her lettir writin I ne maie 120
 By ordir, for it were to me a charge,
 Her lettir was right long, and thereto large,
 But here and there in rhyme I have it laied,
 There as me thought that ſhe hath wel yſaied.
 She ſaid, the ſailis comith not again,
 Ne to the worde there n'is no fey certain,
 But I wot why ye comin not (qð ſhe)
 For I was of my love to you ſo fre,
 60 And of the Goddis that ye have yſwore
 If that ther vengeance fall on you therefore, 130
 Ye be not ſuffiſaunt to bere the pain;
 To mochil truſtid I, well maie I ſain,
 Upon your linage, and your fairè tong,
 And on your teris, falſly out ywrong,
 How coud ye wepin ſo by craft? (qð ſhe)
 Maie there ſoche teris evir ſaind be?

Now

Now certis, if ye would have in memorie,
It oughtin be to you but little glorie
To have a selie maidin thus betraied;
To God (qð she) praie I, and oft have praied, 140
That it be now the gretist price of all
And moſte honour, that er you ſhall befall;
And when thine old auncetirs paintid be,
In whiche men maie ther worthineſſe yſe
Then praie I God thou paintid be alſo,
That folke maie redin, fortheby as thei go:
Lo this is he, that with his flattiry
Betrayid hath, and doen her villany,
That was his true love, in thought and dede!
But ſothly of o poinct yet maie thei rede, 150
That ye ben like your fathir, as in this,
For he begilid Ariadne' iwis

With ſoche an arte, and ſoche a ſubtilte
As thou thy ſelvin haſt begilid me;
As in that poinct, although it be not feire,
Thou ſolowilt certain, and art his heire.
But ſens thus ſinfully ye me begile,
My bodie mote ye ſene, within a while,
Right in the haven of Athenis ſletyng
Withoutin Sepulture and buryng, 160
Though ye ben hardir then is any ſtone.
And when this lettir was forth ſent anone,
And knewe how brotill and how fals he was,
She for diſpaire fordid her ſelf, alas!
Soche ſorowe' hath ſhe, for ſhe beſet her ſo.
Beware ye women of your ſubtill ſo,
Sens yet this daie men maie enſample ſe;
And truſtith now in love no man but me.

Here endeth the Legende of PHYLLIS.

Here foloweth the Legende of HYPERMNESTRA.

IN Grece whilom were dwelling bretherne two,
Of whiche that one was callid Danao,
That many' a ſonne hath of his bodie
wonne,
As ſoche falſe loviris oftimis conne;
Emongis his ſonnis all there was one,
That aldirmoſte he loved of everychone;
And when this child was borne, this Danao
Shope him a name, and callid hym Lino;
That othir brothir callid was Egifte,
That was of love as falſe as er him liſte, 10
And many' a daughtir gate he in his liſe,
Of whiche he gate upon his righte wiſe
A daughtir dere, and did her for to call
Hypermnestra, the yongift of 'hem all;
The whiche childe of her nativite
To alle gode thewis yborne was ſhe,
As likid to the Goddes or ſhe was borne,
That of the ſheſe ſhe ſhould be the corne,
The werdis, that we clepin deſtine,
Hath ſhapin her, that ſhe muſt nedis be
Pitous, and ſad, and wiſe, and true as ſtele,
And to this woman it accordith wele,
For though that Venus yave her grete beute,
With Jupiter compownid ſo was ſhe,
That conſcience, and trouthe, and drede of ſhame,
And of her wiſchode for to kepe her name,
This thought her was felicite as here,
And red Mars was at that tyme of the yere
So feble, that his malice is him raſte,
Repreſſid hath Venus his cruill craſte, 20
And what with Venus, and othir oppreſſion
Of houliſ, Mars his Venime is adon,
That Hypermnestra dare not handle' a knife
In malice, though ſhe ſhouldin leſe her liſe;
But natheleſſe, as hevin gan tho turne,
Two bad aſpectis hath ſhe of Saturne,
That made her for to dyin in priſon;
And I ſhall aſtir makin mencion
Of Danao and Egiftis alſo,
And though ſo be that thei were brethrin two, 40
For thilke tyme n'as ſparid no linage,
It likid 'hem to makin mariage
Betwixt Hypermnestra, and him Lino,
And caſtin ſoche a daie it ſhall be ſo,
And full accordid was it uttirly,
The' araiſe wrought, the tyme is faſte by:

And thus Lino hath of his fathir's brother
The daughtir wedded, and ech of 'hem hath other.
The torchis brennin, and the lampis bright,
The Sacrificis ben full redy dight, 50
Th' enſence out of the fire out rekith ſote,
The floure, the leſe, is rent up by the rote,
To makin garlandis and crounis hie;
Full is the place of ſound of Minſtralcie,
Of ſongis amouros of mariage,
As thilke tyme was the plain uſage;
And this was in the paleis of Egifte,
That in his hous was lord, right as him liſte;
And thus that daie thei drivin to an ende,
The frendis takin leve, and home thei wend; 60
The night is come, the bride ſhall go to bed,
Egiftis to his chamber faſt him ſped,
And privily he let his daughtir call,
When that the hous voidid was of 'hem all,
He lokith on his daughtir with glad chere,
And to her ſpake, as ye ſhall aſtir here.
My right daughtir, the treſour of mine herte,
Sens firſt that daie, that ſhapin was my ſherte, 70
Or by the fatall ſuſtir had my dome,
So nye myne herte nevir thing ne come
As thou my Hypermnestra, daughtir dere,
Take hede what thy fathir ſayith The here,
And werke aſtir thy wiſir evirmo,
For aldirfirſt daughtir, I love The ſo,
That all the worlde to me n'is halſe ſo leſe,
Ne I n'olde redè The to thy miſcheſe
For all the gode undir the coldè Mone, 80
And what I mene, it ſhal be ſaid right ſone,
With proteſtacion, as ſaine theſe wiſe,
That but thou doe, as I ſhall The deviſe,
Thou ſhalt be ded, by him that al hath wrought,
At ſhortè wordis thou ne ſcapift nought
Out of my paleis, or that thou be dede,
But thou conſent, and werke aſtir my rede,
Take this to The for full concluſioun.
This Hypermnestra caſt her eyin down,
And quoke, as doeth the leſe of Aſpis grene,
Ded wext her hew, and like aſhin to ſene,
And ſayid: Lorde and fathir, all your will,
Aſtir my might, God wote I ſhall fulfill, 90
So it be to me no confuſion.

I n'ill (qð he) have non excepcion;
And out he caught a knife, as raſoir kene,
Hide this (qð he) that it be nat iſene,

Y y y y

And

And when thine housbonde is to bed ygo,
 While that he slepith, cut his throte atwo,
 For in my dreame it is ywarnid me
 How that my newewe shall my bane ybe,
 But whiche I n'ot, wherefore I woll be siker,
 If thou saie naie, we two shall have a biker, 100
 As I have saied, by him that I have sworne.
 This Hypermnestra' hath nigh her wit forlorn,
 And for to passe harmelesse out of that place
 She grauntid him, there was non othir grace;
 And therewithall a cōstrill takith he,
 And saied, hereof a draught or two or thre,
 Yeve him to drinke, when he goith to reste,
 As he shall slepe as long as er The leste,
 The narcotikes and apies ben so strong;
 And go thy waie, lest that him thinke to long. 110
 Out cometh the bride, and with full sobre chere,
 As is of maidins oft in the manere
 To chambir brought, with revil and with song;
 And shortlie, leste this tale be to long,
 This Lino and she beth bin brought to bed,
 And every wight out at the dore him sped.
 The night is wastid, and he fell aslepe,
 Full tendirly beginnith she to wepe,
 She rist her up, and dredefully she quaketh,
 As doeth the braunch, that Zephyrus yshaketh, 120
 And husht were all in Aragon that cite,
 As co'ld as any Froste now wexith she,
 For pite by the herte strainid her so,
 And drede of deth doith her so moche wo,
 That thryis doune she fill, in soche a were,
 She riste her up, and stakereth here and there,
 And on her handis faste lokith she,
 Alas, qð she, shall myne handes blodie be!

I am a maidin, and by my nature,
 And by my semblaunt, and by my vesture, 130
 Myne handis ben not shapin for a knife,
 As for to revin no man fro his life,
 What Devill have I with the knife to do?
 And shall I have my throte ycorve atwo?
 Then shall I blede alas! and be yshende
 And nedis of this thing mote have an ende,
 Or he or I mote nedis lese our life;
 Now certis (qð she) fens I am his wife,
 And hath my faithe, yet is it bette for me
 For to be dedde in wifely honeste, 140
 Then be a traitour, living in my shame;
 Be as be maie, for earnest or for game
 He shall awake, and rise and go his waie
 Out at this guttir, er that it be daie;
 And wept full tendirly upon his face,
 And in her armis gan him to embrace,
 And him she roggith, and awakith soft,
 And at the windowe lepe he fro the loft,
 When she hath warnid him, and doen him bote.
 This Lino swift ywas, and light of fote, 150
 And from his wife he ran a full gode pace.
 This felie woman is so weke, alas!
 And helplesse, so that er she ferrè went
 Her cruill fathir did her for to hent.
 Alas! Lino, why art thou so unkinde?
 Why ne hast thou remembrid in thy minde
 And takin her, and led her forthe with The?
 For when she sawe that gone awaie was he,
 And that she ne might not so fast ygo,
 Ne folowin him, she fate doune right tho, 160
 Til she was caught, and fettrid in prison,
 This tale is saied for this conclusion.

Thus endeth the Legende of gode Women.

Here foloweth a godely Balade of CHAUCER.

Othir of norture, best beloved of all,
 And freshe floure, to whom gode thrift
 God sende,

Your childe, if it luste you me so to call,
 All be' I unable my self so to pretende,
 To your discrecion I recomende
 Mine herte and all, with every circumstance,
 All wholly to be' undir your govinaunce.

Moste desire I, and have, and evir shall 170
 Thing, which that might your hert'is ese amende,
 Have me excused, my powir is but small,
 Nathelesse of right ye ought for to commende
 My gode will, whiche faine would entende
 To doe you service for my suffisaunce
 Is wholly to be' undir your govinaunce.

Meulx un in herte, whiche nevir shall apall,
 Aie freshe and new, and right glad to dispende
 My time in your service, what so befall,
 Befechyng your excellence to defende 180
 My simplenesse, if ignoraunce offende
 In any wise, fith that myne affiaunce
 Is whollie to be' undir your govinaunce.

Daisie of light, very ground of comfort,
 The Sunn's doughtir ye hight as I rede,
 For when he westrith, farwell your disport,
 By your nature anone right for pure drede
 Of the rude night, that with his boistous wede

Of derkenesse shadowith our Hemisphere,
 Then closin ye, my liv'is Ladie dere. 190

Daunying the daie unto his kinde resort,
 And Phœbus your fathir with his streames rede
 Adorneth the morowe, consuming the sort
 Of mistie cloudes, that wouldin ovirlede
 True humble hertis with ther mistie hede,
 Nere comfort adaies when your eyin clere
 Disclose and sprede, my liv'is Ladie dere.

Je wouldray: but the grete God disposeth,
 And makith casuell by his providence
 Soche thing, as mann'is frele wit purposeth, 200
 All for the best, if that your conscience
 Not grutche it, but in humble pacience
 It receive, for God saieth withoutin fable
 A faithfull herte evir is acceptable.

Cautelis, whofo usith gladlie glosefeth,
 To eschewe soche it is right high prudence,
 What ye saied onis, mine herte opposeth,
 That my writyng Japis in your absence
 Plefid you moche bettir than my presence, 210
 Yet can I more, ye be not excusable,
 A faithfull herte evir is acceptable.

Quakith my penne, my spirite supposeth
 That in my writing ye find woll offence,
 Min hert welknith thus sone, anon it riseth,

Now

Now hotte, now colde, and eft in grete fervence,
That miſſe is, is cauſid of negligence,
And not of malice, therefore beth merciabie,
A faithfull herte evir is acceptable.

L'envoye.

Forthe complaint, forthe thou lacking eloquence,

Forthe litil lettir of enditing lame,
I have beſought my ladie's Sapience
Of thy behalfe, for to accept in game
Thine inabilite, doe thou the ſame:
Abide, have more yet: Je ſerve Joveſſe;
Now forth, I cloſe The' in holy Venus name,
The ſhall uncloſe my hert's govirneſſe.

220

Thus endeth this Ballade.

Here foloweth the Boke of

BOETHIUS

DE

CONSOLATIONE PHILOSOPHIÆ.

In this Book are handled high and hard obscure Points, viz. The Purveyance of God, the Force of Destiny, the Freedom of our Wills, and the infallible Preſcience of the Almighty; and that the Contemplation of God himſelf is our Summum Bonum.

Metrum primum.

*Carmina qui quondam ſtudio florente peregi,
Flebilis, heu, mæſtos cogor inire modos. &c.*

Las! I wepyng am constrained to begin verſe of ſorowfull matter, that whilom in florishyng ſtudie made delitable dities. For lo! rendyng muſes of Poetes enditen to me thinges to be writen, and drerie teres. At laſte no drede ne might overcame tho muſes, that thei ne werren fellowes, and foloweden my waie, that is to ſaie, when I was exiled, thei that weren of my youth whilom welſull and grene, comforten now ſorowfull wierdes of me olde man: for elde is comen unwarely upon me, haſted by the harmes that I have, and ſorowe hath commaunded his age to be in me. Heres hore aren ſhad overtimelicke upon my hed: and the ſlacke ſkinne trembleth of mine emped bodie. Thilke deth of men is welefull, that ne commeth not in yeres that be ſwete, but cometh to wretches often icleped: Alas, alas! with how deſe an ere deth cruell turneth awaie fro wretches, and naieth for to cloſe wepyng eyen. While fortune unfaithfull favoured me with light godes, that ſorowfull houre, that is to ſaie, the deth, had almoſte drete myne hedde: but now for fortune cloudie hath chaunged her decevable chere to mewarde, myne unpitous life draweth along ungrowable dwellynges. O ye my frendes, what, or whereto avaunted ye me to ben welſull? For he that hath fallin, ſtode in no ſtedfaſt degre.

Proſa prima.

Hæc dum mecum tacitus ipſe reputarem, querimoniamque lacrymabilem ſtyli officio deſignarem, aſtitiffe mihi ſupra verticem viſa eſt mulier reverendi admodum vultûs, oculis ardentibus, & ultra communem, &c.

IN the mene while, that I ſtil recorded theſe thynges with my ſelf, and marked my wepelie complainte with office of pointell: I ſaugh ſtondyng aboven the hight of myn hed a woman of full grete reverence, by ſemblaunt. Her eyen brennyng, and clere, ſeyng over the common might of menne, with a lively colour, and with ſoche vigour and ſtrength that it ne might not be nempned, all were it ſo, that ſhe were full of ſo grete age, that menne wou'd n not trowen in no manere, that ſhe were of our elde.

The ſtature of her was of doutous Judgemente, for ſometyme ſhe constrained and ſhronke her ſelven, like to the common meſure of menne: And ſometyme it ſemed, that ſhe touched the heaven with the hight of her hedde. And when ſhe hove her hedde higher, ſhe perced the ſelf heaven, ſo that the ſight of menne lokyng was in ydell: her clothes wer maked of right delie thredes, and ſubtel craft of perdurable matter. The whiche clothes ſhe had woven with her owne handes, as I knewe well after by her ſelf declaryng, and ſhewyng to me the beautie: The whiche whiche clothes a darkenesse of a forleten and dispised elde had dusked and darked, as it is wonte to darke by smoked Images.

In the netherest hemme or border of these clothes menne redde iwoven therein a Grekishe A. that signifieth the life active, and above that letter, in the highest bordure, a Grekishe C. that signifieth the life contemplative. And betwene these two letters there were seen degrees nobly wrought, in maner of ladders, by whiche degrees menne might climben from the netherest letter to the upperest: nathelesse handes of some men hadden kerve that clothe, by violence or by strength, and everiche manne of hem had borne awaie soche peces, as he might gotten. And forsothe this foresaied woman bare smale bokes in her right hande, and in her left hand she bare a scepter. And when she sawe these Poeticall muses approaching about my bed, and endityng wordes to my wepynges, she was a litle amoved, and glowed with cruell eyen. Who (quod she) hath suffered approchen to this like manne these commen strompettes, of which is the place that menne callen Theatre, the whiche onely ne aswagen not his sorowes with remedies, but thei would feden and norishe hym with swete venime? Forsothe, that ben tho that with thornes, and prickynge of talentes of affeccions, whiche that ben nothyng fructuous nor profitable, distroien the Corne, plentuous of fruietes of reson. For thei holden hertes of men in usage, but thei ne deliver no folke fro maladie. But if ye muses had withdrawn fro me with your flatteries any unconnyng and unprofitable manne, as ben wont to finde commonly among the peple, I would well suffre the lasse grevously. For why, in soche an unprofitable man myne ententes were nothyng endamaged. But ye withdrawn fro me this man, that hath ben nourished in my studies or scoles of Eleaticis, and of Academicis in Grece. But goeth now rather awaie ye Mermaidens, whiche that ben swete, till it be at the last, and suffreth this man to be cured and heled by my muses, that is to say, by my notefull sciences. And thus this companie of muses iblamed casten wrothly the chere downward to the yerth, and shewing by rednesse ther shame, thei passeden sorowfully the threshold. And I of whom the sight plounged in teres was darked, so that I ne might not know what that woman was, of so Imperial auctoritie, I woxe all abashed and stoned, and cast my sight doune to the yerth, and began still for to abide what she would doen afterward. Then came she nere, and set her doune upon the utterest corner of my bed, and she beholding my chere, that was cast to the yerth, hevie and grevous of wepyng, complained with these wordes (that I shall saine) the perturbation of my thought.

~~~~~

Metrum secundum.

*Heu! quàm precipiti mersa profundo
Mens hebet, & propriâ luce relicta
Tendit in externas ire tenebras,
Terrenis quoties flatibus acta
Crescit in immensum noxia cura!
Hic quondam Cælo liber aperto, &c.*

ALas! howe the thought of this man, dreinte in overthrowng depencesse, dulleth and forleteth his proper clerenesse, mintyng to gone into forain darkenesse, as oft as his anioius besines wexeth without mesure, that is driven with worldlie Windes. This man that whilome was fre, to whom the heaven was open and knowen, and was wont to gone in heavenly pathes, and sawe the lightnesse of the redde Sunne, and behelde the Sterres of the colde Mone, and whiche Sterre in heaven useth wanderyng recourses islitte by divers spheres. This manne overcomer had comprehended all this thyng, by number of accomplishing in Astronomic. And over this, he was wont to seken the causes, whens the sowing windes moven, and besiden the smothe water of the Se. And what spirite tourneth the stable heaven. And why the sterre riseth out of the red Est, to fallen in the Western waves. And what attempreth the lustie houres of the firste Sommer selson, and dighteth and appaileth the yerth with rosie floures. And who maketh the pluntuous Autumpne in full yeres fleten with hevie Grapes. And eke this manne was wonte to tell the divers causes of nature that were hidde. Alas! how lightlie is emptied the light of his thought, and his necke is pressed with hevie chaines, and bereth his chere enclined adowne for the grete weight, and is constrained to loken on the sole yerth.

~~~~~
Sed Medicina, inquit, potius tempus est, quàm Querelæ. Tum verò totis in me intenta luminibus. Tu ne ille es (ait) qui nostro quondam lacte nutritus, nostris educatus alimentis, in virilis animi robur evaseras, &c.

BUT tyme is now of Medicine (quod she) more then complainte. Forsothe then she entendynge to me warde, with all the loking of her eyen laied, Art not thou he (quod she) that whilome ynourished with my Milke, and fostred with my metes, were escaped and commen to the courage of a parfaite manne? Certes, I yave The soche armoures, that if thou thy self ne haddest firste caste hem awaie, thei shoulde have defended The in sikernes, that maie not be overcomen. Knowest thou not me? Why art thou still? Is it for shame, or for astonying? It were me lever it were for shame, but it semeth me that astonying hath oppressed The. And when she sawe me not onely stil, but rather without office of tongue, and all dombe, she laied her hande fortellie upon my brest, and laied: Here is no perill (quod she) he is fallen into a Lethargie, whiche that is a common sikenesse to hertes that ben deceived. He hath a little foryeten hymself. But certes he shall lightlie remembren hymself, if so be that he hath knowen me er now. And that he maie doen so, I will wipe his eyen a litle, that be darked by the cloude of mortall thynges. These wordes laied she, and with the lappe of her garmente, iplited in a frounce she dried myne eyen, that weren full of the wawes of my wepynges.

~~~~~

*Tunc me discussâ liquerunt nocte tenebræ,
Luminibusque prior rediit vigor;
Ut cum precipiti glomerantur sidera Coro,
Nimbis&que polus stetit imbribus,
Sollatet, ac nondum Cælo venientibus astris, &c.*

THUS when that Nighte was discussed awaie, Derknesse forlete me, and to my eyen repaired againe ther first strength. And right as by ensample, as the Sunne is hidde when the Sterres ben covered with Cloudes, by a swifte winde that hight Chorus, and the Firmament stante derked by wete plungie

Plungie Cloudes, and that the Sterres not apperen upon the heven, so that the Night semed sprad upon the yerth, if then the wind that hight Boreas, isent out of the Cave of the Countre of Thrace, beteth this night, that is to saine, chafeth it awaie, and discovereth the closed daie, than shineth Phoebus, ishaken with sodaine light, and smiteth with his bemes in marveilyng eyen.

Prosa tertia

Haud aliter tristitia nebulis dissolutis, hausi caelum, & ad cognoscendam medicantis faciem, mentem recepi. Itaque ubi in eam deduxi oculos, intuitumque defixi, respicio nutricem meam, in cujus ab adolescentia, &c.

Right so and none otherwise, the Cloudes of sorrowe dissolved, and doen awaie, I toke heven, and receved mynde to knowen the face of my Philisicien: so that I sette myne eyen upon her, and fastened my lokyng. I beheld my Norice Philosophie, in whose house I had converted fro my youthe, and I saied thus. O thou Maistresse of all vertues, descended from the soverain fete, why art thou comen into this solitarie place of myne exile? Art thou comen, for thou art made coulpable with me of false blames? O (qð she) my nourice, should I forsake The now, and should I not parten with The by comen travaile the charge that thou haste suffered for envie of my name? Certes, it were not lesfull ne fityng to Philosophie, to leten without companie the waie of him that is innocente: Should I then redout my blame, and agrise as though there wer befallen a newe thing? For trowest thou that Philosophie be now aluirst assailed in perilles by folke of wicked maner? Have I not striven with full grete strief, in olde tyme, before the age of my Plato, ayenst the folehardinesse of foly? And eke the same Plato livyng, his Maister Socrates deserved victorie of unrightfull deth in my presence. The heritage of the whiche Socrates, the heritage is to saine the Doctrine of the whiche Socrates, in his opinion of felicitye, that I clepe welesfulnesse, when that the people of Epicuriens and Stoiciens, and many other, enforced them to go ravish, every man for his parte, that is to saine, that everich of hem would drawen to the defence of his opinion the wordes of Socrates, thei as in partie of their praie, to droune me crying and debatyng there ayenst, and corven and renten my clothes, that I had woven with myne own handes, and with tho clothes that thei had araced out of my clothes thei wentin awaie, wenyng that I had gone with hem every dele. In whiche Epicuriens and Stoiciens for as moche as there semed some traces and steppes of my habite, the folie of wenyng tho Epicuriens and Stoiciens my familiars perverted some, through the errour of the wicked multitude of hem: This is to sain, for thei semed Philosophers, thei weren pursued to the deth and slaine. So if thou hast not knowen the exilyng of Anaxagoras, ne the enpoisoning of Socrates, ne the tourmentes of Zeno, for thei weren straungers, yet mightest thou have knowen the Senecas, the Canios, and the Soranos: Of whiche folke the renome is neither over olde ne unsolempne. The whiche menne nothyng els ne brought to the deth, but onely for thei were enformed of my maners, and semeden moste unlike to the studies of wicked folke. And forthy thou oughtest not to wondren, though that I in the bitter Se be driven with tempestes blowing about. In the whiche this is my moste purpose, that is to sain, to disple-sen wicked men. Of whiche shrewes, all be the hoste never so grete, it is to dispise, for it is not governed with no leder of reson, but it is ravished onely by fetyng errour, folilie and lightlie. And if thei sometyme make an hoste ayenst us, assaile us as stronger, our leder draweth together his riches into his Toure, and thei ben ententife about sarpleris or fachelles, unprofitable for to taken. But we then ben high aboven, siker from all tumulte and wode noise, warenestored and enclosed in soche a Paleis, whither as the clateryng or anoying folie, maie not attaine, we scorne soche raveners, and henters of foulest thynges.

Metrum quartum.

*Quisquis composito serenus aeo
Fatum sub pedibus dedit superbum,
Fortunamque tuens utramque rectus
Invictum potuit tenere vultum, &c.*

WHO so it be that clere of vertue, sadde, and well ordinate of livyng, that hath putte under fote the proude wierdes, and loketh upright upon either Fortune, he maie holden his chere undifcomfited.

The rages ne the manaces of the Se, commovyng and chalyng unware hete from the bottome, ne shall not move that manne, ne the unstable Mountaigne that hight Vesevus, that writheth out through his broken Chimeneis smokyng Fires, ne the waie of Thonder leite, that is wonte to smiten hgh Toures, ne shall not move that man. Whereto then wretches drede ye Tirauntes, that ben wode, and felonous without any strength? Hope after nothyng, ne drede thou not: and so shalt thou disarmen the ire of thilke unmightie Tiraunte. But who that quakyng dredeth, or desirerth thyng that is not stable of his right, that manne, that so doeth, hath caste awaie his shilde, and is removed fro his place, and enlatheth hym in the chaine, with the whiche he maie be drawn.

Prosa quarta.

Sentisne, inquit, haec, atque animo illabuntur tuo? Esne ἐν πένθει; Quid fles? Quid lacrymis manus? Si operam medicantis expectas, oportet ut vulnus detegas tuum, &c.

Fleest thou (qð she) these thynges? And entren thei aught in thy courage? Art thou like an Aste to the harp? Why wepist thou? Why spillest thou teres? If thou abidest after helpe of the Leche, The beboveth discover thy wounde? Tho I had gathered strength in my courage, and answered and saied. And nedeth it (qð I) of reherfing, or of amonicion, and sheweth it not inough by hymself the sharpenes that wexeth wode against me? Ne moveth it not The to se the face, or the maner of this place? Is this the librarie that thou haddest chosen for a right certain liege to The in mine hous, there as thou disputest oft with me, of the science of thynges, touchyng divinite, and touchyng mankynde? Was then myne habite soche as it is now, was my face or chere soch as is now, when I sought with The the secretes of nature, when thou enformedest my maners, and the reson of all my life, to the ensample of th' order of heven? Is not this the guerdone that I referre to The, to whom I have be obeisaunt?

Z z z z

Certes,

Certes, thou enformedest by the mouthe of Plato this sentence, that is to saie, that comen thynges or communalities weren blisfull, if thei that had studied all fully to wisedome, governeden thilke thynges: or els if it so befell, that the governours of communalities studien to gette wisedome. Thou saidist eke by the mouthe of the saied Plato, that it was a necessarie cause, wise menne to taken and desiren the governaunce of comen thynges, for that the governaunce of citees, ileft in the handes of felonous tourmentors, citezeins ne shoulde not bringen in pestilence and distruccion to gode folke. And therefore I followyng thilke aucthous, desired to put forthe in execucion and in acte of comen administracion thilke thynges, that I had lerned of The, among my secrete resting whiles; thou and God, that put in the thoughtes of wise folke, ben knowen with me, that nothyng ne brought me to mastreie or dignitie, but the comen studie of all godenesse. And therefore cometh it, that betwene wicked folk and me have ben grevous discordes, that ne mighten not be relefed by praiers: for this libertie hath the fredome of conscience, that the wraethe of more mightie folke hath alwaie ben dispised of me, for savacion of right. How oft have I resisted and withstande, that man that hight Conigast, that made alwaie th'assault ayenst the prosper fortunes of pore feble folke? How oft eke have I put of or cast out hym Triguill, Provoste of the Kyng's hous, bothe of the wronges that he had begonne to doen, and eke fully performed? How often have I covered and defended by the aucthoritie of me, put ayenst perilles, that is to saie, put myne aucthoritie in perill, for the wretched pore folke, that the covetise of straungers unpunished turmenteden alwaie with miseses, and grevaunces out of number? Never manne yet drowe me fro right to wrong. When I sawe the Fortunes and the richesses of the peple of the Provinces ben harmed and amenused, either by privie ravines, or by comen tributes or cariages, as fory was I as thei that suffreden the harme. Isa. When Theodorike kyng of Gothes in a dedde yere had his garners full of corne, and commaunded that no man should buye no corn, till his corne wer sold, and at a grevous dere prife: Boece withstode that ordinaunce, and overcame it, knowyng all this the king Theodorike himself. Coempcion is to saie, comen achate or buying together, that were established upon the peple, by soche a manner imposicion, as who so bought a bushell of Corne, he must yeven the kyng the fiveth parte. Textus. When it was in the fore hongrie tyme, there was established grevous and unprofitable coempcion, that men seen well, it should gretlie tourmente and endomagen all the Province of Campaine. I toke strife ayenst the Provost of the Pretorie, for the common profite. And the King knowyng of it, I overcame it, so that the coempcion was not asked, ne toke effecte.

Pauline a Counsaillour of Rome, the riches of the whiche Pauline the houndes of the Paleis, that is to saie, the officers woulde have devoured by hope and covetise, yet drowe I out of the jawes of hem that gapeden. And for as moche as the paine of the accusacion adjudged before ne should not sodainly henten, ne punishen wrongfully Albine a Counsaillour of Rome, I putte me ayenst the hates, and indignacions of the accusour Cyprian. Is it not then enough, sens that I have purchased grete discordes ayenst my self? But I ought be more assured ayenst other folke, that for the love of rightwisnesse I never reserved nothyng to my self, to themwarde of the kyng's halle, by whiche I were the more siker. But through the same accusours accusyng, I am condemned. Of the number of whiche accusours, one Basilus that whilom was chased out of the Kyng's service, is now compelled in accusyng of my name, for nede of foraine money.

Also, Opilion and Gaudentius, have accused me: All be it so that the Justice Regall had whilome demed them bothe to gone into exile, for ther trecheries and fraudes without nomber. To whiche judgement thei n'olden not obeie, but defended hem by the sikernes of holie houses, that is to saie, fledden into Seintewarie: And then when this was apperceived by the Kyng, he commaunded, but if thei avoided the Cite of Ravenne, by certayne daye assigned, that menne should marken hem on the foreheade, with an hotte yron, and chafen hem out of the toun. Now what thyng semeth might be likened to this cruelte, for certes this same daie was received the accusyng of my name, by thilke same accusours? What maie be saied hereto? Hath my studie and my connyng deserved thus, or els the foresaied dampnacion of me, made them rightfull accusours or no? Was not fortune ashamed of this? Certes, all had not fortune ben ashamed, that innocence was accused, yet ought she have had shame of the filthe of myne accusours. But askest thou in summe of what gilte I am accused? Men saie that I would save the companie of the Senatours. And desiredst thou to heren in what maner I am accused? that I should have distourbed the accusour to beren Letters, by whiche he should have made the Senatours giltye, ayenst the Kyng's roiall Majestie. O Maistresse, what demest thou of this? Shall I forsake this blame, that I be no shame to The? Certes, I have would it (that is to saie) the savacion of the Senate, ne I shall never let to wilne it, and that I confesse and am aknowe, but the entente of the accusour to ben distourbed shall cese. Shall I clepe that a felonie or a synne, that I have desired the savacion of the order of the Senate? And certes had thilke same Senate doen through ther decretes and ther judgements, as though it were a sinne and a felonie, that is to wilne the savacion of them. But folie, that lieth alwaie to hymself, maie not chaunge the merite of thynges; ne I trowe not by the judgemente of Socrates, that it were lesfull to me, to hide the sothe, ne assente to lesynges: but certes, how so ever it be of this, I putte it to gessen or prisen, of the judgement of The, and of wise folke, of whiche thyng all the ordinaunce and the sothe (for as moche as folke that ben to comen after our daies, shall knowen it) I have putte it in Scripture, and in remembraunce. For touchyng the Letters falsely made, by whiche Letters I am accused, to have hoped the fredome of Rome, what appertaineth me to speken thereof? Of whiche Letters the fraude had ben shewed apertlie, if I had had libertie for to have used, and ben at confession of mine accusours, the whiche thyng in all nedes hath grete strength. For what other fredome maie menne hopen? Certes, I would that some other fredome might be hoped, I would then have answered, by the wordes of a man, that hight Canius: For when he was accused of Canius, Caesar Germane's sonne, that he was knowyng and consentyng of a conjuracion made ayenst hym. This Canius answered thus: if I had wiste it, thou haddest not wiste it. In whiche thyng, sorow hath not so dulled my witte, that I plain onely, that shreude folke apparailen Felonies agaynst vertue, but I wonder gretly, how that thei maie performe thynges that thei have hoped for to doen; for why? to wilne shreudnesse, that cometh paraventure of our defeaute: But it is like a Monster and a marveile, how that in the presente sight of GOD maie ben achieved and performed soche thynges, as every felenous manne hath conceived in his thought agaynst innocents. For

For whiche thyng, one of thy familiers not unskillfull asked thus, If GOD is, whens comen wicked thynges? But all had it ben kfull that felonous folk, that nowe desiren the blode, and the deth of all gode menne, and eke of the Senate, have wilned to gone distroyen me, whom thei have seen alwaie bataillen and defenden gode men and eke all the Senate, that had not deserved of the fathers (that is to saie of the Senatours) that thei shoulde will my destruction. Thou remembreth well as I gesse, that when I would doen or saie any thyng, thou thy self alwaie presente ruledest me.

At the cite of Verone, when that the king gredie of comen slaughter, caste hym to transporten upon al th' order of the senate the gilte of his roiall Majestie, of the whiche gilte that Albin was accused, with how grete sikernesse of perill to me defended I all the Senate? Thou wotest well that I saie sothe, ne I ne avaunted me never in praisyng of my self: For alwaie, when any wight receveth precious renowne, in avaunting of hymself, or his werkes, he amenpeth the secre of his conscience.

But now thou maigest well seen, to what ende I am comen for myne innocencie, I receive paine of false Felonie, for guerdone of verie vertue. And what open confession of felonie had ever Judges, so accordaunte in cruelte, that is to saie, as myne accusyng hath, that either error of manne's witte, or els condicion of Fortune, that is uncertaine to all mortall folke, ne submitted some of 'nem, that is to saie, that it ne enclined some Judge to have pite or compassion? For although I had ben accused, that I would brenne holie houses, and strangle Priestes with wicked swerde, or that I had greithed deth to all gode menne, algates the sentence should have punished me presente confessed and convicted.

But now I am removed from the Cite of Rome, almoste five hundred thousand paas, I am without defence dampned to proscripcion and to deth, for the studies and bounties that I have doen to the Senate. But o well ben thei worthie of merite, as who saith: naie, there might yet never none of 'hem be convict of soche a blame as mine is. Of whiche trespass mine accusours seen full wel the dignitie, for thei would darken it with meddling of some felonie. Thei baren me on hond and saied, that I had poluted and defouled my conscience with Sacrilege, for covetise of dignitie: and certes, thou thy self that art planted in me, chacedest out of the siege of my corage all covetise of mortall thynges, ne Sacrilege ne had no leve to have a place in me before thyne eyes. For thou droppedest every daie in mine eres, and in my thought, thilke commaundement of Pythagoras, that is to saie: Menne shall serve to God, and not to Goddess. Ne it was not conveniente ne none nede, to taken help of the foulest spirites, I that thou hast ordeined, and set in soche excellence, that thou madest me like to God: And over this, the right clene secrete chamber of myne hous, that is to saie, my wife, and the companie of mine honest frendes, and my wive's father, as well holie as worthy to be reverensd for his dedes, defenden me from all soche suspeccion of soche blame. But oh malice! For thei that accusen me, taken of The, Philosophie, faith of so grete blame, for thei trowen that I have had affinite to malice or enchauntment, bicause that I am replenished, and fulfilled with thy techynges, and enformed of thy manners. And thus it suffiseth not onely, that thy reverence ne availe me naught, but if thou of thy frewill rather be blemished with mine offenseion. But certes, to the harmes that I have there betideth yet this encrese of harme, that the gessyng and the judgemente of moche folke ne loken nothyng to the desertes of thynges, but onely to the aventure of fortune, and judgen that only soche thynges ben purveied of God, which that temporalle wilfulnesse commaundeth. Glosa. As thus, that if a wight have prosperite, he is a gode manne, and worthie to have that prosperitie, and who so hath adversitie, he is a wicked manne, and God hath forsake hym, and he is worthie to have that adversitie. This is the opinion of some folke, and therof cometh the gode-gessyng first of all thyng forsaketh wretches. Certes, it greveth me to thinke right now on divers sentences that the peple saith of me: and thus moche I saie, that the last charge of contrarious Fortune is this, that when any blame is laied upon a caitife, men wenen that he hath deserved that he suffereth. And I that am put awaie from gode men, and dispoiled of dignities, and defouled of my name by gessyng, have suffred turmentes for my gode dedes. Certes, me semeth that I se the felonous covines of wicked men habounden in joie and in gladnesse, and I se that every lorell shapeth hym to finde newe fraudes, for to accuse gode folk, and I se that gode folke be overthrowen, for drede of my perill, and every luxurious turmentour dare doen all felonie unpunished, and be excited thereto by yestes, and innocentes be not onely dispoiled of sikernesse, but of defence, and therto me list to crien to God in this maner.

Metrum quintum.

*O stelliferi conditor orbis,
Qui perpetuo nixus solio,
Rapido Cælum turbine versas,
Legemque pati sidera cogis,
Ut nunc pleno lucida cornu;
Totis fratris & obvia flammis,
Condat stellas Luna minores;
Nunc obscuro pallida cornu,
Phæbo propior, lumina perdat, &c.*

THOU maker of the whele, that bereth the sterres, which that are fastened to thy perdurable chaire, and turnest the heven with a raveshyng sweigh, and constrainest the sterres to suffre thy Lawe, so that the Mone sometyme shining with her full hornes, and metyng with al the bemes of the Sunne her brother, hideth the sterres that ben lesse: And sometime when the Mone pale with her darke hornes approacheth the Sunne, leseth her lightes: and that the evin sterre Hesperus, which that in the first tyme of the night bringeth firste her colde arising, cometh eft ayen her used course, and is pale by the Morowe at risinge of the Sunne, and is then icleped Lucifer. Thou restrainest the daie by shorter dwellyng, in the tyme of the colde Winter, that maketh the leves fall. Thou dividest the swifte tides of the night, when the hote Sommer is comen. Thy might attempteth the variaunt sasons of the yere, so that Zephyrus, the debonaire winde, bringeth ayen in the first Sommer sason the leves that the winde, that highte Boreas, hath rest awaie in Autumpne, that is to saie, the last ende of Sommer, and the sedes that the sterre that hight Arcturus sew, be woxen high cornes, when the sterre Sirius enchaseth 'hem. There is nothyng unbounden from this olde Lawe, ne forletteth the werke of his proper estate.

O thou governour, governing all thynges by certaine ende, why refuseth thou onely to governe the werkes of menne by due maner? Why suffrest thou, that slidyng fortune tourneth so grete enterchaunges of of thynges, so that anyous paine that shoulde duellie punishe Felones, punissheth Innocentes: And folke of wicked maners sitten in high chaires, and annoying folke, treden (and that unrightfully) on the neckes of holy men, and vertue clere and shynyng naturally, is hid in derke derkenesses, and the rightful man bereth the paine and the blame of the felons? Ne the forsweringe, ne the fraude coverde and kempt with a false coloure, ne annoyeth not to shrewdes, the which shrewdes, whan 'hem list usen ther strength, they rejoycen 'hem to put under 'hem the soveraine kynges, which that the peple without nombre dreden. O thou whatsoever thou be, that knyrttest al bondes of thynges, loke on these wretches erthes; we men that ben not a foule partie, but a fayre parte of so gret a werke, we ben tourmented in this fe of fortune. Thou governour, withdrawe, and restraine the ravishing flodes, and fasten and ferme these yerthes stable, with thilke bonde, wyth which thou governeste heven that is so large.

Prosa quinta.

Hæc ubi continuato dolore delatravi, illa vultu placido, nihilque meis questibus mota. Cum te, inquit, mæstum, lacrymantemque vidissem, ilico miserum exulemque cognovi; sed quàm id longinquum esset exilium, &c.

WHan I had with a contynuall sorowe sobbed, or broken oute these thynges, she with her chere pefible and nothings amoved with my complaints, said thus. Whan I say The (qð she) sorrowful and weping, I wist anon that thou wer a wretch and exiled: But I wist never how fere thin exile was, yf thy tale ne had yshewed it me. But certes al be thou ferre fro thy countrey, thou n'art not put oute of it, but thou hast failed of thy way and gone amyss. And if thou hast lever for to wene that thou be put out of thy countre, than haste thou put out thy selfe, rather than any other wight hath, for no wight (but thou thy self) ne might never have done that to The: For yf thou remembre The of what countre thou art borne, it n'is nat governed by emperours ne by governement of multitude, as weren the countreis of 'hem of Athenes, but one lorde and one kyng, and that is God, that is lord of thy countre, which that rejoyseth him of the dwelling of his cytezens and not for to put 'hem in exile. Of the which lord it is a fredome to be governed by the bridle of hym, and obey to his justice. Hast thou forgotten thilke olde lawe of thy cyte, in the which cyte it is ordeined and established, that what wyght hath lever founde therein his sete or his house than els wher, he maie nat be exiled by no righte from that place? For who so that is contened within the paleis of thilke cyte, there is no drede that he maye deserve to be exiled. But who that letteth the wil t' enhabite there, he forletteth also to deserve to be a citezein of thilke cite. So that I say, that the face of this place ne moveth me not so mykel, as thyne owne face. Ne I ne aske not rather the walles of thy librarie, apparayled and wrought with yvory and with glasse, than after the sete of thy thought, in whiche I put nat whilom bokes, but I put that, that maketh bokes worthy of price or precious, that is to say, sentence of my bokes. And certainly of thy desertes bestowed in comen gode, thou haste sayd soth, but after the multitude of thy gode dedes, thou haste sayd fewe. And of the honestie or of the falsenesse of thynges that ben opposed against The, thou haste remembred thynges that be knowen to all folke. And of the felonies and fraudes of thin accusers, it semeth The to have touched it forsoth rightfully and shortly; al mighten tho same thynges better and more plentuously ben couthe in the mouthe of the peple, that knoweth all this. Thou haste eke blamed gretlye and complained of the wrongfull dede of the Senate. And thou haste sorowed for my blame, and thou hast wopen for the damage of thy renoun that is apeired; and thy last sorowe enchased ayen fortune, thou complaynest the guerdons ne be not evenly yolden to the deserts of folke. And in thy latter ende of thy wode muse thou praydeste that thylke pece that governeth the heven, shulde governe the erthe. But for that many tribulacions of affeccions have assailed The, and sorowe and yre and weping to draven The diversly, as thou art now feble of thought, mightier remedies ne shullen not yet touchen The, for which we willen somdele usen lyghter medicynes, so that thylke passions that be waxen harde in swellynge by perturbacions flowynge into thy thoughte, mowen wexe esy and softe, to receive the strength of a more mighty and more egre medicine by an esier touchyng.

Metrum sextum.

*Cum Phæbi radiis grave
Cancris Sidus inæstuat,
Tum qui larga negantibus
Sulcis semina credidit,
Elusus Cereris fide
Quernas pergat ad Arbores.
Nunquam purpureum Nemus
Lecturus violas petas, &c.*

WHan that the hevy sterre of the Cancre enchafeeth by the bemes of Phæbus: that is to sayne, whan that Phæbus the sonne is in the signe of of Cancre, who so yeveth than larglie his sedes to the felds that refusen to receive 'hem, let him gon beguiled of trust that he had to his corne, to akehorns of okes. Yf thou wilt gather violettes, ne go thou nat to the purple wodde, when the feld chirkinge agriketh of colde, by the felnesse of the winde that hight Aquilone. Yf thou desyrest or wilt usen grapes, ne seke thou nat a gloutons honde to straine and prettie the stalkes of the vyne in the firste sommer cefon. For Bacchus the god of wine hathe rather yeven his yestes to Autumpne the latter ende of sommer. God tokeneth and assygneth the times, ablynge 'hem to ther propre offyces, ne he suffreth not the stoundes, which that himselfe hath devyded and constrayned, to ben ymedled togeder: and forthy he that forletteth certaine ordinaunce of doynge by overthrowing way, he ne hath no glad issue or ende of his werkes.

Prosa sexta.

Primum igitur, paterisne me pauculis rogationibus statum tue mentis attingere, atque tentare, ut quis modus sit tue curationis intelligam, &c.

Firste woldest thou suffre me to touche and assaye the estate of thy thought by a fewe demaundes, so that I may understand the maner of thy curacion? Aske me (qð I) at thy will, that thou wolt, and I shal shal answer. Tho saide she thus: Whether wenest thou (qð she) that this world be governed folishly by happes and fortunes, or els wenest thou that there be in it any governement of reson? B. Certes (qð I) I ne trowe nat in no maner that so certaine thinges shulde be moved by fortunous fortune, but I wote wel that God, maker and maister, is governour of his werke, ne was never yet day that might put me out of the sothnesse of that sentence. P. So is it (qð she) for the same thinge fange thou a litel here before, and bewailedest and weptest, that onely men were put out of the cure of God, for of all other thinges thou ne douteest nat, that they n'ere governed by reson. But oughe! I wonder certes gretly why that thou art like, sens that thou arte put in so wholsome a sentence: But let us seken deper. I conjecte that there lacketh I n'or what. But say me this. Sens that thou ne douteest not that this worlde be governed by God, with whiche governayle takest thou hede that it is governed? Unneth (qð I) know, I the sentence of thy question, so that I ne maie not yet answeren to thy demaundes. I was not disceved (qð she) that there ne failed somewhat by whiche the malady of perturbacion is crepte into thy thought, so as the strength of thy paleys shynge is open: but saye me this. Remembrest thou what is th'ende of thynges? and whider th'entencion of al kinde tendeth? I have herde tolde it some tyme (qð I) but drerinesse hath dulled my memory. Certes (qð she) thou wotest well whence all thinges be comen and proceden. I wote wel (qð I) and answerde, that God is beginninge of al. And howe may this be (qð she) that sens thou knowest the beginning of thinges, that thou knowest nat what is the ende of thinges? but soche ben the customes of perturbacion, and this power thei han that they may move a man from his place, that is to say, from the stablenesse and perfection of his knowinge, but certes thei may nat al arace him, ne alien him in all: but I wold that thou woldest answer to this. Remembrest thou that thou arte a man? B. Why shulde I not remembre that (qð I). Phi. Mayst thou not tel me than (qð she) what thing is a man? Askest thou not me (qð I) whether that I be a resonable mortall best? I wote well and confesse that I am it. Wiste thou never yet that thou were anye other thinge (qð she). No (qð I). Nowe well knowe I (qð she) other cause of thy maladye, and that righte grete! Thou haste leste for to knowen thy selfe what thou art, through whiche I have plainly founden the cause of thy maladic, or els the entre of recovering of thy hele. For why? For thou art confounded with foryetyng of thy selfe: Thou sorowdeste that thou art exiled of thy propre godes. And for thou ne wylte what is th'ende of thinges, forthy demest thou that felonous and wikid men be mighty and welful: and for thou hast forieten by which governementes the world is governed, forthy wenest thou that these mutacions of fortune fleten without governour. These ben the causes not onely to malady, but certes gret causes to deth: But I thanke the actour, and the maker of hele, that nature hath not al forleten The. I have grete nourishyng of thin hele, and that is the sothe sentence of governaunce of the world, that thou bilevest that the governing of it is not subjecte ne underput to the folie of these happes aventurous, but to the reson of God; and therefore doute The nothing, for of this litel spark thine hete of lyfe shal shyne. But for as moch as it is not time yet of faster remedies, and the nature is of thoughtes thus disceved, that as ofte as thei caste awaye sothe opinions, they clothen 'hem in false opinions, of the which false opinions the derkenesse of perturbation wexeth up, that confoundeth the very insight, that derkenesse shal I somewhat assaye to maken thinne and weke, by lyght and meaneliche remedies, so that after that the derkenesse of discevyng thinges be doen awaie, thou maye knowe the shyning of very lyght.

Metrum septimum.

*Nubibus atris
Condita nullum
Fundere possunt
Sidera lumen.
Si mare volvens
Turbidus Auster
Misceat æstum,
Vitrea dudum
Parque serenis, &c.*

THE sterres covered with blacke cloudes ne mowe yeven adoun no light, if the trouble wynde that hyght Auster, turnyng and walowyng the se medeleth the hete, that is to sayne the boyl-ynge up from the botome. The wawes that were whylome clere as glasse, and like to the fayre bright dayes, wythstante anon the syghtes of men, by the fylthe and ordure that is resolved. And the fletyng streame that reileth doune diversly from high moun- taignes is arrested and resisted ofte tyme by the encountryng of a stone, that is departed and fallen from some roche. And forthy, yf thou wilt loken and deme sothe with clere light, and holden the way with a right path, weive thou joy, drive fro drede, fleme thou hope, ne let no sorow approche, that is to sayne, Let non of these four passyons overcome or blende The. For cloudy and derke is thilke thoughte, and bounde with bridels, whereas these thinges reignen.

Explicit liber primus.

Prosa prima.

Post hæc paulisper obticuit, atque ubi attentionem meam modestâ taciturnitate collegit, sic exorsa est: si penitus ægritudinis tue causas habitumque, &c.

AFTER this she stinte a little, and after that she had gathered by atemper stylnesse myne attention, as who so might sayn thus. After these thynges she stynte a lytell, and whan she apperceved by atemper stilnesse, that I was ententife to heren her, she began to speke in this wise. If I (qð she) have understonden and knowen utterly the causes and the habite of thy maladye, thou languishest and art defected for desire and talent of thy rather fortune. She that yke Fortune onelye that is chaunged as thou faintest to The warde, hath perverted the clerenesse and the estate of thy courage. I understond the felle or manyfolde colours and discetes of thilke mervailous monstre fortune, and how she useth ful flateryng familiarite with 'hem that she enforceth to begile, so long, til that she confound with unsufferable sorow 'hem that she hath lefe in dispaire unpurveied. And if thou remembrest well the kinde, the maneres, and the deserte of thilke fortune, thou shalt wel knowe that as in her thou never ne hadest, ne haste yloste anye faire thinge: But (as I trowe) I shal not gretly

5 A

travaillen

travailen to done The remembren on these thynges. For thou were wont to hurtelen and dispisen her with many wordes, whan she was blandisshyng and presente, and pursudest her with sentences that weren drawn oute of * myne entre, that is to saye, of mine enformacion: but no sodaine mutacion ne betideth not without a maner chaunging of corages. And so it is befall, that thou arte a lytel departed fro the pece of thy thoughte, but now is tyme that thou drinke and ataste some softe and delitable thynges, so that whan they be entred within The, it mowen make way for strengre dringes of medecyns. Come now forthe therfore the suasion of swetnes rhetorien, which that goeth onely the right waie, while she forsaketh not myne estatutes. And with Rhetorike come forthe musyke a damosell of oure house, that singeth now lighter modes or prolacions and now hevier. What eileth the man? What is it that hath caste The into mourning and into weping? I trowe that thou hast sene some new thing and uncouth? Thou wenest that fortune be chaunged ayen The, but thou wenest wrong, if that thou wene, alway tho ben her maners. She hathe rather kept as to The warde her propre stableness in the chaunging of her selfe: right soch was she whan she flattered The and disceved The, with unlesful likinges and false wilfulnesse. Thou haste nowe knowen and atteinte the doubteous or double visage of thilk blinde goddesse Fortune. She that yet covereth and wympleth her to other folke, hath shewed her self everydele to The: Yf thou approvest her and thinkest that she is gode, use her maners and plaine The nat; and yf thou agrisest her false trecherye, dispise and caste away her that playeth so harmefully, for she that is now cause of so moch sorowe to The, shulde be to The cause of pece and of joye. She hath forsaken The forsoth, the which that never man maie be syker, that she ne shal forsaken him. Glosa. But nathelesse some bokes have the texte thus. Forsothe she hath forsaken The, ne ther n'ys no man liker that she ne hath not forsaken. Holdest thou than thylke welesfulnesse precious to The that shal passen, and is present fortune dereworth to The, which that n'ys not faithfull for to dwel, and whan she goth awaye, that she bringeth a wight in sorowe? Forfens she may not be withholden at a manne's wyll, she maketh him a wretche whan she departeth fro hym. What other thinge is flyttinge fortune, but a maner shewing of wretchidnesse that is to come? Ne it suffiseth not onely to loken on thing that is presente before the eyen of a man, but wysedom loketh and mesureth th' ende of thynges, and the same chaungyng from one to another, that is to saine, from adversite into prosperite, maketh that the manaces of fortune ne ben not for to dreden, ne the flateringe to be desired. Thus at laste it behoveth The to suffren with even wil in pacience, all that is done within the flore of fortune, that is to saye, in this worlde, sithe thou hast ones put thy necke under the yoke of her. For if thou wolt writen a lawe of wending and of dwelling to fortune, which that thou hast chosen frely to ben thy lady; arte thou not wrongful in that, and makest Fortune wroth and asper by thine inpacience, and yet thou mayst nat chaungen her?

Yf thou committest and betakest thy sayles to the wynde, thou shalt be shoven, nat thiðer that thou woldest, but whiðer that the wind shoveth The. Yf thou castest thy sedes in the felde, thou shuldest have in minde that the yeres bene amanges otherwhile plentuous, and other while barein. Thou hast betaken thy selfe to the governaunce of fortune, and forthy it behoveth The to ben obeisaunt to the ma-ners of thy lady. Enforcest thou The to aresten or withholden the swyftnesse and the sweygh of her tourning whele? O thou sole of all mortal soles, if Fortune began to dwel stable, she cessed then to ben Fortune.

Metrum primum.

*Hæc cum superbâ verterit vices dextrâ,
Et æstuantis more fertur Euripi,
Dudum tremendos sæva proterit Reges,
Humilemque victi sublevat fallax vultum.
Non illa miseros audit, haud curat fletus, &c.*

WHAN Fortune wyth a proude righte hand withtouneth her chaunging stounds, she fareth like the maners of the boiling Euripe.

Glosa. Euripe is an arme of the se, that ebbeth and floweth, and sometyme the streame is on o side, and somtime on that other.

Texte. She crewel fortune casteth adoune kynges, that whylom weren ydrade, and she decevable enhaunceth up the humble chere of him that is discomfited: ne she neither hereth ne recketh of wretched wepinges. And she is so hard, that she laugheth and scorneth the weping of 'hem, the whiche she hathe maked to wepe with her fre will. Thus she playeth and thus she proveth her strengthes, and sheweth a gret wonder to al her servauntes, if that a wighte is sene welefull, and overthrowe in an houre.

Prosa secunda.

Vellem autem pauca tecum, Fortune ipsius verbis, agitare. Tu igitur an jus postulet animadvertere. Quid tu, o homo, ream me quotidianis agis querelis? &c.

Certes I wold pleden with The a fewe thynges, usynge the wordes of fortune: take hede nowe thy selfe, yf that she aske right. O thou man, wherefore makest thou me gyltie by thyn every dayes plaininges?

What wrong have I done The? what godes have I beraft The that were thyn? Stryve or plete with me before what juge that thou wylt, of the possessyon of riches, or of dignities, and if thou maist shewen me, that ever any mortall manne hath received any of tho thynges to ben his in propre, than wil I graunt frely, that thilke thynges were thine, which that thou askest. Whan that nature brought The forth out of thy mother's wombe, I received The naked and neddy of all thynges, and I nourished The with all my riches, and was redy and ententise through my favour to sustaine The: and that maketh The nowe impacient ayenst me. And I environned The with al haboundaunce and shynynge of al godes, that ben in my righte: nowe it lyketh me to withdrawe min honde. Thou hast had grace, as he that hath used forayne godes. Thou haste no right to playne The, as though thou haddest utterly forlorne al thy thynges. Why plainest thou thanne? I have done to The no wronge. Rycheffes, honours, and soche other thynges ben of my ryght. My servauntes knowen me for ther lady: they come with me and departen whan I wende. I dare well afferme hardely, that if tho thinges, of whiche thou playnest that thou hast forlorn, had ben thin, thou ne haddest not forlorn 'hem. Shal I than be defended only to use my right? Certes it is lesful to the heven to make clere daies, and after that to overcome tho same daies with derke nightes. The yere hathe eke leve to appaile the visage of the erthe, now with floures, and now with fruite, and to confounde 'hem somtime with raines and with colde.

* Myne entre. In the Latin de nostro Adyto; Adytum seems to have been mistaken for Aditus.

The se hath eke his right, to ben somtime caulme and blandishinge, with smothe water, and sometime to be horrible with wawes and with tempestes. But covetise of men, that may not be staunched, shall it binde me to be stedfaste, sythen that stedfastnesse is uncouth to my maners? Soche is my strength, and soche play I play comenly. I turne the whirlinge whele with the turning cerkle, I am glad to chaungen the lowest to the hiest, and the hiest to the lowest. Worth up if thou wolte, so it be by this lawe, that thou ne hold nat that I do The wrong, though thou discende adown, whan the reson of my play asketh it. Wiste thou not howe Cræsus kyng of Lydiens, of whiche king Cyrus was full fore agaste a lytel before, that this Cræsus was caughte of Cyrus, and ledde to the fyre to be brende, but that a rayne discended from heven that rescowed him? And is it out of mynde howe that Paulus counsul of Rome, whan he had taken the king of Perciens, weped petously for the captivite of the selfe kyng? What o-ther thing bewaylen the crienges of tragedies, but onely the dedes of fortune, that with an aukwarde stroke overturneth the relmes of grete nobleye. Glosa. Tragedie is to saine, a dite of a prosperite for a tyme, that endeth in wretchednesse. Leredest not thou in Grece whan thou wer yonge, that in the entre or in the seler of Jupiter, there ben couched two tonnes, that one is ful of gode, that other is ful of harme? What right hast thou to plain, if thou haste taken more plentoussly of the gode syde, that is to sayne of richesse and prosperite? And what eke if I be not all departed fro The? What eke if my mutabylite yeveth The rightfull cause of hope to have yet better thinges? Natheles dismaye The not in thy thought, and thou that arte put in the comune relme of al, ne desyre not to lyven by thin owne propre right.

Metrum secundum.

*Si quantas rapidis flatibus incitus
Pontus versat arenas,
Aut quot stelliferis edita noctibus
Cælo sidera fulgent,
Tantas fundat opes, nec retrahat manum,
Pleno copia cornu;
Humanum miseras haud ideo genus
Cesset flere querelas, &c.*

THoughe plentye goddesse of riches, hylde adowne wyth a full horne, and withdrawe not her hande, as manye richesse as the se turneth upwarde sandes, whan it is moved with ravyshinge blastes, or elles as manye richesles as there shinen bright sterres in the heven on the sterry nightes: yet for all that mankinden'old not cesse to wepe wretched plaints. And al be it so that God receved ther prayers, and yeveth 'hem as solelarge moche golde, and appaileth covetous folke with noble or clere honours: yet semeth 'hem have gotten nothing. But alway cruel ravyne devouringe al that they have gotten, sheveth other gapinges, that is to saye, gapen and desiren yet after mo rycheffes. What brideles might withholden to any certaine ende the disordinate covetise of men, whan ever the rather that it fleteth in large yestes, the more brenneth in 'hem the luste of having? Certes he that quaking and dredefull weneth himselfe nedy, he ne liveth nevermore riche.

Prosa tertia.

His igitur si pro se tecum verbis fortuna loqueretur, quid profectò contra hisceres, non haberes. At si quid est, quo querelam tuam jure tuearis, proferas oportet, &c.

THerfore if that fortune speke with The for her selfe in this maner, forsothe thou ne haddest nat what thou mightest answere. And yf thou hast any thinge, wherwith thou mayst rightfully defenden thy complainte, it beheveth The to shewen, and I woll yeven to The space to tellen it. Beece. Certainli (qð I) than, these ben faire thinges, and a-nointed with honyswetnesse of rhetorike and musike, and onely while they ben herde and sowne in eres, they ben delicious. But to wretches it is a deper felynge of harme, this is to sain, that wretches felen the harmes that they suffre more grevously, than the remedies or the delites of these wordes may gladden or conforten 'hem. So that whan these thinges stinten for to sown in eres, that sorow that is inset greveth the thought. P. Right so it dothe (qð she). For these ne ben yet no remedies of the malady, but they ben a maner norishinge of thy sorowes, that rebel ayenst thy curacion. For whan tyme is, I shal move and ajust soch thinges, that percen 'hem ful depe. But nathlesse, that thou shalt not wilne to letten thy selfe a wretche. Hast thou forieten the numbre and the maner of thy welefulnesse? I speke not how that the soveraigne men of the cite toke The in cure and keping, whan thou were orphelyn of father and of mother, and were chosen in affynite of princes of the cite: And thou beganne rather to be lese and dere than for to be a neighbour, the which thing is the moste precious kinde of any propinquite or alliance that maye ben. Who is it that ne sayde tho that thou ne were righte weleful, with so grete nobley as thy fathers in lawe, and with the chastite of thy wyfe, and with th' oportunitie and noblesse of thy masculine children, that is to sayn, thy sonnes? And over all thys (me lyste to passen of common thinges) how thou haddest in thy youth dignities, that were warned to old men, but it deliteth me now to comen to the singlar unhepinge of thy welefulnesse. If any frute of mortal thinges may have any wighte, or price of welefulnesse, myghtest thou ever forgeten for any charge of harme that mighte befall, the remembraunce of thilke daye, that thou saw thy two sonnes made counsailours, and ladde togyther from thy house, under so gret assemble of senatours, and under the blithnesse of the peple? and whan thou saw 'hem sette in the court in hie chaires of dignities, thou rhetorien or pronouncer of kinges praisinges, deservedest glory of witte and of eloquence, whan thou sittinge bitwene thy two sonnes counsailours, in the place that hight Circo, fulfilledest the bydding of the multitude of peple that was sprade about The with so large praysynge and laude, as men synge in victories. Tho yave thou to fortune as I trowe, that is to say, tho seoffedest thou fortune with with glorious wordes, and decevedest her, whan she acoyed and norished The as her own delices. Thou bare away of fortune a yeste, that is to say, soche guerdon that she never yave to private man. Wilt thou therefore laye a rekeninge with fortune? She hath nowe first twyned upon The with a wicked eye. If thou consider the nombre and the maner of thy blisses and of thy sorowes, thou maist nat forsaken that thou n'art yet blisfull. For if therefore thou wenest thy selfe not weleful for tho thynges that semeden joyful ben passed, ther n'is not why thou shuldest seme to thy selfe a wretch, for thynges that seme now sory, passen also. Art thou now comen a sodayne gest into the shadow or tabernacle of this life? or trowest thou that any stedfastnesse be in manne's thynges? Whan oft a swifte houre dissolveth the same man, that is to saie, whan the soule departeth from the body. For although that felde is there any faithe that fortunous thynges would dwel- len, yet nathelless the last daye of a manne's lyfe is a maner dethe to fortune, and also to thilke that hath dwelt. And therefore what wenest thou dare recke, if thou forlet her in dyinge, or els that she fortune forlete The in fleyng awaye?

*****

Metrum tertium.

*Cum polo Phœbus roseis quadrigis
Lucem spargere cœperit,
Pallet albentes hebetata vultus
Flammis stella prementibus, &c.*

WHan Phœbus the sonne beginneth to sprede his clerenesse with rosen Chariottes, than the sterre dymmed paleth her white cheres by the flambes of the sonne that overcommeth the sterre light, that is to sayne, whan the sonne is ryfen, the dayesterre wexeth pale and leseth her light. For the grete lightnesse of the son, when the wode wexeth rodi of rosen floures in the first sommer ceson, through the breth of the winde Zephyrus that wexeth warme, if the cloudie winde Auster blowe felliche, than goeth awaye farinesse of thornes. Oft the se is clere and caulme with moving flodes, and ofte the horrible wind Aquilon moveth boiling tempeste and overhelveth the se. If the forme of this worlde is so feld stable, and if it turneth by so many enterchaunges: wilt thou than trusten in the tomblyng fortunes of men: Wylt thou trowen on flyttinge godes? It is certain and establisshed by lawe perdurable, that nothing that is engendred is stedfast ne stable.

Prosa quarta.

Tum ego, vera, inquam, commemoras, o virtutum omnium nutrix, nec inficiari possum prosperitatis meæ velocissimum cursum, &c.

THen said I thus: O nourice of all vertues, thou saiest ful soth, ne I may not forsake the right swift counse of my prosperitie, that is to saie, that the prosperitie ne be comen to me wonder swiftlie and sone. But this is a thyng that gretlie smarteth me, when it remembreth me. For in all adversities of Fortune, the moſte unſelie kynde of contrarious Fortune is to have ben welefull. Phi. But that thou abiest thus (qð she) the tourmente of thy false opinion, that maieſt thou not lightfullie blamen, ne aretten to to thynges, as who saith, that thou hast yet many haboundances of thynges. Textus. For all be it so, that the idell name of aventurous welefulnesse, moveth The now, it is lesfull that thou reken with me, of howe many thynges thou haste yet plentie. And therefore, if that thilke thing that thou haddest for more precious, in al thy richesse of Fortune, be kept to The, yet by the grace of GOD, unwemmed and undefouled, maieſt thou then plaine rightfully upon the mischief of Fortune, sithen thou hast yet thy best thynges? Certes, yet liveth in gode point thilke precious honour of mankind, Symachus thy wive's father, whiche that is a man made of al Sapience and Vertue, the whiche manne thou wouldest buye, with the price of thyne owne life; he bewail- eth the wronges, that menne doen to The, and not for himselfe. For he liveth in sikernes, of any Sen- tence put ayenst hym. And yet liveth thy wife, that is attempre of witte, and passyng other women, in clenness of chastitie. And for I would closen shortlie her bounties, she is like her father: I tell The, that she liveth lothe of this life, and kepeth to The onelie her ghoſte, and is all mate, and of over- come by wepyng and sorowe, for desire of The. In the whiche thyng onelie I mote graunten The, that thy wilfulnesse is amenused. What shall I saie eke of thy two sonnes counsailours, of which as of chil- dren of ther age, there shineth the likenesse of the witte of ther father, and of ther eld father? And sith- en the soveraine cure of all mortall folke is to saven ther owne lives, if thou knowe thy self, thy godes make The more welefull. For yet ben there thynges dwelled to The ward, that no man doubteth, that thei ne ben more dereworthe to The, then thyne owne life. And forthy drie teres, for yet is not every Fortune hatefull to The ward: ne over grete tem- pest ne hath not yet fallen upon The, when thyne ankers cleven faste, that neither woll suffren the coun- fort of this tyme presente, ne the hope of tyme com- yng to passen ne to failen. Bo. And I praie (qð I) that faste mote thei holden: for the whiles that thei holden, how so ever that thynges ben, I shall well fleten forthe and escapen. But thou maieſt well seen, how grete apparailles and araie, that me lacked, that be passed awaie from me. P. I have somewhat a- vaunced and furthered The (qð she) if that thou an- noie not, or forthinke not of all thy Fortune, as who saith, I have somewhat comforted The, so that thou tempest not The thus, with all thy fortune, sithen thou hast yet thy beste thynges. But I maie not suffren thy delices, that plainest so wepyng and anguishous, for that ther lacketh somewhat to thy welfulness. For what man is he that is so sad, or of grete parſite welefulnesse, that he ne striveth and plaineth on some halfe ayen the qualitie of his estate? For why? full anguishous thing is the condicion of manne's godes. For either it cometh not altogether to a wight, or els it ne lasteth not perpetuell. For some man hath grete richesse, but he is ashamed of his ungentill linage. And some man is renommed of noblesse of kinrede, but he is enclosed in so grete an- guishe of nede of thynges, that hym were lever that he wer unknowe. And some man haboundeth bothe in richesse and noblesse, but yet he bewaileth his chaste life, for he ne hath no wife. And some man is, and selily married, but he hath no children, and nourisheth his richesses to straunge folk. And some man is gladed with children, but he wepeth full fore, for the trespace of his sonne, or of his dought- er. And for this there ne accordeth no wight ligh- ly to that condicion of his fortune. For alwaie to every man there is in somewhat that unassaid he ne wotte noughte, or els he dredeth that he hath assaid. And adde this also, that every welefull man man hath a full delicate feling: so that but if all thinges befallen at his own will, he is impacient, or is not used to have none adversitie, anon he is throwen adoune for every little thing. And full little thinges ben tho, that withdrawn the somme or the perfeccion of blisfulnesse fro 'hem that ben moſte fortunate. Howe many men trowest thou, would demen 'hem self to ben almost in heaven, if thei mighten attain to the lest partie of the remnaunte of thy fortune? This same place that thou clepeſte exile, is countre to them that enhabiten here. And forthy nothyng is wretched, but when thou wenest it; as who saith, thou thy self, ne no wight els n'is a wretch, but when he weneth himself he is a wretch, by reputation of his courage. And ayenward: al fortune is blisful to a man, by the agreabilitie, or by the egalitie of hym that suffreth it. What man is that, that is so weleful, that n'olde chaungen his estate when he hath losse his pacience? The swetenesse of manne's welefulnesse is sprant with many bitternesse. The which welefulnesse, although it seme swete and joiful to him that useth it, yet maie it not ben withholden, that it ne goeth awaie when it wol. Then it is well sene, how wretched is the blisfulnesse of mortall thinges that neither it dureth perpetuell with 'hem, that every fortune receven agreable or egally, ne it deliteth not in all to 'hem that ben anguifhous. O ye mortall folke, what seke ye then blisfulnesse out of your owne selfe, whiche is put in your self? Errour and folie confoundeth you. I shall shewe The shortlie the pointe of soveraine blisfulnesse.

Is there any thyng to The more precious then thy life? Thou wilt aunswere naie. Then, if it so be that thou art mightie over thy self, that is to saine, by tranquillite of thy soule, then halte thou thyng in thy power, that thou n'oldest never lesen: Ne Fortune maie not bynemme it The. And that thou maieſt knowe that blisfulnesse ne maie not stande in thynges, that ben fortunous and temporell, now underſtande, and gather it together thus. If blisfulnesse be the soveraine gode of nature, that liveth by reſon: ne thilke thing is not soveraine gode, that maie be taken awaie in any wise.

For more worthie thing is, and more digne thilke thing, that maie not be taken awaie. Then sheweth it well, that the unſtableneſſe of Fortune maie not attaine to receve very blisfulnesse. And yet more over, what manne that this tomblyng welefulnesse ledeth, either he wote that it is chaungeable, or els he wote it not. And if he wote it not, what blisful fortune maie there ben in the blindnes of ignorance? And if he wot, that it is chaungeable, he mote alwaie ben adradde, that he ne lese that thing, that he ne douteth not, but that he maie lesen it. As who saierh, he mote alwaie be agast, lest he lese that, that he woteth right well he maie lese. For whiche the continuell drede that he hath, ne suffereth hym not to be welefull. Or els if he lese it, he weneth to be diſpiſed and forleten. Certes, eke that is a ful litle gode, that is borne with even herte, when it is losse, that is to saine, that men doe no more force of the losse, then of the havying. And for as moche as thou thy self arte he, to whom it hath be shewed, and preved by full many demonſtracions, as I wotte well, that the ſoules of menne ne mowen not dien in no wise. And eke ſens it is clere and certaine, that fortunous welefulnesse endeth by the deth of the bodie: it maie not be doubted, that if deth maie rake awaie blisfulnesse, that all the kind of mortal thing ne diſcendeth into wretchednesse, by the ende of deth. And ſithen we know well, that many a manne hath ſought the fruit of blisfulnesse, not onely with ſuffering of deth, but eke with ſuf-feryng of paines and tourmentes: howe might then this preſente life make men blisfull, ſens that thilke ſelf life ended, it ne maketh folke no wretches?

Metrum quartum.

*Quisquis volet perennem
Cautus ponere sedem,
Stabilisque nec sonori
Sterni flatibus Euri,
Et fluctibus minantem
Curat spernere pontum,
Montis cacumen alti,
Bibulas vitet arenas, &c.*

WHat maner of folke, ware and ſtable, that woll founden 'hem a pardurable ſete, and ne wol not be caſte adoune with the loude blaſtes of the winde Eurus, and will diſpiſe the Se, menaſyng with floudes: Let 'hem eſchue to builden on the coppe of the Mountaigne, or in the moiſte Sandes. For the fell Winde Auſter tourmenteth the coppe of the Mountaignes, with all her ſtrengthes, and the loſe ſandes reſuſen to bere the hevy weightes. And forthy if thou wolte ſien the perillous aventure, that is to ſaie, of the worlde: have mynde certainlie to ſet thyne houſe of a merie ſete in a lowe ſtone. For although the wynde troubling the Se Thonder with overthrowing, thou that arte putte in quiete, and welefull, by ſtrength of thy Paleis, ſhalt lede a clere age, ſcornynge the wodenesse, and the ires of the aire.

Proſa quinta.

*Sed quoniam rationum jam in te mearum
ſomenta deſcendunt, pauld validioribus u-tendum puto. Age enim, ſi jam caduca &
momentanea Fortuna, &c.*

BUT for as moch as the nourifhynges of my reſon diſcenden now into The, I trowe it wer tyme to uſen a littell ſtrenger Medicins. Nowe underſtande here, all were it ſo that the yeſtes of Fortune ne were not brittle ne tranſitorie, what is there in 'hem, that maie be thin in any tyme? Or els that it ne is foule, if that it be loked, and conſidered perſitie? Richesſes, ben thei precious by the nature of them ſelf, or els by the nature of The? What is moſt worthe of richesſe? Is it not gold, or might of money aſſembled? Certes, that gold and that money ſhineth, and yeveth better renome to them that diſpenden it, than to thilke folke that muckeren it: for avarice maketh alwaie muckerers to ben hated, and largeſſe maketh folke clere of renome. For ſithe that ſoch thinges as ben tranſferred from one man to another, ne maie not dwell with no manne; certes, then is that money precious, when it is tranſlated into other folke, and ſtinten to be had by uſage of large yevying of hym that hath yeven it. And alſo if all the money that is over all, in al the worlde, were gaðered toward one man, it ſhould make all other men to be nedie as of that. And certes, a voice all whole, that is to ſaine, without amenuſyng, fulfilleth together the hering of moch folk. And when thei ben apaffed, nedes thei maken 'hem poore, that forgone tho richesſes.

O, straite and nedye clepe I these riches, fens that many folke ne maie not have it all, ne al ne maie it not comen to one man, without povertie of all other folke. And the shining of gemmes, that I call precious stones, draweth it not the eyen of folke to 'hem ward, that is to saine, for the beautie. But certes, if there were beautie, or bountie in shynynge of stones, thilke clerenesse is of the stones 'hem self,
and not of menne. For whiche I wonder gretlie, that men marveilen on soche thinges. For why?
what thyng is it, that if it wanteth movynge, and jointure of soule and bodie, that by right might semen a faire creature to hym that hath a soule of reson?
For al be it so, that gemmes drawen to 'hem self a little of the last beautie of the world, through the entent of ther creatour, and the distinccon of 'hem self, yet for as mikell as thei ben put under your excellence, thei ne have not deserved by no waie, that ye should marveilen on 'hem. And the beautie of feldes, deliteth it not mikell unto you?

B. Why should it not deliten us, siþe that it is a right faire porcion of the right faire werke, that is to saine, of this worlde? And right so ben we gladdened somtime of the face of the Se, when it is clere: And also marveilen we on the Heven, and on the Starres, and on the Sunne, and on the Mone. Phi. Appertaineth (q̃ð she) any of thilke thynges to The? Why darest thou glorifie The, in the shynyng of any soche thynges? Arte thou distinguished and embelished by the springyng floures of the first Sommer selson? Or swelleth thy plentie in fruites of Sommer? Why art thou ravished with idle joies? Why embracest thou straunge Goddes, as thei wer thine? Fortune ne shall never make, that soche thynges ben thyne, that nature of thynges hath makend foraine fro The? Sothe it is, that withouten doubte the fruites of the yerth owen to be to the nourishyng of bestes. And if thou wolt fulfill thy nede, after that it suffiseth to nature, then is it no nede that thou seke after the superfluite of Fortune. For with full fewe thynges, and with full little thynges, nature hath her apaied. And if thou wolte achoken the fulfillyng of nature with superfluities: certes, thilke thynges that thou wolt thresten or pouren into nature, shullen ben unjoyful to The, or els anoious. Wenest thou eke, that it be a faire thing to shine with divers clothinges? Of whiche clothing if the beaute be agreable to loken upon, I woll marveilen on the nature of the matter of thilke clothes, or els on the workeman that wrought 'hem. Doeth also a long route of meine make The a blisfull man? The whiche servauntes if thei ben vicious of condicions, it is a grete charge, and distruction to the hous, and a gret enemye to the lorde himself. And if thei ben gode men, how shal straunge and forain godenesse, be put in the number of thy richesles? So that by all these foresaied thynges it is clerelie shewed, that never one of thilke thynges, that thou accomptedest for thy godes, n'as not thy gode. In whiche thynges if there be no beauteie to be desired, why shouldest thou be sorie to lese them? Or why shouldest thou rejoyce The to hold 'hem? For if thei ben faire of ther own kind, what appertaineth that to The? For al so well shoulde thei have ben faire by themselves, though thei wer departed from al the richesles. For why? faire ne precious wer thei not, for that thei comen among the richesles. But for thei semed faire and precious, therefore thou haddest lever reken 'hem emonges thy richesles. But what desirest thou of fortune, with so grete afare? I trow thou sekest to drive awaie nede, with habundaunce of thynges, but certes, it tourneth you all into the contrarie. For why? certes it nedeth of full many helpinges, to kepen the diversite of precious hostilementes. And sothe it is, that of many thynges thei have nede, that many thynges have. And ayenwarde, of little thyng nedeth hym, that mesureth his fill after the nede of kind, and not after outrage of covetise. It is so then, that ye menne have no propre gode set in you, for soche ye moten seke outwarde, in forain and subject thinges. So is then the condicion of thinges tourned up so down, that a man that is a divine best, by merite of his reason, thinketh that hymself n'is neither faire ne noble, but if it be through possession of hostilimentes, that he han no soules; and certes, al other thynges ben appaied of ther owne beauties; but ye men, that be semblable to God, by your resonable thought, desiren to aparailen your excellent kinde of the lowest thinges. Ne ye understanden not how grete a wrong is doon to your creatour. For he would that mankinde were moste worthie, and noble of any yerthly thing: and ye thresten down your dignities binethen the lowest thynges. For if that all the gode of every thing be more precious, than is thilke thing, whose that the gode is, sith ye demen that the foulest thynges ben your godes, then submitten ye, and put your selven under the foulest thinges, by your estimacion. And certes, this betideth not, without your desert. For certes, soche is the condicion of all mankinde, that onely when he hath knowing of it self, then passeth it in noblesse al other thinges. And when it forletteth the knowyng of it self, then it is brought benethen all bestes. For why? all other living bestes han of kind to knowen not 'hemself. But when that men letten the knowyng of 'hemself, it cometh 'hem of vice. But how brode sheweth the errour, and the folie of you men, that wenen that any thyng maie ben appaied with straunge apparelmentes? But forsothe that maie not be doon. For if a wight shineth with thinges that ben put to hym: as thus, If thilke thynges shinen with which a man is appaied: Certes, thilke thinges ben commended and praised, with whiche he is appaied: but nathelless, thyng that is covered, and wrapped under that, dwelleth in his filthe. And I deny that thilke thing be gode, that annoieth hym that hath it. Gabbe I of this? Thou wolte saie naie. Certes, richesces have anoied full ofte 'hem, that han had tho richesce. Sithe that every wicked shrewe is for his wickednesse the more greedie after other folkes richesces, where so ever it be in any place, be it golde or precious stones, and weneth hym onely moste worthie that hath 'hem. Thou then that so busie dredest now the swerd and the spere, if thou haddest entred in the pathe of this life, a pore waifaring man, then wouldest thou sing before the thefe, as who saith, a pore man that bereth no richesce on hym by the waie, maie boldly sing beforne Theves, for he hath not wherof to be robbed. O precious and right clere is the blisfulnes of mortall richesce, that when thou haste gotten it, then hast thou lorne thy sikernes!

Metrum quintum.

*Felix nimium prior ætas,
Contenta fidelibus arvis,
Nec inerti perditæ luxu,
Facili quæ sera solebat
Jejunia solvere glande:
Nec Bacchica munera nôrat
Liquido confundere melle,
Nec lucida vellera Serum, &c.*

Blisfull was the first age of men, thei helden 'hem
apaied with the metes that the true felde broughten forth, thei ne destroyed, nor deceived not
'hemself

'hemself with outrage, thei weren wonte lightlie to slaken ther hunger at evin, with Akehornes of Oxes, thei ne coude not medell the yeste of Bacchus to the clere Honie, that is to saine, thei could make ne pimenten or clarre: Ne thei could not medell the bright fleces of the Countre of Seriens, with the venime of Tyry, this is to saine, thei coude not dien white fleces of Serien Countre with the blode of a maner Shelfishe, that men findin in Tyrie, with whiche blode men dien Purple.

Thei slepten wholsome stepes upon the grasse, and dronken of the rennyng waters, and lien under the shadowes of the hie Pine trees. Ne no geste or straunger ne carfe yet the hie Se, with ores or with shippes, ne thei ne hadden sein yet no newe strondes, to leden Marchandise into divers Countreis. Tho weren the cruell clarions full hust, and full still: Ne blode ishad by egre hate ne had deied yet armures. For whereto, or which wodenesse of enemies would firste moven armes, when thei sawen cruell woundes, ne none medes be of blode yshad? I would that our tymes should tourne ayen to the old maners. But the anguishous love of havynge in folke burneth more cruelly, then the mountain of Aetna, that aie brenneth. Alas! what was he that firste dalse up the gobbettes or the weightes of golde, covered under yerth, and the precious stones, that woulde have be hidde? He dalse up precious perilles, that is to saine, that he that 'hem first up dalse, he dalse up a precious perill, for why? for the preciousnes of soche thyng hath many man ben in perill.

Prosa sexta.

Quid autem de dignitatibus potentiâque disseram, quas vos, vera dignitatis ac potestatis inscii, cælo exæquatis? Quasi in improbißimum quemque ceciderint, &c.

BUT what shall I saie of dignities and powers, the whiche ye men that neither knowen verie dignitie, ne verie power, arisen 'hem as high as the heven? The which dignities and powers, if thei comen to any wicked manne, thei doen as grete damages and destruccions, as doeth the flambe of the mountaigne Aetna, when the flambe waloweth up, ne no deluuy ne doeth so cruell harmes. Certes, ye remember well (as I trow) that thiike dignitie, that men clepe the Imperie of counsaillours, the whiche whilome was beginnyng of fredome, your elders coveted to have doen awaie that dignitie, for the pride of the counsaillours. And right for that same, your elders before that tyme had doen awaie out of the Cite of Rome the Kynge's name, that is to saine, thei n'olde have no lenger no king. But now, if so be that dignities and powers ben yeven to gode men, the whiche thyng is full felde, what agreable thynges is there in tho dignities and powers, but onely the godenes of folke that usen 'hem? And therefore is it thus, that honour cometh not to vertue, bicause of dignitie: and ayenward, honour cometh of dignitie, for cause of vertue. But whiche is thiike your dereworth power, that is so clere, and so requirable? O ye yerthly bestes, consider ye not over whiche thyng that it semeth that ye have power? Nowe, if thou sawe a Moufe among other Mice, that challenged to hym selfwarde right and power over all other Mice, how grete seorne wouldest thou have of it? Glosa. So fareth it by men, the bodie hath power over the bodie: for if thou loke well upon the bodie of a wight, what thyng shalt thou find more fraile, then is mankinde? The whiche menne full ofte be slaine, by bityng of Flies, or els with entring or creping wormes, into the privities of manne's bodie. But where shall men finden any man, that maie exercisen or hanten any right upon an other man, but onely on his body, or els uppon thynges, that ben lower then the bodie, the whiche I clepe Fortune's possessions? Maieft thou have ever any commandment over a fre corage? Maieft thou remove fro th' estate of his propre rest a thought that is clevyng together in hymself by stedfaste reson? As whilome a tiraunt wened to confounde a freman of courage, and wend to constrain hym by tourmentes, to maken him discoveren and accusen folke, that wisten of a conjuracion, whiche I clepe a confederacie, that was caste ayenst this tiraunte: but this freman bote of his owne tongue, and caste it in the visage of thiike wode Tiraunte. So that the tourmentes, that this wode tiraunt wende to have made a matter of crueltie, this wise man made it matter of vertue. But what thyng is it, that a man maie doe to an other man, that he ne may receven the same thing of other folke in himself? Or thus: what may a man doen to folke, that folke ne maie doen to hym the same? I have herd tolde of Busirides, that was wont to slean his gastes, that herbroden in his hous: and he was slain hymself, by Hercules that was his geste.

Regulus had taken in bataille many men of Afrike, and cast 'hem into fetters: but sone after, he must yeven his handes to be bound, with the cheins of 'hem, that he had whilom overcomen. Weneft thou then, that he be mightie, that ne hath power to doen a thyng, that other ne maie doen in hym, that he hath in other? And yet moreover, if so were, that these dignitees of powers hadden any proper or naturell godenesse in 'hem, never n'old thei comen to shrewes. For contrarious thynges ne ben wonte to ben ifelowshipped togheters. Nature refuseth that contrarious thynges ben joyned. And so as I am in certaine, that wicked folke have dignitees ofte tyme, then sheweth it wel that dignitees and powers ne ben not gode of ther owne kinde, sens that thei suffer 'hemself to cleven, or joynen 'hemself to shrewes. And certaine the same thing maie I moste dignely judgen, and saine of all the yestes of Fortune, that moste plenteoullie comen to shrewes, of whiche yestes, I trowe, it ought to be considered, that no man doubteth that he is strong, in whom he seeth strength: and in whom swiftnesse is, sothe it is that he is swifte.

Also Musike maketh Musiciens, and Phisike maketh Phisiciens, and Rhetorike eke Rhetoriciens. For why? the nature of every thing maketh his proper tie, ne it is not entremedled with the effecte of contrarious thynges. But certes, richesces maie not restraine avarice unstanchd. Ne power ne maketh not a man mightie over hymself, whiche that vicious lustes holden destrained with chaines, that ne mowen not be unbounden. And dignitees, that be yeven to shreude folke, not onely ne maketh 'hem not digne, but sheweth rather all openly, that thei ben unworthy and indigne. And it is thus. For certes, ye have joye to clepe thynges with false names, that beren 'hem all the contraire, the whiche names ben full oft reproved by the effecte of the same thynges. So that these ilke richesces ne oughten not by right to be cleped richesces, ne soche power ne ought not to be cleped power, ne soche dignite ne ought not to be cleped dignite. And at laste I maie conclude the same thyng of all the yestes of Fortune: In whiche there n'is nothyng to be desired, ne that hath in hymself naturell bountie, as it is well iseen, for neither thei joinen 'hem not alwaie to gode men, ne maken 'hem alwaie gode, to whom thei ben joyned.

Metrum

~~~~~

Metrum sextum.

*Novimus quantas dederit ruinas
Urbe flammata, patribusque caesis,
Fratre qui quondam ferus interempto,
Matris effuso maduit cruore.
Corpus & visu gelidum pererrans
Ora non tinxit lacrymis, sed esse
Censor extincti potuit decoris, &c.*

WE have well knowen how many grete harmes and destrucciounes were doen by the Emperour Nero. He let brennen the Cite of Rome, and made sle the Senatours, and he cruell whilome sloughe his brother. And he was made moiste with the blode of his mother, that is to saie, he lette sleen and slitten the wombe of his mother, to seen where he was conceived, and he loked on every halve of her dedde colde body, ne no tere wette his face, but he was so hardeherted, that he might be domesmanne, or Judge of her dedde beautie. And nathelesse, yet governed this Nero by scepter al the peple that Phœbus maie seen commyng from his utterest arisyng, till he hide his bemes under the wawes, that is to saie, he governed all the peples by sceptre Imperiall, that the Sunne goeth about fro Est to West. And eke this Nero governed by sceptre, all the peples that be under the colde sterres, that highten the Septentrions, that is to saie, he governed all the peples, that be under the partie of the North. And eke Nero governed all the peples, that the violent wind Notus skorclith, and baketh the brennyng sandes, by his drie hete, that is to saie, al the peples in the Southe. But yet ne might not all his power tourne the wodenesse of this wicked Nero. Alas! it is a grevous fortune, as oft as a wicked swerd is joyned to cruell venime, that is to saie, venomous crueltie to Lordehippe.

~~~~~

Prosa septima

*Tum ego, scis, inquam, ipsa, minimum nobis ambitionem mortalium rerum fuisse domi-
natam; sed materiam gerendis rebus opta-vimus, quo ne virtus tacita consenesceret.
Et illa, atqui hoc unum est, &c.*

THen said I thus. Thou wotest well thy self, that the covetise of mortall thinges ne hadden never lordshippe in me. But I have well desired matter of thinges to doen, as who saith, I desire to have matter of governaunces over cominalties, for vertue still should not elden: that is to saie, that lest er that he wexte old, his vertue that laie now stil, ne shuld not perissh unexercised in governaunce of comune: for whiche men might speken or writen of his gode government. Phi. Forsothe (qð she) and that is a thyng that maie drawen to governaunce soche herts as ben worthie and noble of ther nature: but nathelesse it maie not drawen soche hertes, as ben ybrought to the full perfeccion of vertue, that is to saie, covetise of glorie and renome to have well administred the common thinges, or doen gode desertes, to profite of the common. For se now and consider, how little and how voide of all price is thilke glorie; certain thing is as thou hast lerned by the demonstracion of Astronomie, that all the environing of the yerth about ne halt but the reson of a pricke, at the regard of the gretnesse of the heven, that is to saie, that if ther wer maked comparison of the yerth, to the gretnes of heven, men would judgen in al that ne held no space. Of the whiche little region of this world, the iiij. part of the yerth is inhabited with living bestes that we knowen, as thou hast thy self ilerned by Ptoleme that proveth it. And if thou haddest withdrawen and abated in thy thoughte fro thilke fourthe partye, as moche space as the se and the mareis conteynen and overgone as moche space as the region of drought overstretcheth, that is to saie sandes and desertes, well unneth shuld there dwellen a right straite place to the habitacion of men. And ye that be environned and closed with the leste pricke of thilke pricke, thinken ye manifesten or publischen your renome and done your name for to ben borne forthe. But your glory that is so narrowe and so straye, throughten into so litel boundes, howe mykell conteineth it in larges and in grete doynges? And also sette therto, that many a nacion dyvers of tonge and of maners, and eke of reson of ther lyvinge, inhabite in the close of thilk habitacle, to the which nacyons what for difficulte of wayes, and what for diversyte of langage, and what for defaulte of unusage, and entrecomuninge of marchandise, not onely the names of singuler men ne may not stretchen, but eke the fame of cities maie not stretchen. At the last, certes in the time of Marcus Tullius, as him selfe wrytte in hys boke, the renom of the commonwelth of Rome ne had not yet passed ne clomben over the mountaine that hight Caucasus, and yet was Rome well waxen and redoubted of the Parthes, and eke of other folke enhabyting aboute. Seest thou not than howe straite and howe compressed is thilke glorie that ye travailen aboute to shewen and to moultelye? Maye than the glory of a synguler Romaine stretchen thiðer as the fame of the name of Rome maye not clymben ne passen? And eke seest thou not that the maners of divers folke and ther lawes ben discordant amonges hemself, so that thilke thing that some men judge worthy of praying, oþer folke judgen that that is worthy of tourment. And herof cometh it that though a man deliteth him in praisyng of his renome, he may not in no wise bringen forthe ne spreden his name to manye maner peples, and therfore every man ought to be apaide of his glory, that is published among his owne neyghbours, and thylke noble renome shal be restrained within the boundes of tho maner folke. But howe manye a man that was ful noble in his tyme, hath that wretches and neddy forietinge of writers put oute of minde and don away, al be it so that certes thilke thinges profiten litel, the which thinges and wrytinges long and derke elde do away both them and eke ther auctours. But ye menne semen to gotten you a perdurabilitie, whan ye thinken in time comen your fame shal lasten. But nathelesse if thou wilt make comparison to the endlesse spaces of eternite, what thing haste thou, by which thou maist rejoycen The of longe lastinge of thy name? For if there were made comparison of the abyding of a momente to ten thousande winter, for as moche as bothe tho spaces ben ended, yet hath the momente some porcion of it, although it be litel. But nathelesse thilke selfe nombre of yeres, and eke as many yeres as therto may be multiplied, ne may not certes be comparifoned to the perdurabilite that is endelesse. For of thinges whiche that have ende maye be made comparifon, but of thinges which that ben withouten ende, to thinges that have ende, may be maked no comparifon. And forthy is it that although renome of as long tyme, as ever The liste to thinken, wer thought, to the regard of the eternite, that is unstaunch-unstauncheable and infinite, it ne should not one-lie seme littel, but plainlie right nought. But ye femen certes ye can do nothing aright but if it be for the audience of the peple, and for ydle rumours. And ye forsaken the gret worthinesse of conscience and of vertue, and ye seken your guerdons

of the smale wordes of straunge folke. Have nowe here and understande in the lightnesse of soche pride and veine glory, howe a man skorned festynally and meryly soche vanite. Whilom there was a man that had assayed with stryvynge wordes an other man, the which not for usage of very vertue, but for proude vaine glorye, had taken upon him falsely the name of a philosophre. This rather man that I speke of, thought he wold assay, whether he thilke wer a philosophre or no, that is to saye, yf that he woulde have suffred lightly, in pacience, the wronges that were done to him. This fained philosophre toke pacience a litell while: and whan he had receved wordes of outrage, he as in strivinge ayen and rejoycing of himself, sayde at last thus. Understandest thou not, that I am a philosophre? That other man answerde again bitingly and said: I had well under-stande it, if thou haddest holden thy tong stil. But what is it to these noble worthy men, for certes of soch folk speke I that seken glorie with vertue? What is it (qð she) what atteyneth fame to soch folke, whan the body is resolved by the deth at the last?
for if so be that men dien in al, that is to say body
and soule, the which thing oure reson defendeth us to byleve: than is there no glory in no wise. For what shulde thilke glory be, whan he, of whom thilke glorie is saide to be, n'ys ryght naught in no wyse? And yf the soule whiche that hath in it selfe science of gode werkes, unbounden from the prison of the yerth, wendeth frely to the heaven, dispiseth it not than al erthly occupacion, and beinge in heaven rejoyseth that it is exempte from al erthly thynges? as who saith, that recketh the soule never of no glory
of renome of this world.

Metrum septimum.

*Quicumque solam mente præcipiti petit,
Summamque credit gloriam,
Latè patenteis Ætheris cernat plagas,
Arctumque terrarum situm,
Breuem replere non valentis ambitum, &c.*

WHoso that wyth overthrowinge thoughte one-ly seketh glori of fame, and weneth that it be soveraine gode, let him loken upon the brodesheving countreis of the heaven, and upon the straite sete of this erthe, and he shal be ashamed of th' encrese of his name, that maye not fulfil the litel compas of the erthe. O what coveyten proude folke to listen up ther neckes in ydle, in the dedly yoke of thys worlde!
For although that renome ysprad passyng toforn pe-
ples, goth by divers tonges, and although grete houses of kinredes shynen by clere tytles of honours, yet nathelesse deth dispiseth al high glory of fame, and deth wrappeth togethers the high hedes and the lowe, and maketh egual and even the hiest with the lowest.

Where wonnen now the bones of trew Fabricius?
What is nowe Brutus, or sterne Caton? The thynne fame yet lastyng of ther ydle names, is marked with a few letters. But although that we have knowen the faire wordes of the fame of 'hem, it is not yeven to know 'hem that be ded and consumpt. Ye liggeth than styl al utterlye unknowable, ne fame ne maketh

you not knowe. And yf ye wene to lyve the lengest for winde of your mortall name, whan one cruel day
shal ravishe you, than is the second dwellyng to you close. The first dethe he clepeth here the departing of the body, and the seconde dethe here the stintyng
of the renome of fame.

Prosa octava.

*Sed ne me inexorabile contra fortunam gerere
bellum putes, est aliquando, cum de homi-
nibus fallax illa non nihil bene mereatur:
tum scilicet cum se aperit, &c.*

BUT for as moch as thou shalt not wenen (qð
she) that I bere an untretable batayle ayenst fortune, yet somtims it befalleth that she (discevable) deserveth to have ryght gode thanke of men: and that is whan she her self openeth, and whan she discovereth her front, and sheweth her maners. Peraventure yet understandest thou not that I shall say.
It is a wondre that I desire to tell, and therefore unneth may I unpliten my sentence with wordes. For I deme that contrarious fortune profiteth more to men than fortune debonayre. For alway whan fortune semeth debonayre, than she lieth falsely, biheting the hope of welfulnesse. But forsothe contra-rious fortune is alwaye sothfaste, whan she sheweth her selfe unstable throughe her chaungyng. The amiable fortune disceveith folke: the contrary fortune techeth. The amiable fortune blindeth with the beautie of her false godes the hertes of folkes that usen 'hem. The contrarie fortune unbindeth 'hem with the knowyng of frele wefulnesse. Th' amyable fortune maiste thou sene alway wyndy and flowyng, and ever misknowyng of her self. The contrary fortune is attempre and restrayned and wyse, tho-rowe exercise of her adverfite. At the laste amiable fortune with her flateringes draweth myswandryng men fro the soveraine gode: the contrarious fortune
ledeth ofte folke ayen to sothefaste godes, and halteth
'hem ayen as with an hoke. Wenest thou than that thou oughtest to leten this a lytel thing, that this as-pre and horrible fortune hath discovered to The the thoughts of thy trew frendes? For why, this ilke fortune hath departed and uncovered to The both the certaine visages, and eke the doutous visages of thy felawes. Whan she departed away fro The, she toke away her frendes and last The thy frendes. Now whan thou were riche and welesful, as The semed, with howe mykel woldest thou have bought the full knowyng of this, that is to sayne, the knowyng of thy very frendes? Nowe plaine The not than of richesse lorne, sihe thou haste found the moste precious kynd of ri-
chesse, that is to saine, thy very frendes.

Metrum octavum.

*Quod Mundus stabili fide Concordes variat vices,
Quod pugnantia semina
Fœdus perpetuum tenent, &c.*

THat the worlde with stable faithe varieth ac-cordable chaungynges, that the contrarious qualitees of Elementes holden amonge 'hem selfe alyaunce perdurable, that Phoebus the sonne with his golden chariot bringeth forth the rosy day, that the mone

none hath commaundement over the nightes, which nightes Hesperus the evensterre hath brought, that the se greedy to flowen constraineth with a certain ende his flodes, so that it is not lesfull to stretch his brode termes or boundes upon the yerth: al this ordinaunce of thynges is bounde with love, that governeth erthe and se, and also hath commaundement to the heven. And yf this love flaked the bridels, al thinges that now loven toghethers wolden make bataile contynuelly, and striven to fordone the facion of this world, the which they now leden in accordable faith, by faire movynges. This love holdeth togider peple joyned with an holy bond, and knitteth sacrament of mariage of chaste loves. And love endeth laws to true felaws. O welefull were mankinde if thilke love that governeth the heven, governed your corages!

Here endeth the seconde Boke.

Here foloweth the thirde Boke.

Prosa prima.

Jam cantum illa finierat, cum me audiendi avidum, stupentemque arrectis adhuc auribus carminis mulcedo defixerat. Itaque paulò post, O inquam summum lassorum solamen animorum, quantum me, &c.

BY this she had ended her songe: whan the swetnesse of her dyte had throughperced me, that was desyrous of herkenynge. And I astonyed had yet streyght mine eres, that is to saine, to herken the bet what she shu'd say, so that a litel after I sayd thus. O thou that art soverain comfort of corages anguishous, so thou hast remounted and nourished me with the weight of thy sentences, and with delite of singyng, so that I trowe not that I be unperegall to the strokes of fortune: as who saith, I dare wel now suffren al tñ' assautes of fortune, and well defende me from her. And tho remedies, which that thou saidest here beforne, that weren right sharpe, not onelye that I am not agrisen of 'hem now, but I desyrous of heryng aske gretly to heren the remedies. Than said she thus. That feled I well (qð she) whan that thou ententise and styl ravyshest my wordes: and I abode tyll thou haddest soche habyte of thy thought, as thou hast now, or els tyll that I my selfe had maked it to the same habite, whiche that is a more very thyng. And certes the remenaunt of things that ben yet to say ben soch, that first whan men take 'hem, they ben byting: But whan they ben receved within a wight, than ben they swere. But for thou saist that thou art so desyrous to herken 'hem, with how grete brennyng woldest thou glowen, if thou wistes whider I wolde leden The? B. Whider is that (qð I). P. To thilke verie blisfulnesse (qð she) of whiche thine hert dremeth. But for as moche as thy sight is occupied and distourbed of erthly thinges, thou maiest not yet sene thilke self welefulnesse. B. Doe (qð I) and shewe me what thilke very welfulnes is, I pray The, without taryng. P. That wol I gladly done (qð she) for cause of The. But I wol first marken by wordes, and I wil enforcen me to enforme The thilke false cause of blisfulnesse, whiche that thou more knowest: so that whan thou hast beholden thilke false godes, and turned thin eyen so to that other syde, thou maie knowen the clerenesse of very blisfulnesse.

Metrum primum.

*Qui serere ingenuum volet agrum,
Liberat arva prius fruticibus,
Falce rubos filicemque refecat, &c.*

WHoso woll sowe a felde plenteous, let him firste deliveren it of thornes, and kerve asonder with his hoke the bushes and the ferne, so that the corn may comen hevie of eres and of greines. Hony is the more swete if mouths have firste tasted favours that be wycke. The sterres shinen more agreably whan the wynde Notus letteth his plungi blastes. And after that Lucifer the daysterre hath chased away the darke nyght, the day the fairer ledeth the rosen horse of the sonne. And right so thou, beholding first the false godes begyn to withdrawe thy necke fro the yerthly affections, and afterwarde the very godes shullen entren into thy corage.

Prosa secunda.

Tum defixo paululum visu, & velut in angustam suæ mentis sedem recepta, sic cæpit. Omnis mortalium cura, quam multiplicium studiorum labor exercet, &c.

THO fastened she a litel the syght of her eyen, and she withdrew her, right as it were into the straye sete of her thought, and began to speke right thus. Al the cures (qð she) of mortal folk, which that travailen 'hem in many maner studies, gon certes by divers waies: but nathels they enforcen 'hem all to comen onely to th' ende of blisfulnes. and blisfulnes is soche a gode, that who so hath gotten it, he ne maye over that thing more desire. And thys thyng forsoth is so soveraine gode, that it conteineth in himself al maner of godes, to the which gode if there failed any thing, it myghte not ben soverain gode, for than were some gode out of this soveraine gode, that might be desyred. Now is it clere and certaine, that blisfulnesse is a partyte state, by the congregacion of al godes, the whiche blisfulnesse (as I have sayd) al mortal folke enforcen 'hem to gette by divers waies. For why? the covetise of every gode is naturelli planted in the hertes of men: but the miswandryng errour misledeth 'hem into false godes. Of the whiche men, some of 'hem wenen that soverain gode be to liven without nede of any thinge. And other men demen, that soveraine gode be right digne of reverence, and enforce 'hem to be reverenced among ther neighbours, by the honours that they have gotten. And some folke there ben that holden that right hye power be soverain gode, and enforcen 'hem for to reignen, or els to joynen 'hem to them that reignen. And it semeth to other folke, that noblese of renome be the soverain gode, and hasten 'hem to gotten 'hem glorious name by the artes of werre or of pece. And many folke mesuren and gessen, that soverayne gode be joye and gladnesse, and wenen that it be right blisful thing to plongen in voluptuous delites. And there ben some folke, that entrechaungen the causes and the endes of these forsaide godes: As they that desyren riches

Chesses to have power and delites, or elles they desyre power for to have money, or for cause of renome. In these thynges and soche other is turned all the entencion of desyrynges and werkes of men, as thus: Noblesse and favour of peple, which that yeveth to all menne, as it semeth 'hem, a maner clerenesse of renome, and wife and children, that men desyren, for cause of delyte and merynesse. But forsoth frendes ne shullen not be rekened amonge the godes of fortune, but of vertue, for it is a ful holy maner thing. All these other thynges forsoth be taken for cause of power, or elles for cause of delite. Certes now am I redy to referren the godes of the body to these forsayd thynges aboven: For it semeth that strength and greteneffe of body yeven power and worthinesse, and that beaute and swiftnesse yeven glorie and renome: and helth of body semeth to yeven delite. In al these thynges it semeth only that blisfulnesse is desyred: for why? thylke thyng that every man desireth moste over al thynges, he demeth that it be soverain gode. But I have defined, that blisfulnesse is soveraine gode, for whiche every wight demeth that thilke estate that he desireth over al thynges that it be blisfulnesse. Nowe hast thou than before thin eyen almoste al that purposed forme of the welesfulnesse of mankynde, that is to faine, richesse, honours, power, glorie and delites, the which delite only confidred he Epicurus, and judged and establisshed that delyte is the soveraine gode: for as moche as all other thynges, as him thought, byrest awaye joy and mirthe from the hert. But I returne againe to the studies of men, of whiche men the corage alway reherfeth and seketh the soveraine gode, al be it so that it be with a dyrked memorie, but he n'ote by whiche pathe, right as a drunken man n'ote nought by whiche pathe he may returne home to his house. Semeth it than that folke forleyen and erren to enforcen 'hem to have nede of nothing. Certes there is none other thing, that may so moche performen blisfulnesse, as an estate plenteous of al godes, that ne hath nede of none other thing, but that is suffisaunt of himselfe unto himself. And folien soch folke than that wenen, that thilke thing that is right gode, that it is eke right worthy of honor and of reverence? certes nay. For that thing n'ys neither foul ne worthy to be dispised, that wel nigh al the entencion of mortal folke travailen to get it. And power eke ought it not to be rekened amonges godes? What els? for it n'is not to wene, that thilke thing that is moste worthy of all thynges, be feble and without strength. And clerenesse of renome, ought that to ben dispised? Certes ther may no man forsake, that al thinge that is right excellent and noble, that it ne semeth be right clere and renowned. For certes it nedeth not to fai, that blisfulnesse be anguishous ne drerye, ne subject to grevaunces ne sorowes, sens that in right lytel thynges folke seken to have and to usen that may delyten 'hem. Certes these ben the thynges that men willen and desiren to getten: and for this cause desiren thei richesces, dignities, reignes, glorie, and delites. For therby wenen they to have suffisaunce, honoure, power, renome, and gladnesse. Than is it gode, that men seken thus by so many divers studies, in whyche desire, it may not lightly be shewed, howe gret is the strength of nature. For howe so men have divers sentences and discordinges, algates men accorden all in lovinge the ende of gode.

Metrum secundum.

*Quantas rerum flectat habenas
Natura potens, quibus immensum
Legibus orbem provida servet,
Stringatque ligans irresoluto
Singula nexu, placet arguto
Fidibus lentis promere cantu, &c.*

IT lyketh me to shewe by subtyll song, with slacke and delitable sowne of stringes, howe that nature mightelie enclineth and siteth by the government of thynges, and by soche lawe she purveiable kepeth the grete worlde, and howe she bindynge restraineth all thynges by a bonde that maie not be unbounden. All be it so that the lions of the countre of Pene beren the faire chaines, and taken metes of the handes of folke, that yeven it 'hem, and dreden ther sturdie maisters, of whiche thei be wonte to suffer betinges, yf that ther horrible mouthes ben bledde, that is to faine, of bestes devoured: ther corage of time passed that hath ben idle and rested, repaireth ayen, and thei roren grevously, and remembren on ther nature, and slaken ther neckes from ther chaines unbounde, and ther maister first to tome with bloody teth aslayeth the wode wrathes of 'hem, that is to faine, thei fretten ther maister. And the janglyngbirde that singeth on the hye braunches, that is to faine, in the wodde, and after is enclosed in a straite cage, although the plyinge besinnelle of men yeve him honied dringes, and large metes with swete study: yet natheles if thilke birde skipping out of her straite cage, seeth the agreable shadowes of the wodes, she defouleth with her fete her mete ishad, and seketh on morning onely the wode, and twireth desiring the wode with her swete voice. The yerde of a tre that is haled adowne by mightie strength, boweth redily the croppe adown: but if that the hande that is bente let it gone againe, anon the croppe loketh upright to the heven. The sonne Phoebus that falleth at even in the westren wawes, returneth aien estones his carte by a privy pathe there as it is wonte arise. Al thynges seken ayen to ther propre course, and al thynges rejoyssen on ther returning againe to ther nature: ne non ordinaunce is betaken to thynges, but that hath joyned the ende to the beginninge, and hath made the course it selfe stable, that it chaunge not fro his propre kinde.

Prosa tertia.

Vos quoque o terrena animalia, tenui licet imagine, vestrum tamen principium somnatis. Verumque illum beatitudinis finem; licet minime perspicaci, &c.

Certes also ye men that ben erthly bestes dremen alwaye your beginning, although it be with a thin imaginacion, and by a maner thought, al be it nat clereli ne parfetly, ye loken from aserre to thilke veri fine of blisfulnes; and therefore naturel entencion ledeth you to thilke very gode, but many maner errors mistourneth you therfro. Consider now if that by thilke thynges, by which a man weneth to get him blisfulnesse, if that he may comen to thilke ende that he weneth to come to by nature. For if that money, honours, or these other forsayd thynges, bringen men men to soch a thing that no gode ne faile them ne semeth to faile: Certes than would I graunt that they be made blisful by thinges that they have gotten. But if so be that thilke thinges ne mowen not performe that thei byheten, and that there be default of many godes, sheweth it not than clereli that false beaute of blisfulnesse is knowen and atteint in thilke thinges? First and forward thou thy self, that haddest haboundaunce of riches not long ago, I aske The that in th' aboundance of al thilk riches, if thou were never anguissous or sorie in thy courage of any wrong or grevaunce that betyd The in any syde? B. Certes (qđ I) it ne remembreth me not, that ever I was so fre of my thought, that I ne was alwaye in anguisshe of somewhat. P. And was that not (qđ she) for that The lacked somewhat that thou n'oldest not have lacked? Or els thou haddest that thou n'oldest have had? B. Right so is it (qđ I). P. Than desirest thou the presence of the one, and th' absence of that other? B. I graunte well (qđ I). Phi. Forsothe (qđ she) than nedeth there somewhat that every man desireth. B. Ye there nedeth (qđ I). P. Certes (qđ she) and he that hath lacke or nede of aught, n'is not in every way suffisaunt to himself. B. No (qđ I). P. And thou (qđ she) in all the plente of thy riches haddest thilke lacke of suffisaunce? What els (qđ I). P. Than may not riches maken that a man n'is nedi, ne that he be sufficient to himselfe: and yet that was it that they beheten as it semed. And eke certes I trowe that this be gretlie to consider, that money hath not in his owne kynde, that it ne maie ben binomed of 'hem, that have it, maugre 'hem. Boecius. I knowe it well (qđ I). Phi. Why shouldest thou not beknownen it (qđ she) when every daie the strengre folke benomen it from the febler, maugre 'hem? From whens come els all these foraine complaintes, quarels, or pledynges but for that menne asken ther money, that hath ben binomed 'hem, by strength or by gile, and alwaie maugre 'hem? Boecius. Right so it is (qđ I). Philosophie. Then hath a man nede (qđ she) to seken hym foraine helpe, by whiche he maie defende his money. Boecius. Who maie saie naie? (qđ I). Phi. Certes (qđ she) and hym neded none helpe, if he ne had no money, that he might lese. Boecius. That is doubtles (qđ I). Philosophie. Then is this tourned into the contrary (qđ she) for riches, that menne wenen should maken suffisaunce, thei maken a man rather have nede of forain helpe. Whiche is the maner or the gise (qđ she) that riches maie driven awaie nede? Riche folke maie thei neither have hunger ne thurst? These riche menne, maie thei fele no colde on their limes in Winter? But thou wilte aunswere, that riche menne have inough, wherwith thei maie staunchen ther hunger, and slaken ther thurst, and doen awaie colde.

In this wise, maie nede ben coumforted by riches, but certes nede ne maie not all utterlie be doen awaie. For if this nede, that alwaie is gaping and gredy, be fulfilled with riches, and any other thyng, yet dwelleth then a nede, that more be fulfilled; I hold me still, and tell not how that little thyng suffiseth to nature: but certes, to avarice suffiseth not inough of nothyng. For sin that riches ne maie not all doen awaie nede, and thei maken ther own nede: what maie it then be, that ye wenen that riches mowen yeven you suffisaunce?

*****

Metrum tertium.

*Quamvis fluente dives auri gurgite
Non expleturas cogat avarus opes, &c.*

ALL were it so, that a noble covetous manne had a River, or a Gutter fletyng al of Gold, yet should it never staunche his covetise: and although he had his necke charged with precious stones of the redde Se: And though he doe ere his fieldes plenteous with an hundred Oxen, never ne shall his bityng busines forleten hym, while he liveth, ne the light riches ne shall not beren hym compaignie when he is dedde.

~~~~~

Prosa quarta.

Sed dignitates honorabilem reverendumque, cui provenerint, reddunt? Num vis ea est magistratibus, utut utentium mentibus virtutes inferant, vitia depellant, &c.

BUT dignities, to whome they be comen, maken they him honorable and reverent? Have they to grete strength, that thei maie putten vertue in heres of folkes that usen the lordshippe of 'hem, or els may they don away the vices? Certes they be not wont to don away wickednes, but they be wont rather to shew wickednesse. And therof cometh it that I have right grete disdain, that dignities ben yeven to wicked men. For whiche thing Catullus cleped a consul of Rome (that hight Nonius) postome of boche, as who saith, he cleped him a congregation of vices in his brest, as a postome is full of corrupcion: All were Nonius set in a chaire of dignite. Seest thou not than, how grete vilonies dignities done to wiked men? certes unworthinesse of wicked men shulde be the lasse sene, if they n'ere renouned with non honour. Certes thou thy self ne mightest not be brought with as many perils as thou myghtest suffre, that thou woldest bere the magistrate with decorate, that is to saine, that for peril that myght befall The by offence of the king Theodorike, thou n'oldest not be felawe in governaunce with decorate, whan thou sawe that he had wiked corage of a lycorous shrew and of an accusour. Ne I may not for soche honours judgen 'hem worthy of reverence, that I deme and hold unworthy to have thylke same honours. Now if thou sawe a manne, that wer fulfild of wisdom, certes, thou ne mightest not deme, that he wer unworthie to that honour, or els to the wisdom of whiche, he is fulfilled. Boecius. No (qđ I). Philosophie. Certes (qđ she) dignities appertainen properlie to vertue, and vertue transporteth dignitie anon to thilke man, to whiche she her self is conjoynd. And for as moche as honours of peple ne maie not make folke digne of honour, it is well sene clerely, that thei ne have no propre beauteie of dignitie. And yet menne oughten take more hede in this: for if a wight be in so moche the more outcast, that he is dispised of moste folke, so as dignite ne maye not maken shrewes worthy of no reverence, than maketh dignite shrewes rather dispised than praised, the which shrewes dignite sheweth to moch folke. And forsothe not unpunished, that is to sayn, that shrewes revengen 'hem ayenward upon dignities. For they yelden ayen to dignities as grete guerdons, whan they despotten and defoulen dignities ties with ther vilonie. And for as moche as thou nowe knowest, that thilke very reverence ne maye nat comen by these shadowy transitorye dignities, understonde nowe thus: that if a man had uled and had many maner dignities of consuls and were paraventure comen amonge straunge naciens, shulde thilke honour maken him wurshipfull and redoubted of straunge folke? Certes if that honour of peple were a naturel yeste to dignities, it ne might never cessen no where amonge no maner folke to done his office. Right as a fyre in every countre ne stinteth not to enchaufen and maken hote. But for as moche as for to ben honorable or reverent, ne cometh not to folke of ther proper strength of nature, but onely of the false opinion of folke, that is to saine, that wenen that dignities maken folke digne of honours: anone therfore whan they comen ther as folke ne knowe not thilke dignities, ther honours vanishen awaye and that anon. But that is amonge straunge folke maist thou sain. Ne amonges 'hem ther they were borne ne dured not thilke dignities alwaye. Certes the dignite of the provosty of Rome was whilome a gret power: nowe is it nothyng but an ydle name, and the rente of the senatorie a grete charge. And if a wight whilom had th' office to taken hede to the vitales of the peple, as of corne and of other thinges, he was holden amonges 'hem grete. But what thing is more nowe outcaste than thilke provostrie? As I have said a lytel here beforene, that thilke thing that hath no proper beaute of it self, receveth sometime price and shining, and sometim lesfeth it by th' opinion of usaunces; now if that dignities than ne mowe not make folke digne of reverence, and if that dignities wexe foule of ther wyll, by the fylthe of shrewes, and if dignities lesen ther shininge by chaunging of tymes, and if they wexen foule by estimation of peple, what is it that they han in 'hemselfe of beaute, that ought to be desired? as who saithe none: than ne mowen they yeven no beaute of dignitie to none other.

Metrum quartum.

*Quamvis se Tyrio superbus ostro
Comeret, & niveis lapillis, &c.*

AL be it so, that the proude Nero wyth all his wode luxure, kembe him and apparelled him with faire purple of Tyrie, and with white perles, algates yet therof he hateful to al folk, that is to say that all was he behated of all folkes, yet this wicked Nero had grete lorchippe, and yafe whilome to the reverent Senatours the unworshipfull fetes of dignities. Unworshipfull fetes he clepeth here, for that Nero that was so wicked yafe the dignities.

Who woulde than resonablye wenen, that blisfulnesse were in soche honours, as ben yeven by vicious shrewes?

Prosa quinta.

An verò regna, regumque familiaritas efficere potentem valent? Quidni, &c.

BUT reignes and familiarities of kynges, maie thei maken a man to ben mighty? How els? when his blisfulnesse dureth perpetuallie. But certes, the old age of time passed, and eke of present time nowe, is ful of enamples, how that kinges have chaunged into wretchednesse, out of ther welfulnes.

O! a noble thing and a clere thing is power, that n'is not founden mighty to kepe it self. And if that power of relmes be authour and maker of blisfulnesse, if thilke power lackethe on any syde, amenufeth it nat thilke blisfulnesse, and bringeth in wretchednes? But yet al be it so, that the relmes of mankinde stretchen brode, yet mote ther nede ben moche folke, over whiche that every king ne hath no lordship ne commaundement. And certes upon thilk side that power falleth, which that maketh folke blisful, right on that same side no power entreth underneth, that maketh 'hem wretches. In this maner than moten kinges have more porcion of wretchednesse than of welfulnesse.

A tiraunt that was kinge of Sicile, that had assayed the perill of his estate, shewed by similitude the dredes of relmes by gastenesse of a swerde, that hong over the hed of his familier. What thinge is than this power, that maye not done awaye the bitynges of besinesse, ne eschewe the prickles of drede?

And certes yet wolden they lyven in sykernesse, but they maye nat. And yet they glorifyen 'hem in ther power. Holdest thou than that thilke man be mighty, that thou seest that he wolde done that he maye not done? And holdest thou than him a mighty man, that hath envired his sydes with men of armes or sergeauntes, and dredeth more them that he maketh agast, than they dreden hym, and that is putte in the handes of his servauntes for he shulde seme mightye? But of famylyeres or servauntes of kinges, why shulde I tell The any thyng, siþe that I my selfe have shewed The that relmes 'hem selfe ben ful of grete feblesse? The whiche famylyers certes the royall power of kinges in whole estate, and in estate abated, full ofte throwethe adowne.

Nero constrained Senecke hys famylyer and his mayster, to chesen on what dethe he wolde dye. Antonius commaunded that knightes slown wyth ther swerdes Papinian his famylyer, whiche Papinian hadde ben longe tyme ful mighty amonges 'hem of the courte. And yet certes they wolden both have renounced ther power. Of whiche two Senecke enforced him to yeven to Nero his richesse, and also to have gone into solytary exile. But whan the grete weight, that is to sain, of lorde's power, or of Fortune, draweth 'hem that shullen fall, neither of 'hem ne might do that he wolde. What thinge is than thilke power, that thoughe men have it, yet they ben agast, and whan thou woldest have it, thou n'arte not syker? And yf thou woldest forleten it, thou maist nat eschewen it. But wheðer soch men ben frendes at nede as ben counsayled by fortune, and nat by vertue? Certes soch folke as welful fortune maketh frendes, contrarious fortune maketh 'hem enemyes. And what pestilence is more mightye for to anoye a wight, than a familier enemye?

Metrum quintum.

*Qui se volet esse potentem,
Animos domet ille feroces,
Nec victa libidine colla, &c.*

WHoso wol be mighty, he mote daunten his cruell corages, ne put nat his necke overcomen under the foule raynes of lechery. For all be it so, that the lordshippe stretche so ferre that the countrey of Inde quaketh at thy commaundementes, or at thy lawes, and that the last yle in the se, that hyght Thule, be thrale to The: yet yf thou maiste nat putten away thy foule derke desyres, and driven out fro The wretched complayntes? Certes, it n'ys no power that thou haste.

Prosa sexta.

Gloria verò quàm fallax sæpe, quàm turpis est! unde non injuriâ tragicus exclamat. O gloria, gloria, millibus mortalium nihil aliud facta, nisi aurium inflatio magna, &c.

BUT glorie, how decevable and howe foul is it oft! For whiche thing, not unskilfully a tragedien, that is to sayne maker of dities that highten Tragedyes, cried and sayde. O glory glory (qð he) thou n'art nothing els to thousandes of folke but a sweller of eres. For many have full grete renome by the false opinion of the peple.

And what thinge may ben thought fouler then soche prayfynge? For thilke folke that ben praised falslye, they moten nedes have shame of ther praisinge. And yf that folke have gotten 'hem thanke or praisinge by ther desertes: What thing hath thilke prife eched or encrefed to the conscience of wyse folke, that mesuren ther gode, nat by the rumoure of the peple, but by the sothefastenesse of conscience? And if it seme a faire thinge, a man to have encrefed and sprad his name, than foloweth it, that it is demed to ben a foule thing, if it ne be yspradde and encrefed. But as I said a litel here before, that sithe there mote nedes ben many folkes, to whiche folke the renome of a man ne maye nat comen, it befallith, that he that thou wenest be glorious and renowned, semeth in the next part of the yerthe to ben without glorye and without renome. And certes amonges these thinges I ne trow nat that the prife and the grace of the peple n'ys neither worthy to ben remembred, ne cometh of wise judgement, ne is ferme perdurably. But now of this name of gentilnesse: what man is it that ne may wel sene howe vaine and how flityng it is? For if the name of gentilnesse be referred to renome and clerenesse of lynage, than is gentil name but a forain thing, that is to say, to 'hem that glorifien 'hem of ther linage. For it semeth that gentilesse be a maner praying that cometh of the desertes of auncesters. And if praising maketh gentilnesse, than moten they nedes ben gentil, that ben praysed. For whiche thinge it foloweth, that if thou ne have no gentylnesse of thy selfe, that is to faine, prife, that cometh of thy desert, forain gentilnesse ne maketh The nat gentil. But certes if there be any gode in gentilnesse, I trowe it be al onely this: that it semeth as that a maner necessite be imposed to gentilmen, for that they ne shulde nat outragen or forleven fro the vertues of ther noble kynred.

Metrum sextum.

*Omne hominum genus in terris
Simili surgit abortu,
Unus enim rerum pater est,
Unus cuncta ministrat, &c.*

AL the lynage of men, that ben in erth, ben semblable of birth. One alone is father of thynges: one alone ministrith al thinges: he yaf to the sun his bemes: he yaf to the mone her hornes:

he yafe to men the erth: he yafe the sterres to the heven: he closed with membres the soules that camen from his hye sete. Than comen all mortall folke of noble fede. Why noisen ye, or bosten of your elders? For yf ye loke your beginning and God youre father authour and maker, than n'ys there no forelyved wight or ungentill, but if he nourishe his corage unto vices, and forlete his proper byrthe.

Prosa septima.

Quid autem de corporis voluptatibus loquar? quarum appetentia quidem plena est anxietatis, &c.

BUT what shal I sain of delyces of body? of whiche delices the desiringes ben ful of anguishes, and the fulfillinges of 'hem ben ful of penaunce. How grete sikneses and how grete sorowes unfrable, right as a maner fruite of wickednes, ben thilke delices wonte to bringen to the bodies of folke that usen 'hem? of which delices I n'ot what joye may ben had of ther movinge. But this wote I wel, that whosoever wol remembre him of his luxures he shal well understande, that the issues of delices ben sorowful and fory. And yf thilke delices mow make folke blisful, than by that same cause moten these bests ben cleped blisful. Of whiche bestes al the entencion hasteth to fulfil ther bodily jolyte. And the gladnesse of wife and children were an honest thyng, but it hath ben said that it is overmoke ayenst kinde, that children have ben founden tourmentours to ther fathers, I n'ot howe many. Of which children how biting is every condicion, it nedeth not to tellen it The, that hast er this tyme assayed it, and art yet now anguishous. In this tyme aprove I the sentence of my disciple Euripides, that said, that he that hath no children is weleful by infortune.

Metrum septimum.

*Habet omnis hoc voluptas,
Stimulis agit fruentes,
Apiumque par volantum,
Ubi grata mella fudit, &c.*

EVery delyte hath this, that it anguisheth 'hem with prickes that usen it. It resembleth to these flying flies that we clepen bees, that after that he hath shedde his agreable honyes, he flieth away, and stingeth the hertes of 'hem that ben smitten with bitinge overlonge holden.

Prosa octava.

Nihil igitur dubium est, quin hæc ad beatitudinem vitæ, devia quedam sint, nec perducere eò quengquam valeant, &c.

NOwe it is no dout than, that these wayes ne ben a maner mistidinges to blisfulnes: ne that they ne mowen not leden folke thider, as they beheten to leden 'hem. But with how gret harmes these forsaide wayes ben enlaced, I shal shew you shortly. For why? if thou enforcest The to assemble money, money, thou must byreven him his money that hath it. And if thou wolt shinen with dignities, thou muste beseechen and supplien 'hem, that yeven tho dignities. And yf thou covetest by honour to gone beforne other folkes, thou shalt defoule thy self thowrow humbleste of asking. If thou desirest power thou shalt by awaits of thy subjectes anoiously be cast under by many perils. Askest thou glorie? thou shalt ben so distraite by aspre thinges, that thou shalt forgone sikernesse. And if thou woldest leden thy lyfe in delites, every wight shal dispisen The and forleten The, as thou that arte thral to thing, that is right foule and britel, that is to saine, fervaunt to thy bodye. Nowe is it wel ysene, howe lytel and how britel possession they coveten, that putten the godes of the bodi above ther own reson. For maist thou surmounten these elisautes in gretnesse or in weight of body? or mayste thou ben stronger than the bul? mayst thou be swifter than the Tigre? Beholde the spaces and the stablenesse, and the swyft course of heven, and stinte somtyme to wondren on foule thinges. The whiche heven certes n'ys nat rather for these thinges to be wondred upon, than for the reson by whiche it is governed. But the shininge of thy forme, that is to sayne, the beaute of thy body, how swiftly passing is it, and howe transitorie! certes it is more fliting than the mutabilite of floures of the sommer seson. For so as Aristotell telleth, that yf the men had eyen of a beste that hight Lynx, so that the lokynge of folke might percen throughe tho thynges that withstonde it, whoso loked than in the antrailes of the body of Alcibiades, that was full faire in the superfycie without, it shulde seme right foule. And forthy, yf thou semest faire, thy nature ne maketh nat that, but the discevaunce of febleness of the cien that loken. But praise the godes of the body as moche as ever The lyfte, so that thou know algates that what so it be, that is to saine, of the godes of the body, which that thou wondrest upon, maye ben destroyed or els dissolved by the hete of a fever of thre daies. Of which forsayd thinges I maie reducen this shortly in a somme, that these wordly godes, which that ne mowen yeven that they behyghten, 'ne ben not parfite by the congregacion of al godes, that they ne ben not wayes ne pathes, that bringen men to blisfulnesse, ne maken men to be blisful.

Metrum octavum.

*Eheu! quæ miseros tramite devio
Abducit ignorantia!
Non aurum in viridi quaritis arbore, &c.*

ALas! whiche folye, and whiche ignoraunce misledeth wandringe wretches fro the pathe of very gode! Certes ye seken no golde in grene trees, ne ye gaðren not precious stones in vines: ne ye ne hyden not youre ginnes in hie mountains to catchen fysh: of the which ye may maken rich festes.

And if you lyke to hunte to Roes, ye ne go nat to the fords of the water that hight Tyrrhene. And over this men knowe wel the crekes and the cavernes of the se yhyd in the flodes, and knowen eke, whiche water is most plenteous of white perles, and known whiche water haboundeth most of red purpure, that is to saine, of a maner shellyshe, with whiche men dyen purpure: and known whiche stondes habounden moste of tendre fyshes, or of sharpe fyshes, that hight Echines. But folke suffren 'hem self to ben so blind that 'hem ne retchen not to knowe wher thilke godes ben yhidde, which that they coveten, burplungen 'hem in yerthe, and seken there thilke gode, that surmounteth the heven, that bereth the sterres. What prayer may I maken that be digne to the nyce thoughtes of men, but I pray that they coveten rychesse and honours, so that whan they have gotten tho false godes with grete travayl, that therby they mowen knowen the very godes?

Prosa nona.

Hactenus mendacis formam felicitatis ostendisse suffecerit; quod si perspicaciter intuearis, ordo est deinceps, &c.

IT suffiseth that I have saide hyðerto the forme of false welfulnesse: so that yf thou loke now clerely, the order of mine entencion requireth fro hensforth to shewen the very welfulnes. B. Forsoth (qð I) I se wel now, the suffisaunce may nat comen by richesse, ne power by relmes, ne reverence by dignities, ne gentilnesse by glory, ne joye by delices. P. And hast thou wel knowen the causes (qð she) why it is? B. Certes me semeth (qð I) that I se 'hem, right as though it were through a litel clyfte: But me were lever knowen 'hem more openly of The. Phi. Certes (qð she) the reson is al redy. For thilke thinge that simply is one thing without any division, the errour and folye of mankinde divideth and departeth it and misledeth it, and transporteth from very and parfite gode, to godes that be false and unparfit. But say me this: wenest thou that he that hath nede of power that him ne lacketh nothings? Boecius. nay (qð I). Philosophie. Certes (qð she) thou sayest arighte: for yf so be that there is a thing that in any partie be febler of power, certes as in that it mote nedes be nedy of forain help. Boecius. Right so it is (qð I). Philosophie. Suffisaunce and power ben of one kinde. Boecius. So semeth (qð I). Philosophie. And demest thou (qð she) that a thinge that is of this maner, that is to say, suffisaunt and mighty, oughte ben dispised, or els that it be righte digne of reverence above al thinges? Boecius. Certes (qð I) it is no doute that it is right worthy to be revered. Philosop. Let us adden (qð she) reverence to suffisaunce and to power, so that we demen that these thre thinges be al one thing. Boecius. Certes let (qð I) us adden it if we wil graunt the sothe. P. What demest thou (qð she) than, is that a derke thing and not noble, that is suffisaunt, reverent, and mighty? or els that it is right noble and right clere by celebren of renome? Consider than (qð she) as we have graunted here byforne, that he that ne hath no nede of nothing, and is most mighty and moste digne of honoure, yf hym nedeth any clerenesse of renome, whiche clerenesse he mighte not graunten of himselfe, so for lacke of thilke clerenesse he might semen the febler on any syde, or the more outcaste. Glosa. That is to say, naye: For who so that is suffisaunt, mighty, and reverent, clerenesse of renome foloweth of the forsaide thinges: he hath it all redy of his suffisaunce. Boecius. I maye not (qð I) denye it, but I mote graunten as it is, that this thinge is right celebrable by clerenesse of renome and noblesse. P. Than foloweth (qð she) that we adden clerenesse of renome to the foresaide thinges, so that there be amonges 'hem no difference. B. This is a consequence (qð I). Philosop. This thinge than (qð she) that ne hath nede of no foraine thyng, and that maye do all thyng by his strengthes, and that is noble and honourable, is it not a mery thinge and joyful?

joyful? Boecius. But whence (q^d I) that any sorowe might come to this thyng that is soche, certes I maye not thinke. Philosophie. Than mote we graunten (q^d she) that this thyng be full of gladnesse, yf the foresayde thynges be sothe. And certes, also mote we graunten, that suffisaunce, power, noblesse, reverence, and gladnesse be onelye divers by names, but ther substaunce hath no diversite. Boecius. It mote nedelye be so (q^d I). Philosophie. Thilke thyng than (q^d she) that is one and simple in his nature, the wickednesse of men departeth and divideth it: And whan they enforcen 'hem to getten partye of a thyng, that ne hath no parte, they ne getten 'hem neyther thilke partye that n'ys none, ne the thyng al whole that they desyre. Boecius. In whiche manere (q^d I). Phi. Thilke man (q^d she) that secheth richesse to flyen povertie, he ne travaileth hym not for to get power, for he hath lever be derke and vyle, and eke withdraweth from hymself many naturell delytes, for he n'olde lese the money that he hath assembled. But certes in thys maner he ne getteth him no suffisaunce, that power forleteth, and that molestie priketh, and that fylthe maketh outcaste, and that derkenesse hydeth. And certes he that desireth only power, wasteth and scattereth rychesse, and dispiseth delices and eke honour that is without power, ne he ne prayseth glory nothing. Certes this feest thou well that many thynges faylen to him: For he hath sometyme defaute of many necessities, and many anguyshes byten hym. And when he maye not don tho defautes away, he forletteth to be myghty, and that is the thyng that he moste desyareth. And right thus may I make semblable resons of honour, of glory, and of delyces. For so every of these forsaide thynges is the same that these other thynges ben, that is to saine, al one thing. Whosoever seketh to getten that one of these and not that other, he ne getteth not that he desireth. Boecius. What sayest thou than, if that a man covete to getten al these thynges togid^r? Philosophie. Certes (q^d she) I wold say that he woulde get him soverain blisfulnes, but that shall he not finde in tho thynges that I have shewed, that mowe not yeve that they beheten. Boecius. Certes no (q^d I). Phi. Than (q^d she) ne shullen men not by no way seken blisfulnesse in soch thynges, as men wenen that they ne mowe gyven but one thyng synglerly of al that men seken. Boecius. I graunt well (q^d I) ne non sother thing maye be sayde. Philosophy. Now hast thou than (q^d she) the forme and the cause of false welcfulnesse: Now turne and flytte agayn to thy thought, for there shal thou fene anon thylke very blisfulnesse, that I have behight The. Boecius. Certes (q^d I) it is clere and open, though it were to a blynde man: And that shewedest thou me a lytel here before, whan thou enforcedest The to shewe me the causes of the false welcfulnesse. For (but if I be begiled) than is that thilke very blisfulnesse and parfite, that parfitye maketh a man suffisaunt, myghtye, honourable, noble, and ful of gladnes. And for thou shalte wel knowe, that I have well understanden these thynges within my herte: I knowe well that thylke blisfulnesse that men verely yeven one of the forsaide thynges, sens they ben all one, I knowe doutlesse that thilke thyng is ful of blisfulnesse. Philosophy. O my norice (q^d she) by this opinion I say that thou arte blisful, yf thou put this therto that I shall sayne. Boecius. What is that? (q^d I). Phi. Trowest thou that ther be any thing in these erthlie mortal tomblinge thynges, that may bringen this estate? Bo. Certes (q^d I) I trow it not: and thou hast shewed me wel, that over thilk gode ther n'is nothyng more to ben desired. P. These thynges than (q^d she) that is to saine, erthly suffisaunce and power, and soch thynges erthely, they semen likenesse of very gode, or els it semeth that they yeven to mortall folke a maner of godenesse, that ne be not parfite, but thilke gode that is very and parfite, that may they not yeven. Boe. I accorde me well (q^d I). Ph. Than (q^d she) for as moche as thou hast knowen, which is thilke very blisfulnes, and eke which thilke thynges ben, that lien falsely blisfulnesse, that is to say, that they by discete fernen very godes: Nowe behoveth The to knowe whence and wher thou mow seke thilke very blisfulnesse. B. Certes (q^d I) that desyre I gretly, and have abyden longe time to herken it. P. But for as moch (q^d she) as it liketh to my disciple Plato in his boke of Timæo, that in ryght lytel thynges men shulden beseeche the help of God: What judgest thou that be nowe to done, so that we may deserve to finde that sete of thilke soverain gode? B. Certes (q^d I) Ideme that we shullen clepe to the father of all godes, for withouten him n'ys there nothing founded aright. P. Thou saiest aright (q^d she) and began anon to singen right thus.

Metrum novum.

*O qui perpetuū mundum ratione gubernas,
Terrarum Cœlique sator, qui tempus ab ævo
Ire jubes, stabilisque manens das cuncta moveri;
Quem non externæ pepulerunt fingere causæ,&c.*

O Thou father, soveraine and creatour of heven and of erthes, that governeest this world by pardurable reson, that commandest the tymes to gone, sythe that age had beginning, thou that dwellest thy selfe aye stedfaste and stable, and yevest al other thynges to be meved, ne foraine causes ne causeden The never to compounne werk of flitering matere, but onely the forme of soverain gode yset within The without envy, that meved The frely; thou that art alderfairest, beringe the fayre world in thy thought, formedest this worlde to thy likenesse semblable of that fayre world in thy thought. Thou draweste all thinge on thy soveraine ensampler, and commaundest that this worlde perfetliche ymaked, have frely and absolute his parfite parties. Thou byndest the elementes by nombres proporcionables, that the colde thynges mowen accorden with the hotte thynges, and the drie thynges with the moiste: That the fyre, that is purest, ne flye nat over hie, ne that the hevinelle ne draw nat adoun overlowe the yerthes, that be plonged in the waters. Thou knytest togid^r the mene soule of treble kinde moving al thynges, and dividest it by membres accordyng: And whan it is thus divided, it hath assembled a movyng into roundes, it gothe to turne agayn to himself, and environneth a full depe thoughte, and turneth the heven by a semblable ymage. Thou by evenlyke causes enhanceste the soules and the lesse lyves, and abling 'hem to height by lyght waines or cartes, thou soweste 'hem into heven and into yerthe, and whan they be converted to The by thy benigne lawe, thou makest 'hem retourne ayen to The by ayen-ledyng fire. O father yeve thou to the thoughte to flyen up into thy august sete, and graunt him to environne the well of gode. And the light yfounde, graunte him to fixen the clere syghtes of his corage in The, and scatter thou and to brake that weightes and the cloudes of erthely hevinelle, and shyne thou by thy brightnesse. For thou arte clerenesse, thou arte pefyble reste to debonayre folke, thou thy selfe arte beginninge, berer, leder, pathe, and terme; to loke on The that is our ende.

Prosa

Prosa decima.

Quoniam igitur, quæ sit imperfecti, quæ etiam perfecti boni forma vidisti, nunc demonstrandum reor, &c.

FORasmöche than, as thou hast sene which is the forme of gode, that n'ys not parfite, and the forme of gode, whiche that is parfite, nowe trowe I that it were gode to shewe in what this perfeccion of blisfulnes is set. And in this thing I trowe that we shal firste enquire, for to weten, if that any soch maner gode, as thilke gode as thou haste diffynished a litell here before, that is to saie, soveraine gode, maye be found in the nature of thynges. For that vayne imaginacion of thought ne desceve us not, and put us out of the sothefastnesse of thyke thyng that is submytted to us. But it maye not be denied that thyke ne is, and that is right as a wel of al godes. For al thyng that is cleped imparfite is proved imparfite, by the amensyfing of perfeccion of thyng that is parfite. And hereof cometh it that in every thyng generall, if that men seche any thinge that is imparfite, certes in thilke thyng generall, there mote be some thyng that is parfite. For if so be that perfeccion is don away, men may not thinke ne saye from whence thilke thyng is, that is cleped imparfite. For the nature ne toke not her beginninge of thinges amensyd and imparfite, but it procedeth of thynges that ben al whole and absolute, and descendeth so down into the utterst thynges, and into thynges empty and without frute. But as I have shewed a litell here before, that if that there be a blisfulnesse that be frele and vaine, and imparfite, there maye no man doubt that ther n'ys some blisfulnesse, that is sadde, stedfaste, and parfite. Bo. This is concluded (qð I) fermelye and sothfastelye. P. But consider also (qð she) in whome this blisfulnes inhabyteth. The comune accorde and concete of the corage of men proveth and graunteth, that GOD prince of all thynges is gode. For so as nothyng may be thought better than God, it may not be doutted than that he that nothyng n'is better than he n'is gode. Certes, reson sheweth that GOD is so gode, that it proveth by very force, that parfite gode is in him. For if God n'is soche, he ne maie not ben prince of al thing. For certes, some thing possiffyng in it self parfite gode, should be more worthie then God: and it should semen that thilk thing wer first and older than God. For we have shewed appertlie, that all thynges that ben parfite, ben firste or thinges that ben imparfite. And forthy, for as moche as that my reson, or my processe, ne go not awaie without an ende, we owen to graunt, that the soveraine God is right full of soveraine parfite gode. And we have established, that the soveraine gode is very blisfulnesse: then mote it nedes be, that verie blisfulnesse is set in soverain gode. Bo. This take I wel (qð I) ne this ne maie not be withsaid in no maner. Phi. But I praie The (qð she) se now how thou maiest proven holly, and withouten corrupcion, this that we have saied, that the soveraine God is full of right soveraine gode. Bo. In whiche maner? (qð I). Phi. Wenest thou aught (qð she) that the father of all thinges hath taken thilke soverain gode any where out of hymself, of whiche soveraine gode menne proveth that he is ful? Right as thou mightest think, that God, that hath blisfulnesse in hymself, and thilke blisfulnes that is in him, wer divers in substance. For if thou wene, that God hath receved thilke gode out of hymself, thou maiest wene, that he that yave thilke gode to God be more worthie then God. But I am beknowe and confesse, and that right dignely, that God is right worthie above all thynges: And if so be that this gode be in him by nature, but that is diverse from hym by wenyng reson, sens we speken of God, prince of all thynges, saie, who so saie maie, who was he that conjoynd these thynges together? And eke at the last se well, that a thyng that is divers fro any thing, that thilk thing n'is not that same thing, for whiche it is understanden to ben divers. Then foloweth it well, that the ilke thyng that by his nature is diverse from soverain gode, that thing is not soverain gode. But certes, it were a felonous cursednesse, to thinke that of hym, that nothyng n'is more worthie. For alwaie of all thinges the name of hem ne maie not ben better then ther beginner. For whiche I maie concluden by right verie reson, that thilke that is beginning of all thynges, thilke same thyng is soverain gode in his substance. Bo. Thou hast saied rightfully (qð I). Phi. But we have graunted (qð she) that the soveraine gode is blisfulnesse. Bo. That is sothe (qð I). Phi. Then (qð she) we moten nedes graunt and confesse, that the ilke same soverain gode be God. Bo. Certes (qð I) I ne maie not denie, ne withstande the reasons proposed, and I se well that it foloweth by strength of the premisses. Phi. Loke now (qð she) if this be proved yet more firmelic thus; that there ne mowen not ben twb soveraine godes that ben divers emong hem self. For certes, the godes that ben divers emong hem self, that one is not that the other is. Then ne mowen neither of hem be parfite, so as either of hem lacketh to other, but that that n'is not parfite, menne maie sene apertlie, that it n'is not soveraine. The thynges then that be soverainlie gode, ne mowen by no waie be divers. But I have well concluded, that blisfulnesse and GOD, ben the soveraine gode, for whiche it mote nedes ben that soveraine blisfulnesse is soveraine dignite. Bo. Nothyng (qð I) is more sothefaste then this, ne more ferme by reson, ne a more worthie thyng then God maie not be concluded.

Phi. Upon these thynges then (qð she) right as these Geometriciens, when thei have shewed ther proposicions, ben wonte to bringen in thynges, that thei clepen aphorismes or declaracions of foresaied thynges, right so woll I yeve The here, as a Corallary or a mede of croune. For why? forasmoch as by the gettyng of blisfulnesse menne ben maked blisful, and blisfulnesse is dignite; then it is manifeste and open, that by the gettyng of dignite menne ben maked blisful, right as by the getting of justice, they ben maked just, and by the getting of Sapience thei be maked wise, right so nedes by the semblable reson, when thei have gotten divinite, thei be made goddes. Then is every blisfull man a God. But certes, by nature there n'is but one God, but by the participacion of the Divinite, there ne letteth ne distourbeth nothyng, that there ne be many Goddes. Bo. This is (qð I) a faire thyng and a precious, clepe it as thou wilt, be it Corallarie, or Porisme, or mede of Croune, or declaryng. Phi. Certes (qð she) nothyng n'is fairer, then is the thing, that by reson should be added to these foresaied thynges. Bo. What thyng (qð I). Phi. So (qð she) as it semeth that blisfulnesse containeth many thynges, it were for to weten, whether that al these thinges maken or conjoynen, as a maner bodie of blisfulnesse, by the diversitie of parties of members, or els if any of all these thinges be soche that it accomlishe by hymself the substance of blisfulnesse. So all these other things ben referred, and brought to blisfulnes, that is to saie, as to the chief of hem. Bo. I would (qð I) that thou madest me clerely to understande what thou saiest, and what thou recordest me the foresaid thynges. Phi. Have I not judged (qð she) that blisfulnesse is gode? Bo. Yes forsothe (qð I) and that soveraine gode. Phi. Adde then (qð she) thilke gode that is made blisfulnesse, to all the foresaid thynges. For thilke same blisfulnesse, that is demed to be soverain suffisaunce, thilk self is soverain power, soveraine reverence, soveraine clerenesse or noblesse, and soveraine delite.

What saiest thou then of al these thynges, that is to saie, suffisaunce, power, and these other thynges? Ben thei then as members of blisfulnesse, or ben thei referred and brought to soveraine gode, right as all thynges that ben brought to the chief of hem? Bo. I understondewell (qð I) what thou purpolest to seke: But I desire for to herken, that thou shewe it to me. Phi. Take now thus the discrecion of this question (qð she). If all these thynges (qð she) weren members to felicitie, then weren thei divers that one from that other: and soche is the nature of partes or of members, that divers members compounen a bodie. Bo. Certes (qð I) it hath well ben shewed here beforne, that all these thynges ben al one thyng. Phi. Than ben thei no members (qð she). For els it shuld seme that blisfulnesse were conjoynd all of o member alone, but that is a thyng that maie not be doen. Bo. This thyng (qð I) then, n'is not doubtous, but I abide to herken the remnaunt of thy question. Phi. This is open and clere (qð she) that al other thynges ben referred and brought to gode. For therefore is suffisaunce required, for it is demed to be gode; and forthy is power required, for men trowen also that it be gode. And this same thyng mowen we thinken, and conjecten of reverence, of noblesse, and of delite. Then is soverain gode the somme and the cause, of al that ought to ben desired. For why? thilke thyng that withholdeth no gode in it self, ne semblaunce of gode, it ne maie not well in no maner be desired ne required. And the contrary: for though that thynges by ther nature ne ben not gode, algates if men wenen that thei ben gode, yet ben thei desired, as though thei were verely gode. And therefore it is said that men ought to wene by right, that bountie be the soveraine fine, and the cause of all the things that ben to requiren. But certes, thilke that is cause for whiche men requiren any thyng, it semeth that thilke same thyng be mooste desired, as thus: if that a wight would riden for cause of hele, he ne desireth not so moche the movyng to riden, as the effecte of his hele. Now then sens that al thynges ben required for the grace of gode, thei ne ben not desired of all folke, more then the same gode. But we have graunted that blisfulnes is that same thyng, for whiche that all these other thynges ben desired. Then is it thus, that certes onely blisfulnesse is required and desired. By whiche thing it sheweth clerelie, that of gode and blisfulnes is all one and the same substaunce. Bo. I se not (qð I) wherefore that men might discorden in this. Phi. And we have shewed, that God and verie blisfulnesse is all one thyng. Bo. That is sothe (qð I). Phi. Then mow we conclude sikelly, that the substaunce of God is set in thilke same gode, and in none other place.

Metrum decimum.

*Huc omnes pariter venite capti,
Quos fallax ligat improbis catenis
Terrenas hebetans libido mentes;
Hic erit vobis requies laborum, &c.*

COmeth all together now ye that ben icaught and bounde with wicked chaines, by the decevable delite of yerthly thynges, inhabityng in your thoughte. Here shall be the reste of your labour: here is the haven stable, in quiete perfible. This alone is the open refute to wretches, that is to sain, that ye that be combred and deceived with worldly affeccions, cometh now to this soverain gode, that is God, that is refute to hem that willen comen to him. All the thynges that the river Tagus yeveth you, with his golden gravels: or els al the thynges that the river Hermus, yeveth with his red brinke: or that Indus yeveth, that is next the hote partie of the world, that medleth the grene stoncs with the white: ne should not cleren the lokyng of your thought, but hidden rather your blind corage within her derknes; al that liketh you here, and exciteth and moveth your thoughtes, the yerth hath nourished it within his lowe caves. But the shining, by which the heven is governed, and whence that his strengthe cometh, that escheweth the derke overthrowng of the soule; and whosoever maie knowen thilke lighte of blisfulnesse, he will saine, that the white bemes of the Sonne ne be not clere.

Prosa undecima.

Affentior, inquam; cuncta enim firmissimis nexa rationibus constant. Tum illa, quanti, inquit, aestimabis, si bonum ipsum, quid sit agnoveris, &c.

BO. I assent me (qð I) for al thynges ben stronglie bounden with right ferme resons. Phi. How moch wilt thou praisen it (qð she) if that thou knowe what the ilke gode is? Bo. I woll praise it (qð I) by price without ende, if it shal betide me to knowe also toghether God that is gode. Phi. Certes (qð she) that shall I doe The by very reson, if that tho thynges, that I have concluded a little here beforne, dwellen onely in ther graunting. Bo. Thei dwellen graunted to The (qð I) that is to sain, as who saith, I graunte to thy foresaid conclusions. Phi. I have shewed The (qð she) that the things, that ben required of many folke, ne ben not very godes ne perfite. For thei ben divers that one from that other. And so as eche of hem is lackyng to other, thei ne have no power to bring a gode that is full and absolute. But then at erst ben thei very gode, when thei ben gathered togheder all into one forme, and into one werk- ing: so that thilke thing that is suffisaunt, thilke same is power, and reverence, noblesse, and mirth. And forsothe, but if all these thynges be all one same thyng, thei ne have not whereby that thei mowe be put in the number of thynges, that ought to be required and desired. Bo. It is shewen (qð I) ne hereof maie there no manne doubt. Phi. The thynges then (qð she) that ne be no godes, when thei ben divers, and when thei begynnen to be all one thyng, then ben thei godes, ne cometh it not then, by the getting of unitie, unitie, that thei be maked godes? Bo. So semeth it (q^d I). Phi. But all thyng that is gode (q^d she) grauntest thou that it be gode, by the participacion of gode or no? Bo. I graunt it (q^d I). Phi. Then must thou graunten (q^d she) by semblable reson, that one and gode be one same thyng. For of thynges, of whiche the effect n^{is} not naturelly divers, nedes ther substance must be one same thyng. Bo. I ne maie not denie it (q^d I). Phi. Hast thou not known well (q^d she) that all thyng that is, hath so long his dwellyng and his substaunce, as long as it is one, but when it forletteth to ben one, it must nedes di- en, and corruppen together. Bo. In whiche maner (q^d I). Phi. Right as in bestes (q^d she) when the soule and the bodie ben conjoined in one and dwel- lyng together, it is cleped a beste: and when ther unitie is destroyed, by the disceveraunce of that one from that other, then sheweth it well, that it is a dedde thyng, and it is no lenger no best.

And the bodie of a wight, while it dwelleth in one forme, by conjunccion of members, it is well seen, that it is a figure of mankinde: And if the par- ties of the bodie be divided and discevered that one from that other, that thei destroy the unitie, the bo- die forletteth to be that it was before. And whoso would renne in the same maner by al thynges, he should sene that without doubte, every thyng is in his substaunce, as longe as it is one, and when it forlet- teth to be one, it dieth and perissheth.

B. When I consider (q^d I) many thynges, I se none other. Phi. Is there any thing (q^d she) that in as moche as it liveth naturellie, that forletteth the talente, or appetite of his beyng, and desireth to come to deth and to corrupcion? Bo. If I consider (q^d I) the bestes that have any maner nature of wil- lyng, and of n^{il}lyng, I ne finde no beste, but if it be constrained fro without forthe, that forletteth or dis- piseth the intencion to liven and to duren, or that will his thanks hasten hym to dien.

For every beste travailleth hym to defende and kepe the salvacion of his life, and escheweth deth and destruccion. But certes I doubt me of herbes and trees, that ne have no felyng soules, ne no natu- rell workynges, servynge to appetites, as bestes have: whether thei have appetite to dwellen, and to du- ren.

Phi. Certes (q^d she) thereof dare The not doubt. Now loke upon the herbes and trees, for thei wexen firste in soche places, as ben convenable to hem: in whiche places thei mowe not dien ne drien, as longe as ther nature maie defende hem. For some of hem wexen in fieldes, and some wexen in moun- taignes, and other wexe in Mareis, and other cleven on rockes, and some wexen plenteous in sondes. And if any wighte enforce hym to bere hem into other places, thei wexen drie. For nature yeveth to every thyng that is conveniente to hym, and travail- eth that thei ne die, as long as thei have power, to dwellen and to liven. What wilt thou saie of this, that thei drawen all ther nourishynges by ther rotes, right as thei hadden ther mouthes iplounged within the yerthes, and sheden by ther mareis ther wode ther barke? And what wilt thou saie of this, that the ilke thyng that is right soft, as the Marie is, that is alwaie hidde in the sete all within, and that is de- fended from without, by the stedfastnesse of wode, and that the uttereste barks is put ayenst the dis- temperaunce of the heven, as a defendour, mightie to sufferen harme? And thus certes maiest thou wel seen, howe grete is the diligence of nature: for all thynges renovelen and publishen hem with sede imul- tiplied.

Ne there n^{is} no manne, that ne wote well, that thei ne ben right as a foundement, and edifice, for to duren not bnelie for a tyme, but right as for to dure perdurable by generacion. And the thynges eke, that men wenen ne have no soules, ne desire thei not by semblable reson, to kepe that is his, that is to saie that is according to ther nature, in con- servacion of ther beyng and enduryng? For where- fore els bereth lightnes the flambes up, and the weight presseth the yerth adoun, but for as moche as thilke places, and thilke movynges be covenable to everiche of hem? And for sothe every thing kepeth thilke, that is accordynge and proper to hym, righte as thynges that ben contrarious, and enemies corrup- pen hem. And yet the hard thyngs (as stones) clev- en and holden ther parties together, right fast and hard, and defenden hem in withstanding, that thei ne departen lightly, and yeven place to hem, that breken or dividen hem: but nathelesse, thei retourne ayen sone into the same thynges, from whens thei be araced: But fire fleeth and refuseth all division. Ne I ne trete not now here, of wilfull movynges of the soule that is knowing, but of naturel entencion of thynges, as thus: right as we swalowen the mete that we receven, and ne thinke not on it, and as we drawe our breth in slepyng, that we wete not while we slegen. For certes in the bestes, the love of ther livinges, ne of ther beynges, ne cometh not of the wilnynges of the soule, but of the beginnynges of na- ture. For certes, through constraining causes, wille desireth and embraceth ful oft times the deth, that nature dredeth, that is to saie, as thus: That a man maie be constrained so by some cause, that his wille desireth, and taketh the deth, whiche that nature ha- teth and dredeth full fore. And sometyme we sene the contrary, as thus: that the wil of a wight dis- turbeth and constraineth that, that nature alwaie de- sireth and requireth, that is to saie, the werkes of generacion, by the whiche generacion onely dwel- leth, and is sustained the long durabilitie of mortall thynges, as thus. This charitie and this love, that every thyng hath to hymself, ne commeth not of the moving of the soule, but of the entencion of nature. For the purveiaunce of God hath yeven to thynges, that ben create of him this, that is a full grete cause to liven and to duren, for which thei desiren natu- rally ther life, as long as ever thei mowen: for which thou maiest not dreden by no maner, that all thynges that ben any where, that thei ne requiren naturelly the ferme stablenesse of perdurable dwellyng, and eke the eschewyng of destruccion.

Bo. I confesse (q^d I) that I se wel now, and cer- tainly withouten doubt, the thynges that a while ago semeden uncertaine to me. Phi. But (q^d she) thilke thing that desireth to be and dwell pardurable, he desireth to ben one: For if that one were destroyed, certes, being should there none dwellen to no wight. Bo. That is sothe (q^d I). Phi. Then (q^d she) de- siren all thyngs one. Bo. I assente (q^d I). Phi. And I have shewed (q^d she) that ilke same one is thilke that is gode. Bo. Ye forsothe (q^d I). Phi. All thynges then (q^d she) requiren gode, and thilke maist thou discriven thus: gode is thilke thyng, that every wight desireth. Bo. There ne maie be thought no more verie thyng (q^d I) for either all thynges be referred and brought to nought, and flotten without gover- nour dispoiled of one, as of ther proper hed, or els if there be any thyng, to which that all thynges ten- den and hien to, that thyng must be the soverain gode of all godes. Phi. Then said she thus: O my nourice (q^d she) I have grete gladnes of The, for thou hast fixed in thy herte the middle sothfastnesse, that is to saie the pricke, but this thing hath be dis- covered to The, in that thou saidest, that thou wist- est not a litle here before. Bo. What is that? (q^d I): Phi. That thou wistest not (q^d she) whiche was the the ende of thynges, and certes, that is the thyng that every wight desireth. And for as moche as we have gathered and comprehended, that gode is thilke thyng, that is desired of all, then mote we nedes confesse, that gode is the fine of all thynges.

~~~~~

Metrum undecimum.

*Quisquis profundâ mente vestigat verum,
Cupitque nullis ille deviis falli,
In se revolvat intimi lucem visûs, &c.*

WHoso seketh sothe by a depe thought, and cove-
teth to ben disceved by no miswaies, let hym rollen and treten within hymselfe the lighte of his inward sight: and let hym gatheren ayen, enclinyng into a compace, the long movinges of his thoughtes.
And let him techen his courage, that he hath enclosed, and hidde in his tresours, all that he hath compassed or fought fro without: and then thilke thing, that the blacke cloudes of errour whilome had covered, shall light more clerely than Phoebus hymself
ne shineth. Glosa. Whoso woll seke the depe groundes of sothe in his thought, and woll not be deceved,
by false proposicions, that gone amisse from the troth, let hym well examine, and rolle within hymself, the nature and properties of the thyng. And let hym estefones examine and rollen his thoughtes, by gode deliberacion, or that he deme. And let hym techen his soule, that it hath by naturell principles, kind-liche ihidde within it self, all the trouthe, the which he imagineth to ben in thynges without: and then all the darkenesse of his misknowyng shall seme more evidentlie to the sight of his understandyng, than the Sonne ne semeth to the sight withoutforthe. For certes, the body bryngyng the weight of foryetyng ne hath not chafed out of your thought all the clere-nesse of your knowyng, for certainly, the sede of sothe holdeth and clevech within your corage, and it is awaked and excited by the windes, and by the blastes of doctrine.

For wherefore els demen ye of your owne will the rightes, when ye be asked, but if so were that the nourishyng of reson ne lived iplunged in the depe of your herte, that is to saine, how should men demen, the sothe of any thing that were asked, and if there n'ere a rote of sothfastnesse, that were iplunged and hid in naturell principles, the whiche sothfastnesse lived within the depenesse of the thought? And if so be, that the muse and the doctrine of Plato singeth sothe, all that every wight lerneth, he ne doeth nothyng els then, but recordeth, as menne recorden thynges, that ben foryeten.

~~~~~

Prosa duodecima.

*Tum ego, Platoni, inquam, vehementer assen-
tior; nam me horum jam secundò commemo-
ras. Primum quoddam memoriam corporeâ contagione, &c.*

THen saied I thus. I accord me gretlie to Plato, for thou recordest and remembrest me these thynges, yet the seconde tyme, that is to saie, first when I left my memorie, by the contrarious conjunc-cion of the bodie with the soule: and eftsones afterward, when I losse it confounded by the charge, and by the burden of my sorowe, and then saied she thus. If thou loke (qð she) first the thynges that thou haste graunted, it ne shall not ben right ferre, that that thou ne shalt remembre the ilke thing, that thou saidest that thou n'istest not. Bo. What thyng (qð I).

Phi. By whiche the governement (qð she) that this worlde is governed. Bo. I remember it well (qð I) and I confesse well, that I ne wist it naught. But all be it so, that I se now from afarre, what thou pur-posedest, algates I desire yet to harken it of The more plainly. Phi. Thou ne wendest not (qð she) a little here before, that menne should doubte, that this worlde is governed by God. Bo. Certes (qð I) ne yet ne doubte I it not, ne I n'ill never wene that it were to dout, as who saith, but I wor wel that God governeth this worlde. And I shall answeren
The by what resons I am brought to this. This worlde (qð I) of so many divers and contrarious parties ne might never have ben assembled in o forme,
but if there were one, that conjoynd so many divers things. And the same diversitie of ther natures, that so discorden, that one fro that other must departen, and unjoynen the thynges, that ben conjoynd, if there ne were one that contened, that he hath conjoynd and ibound. Ne the certain order of nature ne shuld not bring forthe so ordeine movynges, by places, by tymes, by doynge, by spaces, by qualities, if there ne were one, that wer aie stedfast dwellyng, that ordained and disposed these diversities of movynges. And thilke thyng, what so ever it be, by whiche that all thynges be imaked and ladde, I clepe hym God, that is a worde that is used to al folkes. Phi. Then saied she: Sithe thou selest thus these thynges, I trowe that I have little more to doen, that thou mightie of welfulnesse, whole and sounde, ne se eftsones thy contrie. But lette us loken these thynges. that we have purposed here before. Have I not nombred and saied (qð she) that suffisaunce is in blisfulnesse. And we have accorded, that God is the ilke same blisfulnesse. Bo.
Yes forsothe (qð I). Phi. And that to governe this worlde (qð she) ne shall he never have nede of no helpe fro without. For els if he had nede of any help, he ne should not have no full suffisaunce. Bo.
Yes thus it mote nedes be (qð I). Phi. Then ordeined he by himself alone all thynges (qð she). Bo.
That maie not be denied (qð I). Phi. And I have shewed that God is the same gode. It remembreth me well (qð I). Phi. Then ordeineth he al things
by thilke gode (qð she) sith he which we han accorded to be gode, governeth all thynges by himself.
And he is a * key and a steire, by whiche the edifice
of this worlde is kept stable, and without corruppyng. Bo. I accord me gretly (qð I.) And I have apperceved a little here before, that thou wouldest saie thus. All were it so, that it wer by a thynne suspeccion. Phi. I trowe well (qð she). For as I trow thou ledest now more ententifly thine eye to loken the very godes. But natheles, the thing that I shall tell The, yet ne sheweth not lasse to token.
Bo. What is that (qð I). Phi. So as menne trowe (qð she) and that rightfully, that God governeth all thynges, by the † key of his godenes, and all these same thyngs that I have taught The, hasten hem by naturel contencion to come to gode, there maie no man doute, that thei ne ben governed voluntarelie,
and that thei ne converten of ther owne gode wille to ther ordeinour, as that thei ben accordyng, and enclinyng to ther governor, and to ther kyng. Bo. It

* This seems to be a mistake. The Latin is, Et hic est veluti quidam Clavus, atque Gubernaculum; non Clavis.

† Here Clavis is again read instead of Clavus.

mote nedes be so (qð I) for the relme ne shuld not seme blisfull, if there were a yoke of misdrawynges in divers partes, ne the savyng of obedient thynges ne shou'd not be then. Phi. Is there nothing (qð she) that kepeth his nature, that enforceth hym to gon ayenst God? Bo. No (qð I). Phi. And if that any thyng enforced hym to withstande God, might it availen at last ayen hym, that we have graunted to be almightie, by the right of blisfulnesse? Bo. Certes (qð I) all utterlie it ne might not availe hym. Phi. Then is there nothyng (qð she) that either maie, or will withstande to his soveraine gode. Bo. I trowe not (qð I). Phi. Then (qð she) is thilke the soveraine gode, that all thynges governeth strongly, and ordeineth hem softelye. Bo. Then saied I thus, I delite me (qð I) not onelie in th' endes, or in the somme of the resons, that thou haste concluded and proved, but thilke wordes that thou usest, deliten me moche more, so that at laste soles, that sometyme renden gret thynges, oughten ben ashamed of hem self, that is to sain, that we soles that reprehenden wickedly the thynges, that touchen Godde's governaunce, we oughten ben ashamed of our self. As I, that saied that God refuseth onely the werkes of men, and ne entermeteth not of it. Phi. Thou haste well herde (qð she) the fables of the Poetes, how the Gyautes assaileden heven, with the Goddes: but forsoth the debonaire force of God disposed hem as it was worthie, that is to sain, destroyed the Gyautes, as it was worthie. But wilte thou that we rejoynen together thilke same resons? For peraventure of soche conjuncions maie sterten up some faire sparke of sothe. Bo. Doe (qð I) as The list. Phi. Wenest thou (qð she) that God ne be almightie? Bo. No man is in doubt of it certes (qð I). Phi. No wight ne doubteth it, if he be in his minde (qð she). But he that is almightie, there n'is nothyng that he ne maie. Bo. That is sothe (qð I). Phi. Maie God doe evill? (qð she). Bo. Naie forsothe (qð I). Phi. Than is evill nothyng (qð she) sith that he maie doen none evill, that maie doen al thynges. Bo. Scorneest thou me (qð I) or els plaieest thou, or discevest thou me, that haste so woven with thy reasons the hous of Dædalus so enterlasing, that it is unable to be unlaced, that thou otherwhile entrest there thou isuest, and otherwhile isuest there thou entrest? Ne foldest thou not together by replicacion of wordes a maner wonderfull circle, or environing of the simplicitie divine? For certes, a little here befor, when thou began at blisfulnesse, thou saideest that it is a soverain gode, and that God is the blisfulnesse, for whiche thou yave me as a covenable yeste, that is to sain, that no wight n'is blisfull, but if he be God also therewith. And saideest eke, that the forme of gode is the substaunce of God and of blisfulnesse. And saideest that the ilke one is thilke same gode, that is required and desired of al the kinde of thynges. And thou provedest in disputing, that GOD governeth al the thynges of the world, by the governaunce of bountie, and saideest that all thynges wold obein to hym, and saydest that the nature of yvell is nothinge. And these thynges shewedest thou not with no resons taken fro without, but by proves in cercles and homlich knowing. The whiche proves drawnen to hem selfe ther faith and ther accorde everiche of hem of other. Phi. Than saied she thus: I ne scorne not, ne plaie, ne disceve The, but I have shewed the thing that is grettest over all thynges, by the yest of God, that we whilom praiden. For this is the forme of divine substaunce, that is soche, that it ne slydeth not into utterest foraine thynges, ne receveth not no straunge thynges in him. But right as Parmenides saied in Greke, of thilke divine substaunce: He saied thus, that thilk divine substaunce tourneth the world and the movable cercle of thynges, while the ilke divine substaunce kepeth it self without mowynges, that is to sayne, that he moveth never mo, and yet it moveth al other thynges. But nathelesse, if I have styred reson that be not taken fro without the compasse of the thing, of the whiche we treten, but resons that ben bestowed within compasse: there n'is not why thou shouldest mervailen, sith thou haste lerned by the sentence of Plato, that nedes the wordes mote ben consins to the thynges, of whiche they speken.

Metrum duodecimum.

*Felix, qui potuit boni
Fontem visere lucidum,
Felix, qui potuit gravis, &c.*

Blissed is that man that may sene the clere wel of gode: Blisfull is he that may unbinden him from the boundes of hevye yerth. The Poete of Thrace Orpheus, that whilome had right gret sorowe, for the deth of his wife, after that he had maked and constrained by his wepely songes the wodes movable to renne, and had maked the rivers to stonde still, and had maked the Hartes and Hyndes to joynen dredelesse ther sydes to cruell Lions, to herken his songe, and had maked that the hare was not agast of the hounde, which was plesed by song: So whan the moste ardaund love of hys wife brende the entrales of his breste, ne the songes that hadde overcome all thynges ne myghten not aswagen ther lorde Orpheus, he plained hym of the heven goddes, whiche that were cruell to hym, he wente him to the houses of the hell: And he tempered his blandishing songes, by resounding of stringes, and speke and songe in wepinge all that ever he had received and laved out of the noble welles of his mother Caliope the goddesse. And he sang with as moch as he might of wepinge, and with as moche as love, that doubled his sorow, might yeven him and teche him, and commoved the hell, and required and besoughte by swete prayer the lordes of soules in helle of releasing, that is to saye, to yelden him his wife. Cerberus the porter of hell with his thre hedes was caught and all abashed of the newe songe. And the thre goddeses, Furies and wengeresses of felonies, that tourmenten and agasten the soules by any, woxen sorowful and sory, and teres wepten for pite. Tho was not the hed of Ixion tourmented, by the overthrowinge whele. And Tantalus, that was destroyed by the wodenesse of long thirst, dispised the flodes to drinke. The foule that hight Vultur, that eteth the stomake or the giserne of Tityus is so fullylled of his songe, that it n'ill eten ne tyren no more. At the last the lorde and judge of soules was moved to misericordies, and cried: we ben overcome (qð he) yeve we to Orpheus his wife to bere hym companie, he hath well ybought her by his songes and his ditees: but we will putten a lawe in thys, and covenant in the yeste, that is to sain, that till he be out of hel if he loke behinde him, that his wife shall come agayne unto us. But what is he that maye yeve a lawe to lovers? love is a gretter lawe and stronger to himself than any lawe that men maye yeven. Alas! when Orpheus and his wife were almoste at the termes of the night, that is to sain, at the laste boundes of hel, Orpheus looked backwarde on Eurydice his wife, and loste her, and was dedde. This fable apertaineth to you all, whosoever desireth or seketh to lede his thought into the soverain daie, daie, that is to saye, to clerenesse of soverain gode. For whosoever be so overcomen, that he fixe his eyen into the pitte of hell, that is to saine, whosoever set his thoughtes in yerthlie thynges, all that ever he hath drawen of the noble gode celestially, he leseth it, when he loketh to the helles, this is to saine, into low thynges of the erthe.

Thus endeth the thirde Boke.

Here foloweth the fourthe Boke.

Prosa prima.

Hec cum Philosophia, dignitate vultus & oris gravitate servata, leniter suaviterque cecinisset, tum ego nondum penitus infirmi maroris oblitus, &c.

WHan Philosophie had songen softly and delectably the forsaide things, keping the dignite of her chere, and the weight of her wordes, I than that ne had al utterlye forieten the wepinge and the mourninge that was sette in min herte, forbrake the entencion of her that entended yet to saine some other thynges.

O (qđ I) thou that arte gydereffe of very light, the thynges that thou hast saide me hitherto, ben to me so clere and shewing by the divine loking of hem, and by the resons, that they ne mowen ben overcomen. And thilke thynges, that thou toldest me, all be it so that I had whilom forieten hem, for the sorowe of the wronge that hath be done to me, yet neverthelesse they ne weren not utterly unknowen to me. But this same is namely a right grete cause of my sorowe, so that as the governour of thynges is gode, if that yvels mowen ben by any waies, or elles if that yvels passen without punishinge, the which thyng only how worthy is it to ben wondred upon? Thou confidest it wel thy self certainly. But yet to this thing there is yet another thyng joyned more to be wondred upon. For felonye is Emperesse, and flourereth full of riches, and vertue n'is not al onely without medes, but it is caste downe, and eke fortroden under the fete of felonous folke: and it abieth the turmentes in stede of wicked felons. Of al whiche thynges there is no wight may marvailen y-nough ne complainen, that soch thynges be done in the reigne of God, that all thynges wote, and all thynges maye, and ne will not only but gode thynges. Than saide she thus: Certes (qđ she) that were a grete marvayle, and an abashing without ende, and well more horrible than all the monsters, if it were as thou wenest, that is to saine, that in the right ordaine house of so moch a father, and an ordainour of meine, that the vesselles that ben foule and vile, shuld ben honoured and heried, and the precious vesselles, that shuld ben honoured and heried, shuld ben defouled and vile. But it is not so, for if the thynges that I have concluded a lytell here beforne, ben kept whole and unaraced, thou shalt wel know by the auctoryte of God, (of the whose reigne I speke) that certes the gode folke be alway mightie, and shrewes ben alway outcaste and feble. Ne the vices be nevermore without pain, ne the vertues ne be not without mede. And that blisfulnes cometh alway to gode folke, and infortune cometh alway to wicked folke.

And thou shalt well knowen many thynges of this kinde, that shulde cese thy playntes, and strengthen The with stedfastte sadnesse. And for thou hast sene the forme of verie blisfulnesse by me, that have whilom shewed it The, and thou hast knowen in whom blisfulnesse is sette; all thing trected, that I trowe be necessary, to put forthe, I shal shewen The the way, that shall bringen The ayen unto thin house, and I shall fyre fethers in thy thought, by which it may arisen in height, so that al tribulacion ydone away thou by my giding and by my pathe, and by my sledes, shalt mowen retourne whole and founde into thy countrie.

Metrum primum.

*Sunt enim pennae volucres mihi,
Quae celsa consendant Poli,
Quas sibi cum velox mens induit, &c.*

THan for thy swift fethers, that surmounten the height of the heaven, whan the swift thought hath clothed it in tho fethers, it dispiseth the hateful erthes, and surmounteth the roundenesse of the grete ayre, and it seeth the clouds behinde his backe, and passeth the heygth of the region of the fire, that enchaufeth by the swift movinge of the firmament, tyl that he aryseth into the houles, that beren the sterres, and joyneth the way with the sonne Phœbus, and felawshipeth the waye of the olde colde Saturnus, and he ymaked a knight of the clere sterre, that is to saine, whan the thought is made Godde's knight, by the seeking of clere trouthe to comen to the very knowledge of God. And thilke soule renneth by the cercle of sterres, in all the places thereas the shynynge nyght is ypainted, that is to saine, the nyght that is cloudlesse. For on nyghtes that be cloudlesse it semeth that the heaven were paynted wyth dyvers ymagines of sterres. And whan he hath done there ynoughe, he shall forleten the laste heaven, and he shal presen and wenden on the backe of the swifte firmamente, and he shall be makid parfit of the wurshipful light of God. There holdeth the lorde of thynges the septre of his might, and attempreth the governementes of the worlde, and the shining judge of thynges stable in hym self governethe the swifte carte or waine, that is to saine, the circular movinge of the sonne. And if thy way ledeth The ayen, so that thou be brought thider, than wylt thou saye, that is the countrie that thou requirest, of which thou ne haddest no mynde: But nowe it remembreth me well, here was I borne, here woll I fasten my degre, here woll I dwell. But if The lyketh than to loken on the derknesse of the yerthe, that thou hast forleten, than shalt thou sene, that these felonous tyrauntes, that the wretched peple dredeth now, shullen be exiled from thilke faire countrie.

Prosa secunda.

*Tum ego papa! inquam, ut magna promittis!
nec dubito, quin possis efficere; tu modò quem excitaveris, ne moreris, &c.*

THan saide I thus. O wonder me that thou behest me so grete thynges! Ne I ne doute not that thou ne mayste well perfourme that thou behest: But I pray The this that thou ne tarie not, to tell

tell me thylke thynges, that thou haste moved. Phi. First (q^d she) thou muste nedes knowe, that gode folke ben alwaye stronge and myghtye, and the shrewes ben feble and deserte, and naked of all strengthes. And of these thynges certes everiche of hem is declared and shewed by other. For as gode and yvell ben two contraries, if so be that gode be stedfaste, than sheweth the feblese of yvil al openly. And if thou know clerely the freelnesse of yvell, the stedfastenesse of gode is knowen. But for as moche as the faithe of my sentence shall be the more ferme and haboundant, I wol gone by that one waye and by that other, and I woll confirme the thynges that ben purposed now on this syde, and now on that side. Two thynges ther ben, in whiche the effecte of al the dedes of mankind standeth, that is to sayne, wyll and power: and if that one of these two faileth, there n'is nothyng that maye be done. For if that wil lacketh, there n'is no wight that undertaketh to do that he wol not done: And yf power faileth, the wyll n'ys but ydle, and stante for naught. And thereof cometh it, that if thou se a wight that wolde gotten that he may not gotten, thou mayst not doute that power ne faileth him to haven that he wolde. Bo. This is open and clere (q^d I) ne it ne may not ben denyed in no maner. Phi. And yf thou se a wight (q^d she) that hath done that he would done, thou n'ylt not dout, that he ne hath had power to done it. Bo. No (q^d I). Phi. And in that that every wight may, in that men holden hem mighty to done a thing. In so moch as a man is myghty to done a thyng, in so moch men holde him mighty: and in that that he ne may, in that men demen him to be feble. Bo. I confesse it wel (q^d I). Phi. Remembre The (q^d she) that I have gathred and shewed by the forsaide resons, that all the entencion of the wyl of mankind, whiche that is ladde by dyvers studies, hasteth to comen to blisfulnesse. Bo. I remembreth me well (q^d I) that it hath bene shewed. Phi. And recordeth The naughte than (q^d she) that blisfulnesse is thilke same gode that men requiren, so that whan blisfulnesse is required of al, gode is required of all? Bo. It recordeth me nat (q^d I). For I have it alwaye in my memorie fyxed. Phi. All folke than (q^d she) gode and eke badde enforcen hem without difference of entencion to comen to gode. Bo. This is very consequence (q^d I). Phi. And certaine is (q^d she) that by getting of gode ben men maked gode. Bo. That is certaine (q^d I). Phi. Than gotten gode men that they desiren. Bo. So it semeth (q^d I). Phi. But wicked folke (q^d she) if they gotten the gode that they desiren, they ne mowen not be wicked. Bo. So it is (q^d I). Phi. Than so as that one and that other (q^d she) desiren the gode, and the gode folke gotten the gode, and not the wicked folke, than it is no doute that the gode folke ne be myghtye, and wicked folke be feble. Bo. Who so that ever douteth of this, he ne may not consider the nature of thynges, ne the consequence of resons. Phi. And over this (q^d she) if that there ben two thynges that have one same purpose by kynde, and that one of hem pursueth and perfourmeth that same thing by naturel office, and that other ne may not done thilke office naturel, but foloweth by other maner, than is covenable to nature, him that accomplisheth his purpose kindly, and yet he ne accomplisheth not hys owne purpose: whether of these two demest thou for more mighty? Bo. If that I conje^cte (q^d I) that thou woldest say, algates I desire yet to herken it more plainly of The. Phi. Thou n'ylte not than denye (q^d she) that the movement of goyng n'is in men by kynde. Bo. No forsothe (q^d I). Phi. Ne thou douteft not (q^d she) that thilke naturel office of goyng ne be the office of fete. Bo. I ne doute it not (q^d I). Phi. Than (q^d she) yf that a wyght be mighty to move and gorhe upon his fete, and another to whom thilke naturel office of fete lacketh, enforceth hym to go crepyng on his hande, whiche of these two oughte to be holden the more mighty by ryght. Bo. Knytte forthe (q^d I) the remenaunte. Phi. For no wyght ne douteth, that he that maye gon by naturel office of fete, ne be more myghtye thanne he that ne maye not. But the soverayne gode (q^d she) that it evenlylke purposed to the gode and to the badde. The gode folke seken it by naturel office of vertues, and shrewes enforcen hem to gotten it by dyverse covetises of erthly thynges, whiche that n'is no naturel office to gotten thilke soverain gode. Trowest thou that it be any other wise? Bo. Nay (q^d I). For the consequence is open, and shewing of thynges that I have graunted, that nedes gode folke moten ben myghtye, and shrewes moten bene feble and unmyghty. Phi. Thou rennest aryght before me (q^d she) and this is the judgements, that is to saine, I judge of right, as these leches ben wont to hopen of sicke folke, whan they apperceven, that nature is redressed and withstandeth to the maladye. But for I se The nowe al redy to the withstanding, I shal shew The more thilk and continuel resons. For loke how gretly sheweth the feblenesse and infirmyte of wicked folke, that ne mowen not comen to that ther naturel entencion ledeth hem: And yet almost thylke naturel entencion constraineth hem. And what were to demen than of shrewes, yf thilke naturel helpe had forleten hem, the whiche naturel helpe of entencion gothe alway before hem, and is so grete, that uneth it may be overcomen? Consider than how grete defeaute of power, and how grete feblese there is in wicked felonous folke, as who saith, the greter thing that is coveted, and the desire not accomplished, of the lasse might is he that coveteth it, and may not accomplishe. And forthy philosophie saith thus by soverain gode. Ne shrewes ne requiren not light medes ne vaine games, whiche they ne maye not folowen ne holden, but they failen of thilke somme of the height of thynges, that is to saine, soverain gode. Ne these wretches ne comen not to th' effecte of soveraine gode, the whiche they enforcen hem onely to gotten by nightes and by dayes, in gettinge of which gode the strength of gode folke is ful wel ysene. For right as thou mightest demen him mighty of going, that goeth on his fete till he myght comen to thylke place, fro the whiche place there ne lay no way further to be gone: right so must thou nedes demen him for right myghty, whiche that getteth and atteineth to the ende of all thynges, whiche that bene to desire, beyonde the which ende there n'is nothinge to desire. Of the whiche power of gode folke men maye conclude, that wicked men semen to be bairaine and naked of al strength. For why forleten they vertues and folowen vices, n'is it not for that they ne knowen not the godes? But what thinge is more feble and more caytife, than is the blindnesse of ignorance? or ells they knowen wel, whiche thynges they oughten folowen, but lechery and covetise overthroweth hem misturned. And certes so doth distemperaunce to feble men, that mowe not wrastrlen ayen these vices. Ne know they not wel that they forleten the gode wilfully, and tournen hem wilfully to vices. And in this wise they ne forleten not only to be myghty, but they forleten all utterly in any wyse for to ben. For they that forleten the comune fine of al thynges that ben, they forleten also therewithall for to bene. And peraventure it shulde semen to some folke, that this were a mervayle to saine, that shrewes, which that containen the more partes of men, ne ben not, ne have no being. But nathelesse lesse it is so, and thus stant this thinge. For they that be shrewes, I deny not, but that thei be shrewes, but I deny simplye and plainly that they ne be not, ne have no beinge. For righte as thou mightest sayne of the caraine of a man, that it were a ded man: so graunt I wel forsothe, that vicious folke ben wicked, but I ne may not absolutely and simply graunt that they ben. For thilke thing that withholdeth ordre, and kepeth nature, thilke thinge is and hath beinge. But what thyng failerth that, that is to saye, he that forleteth naturel ordre, he forleteth thilke beinge that is set in his nature. But thou wolt saine, the shrewes mowen. Certes that ne denie I not: but certes ther power ne descendeth not of strength, but of febleffe, for they mowen done wickednesse, the whiche they ne might not, if they mighten dwellen in the forme, and in the doyng of gode peple. And thilke power sheweth evidently, that they mowen righte naught. For so as I have gaðred and proved a litel here before, that yvel is not, and so as shrewes may onely but shrewednes, this conclusion is al clere, that shrewes ne mowen right naught, ne have no power. And for as moche as thou understondest whiche is the strength of this power, I have definished a lytel here before, that no thing n'is so mighty as soveraine gode. Bo. That is sothe (qð I). Phi. And thilke same soveraine gode maye done none yvel. Bo. Certes no (qð I). Phi. Is there any wight than (qð she) that weneth that men mowen done al thinges. Bo. No man (qð I) but if he be out of his wit. Phi. But certes shrewes mowen don yvels (qð she). Bo. Ye wolde God (qð I) that they ne mighten done none. Phi. Than (qð she) so as he that is mightie to done onelye gode thinges, he maie done all thynges, and they that ben mighty to done yvell thinges, ne mowen not all thynges. Than is it open thinge and manifeste, that they that mowen don yvel ben of lasse power. And yet to prove this conclusion there helpeth me this, that I have shewed here before, that al power is to be nombred amonge thinges that men oughten require. And I have shewed that all thinges that oughten ben desired be referred to God, right as to a maner height of ther nature: but for to mowen done yvell and felonie, ne may not ben referred to God. Than is not yvell of the nombre of thynges, that oughten to ben desired and required. Than is it open and clere that the power ne the movyng of shrewes n'is no power. And of all these thinges it sheweth wel that the gode folk ben certainly mighty, and the shrewes doutlesse unmighty. And it is clere and open that thilke sentence of Plato is very and sothe, that saithe, that onely wisemen may don that they desiren, and shrewes mowen haunten that hem liketh, but that they desiren, that is to saine, to come to soveraine gode, they ne have no power to accomplishe that. For shrewes done what hem lyst, whan by tho thinges in which they deliten, they wenen to attaine to thilke gode that they desyren, but they ne gotten ne attaine not therto, for vices ne comen not to blisfulnesse.

Metrum secundum.

*Quos vides sedere celfo
Solii culmine reges,
Purpurâ claros nitente, &c.*

WHoso that, the coverture, of ther vaine a-paraylles myght stripen of these proude kynges, that thou seest sitten an high in ther chaires, glittering in shininge purple, environned with sorrowfull armures, manassynge with cruell mouth, blowinge by wodenesse of herte, he shulde sene that thilke lordes beren within ther corages full straite chaines: for lechery tourmenteth hem on that one side with gredy venimes and troublable ire, that arraifeth in hem the flode of troublings, tourmenteth on that other side ther thought, or sorow halt hem wery and ycaught, or sliding and disceving hope tourmenteth hem. And therefore sithe thou seest one hed, that is to saine, one tiraunte, beren so manye tyrannyes, than ne doth thilke tyraunt not that he desyreth, sythe he is caste downe wyth so manye wycked lordes, that is to saine, so many vices that have so wickedly lordships over him.

Prosa tertia.

Vides ne igitur quanto in cæno probra voluntur, quâ probitas luce resplendeat? in quo perspicuum est nunquam bonis præmiâ, &c.

Seeft thou not than, in howe grete sithe these shrewes ben ywrapped, and with whiche clerenesse these gode folke shinen? In this sheweth it well that to gode folke ne lacketh never mo ther medes, ne shrewes lacken never more tourmentes. For of al thinges that be done, thilke thinge for whiche any thinge is done, it semeth as by right, that thilke thing be the mede of that, as thus: If a man renneth in the stady or in the forlonge for the crowne, than lieth the mede in the crowne for which he renneth. And I have shewed that blisfulnesse is thilke same gode, for whiche that all thynges ben done. Than is thilke same gode purposed to the werkes of mankinde, right as a commune mede, whiche mede ne maye not be discovered from gode folke: For no wight as by right, from thenstorth that him lacketh godenesse, ne shall be cleped gode, for which thing folke of gode maners ther medes ne forsaken hem never mo. For albeit so that shrewes waxen as wode as hem liste against gode folke, yet neverthelesse the crowne of wise men ne shall not fallen ne faden fro foraine shrewdnesse, ne benimmen not fro the courage of gode people ther propre honour. But yf anie wight rejoyced him of godenesse, that he had taken fro without, as who saith, if a man had his godenesse of any other man than of him selfe, certes he that yave hym thylke godenesse, or elles some other wyght might bynome it him. But for as moche as to every wight his propre bounte yeveth him his mede, than at erste shal he failen of mede, whan he forleteth to be gode. And at the laste, so as all medes ben required, for men wenen that they be gode, who is he that n'old deme, that he that is ryght mightye of gode, were partlesse of mede? And of what mede shall he be reguerdoned? Certes of ryght fayre mede, and right gret, aboven all medes. Remembre The of thilke noble corallarie that I yave The a lytel here before, and gather it together in this maner. So as God him selfe is blisfulnesse, than is it clere and certain, that al gode peple ben maked blisful, for they ben gode, and thilke peple that ben blisful, it accordeth and is convenable to be Goddes. Than is the mede of gode peple soch, that no day ne shal empairen it, ne no wickednesse shall drinken it, ne power of no wight ne shal not amenuse it, that is to saine, that ben maked Goddes. And sithe it is thus, that gode men ne failen nevermore of ther mede, certes no man ne may doute of the undepartable paine paine of shrewes, that is to saine, that the paine of shrewes departeth not from 'hemselfe nevermo. For so as gode and yvel, and paine and medes be contrarie, it mote nedes be, that ryght as we se betiden in guerdone of gode, that also mote the paine of the yvel answer by the contrary partes to shrewes. Nowe than so as bountie and prowesse ben mede to gode folke, also is shrewdnesse it selfe tourmente to shrewes. Than whosoever is entetched and defouled with paine, he ne douteth nor, that he is entetched and defouled with yvel. Yf shrewes than wollen praisen 'hemselfe, may it semen to 'hem that they ben wythouten partie of tourment, sithe they ben soch that the uttrest wickednesse, that is to saye, wicked thewes, whiche is the uttrest and worst kinde of shrewdnesse, nede fouleth, ne entetcheth not 'hem only, but ensceth and envenimeth gretly. And also loke on shrewes, that ben the contrarie partie of gode men, howe grete paine felowshipeth and fouleth 'hem! for thou hast lerned a litel here before, that all thing that is and hath beinge, is one, and thilke same one is gode: than is this the consequence, that it semeth well, that al thing that is and hath beyng, is gode, that is to saine, as who saithe that beinge, unite and godenesse is al one. And in this maner it foloweth than, that all thinge that faileth to be gode, it stinteth for to be and for to have any maner being: wherefore it is that shrewes stinten for to be that they weren. But thilke other forme of mankind, that is to saine, the fourme of the bodye without, sheweth that these shrewes weren whilom men, wherefore whan they bene perverted and tourned into malice, certes than they have forlorne the nature of mankind: But so as onelic bountie and prowesse maye enhaunfen everie man over men: than mote it nedes be that shrewes which that shrewdnesse hath caste out of the condicion of mankind, bene put under the merite and deserte of men. Than betideth it, that if thou seekest a wight whiche that is transfourmed into vices, thou maiest not wene that he be a man; for if he be ardaunte in avarice, and that he be a ravenour by violence of forain richesse, thou shalte saine that he is like a wolfe; and if he be felonous and withouten reste, and exercise his tonge to chidinges, thou shalte lyken him to the hound; and if he be a privie awaytour hydde, and rejoyfeth him to ravishe by wiles, thou shalte saine hym lyke to the foxe whelpes; and if he be distempred and quaked for ire, men shall wenen that he bereth the corage of a lion; and if he be dredeful and flyng and dredeth thinges, whiche that ne oughten not to be dredde, men shal holde him lyke to the hart; and if he be slowe and astonyed and lache, men shal holde him lyke to an asse; and yf he be lyghte and unstedfaste of corage, and chaungeth aye his studies, men shal holde him like to the birdes; and yf he be plounged in foule and unclene luxuries, he is withholden in the foule delycles of the foule sowe; than foloweth it, that he that forletteth bounte and prowesse, he forletteth to be a man, sithe he ne maye not passen in the condicion of God, he is turned into a beste.

Metrum tertium.

*Vela Neritii ducis,
Et vagas pelago rates,
Eurus appulit insula,
Pulchra quâ residens Dea
Solis edita femine, &c.*

Eurus the wind arived the sailes of Ulysses duke of the cowntre of Narice, and his wandringe shyppes by the Se into the yle there as Circe the faire goddesse, doughter of the sunne dwelleth, that medleth to her newe gestes drinkes that ben touched and maked with enchauntementes. And after that hir hande mighty over the herbes had chaunged hir gestes into divers maners, that one of 'hem is covered his face with forme of a Bore, that other is chaunged into a Lion, of the cowntre of Marmorike, and his nailes and his tethe wexen. That other of 'hem is newlyche chaunged into a wolfe, and howlyth whan he wolde wepe, that other goth debonairly in the house as a Tygre of Inde. But al be it so that the godhed of Mercury, that is cleped that birde of Arcadie, hath had mercy of the duke Ulysses, bysegged wyth dyverse yvelles, and hath unbounden hym fro the pestilence of hys hostesse, algates the rowers and the mariners hadden by this ydrawen into ther mouthes, and dronken the wicked drinkes. They that weren woxen swine, hadden by this ychaunged ther mete of bred, for to eten akorne of Okes. None ther limmes ne dwelleth with 'hem whole, but they have lost the voyce and the body, only ther thought dwelleth with 'hem stable, that wepeth and bywaileth the monstuous chaunging that they sustren. O over light hande, as who saith, feble and light is the hand of Circe the enchaunteresse, that chaungeth the bodies of folke into bestes, to regarde and to comparyson of mutacion, that is maked by vices, ne the herbes of Circe ne be not myghty: for all be it so that they may chaungen the limmes of the body, algate yet they may not chaunge the hertes; for wythyn is pnyd the strength and the vigoure of men in the secretour of ther hertes, that is to saine, the strength of reson; but thilke venims of vices to drawen a man to 'hem more mightily than the venime of Circe, for vices ben so cruell that they persen and thorowepassen the courage within, and thoughe they ne anoye not the body, yet vices woden to destroyen men by wounde of thought.

Prosa quarta.

Tum ego, fateor, inquam, nec injuriâ dici video, vitiosos, tametsi humani corporis speciem servant, &c.

THan saide I thus: I confesse and am aknowe it (qđ I) ne I ne se not but that men may say, as by right, that shrewes ben chaunged into bestes, by the qualite of ther foules, all be it so that they kepen yet the forme of the bodye of mankynde: but I wolde not of shrewes, of whiche the thought cruel and wode, wodeth alwaye to the distrucion of gode men, that it wer lesful to 'hem to done that.

Certes (qđ she) ne it is not lesfull to 'hem, as I shall well shewe The in conyenable place: but nathelesse if so were that thilke, that men wene bene lesful to shrewes, were bynommed 'hem, so that they ne might not anoyen or don harme to gode men, certes a grete partie of the paine to shrewes shulde bene alleged and releved. For all be it so that it ne seme credible thyng peraventure to some folke, yet it mote nedes be that the shrewes ben more wretches and sely, whan they maye full done and parfourme that they coveten, than yf they might not accomplishe that they coveten. For yf so be that it be wretchednesse to wilnen to done yvel, than is it more wretchednesse to mowen done yvell, without whiche mowyng the wretched wyl shulde languishe without effecte. Than sithe every of these thinges hath his wretchednesse, nesse, that is to faine, wil to done yvel, and mowinge to done yvel, it mote nedes be that the shrewes be constrained by ther unfelynesse, that wolen and mowen, and parformen felonies and shreudnesse. Bo. I accomde me (q^d I) but I desyre gretly, that shrewes loften sone thylike unfelynesse, that is to fayne, that shrewes weren dispoiled of mowynge to done yvell.

Phi. So shullen they (q^d she) soner paraventure than thou woldest, or soner than they hem selfe wene: for there n'ys nothinge so late in so shorte bondes of this life, that is long to abide, namely to a courage immortell. Of whiche shrewes the gret hope and the hie compassinges of shreudnesse, is oft destroyed by a fodein ende or they be war. And that thing establissheth to shrewes the ende of ther shrewdnes; for yf that shrewdnes maketh wretches, than must he nedes be most wretch, that longest is a shrewe, the whiche wicked shrewes wold I demin aldermoste caitifes and unfely, yf ther shrewdnes ne wer finished at lest waye by utterest deth: for yf I have concluded soth of the unfelynesse of shrewdnes, than sheweth it plainly, that thilke wretchednes is withouten ende, the which is certaine to be pardurable. Bo. Certes (q^d I) this conclusion is harde and wonderful to graunte. But I knowe well that it accordeth moche to thynges that I have graunted here before. Phi. Thou ha^t (q^d she) right estimation of this. But whosoever wene that it be a harde thing, to accomde him to a conclusion, it is right that he shewe that some of the premisses ben false, or els he mote shewe that the collacion of propositions n'is not spedeful to a necessary conclusion. And yf it ne be not so, but that the premisses ben igraunted, there n'is not why he shulde blame that argument. For this thing that I shal tel The now ne shall not seme lasse wonderfull, but of the thinges that bene taken also it is necessary, as who faith, it foloweth of that which that is purposed before. Bo. What is that (q^d I). Phi. Certes (q^d she) that is, that these wicked shrewes be more blisfull, or els lasse wretches that abien the tourmentes, that they have deserved, than if no paine of justice ne chastised hem. Ne this ne say I not now, for that any man myght thynke that the maners of shrewes bene coriged and chastised by vengeance, and that they be brought to the right way by the drede of tourmentes, ne for that they yeven to other folkes ensample to flyen fro vices.

But I understand yet in another maner, that shrewes ben more unfely whan they ne be not punished, all be it so that there ne be had no reson or lawe of correccion, ne none ensample of lokynge. Bo. And what maner shall that ben (q^d I) other than hath be tolde here before? Phi. Have we not graunted than (q^d she) that gode folke ben blisfull, and shrewes ben wretches? Bo. Yes (q^d I). Phi. Than (q^d she) if that anye gode wer added to the wretchednesse of any wight n'ys he not more welful, than he that ne hath no medling of gode in his solitary wretchednes? Bo. So semeth it (q^d I). Phi. And what sayest thou than (q^d she) of thilke wretche that lacketh all godes, so that no gode n'is medled in his wretchednesse, and yet over all his wickednesse, for whiche he is a wretche, that there be yet another yvell anexed and knit to him; shal not men demen him more unfely, than thilke wretche, of whiche the unfelins is releved by the participacion of some gode? Bo. Why should he not (q^d I). Phi. Than certes (q^d she) han shrewes whan thei ben punished somewhat of gode annexed to ther shrewdnesse, that is to faine, the same pain that they suffren, which that is gode, by the reson of Justice. And whan thilke same shrewes escapen without tourment, than have they somwhat more of yvell, yet over the wickednesse that they han doen, that is to fain, default of paines; which defaute of paine thou haste graunted is yvel, for the deserte of felony. Bo. I ne may not denie it (q^d I). Phi. Moche more than (q^d she) ben shrewes unfely whan they bene wrongfullye delivered fro paine, than whan they ben punished by rightfull vengeance. But this is open thyng and clere, that it is right that shrewes ben punished, and it is wickednesse, and wronge that they escapen unpunished. Bo. Who might denye it (q^d I). Phi. But (q^d she) may any man deny that all that is right ne is gode and also the contrarie, that all that is wrong is wicked? Bo. Certes (q^d I) these thynges ben clere y-noughe, and that we have concluded a litell here before. But I pray The that thou tell me yf thou accomdest to letten no tourmente to the soules, after that the body is ended by the deth, that is to faine, understandeste thou aught, that soules have anye tourment after the deth of the body? Phi. Certes (q^d she) yea, and that right grete; of whyche soules (q^d she) I trowe that some ben tourmented by apprehenssion of paine, and some soules I trowe ben excercysed by a purgynge mkenesse, but my counsaile n'ys nat to determine of this paine. But I have travailed and tolde yet hi^certo, for thou shuldest know that the mowynge of shrewes, whiche mowing The semeth to be unworthy, n'is no mowynge, and eke of shrewes, of whyche thou playnedest that they ne weren not punished, that thou woldest se that they ne weren never mo withouten the tourmentes of ther wyckednesse. And of the lycence of the mowynge to doen yvell, that thou praidest that it mighte sone be ended, and that thou wouldest faine lerne that it ne shulde not longe endure. And that shrewes ben more unfely yf they were of lenger duringe, and moste unfely yf they weren perdurable. And after this I have shewed The that more unfely ben shrewes, whan they escapen without ther ryghtful paine, than whan they ben punished by rightfull vengeance. And of this sentence foloweth it, that than ben shrewes constrained at the last with most grevous tourment, whan men wene that they ne be not punished. Bo. Whan I consider thy resons (q^d I) I ne trowe nat that men faine any thyng more verely. And yf I tourne ayen to the studies of men, who is he to whome it shulde seme, that he ne should nat onely leven these thynges, but eke gladly herken hem? Phi. Certes (q^d she) so it is, but men maye nat, for they have their eyen so wont to the derkenesse of erthely thynges, that they ne may nat lyfte hem up to the lyght of clere sothfastnesse. But they ben lyke to birdes, of whiche the night lyghtneth ther lokynges, and the daye blindeth hem. For whan men loken not the ordre of thinges, but ther lustes and talentes, they wene that either the leve or the mowynge to doen wickednesse, or els the scapyng without payne, be welefull. But consyder the judgement of the perdurable law, for if thou confirme thy courage to the beste thynges, thou ne hast no nede of no judge, to yeven The price or mede, for thou haste joynd thy self to the moste excellent thinges. And if thou have enclined thy studies to the wicked thynges, ne seke no foraine wrekerie out of thy self, for thou thy self hast thrifte thy self into wicked thinges; right as thou mightest loken by divers tymes, the soule yerth and the heaven, and that all other thynges stinten fro without, so that thou were in neither, ne se nothyng more, then should it semen to The, as by onely reson of lokyng, that thou were now in the Sterres, and now in the yerth; but the peple loketh not on these thynges: What then? shall we then approche us to hem that I have shewed, that ben like to bestes? And what wouldest thou fain faine of this, if that a manne had all forlorne his sighte, and had foryeten that he ever sawe, and wened that nothyng failed hym of perfeccion of mankind? Now we which mighten seen the same thynges, would we not faine, that he were blinde? ne also ne accordeth not the peple to that I shall faine, the whiche thyng is susteyned by as stronge foundementes of reson, that is to faine, that more unfele ben thei, that doen wronges to other folke, then thei that the wronge suffren. Bo. I would heren thilke same resons (qđ I). Phi. Deniest thou (qđ she) that all shrewes ne ben worthie to have tourment? Bo. Nay (qđ I). Phi. But (qđ she) I am certain by many resons, that shrewes ben unfele. Bo. It accordeth (qđ I). Phi. Then ne doubteth thou not (qđ she) that thilke folke, that ben worthie of tourmente, that thei ne be wretches. Bo. It accordeth well (qđ I). Phi. If thou were then set a Judge, or a knower of thinges, whither trowest thou that men should tourmenten him, that hath doen wronge, or els him that suffered the wrong? Bo. I doubt not (qđ I) that I n'olde doe sufficient satisfaccion to 'hem that have suffred wrong, by the sorowe of 'hem that have doen wrong. Phi. Then semeth it (qđ she) that the doer of wronge is more wretch, then he that suffered wrong. Bo. That foloweth wel (qđ I). Phi. Then (qđ she) by these causes, and by other causes, that ben enforced by the same rote, filth or synne, by the propre nature of it, maketh men wretches, and it sheweth well, that the wronges that men doen, n'is not the wretchednesse, of him that receiveth the wrong, but the wretchednesse of him that doeth the wrong. But certes (qđ she) these orators or advocates doen al the contrary, for thei enforcen 'hem to commove the Judges to have pitie of 'hem, that doen the grevaunces and the wronges, the whiche shrewes, it wer a more convenable thyng, that the accusours or advocates, not wroth, but pitieous and debonaire, ledden tho shrewes that have doen wronges, to the judgement, right as men leden sicke folke to the Leche, for that thei shoulde seken out the maladies of synne by tourment. And by this covenante, either the entent of advocates should cessen in all, or els if th' office of the advocates would better profiten to menne, it should be tourned into the habite of accusacion, that is to faine, thei shoulde accuse shrewes, and not excusen 'hem. And eke the shrewes 'hemself, if it were lesfull to 'hem to seen at any cliste the vertue that thei have forletten, and sawen that thei should putten adoune the filthes of ther vices, by the tourmentes of paines, thei ne oughten not, right for that recompensacion, for to getten 'hem bountie and prowesse, whiche that thei have losse, demen and hold that the ilke paines weren tourmentes to 'hem, and eke thei woulde refuse the attendaunce of ther advocates, and taken 'hemself to ther Judges, and to ther accusours; for the whiche it betideth, that as to the wise folkes, there n'is no place illetten to hate, that is to faine, that hate ne hath no place emonge wisemen. For no wight n'ill haten gode men, but if he were overmoche a sole, and for to haten shrewes, it n'is no reson; for right as languishyng is maladie of bodie, right so ben vices and sinne malady of courage. And so as we ne deme not that thei, whiche that ben sicke of ther bodie, ben worthie to ben hated, but rather worthie of pitie, well more worthie not to ben hated, but for to ben had in pitie ben thei, of whiche the thoughtes ben constrained by felonous wickednesse, that is more cruell, then any languishyng of bodie.

Metrum quartum.

*Quid tantos juvat excitare motus,
Et propria fatum sollicitare manu?
Si mortem petitis, propinquat ipsa
Sponte sua, volucres nec remoratur equos, &c.*

WHat deliteth you to exciten so grete moving of Hatredes, and to hasten and busien the fatall disposicion of your deth, with your propre handes, that is to faine, by batailles or contake? For if ye asken the dethe, it hasteth hym of his owne wille, ne dethe ne tarieth not his swifte horse. And the menne that the Serpentes, and the Lion, and the Tigre, and the Bere, and the Bore, sicken to sleen with their tethe, yet thilke same menne seken to sleen everich of 'hem other with swerde. Lo! for ther maners ben divers and discordaunt, thei moven unrightfull hostes, and cruell batailles, and wilnen to perishe by enterchaungyng of dartes, but the reson of crueltie n'is not inough rightfull. Wilt thou then yelden a convenable gnerdon to the desertes of men? Love rightfully gode folkes, and have pitie on shrewes.

Prosa quinta.

*Hinc ego video inquam, quæ sit vel felicitas
vel miseria in ipsis proborum atque impro-borum meritis constituta. Sed in hac ipsâ fortunâ populari, &c.*

THIS I se (qđ I) either what blisfulnesse, or els what unelines is establisshed in the desertes of gode menne, and of shrewes.

But in this ilke fortune of the peple I se somewhat of gode, and somewhat of evill. For no wiseman had not lever be exiled, pore, and nedie, and namelesse, then for to dwellen in his Cite, and flouren of richesse, and be redoutable of honoure, and strong of power. For in this wise more clerely and witnesfully is the office of wise menne treted, when the blisfulnesse of power, and governours, is as it were shad emonges the peple, that be neighbors and subiectes, sith that namely prison, lawe, and these other tourmentes of lawfull paines, be rather owed to felonous Citezeins: for the whiche felonous citezeins the paines be establisshed, more then for gode peple.

Bo. Then I marvaile gretly (qđ I) why that the things be so missecenterchaunged, that tourmentes of felonies pressen and confounden gode peple, and shrewes ravishen medes of vertue, and ben in honours, and grete estates. And I desire eke for to weten of The, what semeth The to be the reson of this so wrongfull a conclusion. For I would wonder wel the lasse, if that I trowed that all thinges wer medled with fortunous hap. But now crepeth and encreseth myne astonyinges, God governour of thyngs, that so as GOD yeveth oft times to gode menne godes and mirthes, and to shrewes, evil and aspre thynges: And yeveth ayen to gode folk hardnesse, and to shrewes he graunteth 'hem ther wille, and that thei desiren: What difference maie there be betwene that that God doeth, and happe of fortune, if menne knowe not the cause why it is?

Phi.

Phi. Ne it is no marveile (q^d she) though that men wenen, that there be somewhat folishe and confuse, when the reson of the order is unknowen: but although that thou ne knowe not the cause of so grete a disposicion, nathelisse, for as moche as God the gode governour attempreth and governeth the worlde, ne doubt The not, but all thynges ben doen aright.

Metrum quintum.

*Si quis Arcturi sidera nescit
Propinqua summo cardine labi,
Cur legat tardus plaustro Bootes,
Mergatque seras aequore flammis,
Cum nimis celeres explicet ortus, &c.*

WHoso that knowe not the sterres Arcture, tourned to the soveraine centre or point, that is to saine, tourned nigh to the Sovraigne Pole of the firmamente, and wote not why the sterre Bootes passeth, or gathereth his waines, and drencheth his late flambes in the Se, and why that Bootes the Sterre unfoldeth his overswift arisinges, then shall he wondren of the Lawe of the high aire. And eke, if that he ne knowe not why that the hornes of the full Mone waxen pale and infecte by the boundes of the darke night, and how the Mone darke and confuse discovereth the Sterres, that she had covered by her clere visage.

The common erreure moveth folkes, and maketh werie ther basins of Brasse by thilke strokes, that is to saie, that there is a maner peple, that hight Corybantes, that wenen, that when the Mone is in the Eclipse, that it be enchaunted, and therefore for to rescue the Mone, thei beten ther basins with the ilke strokes. Ne no man ne wondreth when the blastes of the winde Corus beten the strondes of the Se by quakyng flodes. Ne no man ne wondreth, when the weight of the Snowe, harded by the cold, is resolved by the brennyng hete of Phæbus the Sonne, for here seen menne redily the causes. But the causes ihidde, that is to sain in heven, troublen the brestes of men. The movable peple is astonied of all thynges, that comen selde and sodainlie in our age, but the trouble errour of our ignoraunce departeth fro us, so that if thei wisten the cause, why that soche thynges betiden, certes thei shoulde cese to seme wonders.

Prosa sexta.

Ita est inquam. Sed cum tui muneris sit latentium rerum causas evolvere, velatasque caligine explicare rationes: quæso uti hinc decernas, &c.

THus it is (q^d I) but so as thou haste yeven or behight me, to unwrappe the hidde causes of thynges, and to discover me the resons covered with darknesse, I praie The, that thou devise and judge me of this matter, and that thou do me to understand it, for this miracle of this wonder, troubleth me right gretly. And then she a little what smiling said. Thou clepest me (q^d she) to tell that is grettest of all thynges, that mowen ben asked, and to the which question unneth there is aught inough to laven it, as who saith, unneth is there any thyng to answere perfitlie to thy question; for the matter of it is soche, that when o doubt is determined and cutte awaie, there waxen other doubttes without nomber, right as the heddes of Hydra the Serpente waxen, the whiche Serpente Hercules slough: ne there ne were no manere, ne none ende, but if a wight constrained the doubttes, by a right lively and quicke fire of thought, that is to saine, by vigour and strength of witte. For in this matter, men wenen wonte to maken questions, of the simplicitie of the purveiaunce of GOD, and of the order of Destinie, and of sodaine happe, and of knowing of predestinacion divine, and of the libertie of free-will, the whiche thynges, thou thy self appercedest wel, of what weight thei ben. But for as moche as the knowynges of these thynges is a maner porcion of medicine to The, all be it so, that I have little tyme to doen it; yet neverthelesse, I would enforcen me to shewen somewhat of it. But although the nourishinges of dite of Musike deliteth The, thou muste sufferen and forberen a litle of the ilke delite, while that I weve to The the resons knitte by ordre.

Bo. As it liketh to The (q^d I) so doe.

Phi. Tho spake she righte as by another beginnyng, and saied right thus. The engenderyng of all thynges (q^d she) and all the progressions of movable Nature, and all that moveth in any maner, taketh his causes, his order, and his formes, of the stableness of Divine thought: And the ilke Divine thought, that is sette, and putte in the Toure, that is to saine, in the height of the simplicitie of GOD, stablisseth many maner gises to the thynges that ben to doen, the whiche maner, when that menne loken it, in the pure clemesse of the Divine intelligence, is cleped purveiaunce.

But when the ilke maner is referred by menne to thynges that it moveth or disponeth, then of olde menne it was cleped Destinie, the whiche thynges, if that any wight loketh well in his thought, the strengthe of that one, and of that other, he shall lightlie mowe sene, that these two thynges ben divers. For purveiaunce is the ilke Divine reson, that is established in the Sovraigne Prince of thynges, the which purveiaunce disponeth all thynges. But certes, Destinie is the disposicion and the ordinance, clevyng to movable thynges, by the whiche disposicion the purveiaunce knitteth al thynges in ther order: For purveiaunce embraseth all thynges to hepe, although thei be divers, and although thei be infinite, but destinie certayne departeth and ordeineth all thynges singularly, and divideth in moving, in places, in formes, and in tymes, as thus: Let the unfolding of temporell ordinance, assembled and oned in the lokyng of the Divine thoughte, be cleped purveiaunce, and thilke same assemblyng and onyng, devided and unfolden, let that be called Destinie. And all be it so, that these thynges ben divers, yet neverthelesse, hangeth that one on that other, for why? the order destinably procedeth of the simplicitie of purveiaunce.

For right as a werkman perceveth in his thoughte the forme of thyng that he wolle make, and moveth the effecte of the werke, and ledeth that he had looked before in his thought simplie and presentlie by corporall ordinance: certes, right so GOD in his purveiaunce disponeth singulerly and stably the thynges that be to doen, but he administreth in maners, and in divers tymes by Destinie, the ilke same thynges that he hath disponed; then whether Destinie be exercised, either by some divine spirites, servauntes to the Divine purveiaunce, or elles by some soule, or els by all nature serving GOD, or els by the celestiall movynges of Sterres, or els by the vertue

tue of Angelles, or els by divers subteltie of Divilles, or els by any of 'hem, or elles by 'hem all, the destinable ordinaunce is woven and accomplished. Certes, it is open thyng, that the purveiaunce is an unmovable and simple forme of thynges to doen, and the movable bonde, and the temporalle ordinaunce of thynges; whiche that the Divine simplicite of purveiaunce hath ordained to doen, that is destinie. For whiche it is that al thinges that ben put under destinie, ben certes subjectes unto purveiaunce, to which purveiaunce destinie it self is subject and under, but some thinges ben put under purveiaunce, that surmounten th' ordinaunce of destinie: and tho ben thilke that stable ben fixed nigh to the first godhed, thei surmounten the order of destinable movabilitie. For right as circles turnen about a same centre, or about a point, thilke circle that is innerest or moſte within he joyneth to the simpleſſe of the middle, and is as it wer a centre or a point to that other circles, that turnen aboute him: and thilke that is utterest, compassed by larger environning, is unfolded by larger spaces, in so moche as it is ferthereste fro the middleſte simplicite of the pointe: And if there be any thyng that knitteth and felowshippeth himself to thilke middle pointe, it is constrained into simplicite, that is tosaie, into unmovabilitie, and it ceſeth to ben ſhad, and ſlit diverſly; Right so by ſemblable reſon, thilke thing that departeth furthereste fro the firste thought of God, it is unfolded, and also ſubmitteth to greter bondes of destinie, and in so moche is the thing more fre and loce fro dignitie, as it asketh and holdeth nere to thilke centre of thinges, that is to ſaine, to God. And if the thyng cleaveth to the ſtedfaſtneſſe of the thought of God, and be without movyng, certes it ſurmounteth the neceſſitie of destinie. Then ſoche compariſon as is ſkilling to underſtandyng, and of thinge that was engendred, to thinge that is of time to eternitie, and of the circle to the centre, right so is the order of movable destinie, to the ſtable ſimplicite of purveiaunce. Thilke ordinaunce moveth the heven and the ſterres, and attempereſh the elementes togyther emong 'hemſelf, and transformeth 'hem by enterchaungeable mutation. And thilk ſame order neweth ayen all thinges growing and falling adoune, by ſemblable progrefſiones of ſedes and of ſexus, that is to ſaine, male and female: and this ilke order conſtraineth the fortunes, and the dedes of men, by a bonde of cauſes, not able to be unbounden: the whiche destinable cauſes, when thei paſſen out fro the beginnynges of unmovable purveiaunce, it mote nedes be that thei ne be not mutable, as thus: be the things well governed, if that the ſimplicite dwellynge in the divine thought ſheweth forth the order of cauſes, unable to be bowed. And this order conſtraineth by the proper ſtabilitie, the movable thinges, or els thei ſhulden ſete foliie. For which it is, that thinges ſemen confuſe, and trouble to us men, for we ne mowen not conſider thilk ordinaunce. Nervertheleſſe, the proper maner of every thing dreſſyng hym to gode diſponeth 'hem all, for there n'is nothyng doen for evill, for thilke thyng that is doen by wicked folke, nis not doen for evill. The whiche ſhrewes, as I have ſhewed full plenteouſly ſeke gode, but wicked errour miſtouneth 'hem, ne the order coming fro the point of ſoveraine gode, ne enclineth not fro his beginnyng. But thou maiest ſaie, what innerest maiest ben a worſe confuſion, than that gode men have ſomtyme adverſitie, and ſomtyme proſperitie: and ſhrewes have now also thinges that thei deſiren, and now thinges that thei haten. Whether men live nowe in ſoche holineſſe of thought, as who ſaith be men now ſo wiſe, that ſoche folke as thei demen to be gode folke or ſhrewes, that it mote nedes be, that folk be ſoche as thei wenen. But in this maner domes of men diſcorden, that thilke men that ſome folke demen worthie of mede, other folke deme 'hem worthy of turment, but let us graunt: I ſuppoſe that ſome man maiest well deme or knowe the gode peple, and the bad, maiest he then knowe and ſe thilke innerest attemperaunce of courage, as it hath be wont to be ſaid of bodies, as who ſaith, maiest a man ſpeken of complexiones, and attemperaunce of bodies, ne it ne is not, as who ſaith, but it is like a mervaile or a miracle, to 'hem that ne know it not, why that ſwete thinges be convenable to ſum bodies, that ben whole, and to ſum peple bitter thinges be convenable: and also why ſum peple ben holpen with light medicines, and ſome peple ben holpen with bitter medicines: but natheleſſe tho that knowen the maner, and the temperaunce of hele and of malady, ne marvelleth it nothing. But what other thing ſemeth helth of corages but bountie, and what other thing ſemeth maladie of courage but vices? Who is els keper of gode, and driver awaie of evill, but God the governor and leder of thoughtes? the whiche God, when he hath beholden from the high toure of his purveiaunce, he knoweth what is convenable to any wight, and leneth 'hem that he wot well that is convenable to 'hem. Lo! herof cometh and hereof is doen this miracle of th' order destinable, when God that ail knoweth doth ſoche thing, of whiche thyng unknowing folke ben aſtonied; but for to conſtraine, as who ſaith, but for to comprehend and tell a fewe thinges of the divine depeneſſe, the which that manne's reſon maiest underſtand. Thilke manne that thou weeneſt to ben right juſte, and right kepyng of equitie, the contrarie of that ſemeth to the Divine purveiaunce that all wote. And Lucan my familier telleth, that the victorious cauſe liked to the Goddes, and the cauſes overcome liketh to Caton. Then whatſoever thou maiest ſeen, that is doen in this worlde unhoped, or els unknowen, certes, it is the righte order of thynges, but as to thy wicked opinion, it is a confuſion. But I ſuppoſe that ſome man be ſo welthewed, that the divine judgemente, and the judgemente of mankind, accorden 'hem togyther of hym: but he is ſo unſtedfaſt of courage, that if any adverſitie come to hym, he woll forſeten paraventure to continue innocencie, by the whiche he ne maiest not withholden fortune: than the wiſe diſpenſacion of GOD ſpareth hym, the whiche man adverſitie might enpairen, for that God will not hym to travaile, to whom that travaile n'is not convenable. Another manne is parſite in all vertues, and is an holy manne, and nigh to God, ſo that the purveiaunce of God would deme, that it were a felonie, that he wer touched with any adverſities, ſo that he would not ſuffre, that ſoche a man be with any bodily maladie moved. But ſo (as ſaied the Philoſopher) the more excellent is by me ſaid in grete, that vertues have edified the bodie of the holie manne. And oft tyme it betideth, that the ſomme of thinges, that ben to doen is taken to governe to gode folke, for that the malice habundant of ſhrewes ſhould ben abated. And God yeveth and departeth to other folke, proſperitees and adverſities, medled to hepe, after the qualitie of ther courages, and remordeth ſome folke by adverſities, for thei ne ſhould not waxen proude, by long welſuſneſſe, and other folke he ſuffereth to be travailed with hard thynges, for that thei ſhould conſerme the vertues of courage, by the exercitacion of uſage of patience. And other folk dreden more then thei oughten, the whiche thei mighten well beren, and ſome diſpiſe, that thei mowe not bere, and thilke folke GOD ledeth into experience of 'hemſelf, by aſpre and ſorowfull thynges. And many other folk have bought honourable renome of this worlde, by the price of glorious deth.

And some men that ne mowe not ben overcomen by tourment, have yeven ensample to other folke, that vertue maie not ben overcomen by adversities. And of al these thinges there n'is no doubt, that thei ne ben doen rightfullie and ordeinly, to the perfit gode of 'hem, to whom we seen these thinges beriden. For certes, that adversities cometh somtyme to shrewes, and somtyme that thei desiren, it cometh of these foresaied causes. And of sorowfull thinges that betiden to shrewes, certes, no man ne wondreth, for all menne wene that thei have deserved it, and that thei ben of wicked merite. Of whiche shrewes, the tourmente agasteth somtyme other to doen felonies: And somtyme it amendeth 'hem, that suffereth the tourmentes. And the prosperitie, that is yeven to shrewes, sheweth a grete argument to gode peple, what thing thei should demen of thilk welefulnesse, whiche prosperitie menne seen ofte serve to shrewes: In whiche thing, I trowe that God dispenseth, for paraventure, the nature of some man is so overthrowing to evill, and so unconvenable, that the nedy povertie of his housholde might rather agreve hym to doen felonies, and to the maladie of hym God putteth remedie, to yeven hym richesse. And some other manne beholdeth his conscience defouled with synnes, and maketh comparison of his fortune, and of himself: and dredeth paraventure that the blisfulnesse, of whiche the usage is joyfull to hym, that the lesyng of thilk blisfulnesse ne be not sorowfull to hym, and therefore he would chaunge his maners: and for he dredeth to lese his fortune, he forleteth his wickednesse. To other folkes welefulnes is yeven unworthilie, the whiche overthroweth 'hem into destruccion, that thei han deserved, and to some other folke, is yeven power to punisshen, for that it shall be cause of continuacion, and exercisying to gode folkes, and cause of tourmente to shrewes.

For so as there n'is none aliaunce betwene gode folkes, and shrewes, ne shrewes ne mowen not accorden emong 'hemself: and why not? For that shrewes discorden of 'hem self, by ther vices, the which vices, all to renden ther consciences, and doen oft tyme thynges, the whiche thinges, when thei have doen 'hem, thei deme that tho thinges, ne shuld not have be doen, for which thing the soverain purveiaunce hath maked oft time miracle: So that shrewes have maked shrewes to ben gode men. For when that some shrewes seen, that thei suffre wrongfully felonies of other shrewes, thei waxen eschaufed into hate of 'hem, that anoied 'hem, and retournen to the fruit of vertue. Then thei studien to be unlike to 'hem that thei have hated. Certes onely is this the divine might, to the which might ivels ben then gode, when it useth the ivelles convenable, and draweth out the effecte of any gode, as who saieth, that ivell is gode onely to the might of God, for the might of God ordeineth thilke ivell to gode: for one order embraceth all things, so that what wight departeth from the reson of thilke order, that is assigned to him, algates yet he slideth into an other order, so that nothing is lesfull to folie, in the relme of divine purveiaunce, as who saieth, nothing is without ordinaunce, in the relme of divine purveiaunce, sith that the right strong GOD governeth all thynges in this worlde; for it is not lesful for men to comprehend by wit, ne unfolden by worde, all the subtell ordinaunce, and the disposicion of the divine entent; for onely it ought to suffice to have loked that God himself, maker of al natures, ordaineth al thinges to gode, while that he hasteth to withholden the thynges, that he hath maked, into his semblaunce, that is to say for to withholden the thinges into gode, for he hymself is gode, he chaseth out all ivells fro the bonde of his cominalties, by th' order of the necessitie destina- ble: for whiche it followeth, that if thou loke the purveiaunce, ordeinyng the thinges, that men wenen be outrageous, or haboundant in yerthes, thou shalt not seen in no place nothyng of ivell. But I se now that thou art charged with the weight of the question, and werie with lengthe of my reson, and that thou abidest some swetenesse of song, take than this draught, and when thou art wel refreshed and relect, thou shalt be more stedfaste to flie into higher questions or thinges.

Metrum sextum.

*Si vis celsi jura tonantis
Purâ solers cernere mente,
Aspice summi culmina Cæli, &c.*

IF thou wise wolt demen in thy pure thought, the rightes or the lawes of the hie thonder, that is to sain of God, loke thou and beholde the heightes of the soveraine heven: There kepen the Sterres, by rightfull aliaunce of thyngs, ther old pece. The Sonne imoved by his roddie fire ne distourbeth not the colde circle of the Mone, ne the sterre icleped the Bere, that enclineth his ravishing courses abouten the soveraine height of this worlde. Ne the same sterre Urfa n'is nevermo washen in the depe Westren Se, ne coveteth not to dien his flambes in the Se of the Ocean, although it se other Sterres iplonged in the Se: And Hesperus the Sterre bodeth, and telleth alwaie the late nightes: And Lucifer the sterre bringeth ayen the clere daie.

And thus maketh love enterchaungeable the perdurable courses, and thus is discordable bataille i- putte out of the countre of the Sterres. This accordaunce attempreth by evenlike maners the Elementes, that the moiste thynges strivying with the drie thynges yeven place by ffoundes: And that the colde thynges joynen 'hem by faithe to the hote thynges, and that the light fire ariseth into height, and the hevie yerthes availen by ther weightes: by the same causes, the flourie yere yeldeth swete smelles, in the first Sommer seson warmyng, and the hotte Sommer drieth the Cornes, and Autumpne cometh ayen of hevie Apples, and the fletyng Raine bedeweth the Winter; this attempraunce nourisheth, and bryngeth forthe all thynges, that bereth life in this worlde, and the ilke same attempraunce ravishyng, hideth, benimeth, and drencheth under the laste deth all thynges iborne.

Emong these thinges, sitteth the high maker, Kyng and Lorde, wele and beginnyng, Lawe and wile Judge, to doen equite, and governeth and enclineth the bridels of thynges: And tho thinges that he sterreth, to gone by movyng, he withdraweth and arresteth, and affirmeth the movable or wanderyng thinges. For if that he ne called not ayen the right goyng of thynges, and if that he ne constrained 'hem not este sones, into roundenesse enclined, the thynges that ben now continued by stable ordinaunce, thei shuld departen from ther wele, that is to saine, from ther beginnyng, and fallen, that is to saine, tournen into nought. This is the common love to all thynges, and all thynges asken to ben holden by the fine of gode, for elles ne mighten thei not fasten, if thei ne come not estones ayen by love, returned to the cause, that hath yeven 'hem beyng, that is to saine, God.

Prosa

Prosa septima.

Jamne igitur vides quid hæc omnia, quæ diximus, consequatur? Quidnam? inquam. Omnem, inquit, &c.

SEest thou not than, what thyng followeth all the thynges that I have saied. Bo. What thyng (qð I). Phi. Certes (qð she) all utterlie, that all fortune is gode. Bo. And how maie that be (qð I). Phi. Now understande (qð she). So as all fortune, whether so it be joyfull fortune, or aspre fortune, is yeven either bicause of guerdonyng, or elles of exercysing of gode folkes, or els bicause to punyssh, or els chastysen shrewes: then is al fortune gode, the which fortune is certain, that it be either rightfull, or els profitable.

Bo. Forsothe this is a full verie reson (qð I) and if I consider the purveiance and the destinie that thou taughtest me a litle here befor, this sentence is susteyned by stedfast reson. But if it like unto The, let us nombren hem emonges the ilke thynges, of whiche thou saiest a litle here befor, that thei ne wer not able to ben wened to the peple. Phi. Why so? (qð she). Bo. For that the common word of men (qð I) misuseth this maner speche of fortune, and saie ofte tymes, that the fortune of some wight is wicked. Phi. Wylte thou then (qð she) that I approche a litle to the wordes of the peple, so that it seme not to hem, that I be overmoche departed, as fro the usage of mankinde. Bo. As thou wilt (qð I). Phi. Wenest thou not (qð she) that all thyng that profiteth is gode? Bo. Yes (qð I). Phi. Certes all thyng that exerciseth or corrigeth, it profiteth. Bo. I confesse well (qð I). Phi. Then is it gode (qð she). Bo. Why not (qð I). Phi. But this is the fortune (qð she) of hem that either be putte in vertue, and battailen againste aspre thynges, or elles of hem that declinen fro vices, and taken the waie of vertue. Bo. This ne maie I not denie (qð I). Phi. But what saiest thou of the merie fortune, that is yeven to gode peple in guerdon, demeth ofte the peple that it be wicked?

Bo. Naie for soth (qð I), but thei demen as it is sothe, that it is right gode.

Phi. What saiest thou of the other fortune (qð she) that although that it be aspre, and restraineth the shrewes by rightfull turment, weneth aught the peple that it be gode?

Bo. Naie (qð I) but the peple demeth that it is moste wretched of all thynges, that maie be thought.

Phi. Ware now, and loke well (qð she) lest we in followyng the opinion of the peple have confessed and concluded thing, whiche that is unable to ben wened to the peple. Bo. What is that (qð I)?

Phi. Certes (qð she) it followeth or cometh of thynges that ben graunted, that all fortune whatsoever it be, of hem that ben either in possession of vertue, or in th' encrease of vertue, or els in the purchasyng of vertue, that thilke fortune is gode, and that all fortune is right wicked, to hem that dwellen in shreudnesse, as who saith, and thus weneth not the peple.

Bo. That is sothe (qð I). Albeit so that no man dare confesse it, ne knowe it. Phi. Why so? (qð she). For right as the strong man ne semeth not to abashen or disdainen, as oft tyme as he hereth the noise of the battail: ne also it semeth not to the wiseman to beren it greuously, as oft as he is ledde into strief of fortune. For bothe to that one man, and eke to that other, the ilke difficultie is the matter, to that one man of encrease of his glorious renome, and to that other man, to conserve his sapience, that is to saie, to the asprenesse of his estate, for therefore is it called vertue, for that it susteineth and enforceth by his strengthes, so that it n'is not overcomen by adversities. Ne certes, thou that art putte in encrease, or in the height of vertue, ne haste not comen to fleten with delices, and for to walken in bodily lust. Thou slowest or plantest a full eigre bataille in thy courage, ayenst every fortune: for that the sorowfull fortune confounde The not, ne that the merie fortune ne corruppe The not, occupie the mene by stedfast strengthes. For all that ever is under the mene, or all that overpasseth the mene, dispiseth welesfulnes, as who saith, it is vicious, and ne hath no mede of his travaile, for it is set in your hand, as who saith, it lieth in your power, what fortune you is leveste, that is to saie, gode or ivell, for all fortune that semeth sharpe or aspre, if it ne exercise not the gode folke, ne chastise the wicked folke, it punyssheth.

Metrum septimum.

*Bella bis quinis operatus annis
Ultor Atrides, Phrygiæ ruinis, &c.*

THE wreker Atrides, that is to sain Agamemnon, that wrought and continued the batailles by x. yere recovered and purged in wreking by the distruction of Troie, the losse chambers of Mariage in his brother, that is to saie, that Agamemnon wan ayen Helene, that was Menelaus wife, his brother. In the mene while that thilke Agamemnon desired to yeven sailes to the Grekes navie, and brought ayen the windes by blode: He unclothed hym of pite of Father, and the sorie priest yeveth in sacrificyng, the wretched cuttyng of the throte of the doughter, that is to saie, that Agamemnon let cut the throte of his doughter by the priest, to maken aliaunce with his Goddes, and for to have wind, with whiche he might wenden to Troie. Ithacus, that is to saie Ulysses bewept his felowes ylorne, the whiche felowes the feirs Polyphemus, liggyng in his grete cave, had fretten and dreinte in his emptie wombe: But nathelless Polyphemus wode for his blind visage yeld to Ulysses joy, by his sorowfull teres, that is to saie, that Ulysses smote out the eye of Polyphemus, that stode in the forehed, for whiche Ulysses had joye, when he sawe Polyphemus weping and blind. Hercules is celebrable for his hard travaile, he daunted the proude Centaurus, halfe horse, halfe man, and biraft the dispoiling fro the cruell Lion, that is to saie, he slough the Lion, and birafted him his skin. He smote the birdes that hight Arpies, with certaine arowes. He ravished Apples fro the waking dragon: and his hande was the more hevie for the golden metall. He drough Cerberus the hound of hel, by the triple chaines. He overcomer, as it is saied, hath put an unmeke lord fodder to his cruell horse; that is to saie, Hercules slough Diomedes, and made his horse to fretten him: and he Hercules slough Hydra the serpente, and brente the venim. And Achelous the flode defouled in his forchedde dreint his shamefast visage in his stroudes, that is to saie, that Achelous could transfigure himself into divers likenes, and as he faught with Hercules, at last he tourned hym into a Bull, and Hercules brake one of his hornes: and he for shame hid hym in his River. And over that, he Hercules caste adoune Anthæus the Giaunt, in the strondes of Libye. And Cacus appeised the wrathes of Evander, that is to saie, that Hercules slough the monster Cacus and apeised with that deth the wrath of Evander. And the bristled Bore Bore marked with vomes the shulders of Hercules, the whiche shulders the hie circle of heven should thrust: And the last of his labors was, that he susteined the heven upon his neck unbowed, and he deserved estiones the heven to be the last ende of travaile. Goerh nowe then ye strong men, there as the grete ensample ledeth you. O nice menne, why make ye your backes, as who saith: o ye slowe and delicate men, why se ye adversities, and ne fight not ayenst hem by vertue, to winnen the mede of heven: for the erthe overcomen yeveth the sterres, that is to sain, that when that yerthly lust is overcomen, a man is makid worthy to the heven.

Here endeth the fowerth Boke.

Here foloweth the fifthe Boke.

Prosa prima.

Dixerat, orationisque cursum ad alia quædam tractanda atque expedienda vertebat.
B. Tum ego, recta quidem, inquam, &c.

SHE had saied, and turned the course of her reson to some other thynges, to be treted and to be sped. Bo. Then saied I, certes rightful is thine amonesting, and full digne by auctorite. But that thou saidest whilom, that the question of the Divine purveiance is enlaced with many other questions, I understande well and prove it, by the same thing. But I aske, if that thou wenest, that hap be any thyng, in any waies, and if thou wenest, that happe be any thyng, what is it? Phi. Then (qð she) I haste me to yelden and assoilen to the debte of my beheft, and to shewen and open the waie, by which waie thou maiest come ayen to thy countre: but albeit so that the thynges, whiche that thou askest, ben right profitable to knowe, yet ben thei divers somwhat fro the pathe of my purpose, and it is to doubte, that thou ne be makid werie by misse waies, so that thou ne maiest not suffice to mesure the right waie.

Bo. Ne doubt The thereof nothyng (qð I). For to knowen thilke thynges togiðer, in the whiche thynges I delite me gretlie, that shall ben to me in stede of rest, sith it n'is not to doubten of the thynges folowing, when every thyng of thy disputation shall haven ben stedfast to me by undoubtous faithe.

Phi. Then (saied she) that maner woll I doen to The, and beganne to speken right thus. Certes (qð she) if any wight definishe hap in this maner, that is to saine, that hap is betidyng ibrought forthe by solishe moving, and by no knitting of causes, I confirme that hap n'is right naught in no wise, and I deme all utterlie, that happe n'is, ne dwelleth but a voyce, as who saith, but an idell worde, without any signification of thyng, committed to that voyce. For what place might ben leste, or dwellynge in folie, and to disordenaunce, sith that GOD ledeth and constraineth all thynges by order? for this sentence is very sothe, that nothyng hath his beyng of naughte, to the whiche sentence, none of these old folke ne withsaied never, al be it so, that thei ne understanden it not by GOD, Prince and beginner of workyng, but thei casten, as a maner foundement of subiecte materiall, that is to saine, of the nature of al reson. And if that any thyng is waxen or comen of no causes, then shall it seme, that thilke thyng is comen or waxen of naught. But if this ne maie not be doen, then is it not possible that hap be any soche thyng, as I have definishe a little here before. Bo. Howe shall it then be (qð I); n'is there then nothyng, that by right maie ben cleped either hap, or els adventure, or fortune? Or is there ought, all be it so, that it is hid fro the peple, to whiche thyng these wordes ben convenable.

Phi. Myne Aristotle (qð she) in the boke of his Physike definiseth this thyng by short reson, and nigh to the sothe.

Bo. In whiche maner? (qð I).

Phi. As ofte (qð she) as men doen any thyng, for grace of any other thyng, and another thyng then thilke thyng, that men entenden to doen, betideth by some causes, it is icleped happe, right as a manne dalfe the yerth, bicause of tillyng of the field, and found there a gobet of golde bedolven, then wenen folke, that it is befall by fortunous betidyng. But forsothe it n'is not of naught, for it hath his proper causes, of which causes the cours unforeseen and unware semeth to have makid hap. For if the tiller of the fiede ne dolve not in the yerth, and if the hider of the golde ne had hid the golde in that place, the golde ne had not ben found. These ben then the causes of the abredgyng of fortuit hap, the whiche abredgyng of fortuit hap cometh of causes of encountring, and flowyng togither to hemself, and not by th' entencion of the doer. For neither the hider of the golde, ne the delver of the field, ne understanden not, that the golde should have ben founde. But as I saied, it betid and ran togither, that he dalfe there as the other had hid the golde. Now maie I thus definishe hap. Happe is an unware betiding of causes, assembled in thynges, that ben doen for some other thyng. But thilke order procedyng, by an uneschuable betidyng togither, whiche that discendeth from the well of purveiance, that ordeineth al thynges in ther places, and in ther times maketh that the causes rennen and assemblen togither.

Metrum primum.

*Rupis Achæmenia scopulis ubi versa sequentum
Pectoribus figit spicula, &c.*

Tigris and Euphrates, resolven and springen of o welle, in the craggies of the roche of the countre of Achemene, ther as the flying battailes fixen ther dartes, retournyng in the brestes of hem that folowen hem. And sone after the same rivers, Tigris and Euphrates unjoynen and departen ther waters, and if thei comen togither, and ben assembled, and cleped together into o course, then moten thilke thynges fieten togiðer, whiche that the water of th' enterchaunging flode bringeth. The shippes and the stockes araced with the flode moten assemblen, and the waters imedled wrappeth or emplieth many fortunell happes or maners, the whiche wandryng happes nathelesse thilke declining lownesse of the yerth and the flowyng order of the slidying water governeth. Right so fortune that semeth as it suffreth with slaked or ungoverned bridles, it suffreth bridles, that is to saine, to ben governed, and passeth by thilke lawe, that is to saine, by the divine ordenaunce.

Prosa

Prosa secunda.

Animadverto, inquam, idque uti tu dicis, ita esse consentio. Sed in hac, &c.

THis understande I wel (qð I) and I accorde me that it is right as thou saiest. But I aske if there be any libertie of frewill, in this order of causes, that cleven thus together in 'hemself, or els I would weten if that the destinall cheine constraineth the movyng of the courages of men.

Phi. Yes (qð she) there is libertie of frewill, ne there ne was never no nature of reson, that it ne had libertie or frewill. For every thing that maie naturally usen reson it hath dome, by whiche it discerneth and demeth every thing. Then knoweth it by it self thynges that ben to flien, and thynges that ben to desiren, and the ilke thyng that any wight demeth to ben desired, that asketh or desireth he, and flieth thilke thyng, that he troweth be to flien. Wherefore in all thynges that reson is, in hym also is libertie of willyng and of n'illyng, but I ne ordaine not, as who saith, I ne graunt not, that this libertie, be evenlike in al thynges. For why? in the Soveraines divine substaunces, that is to sain, in spirites, judgement is more clere and will not corruppe, and mightie redy to speden thynges that ben desired. But the soules of men moten nedes ben more fre, when thei loken 'hem in the speculacion, or lokyng of the divine thought, and lasse fre when thei sliden into the bodies, and yet lasse fre when thei ben gathered together, and comprehended in yerthly members, but the laste servage is, when that thei ben yeven to vices, and have ifall from the possession of ther proper reson. For after that thei have caste awaie ther eyen fro the light of the sveraine sothefastnesse, to lowe thynges and darke, anon thei darken by the cloude of ignorance, and be troubled by felonous talentes, to the whiche talentes when thei approchen and assenten, thei hepen and encrefen the servage, whiche thei have joyned to 'hem self. And in this maner thei ben caitives fro ther proper libertie, the whiche thing nathelesse the lokyng of the divine purveiaunce seeth, that al thynges beholdeth and seeth fro eterne, and ordeineth 'hem everiche in ther merites, as thei ben predestinate, and it is said in Greke, that all thynges he seeth, and al thynges he hereth.

Metrum secundum.

*Puro clarum lumine Phæbum
Melliflui canit oris Homerus, &c.*

HOmer with the Honie mouth, that is to saine, Homer with the swete ditees singeth, that the Sonne is clere by pure light. Nathelesse yet ne maie it not by the infirme light of his bemes, breken or perpen the inwarde entrailes of the yerth, or els of the Se. So ne seeth not God, maker of the grete worlde; to hym that loketh all thynges from an high, ne understandeth nothyng by heviness of the yerth, ne the night ne withstandeth not to hym by the black cloudes, thilke God seeth in o stroke of thought all thynges that ben, weren, or shull come: and thilke GOD, for he loketh and seeth all thynges alone, thou maist saine that he is the verie sonne.

Prosa tertia.

Tum ego, en! inquam, difficiliore rursus ambiguitate confundor, &c.

THen said I thus, now am I confounded by a more hard doubt then I was. Phi. What doubte is that? (qð she) for certes, I conjeete now by soch thyngs, thou art troubled. Bo. It semeth (qð I) to repugnen and to contrarie gretlie, that God knoweth beforne all thynges, and that there is any fredome or libertie, for if so be that God loketh all thynges beforne, ne God ne maie not ben deceived in no maner. Then mote it nedes be, that all thynges the whiche that the purveiaunce of God hath seen beforne to come, for which if that GOD knoweth toforne, not onely the werkes of men, but also ther counsailes and ther willes, then ne shall there be no libertie of arbitre, ne certes there ne maie be none other dede, ne no wille, but the ilke whiche that the divine purveiaunce (that ne may not ben deceived) hath feled beforne, for if that thei mighten writhen awaie, in other maner, then thei ben purveied, then ne should there be no stedfast prescience of thyng to comen, but rather an uncertaine opinion, the whiche thyng to trowen of God, I deme it felonie and unlesfull. Ne I ne prove not the ilke same reson, as who saith, I ne alowe not, or I ne praise not thilke same reson, by whiche that some men wenen, that thei mowen assoilen, and unknitten the knot of this question. For certes thei saine, that thyng n'is not to comen, for that the purveiaunce of GOD hath seen beforne that it is to comen, but rather the contrarie, and that is this, that for that the thyng is to comen, that therefore ne maie it not ben hid fro the purveiaunce of God. And in this maner, this necessitie slideth ayen into the contrarie partie, ne it ne behoveth not nedes, that thynges betiden that ben ipurveied, but it behoveth nedes, that thynges that ben to comen ben ipurveied, but as it wer itravailed, as who saith, that thilke answeere procedeth right as though menne travaileden or weren busie to enquiren, the whiche thyng is cause of the which thynges. As whether the prescience is cause of the necessitie of thynges to comen, or els that the necessitie of thynges to comen is cause of the purveiaunce. But I ne enforce me not now to shewen it, that the betidyng of thynges iwiste beforne is necessarie, how so or in what maner, that the order of causes hath it self, although that it ne seme not, that the prescience bryng in necessitie of betidyng to thynges to comen. For certes, if that any wight sitteth, it behoveth by necessitie, that the opinion be soth of hym that conjeeteth that he sitteth, and ayenwarde also is it of the contrarie; for if the opinion be sothe of any wight, for that he sitteth, it behoveth by necessitie that he sitte. Then is here necessitie in that one, and in that other: for in that one is necessitie of sittyng, and certes in that other is necessitie of soth. But therfore ne sitteth not a wight, for that the opinion of the sittyng is sothe, but the opinion is rather sothe, for that a wight sitteth beforne. And thus although that the cause of the sothe cometh of that other side, as who saith, that although the cause of sothe cometh of the sitting, and not of the true opinion, algates yet is there a common necessitie, in that one, and in that other. Thus semeth it, that I maie make semblable skilles, of the purveiaunce of God, and of thynges to comen. For although that for that thynges ben to comen, therefore

fore ben thei purveied, and not certes, for thei ben purveied, therefore ne betide thei not, nathelless it behoveth by necessitie, that either the thynges to comen ben ipurveied of God, or els that the thynges, that ben purveied of God, betiden. And this thyng onelie suffiseth inough, to destroi the freedom of our arbitre, that is to sain, of our frewill. But certes, nowe sheweth it well howe farre fro the sothe, and how up so doune is this thing, that we seen that the betidying of temporall thynges is cause of the eterne prescience. But for to wenen that God purveyeth the thynges to comen, for thei ben to comen, what other thyng is it but for to wene, that thilke thynges that betide whilom, ben causes of thilke soverain purveiaunce, that is in God. And hereto adde I this thinge, that right as when that I wote that a thyng is, it behoveth by necessitie, that thilk self thing be, and eke when I have knowen that any thyng shall betiden, so behoveth it by necessitie, that thilke same thyng betide. So followeth it then, that the betidying of the thynges iwisht before, ne maie not be eschewed, and at the laste, if that any wight wene a thyng to ben otherwise then it is, it n'is not onely unscience, but it is decevable opinion, full divers and farre fro the sothe of science. Wherefore, if any thyng be so to comen, that the betidying of it ne be not certaine, ne necessarie, who maie weten before, that thilke thing is to comen. For right as science ne maie not be medled with falsenesse, as who saith, that if I wote a thing, it ne maie not be false that I ne wote it, right of thilke thyng, that is conceived by science, ne maie not be none otherwise then as it is conceived, for that is the cause why that science wanteth lesing, as who saith, why that weting ne receiveth not lesing of that it wote, for it behoveth by necessitie, that every thyng be right, as science comprehendeth it to be. What shall I then sain, in whiche maner knoweth God, before all the thynges to comen, if thei ne be not certain? for if that he deme, that thei ben to comen uneschuably, and so maie be that it is possible, that thei ne shullen not comen, God is deceived, but not onely to trowen, that God is deceived, but for to speke it with mouthe, it is a felonous synne. But if that God wote, that righte so as thynges ben to comen, so shoulde thei comen, so that he mote egally, as who saith indifferently, that thyngs maie be doen, or els not idoen, what is thilke prescience, that ne comprehendeth no certaine thyng ne stable, or els what difference is there bitwene the prescience of thilke jape, worthy divinyng of Tiresie Devinour, that saied, all that I saie (quod he) either it shall be, or els it shall not be, or els how moche is worthe the Divine prescience, more then the opinion of mankinde, if so be that it demeth the thynges uncertaine, as men doen, of the whiche domes of men the betidying n'is not certaine? But if so be, that none uncertain thynges ne maie ben in him, that is right certaine well of all thynges, then is the betidying certaine of thilke thynges, whiche that he hath wiste beforen firmly to comen, for whiche it followeth, that the fredome of the counsailes, and of the werkes of mankind n'is none, sith that the thought of God, that seeth all thynges, without error of falsnesse, bindeth and constraineth hem to a betidying by necessitie. And if this thyng be ones igraunted and received, this is to saine, that there n'is no frewill, then sheweth it well, how grete destruction, and how grete damages there folowen of thynges of mankind, for in idell ben there then purposed, and behighte medes to gode folke, and paines to badde folke, sith that no movyng of fre courage voluntarie ne hath not deserved hem, that is to saine, neither mede ne paine. And it should seme then, that thilke thing is alderworst, which that is now demed for aldermoste just, and moste rightful. That is to sain, that shrewes ben punished, or elles that gode folke be iguerdoned, the whiche folkes sene that ther proper wille ne sente hem to that one, ne to that other, that is to sain, neither to gode ne harme, but constraineth hem certain necessitie of thynges to comen, then ne shullen there never ben, ne never weren vice ne vertue, but it shullen rather be confusion of all desertes, medled without discrecion. And yet ther foloweth another inconvenience, of the whiche there ne maie be thought no more felonous, ne more wicked, and that is thus, that so as the order of thynges is idel, and cometh of the purveiaunce of God, ne that nothyng n'is lesfull to the counsailes of mankinde, as who saith, that men have no power to doen nothyng, ne will nothyng, then foloweth it that our vices ben referred to the maker of al gode, as who saith then foloweth it, that God ought to have the blame of our vices, sith he constraineth us by necessitie to doen vices; then n'is there no reson to hopen in God, ne to praien to God, for what should any wight hopen to God, or why should he praien to GOD, sith that the ordinance of destinie, whiche that ne maie not ben enclined, knitteth and streineth al thynges, that men maie desiren? Then should ther be doen awaie thilke onely aliaunce, betwen God and man, that is to saien, to hopen and to praien. But by the price of rightwisnesse, and of very mekenesse, we deserven the guerdon of Divine grace, whiche that is inestimable, that is to say, that is so grete, that it ne maie not ben full praised, and this is onely the maner, that is to saie, hope and praier. For whiche it semeth that men woll speke with God, and by reson of supplication ben conjoined to thilke clerenes, that n'is not approached no rather, or that men seken it and impetren it. And if men ne wene not the hope ne praier ne have no strengthes, by the necessitie of things to comen received, what thing is there then, by whiche we mowen ben conjoined, and cleven to thilke soverain prince of thynges? For whiche it behoveth by necessitie, that the linage of mankinde, as thou song a little here beforen, be departed and unjoined from his wele, and failen of his beginnyng, that is to saine God.

Metrum tertium.

*Quenam discors fœdera rerum
Causa resolvit? Quis tanta Deus, &c.*

WHat discordable cause hath to rent, and unjoined the bindyng or the aliaunce of thynges, that is to sain, the conjuncions of God, and of man? Whiche God hath established so grete battaile, betwene these two sothfaste, or verie thynges, that is to sain, betwene the purveiaunce of God, and frewill, that ben singuler, and divided, ne that thei ne wollen not be medled, ne coupled togider? But there n'is no discorde to the very thynges, but thei cleven alwaie certain to hem self. But the thought of man confounded and overthrowen, by the darke members of the body, ne maie not by fire of his darked lokyng, that is to saine, by the vigour of his insight, while the soule is in the bodie, knowen the thyn subtell knittynge of thynges. But wherefore eschaufeth it so by so grete love, to finden thilke notes of soth icovered, that is to saine, wherefore eschaufeth the thought of man, by so grete desire, to knowe thilke notificacions, that ben ihid under the covertures of sothe! Wote it ought thilke thynges, that that it anguifhous desireth to knowe? As who faie-eth naie. For no man ne travaileth for to weten thynges that he wote. And therefore the texte faieth thus.

But who travaileth to weten thynges yknowe?
And if that he ne knoweth 'hem not, what feke-thilke blinde thought? What is he that desireth any thynges, of whiche he wote right naught? As who faith, who fo desireth any thynges, nedes fomwhat
he knoweth of it, or els he ne could not desiren it.
Or who maie followe thynges, that ne ben not i-wiste, and though that he feke the thynges, where shall he finde 'hem? What wight that is all uncon-nyng and ignoraunt, maie knowe that for me, that is ifounde.

But when the soule beholdeth, and seeth the high thought, that is to faine God, then knoweth it together the somme and singularities, that is to fain, the principles, and everiche of 'hem by hymself. But now while the soule is hid in the cloude, and in the darknesse of the membres of the bodie, it ne hath not al foryeten it self, but it withholdeth the somme of thynges, and lefeth the singularities. Than who-fo that feke the sothenesse, he n'is in neither n'other habite, for he wote not all, ne he ne hath not all foryeten, but yet hym remembreth the somme of thynges, that he withholdeth, and asketh counsaile, and retreth depeliche thynges ifeen beforne, that is to faine, the grete somme in his mind, so that he mow adden the partes, that he hath foryetten, to thilke parties, that he hath withholden.

Prosa quarta.

Tum illa, vetus, inquit, hæc est de Providentia querela, à M. Tullio, &c.

THen faied she, this is (qð she) the olde question of the purveiaunce of GOD. And Marcus Tullius, when he divided the Divinacions, that is to faine, in his bokes that he wrote of divinacions, he moved gretlie this question, and thou thy self haste ifought it moche, and utterlie and long, but yet ne hath it not ben determined, ne isped fermelie and diligentlie of any of you; and the cause of this darknesse, and of this difficultie is, for that the moving of the reson of mankinde ne maie not moven to, that is to faine, applien or joynen to the simpli-citie of the divine prescience, the which simplicitie of the divine prescience, if that men mighten think it in any maner, that is to faine, that if men mighten thinke, and comprehend the thynges, that God seeth himself, then there dwelled utterly no doubt, the whiche reson and cause of difficulties, I shall af-
saie at last to shewe and to speden, when I have firste ispeded, and answered to thy resons, by whiche thou art moved, for I aske why thou weneft, that thilke resons of 'hem that assoilen this question, ne be not spedfull inough ne sufficient, the whiche solu-cion or the which reson, for that it demeth, that the prescience is not of necessitie of thynges to come, as who faith, any other waie then thus, but that the ilke thynges, that the prescience wote beforne ne maie not unbetiden, that is to faine, that thei moten betide? But then, if that prescience ne putteth none necessitie to thynges to comen, as thou thy self hast confessed it, and bekowe a little here beforne, what cause, or what is it, as who faith, there maie no cause be, by whiche that the endes voluntarie of thynges, mighten be constrained to certaine betidynges. For by grace of posicion, so that thou maie

the better understand this that foloweth, I suppose that there ne be no prescience: then aske I (qð she) in as moche as apertaineth to that, shoulde then thynges that comen of frewill, be constrained to betiding by necessitie? Bo. Naie (qð I). Phi. Then ayenwarde (qð she) I suppose that there be prescience, but that it ne putteth no necessitie to thynges;
than trowe I that thilke same fredome of will shall dwellen all whole and absolute, and unbounden.
But thou wilt faine, that albeit so that prescience n'is not cause of the necessitie of betiding to thynges to comen, algates yet it is a signe, that the thynges ben to betiden by necessitie. By this maner then, although that prescience had never be, yet algates or at lest waie, it is certain thyng, that endes of beti-dinges of thynges to comen shoulde be necessarie.
For every thing sheweth and signifieth onely, what the thing is, but it ne maketh not the thing that it signifieth. For which it behoveth, first to shew that nothing ne betideth, that it ne betideth by necessitie: so that it maie appere, that the prescience is signe of necessitie: or els if there n'ere no necessitie, certes thilke prescience ne might not be signe of thyng that n'is not. But certes, it is now certain, that the prove of this ifultened by stedfast reson, ne shall not ben ladde, ne proved by signes ne by argumentes, taken fro without, but by causes convenable and necessarie. But thou maieft faine, how maie it be that the things ne betiden not, that ben purveied to comen?
But certes, right as we trowen that the thynges,
whiche that the purveiaunce wote beforne to comen, ne be not to betiden. But that ne shold we not de-men, but rather although thei shall betiden, yet ne have thei no necessitie of ther kinde to betiden: and this maieft thou lightly apperceven, by this that I shall fain. For we seen many thynges, when thei ben beforne our eyne, right as men seen the Carter worchyng in the tournyng, and in the attemptyng or adressing of his cartes or chariottes, and by this manner, as who faieft, maieft thou understande of all other werkemene. Is there then any necessitie, as who faieft, in our lokyng, that constraineth or compelleth any of thilke thynges to ben doen so? Bo.
Naie (qð I) for in idel and in vaine were all the effecte of crafte, if that all thynges weren moved by constraining of our eyen, or of our sight. Phi. The thynges then (qð she) that when that men doen
'hem, ne have no necessitie that men doen 'hem, eke tho same thynges first or thei be doen, thei ben to comen without necessitie: for why? ther ben some thynges to betiden, of whiche the endes and the betidynges of 'hem ben absolute and quite of all ne-cessitie. For certes, I ne trowe not that any manne would faine this, that the thynges that menne doen
now, that thei ne were to betiden first, er thei wer doen. And thilke same thynges, although men hadden wiste 'hem beforne, yet thei have fre betidynges.
For right as science of thynges present ne bryngeth
in no necessitie to thynges that menne doen, right so to the prescience of thynges to comen ne bringeth in none necessitie, to thynges to betiden. But thou maieft fain, that of thilk same it is doubted, as whether that of thilke thynges, that ne have non issues and betidynges necessities, if thereof maie ben any prescience. For certes, thei semen to discorden, for thou weneft, that if that thynges ben seen before,
that necessitie followeth 'hem, and if necessitie faileth
'hem, thei ne might not ben wiste before, and that nothyng maie be comprehended by science, but certaine; and if tho thynges ne have no certain betidynges, be purveighed as certain, it should be darke-nesse of opinion, not sothfastnesse of science. And thou weneft that it be divers fro the holinesse of science, that any man should deme a thyng to be otherwise

therwise then it is it self, and the cause of this error is, that of al the thynges, that every wight hath knowe, thei wene that tho thynges ben knowe onely by the strengthe, and by the nature of the thynges, that ben wiste or knowe, and it is all the contrarie: for all that ever is knowe, it is rather comprehended and knowe, not after his strength and his nature, but after the facultie, that is to saie, the power and the nature of 'hem that knowen. And that this thing is sothe sheweth by a short ensample the roundnesse of a bodie, otherwise the sight of the eye knoweth it, and otherwise the touchyng. The lokyng, by castyng of his bemes, waiteth and seeth from a farre, all the bodie together, without movyng of it self, but the touchyng cleaveth to the rounde bodie, and moveth about the environnyng, and comprehendeth the parties by roundenesse, and the man hymself otherwise beholdeth hym, and otherwaies imaginacion, and otherwise reson, and otherwise intelligence: For the witte comprehendeth withoutforth the figure of the bodie of man, that is unestablished in the matter subject. But the imaginacion comprehendeth onelie the figure without the matter. Reson surmounteth imaginacion, and comprehendeth by universall lokyng the common species; but the eye of intelligence is higher, for it surmounteth the environnyng of the universitie, and loketh over by pure subtiltie of thought the ilke same simple forme of man, that is perdurable in the divine thought; in whiche this ought gretlie to be considered, that the hiest strength for to comprehend thynges embraseth and containeth the lower strength, but the lower strength ne ariseth not in no maner to the higher strength. For witte ne maie comprehendeth nothyng out of matter, ne the imaginacion ne loketh not the universalle species, ne reson ne taketh not the simple forme, so as intelligence taketh it. But intelligence that loketh al aboven, when it hath comprehended the forme, it knoweth and demeth all the thynges, that ben under the forme, but she knoweth 'hem in thilke maner in whiche it comprehendeth thilke same simple forme, that ne maie never be knowen of none of that other, that is to saie, to none of the thre foresaied strengthes of the soule, for it knoweth the universitie of reson, and the figure of imaginacion, and the sensible materiall conceived by wit, ne it ne useth not ne of reson, ne of imaginacion, ne of witte withoutforthe; but it beholdeth all thynges, so as I shall saie, by a stroke of thought fermely, without discours of collacion. Certes, reson when it loketh any thyng universall, it ne useth not of imaginacion ne witte, and algates yet it comprehendeth the thynges imaginable, and sensible, for reson is she that definiseth the universalle of her concepte, right thus: Man is a resonable twofored best: and how so that this knowyng is universall, yet n'is there no wight, that ne wote well, that a man is a thyng imaginable and sensible, and this same considereth well reson, but that n'is not by imaginacion, nor by witte, but it loketh it by resonable concepcion. Also imaginacion, albeit so, that it taketh of witte the beginnyng, to seen and formen the figures, algates although that witt ne were not presente, yet it environneth and comprehendeth all thynges sensible, not by reson sensible of demyng, but by reson imaginative. Seest thou not then, that all the thynges in knowyng usen more of ther facultie, or of ther power, then thei doen of the facultie, or of power of thynges that ben to knowen, ne that is no wronge, for so as every judgements, is that dede or doying of hym, that demeth, it behoveth that every wight performe his werke, and his entencion, not of foraine power, but of his proper power.

Metrum quartum.

*Quondam Porticus attulit
Obscuros nimium senes, &c.*

THE porche, that is to saie, a gate of the toun of Athenes, there as Philosophers hadden congregacion to dispute, thilk porche brought sometye olde men, full darke in ther sentences, that is to saie Philosophers, that highten Stoiciens, that wende that Images and sensibilities, that is to saie, sensible imaginacions, or els imaginacions of sensible thynges, were emprinted into soules, fro bodies withoutforthe; as who saith, thilke Stoiciens wenden that the soule had be naked of hymself, as a mirroure, or clene perchemine, so that all figures musten first comen fro thynges fro without into soules, and ben emprinted into soules, right as we ben wonte, sometye by a swifte pointell, to fixen letters emprinted in the smothnesse, or in the plainesse of the table of waxe, or in the parchemine, that hath no figure ne note in it. Glosa. But now argueth Boece against that opinion, and saith thus. But if the thrivyng soule ne unpliteth nothyng, that is to saie, ne doeth thyng by his proper moving, but suffreth and lieth subject to the figures, and to the notes of bodies withoutforthe, and yeldeth Images idell, evill and vaine, in the maner of a mirroure, whence thrive then, or whence cometh the ilke knowyng in our soule, that discerneth and beholdeth all thynges, and whence is the ilke strengthe, that beholdeth the singuler thynges, or els whence is the strengthe, that divideth thynges iknowe, and thilke strength that gathereth together thynges divided, and strength that choseth the enterchaunged waie: for sometye it heveth the hedde, that is to saie, that it heveth up the entencion to right high thynges, and sometye it discendeth into right lowe thynges, and when it retourneth into hymself, it reproveth and destroyeth the false thynges, by the true thynges.

Certes, this strength is cause more efficient, and moche more mightie, to seen and to knowen thynges, then thilke cause that suffreth and receveth the notes and figures, impressed in maner of matter. Algates the passion, that is to saie, the sufferance, or the witte in the quicke bodie, goeth before exitynge, and movyng the strengthes of the thought, right so as when that clerenesse smiteth the eyen, and moveth 'hem to seen, or right so as voyce or soun hurleth to the eres, and commoveth 'hem to herken, then is the strengthe of the thought moved and excited, clepeth forth to semblable movynges the species that it halte within it self, and addeth the species of the notes to thynges withoutforthe, and medleth the Images of thynges withoutforthe to thynges hid within hymself.

Prosa quinta.

Quod si, in corporibus sentiendis, quamvis afficiant instrumenta sensuum, &c.

BUT what is that in bodies to be feled, that is to saie, in the taking, and in the knowyng of bodily thynges? And albeit so that the qualities of bodies, that be objecte fro withoutforthe, moven and entalenten the instrumentes of the wittes, and all be it so, that the passion of the bodie, that is to saie, the witte, or the suffraunce, goeth before the strength, or the worchyng courage, the whiche passion or suffraunce clepeth forthe the dede of the thought in it self, and moveth and exciteth in this mene while the formes that resten withinforthe, and insensible bodies, as I have said, our courages n'is not taught or emprinted by passion to knowe these thynges, but demeth and knoweth of his owne strength the passion or suffraunce subiecte to the bodie: moche more then tho thynges ben absolute, and quicke fro all talentes, or affections of bodies, as God or his Angels, ne folowen not in discernyng thynges object fro withoutforthe, but thei accomplisshen and speden the dedes of ther thought. By this reson then, there comen many maner of knowynges, to diverse and to diffryng substaunces.

For the witte of the bodie, the whiche wit is naked, and dispoiled of all other knowing, thilke witte cometh to bestes, the whiche ne mowen not moven 'hemself here and there, as Oysters and Muskelles, and other soche Shelifshe of the Se, that cleven and ben nourished to rockes, but the imaginacion cometh of remuable bestes, that semen to have talente to flien, or to desiren any thyng: but reson is al onelie the linage of mankinde, right as intelligence is al onelie the Divine nature, of whiche it followeth, that the ilke knowyng is more worthe then is either, sens it knoweth by his proper nature, not onelie his subiecte, as who saith, it ne knoweth not al onelie, that appertaineth properlie to his knowyng, but it knoweth the subiectes of all other knowynges. But how shall it than be, if that witte and imaginacion striven ayen reson, and saie that of the ilke univerfall thyng, that reson weneth to seen, that it n'is right naught, for witte and imaginacion saie, that that is sensible or imaginable, it ne maie not ben univerfall.

Then is there either the judgement of reson sothe, ne that there n'is nothyng sensible, or els for that reson wote well, that many thynges ben subiect to wit, and to imaginacion, then is the conception of reson vaine and false, whiche that loketh and comprehendeth that that is sensible and singuler, as univerfall. And if that the reson would answer ayenst these two, that is to saie, to witte and imaginacion, and saie that sothly she her self that is to saie reson, loketh and comprehendeth by reson of universalite, both that that is sensible, and that that is imaginable, and thilke two, that is to saie, witte and imaginacion, ne mowen not stretchen 'hemself to the knowyng of universalite, for that the knowing of 'hem ne maie not exceden, ne surmounten the bodily figures; certes, of the knowyng of thynges men oughten rather yeven more credence to the more stedfast, and to the more perfite judgemente, in this maner strivyng; then we that have strengthe of reson, and of imaginacion, and of witte, that is to saie, by reson and by imaginacion, we would rather praise the cause of reson, as who saith, then the cause of witte, and of ymaginacion. Semblable thing is it, that the reson of mankinde ne weneth not, that the Divine intelligence beholdeth or knoweth thynges to come, but right as the reson of mankinde knoweth 'hem: For thou arguiste thus, that if that it ne seme not to men, that some thynges have certaine betidynges, thei ne maie not be wiste before certainlie to betiden, and then is there no prescience of thilke thynges, and if we trowe, that prescience be in these thynges, then is there nothyng, that betideth not by necessitie. But if we might have the judgemente of the divine thought, as we ben parteners of reson, right so as we have demed, that it behoveth by imaginacion and witte, and be-neth reson, right so would we demen, that it were rightfull thyng, that manne's reson ought to submitte it self to be beneth the divine thought, for whiche if we maie, as who saith, that if we maie, I counsaile, that we enhaunce us in the height of thilke soverain intelligence, for there shall reson well seen that, that it ne maie not beholde in it self, and certes, that is thus, in what maner the prescience of God seeth all thyngs and diffinissheth, although thei have no certain betidynges: ne this is none opinion, but rather the simplicite of the soverain science, that is not shet within no maner of boundes.

Metrum quintum.

*Quam variis terras animalia permeant figuris!
Namque alia extento sunt corpore, &c.*

THE bestes passen by the yerthes, by full divers figures, for some of 'hem have ther bodies straught, and crepen in the dust, and drawn after 'hem a trace, or a forough continued, that is to saie, as Neders and Snailles; and other bestes, by the wanderyng lightnesse of ther winges, beten the windes, and over swimmen the spaces of the long aire, by mozte flying.

And other bestes gladden 'hemself to diggen ther traces, or ther steppes in the yerthe, with ther goyng, or with ther fete, and to gon either by the grene fieldes, or els to waiken under the wodes. And all be it so that thou seest, that thei discorden by divers formes, algates ther faces enclined hevieth ther dulle wittes, onely the linage of manne heverth highest his hie hedde, and standeth light with his upright body, and beholdeth the yerthes under hym. And but if thou yerthlie manne waxeste evill out of thy wit, this figure amonesteth The that asketh the heaven with thy right visage, and hast areised thy forchedde, to beren up on high thy courage, so that thy thought ne be not heved, ne put lowe under fote, sith that thy body is so high areised.

Prosa sexta.

Quoniam igitur, uti paulò antè monstratum est, omne quod scitur, &c.

Therefore then, as I have shewed a little here before, that all thing that is wist, n'is not known by his nature proper, but by the nature of 'hem that comprehend it, let us loken now, in as moche as it is lesfull to us, as who saith, let us loken now as we maie, whiche that is the estate of the Divine substaunce, so that we maie well knowe eke what his science is. To common judgement of al creatures reasonables then is, that God is eterne: Let us consider then, what is eternite, for certes, that shall shewen us togidder, the divine nature, and the divine science. Eternite then is perfite possession, and all together of life interminable, and that sheweth the more clerelie, by the comparison or colacion of temporall thynges.

For all thyng that liveth in tyme, it is present, and procedeth fro preterities, into futures, that is to saie, from time passed, into time coming: ne there n'is nothing established in tyme, that maie embracen together all the space of this life, for certes, yet ne hath it not taken the tyme of to morowe, and it hath lost that of yesterdaie. And certes, in the life of this daie, ye ne liven no more, but right as in this movable, and transitorie moment. Then thilke thyng that suffereth temporall condicion, although that it never began to be, ne though it never cese to be (as Aristoteles demed of the world) and although the life of it be stretched with infinite of tyme, yet algates n'is it no soche thyng, as men might trowen by right that it is eterne. For although that it comprhende, and embrace the space of the life infinite, yet algates ne embraseth it not the space of the life all together, for it ne hath not the futures that be not yet: Ne it ne hath no lenger the preterities that ben done or passed. But thilke thing than, that hath and comprehendeth togidher all the plente of the life interminable, to whom there ne faileth nought of the future, and to whom there n'is nought of the preterite escaped or passed, thilke same is ywitnessed and proved by right to ben eterne. And it behoveth by necessite that thilke thing be alway presente to him selfe, and competent, as who faith, alway presente to himselfe, and so mighty, that all be right at his plesance, and that he have al present the infinite of the movable tyme. Wherefore some men trowen wrongfullye, that whan they heren that it semed to Plato, that this world had never beginninge of time, that it never shall have faylynge: they wene in thilke maner, that this worlde be makid eterne, wyth his maker, as who saythe, they wene that this worlde and God be makid togither eterne. And that is a wrongful wening, for other thing it is to be ladde by the life interminable, as Plato graunted to the worlde, and other thing it is to embrace together al the presence of the life that is interminable, which thing is clere and manifest to the dyvine thought. Ne it ne shulde not seme to us that God is elder than thinges that ben makid, by quantite of time, but rather by the prosperite of his simple nature. For this ylke infynyte movynges of temporal thynges foloweth thys presentary estate of thys lyfe immovable, and so as it ne maie not countrefeten ne faine it, ne be evenlike to it for the immobilitie, that is to say, that is in the eternite of God, it faileth and faileth into mowing fro the simplicitie of the presence of God, and disencreseth in the infinite quantite of future and preterite. And so as it may not have togydher all the plentie of the lyfe, algates yet for as moch as it cesech never for to ben in some maner, yet it semeth somdele to us, that it foloweth and ressembleth thilke thinge, that it ne may not attaine to ne fulfilen, and bindeth it selfe to some maner presence of thys lytel moment: the whiche presence of thys lytel and swifte moment for that it bereth a maner ymage of lykenesse of the ayedwelling of God, it graunteth to soche maner thinges, as it betideth to, that it semeth hem as these thynges have ben, and ben. And for that the presence of soche lytel moment ne may not dwell, therefore it ravished and toke th' infinite waie of time, that is to saye, by succession, and by this manere it is done, for that it shulde continue the life in goyng, of the whiche lyfe it ne might not embrace the plentie of dwelling. And forthy, if we wollen put worthy names to thinges, that folowen Plato, let us saye than sothelye, that God is eterne, and that the worlde is perpetuell. Than sithe every judgement knoweth and comprehendeth by his owne nature, thinges that ben subject unto hym, there is to God alwaies an eterne and a presentarie estate. And the scyence of hym that overpassech al temporal moment, dwelleth in simplicitie of his presence, and embraseth and consydereth all the infynite spaces of tymes preterities, and of tymes futures. And loketh in his simple knowing, al thynges of preterite, right as thei weren ydon presently right now.

5 K

life

If thou wolte than thynken and advise the prescience, by whiche it knoweth al thinges, thou ne shalt not demen it as prescience of thinges to comen, but thou shalt demen more rightfully that is science of presence or of instance that never ne faileth, for whiche it n'is not ycleped providence, but it shuld rather ben cleped purveiaunce, which is establiished full ferre fro right low thinges, and beholdeth from aserre al thinges, right as it were fro the hye hyght of thynges. Why askest thou than, or why disputest thou than that thilke thynges ben doen by necessite, whiche that ben yfene and yknownen by the divine sight, sythe that forsothe men ne maken nat thilke thynges necessary, whiche that they sene ben ydon in ther sight, for addeth thy beholding any necessite to thilke thinges whiche thou beholdest present? Bo. Naye (qđ I). Phi. Certes (qđ she) than, yf men mighten maken any digne comparison or collacion of the presence divine, and of the presence of mankind, right so as ye sene some thinges in this temporal presence, right so seeth God all thing by his eterne presence. Wherefore this divine prescience ne chaungeth not the nature of the propertie of thinges, but beholdeth soch thinges present to him warde, as they shuden betyden to you warde in tyme to comen. Ne it ne confoundeth not the judgement of thinges, but by one syght of his thought, he knoweth the thinges to comen, as wel necessary as not necessary. Right so whan ye sene together a man walke on the erthe, and the sonne arisen in the heven, al be it so that ye sene al togither that one and that other: yet nevertheles ye demen and discernen, that that one is voluntary, and that other is necessary: Right so than the divine lookinge, beholdinge al thinges under him, ne troubleth nat the qualite of thinges that ben certainly presente to him warde, but as to the condicion of tyme, forsothe they ben future, for whiche it foloweth that this n'ys none opinion, but rather a stedfaste knowing ystrengthened by sothenesse, that whan that God knoweth any thinge to be, he ne unwote nat that thilke thyng wanteth necessite to be, this is to faine, that whan that God knoweth any thyng to betide, he wote wel that it ne hath no necessite to betide. And yf thou seist here that thilke thing that God seeth to betide, it ne may nat unbetide, as who saythe it mote betyde, and thilke thinge that ne may nat unbetide, it mote betiden by necessite, and that thou streyn me to this name of the necessite, certes I will well confessen and bekowen a thyng of full sad trouthe, but uneth shall there anie wight mow sene it or come thereto, but if that he be beholder of the divine thought, for I wil answere The thus, that thilke thinge that is future when it is referred to the divine knowinge than it is necessary. But certes whan it is understanden in his owne kind, men sene it utterly fre and absolute fro all necessity. For certes there ben two maners of necessities, that one necessite is simple, as thus, that it behoveth by necessite that all men be mortall or dedlye. Another necessite is condicionell, as thus, yf thou wost that a man walketh, it behoveth by necessite that he walke, thilke thing than that any wight hath yknowe to be, it ne may nat ben none other wyse than he knoweth it to be. But this condicion ne draweth not with her thilke necessite simple, for certes this necessite condicionell, the propre nature of it ne maketh it nat, but the adjection of the condicion maketh it. For no necessite ne constraineth a man to gon, that goeth by his proper wil, al be it so, that whan he goth, that is necessary that he goth. Right on this same maner than, yf that the purveiaunce of God seeth any thinge present, than mote thilke thinge ben by necessity, although that it ne have no necessity of his owne nature. But certes the futures that be-tyden by fredom of arbytrie, God seeth 'hem al togither present. These thynges than if they ben referred to the divine sight, than ben they maked necessarie by the condicion of the divine knowinge. But certes, if thilke thynges ben considred by 'hemselfe, they ben absolute of necessite, and ne forletten not, ne cessen not of the libertie of ther owne nature. Than certes, without dout all the thynges shullen ben don whiche that God wote before that they ben to comen and betiden of fre arbitrie, or of fre wyll, that al be it so that they betiden, yet algates ne lese they not ther proper nature in beyng, by the whiche firste or they weren don, they hadden power not to have betidde. Bo. What is this to saine than (q^d I) that thynges ne be not necessary by ther proper nature, so that they comen in al ther maners in the likenesse of necessite, by condicion of the divine science? Phi. This is the difference (q^d she) that tho thynges whiche that I propoed. The a lytel here before, that is to saine, the Sonne arisyng, and the man walkyng, that ther whiles that thilk thynges ben done, they ne might not ben undone. Nachelesse that one of 'hem or it was done, it behoveth by necessite that it was done, but not that other. Right so it is here that the thynges whiche that God hath present, withouten doute they shullen ben, but some of 'hem discendeth of the nature of thynges, as the sonne arisyng, and some discendeth of the power of the doers, as the manne walkyng. Bo. Then said I, no wronge, that if these thynges be referred to the divine knowinge, than ben they necessarie, and if they ben considred by 'hemselfe, than ben they absolute fro the bonde of necessite. Right so, as al thynges that apereth or sheweth to the wittes, if thou referre 'hem to reson it is universall, and if thou loke it or refer it to it self, than is it singuler. But nowe if thou saiest thus, that if that it be in my power to chaungen my purpose, than shall I voiden the purveiaunce of God, whan paraventure, I shall have chaunged the thynges whiche that he knoweth before.

Phi. Than shall I answeren The thus: Certes thou maiste wel chaunge thy purpose, but for as moche as the present sothnesse of the divine purveiaunce beholdeth that thou maiste chaunge thy purpose, and whether thou chaunge it or no, and whiderward that thou tourne it, thou ne maist not eschue the divine prescience, right so thou ne maiste not flid the sight of the present eye, although that thou tourne thy self by thy frewil into divers actions. But thou maiste saine ayen to this thus: How shall it than be, shall not the divine science ben chaunge by my disposicion, whan that I will one thing now; and now another thing? And thilke prescience ne semeth it not to entrechaunge stoundes of knowinge, as who saithe, ne shal it not semen to us, that the divine prescience entrechaungeth his divers stoundes of knowinge, so that it knowe sometime one thing; and sometime it knoweth the contrarie of that thing?

Phi. No forsothe (q^d she) for the divine sight renneth before and seeth al the futures, and clepeth 'hem ayen, and retourneth 'hem to the propre prescience of his propre knowinge, ne he entrechaungeth not, so as thou wenest the stoundes of his foreknowinge, as nowe this, nowe that: but he dwelling aye cometh before, and embraseth at o stroke al the mutations. And this prescience to comprehend and to sene al thynges God ne hath not taken it of the betidinges of thynges to comen, but of his propre simplicite. And hereby is assoiled thilke thynges that thou puttest a litel here before, that is to saine; that it is unworthy thing to saie, that our futures yeven cause of the prescience of God. For certes strength of the divine science, whiche that embraseth al thynges by his presentary knowinge, establissheth maner to all thynges, and it ne oweth not to latter thynges. And lithe that these thynges ben thus, that is to saine, that necessite is not in thynges by the divine prescience, than is ther fredom of arbitrie that dwelleth whole and unwemmed to mortal men, ne the lawes ne purposen not wycked medes, and and paines to the willinges of men, that ben unboudent and quite of all necessite: And God beholder and foreweter of al thynges dwelleth above, and the presente eternite of sight renneth alwaye wyth the divers qualite of our dedes, dispensyng or ordeining medes to gode men, and tourmentes to wicked men. Ne in ydel ne in vaine ne ben ther not put in God hope and praiers, that ne mowen not ben unspedeful, ne without effecte, whan they ben rightful.

Withstande than and eschewe thou vyces, worshippe and love thou vertues, areyse thy corage to rightful hopes, yelde thou humble praiers and highe. Grete necessite of prowesse and of vertue is encharged and commaunded to you, if ye n'il not dissimulen, sith that ye worchen and done, that is to saine, your dedes and youre werkes before the eyen of the judge, that seeth and also that demeth al thynges.

Deo Gratias.

Thus endeth the Boke of BOECIUS of the Consolacion of Philosophie.

The

The Dreame of CHAUCER.

By the Person of a mourning Knight sitting under an Oak, is meant John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, greatly lamenting the Death of one whom he entirely loved, supposed to be Blanch the Dutcheſs.

I Have grete wonder by this light
Howe that I lyve, for daye ne night
I maye not ſlepin welny nought,
I have ſo many an ydle thought,

Purely for the defaute of ſlepe,
That by my trouth, I take no kepe
Of nothing, howe it cometh or gothe,
Ne me n'ys nothing leſe nor lothe,
Al is ilichè gode to me
Joye or ſorowe, where ſo it be,
For I have felinge in nothing,
But as it were a maſid thing
Al day in pointe to fall adoun,
For ſo'rowful ymaginacioun
Is alway wholly in my minde.

And well ye wote that againſte kinde
It were to livin in this wiſe,
For nature ne wolde not ſuffiſe
Unto none erthy creature
Not longè tyme to endure
Withoutin ſlepe, and be in ſorowe,
And I ne may ne night ne morowe
Slepin, and this melancolye
And drede I havin for to die;
Defaute of ſlepe and hevineſſe
Hath ſlaine my ſpirite of quickneſſe,
That I have loſt al luſtihed
Soche fantasies ben in mine hed,
So I n'ot what is beſt to do.

But men might askin me whiſo
I may not ſlepe, and what me is?

But natheles, who askith thys
Leſeth his askyng trewily,
My ſelvin can not tellin why
The ſothe, but trewly as I geſſe
I holde it be a ſikeneſſe,
That I have ſuffrid this eyght yere,
And yet my bote is ner the nere,
For there is phiſicien but one
That may me hele, but that is done,
Paſſin we ovir until eſte,
That wil not be, more nedes be leſte,
Our firſt matir is gode to kepe.

So whan I ſawe I might not ſlepe,
Til now of late this othir night
Upon my bedde I ſate upright,
And bade one rechin me a boke,
A Romauncè, and it me toke
To rede, and drive the night away,
For why? me thought it betir play
Than play either at Cheſſe or tables.

And in this boke were writtin fables,
That Clerkis had in oldè time,
And othir poetes, put in rhyme,
To rede, and for to be in minde,
While men lovid the lawe of kinde.
This boke ne ſpake but of ſoche thinges
Of quenis livis, and of kinges,
And many othir thingis ſmale;
Amonge al this I fonde a tale,
Whiche that me thought a wondir thing.

This was the tale: There was a king

That hight Ceix, and had a wiſe
The beſt that mightin berin lyſe,
And this quenè hight Alcyone;
So it beſil, thereafter ſone
This king wol wendin ovir Se;
To tellin ſhortly, whan that he
Was in the Se, thus in this wiſe
Soche a tempeſt began to ryſe
That brake ther maſte, and made it fal,
10 And cleſte ther ſhip, and dreint 'hem al,
That nevir was founde, as it telles,
Ne borde ne man, ne nothing elles;
Right thus this king yloſte his life.

Nowe for to ſpekin of his wiſe,
This ladie, that was leſte at home
Hath wondir, that the kinge ne come
Home, for it was a longè terme,
Anon her herte began to yerne,
And for that her thought evirmo
20 It was not wele, her thoughtin ſo,
She longid ſo aſtir the king,
That certes it were a pitous thing
To tell her hertely ſo'rowful lyſe,
Whiche that ſhe had, this noble wiſe,
For him ſhe lovid aldirbeſt;
Anon ſhe ſent both eſt and weſt
To ſeke him, but they founde him nought.

Alas (qð ſhe) that I was wrought!
And where my lorde my love be ded,
30 Certis I n'yl nevir ete bred,
I make a vowe to my God here,
But I mowe of my lordè here.

Soche ſorowe this lady to' her toke,
That trewly I, that made this boke,
Yhad ſoche pite, and ſoche routhe
To rede her ſo'rowe, that by my trouthe
I ſarid the worſe al the morowe
Aſtir to thinkin on her ſorowe.

So whan that ſhe coude here no worde,
40 That no man myghtin finde her lorde,
Ful ofte ſhe ſwouned, and ſaide alas!
For ſorow ful nigh wode ſhe was,
Ne ſhe ne coude no rede but one,
But downe on knees ſhe ſate anone,
And wept, that pite was to here.

A mercy my ſwete lady dere,
Qð ſhe to Juno her goddeſſe,
Helpith me out of this diſtreſſe,
110 And yeve me grace my lorde to ſe
Sone, or to wete where ſo he be,
Or howe he fareth, or in what wiſe,
And I ſhal make you ſacrifice,
And wholly yours become I ſhal,
With gode wil, body, herte and al;
And but thou wolte this, lady ſwete,
Sendin me grace to ſlepe and mete
In my ſlepe ſome certaine ſwevin,
Where through that I may knowe evin
50 Whethir my lorde be quicke or ded.

With that worde ſhe hinge down the hed,
And fel in a ſwoune, as colde as ſtone,
Her women caught her up anone,

And

And broughtin her in bed al naked,
And she forwepid and forwaked
Was wery, and thus the ded slepe
Yfel on her, or she toke kepe,
Through Juno, that had herde her bone,
That madin her to slepe sone;
For as she praide, right so was don
In dede, for Juno right anon
Ycallid thus her messangere
To do' her eraunde, and he come nere:
Whan he was come, she bad him thus,

Go bet (qð Juno) to Morpheus,
Thou knowest him wel, the god of slepe,
Nowe understande wel, and take kepe,
Say thus on my behalfe, that he
Go fast into the gretè Se,
And bid him that on alle thinge
He take up Ceix body the kinge,
That lieth ful pale, and nothings rody,
Byd him crepin into the body,
And do it gone to Alcyone
The quene, there she lyith alone,
And shewe her shortely' it is no nay
Howe it was dreint this othir day,
And do the body speke right so
Right as it was wonnid to do
The whilis that it was alyve;
Goith nowe fast, and hye The blive.

This messanger toke leve and went
Upon his way, and nevre' he stente
Tyl he came to the darke valey,
That stante betwixtin rockis twey,
There nevir yet grewe corne ne gras,
Ne tre, ne nothing that ought was,
Ne best ne man, ne nothing elles,
Save that there werin a fewe welles,
Came renning fro the clyffes adowne,
That made a dedly slepinge fowne,
And rennin downe right by a cave,
That was undir a rocke ygrave
Amyd the valey wondir depe,
There as these goddis lay a slepe,
Morpheus and Eclympasteyre,
That was the god of slep'is heire,
That slepte, and did none othir werke.

This cave ywas also as derke
As hel pitte, ovr all aboute,
They had gode leysir for to route
To vye who mightin slepe best,
Some hinge ther chinne upon ther.brest,
And slepte upright ther hed yhed,
And some lay nakid in ther bed,
And sleptin whiles their dayis last.

This messaunger come renning fast,
And cried ho ho, awake anone;
It was for naught, there herde him none;
Awake (qð he) who lyith there?
And blewe his horne right in ther ere,
And cried awakith wondir hie.

This god of slepe with his one eye
Cast up, and asked who clepith there?
It am I (qð this messangere)
Juno bade that thou shouldist gone,
And toldin him what he should done,
As I have tolde you here before,
It is no nede reherse it more,
And wente his way whan he had saide:
Anone this god of slepe abraide
Out of his slepe, and gan to go,
And did as he had bidde him do,
He toke up the ded body sone,
And bare it forthe to Alcyone,
His wife, the quene, there as she lay,
Right even a quartir before day,

And stode right at her bedd'is fete,
And callid her right as she hete
By name, and said: My swetè wife,
Awake, let be your so'rowful lyfe,
For in your so'row there lyth no rede,
For certes, swete love, I am but dede,
Ye shall me ner on lyve yse,
But gode swete herte, I praye, that ye
Bury my body, soche a tide
Ye mowe it finde, the Se beside,
And farewell swete, my world'is blisse,
I pray that God your sorowe lyffe,
To lytel while our blisse ylasteth.

With that her eyin up she casteth,
And sawe naught; alas! for sorowe
She died within the thirde morowe.

But what she said more in that swowe
I may nat tellin you as nowe,
It were to longe for to dwel,
My first matere I wil you tel,
Wherefore I have ytoldè this thinge
Of Alcyone, and Ceix the kinge.

For thus moche dare I sayin well,
I had be dolvin everidel,
And ded, right through defaute of slepe,
Yf I ne had red, and take kepe
Of this ilke tale next before,
And I wil tellin you wherefore,
For I ne might for bote ne bale
Slepin, or I had redde this tale
Of this ydreinte Ceix the kinge,
And of the goddis of slepinge.

Whan I had red this tale wele,
And ovrlooked it everidele,
Me thought wondir, if it were so,
For I had ner herde speke or tho
Of no goddis, that couldin make
Men for to slepe, ne for to wake,
And I ne knewe ner God but one,
And in my game I said anone,
(And yet me lyst right il to pley)
Rathir than that I shuldin dey
Thorough defaute of slepinge thus,
I woldin gyve thilke Morpheus,
Or that goddesse hight dame Juno,

Or some wight els, I ne rought who,
To make me slepe, and have some rest,
I will give him the althir best
Yeste, that er he abode his lyve,
And herconwarde right now as blyve,
If he woll make me slepe a lite,
Of downe of pure Dovyis white

I wol yeve him a fethir bed,
Rayid with gold, and right wel cled
In fine blacke Sattin doutremere,
And many' a pilowe', and every bere
Of clothe of raines to slepe on softe,
Him thare not nede to turnin ofte,
And I wol yeve him al that falles
To his chambre and to his hailes,
I wol do painte hem with pure golde,
And tapite hem ful many folde,
Of one sute this shal he yhave,
If that I wiste where were his cave,
If he can make me slepin sone,

As did the goddesse, quene Alcyone,
And thus this ylke god Morpheus
May winnin of me mo fees thus
Than er he wanne; and to Juno
That 'is his goddesse, I shal so do,
I trowe, that she shal holde her paide.

I had unneth that worde ifaide,
Right thus as I have toldin you,
That sodeinly I ne wiste howe

Soche a luste anone me ytoke
 To slepe, that right upon my boke
 I fel aslepe, and therwith even
 Me mette so inly soche a sweven,
 So wondirfull, that nevir yet
 I trowe no man ne had the wit
 To connin wel my swevin rede,
 No nought Joseph withoutin drede
 Of Egypt, he which that rad so
 The king's metinge Pharao,
 No more than coude the leste of us,
 Ne nat scarfly Macrobeus,
 He that wrote al the' avision,
 Whiche that he met kinge Scipion,
 The noble man, the Affrican,
 Soche mervailis fortunid than
 I trowe arede my dremis even,
 Lo! thus it was, this was my sweven.
 Me thoughtin thus, that is was Maye,
 And in the dawning there I lay
 Me met thus in my bed al naked,
 And lokid forthe, for I was waked
 With smale foulis a gret hepe,
 That had affraid me' out of my slepe
 Through noise, and swetnesse of ther songe,
 And as me met, they fate amonge
 Upon my chambre rose without,
 Upon the tyles ovre' al about,
 And everiche songe in his wise
 The mosse swete and solempne servise
 By note, that evir man I trowe
 Had herde, for some of 'hem songe lowe,
 Some high, and al of one accorde,
 To tellin shortly, at o worde,
 Was nevir herde so swete a steven,
 But it had be a thinge of heven,
 So merie' a fowne, so swete entunes,
 That certis for the towne of Tewnes
 I n'olde, but I had herde 'hem singe,
 For al my chambre gan to ringe
 Through singing of ther harmony;
 For instrument, nor melody,
 Was no where herde yet halfe so swete,
 Nor of acorde halfe so mete,
 For there was none of 'hem that fained
 To singe, for eche of 'hem him painid
 To finde out many crafty notes,
 They ne ysparid nat ther throtis;
 And soth to faine, my chambre was
 Ful wel depaintid, and with glas
 Were al the windowes wel yglased
 Ful clere, and nat an hole ycrased,
 That to beholde it was grette joy,
 For wholly al the story' of Troy
 Was in the glaifinge ywrought thus,
 Of Hector, and kinge Priamus,
 Achilles, and kinge Lamedon,
 And eke Medea, and Jason,
 Of Paris, Heleine, and Lavine,
 And al the walles with colours fine
 Were paintid, bothe texte and glose,
 And al the Romaunte of the Rose;
 My wyndowes werin flet echone,
 And through the glasse the sunne yphone
 Upon my bed with bright bemis,
 With many glad gildy stremis,
 And eke the welkin was so faire,
 Blewe, bright, and clere ywas the ayre,
 And ful attempre', in sothe it was,
 For neithir coide, ne hote it n'as;
 Ne' in al the welkin was no clowde.

And as I lay thus, wondir lowde
 Me thought I herde an huntir blowe
 T' assay his gret horne, and to knowe

Whethre' it was clere, or horse of fowne.
 And I herde goynge up and downe
 Men, horsis, houndes, and othir thinge,
 And al men spekin of huntinge,
 How they wolde sle the harte with strength,
 And how the harte had upon length
 So moche enbosed, I n'ot nowe what.

280 Anon right whan I herdin that,
 How that they wolde on huntinge gone,
 I was right glad, and up anone
 I toke my horse, and forth I wente
 Out of chambre, I nevir stente
 Tyl I come to the felde without,
 There ovirtok I a grette rout

290 Of huntirs, and of foresters,
 And many relaies and limers,
 That hied 'hem to the forest fast,
 And I with 'hem, so at the last
 I askid one lad, a lymere,
 Say felowe, who shal huntin here,
 (Q^d I) and he answered ayen,
 Sir, the Emperour Octonyen,
 (Q^d he) and he is here faste by.

A goddes halfe, in gode tyme (q^d I)
 Than go we fast, and gan to ride;
 Whan we come to the forest side,
 Every man ydyd right sone
 300 As unto huntinge fel to done.

The maistir hunte anone fote hote
 With his clere horne yblewe thremote
 At the uncouplinge of his houndis,
 Within a while, the harte founde is,
 I halowed, and rechafid fast
 A longe time, and so at the last
 This harte rousid and stale away
 Fro al the houndes a privy way.

The houndes had ovirshot him all,
 310 And were on a defaute yfal,
 Therwith the hont full wondir fast
 Yblewe a forloyn at the laste,
 I was go walkid fro my tre,
 And as I went, there came by me
 A whelpe, that fawned me as I stode,
 That had folowed, and coude no gode,
 It came and crepte to me as lowe,
 Right as it had me wele yknowe,
 Helde down his hed, and joyned his eres,
 320 And laide al smothe adowne his heres.

I wolde have caught it up anone,
 It fled, and was fro me ygone,
 As I folowed, and it forth went,
 Downe by a floury grene it went
 Ful thick of grasse, ful softe and swete,
 With flouris fele fare undir fete,
 And lytil used, it semid thus,
 For bothe Flora, and Zephyrus,
 They two, that makin flouris growe,
 330 Had made ther dwelling there I trowe,
 For it was on for to beholde
 As though the erthe there envye wolde
 To be gayir than is the heven,
 To havin mo flouris soche seven
 As in the welkin sterris be,
 It had forget the povirte

340 Of wintir, through his coldè morowes
 That made it suffre, and his sorowes
 Al was torieten, and that was sene,
 For all the wode was woxin grene,
 Swetnesse of dewe had made it waxe.

It is no nede eke for to axe
 Where there were many grenè greves,
 Or thicke of trees, so ful of leves,
 And every tree stode by him selve
 Fro othir, wel ten fote or twelve,

350

360

370

380

390

400

410

420
So

So grete trees, and so huge of strenght,
Of fourty' or fifti faðome length,
All clene withoutin bowe or sticke,
With croppis brode, and eke as thicke;
They werin not an ynche asonder,
That it was shadde ovir all under,
And many' an hart, and many' an hinde
Was both before me, and behinde,
Of fawnis, fowirs, buckis, does;
Was ful the wodde, and many roes,
And many squirrilis, that sete
Ful high upon the trees and ete,
And in ther manir madin festes,
Shortly, it was so ful of bestes,
That though Argus the noble countour
Yfate to rekin in his countour,
And rekin with his figures ten,
For by tho figures newe al ken,
If they be crafty, reken and nombre,
And tel of every thing the nombre,
Yet shulde he faile to rekin even
The wonders me met in my sweven;
But forthe I romed right wondir faste
Downe through the wode, so at the laste
I was ware of a man in blacke,
That fate, and had yturned his backe
Unto an ooke, and huge tre,
Lord! tho thought I, who may that be?
What eylich him to sittin here?
And anon right I went him nere,
Than founde I fitte evin upright
A wondir faire welaring knight,
By the manir me thoughtin so,
Of gode mokil, right yonge therto,
Of the' age of foure and twenty yere,
Upon his berde but litil here,
And he was clothid al in blacke;
I stalkid even unto his backe,
And there I stode, as stil as ought,
The sothe to say, he saw me nought;
For why? he hinge his hed adowne,
And with a dedly so'rowful sowne
He made of rime ten verses or twelve
Of a complainte unto himselfe,
The moste pite, and the most routhe,
That evir I herde, for by trouthe
It was grete wondir that nature
Might suffre any creature
To have soche sorow', and he not ded;
Ful pitous pale, and nothing red
He said a lay, a manir songe,
Withoutin note, withoutin songe,
And was this, for ful wel I can
Reherse it, right thus it began.

I have of sorowe so grete wone,
That joye ne get I nevyr none,
Nowe that I se my lady bright,
Which I have loved with all my might,
Is fro me ded, and is agone,
And thus in sorowe' leste me alone;
Alas! o dethe, what eylich The,
That thou n'oldist have takin me,
Whan that thou toke my lady swete?
Of all godenes she had none mete,
That was so faire, so freshe, so fre,
So gode, that men may wel yse.

Whan he had made thus his complainte,
His sorowful hert gan faste faine,
And his spiritis wexin dede,
The blode was fledde, for pure drede,
Downe to his herte, to maken him warme,
For wel it feled the herte had harme,
To wete eke why it was adradde,
By kinde, and for to make it gladdde,

For it is membre principal
Of the body, and that made al
His hewe ychaunge, and wexin grene,
And pale, for there no blode is sene
Within no manir lymme of his.

430 Anon therwith, whan I sawe this;
He farde thus yvil, there he sete,
I went and stode right at his sete,
And grette him, but he spake right nought,
But arguid with his owne thought,
And in his witte disputid faste
Bothe why, and howe his lyfe might laste,
Him thought his sorowes were so smerte,
And lay so colde upon his herte.

So through his sorowe', and holy thought
Made him that he ne herde me nought,
For he had welnye lost his minde,
Though Pan, that men clepe god of kinde,
Were for his sorowes ner so wrothe.

440 But at the last, to faine right sothe,
He was ware of me, howe I stode
Before him, and did of my hode,
And had gret him, as I best coude,
Debonairly, and nothing loude,
He said, I pray The be not wrothe,
I herde The not, to faine the sothe,
Ne I sawe The not, sir, truly.

450 Ah gode sir, tho no force (qð I)
I am right fory', if I have ought Distroublid you out of your thought,
Forieve me, if I have myffetake.

Yes, the amindes is light to make,
(Qð he) for there lithe non therto,
There is nothing missaide, nor do.

Lo howe godely yspake this knight,
As it had be anothir wight,
And made it neithir tough ne queint!
And I sawe that, and gan me' aqueint
With him, and founde him so trectable;
460 Right wondir skylful and reso'nable,
As me thoughtin, for all his bale,
Anon right I gan finde a tale
To him, to loke where I might ought
Have more knowleging of his thought.

Sir (qð I) this game is ydone,
I holde that this hart be ygone,
These huntis can him no where se.

I do no force therof (qð he)
My thought is theron ner a dele;
470 By' our lorde (qð I) I trowe you wele;
Right so me thinkith by your chere;
But sir, o thing wollin ye here?
Me thinketh in gret sorowe' I you se,
But certis sir, and if that ye
Wolde aught discovir me your wo,

I wolde, as wise God helpe me so,
Amende it, if I can or may,
Ye mowin prove it by assay,
For by my trouthe, to make you whole
480 I wol do al my powir whole,
And telleth me of your sorowes smert;
Paraunter it may ese your herte,
That semeth ful syke undir your side.

With that he loked on me aside,
As who saithe nay, that n'yl not be.

Graunt mercy my gode frende (qð he)
560 I thanke The, that thou woldist so,
But it may ner the rather be do,
No man ne may my sorowe glade,
490 That maketh my hewe to fal and fade,
And hath myn understanding lerne,
That me is wo, that I was borne,
May nought make my sorowis flyde,
Not all the rem edies of Ovide,

Ne

Ne Orpheus, god of melodie,
 Ne Dædalus, with his playes flye,
 Ne hele me may no physicien,
 Nought Hippocrates, ne Galen,
 Me' is wo, that I live houris twelve,
 But whofo wol assaye him felve,
 Whether his hert can have pite
 Of any so'rowe, let him se me,
 I wretche, that dethe hath made al naked
 Of al the blisse that er was made,
 I wrothe, the werste of allè wightes,
 That hate my dayis, and my nightes,
 My lyfe, my lustis, be me lothe,
 For allè fare and I be wrothe,
 The pure deth is so ful my foe,
 That I wolde die, it wil not soe,
 For whan I folowe' it, it wil flye,
 I wold have him, it n'il not me;
 And this is paine withoutin rede,
 Alway dyinge and be not dede;
 That Sisyphus that lyeth in hel
 Ne may not of more sorowe tel,
 And who so wiste al, by my trouthe,
 All my sorowe, but he hadde routhe
 And pyte of my sorowes smerte,
 That man yhath a fendely herte;
 For whofo seeth me first on morowe,
 May sayne that he hath met with sorowe,
 For I am sorowe', and sorowe' is I,
 Alas! and I wyl tel The why,
 My sorowe' is tournid to playnyng,
 And al my laughtir to weping,
 My glad thought's to hevynesse,
 In travaile is myn ydlenesse,
 And eke my rest, my wele is wo,
 My gode is harme, and evirmo
 In wrathe is tournid my playing,
 And my delite in sorowing,
 Myn hele is turned into sickenesse,
 In drede is al my syckernesse,
 To derke is turnid al my lyght,
 My wytte is foly, my day night,
 My love is hate, my slepe wakyng,
 My mirth and melis is fasting,
 My countinaunce is nicete,
 And al abawed, where so I be,
 My pece is pleding, and in werre,
 Alas, howe might I fare in werre!

My boldenesse is turnid to shame,
 For false fortune hath played a game,
 At chesse with me, alas the while!
 The trayteresse false and ful of gyle,
 That al behotheth, and nothing halte,
 She gothe upright, and yet she halte,
 That baggith foule, and lokith fayre,
 The dispitous and debonaire,
 That scornith many a cature,
 An ydole of false purtraiture
 Is she, for she wol sonè wryen
 She is the monstri's hed ywryen,
 As filthe, ovir ystrowed with floures,
 Her mostè worship, and her floures,
 To lyen, for that is her nature
 Withoutin faith, lawe, or mesure,
 She false is, and evir laughing
 With one eye, and that othir weping,
 That is brought up, she set al downe,
 I likin her to the Scorpiowne,
 That is a false and flateryng best,
 For with his ded be makith fest,
 But al amynd his flateringe
 With his taile he wil forely styng,
 And envenim, and so wil she,
 She is the envious charite,

That is aye false, and semith wele,
 So turnith she her false whele
 About, for it is nothing stable,
 Nowe by the fyre, nowe at the table;
 Ful many' one hath she thus yblent,
 She is playe of enchauntement,
 That semith one, and is not so,
 The false thefe, what hath she do? 650
 Trowest thou? by' our Lorde I wil The say,
 At Chesse with me she gan to play,
 With her false draughtis ful divers
 She stalle on me, and toke my fers, 580
 And whan I sawe my fers away,
 Alas! I couth no lengir play,
 But sayid, farewell swete ywis,
 And farewell al that er there is,
 Therwith fortune ysaid, cheke here,
 And mate in the' myd poynt of the' checkere 660
 With a paunè errant, alas!
 Ful crastyir to play she was
 Than Athalus that made the game
 First of the Chesse, so was his name,
 But God wolde I had ones or twise
 Iconde, and knowe the jeoperdise,
 That coude the Greke Pythagores,
 I shulde have plaide the bet at ches,
 And kept my fers the bet therby,
 And though wherto? for trewily
 I holde that wishe not worthe a stre, 670
 It had ben er the bet for me,
 For fortune can so many' a wyle,
 Ther be but fewe can her begile,
 And eke she is the lasse to blame,
 My selfe I wolde have do the same,
 Before God, had I ben as she,
 She ought the more excusid be,
 For this I say yet more therto,
 Had I be God, and might have do 680
 My wyl, whan she my fers ycaught,
 I wolde have drawn the same draught,
 For al so wise God gyve me reste,
 I dare wel swere, she toke the beste,
 But throughe that draught I have ylorne
 My blyse, alas that I was borne!
 For evirmore I trowe trewily,
 For al my wil, my luste wholly
 Is turne, but wote ye, what to done?
 By' our Lorde it is to dyin sone, 690
 For nothings I ne leve it nought,
 But lyve and dye, right in this thought,
 There n'ys planet in firmamente,
 Ne' in ayre ne' in erthe none elemente,
 That they ne yeve me' a yeste echone
 Of wepyng, whan I am alone;
 For whan that I advise me wele,
 And bethinke me everydele,
 How that there lieth in rekininge
 In my sorowis for nothings, 700
 And howe there livith no gladnesse
 May gladdin me of my distresse,
 And howe I have losse suffisaunce,
 And therto I have no plesaunce,
 Than may I say, I have right nought,
 And whan al this falleth in my thought,
 Alas, than am I ovircome,
 For that is done, this not to come,
 I have more sorowe than Tantale.
 And whan I herde him tel this tale 710
 Thus pitously, as I you tell,
 Unnethis myght I lengir dwell,
 It did myn herte so mochill wo.
 A gode sir (qð I) say nat so,
 Have some pite on your nature,
 That fourmid you to a cature,

Remembrith

Remembrith you of Socrates,
For he ne countith not thre strees
Of nought that fortune coude ydo.

No. (qð he) I ne can not so.
Why gode sir, yes parde (qð I)
Ne say not so for truily
Though ye had lost the feris twelve,
And for sorowe murdrid your selve,
Ye shulde be dampnid in this case,
By as gode right as Medea was,
That slough her childrin for Jason,
And Phyllis, for Demophoon
That hing her self so welaway!
For he had brokin his terme day
To come to her! Anothir rage
Had Dido, the quene of Carthage,
That slough her self, for Æneas
Was false, for whiche a fole she was;
And Echo dyed for Narcissus
Ne wolde nat love her, and right thus
Hath many' an othir foly done,
And for Dalila died Sampson,
That sloughe him selfe with a pilere,
But there is no man alive here
Wolde for ther feris make this wo.

Why so? (qð he) it is not so,
Thou wotest ful lytil what thou menest,
For I have loste more than thou wenest.
And howe may that ybe (qð I)
Gode sir, tellith me al wholly,
In what wise, howe, why, and wherfore
That ye have thus your blisse ylore.

Blithely (qð he) come sit The down,
I tel The on condicioun,
Thou shalte wholly with all thy wit
Do thyne entente to herkin it.

Yes, sir; than swere thy trouthe therto,
Gladly to holdin The hereto.
I shal right blithe, so God me save,
Wholly with al the witte I have Here you as wel as er I can.

A godde's halfe (qð he) and began.

Sir (qð he) fithins firste I couthe
Have any manir witte fro youthe,
Or kindly understandinge,
To comprehende in any thinge
What love was, in mine ownè wit
Dredileffe I have evir yet
Be tributary, and yeve rente
To love wholly, with gode entente,
And through plesaunce become his thral,
With gode wil, body, herte and al,
Al this I put in his servage,
As to my lorde, and dyd homage;
And full devoutly' I praide hym tho
He shulde beset myne hertè so,
That it plesaunce unto him were,
And worship to my lady dere.

And this was long, and many' a yere,
(Er that min hert was set o where)
That I dyd thus, and ne wist why,
I trowe it came me kindly,
Paraunter I was therto most able,
As a white wal, or a table,
For it' is redy to catche and take
Al that men wollin therin make,
Whethir men will portrey or painte,
Be the werkis nevir so quainte.

And thilke tyme I farid right so,
I was able to' have lernid tho,
And to have conde, as wel or better,
Parauntir, eithir arte or lettir,
But for love came first in my thought,
Therefore I ne forgate it nought,

I chees love to be my first crafte,
And therfore it is with me laste,
For why? I toke' it of so yonge age,
720 That malice ne had my corage
Not that time turnid to nothing
Thorowh to mokil knowleging,
For that tyme youth my maistresse
Governid me in ydilnesse,
For it was in my firstè youth,
And tho ful litil gode I couthe,
For al my werkis were flitting
That time, and al my thought varying,
Al thinges were to me yliche gode,
730 That knewe I tho, but thus it stode.

It happed that I came on a day
In to a place, there that I sey
Trewly the fairist companie
Of ladies, that er man with eye
Had sene togheters in o place,
800 Shal I clepe it happe, eithir grace,
That brought me there? nought but fortune,
That is to lyin ful comune,
The false traitresse perverse,

740 God wolde that I coude clepe her werse,
For now she worchith me ful wo,
And I wol tel The sone why so.

Amonges these ladies thus echone,
The sothe to sayin, I sawe one,
That ne was lyke none of the route,
For I dare swere, withoutin doute,
820 That as the sommer's sonne bright
Is fairer, clerer, and hath more lyght
Than any other planet in heaven,

750 The monè, or the sterris seven,
For al the worlde right so had she
Surmountin 'hem al of beaute,
Of manir, and of comlynesse
Of stature, and wel set gladnesse,
Of godelyhede, and so wel besey,
Shortly, what shal I more ysey,
830 By God and by his holowes twelve,
It was my swete right al her selve:
She had so stedfast countenaunce,
So noble porte, and maintenaunce;
And Love, that wel yherde my bone
Yhad espyid me thus sone,
That she fill sonè in my thought,
As helpe me God, so was I cought
So sodainly, that I ne toke
No maner counsaile, but at her loke,
840 And at min herte, for why? her eyen
So gladly I trowe myn herte seyne,
That purely tho min ownè thought
Said, it were bet serve her for nought,
Than with anothir to be wele,
And it was sothe, for every dele
I wil anone right tel The why.

I sawe her daunce so comily,
Carol and sing so swetily,
And laugh, and play so womanly,
850 And lokin so debonairly
So godely speke and so frendely,
That certes I trowe that evirmore
780 N'as sene so blisful a tresore,
For every here on her hed
The sothe to say it was not red,
Ne neithir yelowè ne browne it n'as,
Me thought moste like to golde it was,
And whiche eyin my lady had,
Debonaire, gode, and glad, and sad,
860 Simple', of gode mokil, not to wide!
Therto her loke n'as not aside,
Ne' ovirthwart, but beset so wele,

790 It drewe and toke up everydele

5 M

A1

Al whiche that on her gan beholde,
 Her eyin semed anone she wolde
 Have mercy, folly wendin so,
 But it was ner the rathir do,
 It n'as no counterfetid thinge,
 It was her ownè pure loking,
 Whiche that the goddesse dame Nature
 Had made 'hem opin by mesure,
 And close, for were she ner so glad,
 Her loking was not folishe sprad,
 Ne wildily, though that she plaide,
 But er me thought her eyin saide
 By God my wrathe is al forieue;
 Therwith her lifte so well to live,
 That dulnesse was of her adrad,
 She n'as to sobre ne to glad,
 In allè thingis more mesure
 Ne had nevir I trowe creature,
 But many' one with her loke she herte,
 And that sate her full lyte at herte,
 For she knewe nothinge of ther thought,
 But wher she knewe, or knewe it nought,
 Algate she ne' wrought of 'hem a stre,
 To get her love no nere n'as he,
 That woned at home, than he in Inde,
 The formist was alway behinde;
 But gode folke ovir al othir
 She loved, as man may his brothir,
 Of whiche love she was wondir large,
 In skilful placis that bere charge;
 But whiche a visage had she therto!
 Alas! my herte is wondir wo,
 That I ne can discrivin it,
 Me lackith both Englishe and wit
 For to undo it at the ful,
 And eke my spirites ben so dull,
 So gret a thinge for to devise,
 I have not wyt that can suffyse
 To comprehendin her beaute;
 But thus moche I dare saine, that she
 Was white, rody, freshe, lifely hewed,
 And every day her beaute newed,
 And nyghe her face was aldirbeste,
 For certis nature had soche leste
 To make that faire, that trewly she
 Was her chefe patron of beaute,
 And chefe ensample' of al her werke
 And monstre, for be' it ner so derke
 Me thinketh I se her evirmo,
 And yet moreovir, though al tho
 That ever lived, were now a lyve,
 Ne wolde thei have founde to discrive
 In al her face a wickid signe,
 For it was sad, simple, and benigne.
 And soche a godely swete speche
 Yhad that swete, my lyv'is leche,
 So frendely, and so well ygrounded,
 Upon reson so wel ifounded,
 And so trefable to al gode,
 That I dare swere wel by the rode,
 Of eloquence was nevir fonde
 So swete a fowning and faconde,
 Ne trewir tonged, ne scornid lasse,
 Ne bet coude hele, that by the masse
 I durste swere, though the Pope it songe,
 That ther was ner yet through her tonge
 Man ne woman gretly harmid,
 As for her was al harme yhid,
 Ne lasse flatiring in her worde,
 That purely her simple recorde
 Was founde as trewe as any bonde,
 Or trouthe, of any mann'is honde.
 Ne chide she coude nevir a dele,
 That knowith al the worlde ful wele;

But soche a fairenesse of a necke
 Yhad that swete, that bone nor brecke 940
 N'as there none sein, that misselatte,
 It was white, smothe, streight, and pure flatte,
 Withoutin hole, or canel bone,
 And by seming, she ne had none.
 Her throte, as I have nowe memoite,
 Semed as a rounde tour of yvoire,
 Of gode gretnesse, and not to grete,
 And Faire white ywas she hete,
 That was my ladies namè right,
 And she was therto faire and bright, 950
 She ne had not her namè wronge,
 Right faire sholdirs, and body longe
 She had, and armis evir lith,
 880 Fattishe, fleshy, nat grete ther with,
 Right white handis, and nailis rede,
 Rounde brestis: And of a gode brede
 Her hippis were, a streight flatte backe,
 I knewe on her none othir lacke
 That al her limmis n'ere pure sewing,
 In as ferre as I had knowing; 960
 Therto she coude so wel yplaye
 What that her lyst, that I dare saye
 That she was lyke to torchè bright,
 890 That every man may take of light
 Ynough, and it hath ner the leste
 Of manir and of comlynese.
 Right so farid my lady dere,
 For every wight of her manere
 Moght catche ynough, if that he wolde, 970
 Yf he had eyen her to beholde,
 For I dare swere wel, if that she
 Had among tenne thousande ybe,
 She woldin have be at the beste,
 900 A chefe myroure of al the feste,
 Though they had stondin in a rowe
 To mennis eyen, that coude have knowe;
 For where so men had plaide, or waked,
 Me thought the felowshippe as naked
 Withoutin her, that I sawe ones,
 As a corowne withoutin stones; 980
 Trewly she was to min eye
 The' solein Phœnix of Arabye,
 For there livith nevir but one,
 910 Ne suche as she ne knowe I none:
 To speke of godenesse, trewly she
 Had as mochil debonaire
 As er had Hester in the Bible,
 And more, if more were possible;
 And sothe to sayin, therwithal
 She hadde a witte so general, 990
 So whole enclinid to al gode,
 That al her witte was sette by the' rode
 Without malyce, upon gladnesse,
 920 And therto' I sawe ner yet a leste
 Harmful, than she was in doing,
 I say not that she n' hadde knowyng
 What harme ywas, or ellis she
 Had coude no gode, so thinkith me;
 And trewly, for to speke of trouthe,
 But she had had, it had be routhe, 1000
 Therof she had so moche her dele,
 And I dare saine, and swere it wele,
 That trouthe him selfe over al and al
 930 Had chose his manor principal
 In her, that was his resting place;
 Therto she had the moste grace
 To have stedfaste perseveraunce,
 And esy' attempre govirnaunce,
 That evir I knewe, or wiste yet,
 So pure sufferaunt was her wit,
 And reson gladly she understode,
 It folowid wel, she coude gode, 1010
 She

She usid gladly to do wele,
These were her manirs every dele.

Therwith she lovid so wel right,
She wronge do wouldin to no wight,
No wight ne might do her no shame,
She lovid so wel her owne name.

Her lust to holde no wight in honde,
Ne be thou siker, she wolde not fonde,
To holdin no wight in balaunce
By halfe worde, ne by countinaunce,
But if men wolde upon her lye,
Ne sende men into Walakye;
To Pruise, and to Tartarie,
To Alisaundrie, ne Turkye,
And bidde him fast, anon that he
Go hodelesse into the drie Se,
And come home by the Carrenare;

And sir, be ye nowe full ryght ware
That I may of you here men faine
Wurshippe, or that ye come againe.

She ne used no soche knackis finale.

But therfore that I tel my tale,
Right on this same, as I have saide,
Was wholly al my love ylaide,
For certis she was that swete wife,
My suffisaunce, my luste, my life,
Min hope, min hele, and al my blesse,
My worlde's welfare, and my goddesse;
And I wholly' hers, and every dele.

By' our Lorde (qð I) I trowe you wele,
Hardly your love was wel beset,
I n'ot howe it might have do bet.

Bettir! ne not so wel (qð he)

• I trowe it fir (qð I) pardè.

Nay leve it wel: Sir so do I,
I leve you wel, that trewily
You thought that she ywas the best,
And to beholde the alderfairest,
Who so had loked her with your eyen.

With myn! nay al whiche that her seyen,
Sayid and swore that it was so,
And though they ne had, I wolde tho
Have lovid best my lady fre,
Though I had had al the beaute
That er had Alcibiades,
And al the strength of Hercules;
And thereto had the worthinesse
Of Alisaundre', and al the' richesse
That evir was in Babyloine,
In Carthage, or in Macedoine,
Or in Rome, or in Ninivè,
And therto al so hardy be
As was Hector, so have I joye,
That Achilles yslough at Troye;
And therfore was he slayne also
In a temple, for bothè two
Were flaine, he' and Antilegius,
And so saithe Dares Fregius,
For the love of Polyxena,
Or ben as wife as Minerva,
I wolde evir, withoutin drede
Have lovid her, for I muste nede.

Nede! Nay trewly I gabbe nowe,
Nought nede, and I wol tellin howe,
For of gode wil min herte it wolde;
And eke to love her I was holde,
As for the fairist and the beste,
She was as gode, so have I reffe,
As was Penelope of Grece,
Or as the noble wife Lucrece,
That was the beste, he tellith thus,
The Romane Titus Livius,
She was as gode, and nothing like,
Though ther stories be autentike,

Algate she was as trewe as she.

But wherfore that I tellin The;
Whan that I first my lady sey,
I was right yonge, the sothe to sey, 1095

And ful gret nede I had to lerne,
Whan that myn hertè woldin yerne;
To love it was a gret emprise,

1020 But as my wite wolne beste suffise,
Aftir my yonge and childely wit,
Withoutin drede I beset it

To lovin her in my beste wife,
To do' her wurship, and the servise,
Whiche that I coude tho, by my trouthe;

1100 Withoutin faining, eithir slouthe,
For wondir faine I wolde her se,
So mokill it amendid me,

1030 That whan I sawe her a morowe,
I was warished of al my sorowe
Of al day aftir, tel' it were eve,

Me thoughtin nothings might me greve;
Were my sorowes nevir so smerte,
And yet she syt so in min herte,

That by my trouthe, I n'oldè nought
For al this worlde out of my thought 1110
Yleve my lady, no trewly.

Nowe by my trouthe sir (qð I)

1040 Me thinkith ye have soche a chaunce
As shrifte, withoutin repentaunce.

Repentaunce, nay nay fye (qð he)

Shuldin I nowe repentin me

To love, nay certes than were I wel

Worse than ywas Achitophel,

Or Antenor, so have I joye,

The traitour that betrayid Troye, 1120

Or than the false Ganelion,

He that purchasid the traifon

Of Roulande, and of Oliver,

1050 Nay, while that I am alive here

I n'yl foriet her nevir mo.

Nowe gode sir (qð I) to him tho

Ye have wel tolde me here before,

It' is no nede to reherse it more,

Howe that ye sawe her first, and where, 1130

But wolde ye tel me the manere

To her, whiche was your firste speche,

Therof I woldè you beseche,

1060 And howe that she knewe first your thought,

Whethir ye lovid her, or nought,

And telleth me eke, what ye have lore,

I herde you tellin here before,

Ye saide, thou n'otist what thou menest,

For I have losse more than thou wenest!

And what losse is that (qð I tho) 1140

N'il she not love you, is it so?

Or havin ye ought done amis,

That she hath leste you, is it this?

For Godd'is love tellith me al.

1070 Before God (qð he) and I shal,

I say right as I have ysaide,

On her was al my love ylaide,

And yet she n'iste it ner a dele,

Not longè tyme, levith it wele,

For be right sykir, I durst nought

For al this worlde tel her my thought, 1150

Ne' I wolde have wrathid her trewly,

For wost thou why? she was lady

Of the body that had the herte,

1080 And who? hath that may not afterte.

But for to kepe me fro' ydlenesse

Trewly I dyd my businesse

To make songis as I best coude,

And oftin time I songe 'hem loude,

And made songis this a grete dele,

Although I coude nat make so wele 1160

Songis,

Songis, ne knewe the arte so al
As coude Lamek's sone Tubal,
That founde out first the arte of songe,
For as his brothir's hamirs ronge
Upon his anvelt up and downe,
Therof he toke the firste sowne.

But Grekes faine of Pythagoras,
That he the first findir ywas
Of the arte, Aurora tellith so;
But therof no force of 'hem two,
Algatis songis thus I made
Of my felyng, min herte to glade,
And lo! this was the althir first,
I n'ot whethir it were the werst,

Lorde! it makith min hertè light,
Whan that I thinke on that swete wight,
That is so semely on to se,
And wishe to God it might so be
That she wolde holde me for her knight,
My lady, that' is so faire and bright.

Nowe have I tolde The, soth to say,
My firste songe, upon a day
I bethought me what mochil wo
And sorowe that I suffrid tho
For her, and yet she wiste it nought,
Ne tel her durst I not my thought,
Alas! thought I, I can no rede,
And but I tel her, I' am but dede;
And if I tel her, to say sothe,
I am adradde she wol be wrothe,
Alas! what shal I than ydo?
In this debate I was so wo,
Me thought myne hertè braut atwaine;
So at the laste, sothe for to saine,
I bethought me that Dame Nature
Ne formid nevir in cature
So mochil beaute trewily
And bountie, withoutin mercy.

In hope of that, my tale I tolde
With sorowe, as that I ner sholde,
For nedis, and maugre myne hed
I must have tolde her, or be ded:
I n'ot wel howe that I began,
Ful yvil reherce it I can,
And eke as helpe me God withal
I trowe it was in the dismal
That was the ten woundes of Egypte,
For many' a worde I ovirskipte
In telling my tale, for pure fere
Lest that my wordis mylfeset were:
With sorowful hert, and woundes dede,
Softely and quaking for pure drede
And shame, and stinting in my tale,
For ferde and min hewe allè pale,
Ful ofte I wexte bothe pale and red,
Bowing to her I hinge the hed,
I durst not onis loke her on,
For wit, manir, and al was gone,
I saide: mercy swete, and no more,
It n'as no game, it fate me fore.

So at the laste, the sothe to saine,
Whan that myne herte was come againe,
To tellin shortly al my speche,
With whole herte I gan her besече,
That she wolde be my lady swete,
And swore, and hertely gan her hete
Evir to be stedfaste and trewe,
And love her alway freshly newe,
And nevir othir lady have,
And all her worship for to save
As I beste coude, I swere her this,
For yours is al that er ther is,
For evirmore, myne hertè swete,
And ner to false you, but I mete,

I n'yl, as wise God helpe me so.

And whan I had my tale ydo,
God wote she' acompid not a stre
Of al my tale, so thoughtin me,
To tel shortly, right as it is,
Trewly her answer it was this,
I can not nowe wel countrefete
Her wordis, but this was the grete
Of her answer: she sayid nay
1170 Al utterly; alas that day

The sorowe' I suffrid and the wo!
That trewly Cassandra, that so
Bewaylid the distruccion
Of Troye, and of Ilion,
Had ner soche sorowe as I tho,
I durstin no more say therto
For pure fere, but ystale away,
And thus I lyved ful many' a day,
That trewily I had no nede
1180 Firthir than at my bedd'is hede
Nevir a day to sechin sorowe,
I founde it redy every morowe,
For why? I loved her in no gere.

So it befell an othir yere
I thought onis I wouldin sonde
To doe her knowe, and undirstonde
My wo, and she well undirstode
That I ne wilnid thyng but gode,
And worship, and to kepe her name
1190 Ovir all thynges, and drede her shame,
And was so busie her to serve,
And pitie were I shouldin sterve,
Sithe that I wilned none harme iwis.

So when my Ladie knewe all this,
My Ladie yave me all whollie
The noble yest of her mercie,
Savyng her worship by al waies,
Dredelesse, I mene none othir waies,
And therewith she yave me a ryng,
1200 I trowe it was the firste thyng,
But if myne hertè was iwaxe
Glad, that it is no nede to axe.

As helpe me God, I was as blive
Yraisd, as fro deth to live,
Of all happis the aldirbest,
The gladdist, and the moste at rest,
1280 For truilie that swete wight,
When I had wrong, and she the right
She wouldin alwaie so godelie
Foryeve me so debonairlie,
1210 In all my youth, in allè chaunce
She toke me in her govinaunce,
Therewith she was alwaie so true,
Our joye was evir iliche newe,
Our hertis werne so even a paire,
That nevir n'as that one contraire
1290 Unto that othir for no wo,
For sothe iliche thei suffrid tho.

O blisse, and eke o sorowe bothe,
1220 Illiche thei were bothe glad and wrothe.

All was us one, withoutin were,
And thus we lived full many' a yere
So well, I can not tellin how.

Sir (qð I) and where is she now?
Now qð he and ystinte anone,
Therewith he woxe as dedde as stonè,
1300 And saied, alas that I was bore!
That was the losse, that here before
I tolde The, that I had ylone.

Bethinke The how I saied beforene,
1230 Thou wost full lityl what thou menest,
For I have losse more then thou wenest.

God wot alas! right that was she.
Alas sir how! what maie that be?

1240

1250

1260

1270

1280

1290

1300

She

She is dedde: Naie! Yes by my trouthe.
 Is that your losse? by God it is routhe. 1310
 And with that wordè right anone
 Thei gan to strake forthe, all was done
 For that tyme, the Hart huntynge.
 With that me thoughtin that this kyng
 Began homewardis for to ride
 Unto a place was there beside,
 Whiche that was from us but a lite,
 A long castil with wallis white,
 By saint John on a richè hill,
 As me mette, but thus it befill. 1320
 Right thus me mette, as I you tell,
 That in the castell there was a bell,
 As it had smittin houris twelve,
 And therewith I awoke my felve,
 And found me lying in my bedde,
 And the boke whiche that I had redde
 Of Alcyone, and Ceix the kyng,
 And of the Goddis of slepyng,
 I found it in myne hond ful evin,
 Thought I, this is so queint a swevin, 1330
 That I would by processe of tyme
 Fonde to put this swevin in rime,
 As I can best, and that anon
 This was my swevin, now it is doen.
Explicit.

This seems an Envoy to the Duke of Lancaster
 after his Loss of Blanch.

MY master. &c. When of Christ our kyng
 Was askid, what is trothe or sothfastnesse,

He not a worde answerde to that askyng,
 As who saieth, no manne is all true I gette,
 And therefore, though I hight for to expresse
 The sorowe' and woe that is in Mariage;
 I dare not writen of it no wickidnesse,
 Lest I my self fall eft in soche dotage.
 I woll not faie how that it is the chaine
 Of Sathanas, on whiche he knowith ever, 10
 But I dare saine, were he out of his paine,
 As by his will he would be boundin never,
 But thilke dotid sole, that eft hath lever
 Ichainid be. than out of prisone crepe,
 God let hym nevir fro his woe discover,
 Ne no man hym bewailin, though he wepe.
 But yet lesse thou do worse, takith a wife,
Bet is to wedde, than brennin in worse wife,
 But thou shalt have so'rowe on thy fleshe thy life;
 And ben thy wiv'is thraile, as saine these wife, 20
 And if that ho'y writte maie not suffise,
 Experience shall The teche, so maie happe,
 Take the waie levir to be taken in Frise,
 Then eft to fall of Weddyng in the trappe.
 This lityl writte, proverbis or figure,
 I sende you, takith kepe of it I rede,
Unwise is he, that can no wele endure,
If thou be fikir, put The not in drede,
 The wife of Bathe I praeie you that ye rede
 Of this matter which that we have on honde, 30
 God grauntin you your life frely to lede
 In fredome, for foule is it to be bonde.
Explicit.

The Assemble of Foules.

All Fowles are gather'd before Nature on St. Valentine's Day, to chuse their Mates. A formal Eagle being beloved of three Tercels, requireth a Year's respite to make her choice, upon this Triall, Qui bien aime, tard oublie, he that loveth well, is slow to forget.

THE life so short, the craft so long to lerne,
 The assaye so hard, so sharp the conquere-
 ryng,
 The dredefull joy, alwaie that flit so yerne,
 All this mene I by love, that my felyng
 Astonieth with his wondirfull werkyng
 So fore iwis, that when I on him thinke,
 Naught wete I well, whether I flete or sink!

For all be that I knowe not love in dede
 Ne wot how that he quitith folke ther hire,
 Yet happith me full ofte in bokis rede 10
 Of his miraclis, and his cruill ire,
 There rede I well he woll be lorde and fire,
 I dare not faie, his strokis be so fore,
 But God save soche a lorde, I can no more.

Of usage, what for lust and what for lore,
 On bokis rede I oft, as I you tolde,
 But wherfore that I speke all this, naught yore
 Agon, it happid me for to beholde
 Upon a boke iwrite with lettirs old,

And thereupon a certain thing to lerne 20
 The longe daie full fast I radde and yerne;
 For out of the olde feldis, as men saieth,
 Comith all this newe corne, fro yere to yere,
 And out of oldè bokis, in gode saieth
 Comith all this newe science, that men lere;
 But now to purpose, as of this mattere
 To redin forthe, it gan me so delite,
 That all that daie me thought it but a lite.

This boke, of whiche I makin mencion,
 Entitlid was right thus, as I shall tell, 30
 Tullius of the drame of Scipion,
 Chapters seven it had, of heven and hell,
 And yerth, and foulis that therein do dwell,
 Of whiche, as shortly as I can it trete,
 Of this sentence I woll you saine the grete.

First tellith it, when Scipion was come
 In Affrike, how he metith Massinisse,
 That hym for joie in armis hath inome,

5 N

Then

Then tellith he her speche, and all the blisse,
That was betwixt 'hem, til the daie gan misse, 40
And how his auncester Affrikan so dere
Gan in his slepe that night till hym appere.

Then tellith it, that from a sterrie place
How Affrikan hath hym Carthage yshewed,
And warnid hym beforne of all his grace,
And saied hym what man, lerid eithir leude,
That lovith common profite, well itheude,
He should into a blisfull place ywende,
There as joye is, that last withoutin ende.

Then askid he, if folke that here ben dede 50
Have life, and dwellyng in an othir place.
And Affrikan saied ye, withoutin drede,
And how our present worldly liv'is space
N'is but a manir deth, what waie we trace,
And rightfull folke shull gon aftir thei die
To heven, and shewid hym the Galaxie.

Then shewed he him the little yerth that here is
To regarde of the hevin's quantite,
And after shewid he hym the nine speris,
And aftir that the melodie herd he, 60
That comith of thilke speris thryis thre,
That welles of Musike ben, and melodie
In this worlde here, and cause of harmonie.

Then saied he him, sens that yerth was so lite,
And full of tourment, and of hardè grace,
That he ne shuld hym in this worlde delite,
Then tolde he him in certain yeris space
That every sterre should come into his place
There it was first, and all should out of mind,
That in this worlde is doen of all mankynd. 70

Then praied hym Scipion, to tell hym all
The waie to come into that hevin blisse
And he saied: First knowe thy self immortal,
And loke aie busely that thou werche and wisse
To common profite, and thou shalt not misse
To come swiftly, unto that place dere,
That full of blisse is, and of foulis clere.

And brekirs of the lawe, the sothe to saine,
And likerous folke, aftir that thei ben dede,
Shull whirle about the world, alwaie in pain, 80
Till many' a worlde be passid, out of drede,
And then foryevin all ther wickid dede,
Then shullin thei come to that blisfull place,
To whiche to comin God sendin The grace.

The daie gan failin, and the darkè night,
That revith bestis from ther businesse,
Berafte me my boke for lacke of light,
And to my bedde I gan me for to dresse
Fulfilled of thought, and busie hevinesse,
For bothe I had thyng, whiche that I ne wolde 90
And eke I ne had that thyng that I wolde.

But finally my spirite at the laste
For werie of my labour all that daie
Toke rest, that madin me to slepin faste,
And in my slepe I met, as that I laie,
How Affrikan, right in the self araie,
That Scipion hym sawe, before that tide,
Was come, and stode right at my bedd'is side.

The werie huntir slepyng in his bedde,
The wodde ayen his minde goith anone, 100
The Judge ydremith how his plees be spedde,
The Cartir dremith how his cartis gone,
The rich of gold, the knight fight with his fone,

The sicke ymette he drinkith of the tonne,
The lovir mette he hath his ladie wonne.

Can I not saine, if that the cause ywere
For I had radde of Affrikan beforne,
That madin me to mete that he stode there,
But thus saied he: thou hast The so wel borne
In lokyng of myne olde boke all to torne, 110
Or whiche Macrobie ne raught not a lite,
That somedele of thy labour would I quite.

Thou Citherea, blisfull Ladie swete,
That with thy fire brond dauntist when The lest,
That madist me this swevin for to mete,
Be thou my helpe in this, for thou maist best,
As wisely as I seigh the North Northwest
When I began my swevin for to write,
So yeve me might to rime it and endite.

This foresaid Affrikan me hent anone, 120
And forthe with hym unto a gate ybrought
Right of a Parke, ywallid with grene stone,
And oer the gate with lettirs large ywrought
There werin versis writtin, as me thought,
On eithir halfe, of full grete difference,
On which I shall you saie the plain sentence.

Through me men gon into that blisful place,
Of hertis hele, and dedly woundis cure,
Through me men gone into the well of grace,
There grene and lustie Maie shall er endure, 130
This is the waie to all gode avinture,
Be glad thou reder, and thy sorowe' of cast,
All open am I, passe in, and spede The fast.

Through me men gon, then spake that othir side,
Unto the mortall strokis of the spere,
Of whiche disdain and daungir is the gide,
There nevir tre shall fruit, ne levis bere,
This streme you ledith to the so'rowfull were,
There as the fishe in prison is all drie,
The' eschewyng is onely the remedie. 140

These versis of gold andASURE writte were,
Of whiche I gan astonied to beholde,
For with that one encrefid all my fere,
And with that othir gan my herte to bolde,
That one me het, that othir did me colde,
No wit had I, for errour for to chese
To entre' or flie, or me to save or lese.

Right as betwixtin Adamantis two
Of evin weight a pece of yron set
Ne hath no might to movin to ne fro, 150
For what that one maie hale, that othir let,
So fared I, that I n'ist where me was bet
To entre' or leve, til Affrikan my gide
Me hent and shovin, at the gatis wide.

And saied, it standith writtin in thy face
Thyne errour, though thou tell it not to me,
But dred The not to come into this place,
For this writyng is nothyng mente by The,
Ne by none, but he Lov'is servaunt be,
For thou of Love hast lost thy rast I gesse, 160
As sicke man hath of swete and bittirnesse.

But nathèles, although that thou be dull,
That which thou canst not doe, yet maifest thou se,
For many' a man, that maie not stande a pull,
Yet liketh it hym at wrestlyng for to be,
And demith whethir he doe bet, or he,
And if thou haddist connyng for t' endite,
I shall The shewin mattir of to write.

With

With that my hand in his he toke anon,
Of whiche I comfort caught, and went in fast, 170
But Lorde! so I was glad, and well begon,
For ovir all, where I myne eyin cast,
Were treis clad with leves, that aie shal last,
Eche in his kinde, with colour freshe and grene,
As Emeraude, that joie it was to sene.

The bildir Oke, and eke the hardie Ashe,
The pillir Elme, the coffir unto caraine,
The Boxe pipetre, the Holme to whippis lashe,
The sailing Firre, the Cypres deth to plaine,
The shortir Ewe, the Aspe for shaftis plaine, 180
The Olive of pece, and eke the dronkin vine,
The victor Palme, the Laurir to divine.

A gardein sawe I, full of blofomed bowis,
Upon a Rivir, in a grenè Mede
There as swetenesse evirmore inough is,
With flouris white, and blew, yelow, and rede,
And colde and clere Welleftremis, nothyng dede,
That swomminfull of smalè fishis light,
With finnis rede, and scalis silvir bright.

On every bough the birdis herd I syng 190
With voice of angell, in ther harmonie
That busied 'hem, ther birdis forthe to bryng,
The little pretie Conies to ther plaie gan hie;
And furthir all about I gan espie
The dredfull Roe, the Buck, the Hart, and Hind,
Squirils, and bestis small of gentle kind.

Of instrumentes of stringis in accorde
Herd I so plaie a ravishyng swetnesse,
That God, that makir is of all and Lorde,
Ne herd nevir a bettir, as I gesse, 200
Therewith a winde, unneth it might be lesse,
Made in the levis grene a noise soft
Accordant to the foulis song on loft.

The aire of the place so attempre was,
That ner was ther grevaunce of hot ne cold,
There was eke every wholsome spice and gras,
Ne no man maie there waxin like ne old,
Yet was there more joie a thousande fold
Then I can tell, or evir could or might, 210
There is evir clere daie, and nevir night.

Undir a tre beside a well I feye
Cupide our lorde his arrowes forge and file,
And at his fete his bowe all redie laye,
And well his doughtir temprid all the while
The heddis in the well, and with her wile
She couchid 'hem aftir as thei should serve,
Some for to flea, and some to wound and carve.

Tho was I ware of plesance anon right,
And of arraie, luste, beaute, and curtise,
And of the craft, that can yhave the might 220
To doen by force a wight to doen folie,
Disfigurid was she, I will not lie,
And by hymself, undir an Oke I gesse,
Sawe I Delite, that stode with Gentilnesse.

Then sawe I beauteie, with a nice atire,
And youth, all full of game and jolite,
Fole hardinesse, flattirie, and desire,
Messagerie, and mede, and othir thre,
Ther namis shall not here be tolde for me,
And upon pillirs grete of Jaspir long 230
I sawe a temple of Brasse ifoundid strong.

And about the temple dauncid alwaie
Women inow, of which some there ywere

Faire of 'hemself, and some of 'hem were gaie,
In kirtils all disheveled went thei there,
That was ther office er, fro yere to yere,
And on the temple sawe I white and faire
Of Dovyis fittyng many a thousande paire.

Before the temple dore full sobirlye
Dame Pece ysat, a curtaine in her honde, 240
And her besidis wondir discretlye
Dame Pacience ysittyng there I fonde,
With face pale, upon an hill of sonde,
And althir nexte, within and eke without
Behest and Arte, and of ther folke a rout.

Within the temple of sighis hote as fire
I herd a swough, that gan about to ren,
Whiche sighis were engendrid with desire,
That madin every herte for to bren 250
Of newè flambe, and well espied I then
That all the cause of sorowes, that thei drie,
Come of the bittir Goddis jelousie.

The God Priapus sawe I as I went
Within the temple in soveraine place ystonde
In soche arraie, as when the Assie hym shent
With crie by night, and with sceptre in honde,
Full busilie men gan assaie and fonde
Upon his hedde to set of sondrie hewe
Garlandis, full of freshe flouris newe.

And in a privie corner, in disport 260
Founde I Venus, and her portir Richeffe,
That was full noble, and hautin of her port,
Darke was that place, but aftirward lightnesse
I sawe a lite, unnethes it might be lesse,
And on a bed of golde she laie to reste,
Till that the hote Sonne began to Weste.

Her gildid heris with a goldin threde
Iboundin were, untressid as she laie,
And nakid from the brest unto the hede
Men might herse, and sothly for to saie 270
The remenaunt covired well to my paie
Right with a lityl kercheffe of Valence,
There n'as no thickir clothe of no defence.

The place gave a thousande favours sote,
And Bacchus God of Wine fate her beside,
And Ceres next, that doeth of hunger bote,
And as I faied, amidis laie Cypride,
To whom on kneis the yong folkis cride
To be ther helpe, but thus I let her lie,
And farthir in the temple I gan espie, 280

That in dispite of Diana the chaste
Full many a bowe ibroke hing on the wall
Of maidins, soche as gone ther tymis waste
In her service, and paintid ovir all
Of many a storie, of whiche I touchin shall
A fewe, as of Calisto and Atalante,
And many a maide, of which the name I want,

Semiramis, Candace, and Hercules,
Biblis, Dido, Thisbe, and Pyramus, 290
Tristram, Isoude, Paris, and Achilles,
Helaine, Cleopatra, and Troilus,
Scylla, and eke the mother of Romulus,
All these were paintid on that othir side,
And all ther love, and in what plite thei dide.

When I was comen ayen into the place
That I of spake, that was so sote and grene,
Forthe walked I tho, my selvin to solace,
Tho was I ware, where there ysate a Quene,
That

That as of light the Sommir Sonnè shene
Passith the Sterre, right so ovir mesure 300
She fairir was then any other cature.

And in a launde, upon an hill of floures,
Was set this Quene this noble Goddesse Nature,
Of braunchis were her hallis and her boures
Iwrought, after her craft, and her mesure,
Neither n'as foule, that cometh of engendrure,
That there ne were yprest, in her presence,
To take her dome, and yeve her audience.

For this was on sainct Valentin's daie,
When every foule comith to chese her make 310
Of every kinde, than men ythinkin maie,
And that so huge a noise gan thei to make,
The yerth, the se, and tre, and every lake
So full was, that unnethis there was space
For me to stande, so full was all the place.

And right as Alaine, in the plaint of kinde,
Deviseith Nature of soche araie and face,
In soche araie men mightin her there finde,
This noble Empreffe full of allè grace 320
Bad ev'ry foule takin her owne place,
As thei were wont alwaie, fro yere to yere,
On sainct Valentines daie to standin there.

That is to saie, the foulis of ravine
Were highist set, and then the foulis smale,
That etin, as them Nature would encline,
As worme or thing, of whiche I tell no tale,
And watirfoule sate lowist in the dale,
And foules that liveth by fede, sat on the grene,
And that so fele, that wondir was to fene.

There mightin men the roiall Egle finde, 330
That with his sharpe loke persith the son.
And othir Eglis of a lowir kinde,
Of whiche that clerkis well devisin con,
There was the tirant with his fethirs don
And grene, I mene the goshaue that doth pine
To birdes, for his outrageous ravine.

The gentle faucon, that with his fete distreineth
The kyng's hand, the hardie Sperhauke eke
The Qual's foe, the Merlion that peineth
Hymself full oft, the Larkè for to seke, 340
There was the Dove, with her eyin so meke,
The jelous Swan, ayenst his deth that singeth,
The Oule eke, that of deth the bode ybringeth,

The Crane, the Geant, with his tromp's foune,
The thief the Chough, and eke the chattring Pie,
The scornynge Jaie, the Ele's foe the Heroune,
The false Lapwing, alle full of trechirie,
The Starling, that the counsaile can bewrie,
The tame Ruddocke, and the cowarde Kite, 350
The Cocks, that horologe is of thropes lite.

The Sparow Venus son, the Nightingale
That clepith forthe the freshe levis newe,
The Swalowe murdrer of the Beis smale,
That maken honie of flouris freshe of hewe,
The weddid Turtell, with his herte true,
The Pecocke, with his angell fethirs bright,
The Fesaunt, scornir of the Cocks by night.

The waker Gose, the Cuckowe er unkinde,
The Poppingeie full of delicacie, 360
The Drake destroyir of his owne kinde,
The Storke, the wrekir of advouterie,
The hote Cormeraunt, full of glotonie,
The Ravin wife the Crowe, with voice of care,

The Throstill olde, and Frostie feldèfare.

What should I saie? of foules of every kind,
That in this worlde have fethirs and stature,
Men mightin in that place allembliid finde
Before that noble Goddesse of Nature,
And eche of them ydid his busie cure 370
Benignèlie to chese, or for to take
By her accorde, his formell or his make.

But to the point, Nature held on her hond
A formell Egle, of shape the gentillest
That evir she emong her workis fonde,
The moiste benigne, and eke the godeliest,
In her was every vertue at his rest
So farforthe, that nature her self had blisse
To loke on her, and oft her becke to kisse.

Nature, the vicare of the' almightie Lorde,
That hote and colde, hevie, light, moiste, and drie
Hath knit, by evin nombir of accorde,
In esie voice began to speke and saie,
Foulis, take hede of my sentence I praie,
And for your ese, in forðring of your nede,
As fast as I maie speke, I will me spede.

Ye know well, how on S. Valentine's daie,
By my statute, and through my govirnaunce
Ye chese your makes, and attir sie awaie
With 'hem, as I doe pricke you with plesauce, 390
But nathelesse, as by rightfull ordinaunce
Maie I not let, for all this worlde to win,
But he that moiste worthiest is, shall begin.

The tercell Egle, as ye knowe full wele,
The foule roiall, above you' all in degre,
The wise and worthie, secret, true as stele,
The whiche I have formid, as ye maie se,
In every parte, as it best likith me,
It nedith not this shape you to devise,
He shall first chese, and spekin in his gise.

And after hym, by ordir shall ye chese, 400
Attir your kinde, everiche as you likith,
And as your hap is, shall ye win or lese,
But whiche of you, that love most entrikith,
God sende hym her, that forest for hym sikith,
And therewithall the Tercell gan she call,
And saied, my sonne, the choise is to The fall.

But nathelesse, in this condicion
Muste be the choice of everiche that is here,
That she agre to his eleccion,
Who so he be, that should yben her fere, 410
This is our usage aye, fro yere to yere,
And who so maie at this time have his grace,
In blisfull tyme he came into this place.

With hed enclined, and with full humble chere,
This roiall Tercell spake, and taried nought,
Unto my soveraine Ladie, and not my fere,
I chose and chese, with will, and hert, and thought
The formell on your hand, so well iwrought,
Whose I am all, and evir will her serve, 420
Doe what her luste, to doe me live or sterve.

Besechyng her of mercie, and of grace,
As she that is my Ladie soverain,
Or let me die here present in this place,
For certis long maie I not live in pain,
For in my herte is corvin every vain,
Havyng regarde onily to my trouthe,
My dere herte, havith on my wo some routhe.

And

And if that I be founde to her untrue,
Disobeysaunt, or wilfull negligent,
Avauntour, or in proceffe love anewe,
I praie to you this be my judgement,
That with these foulis I be all to rent
That ilke daie, that she me evir finde
To her untrue, or in my gilte unkinde.

And sith none lovith her so well as I,
Although she nevir of love me behet,
Then ought she to be mine, through her mercie,
For othir bonde can I none on her knet,
For for wele nor wo nevir shall I let
To servin her, how far so that she wende,
Saie what you list, my tale is at an ende.

Full right as the sote and freshe redde Rose newe
Against the Sommir Sunne ycoloured is,
Right so for shame all waxin gan the hewe
Of this Formell, when that she herd all this,
Neithir she answerde well, ne saied amis,
So sore abashed was she, till that Nature
Saied, doughtir drede you not, I you assure.

An othir Tercell Egle spake anon,
Of lowir kind, and saied that should not be,
I love her bet then ye doe, by saint John,
Or at the lest I love as well as ye,
And lengir have served her in my degre,
And if she should have loved for long lovyng,
To me alone had be the guerdonyng.

I dare eke saie, if she me findin false,
Unkinde, jangler, rebell in any wise,
Or jelous, doe me hangin by the halfe,
And but I berin me in her servise
As well aye as my wit can me suffice,
Fro point to point, her honour for to save,
Take she my life, and all the gode I have.

The thirde Tercell Egle answerid tho,
Now sirs, ye se the lityl lesir here,
For every foule crieth out to be ago
Forthe with his make, or with his Lady dere,
And eke nature her self ne will not here,
For taryng her, not half that I would seie,
And but I speke, I must for sorowe deie.

Of longe service avaunt I me nothing,
But as possible' is me to die to day
For wo, as he that hath be languishing
This twenty wintre', and wel it happin may,
A man may serve bettir, and more to pay,
In halfe a yere, although it were no more,
Than some man doth, that hath servid ful yore.

I say not this by me, for I ne can
Do no servise, that may my lady plesse,
But I dare say, I am her trewist man,
As to my dome, and fainist wolde her plesse,
At shorte wordis, til that dethe me cese
I wil be hers, whethir I wake or winke,
And trewe, in al that herte may bethinke.

Of al my lyfe syth that day I was borne
So gentle ple, in love or othir thinge
Ne herdin nevir no man me beforen,
Who so that had right lesir and conninge
For to reherse ther chere, and ther spekyng,
And from the morowe gan this speche laste
Till downward went the sonne wondir faste.

The noife of foulis for to be deliverde
So loudè range, have don and let us wende,

That wel wende I, the wode had all to shiverd,
Come of they cried, alas! ye wil us shende,
Whan shal your cursid pleding have an ende?
How shulde a judge on eithir partie leve
For ye or nay, withoutin any preve.

The gofe, the cuckowe, and the ducke also
So cryid keke keke, cuckow, queke queke hye,
Thorough myne eris the noyse wente tho,
The gofe sayde than al this nys worthe a flye,
But I can shape herof a remedye,
And wil ylay my verdite, faire and swithe,
For watir foule, who so be wrothe or blithe.

And I for worme foule, saied the sole cuckow,
For I wil of min owne autorite,
For common spede, take on me the charge now,
For to deliver us is grete charite,
Ye may abydin a while, yet perde.
(Qd the the turtel) if that it be your wil
A wight may speke, it were as gode be stil.

I am a fede foule, one the unworthiest
That wote I wel, and the lest of connyng,
But bettir is, that a wight is tonge rest
Than entremetin him of soche doynge,
Of whiche he neithir redin can nor singe,
And who so' it doth, ful foule him self acloyeth,
For office uncommittid ofte anoyeth.

Nature, whiche that alway yhad an ere
To murmure of the leudeneffe behinde,
With faconde voice saied, hold your tongis there,
And I shal sone, I hope a counsaile finde
You to deliver, and fro this noyse unbynde,
I charge of every flocke ye shall one cal,
To say the verdite of you foulis all.

Assentid were to this conclusyon
The birdis al, and foulis of ravine
Have chosin first, by plaine election,
The Tercet, of the faucon to define.
Al ther sentence, and as him lust to termine,
And to Nature him gan they to presente,
And she acceptith him with glad entente.

The Tercet sayd than in this manere,
Ful harde it were to preve it by reson
Who lovith best this gentil Formel here,
For everiche hath soche replicacion,
That by skillis may non be brought adoun,
I cannat se that argumentes availe,
Than semith it there must be a bataille.

Al redy, qd this Egle tercelles tho;
Nay sirs (qd he) if that I durst it say,
Ye do me wronge, my tale is not ydo,
For sirs, ne takith nat a grese I pray,
It may not be as ye wolde in this way,
Ours is the voice, that have the charge in hande,
And to the Judg is dome ye muste ystande;

And therefore pece I say, as to my wit
Me woldin thinke, how that the worthiest
Of knyghthode, and lengist had usid it,
Molt of estate, of blode the gentillest,
Were fittingest for her, if that her lest,
And of these thre she wote her selfe I trowe
Whiche that he be, for it is light to knowe.

The watir foulis have ther heddis laide
Togithir, and of shorte avisement
Whan everiche had his verdite ysaide,
They saidin sothely al by one assent,

Howe that the gose, with the facondè gent
That so desirith to pronounce our nede,
Shal tel our tale, and prayed to God her spede.

And for these watir foulis tho began
The gose to speke, and in her cakelynge
She said, pece nowe, take kepe every man,
And herken whiche a reson I shal forth bring,
My witte is sharpe, I love no taryng,
I say I rede him, tho he were my brother,
But she wil love him, let him love another.

Lo here a parfite reson of a gose!
Tho (qð the sperhauke) nevir mote she The,
Lo soche a thing it is to have a tonge lose! 570
Nowe parde sole, yet were it bet for The
Have holde thy pece, than shewde thy nicete,
It lyeth nat in his wit, nor in his wil,
But sothe is saide, a sole can nat be still.

The laughtir arose of gentil foulis al,
And right anone the fede foules chosin had
The Turtel trewe, and gan her to hem call,
And prayid her to say the sothe sad
Of this matir, and askid what she rad,
And she answered that plainly her entent 580
She wolde shewe, and sothly what she ment.

Nay, God forbede a lovir shuldè change
The Turtel said, and wexte for shame al rede,
Though that his lady evirmore be strange,
Yet let him serve her ay, tyl he be dede,
Forsothe, I ne praise not the gos'is rede,
For tho she dyed, I wolde none othir make,
I wil be hers, tyl that the dethe me take.

Welybourdid (qð the ducke) by my hat
That men shouldin love alway causelesse, 590
Who can a reson finde or wit in that
Dauncith he mery, that is mirthlesse,
Who shuldin recke, of that is rechelesse?
Ye queke yet (qð the ducke) ful wel and faire,
There be no sterres in the skye than a paire.

Nowe fye churle (qð the gentil Terclet)
Out of the dounghil came that word aright,
Thou canst not se which thinge is wel beset,
Thou farell by love, as owlis do by light,
The day hem blindeth, ful wel they se by night, 600
Thy kinde is of so lowe a wretchidnelle
That what love is, thou canst not se nor gesse.

Tho gan the cuckow put him forthe in prece
For foule that etith worme, and sayid blyve,
So I (qð he) may have my make in pece
I ne wretche nought howe longè that ye strive,
Let eche of hem be soleine al ther lyve,
This is my rede, sens they may nat acorde,
This shortè lesion nedith not recorde.

Ye, have the glutton filde inow his paunche, 610
Then are we wel, sayid the Emerlon,
Thou murdrir of the heifugge, on the braunche,
That brought The forth, thou most rufull glutton,
Live thou solen, wormis corrupcion,
For no force is of lacke of thy nature,
Go, leude be thou, while that the world may dure!

Nowe pece (qð Nature) I commaundin here,
For I have herde al your opinion,
And in effeete yet be we ner the nere,
But finally, this is my conclusion, 620
That she her selfe, shal have her election
Of whom her list, who so be wroth or blithe,

Him that she cheseth, he shal her have as swithe.

For sithe it may not here discussid be
Who loveth her best, as said the Terclet,
Than wol I done this favour to her, that she
Shal have right him, on whom her hert is set,
And he her, that his hert hath on her knet,
This judge I nature, for I may not lye
To none estate, I have none othir eye. 630

But as for counsaile for to chofe a make,
Yf I were reson, certis than woulde I
Counsaillin you, the royal Tercel take,
As sayd the Terclet ful skilfully,
As for the gentilist, and most worthy,
Which I have wrought so wel to my plesance,
That to you it ought ben a suffaunce.

With dredfull voice the Formell her answerde,
My rightfull lady, goddesse of Nature,
Soth is, that I am er undir your yerde, 640
As is als' evèriche othir cature,
And must be yours, while that my life may dure,
And therfore grauntith me my firste bone,
And myne entent you wol I say right sone.

I graunt it you (qð she) and right anone
This Formel Egle spake in this degre.
Almighty quene, unto this yere be done
I aske respite for to avysin me,
And aftir that to have my choyce all fre;
This al and some, that I wold speke and sey, 650
Ye get no more, although ye do me dey;

I wol not servin Venus, ne Cupide,
Forsothe as yet, by no manir of way;
Nowe sens it may none othir wayes betide
(Qð Dame Nature) here is no more to say,
Than wolde I that these foulis were away
Eche with his make, for taryng lengir here,
And said hem thus, as ye shal aftir here.

To you speke I, ye Terclets (qð Nature)
Beth of gode herte, and servith alle thre, 660
A yere is not so longe for to endure,
And eche of you paine him in his degre
For to do wel, for God wote quit is she
Fro you this yere, what aftir so befall,
This entremes is dressid for you all.

And whan this werk ybrought was to an ende,
To every foule Nature yave his make
By even acorde, and on ther way they wende,
And lorde the blisse and joye which that they make!
For ech gan othir in his wingis take, 670
And with ther neckis eche gan othir winde,
Thankynge aye the noble goddesse of kinde.

But first were chosin foulis for to singe,
As yere by yere was alway ther usauce
To singe a roundel at ther departing,
To do to Nature honour and plesance,
The note, I trowe, ymakid was in Fraunce,
The wordis were soche, as ye may here find
The nextè vers, as I nowe have in minde.

Qui bien aime tard oublie.

Now welcom somir, with thy sonnis soft, 680
That haste this wintir wethirs ovirshake,
Saint Valentine, thou arte full hye on losfe,
Which drivist away the longe nightis blake,
Thus singin smale foulis for thy sake,
Well havin thy cause for to gladin ofte.

Sens

Sens eche of 'hem recovered hath his make,
Ful blisful maie they sing when they awake.

And with the shouting when ther songe was do
That the foulis made at ther flight away,
I woke, and othir bokis toke me to 690

To rede upon, and yet I rede alway,
I hope ywis to redin so some day
That I shal metin some thinge for to fare
The bet, and thus to rede I n'il not spare.

Explicit.

The Floure of Courtesie, made by JOHN LIDGATE.

In this Book are set forth the rare Vertues of a certain Lady; made by John Lidgate, as some think, in the behalfe of some Gentlewoman in the Court.

IN Feverier, when that the frostie Mone
Was hornid, full of Phæbus fierie light,
And that she gan to raise her stremis sone,
St. Valentine, upon thy blisfull night
Of dutie, when that glad is every wight,
And foulis chese, to voide ther oldè sorow,
Everiche his make upon the nextè morow,

The samè time I herde a Larke yfing
Full lustily againe the morow gray,
Awake, ye Loveres, out of your slumbring
This glade morow, in alle the haste ye may,
Doith some observaunce unto this day,
Your choise agen of hertè to renew
In confirming, for evir to be true.

And ye that be of chesing at your large
This lustie day, by custome of nature;
Take upon you the blisful holie charge
To fervin Love while that your Life may dure,
With body, herte, and alle your besy cure
For evirmore, as Venus and Cypride
For you disposith, and the God Cupide.

For joy owin ye plainly to obey
Unto this Lord's mighty ordinaunce,
And mercilesse full rathir for to dey,
Than evre' in you be founding variaunce,
And though your Life be medli'd with grevaunce,
And at your hert's closet be your wound,
Beth alway one, there as ye are ybound.

That when I herdin had and listid long
With devout herte the lusty melody
Of this hevinly comfortable Song,
So agreable, as by harmony,
I rose anone, and fast I gan me hie
Toward a grove, and the way ytake
Foulis to fene everiche chese his Make.

And yet I was full thirsty' in languishing,
Mine Ague was so fervent in his herte,
When Aurora for drerie complaining
Gan to distill her christall teris wete
Upon the Soyle, with Silver dew so swete,
For she ne durstin not for Shame appere
Undir the light of Phæbus bemis clere.

And so for anguish of my painis kene,
And eke for constraint of my fighis sore,
I set me downe undir a laurir grene
Full pitously, and alwey more and more
As I beheld into the holtis hore,
I gan complaine mine inward dedely smerte

That aye so fore crampisnith at mine herte.

And whilis that I in my drery paine
Sate, and beheld about on every tre
The foulis sitt alway by twaine and twaine,
Then thought I thus, 'alas! what may this be,
That every foule hath his libertie
Frely to chesin aftir his desire
Everiche his make thus fro yere to yere:

The fely Wren, the Tytemose also,
The little Redbreast, have fre election
To flyin yfere, and togethir go
Whereas them list, aboutin environ,
As they of kind have inclination
And as Nature, the empress and the guide
Of every thing, list for them to provide;

But man alone (alas the hardè stound)
Full cruilly by kind's ordinaunce
Constrainid is, and by statute ybound
And debarrid from all such gode plesaunce?
What menith this, what is this purveiaunce
Of God above againe all right of kind,
Withoutin cause so narowe man to bind?

Thus may I seïn and complaine, alas!
My wofull hour, and my disavinture,
That dolefully stonde in the samè case,
So ferre behinde from allè helthe and cure,
My wound abidith like a surfanure,
For me Fortune so felly list dispose,
My harme is hid, that I dare not disclose.

For I my herte have sett in soche a place,
Where I am nevir likely for to spede,
So ferre I am yhindrid from her grace,
That save daungir I have none othir mede;
And thus, alas! I n'ote who shall me rede,
Ne for myn helpè shapin remedie,
For malebouche, and for false envie.

The whichè twaine aye stondith in my wey
Maliciously, and false suspeccion
Is verry cause also why that I die,
Ginning and rote of my destruccion,
So that I felin in conclusion
That with ther trainis they wollin me shende
That dethe more of my labour make an ende.

Yet or I die, with hertè, will, and thought
To God of Lovè this avowe I make,
As I best can, how dere that it be bought,
Where so it be that I or slepe or wake,

Whilis

Whilis that Boreas doth the levis shake,
As I have hight, plainly untill I sterue,
For wele or wo, that I shall her yserue.

And for her sake, now on this holie time,
St. Valentine, somewhat shullin I write,
Although so be it that I can nat rime,
Nor curiously by no craft endite,
Yet levir I have that she put the wite
In my unconning, than in negligence,
Whatevir I fay of her excellence.

Whatevir I fay it is of dutie,
In sothefastnes, and no presumption,
This I ensure to you that shall it se,
That it is all undir correction
What I reherse in commendation
Of her, that I shall to you as belive,
So as I can, her vertues here describe.

Right by example, as the summir sunne
Passith the steris with his bemis shene,
And Lucifer among the skyis dunne
A morow shewith to voide night's tene,
So verily, withoutin any wene,
My lady passith, whoso takith hede,
All tho alive, to speke of womanhede.

And as the Rubie hath the soveraintie
Of richè stonis, and the regalie,
And as the Rose of swetenesse and beauteie
Of freshe flouris, without any lie,
Right so in sothe, with her so godely eye
She passith alle in bountie and fairenesse
Of mannir eke and of her gentilnesse.

For she is both the fairist and the best,
To rekin all, in verry sothefastnes,
For every vertue is in her at rest;
And furthirmore to speke of stedfastnes,
She is the rote, and of semelimesse
The very mirrour, and of govirnaunce
To all example, without variaunce.

Of port benigne, and wondir glade of chere,
Evirmore having her true advertence
Alway to reson, so that her desire
Is bridlid ay by wit and providence;
Thereto of wit and also of high prudence
She is the well, yet aye devoid of pride,
That unto vertue her self is the guide.

And ovir all this, in her dalliaunce
Lowly to all she is, discrete, and wise,
And godely glade, by right temperaunce,
That every wight, of high and low degre,
Are rightfull glade in herte with her to be,
So that shortly, if that I shall not lie,
She namid is the Floure of Curtisie.

And thereto, to speke of Feminitie,
She' is the leste mannish in comparison,
Godely abashid, having ay pitie
Of them that ben in tribulation,
For she alone is consolation
To all that arne in mischefe and in nede,
To comfortin them, of her womanhede.

And aye in vertue is her besy charge,
Sad and demure, and but of wordis few,
Dredefull also of tonguis that ben large,
Eschewing aye them, that listin to hew
Above ther hedde, ther wordis for to shew,
Dishonestly to speke of any wight,

She deddely hatith of them to' have a fight.

The herte of whome so honest is and clene,
And her entent so faithfull and entere,
That she ne may for all the world sustene
To suffir her eres any word to here
Of frend nor foe, neithir ferrè ne nere,
Amisf resowne, that hindir shulde his name,
And if she do, she wexith redde for shame.

So truly in her mening she is sette
Without chaunging, or any doublenesse,
For bountie' and beauteie are togethir knet
In her person, undir firm faithfulnessse,
For devoid she is of newfanglenesse,
In herte ay one for evir to persever
There she is sette, and nevir to dislever.

I am to rude, her vertues everychone
Connyngly to discrivin and to write
For well ye wote that colour have I none
Like her discretion, craftely to endite,
For what I saying all it is to lite,
Wherefore unto you thus I me excuse,
That I acquaintid am not with no muse,

By Rhetorike my stile for to governe,
And all her preise and commendacion
I am to blynde so hylde to description,
Of her grete godenes for to make discerne,
Save thus I sayin in conclusion
If that I shal her shortly commende,
In her is naught, that nature can amende.

For gode she is, lyke to Polyxene,
And in farenesse like to the quene Helaine,
Stedfast of herte, as was Dorigene,
And wisely trouth, if that I shal nat faine,
In constaunce eke and faith, she maye attaine.
To Cleopatre', and therto as setrone
As was of Troye the white Antigone.

As Hester mekè, lyke Judith of prudence,
Kynde as Alcest, or Marcia Catoun,
And to Griside lyke in paciencè,
And Ariadne of discrecioun,
And to Lucrece, that was of Rome toun
She may be likened as for honeste,
And for her faith, unto Penelope.

To faire Phillis, and to Hypsipyle
For innocence, and eke for womanhede,
For simlimesse unto Canace,
And ovir this to speke of godelihede,
She passith al whiche that I can of rede,
For worde and dede, so that she naught ne fal,
Acorde in vertue, and her werkis al.

For though that Dido with her wittefull sage
Was in her time right stedfast to Enee,
Of hastinesse nathless she dyd outrage,
And so for Jason dyd also Medee,
But this my lady is so avisee,
That bountie and beauteie both in her demaine,
She makith bountie alway soveraine.

This is to mene, bountie goith afore
Lad by prudence, and hath the soverainte,
And beaute foloweth, ruled by her lore,
That she ne fendin her in no degre
So that in one this godely freshe fre,
Surmounting all, withoutin any were,
Is gode and faire, in one persone yfere.

And

And though that I for very ignoraunce
Ne may discrive her vertues by and by,
Yet on this day for a remembraunce,
Onely supportid undir her mercy,
With quakinge honde I shal ful humbily
To her hienefs my rudenesse for to quite, 230
A lytil balade here beneth endite.

Evir as I can supprize in myne herte
Alway with fere, betwyxtin drede and shame,
Lette out of lose any worde shulde afterte
In this metre, to make it femin lame,
Chaucer is dede, which that had soche a name
Of faire making, that was withoutin wene
Fayrist in our tonge, as the Laurir grene.

We may assayn for to countrefete
His gay style, but it ne wol not ybe, 240
The welle is drie, with the lycoure so swete
Both of Clio, and of Calliope;
And first of all, I woll excusin me
To her that is the ground of godelihede,
And thus I say until her womanhede.

Balade simple.

With al my myght, and alle my best entent,
Wyth all the faithe that mighty God of kinde

Me yave, sith he me soule and knowing sent,
I chese, and to this bonde evir me binde,
To love you best, while I have life and minde. 250
Thus herdin I foulis in the dauninge
Upon the day of sainte Valentine singe.

Yet chese I at beginning this entent,
To lovin you, though I no mercy finde,
And if you lyst I died I wolde assent,
As evir twinne I quick from of this line,
Suffisith me to sene your fethirs ynde.
Thus herde I foulis in the morowninge
Upon the day of sainte Valentine singe.

And ovir this mine hert'is luste to bente 260
In honour onily of the wodde binde
Wholy I yevin, nevir to repente,
In joye or wo, where ere so that I winde,
Tofore Cupido, with his eyin blinde,
The foulis all, when Titan did yspringe
With devout hert me thought I herdin singe.

L'envoye.

Princesse of beautie to you I present
This symple dyte, rude as in makeinge,
Of hert, and will faithfull in mine entent,
Like as this day, the foulis herde I singe. 270

Here endeth the Floure of Curtesy.

Hereafter foloweth how pyte is dede and buried in gentyle herte.

Yte, that I have fought so yore ago
With hertè fore, and full of besy paine,
That in this worlde was nevir wight so wo
Withoutin dethe, and yf I shal nat faine,
My purpose was to pite to complaine
Upon the crueltie and tyrannye
Of love, that for my trouth doth me to die.

And whan that I by length of certaine yeres
Had evir in one fought a time to spcke 10
To pite ran I all bespreint with teres
To prayn her on Cruelte me' a-wreke,
But or I might with any worde out breke,
Or tel her any of my painis smerte,
I found her ded, and buried in an herte.

A downe I fel, whan that I saw the herse,
Ded as a stone, while that the swonne me laste,
But up I rose, with coloure ful diverse,
And pitously on her myne eyen I cast,
And nerir the corse I gan presin fast,
And for the soule I shope me for to pray, 20
I was but lorne, there was no more to say.

Thus am I flaine, sith that Pite is ded,
Alas that day that evir it shulde fal!
What manir man dare nowe hold up his hed?
To whom shal now any foro'wfull hert call,
Nowe Cruelte hath cast to fle us al,
In ydle hope folke redelless of paine,
Sith she is ded, to whom shal we complaine?

But yet encrefith me this wondir newe,
That no wight wote that she is ded but I, 30
So many men as in her tyme her knewe,
And yet she dyid all so sodainly,

For I have fought her er full besily
Sithins that I had firste witte or mind,
But she was ded er that I coude her find.

Aboute her herse there stodin lustily,
Withoutin any mo, as thoughtin me,
Bountie, perfetely well armed and richely,
And frische beaute, and lust, and jolite, 40
Assurid manir, youthe, and Honeste,
Wisdome, estate, with drede and governaunce,
Confedrid both by bonde and aliaunce.

A complainte had I writin in my honde
To have yput to Pyte, as a byl,
But I there al this company yfonde,
That rathir wouldin all my causè spill,
Then do me help, I held my plaintè still,
For to those folke withoutin any faile
Without pite there maie no bill availe.

Then leave all vertues, save onely pitie, 50
Keping the corse, as ye have herd me faine,
Confedrid by bonde unto Crueltie,
And be assentid when I shall be flaine,
And I have put my compleinte up againe,
For to my foes my bill I dare not shewe,
The' effect which sayith thus in word is fewe.

Humblist of herte, hyist of reverence,
Flowir benigne, Coroune of Vertues alle,
Shewith unto your roiall excellence
Your servaunt, if I durstin me so call, 60
His mortall harme, in which he is ifall,
And nought all onely for his wofull fare,
But for your renome, as he shall declare.

It standeth thus that your contrary' crueltie
 Allyid is ayenst your regalie,
 Undir colour of womanly beautie,
 For men shoulidin not knowe her tyrannie,
 With bountie Gentillesse, and Curtesie,
 And hath deprivid you thus of your place,
 That is hie Beaute' apertenant to your grace. 70

For kindly by your heritage and right,
 Ye be annexid evir to bountie,
 And verily ye ought to doe your might
 To helpin trouthe in his adversitie,
 Ye be also the coroune of beautie,
 And certis if that ye want in these twaine,
 The worlde is lore, there is no more to saine.

Eke what availeth manir and gentillesse
 Withoutin you, O most benigne cature,
 Shall crueltie ybe your governess? 80
 Alas! what herte maie it long endure?
 Wherefore but ye rathir ytakin cure
 To brekin that perillous aliaunce
 Ye fleen 'hem that ben in your obeisance.

And furthir ovir, if ye suffir this,
 All your renome is fordoe in a throwe,
 There shall no man ywete what pitie is,
 Alas that your renome is fall so lowe!
 Ye be' also fro your heritage ithrowe
 By crueltie that occupieth your place, 90
 And we dispairid that sekin your grace.

Have merceie on me, thou Herenus Quene,

That you have fought so tendirly and fore,
 O let some streame of light on me be sene,
 That love and drede you er longir the more,
 For sothily to saine, I bere so fore,
 And though I be not connyng for to plaine,
 For God's love have mercie on my paine.

My paine is this, that what so I desire
 That have I not, ne nothyng like thereto, 100
 And evir setteth desire mine herte on fire,
 Eke on that othir side, where that I go,
 What manir thing that may encrese my wo,
 That have I redy unfought every where,
 Me lackith but my deth, and then my bere.

What nedith to shewe percel of my paine,
 Sith every wo, that herte maie bethinke,
 I suffir, and yet dare not to you plaine,
 For well I wote, though that I wake or winke,
 Ye recke not whethir that I flete or sinke, 110
 And nathelesse yet my trouth I shall susteine
 Unto my deth, and that shall well be sene.

This is to saine that I will be yours ever,
 Though ye me flea by crueltie your fo,
 Algate my spirite shall nevir discevir
 Fro your service, for any paine or wo,
 Sith ye be dedde, alas that it is so!
 Thus for your deth I maie wepin and plain,
 With herte fore, and full of belie pain.

Explicit.

La belle Dame sans mercy.

M. Aleyne, Secretary to the King of France, framed this Dialogue between a Gentleman, and a Gentlewoman, who finding no mercy at her hand dyeth for Sorrow.

H Alse in a dreme, not fully well awaked,
 The goldin slepe me wrapped undir his wyng
 Yet not forthy I rose, and well nigh naked
 Al sodainly my felt rememberyng
 Of a mattir, levyng all othir thyng,
 Which I must doe withoutin more delaie
 For them, whiche I ne durst not disobaie.

My charge was this, to translate by and by,
 (All thyng forgive) as parte of my penaunce,
 A boke callid La bel Dame sans mercy, 10
 Whiche Maistr Aleine made of remembrance,
 Chief secretarie with the kyng of Fraunce:
 And hereupon a while I stode musyng,
 And in my self greatly imaginynge,

What wife I should perform the said processe
 Confidiryng by gode advisement
 My unconnyng, and my grete simpleness,
 And ayenward the straite commaundement
 Whiche that I had, and thus in myne entent
 I was vexid and tournid up and doune, 20
 And yet at last, as in conclusioun,

I cast my clothis on, and went my waie
 This foresaid charge having in remembrance,
 Till I came to a lustie grene valaie

Full of flouris, to se a grete plesaunce,
 And so boldly with ther benigne suffraunce,
 Which redin this boke touching this matere
 Thus I began if it plese you to here.

NOT long ago, ridyng an esie paas,
 I fell in thought of joyful desperate, 30
 With grete disese and pain, so that I was
 Of all lovirs the most unfortunate,
 Sith by his darte moste cruill full of hate
 The deth hath take my ladie and maistresse,
 And left me sole, thus discomfite and mate,
 Sore languishyng, and in waie of distresse.

Then said I thus, it fallith me to cesse
 Eithir to rime, or ditees for to make,
 And surely to makin a full promesse
 To laugh no more, but wepe in clothis blake 40
 My joyfull tyme (alas) now doeth it slake,
 For in my self I fele no manir ese,
 Let it be written, soche fortune (as I take)
 Which neithir me, nor non othir doth plese.

If it were so, my wyll or myne entent
 Constrainid were a joyfull thing to write,
 My penne could nevir knowing what it ment,
 To speke thereof my tongue hath no delite,

Who

Tho with my mouthe I laugh mochil or lite,
Mine eyin should make a countenance untrue, 50
My herte also, would have therof despite,
The wepyng teris have so large issue.

These sike lovirs I leve, that to hem longes,
Which lede ther life in hope of alegeaunce,
That is to saie, to make Balades and songes,
Every of hem, as thei fele ther grevaunce,
For she that was my joye, and my plesaunce
Whose soule I prae God of his mercie save,
She hath my will, myne hert's ordinaunce,
Which lyith here, within this tombe igrave. 60

Fro this tyme forth, tyme is to hold my pces,
It werieth me this mattir for to trete,
Let othir lovirs put hem selfe in prees,
Their soun is, my tyme is now forgere,
Fortune by strength the forcir hath unfhete,
Wherein was sperde all my worldly richesse,
And all the godis which that I have gete,
In my best tyme of youth and lustinesse.

Love hath me kept undir his govirnaunce,
If I misdid, God graunt me forgivnesse, 70
If I did well, yet felt I no plesaunce,
It causid neither joye nor hevinesse,
For when she dyid that was my maistres,
My Welfare then ymade the same purchase,
The deth hath shette my bondis of witnesse,
Which for nothing myne hert shal nevir pase.

In this grete thought fore troublid in my mind,
Alone thus rode I all the morrow tide,
Till at the last it happid me to finde 80
The place, wherein I cast me to abide,
When that I had no furthir for to ride,
And as I went my lodgyng to purvaie,
Right sone I herd, a little me beside,
In a gardin, where minstrels gan to plaie.

With that anonc I went me backir more,
My self and I, me thought we were inow,
But twaine that wer my frendis here before
Had me espied, and yet I wote not how,
Thei came for me, awaiewarde I me drowe,
Somwhat by force, somewhat by ther request, 90
That in no wise I coud my self rescowe,
But nedes I must come in and se the fest.

At my commyng, the Ladies everichone
Bad me welcome, God wote, right gentillie,
And made me chere, every one by one,
A grete dele bettir than I was worthie,
And of ther grace shewed me grete curtisie
With gode disport, bicause I should not mourne,
That daie I bode still in ther companie,
Whiche was to me a gracious sojourn. 100

The bordis were spred in right lityl space
The Ladies sat, eche as she semid best,
There were no dedly servautes in the place,
But chosin men, right of the godelyest,
And some there wer, peraventure most freshest,
That sawin ther Judgis right full demure,
Without semblaunt, eithir to moste or lest,
Notwithstanding thei had hem undir cure.

Emong all othir one I gan espie,
Which in grete thought ful oftin came and went,
As one that had ben ravished uttirly,
In his language not gretly diligent,
His countinaunce he kept with grete turment,
But his desire farre passid his reson,

For er his eye went aftir his entent,
Full many a tyme, when it was no soun.

To makin chere sorely hymself he pained,
And outwardly he fainid grete gladnesse,
To sing also by force he was constrained, 120
For no plesaunce, but verie shamefastnesse,
For the complainte of his moste hevinesse
Came to his voice, alwaie without request,
Like as the soun of birdis doeth expresse,
When thei sing loude, in fritte or in forest.

Othir there were, that servid in the hall,
But none like hym, as aftir myne advise,
For he was pale, and somewhat lene withall,
His speche also tremblid in ferfull wise,
And er alone, but when he did servise,
All blacke he ware, and no devise but plain, 130
Me thought by him, as my witte coud suffise,
His herte was nothyng in his owne demain.

To fest hem all he did his diligence,
And well he coud, right as it semid me,
But evitmore when he was in presence
His chere was doen, it n'olue none othir be,
His Scholemaistir had soche auctorite,
That all the while he bode still in the place
Speke cou'd he not, but upon her beaute
He lokid still, with a right pitous face. 140

With that his hedde he tournid at the last
For to beholde the Ladies everichone,
But er in one he set his eye stedfast
On her, whiche that his thought was moste upon,
For of his eyen the shot I knewe anone,
Which ferfull was, with right humble requestes;
Then to my self I saied, by God alone,
Soche one was I, or that I sawe these jstes.

Out of the prese he went full esly,
To make stable his hevie countinaunce, 150
And wote ye well, he sighid wondirly,
For his sorowes and wofull remembrance,
Then in hymself he made his ordinance,
And forthwithall came to bryng in the messe,
But for to judge his moste wofull penance,
God wote, it was a pitous entremesse.

Aftir dinir anone thei hem avaunced
To daunce above the folke everychone,
And forthwithal this hevie man he daunced,
Somtime with twaine, and somtimes with one, 160
Unto hem all his chere was aftir one,
Now here, now there, as fell by avinture,
But er emong he drewe to her alone,
Whiche that he moste drede, oi livyng cature.

To mine advise gode was his purveiaunce,
When he her chose to his maistrille alone,
If that her herte were set to his plesaunce,
As moche as was her beauteous persone,
For who so evir setteth his trust upon
The report of the eyen, withoutin more, 170
He might be dedde, and gravin undir stone,
Or er he should his hert's ese restore.

In her failid nothyng, that I coud gesse,
One wise nor othir, privie nor aperte,
A garison she was of godelinesse,
To make a frontier for a lovirs herte,
Right yong and freshe, a woman full coverte,
Aflurid wele of porte, and eke of chere,
Wel at her ese, withoutin wo or smerte,
All underneth the standerde of dangere. 180

To

To se the fest it wried me full fore,
 For hevie joye doeth fore the herte travaille,
 Out of the prese I me withdrawe therfore,
 And set me doune alone behinde a traile
 Full of levis, to se a grete mervaille,
 With grene wrethis iboundin wondirly,
 The levis were so thicke withoutin faile,
 That thoroughout no man might me espie.

To this Ladie he came full curtisly,
 Wher he thought time to daunce with her a trace,
 Set in an herbir, made full plesantly,
 Thei restid 'hem fro thens but lityl space,
 Nigh 'hem were none of a certain compace,
 But onely thei, as farre as I could se,
 Save the traile, there I had ychose my place,
 Ther was no more bitwene 'hem two and me.

I herd the lovir sighyng wondir fore,
 For aie the more the sorir it hym fought,
 His inward paine he coud not kepe in store,
 Nor for to speke so hardie was he nought, 200
 His leche was nere, the gretir was his thought,
 He musid fore to conquere his desire,
 For no man maie to more penaunce be brought,
 Then in his hete to bryng hym to the fire.

The herte began to swell within his chest,
 So fore strainid, for anguishe and for pain,
 That all to pecis almoste it to brest,
 When both at ones so fore it did constrain,
 Desire was bolde, but shame it gan refrain,
 That one was large, the othir was full close, 210
 No little charge was laied on hym certain,
 To kepe soche werre, and have so many fose.

Full oftin times to speke himself he pained,
 But shamefastnesse and drede saied evir naie,
 Yet at the last so fore he was constrained,
 When he full long had put it in delaie,
 To this Ladie right thus then gan he saie,
 With dredefull voice, wepyng, halfe in a rage,
 For me was purveied an unhappie daie,
 When I first had a sight of your visage: 220

I suffre pain, God wote, full hote brenning,
 To cause my deth, all for my true servise,
 And I se well, ye recke thereof nothing,
 Nor take no hede of it, in no kinde wise,
 But when I speke astir my best advise,
 Ye reke it nought, but make thereof a game,
 And though I sewe so grete an entirprise,
 Yet peirith not your worship nor your fame.

Alas! what should it be to' you prejudice,
 If that a man doe love you faithfully? 230
 To your worship, eschewyng every vice,
 So am I yours, and will be verily,
 I chalenge nought of right and reson why,
 For I am whole submit to your service,
 Right as you list it be, right so will I,
 To binde my self, where I was in fraunchise.

L'amant.

Though it be so, that I can not deserve
 To have your grace, but alwaie live in drede,
 Yet suffre me you for to love and serve,
 Without maugre of your moste godelihede, 240
 Both faith and trouth I give your womanhede,
 And my service without any callyng,
 Love hath me bound, withoutin wage or mede
 To be your man, and leve all othir thyng.

La dame.

When this ladie had herd al this language,
 She gave answere, full soft and demurely
 Without chaungyng of colour or courage,
 Nothyng in hast, but full mesurably.
 Me thinkith, sir, your thought is grete folly;
 Purpose ye nought your labour for to cese, 250
 For thinkith not, whilis ye live and I,
 In this mattir to set your herte in pefe.

L'amant.

Ther maie none make the pece, but onely ye;
 Which are the ground and cause of all this war,
 For with your eyen the lettirs writtin be,
 By whiche I am defied and put as farre,
 Your plesaunt loke, my very lodestarre,
 Was made heraude of thulke same defiaunce,
 Whiche uttirly behight me for to barre
 My faithfull trust, and all myne affyaunce. 260

La dame.

To live in wo he hath grete fantasie,
 And of his hert also but slippir holde,
 That onely for beholdyng of an eye
 Can not abide in pece, as reson wolde,
 Other or me, if ye list ye maie beholde,
 Our eyen are made to loke, why should we spare?
 I take no kepe, neithir of yong ne olde,
 Who felith smart, I counsaile hym beware.

L'amant.

If it be so, one hurte an othir fore
 In his defeaute, that felith the grevaunce, 270
 Of very right a man maie do no more,
 Yet reson would it were in remembrance,
 And sith fortune onily by her chaunce
 Hath causid me to suffre all this pain
 By your beautie, with all the circumstaunce,
 Why list ye have me in so grete disdain?

La dame.

To your persone ne have I no disdain,
 Nor nevir had truelie, ne nought will have,
 Nor right grete love, nor hatred in certain,
 Nor your counsaile to knowe, so God me save, 280
 If that soche love be in your minde igrave,
 That lityl thyng maie doe you displeaunce,
 You to begile, or make you for to rave,
 I will not causin no soche encombraunce.

L'amant.

What er it be, that me hath thus purchafed,
 Wenying hath not decevid me certain,
 But fervent love so fore hath me ichafed,
 That I unware am castin in your chaine,
 And sith so is, as fortune list ordaine, 290
 All my welfare is in your handis fall,
 In eschewyng of more mischevous paine,
 Who sonist dieth, his care is left of all

La dame.

This sicknesse is right esie to endure,
 But fewe peple it causith for to die,
 But what thei mene I knowe it very sure,
 Of more comfort to drawe the remedie,
 Soche be there now plainyng full pitoussie,

That

That fele, God wote, not althir gretist pain, 300
And if so be love hurte so grevoullie,
Lesse harme it wer, one sorowful then twain.

L'amant.

Alas! Madame, if that it might you plesse,
Moche bet it were, by waie of gentillesse,
Of one sorie to make twain well at ese,
Then hym to destroie that liveth in distresse,
For my desire is, neithir more nor lesse,
But my service to doe for your plesaunce,
In eschewyng all manir doublenesse,
To make two joies, in stede of one grevaunce.

La dame.

Of love I seke neithir plesaunce nor ese,
Nor have I therein no grete affiaunce,
Though ye be sick it doeth me nothing plesse,
Also I take no hede of your plesaunce,
Chese who so will ther hertis to avaunce,
Free am I now, and fre will I endure,
To be rulid by mann's govirnaunce
For yerthly gode, naie, that I you ensure.

L'amant.

Love, which that joy and sorow doth depart,
Hath set the Ladies out of all servage, 320
And largely doeth graunt 'hem for ther part
Lordship and rule of every maner of age,
The pore servaunt nought hath of advantage,
But what he maie get onely by purchesse,
And he that ones to love doeth his homage,
Full oftin tymes dere bought is the richesse.

La dame.

Ladies be not so simple, thus I mene,
So dull of witte, so sottid in folie,
That for wordis, which said be of the splene,
In faire language paintid full plesauntlie, 330
Whiche ye and mo holde scholis of dailie,
To make 'hem all grete wondirs to suppose,
But sone thei can awaie their heddis wrie,
And to faire speche lightly ther eris close.

L'amant.

There is no man, that janglith busilie,
And setteth his herte, and al his minde therfore,
That by reson maie plain sopitoullie,
As he that hath moche hevinesse in store;
Whose hedde is whole, and saieth that it is sore,
His fainid chere is harde to kepe in mewe, 340
But thought, whiche is unfainid evirmore,
The wordis previth, as the wordis shewe.

La dame.

Love is subtile, and hath a grete awaite,
Sharp in working, in gabbing grete plesaunce,
And can hym venge of soche as by disceite
Would fele and knowe his secrete govirnaunce,
And makith 'hem to obeie his ordinaunce,
By cherefull waies, as in 'hem is supposed,
But when thei fallin into repentaunce,
Then in a rage ther counsaile is disclosed. 350

L'amant.

Sith for as moche as God and eke nature
Hath avauncid love to so hie degre,

Moche sharp is the point, thus am I right sure,
Yet grevith more the faute, where er it be,
Who hath no colde, of hete hath no deinte,
The' one for that othir askid is expresse,
And of plesaunce knowith none certainte,
But it be one in thought and hevinesse.

La dame.

As for plesaunce, it is not alwaie one,
That you think swete, I think it bittir pain, 360
Ye maie not me constrain, nor yet right none,
Aftir your luste to love, that is but vain,
To challenge love by right was never sein,
But herte assent, before bonde and promise,
For strength and force ne maie not er attain
I will that standeth enfeffid in franchise.

L'amant.

Right faire ladie, God mote I never plesse,
If that I seke othir right in this case,
But for to shewe you plainly my disese,
And your mercie to abide, and eke your grace, 370
If I purpose your honour to deface,
Or evir did, God and fortune me shende,
And that I ner unrightfully purchase
One onelie joye, unto my liv's ende.

La dame.

Ye and othir, that swere soche othis faste,
And so condempne, and cursin to and fro,
Full sikirly ye wene your othis laste
No lengir then the wordis ben ago,
And God, and eke his sainctis laugh also;
In soche sweryng there is no stedfastnesse, 380
And these wretchis, that have ful trust therto,
Aftir thei wepe and wailin in distresse.

L'amant.

He hath no courage of a man truelie,
That sechith plesaunce, worship to dispise,
Nor to be callid, for he' is not worthie
The yerth to touch, the aire in no kind wise,
A trustie herte, a mouthe without feintise,
Thus by the strength of every manir name,
And who that laieth his faithe for little prise,
He lesith both his worship and his fame. 390

La dame.

A curfid herte, a mouthe that is curteise,
Full well ye wote thei be not accordyng,
Yet fainid chere right sone maie 'hem apeise,
Where of malice it set all ther workyng,
Full false semblant thei bere, and true femyng,
Ther name, ther fame, ther tonguis ben but fained,
Worship in 'hem is put in forgettyng,
Nought repentid, nor in no wise complained.

L'amant.

Who thinkith ill, no gode maie him befall,
God of his grace graunt eche man his desert, 400
But for his love, emong your thoughtis all,
As thinke upon my wofull sorowes smert,
For of my paine whethir your tendir hert
Of swete pitie be not therewith agreved,
And of your grace, to me were discovert,
That by your mene sone should I be releved.

La dame.

A lightfome herte, a folie of plesaunce,
 Are moche bettir, the lesse while thei abide,
 Thei make you think, and bring you in a traunce,
 But that sikenesse will sone be remedide, 410
 Respite your thought, and put all this aside,
 Full gode disporte ywerieth me all daie,
 To helpe nor hurte my will is not aplide,
 Who troweth me not, I let hym passe awaie.

L'amant.

Who hath a birde, a faucon, or a hounde,
 That foloweth hym for love in every place,
 He cheriseth him, and kepith him ful sound,
 Out of his sight he will not hym enchace,
 And I that set my wittis in this cace, 420
 On you alone, withoutin any chaunge,
 Am put undir, moche farthir out of grace,
 And lesse set by, then othir that be straunge.

La dame.

Though I make chere to every man about,
 For my worship, and for myne owne fraunchise,
 To you I n'll doe so, withoutin doubt,
 In eschewyng all manir prejudise,
 For wote ye well, love is so little wise;
 And in bileve, so lightly will be brought,
 That he takith all at his owne devise,
 Of thing, God wote, that servith him of nought.

L'amant.

If I by love, and by my true servise
 Lefe the gode chere that straungirs have alwaie,
 Whereof shall serve my trouthe in any wise,
 Lesse then to him, that cometh and goeth al daie,
 Whiche holdeth of you nothyng, that is no naie,
 Also in you is lost, as to' my semyng,
 All curtise, whiche of reson will faie
 That love for love were lawfull desyryng.

La dame.

Curtise is aliyd wondir nere
 To worship, whiche hym lovith tendirly, 440
 And he will not be bounde for no praiere,
 Nor for no giftes, I saie you verily,
 But his gode chere depart full largily
 Where hym lykith, as his concept will fall,
 Guerdon constrained, a gift doen thankfully,
 These twain can ner accord, nor nevyr shal.

L'amant.

As for guerdon, I seke none in this cace,
 For that deserte to me it is to hie,
 Wherefore I aske your pardon and your grace,
 Sith me behovith deth, or your mercie, 450
 To give the gode where it wantith truly
 That were reson, and a curtise manere,
 And to your own moche bettir were worthy
 Then to straungirs, to shew hem lovely chere.

La dame.

What cal ye gode, fain would I that I wist,
 That plesith one, an othir smertith fore,
 But of his owne to large is he, that list
 Give moche, and lesin his gode name therfore,
 One should not make a graunt, little ne more,

But the request were right well accordyng, 460
 If worship be not kept and set before,
 All that is lefte, is but a little thyng.

L'amant.

Into this worlde was foundin nevyr none,
 Nor undir hevin creature ibore,
 Nor nevyr shall, save onely your persone,
 To whom your worship touchith halfe so fore,
 But me, whiche have no seson lesse ne more,
 Of youth ne age, but still in your service,
 I have no eyen, no wit, nor mouthe in store,
 But all be givin to the same office. 470

La dame.

A ful grete charge hath he withoutin faile,
 That his worship kepith in sikirnesse,
 But in daungir he settith his travaile,
 That feffith it with othirs businesse,
 To hym that longith honour and noblesse,
 Upon none othir should not be awaite,
 For of his owne so moche hath he the lesse,
 That of othir moche foloweth the conceite.

L'amant.

Your eyen hath set the print, which that I fele
 Within my herte, that where so er I go, 480
 If I doe thyng, that founith unto wele,
 Nedes must it cum from you, and fro no mo,
 Fortune will this, that I for wele or wo
 My life endure, your mercy abidyng,
 And verie right will, that I thinke also
 Of your worship above all othir thyng.

La dame.

To your worship se well, for that is nede,
 That ye spende not your seson all in vain;
 As touchyng myne, I rede you take no hede,
 By your follie to put your selfe in pain,
 To overcome is gode, and to restrain
 An herte, whiche is decevid follilie, 490
 For worse it is to breke then bowe certain,
 Bettir to bowe, then to fall sodainly.

L'amant.

Now, faire Ladie, thinke, sith it first began,
 That love hath set mine herte undir his cure,
 It nevyr might, ne truelie I ne can
 None othir serve, while I shall here endure,
 In most fre wise thereof I make you sure,
 Which maie not be withdraw, this is no naie,
 I must abide all manir advinture,
 For I ne maie put to, nor take awaie. 500

La dame.

I holde it for no gift in sothfastnesse,
 That one offirith, where it is forsake;
 For soche a gifte' is abandonyng expresse,
 That with worship ayen maie not be take;
 He hath an herte full fell that list to make
 A gift lightlie, that put is to refuse,
 But he is wise, that soche concept will flake,
 So that hym nede neithir studie ne muse.

L'amant.

He should not muse, that hath his service spent
 On her, whiche is a Ladie honourable, 510
 And

And if I spende my time to that extent,
Yet at the lest I am not reprovabie
Of fainid harte, to thanke I am unable;
Or I mistoke, when I made this request,
By whiche love hath of enterpryse notable
So many bertis gottin by conquest.

La dame.

If that ye liste doe astir my counsaile,
Seche a fairir, and of more highir fame,
Whiche in service of love will you prevaile,
Astir your thought, accordyng to the same, 520
He hurtith bothe his worship and his name,
That follily for twain himself will trouble,
And he also lesith his astir game,
That surely can not set his poinctis double.

L'amant.

This your counsaile, by ought that I can se,
Is bettir saied than doen, to myne advise,
Though I beleve it not, forgive it me,
Mine herte is soche, so whole without feintise,
That I ne maie give credence in no wise
To thyng, whiche is not sounyng unto truth, 530
Othir counsaile I se' is but fantasie,
Save of your grace to shewe pitie and ruth.

La dame.

I holde hym wise that workith no folie,
And when hym list, can leve and part therfro,
But in connyng he is to lerne truelie,
That would himself conduite, and can not so,
And he that will not astir counsaile doe,
His sute he puttith into desperaunce,
And all the gode that should yfall hym to,
Is lost and dedde, clene out of remembraunce. 540

L'amant.

Yet woll I shewe this mattir faithfullie,
Whilis I live, what evir be my chaunce,
And if it hap, that in my truthe I die,
Then deth shall doe to me no displeaunce,
But when that I, by your harde sufferance
Shall die so true, and with so grete a pain,
Yet shall it doe me moche the lesse grevance,
Then for to live a false lovyr certain.

La dame.

Of me get ye right noight, this is no fable;
I will to you be neithir hard nor strait, 550
And right will not no man customable,
To thinke ye should be sure of my conceite,
Who sechith sorowe, his be the restite,
Othir counsaile can I not fele nor se,
Nor for to lerne I cast me not to awaite,
Who will thereof, let hym assaie for me.

L'amant.

Ones must it be assaied, that is no naie,
With soche as be of reputacion,
And of true love, the right honours to paie
Of he hartis gottin by due raunsome, 560
For frowil holdith this opinion,
That it is grete duresse and discomforte,
To kepe a herte in so strait a prison,
That hath but one bodie for his disporte.

La dame.

I knowe so many causis marveilous,
That I must nede of reson thinke certain
Soche avinture is wondir perilous,
And yet well more the coming backe again,
Gode or worship thereof is seldome sene,
Where I ne will make any soche araie, 570
As for to finde a plesaunce but baraine,
When it shall cost so dere the first assaie.

L'amant.

Ye have no cause to doubt of this matter,
Nor you to meve with no soche fantasie,
To put me farre all out as a straunger,
For your godenesse can thinke and well advise
That I have made aprise in every wise,
By whiche my truthe sheweth opin evidence,
My long abidyng, and my true service
Maie well be knowen by plain experience. 580

La dame.

Of verie right he maie be callid true,
And so must he be take in every place,
That can discerne, and let as he ne knewe,
And kepe the gode, if he it maie purchase,
For who that praieth, or swereth in any case,
Right well ye wote, in that no trouth is preved,
Soch hath there ben, and ar, that gettin grace,
And lese it sone, when thei have it acheved.

L'amant.

If truthe me cause, by vertue soverain,
To shewe gode love, and alwaie find contrarie, 590
And cherishe The, whiche sleeth me with the pain,
This is to me a lovely adversarie,
When that pitie, whiche long on slepe doth tase,
Hath set the fine of all my hevynesse,
Yet her comfort to me moste necessarie
Shall set my will more sure in stablenesse.

La dame.

The woful wight, what maie he think or say,
The contrarie of all joye and gladnesse,
A sicke bodie, his thought is ferre alwaie
From hem that felia no fore nor sicknesse, 600
Thus hurtis ben of divers businesse,
Whiche love hath putt unto grete hinderaunce,
And truthe also put in forgetfulnesse,
When thei full fore begin to sigh askaunce.

L'amant.

Now God defende, but he be harmelesse
Of all worship or gode that maie befall,
That to werst tournith by his leudenesse
A gift of grace, or any thyng at all,
That his Ladie vouchsafe upon hym call,
Or cherishe hym in honourable wise, 610
In that defaute what er he be that fall,
Deservith more then deth to suffre twise.

La dame.

There is no judge iset on soche trespase,
By whiche of right love maie recovered be,
One cursith fast, an othir doth manace,
Yet dyith none, as faine as I can se,
But kepe ther course alwaie in one degre,

And

And evirmore ther labour doeth encrese
To bryng Ladies by ther grete subtilte,
For othirs gilte, in sorowe and disefe.

620

L'amant.

All be it so one doeth so grete offence,
And is not dedde, nor put to no justice,
Right well I wote hym gainith no defence,
But he must ende in full mischevous wise,
And all evir saied, God will hym dispise,
For falsheid is all full of cursidnesse,
That his worship may ner have entirprise,
Where it reignith, and hath the wilfulnesse.

La dame.

Of that have thei no grete fere now a daise,
Soche as will saie and maintain it thereto,
That stedfast truthe is nothyng for to praise
In 'hem that kepe it long in wele or wo,
Their busie hertis paffin to and fro,
Thei be so well reclaimid to the lure,
So well lernid 'hem to withholde also,
And al to chaunge, when love should best endure.

630

L'amant.

When one hath set his herte in stable wise
In soche a place as is bothe gode and true,
He should not flit, but doe forthe his service
Alwaie withoutin chaunge of any newe,
As sone as love beginnith to remewe
All plesauce goeth anone in lityl space,
As for my partie that shall I eschue
While that the soule abidith in his place.

640

L'amant.

To love truely, there as it ought of right,
Ye maie not be mistakin doutileffe,
But ye be foule discevid in your sight
By your light understandyng, as I gesse,
Yet maie we well repele your businesse,
And unto reson have some attendaunce,
Moche bettir than to abide by simplenes
The feble foccouris of disperaunce.

650

L'amant.

Reson, counsaile, wisedome, and gode advise
Ben undir love arrestid everichone,
To whiche I can accorde in every wise,
For thei ben not rebell, but still as stone,
Ther will and myne be medlid all in one,
And therwith boundin with so strong a chain,
That as in 'hem departyng shall be none,
But pitie breke the mightie bonde atwain.

660

La dame.

Ye love not your self, what evir ye be,
That in love stande subject in every place,
And of your wo if ye have no pite,
Othirs pite bileve not to purchase,
But be fullie assured, as in this cace,
I am alwaie undir one ordinaunce,
To havin bettir trust not afir grace,
And all that levith, take to your plesauce.

L'amant.

I have my hope so sure and so stedfast,
That soche a Ladie should not lacke pitie,

670

But now alas! it is shit up so fast
That daungir sheweth on me his crueltie,
And if she se the vertue faile in me
Of true service, though she doe faile also
No wondir were, but this is my surete
I must suffre, whiche waie that er it go.

La dame.

Leve this purpose, I rede you for the best,
For the lengir ye kepe, it is in vain,
The lesse ye get, as of your hertis rest,
And to rejoyce it shall you ner attain,
When ye abide gode hope to make you fain
Ye shall be founde asottid in dotage,
And in the ende ye shall knowe for certain,
That hope shall paie the wretchis for ther wage.

680

L'amant.

Ye saie as fallith moste for your plesauce,
And your powir is grete, all this I se,
But hope shall ner out of my remembrance,
By whiche I fele so grete adversite,
For when nature hath set in you plente
Of all godenesse, by vertue and by grace,
He ner assemblid 'hem, as semid me,
To put pitie out of his dwellyng place.

690

La dame.

Pitie of right ought to be resonable,
And to no wight do grete disavauntage,
There as is nede, it should be profitable,
And to the pitous shewyng no damage,
If a Ladie will doe so grete outrage
To shewe pitie and cause her owne debate,
Of soche pitie comith dispitous rage,
And of soche love also right dedly hate.

700

L'amant.

To comfort 'hem that live all comfortlesse
That is no harme, but comfort to your name,
But ye that have a herte of soche dureffe
And a faire Ladie I must affirme the same,
If I durst saie, ye winne all this defame
By crueltie, whiche sittith you full ill,
But if pitie, whiche maie all this attain,
In your high herte maie rest and tary still.

La dame.

What er he be that saith he lovith me,
And paraventure I leve well it be so,
Ought he be wrothe, or should I blamid be,
Though I did not as he would have me doe?
If I medlid with soche or othir moe
It might be callid pitie mercilesse,
And afterward if I should live in wo,
Then to repent it were to late I gesse.

710

L'amant.

O marble herte, and yet more harde parde,
Whiche mercie maie not perce for no labour,
More strong to bowe then is a mighty tre,
What availeth you to shewe so grete rigour!
Pleseth it you more to se me die this hour
Before your eyen, for your disport and plaie,
Then for to shewe some comfort and foccour
To respite deth, whiche chasith me alwaie?

720

La

La dame.

Of your disease ye may have allegeaunce,
And as for myne, I let it ovr flake,
Also ye shall not die for my plesaunce,
Nor for your hele I can no suretie make,
I will not hurte my self for othirs sake,
Wepe thei, laugh thei, or sing thei, I waraunt 730
For this mattir, so will I undirtake
That none of 'hem shall make therof avaunt.

L'amant.

I can not skill of love by God alone,
I have more cause to wepe in your presence,
And well ye wote, avauntour am I none,
For certainly I love bettir silence,
One should not love by his hert's credence,
But he were sure to kepe it secretlie,
For avauntour is of no reverence,
When that his tongue is his moste enemye. 740

La dame.

Male bouch in court hath grete commaundement,
Eche man studieth to saie the worst he maie,
These false lovirs in this tyme now present
Thei servin best to jangle as a Jaie,
The moste secrete iwys, yet some men saie
How he mistrustid is in some partise,
Wherefore to ladies when men speke or saie,
It should not be bilevid in no wise.

L'amant.

Of gode and ill shall be, and is alwaie,
The world is soche, the yerth is not al plain, 750
Thei that be gode, the prose sheweth every daie,
And othir wise grete villonie certain,
It is not reson, though one his tongue disdain
With cursid speche to doe hymself a shame,
That soche refuse should wrongfully remain
Upon the gode renomid in ther fame.

La dame.

Soch as be nought, when thei here tidinges new
That eche trespas shall lightly have pardon,
Thei that pursuin to be gode and true
Will not set by none ill disposicion, 760
To continue in every gode condicion
Thei are the first that fallin in damage,
And full frely the hertis habandon
To lityl faithe, with soft and faire language.

L'amant.

Now knowe I well of verie certainte
If one doe truelie, yet shall he be shente,
Sith all manir of justice and pite
Is banished out of a Ladies entente,
I can not se, but all is at one stente,
The gode, the ill, the vice, and eke the vertue, 770
Soche as be gode, soche have the punisshmente,
For the trespas of 'hem that live untrue.

La dame.

I have no powir you to do grevaunce,
Nor for to punishe none othir creature,
But to eschewin the more encombraunce,
To kepe us from you all, I holde it sure,
For false semblaunce hath a face full demure

Lightlie to catche these Ladies in a waite,
Wherefore we must, if we will here endure,
Make right gode watch, lo! this is my conceite.

L'amant.

Sith that of grace a godely worde not one
Maie now be had, but alwaie kept in store,
I appele to God, for he maie here my mone,
Of the duresse, which grevith me so fore,
And of pite I complaine furthir more,
Whiche he forgate in all his ordinaunce,
Or els my life to have endid before,
Whiche so sone am put out of remembraunce.

La dame.

My herte nor I have doen you no forfeite,
By whiche ye should complaine in any kinde, 790
Nothyng hurtith you, but your own conceite,
Be judge your self, for so ye shall it finde,
Thus alwaie let this sinke into your minde,
That your desire shall ner recovered be,
Ye noye me sore in wastyng all this winde,
For I have saied inough, as semith me.

This wofull man rose up in all his paine,
And departid with wepyng countinaunce,
His wofull herte almoste to braft in twaine,
Full like to die, walkyng forthe in a traunce, 800
And sayid deth come forthe, thy self avaunce,
Or that myne herte forget his propertie,
And make shortir all this wofull penaunce
Of my pore life, full of adversitie.

Fro thens he went, but whithir wist I nought,
Nor to what part he drewe in sothfastnesse,
But he no more was in his ladie's thought,
For to the daunce anone she gan her dresse,
And aftirward one tolde me thus expresse,
He rent his heer, for anguyshe and for pain, 810
And in hymself toke so grete hevinesse
That he was dedde within a daie or twain.

L'envoy.

THE true lovits thus I beseeche you all,
Soche adventurs sie 'hem in every wise,
And as peple defamid ye 'hem call,
For thei truelie do you grete prejudice
His castelles strong stoffid with ordinaunce,
For thei have had long tyme by their office
The whole countrey of love in obeisaunce.

And ye Ladies, or what estate ye be, 820
Of whom worship hath choise his dwellyng place,
For Godd's love doe no soche crueltie,
Nor in no wise ne folowe not the trace
Of her that here is namid right wisely,
Whiche by reson me semith in this cace
Maie be callid, La belle dame sans mercy.

Go lityl boke, God sende The gode passage,
Chese well thy waie, be simple of manere,
Loke thy clothyng be like thy pilgrimage,
And specially let this be thy priere
Unto 'hem all, that The will rede or here,
Where thou art wrong after ther helpe to call
The to correcte in any parte of all.

Praie 'hem also with thine humble servise
 Thy boldnesse to pardon in this cace,
 For els thou art not able in no wise
 To make thy self appere in any place,
 And furthir more beseeche 'hem of ther grace
 By ther favour and supportacion
 To take in gre this rude transacion. • 840

The which God wote standith full destitute
 Of eloquence, of metre, and colours,
 Like as a best nakid without refute
 Upon a plain to' abide all manir showers;

I can no more, but aske of 'hem socours,
 At whose request thou wer made in this wise,
 Commaundying me with body and servise.

Right thus I make an ende of this proses,
 Beseeching hym, that all hath in balaunce,
 That no true man be vexid causelesse 850
 As this man was, whiche is of remembraunce,
 And all that doen ther faithfull observaunce,
 And in ther trowth purpose 'hem to endure,
 I praie God fende 'hem bettir avinture.
Explicit.

Of Quene ANNELIDA, and false ARCITE.

ARCITE a Theban Knight forsaketh Queen ANNELIDA, who lov'd him entirely, and taketh a new Lady; whereupon ANNELIDA maketh this great Complaint.

Thou fiers God of armis Mars the rede,
 That in thy frostie countrey callid Thrace
 Within thy grisly templis full of drede
 Honourid art as patrone of that place,
 With The Bellona Pallas full of grace
 Be present, and my song continue' and gie,
 At my beginnyng, thus to The I crie.

For it full depè is sonkin in mynde
 With pitous herte in Englishe to endite
 This olde storie, in Latine whiche I finde, 10
 Of Quene Annelida and false Arcite,
 That elde, whiche all thingis can frete and bite,
 And it hath fretin many' a noble storie,
 Hath nigh devourid out of our memorie.

Be favourable' eke thou Polymnia,
 On Parnassus that with thy sustirs glade,
 By Helicon, and not ferre from Cirrha,
 Singist with voice memoriall in the shade,
 Undir the Laurir, which that maie not fade,
 And doe that I my ship to havin winne, 20
 First followe' I Stace, and aftir him Corinne.

*Jamque domos patrias, Scythica post aspera gentis
 Prælia, laurigero subeuntem Thesea curru
 Latifaci plausus, missusque ad sidera vulgi, &c.*

When Theseus with warris long and grete
 The aspre folke of Scythe hath ovircome,
 The Laurir crounid in his chaire golde bete
 Home to his countre housis is icome,
 For whiche the peple blisfull all and some
 So cridin, that to the Sterris it went,
 And hym to' honourin did all ther entent.

Before this Duke, in signe of victorie,
 The Trompis come, and in his banir large 30
 The Image of Mars, and in token' of glorie
 Men mightin se of trefure many' a charge,
 Many' a bright helme, and many' a spere and targe,
 Many' a freshe knight, and many' a blisfull rout,
 On horse and fote, in all the field about.

Hyppolyta his wife, the hardie Quene
 Of Scythia, that he conquerid had,
 With Emelie her youngè sustir shene,

Faire in a chare of golde he with him lad,
 That al the ground about her chare she sprad 40
 With brightnesse of the beautie in her face,
 Fulfillid all of largesse and of grace.

With his triumph and laurir corouned thus
 In all the floure of Fortun's yevyng
 Lete I this noble prince this Theseus
 Toward Athenis in his waie ridyng,
 And fonde I woll in shortly for to bryng
 The flie waie of that I began to write,
 Of quene Annelida and false Arcite.

Mars that through his furious course of ire, 50
 The oldè wrathe of Juno to fulfill,
 Hath set the peplis hertis bothe on fire
 Of Thebes and Grece, everich othir to kill
 With blodie speris, restid never still,
 But throng now here now there emong 'hem both,
 That everiche othir flue, so were thei wroth.

For when Amphiorax and Tydeus
 Hippomedon and Parthenope' also
 Were dedde, and slain was the proude Capaneus,
 And when the wretchid Thebans brethrin two 60
 Were slain, and kyng Adrastus home ago,
 So desolate stode Thebis, and so bare,
 That no wight could remedie of his care.

And when that the old Creon gan espie
 How that the blode roiall was brought adoun,
 He helde the cite by his tyrannie,
 And did the gentils of that regioun
 To ben his frendis, and dwell in the toun,
 So what for love of him, and what for awe,
 The noble folke were to the toun idrawe. 70

Emong all these Annelida the quene
 Of Ermonie was in that toun dwellyng;
 That fairir ferre was then the Sonnè shene,
 Throughout the worlde so gan her name to spryng,
 That her to se had every wight likyng,
 For as of trouthe ne is there none her liche,
 Of all the women in this worldè riche.

Yong was this quene, of twentie yeris olde,
 Of middle stature, and of soche fairenesse
 That nature had a joye her to beholde, 80
 And for to spekin of her stedfastnesse,

She

She passid hath Penelope, and Lucrese,
And shortlie if she shall ben comprehended,
In her there mightin nothyng ben amended.

This Theban knight Arcite eke sothe to saine
Was yong, and therewithal a lustie knight,
But he was double in love, and nothing plaine,
And subtil in that crafte ovr' any wight,
And with his connyng wan this ladie bright,
For so ferforthe he gan her trowth assure,
That she hym trustith o'er any cature. 90

What should I saine? she lovith Arcite so,
That when that he was absent any throwe,
Anone her thought her herte braut a two,
For in her sight to her he bare hym lowe,
So that she wende have all his herte iknowe,
But he was false, it n'as but fainid chere,
As nedith not soche craftis men to lere.

But nerthelesse full mikill businesse
Had he, er that he might his ladie winne, 100
And swore that he would dyin for distresse,
Or from his witte he sayid he would twinne;
Alas the while! for it was routhe and smne,
That she upon his sorowis would rue,
But nothing thinketh the fals. as doth the true.

Her fredome found Arcite in soche manere,
That al was his, that she hath moche or lite,
Ne to no manir cature made she chere
Furthir then as it likid to Arcite,
Ther was no lack, with which he might her wite,
She was so fertorthe yevin him to plesse,
That all that likid hym did her to ese.

There n'as to her no manir lettir sent,
That touchid love, from any manir wight,
That she ne shewid hym or it was brent,
So plain she was, and dyd her fulle might
That she n'ill hidin nothyng from her knight,
Lest he of any untrouthe her upbreide,
Withoutin bode his herte she obeide. 120

And eke he made hym jelous ovir her,
That what that any man had to her saied
Anon he would yprayin her to swere
What was that worde, or make him ill apaid.
Then wenid she out of her witte have braied,
But all was nought but sleight and flattirie,
Withoutin love he fainid jelousie.

And all this toke she so debonairely,
That al his wil her thought it skilful thing,
And er the lengir loved hym tendirly, 130
And did hym honour as he were a kyng,
Her herte was to hym weddid with a ryng,
For so ferforthe on trouthe is her entent
That where he goith, her hert with him went.

Whan she shal ete, on him is so her thought,
That wel unnethis of mette toke she kepe,
And whan that she was to her rest ybrought,
On him she thought alway tyl that she slepe,
Whan he was absent, prively dothe she wepe.
Thus livith faire Annelida the quene, 140
For false Arcyte, that dyd her al this tene.

This false Arcyte, of his newfanglenesse,
For she to him so lowly was and trewe,
Ytoke lesse deintè for her stedfastenesse,
And sawe anothir lady proude and newe,
And right anon he clad him in her hewe,
Wote I not whethir in white, red, or grene,

And falsid faire Annelida the quene.

But nerthelesse, grete wondir was it none
Though he were false, for it is the kinde of man,
Sithe Lamech was, that is so longe agone,
To be in love as false as er he can,
He was the firste fathir that began
To lovin two, and was in bigamie,
And he founde tentis first, but yf men lye.

This false Arcite, fomwhat must he nede saine,
Whan he was false to coveren his traitourie,
Right as an horse, that can both bite, and plaine,
For he bare her in honde of trechirie,
And swore he coude her doubleness espye, 160
And al was fallenesse that she to him ment,
Thus swore this thefe, and forth his way he went.

Alas what herte might endurin it,
For routhe or wo, her sorowe for to tel,
Or what man hath the conning or the wit,
Or what man might within the chambre dwel,
If I to him reherfin shall the hel,
That suffrith faire Annelida the quene,
For falsa Arcite, that did her al this tene.

She wepith, wailith, swounith pitoufly, 170
To grounde as ded she fallith as a stōne,
She crampisith her limmis crokidly,
She spekith as her witte were al agone,
Othir colour than ashin hath she none,
Ne none othir worde speketh she moch or lite,
But mercy cruil herte mir Arcite.

And thus endureth, til that she was so mate,
That she ne hath fote on which she may sustene,
But forth languishing er in this estate
Of which Arcite hath neithir rothe ne tene, 180
His herte was elliswhere sette new and grene,
That on her wo ne deinet him not to think,
Him reckith ner whethir she flete or sinke.

This newe lady holdith him so narowe
Up by the bridil, at the slav's ende,
That every worde he dred it as an arowe,
Her daungir made him bothè bowe and bende,
And as her luste, madin him turne or wende,
For she ne grauntid him in her living, 190
No grace, why that he hath thereof to singe,

But drove him forth, unneth list her to knowe
That he was servaunt to her ladyship,
But lestè that he were proude, she held him lowe,
Thus servith he, withoutin mete or sip,
She sente him nowe to lande, and nowe to ship,
And for she yave him daungir al his fil,
Therefore she had him at her owne wil.

Ensampl' of this, ye thriftie women al,
Take hede of Annelida and false Arcite,
That for her list him her dere herte call, 200
And was so meke, therefore he loved her lite,
The kinde of mann's herte is to delite
On thing that straunge is, al so God me save,
For what they may not get, that wold they have.

Nowe turne we to Annelida ayen,
That pinith day by day in languishing,
But whan she sawe that her ne gate no geyn,
Upon a day ful sorowfully weping
She cast her for to make a complaining,
And with her owne hande she gan it write, 210
And sente it to her Theban knight Arcyte.

The

The Complaint of ANNELIDA to false ARCITE.

SO thirlid with the point of remembraunce
 The swerde of sorowe, whette with false
 pleasaunce,
 Myne herte bare of blisse, and black of hewe,
 That turnid is to quaking all my daunce,
 My swertye in wapid countinace,
 Sens it availith nothing to ben trewe,
 For who so trewe is certes it shall her rewe
 That servith love, and dothe her observaunce, 220
 Alway to one, and chaungith for no newe.

I wote my selfe as well as any wight,
 For I loved one with al min hert and might,
 More than my self, an hundred thousande sith,
 And callid him my hert's lyfe, my knight,
 And was al his, as ferre as it was right,
 And whan that he was glad, than was I blithe,
 And his disese ywas my dethe as swithe,
 And he ayen his trouthe hath to me plight 230
 For evirmore his lady me to kithe.

Nowe is he false alas! and caufcles,
 And of my wo he is so routheles,
 That with a worde him list not onis daine
 To bring ayen my sor'owful herte in pees,
 For he is caught up in an othir lees,
 Right as hym lyst he laughith at my paine,
 And I ne can min herte not restraine
 For to love him yet alway nertheles,
 And of all this I n'ot to whom to plaine. 240

And shulde I plain, alas the hardè ffounde!
 Unto my foe that yave myn herte a wounde,
 And yet desirith that myn harme be more,
 Now certis ierthir woll I nevir founde
 None othir helpe my foris for to founde,
 My destiny hath shapid so ful yore,
 I woll none othir medecyne ne lore,
 I woll ben aye there I was onis bounde,
 That I have said, be said for evirmore.

Alas! where is become your gentillnesse, 250
 Your wordes full of pleasaunce and humblenesse,
 Your observaunce in so lowe a manere,
 Your awaitinge, and eke your besinesse
 On me, that ye tho callid your maistresse,
 Your soveraine lady in this worlde here?
 Alas! is there now neithir worde ne chere
 Ye vouchsafin upon myn hevinesse?
 Alas your love, I bye it al to dere!

Nowe certis swete Arcite, though that ye
 Thus causclesse the rusull Cause ybe 260
 Of all my pyne, and dedly' Adversite,
 Your manly reason ought it to respite,
 To fle your sothefast frende, and namely me,
 Which that have nevir yet in no degre
 Offendid you in ought, as wisly he,
 That all thinges wote of wo my soule quite.

But for I was so plain to The Arcite,
 In all my wordes and workis moche and lite,
 And was so besy aye you to delite,
 Myne honour only save meke, kinde, and fre, 270
 Therefore Arcite ye put in me this wite,
 Alas! Alas! ye rechin not a mite
 Though that the percing swerde of sorow byte
 My woful hert, thorough your cruilte.

My swete foe, why do ye so for shame?

And thinkin ye that furthered be your name
 To lovin a newe, and ben untrew e aye,
 And putin you in flaundir now e and blame,
 And do to me adversyte and grame,
 That love you most, God thou wotist alwaye 280
 Yet turne ayen, and yet be plaine some daye,
 And then shall this that now is mis ben game,
 And al forgevin, whilis I lyve maye.

Lo herte myne, al this is for to saine,
 As whethir shal I praye or ellis plaine,
 Which is the way to done you to be trewe?
 For eithir mote I have you in my chaine,
 Or with the deth ye mote depart us twayne,
 There beth none othir mene ne wayis newe,
 For God so wysely on my soule rewe, 290
 As verily ye slaine me with the paine,
 That mowe ye se unfainid on mine hewe.

For thus ferforth have I my deth ysought,
 My selfe I murdir with my privie thought,
 For sorowe and routh of your unkindenesse
 I wepe, I waile, I fast, al helpith naught,
 I voide alle joy that is to speak of aught,
 I voide alle company, I flye gladnesse,
 Who may avaunt her bet of hevinesse
 Than I, and to this plite have ye me brought, 300
 Withoutin gilte, me nedith no witnesse.

And shoulde I pray, and weivin womanhede?
 Nay rathir deth, than do so soule a dede,
 And aske mercy, and giletesse, what nede?
 And if that I complaine what life I lede
 You reckith not, that know I out of drede;
 And if I unto you mine othis bede
 For mine excuse, a scorne shal be my mede,
 Your chere ysourith, but it woll not fede,
 Ful longe agon I might have takin hede. 310

For though I had you to morowe againe,
 I might as wel holde Aprilis from raine,
 As holdin you to makin you stedfast,
 Almyghty God, of trouthe the soveraine,
 Wher is the trouthe of man, who hath it slaine?
 She that hem lovith, shall hem finde as fast
 As in a tempest is a rottin mast,
 Is that a tame best, that is evir faine
 To renne away, when he is left agast?

Nowe mercy swete Arcite, if I mislay 320
 Whethir have I aught said out of the way
 I n'ot, my witte is wastid al away,
 I fare as doth the songe of chantepleure,
 For nowe I plaine, and now e agen I pley
 I am so masid that I dey, I dey,
 Arcite, Arcite hath born away the key
 Of al my wele, and my gode avinture.

For in this world there ne is no cature,
 Walking alas! in more discomfiture
 Than I, ne that more sorowe doth endure, 330
 For yf I slepe a furlonge way or twey,
 Than thinkith me anon that your figure
 Suppliant before me stante clad in asure
 Redy este to profre a newe asure
 For to ben trewe, and mercyme to prey.

The longè night this wondir syght I drie,
 That on the day, for soche Affray I dye,
 And of al this right naught iwys ye retche,

Ne

Ne nevirmore myne eyin two ben drye,
And to your routhe, and to your trouthe I crye, 340
But wel away! to ferre ben they to fetche,
Thus holdith me my destiny a wretche,
But me to rede out of this drede or gye
Ne may my wit (so weke is it) not stretche.

Than ende I thus, sithe I may do no more,
I yeve it up for nowe and evirmore,
For I shall nevir este putten in balaunce
My sikirnes ne lerne of love the lore,
But as the swan, I have herde say ful yore,
Ayenst his deth wol sing in his penance,

So singe I here the destinie and chaunce,
Howe that Arcite Annelida so fore
Hath thrillid with the poynt of remembraunce.

Whan that Annelida this woful quene
Hath of her hande ywrittin in this wise,
With face all ded, betwixin pale and grene
She fel a swoune, and sithe she gan to rise,
And unto Mars avowith sacrifice
Within the temple, with a so'rowfull chere,
That shapin was, as ye may plainly here.

Explicit.

The Assemble of Ladies.

A Gentlewoman dreameth that she seeth a greate number of Ladies put up their Billes of Complaint before a Judge; who promisseth to relieve their Grievances.

In Septembre' at the fallinge of the lefe,
The freshe ceson was altogidir done,
And of the corne was gathirid the thefe,
In a gardine aboute twayne astir none
Ther were ladies walking, as was ther wone
Foure in nombre, as to my minde dothe fall,
And I the fiftie, the simplist of 'hem al.

Of gentilwomen faire there were also
Disporting 'hem, everiche astir her gife,
In crosse aleis walking by two and two;
And some alone, astir ther fantasies,
Thus occupied we were in diverse wise,
And yet in trouthe we were not al alone,
There werin knightes and squiris many one.

Wherof I served, one of 'hem askid me,
I said ayen, as it fel in my thought,
To walke aboute the mase in certainte,
As a hedeless woman that nothing rought.
He askid me ayen whom that I fought,
And of my colour why I was so pale? 20
Forsothe (q'ð I) and therby lithe a tale.

That must me wete (q'ð he) and that anone
Tel on, let se, and make no rarying.
Abide (q'ð I) ye ben a hastie one,
I let you wete it is no lityl thing,
But for bicause ye have a grete longing
In your desire this processe for to here,
I shal you tel the plaine of this matere.

It happid thus, that in an astirnone
My felauship and I by one assent, 30
Whan al othir besineffis were done,
To passe our time, into this mase we went,
And toke our waies, eche astir our entent,
Some went inward, and went they had gon out.
Some stonde in the mid, and loked all about.

And soth to say, some were ful ferre behinde,
And right anon as ferforthe as the best,
Othir there were so masid in ther minde
Al waies were gode for 'hem both est and west,
Thus went they forth, and had but lityl rest, 40
And some ther courage dyd 'hem fore assaile,
For very wrathe, they dyd step o'er the raile.

And as they fought 'hem selvin to and fro,
I gate my self a lityl avauntage,
Al forweried I might no furthir go,
Though I had won right grete for my viage,
So came I forthe into a straite passage,
Which brought me to an herbir faire and grene,
Ymade with benchis ful crafty and clene.

That as methoughtin, there might no cature 50
Devise a bette by dewe proporcioun,
Safe it was closid wel I you ensure,
With masonrye of compace envirooun,
Ful secretly with stairis goyng down,
In myddes the place, with turning whele certain,
And upon that a potte of Margelaine.

With margetettes growinge in ordinaunce
To shewe 'hem selfe, as folke went to and fro,
That to beholde it was a grete plesaunce,
And how they were accompainid with mo, 60
Ne momblisnesse and sonèness also,
The poure pensis were not dislogid there,
Ne gode wote ther place was every where.

The flore and bench was pavid faire and smothe
With stonis square, of many divers hewe,
So wel joynid, that for to say the soth
Al semid one, that no one othir knewe,
And undirnith the stremis newe and newe,
As silvir bright, springing in soche a wise,
That whence it came, ye coude it not devise. 70

A lityl while ywas I al alone
Beholding wel this delectable place, 30
My felauship were coming everichone,
So muste we nedis abyde for a space,
Remembiring of many divers cace
Of tyme ypaffid yore with sighis depe,
I set me downe, and there I fel allepe.

And as I slept, me thought there came to me
A gentylwoman, metely of stature,
Of grete worship she semid for to be, 80
Atryd wel, not high, but by mesure,
Her countinaunce full sad was and demure,
Her colours blewe, al that she had upon,
Ther ne came no mo but her selfe alone.

§ S

Her

Her gowne wel was embraudrid certainly
 With stonis sette aftir her owne devise
 In her purfillis, her worde by and by,
Bien & loyalement, as I coude devise:
 Than praide I her in any manir wise
 That of her name I might have remembraunce, 90
 She said she was callid Perseverance.

So furthirmore to spekin was I bolde,
 Where she dwellid, I prayd her for to say?
 And she againe ful curtillly me tolde,
 My dwelling is, and hath be many a day,
 With a lady: what lady I you pray?
 Of gret estate, thus warne I you (qð she)
 What cal ye her? Her name is Loyalte.

In what office stande ye, or what degre?
 (Qð I to her) that would I wete right faine? 100
 I am (qð she) unworthy though I be,
 Of her chambre her ushir in certaine,
 This rodde I bere, as for a token plaine,
 Lyke as ye knowe the rule in soche service,
 Apertaining is to the same office.

She chargid me by her commaundement
 To warne you, and your felawes everichone,
 That ye shulde come there as she is present,
 For a counsaile, whiche shall be nowe anone,
 Or sevin dayis be comin and gone, 110
 And furthirmore, she bad that I shulde say,
 Excusis there might be none nor delay.

Anothir thing was not forget behinde,
 Whiche in no wise I wolde but that ye knewe,
 Remembre wel, and bere it in your minde,
 Al your felawes and ye must come in blewe
 Everilyche, your matirs for to sewe,
 With more, whiche I pray you to thinke upon,
 Your wordis on your selvis everychon.

And be not abashed in no manir wise, 120
 As many ben, in soche an high presence,
 Make your request, as ye can best devise,
 And she gladly wol yeve you audience,
 There is no grete, nor no manir offence,
 Wherin ye fele that your herte is displeed,
 But with her help right sone ye shal be esed.

I am right glad (qð I) ye tel me this,
 But there is non of us that knoweth the waie;
 As of your way (qð she) ye shal not mis,
 Ye shal have one to gyde you day by day 130
 Of my felawes, I can not bertir say,
 Soche one as shal tel you the way ful right,
 And Diligence this gentilwoman hight.

A woman of right famous govirnaunce
 And wel cherished, I tel you in certaine,
 Her fellowship shal do you grete plesaunce,
 Her porte is soch, her manirs trewe and plaine,
 She with glad chere wold do her besy paine
 To bring you there, now farewell, I have done,
 Abyde said I, ye may not go so sone. 140

Why so (qð she) and I have ferre to go,
 To yeve warning in many divers place
 To your felawes, and so to othir mo,
 And well ye wote I have but lytil space?
 Now yet (qð I) ye must tel me this cace,
 If we shal any men unto us cal;
 Not one (qð she) may come amonges you all.

Not one than said I, eigh Benedicite!
 What have I done? I pray you tel me that?

Nowe by my lyfe, I trowe but wel (qð she) 150
 But er I can byleve there is somewhat,
 And for to saye you trouthe more can I not,
 In questions I may nothing be to large,
 I meddle must no furthir then my charge.

Than thus (qð I) do me to undirstande
 What place is there this lady is dwelling?
 Forsothe (qð she) and one sought al this lande
 Fairir is none, though it were for a king,
 Devysid wel, and that in every thing,
 The touris hie ful plesaunt shal ye finde, 160
 With phanis fresli, turning with every wynde.

The chambris and the parlirs of a sorte,
 With bay windowes, godely as may be thought,
 As for daunsing, and othir wise disporte,
 The galleries be all right well ywrought,
 That wel I wote, if ye were thysir brought,
 And take gode hede therof in every wise,
 Ye wol it thinke a very paradise.

What hight the place (qð I) now say me that?
 Plesaunt Regarde (qð she) to tel you plaine; 170
 Of very trouthe (qð I) and wote ye what,
 It may right wel be callid so certaine,
 But furthirmore this wold I wit right fain,
 What I shulde do as sone as I come there,
 And aftir whom that I may best enquire?

A gentilwoman, portir of the yate,
 There shal ye finde, her name is Countinaunce,
 If ye so hap ye come erly or late,
 Of her wer gode to have some acquaintaunce,
 She can you tel howe ye shal you avaunce, 180
 And howe to come to her ladye's presence,
 To her wordis I rede ye geve credence.

Nowe it is time that I shulde parte you fro,
 For in gode faithe I have grete businesse.
 I wote right wel (qð I) that it is so,
 And I thanke you of your grete gentilnesse,
 Your comforte hath yevin me hardinesse,
 That nowe I shal be bolde withoutin faile
 To do' aftir your advice and gode counsaile.

Thus partid she, and I lefte all alone, 190
 With that I sawe (as I behelde aside)
 A woman come a verie godely one,
 And forth withal as I had her aside
 Me thought anone it should be the gide,
 And of her name anone I did enquire.
 Ful womanly she yave me this answere,

I am (qð she) but a simple cature,
 Sent from the courte, my name is Diligence,
 As sone as I myght come, I you ensure,
 I taried not atir I had licence, 200
 And nowe that I am come to your presence,
 Loke what service I can you do or may,
 Commaundith me, I can no furthir say.

I thankid her, and prayed her to come nere,
 Bycause I woulde se how she was araide,
 Her gown was blew dresid in gode manere,
 With her devise, her worde also that saide
Tant que je puis, and I was wel apaide;
 And than wist I, withoutin any more,
 It was ful trewe that I had herde before. 210

Though we toke nowe before a litil space
 It were ful gode (qð she) as I coude gesse,
 Howe farre (qð I) have we unto the place?
 A daye's journey (qð she) but litil lesse,

Wherefore

Wherefore I rede that now we outwarde dresse,
For I suppose our felawship is past,
And for nothings I wolde not we were the last.

Than departid we' at springing of the daye,
And forthe we wente a softe and esy pace,
Til at the last we were on our journey 220
So far outwarde, that we might se the place;
Nowe let us rest (qð I) a litil space,
And say we as devoutly as we can
A Pater noster for saint Julian.

With al my herte I assent with gode wil,
Moch bettir shal we spede, whan we have done,
Than taryed we, and said it every dyl,
And whan the day was past farre aftir none,
We sawe a place, and thiðir came we sone,
Whiche rounde aboute was closid with a wal, 230
Semyng to me full like an hospitall.

There found I one had brought all min aray,
(A gentil woman of mine acquaintaunce)
I have mervaile (qð I) what manir way
Ye had knowlege of al this ordinaunce.
Yes yes (qð she) I herde Perseveraunce
Howe she warnid her felawes everichone,
And what aray ye shouldin have upon.

Nowe for my love (qð I) this I you praye,
Sith ye have take upon you all the paine, 240
That ye wolde helpe me on with mine araye,
For wit ye wel I wolde be gone right faine,
Al this prayir us nedith not certaine:
(Qð she) againe, come of and hye you sone,
And ye shal se anone it shal be done.

But this I doute me gretly, wote ye what,
That my felawes be passid by and gone?
I warnè you (qð she) that are they nat,
For here they shall assemble everichone,
Notwithstandinge I counsaile you anone 250
Make you redy, and tary you no more,
It is no harme though ye be there before.

So than I dressid me in mine araye,
And asked her whethir it were wel or no:
It is right well (qð she) unto my pay,
Ye nede not care to what place er ye go,
And whiles that she and I debatid so,
Came Diligence, and sawe me al in blewe,
Sistir (qð she) right wel broke ye your newe.

Discrecion purveour.

Than wente we forth and met at avinture 260
A yonge woman, an officir seminge,
What is your name (qð I) tell gode cature?
Discrecion (qð she) without lesinge.
And where (qð I) is your most abidinge?
I have (qð she) this office of purchase,
Chefe purveyour that longith to this place.

Acquayntaunce herbyger.

Faire love (qð I) in al your ordinaunce,
What is her name that is the herbigere?
Forsothe (qð she) her name is acquaintaunce,
A woman of right gracious manere; 270
Then thus (qð I) what straungirs have ye here?
But fewe (qð she) of high degre ne lowe,
Ye be the first, as ferforth as I knowe.

Countinaunce porter.

Thus with talis we came streight to the yate;
This yonge woman departid was and gone,
Came Diligence, and knockid fast thereat,
Who is without (qð Countinaunce) anone?
Truly (qð I) fayre sistir here is one.
Which one (qð she) and therewithal she lough?
I Diligence, ye knowe me wel ynoughe. 280

Than opened she the gate, and in we go,
With wordis faire she saide full gentilly,
Ye are welcome ywis, are ye no mo?
Nat one (qð she) save this woman and I;
Now than (qð she) I pray you hertily,
Takith my chaumbre for a while to rest,
Til your felawis come, I holde it best.

I thanked her, and forth we go everichone
Til her chambre withoutin wordis mo,
Came Diligence and toke her leve anone, 290
Where er ye lyst (qð I) nowe may ye go,
And I thanke you right hertily also
Of your labour, for whiche God do you mede,
I can no more, but Jesu be your spede.

Than Countinaunce thus askid me anone,
Your felawship, where be they all (qð she)?
For sothe (qð I) they are cominge everichone,
But where they are I knowe no certainte,
Without I may 'hem at this windowe se,
Here wil I stande a waiting here amonge, 300
For wel I wote they wil not hence be longe.

Thus as I stode musing ful busily,
I thought to take gode hede of her aray,
Her gowne was blewe, this wote I verily,
Of gode facyon, and furrid wel with gray,
Upon her sleve her worde this is no nay,
Whiche said thus, as my pennè can endite,
A moy, qui voy writin with lettirs white.

Then forth withal she came streight unto me,
Your wordes (qð she) fain wold I that I knewe, 310
Forsothe (qð I) ye shal wel knowe and se,
And for my worde I have none, this is trew,
It is ynough that my clothing be blewe,
As here before I had commaundement,
And so to do, I am right well content.

Largeffe stewarde.

But tel me this I pray you hertiye
The steward here say me, what is her name?
She hight Largeffe I say you furily,
A faire lady and of right noble fame,
Whan ye her se ye wil reporte the fame, 320
And undir her to byd you welcome al
There is Belchier marshal of the hal.

Now al this while that ye here tary still,
Your own matirs ye may wel have in mind,
But tel me this, have ye brought any bill?
Ye ye (qð I) and els I were behinde,
Where is there one tel me that I may finde
To whom that I may shewe my matirs plaine?
Surely (qð she) unto the chambirlaine.

Remembraunce chamberlaine.

The chambirlaine (qð I) and say ye trewe? 330
Ye verily (said she) by myne advise,
Ben nat aierde, unto her lowlye sewe,

It

It shal be done (qð I) as ye devyse,
But I must knowe her name in any wise:
Trewly (qð she) to shewe you in substaunce
Withouten fainyng her name is Remembraunce.

The secretar ye may not be forget,
For she dothe right moche in every thinge,
Wherfore I rede, when ye have with her mete,
Your matere whole tel her without fainyng, 340
Ye shal her fynde ful gode and ful lovinge.
Tel me her name (qð I) of gentilnesse?
By my gode sothe (qð she) Avisenesse.

That name (qð I) for her is passing gode,
For every byl and schedule she must se,
Nowe gode (qð I) come stande there as I stode,
My felawes be cominge, yondir they be.
Is it in jape, or say ye sothe (qð she)?
In jape, nay nay, I say you for certayne,
Se how thei come togethir twain and twaine. 350

Ye say ful sothe (qð she) that is no nay,
I se coming a godely company:
They ben soch folke (qð I) dare I to say
That lyst to love, thinkith it verily,
And for my love I pray you faythfully
At any tyme, whan they upon you call,
That ye wol be gode frende unto hem all.

Of my frenship (qð she) they shal not misse,
And for their ese to put therto my paine.
God yelde it you (qð I) but take you this, 360
Howe shal we know who is the chambirlayne?
That shal ye wel know by her word certaine.
What is her worde systir, I pray you say?
(Plus ne purroye) thus writith she alwaye.

Thus as we stode togyðir she and I,
Even at the yate my felawes were echone,
So met I hem (as me thought was godely)
And bade hem welcome al by one and one:
Then came forth Countinaunce to us anone,
Ful hertily, faire sistirs al (qð she) 370
Ye be right welcome into this cowntre.

I counsayle you to take a litil rest
In my chambre, if it be your plessaunce,
Whan ye be there, me thinketh it for the best
That I go in, and cal Perseveraunce,
Bycause she is one of your acquaintaunce,
And she also wil tel you every thinge,
Howe ye shal be ruler of your cominge.

My felawes al and I, by one advise,
Were wel agreed, to do lyke as she sayde, 380
Than we began to dresse us in our gise,
That folke shoulde say we were not unpurveide,
And gode wagirs among us there we laide
Whiche of us was atirid moste godeleft,
And of us al whiche shulde be praisid best.

The portir came and brought Perseveraunce,
She welcomid us in curteise manere,
Thinke not long (qð she) of your attendaunce,
I wil go speke unto the herbigere,
That she may purvey for your lodging here, 390
Than wil I go unto the chambirlaine,
To speke for you, and come anone againe.

And whan that she departid was and gone,
We sawe folkis coming without the wal,
So gret peple, that nombre coude we none,
Ladies they were, and gentil women al,
Clothid in blewe, echone her worde withal,

But for to knowe her worde or her devyse
They came so thicke, I ne might in no wise.

With that anone came in Perseveraunce, 400
And where I stode, she came streight unto me,
Ye ben (qð she) of min olde acquaintaunce,
You to enquire the boldir wolde I be,
What worde they bere eche aftir her degre,
I you pray tel it me in secret wise,
And I shall kepe it close on warrantise.

We ben five ladies (qð I) al in fere,
And gentil women four in company,
When they begin to opin ther matere,
Than shal ye knowe ther wordis by and by, 410
But as for me I have none verily,
And so I tolde Countinaunce here before,
Al min aray is blewe, what nedith more?

Nowe then (qð she) I wol go backe againe,
That ye may have knowlege, what ye shuld do,
In soth (qð I) if ye wolde take the paine,
Ye dyd right moche for us, if ye dyd so,
The rathir spede, the sonir may we go,
Grete cosse alway there is in taryng,
And longe to sewe it is a wery thinge. 420

Then partid she, and came againe anone,
Ye must (qð she) come to the chambirlaine:
We be nowe redy (qð I) everychone,
To folowe you, whan er ye list certaine,
We have none eloquence to tel you plaine,
Beseching you we may be so excused
Our trewe meaning, that it be not refused.

Than went we forth aftir Perseveraunce,
To se the prees it was a wondir cace,
There for to passe it was a grete combraunce, 430
The peple stode so thicke in every place,
Nowe stande ye stil (qð she) a litil space,
And for your ese somewhat I shal assay,
Yf I can make you any bettir way.

And forth she gothe among hem everychon,
Making a way, that we might thorough passe,
More at our ese, and whan she had so done
She beckende us to come, where as she was,
So aftir her we folowed more and las,
She brought us streight unto the chambirlayne,
There lefte she us, and than she went againe.

We salued her, as reson woulde it so,
Ful humble beseching her gret godenesse
In our mattirs, that we had for to do,
That she wolde be gode lady and maistresse.
Ye be welcome (qð she) in fothfastenesse,
And se what I can do, you for to plesse,
I am redy, that may be to your ese.

We folowed her unto the chambir dore,
Sistirs (qð she) come ye in aftir me, 450
But wete ye wel, there was a pavid flore,
The godlyist, that any wight might se,
And furthir more about than lokid we,
On eche cornir, and upon every wal,
Whiche was ymade of Burel and Crystal.

Wherein was graven of stories many one,
Firste howe Phyllis, of womanly pite
Dyed piteously for love of Demophone,
Next aftir was the story of Thisbe,
Howe that she slewe her selfe undir a tre, 460
Yet sawe I more, howe in ryght pitous caas
For Antony was slaine Cleopatras.

Upon

Upon that othir side was Hawes the shene,
Ful untrewly discevid in her baine.
There was also Annelida the quene,
Upon Arcite howe fore she did complaine!
Al these stories were gravid there certaine,
And many mo, than I reherse you here,
It were to longe to tel you al in fere.

And bicause that the wallis shone so bright 470
With fine umple they were al ovir sprad,
To the entent folke shulde not hurte ther sight,
And thorough it the stories might be radde,
Than furthirmore I went, as I was lad,
And there I sawe withoutin any faile
A chaire yset, with ful riche aparaile:

And five stagis it was set fro the grounde,
Of Cassidony ful curiously wrought,
With foure pomelles of golde, and very rounde,
Set with saphirs, as gode as coude be thought, 480
That wot ye what, if it wer thorough sought
As I suppose, fro this countre to Inde,
Anothir soche it were right harde to finde.

For wete ye wel, I was right nere to that,
So as I durst, beholding by and by,
Above there was a riche clothe of estate
Ywrought with the nedle ful straungely,
Her worde thercon, and thus it said truely,
En Dieu est to tel you in wordis fewe,
With grete lettirs, the bettir I 'hem knewe. 490

Thus as we stode, a dore opened anone,
A gentilwoman, femely of stature,
Bering a mace, came out her selfe alone,
Sothely me thought her a godely cature,
She spake nothinge to lowde, I you ensure,
Nor hastily, but with godely warninge,
Make rome (qð she) my lady is cominge.

With that anone I sawe Perseveraunce
Howe she helde up the tapet in her hande,
I sawe also in godely ordinaunce 500
This gret lady within the tapet stande,
Comyng outwarde, I wol ye undirstande,
And aftir her a noble company,
I coude not tel the nombre fikirly.

Of ther namis I wolde nothing enquire,
Furthir than soche as we wolde sewe unto,
Save a lady whiche was the chauncellere,
Attemperaunce, sothely her name was so,
For us nedith with her have moche to do
In our mattirs, and alway more and more, 510
And so forthe to tellin you furthirmore,

Of this lady, her beaute to discrive,
My conninge is to simple verily,
For nevir yet the dayis of my live
So inly faire I have sene none trewly,
In her estate assurid uttirly,
There wantid nought, I dare you wel assure,
That longid to a most godely cature.

And furthirmore to speke of her araye, 520
I shal tel you the manir of her gowne,
Of clothe of golde ful riche, it is no nay,
The colour blewe of right godely facyoun,
In taberde wise, the sleeves hanging adown,
And what purfil there was, and in what wise,
So as I can I shal it you devise.

Aftir a sorte, the collir and the vente,
Lyke as Armine is made in purfilinge,

With grete perlis ful fine and orient,
They were couchid all aftir one worching, 530
With diamondes in stede of powdiring,
The flevis and the purfill of a sife,
They werin made alike in every wise.

Aboute her necke a forte of faire rubyes,
In white flouris of right fine enamaile,
Upon her hed set in the fairist wise
A circle of grete balais of entaile,
That in earnest to speke withoutin faile,
For yonge and olde, and every manir age,
It was a worlde to loken on her visage.

Thus coming forth to sit in her estate, 540
In her presence we kneled down everychone,
Presenting our byllis, and wote ye what,
Ful humbly she toke 'hem by one and one,
Whan we had done, than came they al anone,
And did the same eche aftir her manere,
Kneling at ones, and risinge al in fere.

Whan this was don, and she set in her place,
The chambirlaine she did unto her cal,
And she godely coming to her apace,
Of her entent knowinge nothing at al, 550
Voyde backe the prese (qð she) up to the wall,
Make large rome, but loke that ye do not tary,
And take these byllis to the secretery.

The chambirlaine did her commaundement,
And came againe, as she was byd to do,
The secretery there beyng present,
The byllis were delivered her also,
Not onely ours, but many othir mo,
Than the lady with gode advise againe
Anone with al callid her chambirlaine. 560

We wol (qð she) the first thing that ye do
The secretery ye make come anone,
With ther billis, and thus we wil also
In our presence she rede 'hem everychon,
That we may takin gode advise theron,
Of the ladies that ben of our counsaile,
Loke this be done, withoutin any faile.

Whan the chambirlaine wiste of her entent,
Anone she did the secretery call,
Let your billis (qð she) be here present, 570
My lady' it wil: Madame (qð she) I shal,
And in presence she wil that ye 'hem call,
With right gode wil I am redy (qð she)
At her plesure, whan she commaundith me.

And upon that was made an ordinaunce,
They that came first ther byllis shulde be red,
Ful gentilly than said Perseveraunce,
Reson it wil that they were sonist spedde;
Anone withal, upon a tapet spredde, 580
The secretery layde 'hem downe echone,
Our byllis first she redde tho one by one.

The first lady bering in her devise,
Sans que jamays, thus wrote she on her byl,
Complaining fore, and in ful pitous wise
Of promise made, with faithful hert and wyll,
And so brokin ayenst al manir skil,
Without deserte alwaies on her partie,
In this matir desiring remedye.

Her next fol'owing, her word was in this wise,
Un sans changer, and thus she did complaine, 590
Though she had be guerdoned for her service,
Yet nothing like as she that toke the paine,

Wherefore she coude in no wise her restraine,
But in this case sewe until her presence,
As reson wolde to havin recompence.

So furthirmore, to speke of othir twaine,
One of 'hem wrote aftir her fantasy,
Onques puis lever, and for to tel you plaine,
Her complaint was ful pitous verily,
For as she said, there was grete reson why, 600
As I can remembre in this matere,
I shal you tell the processe al in fere.

Her byl was made complaininge in her gife,
That of her joye, her comferte, and gladnesse,
Was no suretie, for in no manir wise
She said therin no point of stablenesse,
Nowe yl, now wele, out of al sikirnesse,
Ful humbly desiring of her high grace
Sone to shewe her remedy in this case.

Her felawe made her bil, and thus she said, 610
In plaining wise, there as she lovid best,
Whethir that she were wrothe or wele apaide,
She might not se whan that she wole faintest,
And fulle wrothe she was in very ernest,
To tel her worde, as ferforth as I wote,
Entierement vostre, right thus she wrote.

And upon that she made a grete request
With hert and wil, and al that might be done,
As until her that might redresse it best,
For in her minde there might she find it sone, 620
The remedy of that whiche was her bone,
Reherfing that that she had saide before,
Beseeching her it might be so no more.

And in like wise as they had done before
The gentylwomen of our company
Put ther byllis, and for to tell you more,
One of 'hem wrote (C'est sans dire) verily,
And her matere wholly to specyfy,
Within her byl she put it in writinge,
And what it said, ye shall yhave knowinge. 630

It said, God wote, and that ful pitously,
Lyke as she was disposid in her herte,
No misfortune that she toke grevously,
Al one to her was the joy and the smerte,
Sometime no thanke for al her gode deserte,
Othir comferte she wantid none coming,
And so usid, it grevid her nothing,

Desiring her, and lowly beseeching,
That she wolde for her seke a bettir way,
As she that had yben her daies lyving 640
Stedfast and trewe, and wil be so alway,
Of her felawe somewhat I shal you say,
Whose byl was red the nexte forthe withal,
And what it ment, reherfin you I shal.

En Dieu est she wrote in her devise,
And thus she said withoutin any faile,
Her trouthe ne might be takin in no wise,
Like as she thought, wherfor she had mervaille,
For trouth somtyme was wont to take availe
In every matere, but al that' is ago, 650
The more pyte that it is suffrid so.

Moche more there was, wherof she shulde complain,
But she thought it to gret an encombraunce,
So moche to write, and therefore in certain
In God and her she put all her affiaunce,
As in her worde is made a remembraunce,
Beseeching her, that she wolde in this case

Shewe unto her the favour of her grace.

The thirde she wrote reherfing her grevaunce,
Ye, wote ye what, a pitous thing to here, 660
For as me thought she felt grete displeaunce,
One might ryght wel perceve it by her chere,
And no wondir, it fate her passyng nere,
Yet lothe she was to put it in writinge,
But nede wol havin course in every thinge.

Soyes assuré, this was her worde certain,
And thus she wrote within a litil space,
There she lovid, her labor was in vaine,
For he was set al in anothir place,
Ful humilly desiring in that case 670
Some gode comferte her sorowe to appese,
That she might livin more at hert'is ese.

The fourth surely me thought she likid wele,
As in her porte, and in her behavinge,
And bien moneste, as ferre as I coude sele,
That was her worde, tyl her wel belonging,
Wherefore to her she praied above al thing
Ful hertily, to say you in substaunce,
That she wold sendin her gode countinaunce.

Ye have reherfid me these byllis all, 680
But nowe let se somewhat of your entent;
It may so hap, paravinture ye shal;
Nowe I pray you while I am here present;
Ye shal have knowlege parde what I ment,
But thus I say, in trouth and make no fable,
The case it selfe is inly lamentable;

And wel I wote that ye wol thynke the same,
Lyke as I say, whan ye have herde my byl;
Now gode tel on, I hate you by saint Jame;
Abyde a while, it is not yet my wil, 690
Yet must ye wete by reson and by skil,
Sith ye' have knowlege of that was don before,
And thus it is said, without wordis more:

Nothing so lese as deth to come to me,
For final ende of my sorowes and paine,
What shuld I more desire as semith ye,
And ye knewe al aforne it for certaine,
I wote ye wolde, and for to tel you plaine,
Without her helpe, that hath al thinge in cure,
I can nat thinke that it may longe endure. 700

As for my trouth it hath be provid wele,
To say the sothe, and I can say no more,
Of ful longe tyme, and suffrid every dele
In pacience, and kepe it all in store,
Of her godenesse beseeching her therfore,
That I might have my thanke in soche a wise,
As my deserte yfervith of justise.

Whan these billis were rad everychone,
The ladie toke a gode advisement,
And 'hem to answerin by one and one 710
She thought it was to moche, in her entent,
Wherefore she yave to 'hem commaundement
In her presence to come both one and al,
To yeve 'hem her answeere in generall.

What dyd she than suppose ye verily?
She spake her selfe, and said in this manere:
We have wel sene your byllis by and by,
And some of 'hem be pitous for to here,
We wol therfore ye knowe al this in fere,
Within shorte tyme our court of parliment 720
Here shal be holde in our palays presente.

And
;

And in al this, wherin you find you greved,
 There shall ye finde an opin remedy,
 In soche a wise as ye shal be releved
 Of al that ye reherfin here throughly,
 As for the date ye shal knowe verily,
 That ye may have a space in your coming,
 For Diligence shal tel you by writing.

We thankid her in our most humble wise,
 Our felawship eche one, by one assent, 730
 Submittinge us lowly til her service,
 For as we thought, we had our travaile spent
 In soche wise as we heldin us content,
 Than eche of us toke othir by the sleve,
 And forth withal, as we shulde take our leve.

Al sodainly the watir sprange anone
 In my visage, and therewithal I woke,
 Where am I now? thought I, al this is gone,
 Al masid, and up I began to loke;
 With that anon I went and made this boke, 740

Thus simply reherfing the sustaunce,
 Bicause it shulde not be' out of remembraunce.

Now verily your dreame is passing gode,
 And worthy to be had in remembraunce,
 For though I stand here as longe as I stode,
 It shulde not to me be none encombraunce,
 I toke therin so inly grete plesaunce;
 But tel me now what ye the boke do cal,
 For I muste wete: Wyth right gode wyl ye shal:

As for this boke, to say you very right, 750
 And of the name to tel you' in certainte,
L'assemble de dames, thus it hight,
 How thinkin ye, that name is gode parde,
 Nowe go, farewell, for they cal aftir me
 My felawes al, and I must aftir sone,
 Rede wel my dreame, for now my tale is done.

Finis.

The Conclusions of the Astrolabie.

This Book (written to his Son in the Year of our Lord 1391, and in the 14 of King Richard II.) standeth so good at this Day, especially for the Horizon of Oxford, as in the Opinion of the Learned it cannot be amended, says the last Edit. of Chaucer.

L Ytel Lowys my sonne, I perceve well by certaine evidences thyne abylyte to lerne scyences, touching nombres and proporcions, and also well consydre I thy besye prayer in especyal to lerne the trefyfe of the Astrolabye. Than for as moche as a Philosopher saithe, he wrapeth hym in his frende, that condiscendeth to the ryghtfull prayers of his frende: Therefore I have given The a sufficient Astrolabye for oure orizont, compownd after the latitude of Oxenforde: Upon the whiche by mediacion of this lytell trefyfe, I purpose to teche The a certaine nombre of conclusions, pertainynge to this same instrument. I say a certaine nombre of conclusions for three causes, the first cause is this. Truste wel that al the conclusions that have be founden, or ells possiblye might be founde in so noble an instrument as in the Astrolabye, ben unknowen perfytely to anye mortal man in this region, as I suppose. Another cause is this, that sothely in any cartes of the Astrolabye that I have yfene, ther ben some conclusions, that wol not in al thinges perfourme ther behestes: and some of 'hem ben to harde to thy tender age of ten yere to conceve. This trefyfe devided in five partes, wil I shewe The wondir light rules and naked wordes in Englishe, for Latine ne canst thou nat yet but smale, my litel sonne. But neverthelesse suffiseth to The these trewe conclusyons in englishe, as well as suffiseth to these noble clerkes grekes these same conclusions in greke, and to the Arabines in Arabike, and to Jewes in Hebrewe, and to the Latin folke in Latyn: whiche Latyn folke had 'hem firste out of o-ther divers langages, and write 'hem in ther owne tonge, that is to saie in Latine.

And God wote that in all these languages and in manye mo, have these conclusyons ben sufficiently lerned and taught, and yet by divers rules, right as divers pathes leden divers folke the right waye to Rome.

Now wol I pray mekely every person discrete, that redeth or hereth this lityl trefyfe to have my rude ententing excused, and my superfluite of wordes, for two causes. The first cause is, for that curious endityng and harde sentences is ful hevvy at ones, for soch a childe to lerne. And the seconde cause is this, that sothely me semeth better to written unto a childe twise a gode sentence, than he foriete it ones. And, Lowis, if it be so that I shewe The in my lith Englishe, as trewe conclusions touching this mater, and not only as trewe but as many and subtil conclusions as ben yshewed in latin, in any comon trefyfe of the Astrolabye, conne me the more thanke, and praye God save the kinge, that is lorde of this langage, and all that him faith bereth, and obeieth everiche in his degre, the more and the lassé. But consydreth well, that I ne usurpe not to have founden this werke of my labour or of myne engin. I name but a leude compilatour of the laboure of olde Astrologiens, and have it translated in myn englishe onely for thy doctrine: and with this swerde shal I slene envy.

The first party.

THE firste partye of this trefyfe shall reherce the figures, and the membres of thyne astrolaby, bycause that thou shalte have the greter knowinge of thine owne instrument.

The seconde party.

THE seconde partye shall teche The to werken the very practike of the foresaid conclusions, as ferforthe and also narowe as may be shewed in so smale smale an instrumente portatife aboute. For wel wote every Astrologien, that smallest fractions ne wol not be shewed in so smal an instrument, as in subtil tables calculated for a cause.

The thirde partye.

THE thirde partye shal containe divers tables, of longitudes and latitudes of sterres, fixe in the Astrolabie. And tables of the declinations of the Sonne, and tables of the longitude of cities and townes. And tables as wel for the governacion of the clocke, as for to finde the altitude meridian, and many an other notable conclusion after the kalenders of the reverent clerkes frere John Som, and frere N. Lenne.

The fourth partye.

THE fourth partye shall be a theorike, to declare the meninge of the celestiall bodyes, wyth the causes, the whiche the fourth partie in special shal shew in a table of the very mevinge of the mone, from one to one, every daye and every signe, after thin almanacke. Upon the which table there foloweth a canon, sufficyent to tech as wel in maner of workynge in the same conclusions, as to knowe in our Orizont, with which degre of zodiack the mone ariseth in any latitude, and the arisinge in any planete after his latitude fro the eclyptyke lyne.

The fyfte partye.

THE fyfte partye shall ben an introductorye, after the statutes of our doctours, on whiche thou mayste lerne a grete parte of the generall rules of theorike in Astrologie. In whiche fyfte partie thou shalt finde tables of equacions of houses, after the latitude of Oxenforde, and tables of dignitees of planettes, and other noteful thinges, if God vouchsafe and his mother the mayden, mo than I behete.

The ryng.

THY Astrolabye hath a ringe to putten on thy thomb on thy right honde, in takinge of the heyght of thinges. And take kepe, from hence forward I wol clepe the heyght of hevy thing, that is take by the rule, the altitude withouten mo wordes.

The turet.

THis ringe ronnet in a maner of a turet, fastened to the moder of thin Astrolabye, in a rounge or space, that it distroubeleth not the instrument to hangen after his right centure. The moder of thin Astrolabye is thickest by the brinks, that is the utmost ring with degrees, and al the myddle within the ryng shall be thynner, to receve the plates for divers clymates, and also for the rethe, that is shape in maner of a net, or els after the webbe of a loppe.

The moder.

THE moder of thin Astrolabye is the thickest plate perced with a large hole, that receveth in her wombe the thinne plates compowned of divers clymats, and thy rete shapen in maner of a net or of a web of a lope.

Of the foure lynes.

THis moder is divided on the backhalfe with a line, that cometh discendynge fro the ryng down to the netherest bordure, the which line, fro the foresaid ring unto the centre of the large hole amidde, is cleped Southe line, or els the line Meridionall: and the remenaunt of this line doune to the bordure is cleped the North line, or all the line of the Mid-night.

Of fower lines, East, West, Northe, and Southe,

OVerthwarte this foresaid long line there crosseth hym an other line of the same length, fro Este to West, of the which line, from a little crosse in the bordure unto the centre of the large hole, is cleped the Est line, or els the line Oriental: and the remenaunte of the line, fro the foresaid Orientall unto the bordure is cleped the Weste line, or the line Occidentall.

Now hast thou here the fower quarters of thin Astrolabie, divided after the fower principall plages or quarters of the firmament.

Whiche is the right side, and which is the left.

THE Este side of the Astrolabie is cleped the right side, and the Weste side is cleped the lefte side. Foryet not this little Lowis. Put the ring of thyne Astrolabie uppon the thombe of thy right hande, and then woll his right side be towarde thy left side, and his left side woll be towarde thy right side. Take this rule generall, as well on the backe, as on the wombe side. Uppon the ende of this Este line (as I first saied) is imarked a little crosse, where as evermore generally is considered, the entryng of the Este degre, in the whiche the Sonne ariseth.

The degrees fro the Est line, to the Southe.

FRO the little crosse up to the ende of the Meridionall lyne under the ryng shalt thou finde the bordure, divided with xc. degrees, and by that same proporcion is every quarter of thyn Astrolabie divided, over the whiche degrees, there ben numbers of Augrim, that deviden thilke same degrees fro five to five, as sheweth by longe strikes bitwene: of the whiche by long strikes the space bitwene containeth a mile waie, and every degre of thilke bordure containeth fower Minutes, that is to saie, fower minutes of an houre.

Of the twelve signes, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, and the other.

Under the Compasse of thilk degrees ben written the names of the twelve signes, as Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, and Pisces. And the nombres of the degrees of the signes ben written in Augrime above, and with long divisions, from five to five, devideth from the tyme that the signe entreth unto the laste ende. But understande well, that these degrees of signes ben everiche of hem considered of lx. Minutes, and every Minute of lx. secondes, and so forthe into small fractions infinite, as saith Alcabucius. And therefore knowe well, that a degre of the bordure containeth fower Minutes, and a degre of a signe containeth lx. minutes, and have this in minde.

The circle of the daies.

NExte this followeth the circle of the daies, that ben figured in maner of the degrees that containen in number thre hundred, threscore and five, divided devided also with longe strikes, from five to five, and the numbers of Augrime, written under the circle.

The circle of the twelve monethes.

NExte the circle of daies followeth the circle of the twelve names of the Monethes, that is to saie, Januarius, Februarius, Marcius, Aprill, Maius, Junius, Julius, August, September, October, November, December.

The names of these Monethes taken ther names, some for properties, and some by statutes of Emperours, and some by other Lordes of Rome. Eke of these Monethes, as liked to Julius Cæsar, and Cæsar Augustus, some were icompounded of divers numbers of daies, as July and August. Then hath Januarius xxxi. dayes, Februarius xxviii. Marcius xxxi. April xxx. Maie xxxi. Junius xxx. August xxxi. September xxx. October xxxi. November xxx. December xxxi. Nathelesse although that Julius Cæsar toke two daies out of Feverire, and put 'hem in his Monethe of July, and Augustus Cæsar cleped the Monethe of Auguste after his name, and ordained it of one and thirtie daies, yet trust well that the sonne dwelleth therfore never the more, ne the lasse in one signe, then in an other.

The names of the holie daies.

Then followeth the names of the holie daies in the Kalender, and next 'hem the letters A. B. C. on whiche thei fallen.

The scale of the Astrolabie.

NExt the foresaied circle of the A. B. C. under the crosse line is marked the scale, in maner of two Squires, or els in maner of ledders, that serveth by his xxii. pointes, and his divisions of full many a subtell conclusion of this foresaied scale: For the crosse line unto the verie angle, is cleped Umbra recta, or els Umbra extensa, and the nether partie Umbra versa.

The Rule.

Then hast thou a brode rule, that hath on every ende a square plate, parted with certaine holes, some more, and some lesse, to receven the stremes of the sonne by daie, and eke by mediacion of thyne eye, to knowe the altitude of the sterres by night.

The pin, whiche is imagined to be pole artike and the horse.

Then is there a large pin, in maner of an exiltre, that goth through the hole that halte the tables of the climathes in the rete, in the wombe of the moder, thorowe whiche pin there goeth a little wedge, the whiche is cleped the Horse, that straineth all these partes together. This foresaied grete pin, in maner of an exiltre, is imagined to be the pole artike in thyne Astrolabie.

For lines on the wombe side.

THE wombe side of thyne Astrolabie is also divided, with a longe crosse in fower quarters, from the Est to Weste, and from the Southe to Northe, from right side to left side, as is the backside.

The degrees of the wombe side.

THE border of whiche wombe side is divided fro the point of the Est line, unto the point of the South line, under the ryng in xc. degrees, and by the same proporcion is every quarter divided, as is the backside, that amounteth thre hundred lx. degrees. And understande well, that the degrees of this border ben aunfwerynge and consentyng to the degrees of Equinoctiall, that is divided in the same number, as every other circle is in the hie heven.

This border is divided also with xxiii. letters, and a small crosse about the South line, that sheweth the xxiii. houres equales of the clocke. And I have saied five of these degrees maken a mile waie, and thre mile waie maken an houre, and every degre of this border containeth fower Minutes, and every Minute fowertie secondes. Nowe have I tolde The twise, and for the more declaracion.

Of the principall circles.

THE plate under the rete is discribed with thre circles, of whiche the left is cleped the Circle of Cancer, because that the hedde of Cancer tourneth ever more concentrike, uppon the same Circle. In this halfe of Cancer is the gretest declinacion Northward of the sonne and therefore is he icleped Solsticium of Sommer, whiche declinacion after Ptholome is xxiii. degrees and fiftie Minutes, as well in Cancer, as in Capricorne. This Signe of Cancer is cleped the Tropike of Sommer, of Tropos, that is to saie, ayenward. The middell circle in wideness of these thre, is cleped the circle Equinoctiall, upon whiche turneth ever more the heddes of Aries and Libra. And understande well, that evermore this circle Equinoctiall tourneth justlie fro very Este, to very Weste, as I have shewed in the sphere solid. This same circle is cleped also the wayer of the daie. For when the Sonne is in the hed of Aries and Libra, then ben daies and nightes like of lengthe, in all the worlde, and therfore ben these two signes called Equinoctis. And al that meveth within these beddes of Aries and Libra, is icalled Northward, and all that meveth without these heddes, his mevyng is cleped Southward, as for the Equinoctiall take kepe of the latitudes Northe and South, and forget it not: but this circle Equinoctiall ben considered the xxiii. houres of the clocke. For evermore the ariling of xv. degrees of the Equinoctiall maketh an hour equall of the clocke. This Equinoctiall is cleped the midwaie of the first mevyng, or els of the Sonne. And note that the first mevyng is cleped mevyng of the first movable of the eight Sphere, whiche mevyng is fro Est to West, and again into Est. Also it is cleped girdell of the first mevyng. For it departeth the first mevable, that is to saie, the sphere, in two, like parties, even distaunte fro the Poles of this worlde. The widest of these thre circles principall, is cleped the circle of Capricorne, and tourneth evermore concentrike, upon the same circle. In the hedde of this foresaied Capricorne is the gretest declinacion Southwarde of the Sonne. And therefore it is cleped Solsticium of Winter. This signe of Capricorne is also cleped the Tropike of Winter. For then beginneth the sonne to come again to us warde.

Of the almicanteras, the signet, and what is thine Orizont.

UPon this foresaied plate ben compassed certain circles, that highten almicanteras: of whiche some of 'hem semen parfite circles, and some semen

5 U

imparfite

imparfite. The centure that standeth a middest the narrowest circle, is cleped the signet. And the nextest circle, that devideth the two emispheres, that is the partie of the heven above the yerthe, and the partie beneth. These almicanteras ben compounded by two and two, all be it so that on divers Astrolabies some almicanteras ben devided by one, and some by two, and some by thre, after the quantite of the Astrolabie. This foresaied signet is ymagined to be the very point over the crowne of thy hedde, and also this signet is the very pole of the orizont in every region.

What been thyne Azimutes.

FROM this signet (as it semeth) there comen crooked strikes, like to the clawes of a loppe, or els like to the werke of a womans calle, in kerving overthwart the almicanteras, and these same strikes or divisions ben cleped Azimutes, and thei deviden the Orizontes on thine Astrolabie in xxiiii divisions. And these Azimutes serve, to knowe the costes of the firmamente, and to other conclusions, as for to knowe the signet of the Sonne, and of every sterre.

Of the xii houres of the Planettes.

NEXTE these Azimutes, undir the circle of Cancer ben the twelve divisions embolite, moche like to the shappe of the Azimutes, that shewen the spaces of houres of Planettes.

Thy Rete or els thy Zodiake.

THY rete of thyne Astrolabie, whiche is thy Zodiake shapen in maner of a Nette, or of a lop webbe, after the olde descripcion, whiche thou maicst tourne up and doune, as thy self liketh, containeth certaine number of Sterres fixe, with ther longitudes and latitudes determinate, if so be that the maker have not erred. The names of the Sterres ben written in the margin of thy Rete, there thei sit, of the whiche Sterres the small pointe is cleped the Centure. And understande, that all the Sterres sitting within the zodiake of thyne Astrolabie, ben cleped Sterres of the North, for thei arisen by the North Est line, and all the remenaunt fixed out of the zodiake ben icleped Sterres of the South, but I saie not that thei arisen all by the Southe Est line, witnesse of Aldeberan and also Algomisa. Generally understonde this rule, that thilke Sterres, that ben cleped Sterres of the Northe, arisen rather then the degree of ther longitude, and all the Sterres of the South arisen after the degree of ther longitude, that is to saie, Sterres in thyne Astrolabie.

The mesure of longitude of Sterres is itaken in the line ecliptike of heven, under the whiche line when the Sonne and the Mone ben line righte, els in the superficie of this line, then is the eclips of the Sonne or of the Mone, as I shall declare and eke the cause why: but sothely the Ecliptike line of the zodiake is the uttereste bordure of the zodiake, there thy degrees ben marked. The zodiake of thy Astrolabie is shapen as a Compasse, whiche that containeth a large brede, as after the quantite of thy Astrolabie, in ensample that the zodiake of heven is imagined to be a superficies, conteinyng the latitude of twelve signes, where as all the remenaunte of circles in heven ben imagined verie lines, withouten any latitude; amiddes the celestial zodiake is imagined a line, which that is cleped the Ecliptike line, under the whiche line, is evermore the waie of the sonne. Thus ben there fixe degrees of the zodiake, on that one side of the line, and fixe degrees on that other. The Zodiake is devided in twelve principall divisions, that departen the xii signes, and for the straitnes of thine Astrolabie then is every small devision in a signe iparted by two degrees and two, I mene degrees conteinyng lx Minutes, and this foresaied hevenishe Zodiake is cleped the circle of the Signes, or the circle of bestes: For Zodiake in language of Greke souneth bestes in Latin tongue, and in the Zodiake ben the xii Signes, that have names of bestes, bicause when the Sonne entreth in any of the Signes, he taketh the propertie of soche bestes, or els for that the sterres that ben there, ben fixed, ben disposed in signe of bestes, or shape like bestes, or els when Planettes ben under the Signes thei transmue us by ther influence, operations, and effectes. And understande also, that when an hotte Planette cometh into an hote Signe, then entereth his hete, and if a Planette be cold, then amenuseth his coldnesse, bicause of the hotte Signe. And by this conclusion maicst thou taken ensample in all Signes, be thei moiste or drie, movable or fixe, rekenyng the qualitie of the Planettes, as I first saied. And everich of these xii signes, hath respect to a certaine parcell of the bodie of a man, and hath it in governaunce! as Aries hath thyne hed and Taurus thy necke and thy throte, Gemini thyne arme holes and thyne armes, and so forthe, as shall be shewed more plainlie in the fifth parte of this tretise. The Zodiake, the whiche his partie of the eight Sphere, overkerveth the Equinoctial, and he overkerveth hym again in even partes, and that one halfe declineth Southwarde, and that other Northwarde as plainlie declareth the tretise of the Sphere.

The Labell.

THEN haste thou a labell, that is shapen like a rule, save that it is strait, and hath no plates on either ende, but with the smal point of the foresaied labell shalt thou calcule the equacions in the bordure of thyne Astrolabie, as by thin almurie.

The Almurie, the denticle of Capricorne, or els the calculere.

THyne almurie is cleped, the denticle of Capricorne, or els the calculere, this same almurie set fixe in the hed of Capricorne, and it serveth of many a necessarie conclusion in equacion of thynges, as shall be shewed.

Here beginneth the conclusions of thine Astrolabie, to finde the degree in the whiche the Sonne is daie by daie, after his course about.

RECKEN and knowe, whiche is the daie of the moneth, and lay thy rule uppon the same daie, and then woll the verie point of thy rule verely sitten on the bordure, uppon the degree of the Sonne. Ensamble as thus. The yere of our Lorde a thousande thre hundred ninetie and one the xii daie of Marche at middaie, I would knowe the degree of the Sonne, I sought in the back halfe of myne Astrolabie and founde the circle of the daies, the whiche I knewe by the names of the Monethes, written under the same Circle: Tho laied I my Rule over the foresaied daie, and founde the point of my Rule in the border, uppon the first degree of Aries, a litle within the the degree: and thus knewe I this conclusion.

An other daie I would knowe the degree of my Sonne, and this was at Middaie in the xiii daie of December, I founde the daie of the moneth in manner as I saied: tho laied I my Rule uppon the foresaied xiii daie, and founde the point of my Rule, uppon the first degree of Capricorne, a litle within the degree;

gre, and then had I of this conclusion the verie Experience.

To knowe the altitude of the Sonne either of celestiall bodies.

PUT the ryng of thyne Astrolabie uppon thy right thombe, and tourne thy lifte side again the light of the Sonne, and remeve thy Rule up and doune, till the streame of the Sonne shine through bothe holes of the Rule: loke then how many degrees this Rule is areised fro the little crosse upon the Est line, and take there the altitude of thy Sonne: and in this same wise maiest thou knowe by nighte the altitude of the Mone, or of the bright Sterres. This Chapter is so generall ever in one, that there nedeth no more declaracion; but forget it not.

To knowe the degree of the Sonne, and of thy Zodiacke, by the daies in the backside of thine Astrolabie.

THen if thou wilt wete the reckenyng to knowe whiche is the daie in thy Kalender of the moneth, that thou art in, laie thyne Astrolabie, that is to saie the allidatha, upon the daie in the Kalender of thyne Astrolabie, and he shal shewe The thy degree of the Sonne.

To knowe every tyme of the daie, by light of the Sonne, and every tyme of the nighte, by the Sterres fixe, and eke to knowe by night or by daie the degree of the signe that ascendeth on th' est Orizont, which is cleped comenly ascendent.

TAKE the altitude of the Sonne, when The lifte, as I have said, and set the degree of the Sonne (in case that it be before the middle of the daie) among thin almicanteras, on the Este side of thyne Astrolabie: and if it be after the middle of the daie, sette the degree of the Sonne upon the Weste side. Take this maner of setting, for a generall rule ones for ever.

And when thou haste ifette the degree of the Sonne uppon as many almicanteras of height, as was the Sonne, taken by thy rule, laie over thy labell uppon the degree of the Sonne, and then woll the pointe of the labell sitten in the bordure, upon the very tide of the daie. Ensampl of this.

The yere of our Lorde a thousande, thre hundred, ninetie and one, the twelveth daie of Marche, I would knowe the tide of the daie, I toke the altitude of my Sonne, and found that it was xxv degrees, and xxx Minutes of height of the bordure in the backside, tho' tourned I myne Astrolabie, and bicause it was before middaie, I tourned my rete, and set the degree of the Sonne, that is to saie, the firste degree of Aries, in the right side in myne Astrolabie, uppon the xxv degree, and xxx minutes of height, among my almicanteras: Tho laied I my label uppon the degree of my Sonne, and found the point of my labell in the bordure, on the capital letter, that is cleped an X. Tho reckened I all the capital letters fro the line of Midnight, unto the foresaid letter X, and founde it was nine of the Clocke of the daie. Tho loked I over my Est Orizont, and found there the twelveth degree of Geminus ascendyng, whiche that I toke for myne ascendente, and in this wise had I the experience for evermore, in whiche maner I should knowe the tide of the daie, and eke myne ascendente. Tho would I wete that same night following the houre of the nighte, and wrought in this wise: among an hepe of Sterres, it liked me to take the altitude of the faire white Sterre, that is cle-

ped the Alhabor, and founde her sitting on the Weste side of the line of Middaie, eightene degrees of heighte taken by my Rule on the backside. Tho sette I the Centure of this Alhabor, upon eightene degrees, among my almicanteras, upon the Weste side, bicause that he was founde upon the Weste side: tho laied I my Labell over the degree of the Sonne, that was descended under the Weste Orizont, and reckened all the letters, capitalles, fro the line of Middaie, unto the pointe of my label in the bordure, and founde that it was after none, passed seven of the clocke the space of eleven degrees. Tho loked I doune uppon my Este Orizont, and founde there twentie degrees of Libra ascendyng, whom I toke for myne ascendente, and thus lerned ones for ever, to knowe in whiche maner, I should come to the houre of the nighte, and to myne ascendent, as verelie as maie be taken, by so small an instrumente. But nathelesse, this rule in generall will I warne thee for ever: ne make thou never none ascendente at none of the daie. Take a iuste ascendente of thyne Astrolabie, and have set iustlie a cloke when any celestiall bodie, by the whiche thou weneest governe thilke thynges, ben nie the Southe line; for trust well, when the Sonne is nere the Meridionall line, the degree of the Sonne remaineth so long concentrike upon thyne almicanteras, that sothelie thou shalt erre fro the iuste ascendente. The same conclusion saie I by my centure of my Sterre fixe by the night, and moreover by experience, I wote wel that fro our Orizont, fro eleven of the clocke, unto one, in takyng of the iuste ascendente, in a portatife Astrolabie, it is to harde to knowe, I mene from eleven of the clocke before none, till one of the clocke next following: and for the more declaracion, loe here thy figure nexte after this rule that followeth.

To knowe the degree of the Sonne in thy Zodiacke, by the daies, in the backside of thine Astrolabie.

THen thou wolte weten to reckon and knowe whiche is the daie of the moneth, that thou art in, and lay the rule of thy Astrolaby, that is to saie, the allidatha, upon the daie, in the Kalender of thine Astrolabie, and he shal shewe The thy degree of Sonne.

Speciall declaracion of the ascendente.

THE ascendente sothelie is as well in all Nativities, as in questions, and as in eleccions of tymes, is a thyng, whiche that these Astrologiens gretlie observen, wherefore me semeth convenient, sens I speke of the ascendent, to make it of a speciall declaracion. The ascendent sothelie, to take it at the largeste, is thilke degree that ascendeth, at any of these foresaid tymes, on the Este Orizon: and therefore, if that any Planet ascende at thilk same time, in the foresaid same degree of his longitude, men saie that thilke Planet is in Horoscopo, but sothelie the hous of that ascendent, that is to saie, the firste hous or the Est angle, is a thyng more brode and large, for after the statutes of Astrologiens, what celestiall body, that is v. degrees above thilke degree, that ascendeth on the Orizont, or within that number, that is to saie, nere the degree that ascendeth, yet reckon thei thilk planete in the ascendent, and what Planet that is under thilke degree, that ascendeth the space of xv. degrees, yet saie thei that Planet is like to hym, that is the houre of the ascendent. But sothelie, if he passe the boundes of the foresaid spaces, above or beneth, thei saie that thilke Planet is fallyng fro the ascendent: yet saie these Astrologiens, that the ascendent, and eke the Lorde of the ascendent, maie be shapen for to be fortunate, fortunate, or infortunate: as thus. A fortunate ascendent clepen thei, when that no wicked Planette of Saturne or Mars, or els the taile of the Dragon, is in the hous of the ascendente, ne that no wicked Planette have no aspekte of enemitie uppon the ascendente: But thei woll caste, that thei have fortunate Planet in ther ascendente, and yet in his felicitie, and then saie thei that it is well. Furthermore, thei saie that Fortune of an ascendente is the contrary of these foresaid thinges. The Lorde of the ascendente saie thei, that he is fortunate, when he is in gode place for the ascendent, and eke the Lorde of the ascendent is in an angle, or in a succedent, where he is in his dignitie, and coumforted with frendly aspektes receved, and eke that he maie seen the ascendent not retrograde ne combust, ne joined with no shrewe in the same signe, ne that he be not in his discencion, ne reigned with no Planette in his discensions, ne have uppon hym none aspekte infortunate, and then they saie that he is well.

Nathelesse these ben observaunces of judiciall matter, and rites of Painims. in whiche my spitite hath no faithe, ne knowyng of ther horoscopum, for thei saie, that every signe is departed in thre even partes by x degrees, and the ilke porcion thei clepen a face. And although a Planette have a latitude fro the Ecliptike, yet saie some folke, so that the planette arise in that same signe, with any degree of the foresaid face, in whiche his longitude is reckened: And yet is the Planette in horoscopo, be in nativities or in eleccion.

To knowe the verie equacion of the degrees of the Sonne, if it so be that it fall betwixt ii almicanteras.

FOR asmoche as the almicanteras of thyne Astrolabie ben compouned by two and two, where as some almicanteras in sondrie Astrolabies be compouned by one, or els by two, it is necessarie to thy lernyng, to teche The firste to knowe, and wirche with thyne instrumente: wherfore when that the degree of the Sonne falleth betwene two almicanteras, or elles if thyne almicanteras ben graven with over grete a pointe of a Compase, for bothe these thynges maie cause erreure, as wel in knowyng of the tide of the daie, as of the verie ascendente: Thou must werken in this wise: set the degree of the Sonne uppon the higher almicanteras of bothe. And waite well, where the almurie toucheth the bordure, and set there a pricke of ynke, set adoune again the degree of the Sonne upon the nether almicanteras of bothe, and sette there an other pricke: remeve then thy almurie in the bordure, even amiddes bothe prickes, and this woll leden justlie the degree of the Sonne to sit betwene bothe the almicanteras in his right place. Laie then the label on the degree of the Sonne, and finde in the bordure the very tyde of the day or of the night. And also verely shalt thou fynde upon thy Est orizonte thin ascendent.

To knowe the sprynge of the dawning, and the ende of the evening, the whiche ben cleped the two crepusculis.

Sette the nadire of thy sonne upon 18. degrees of height amonge thyn almycanteras on the west fyde, and lay thy labell on the degree of the Sonne, and than shall the pointe of the label shewe the springe of the daye: also sette the nadire of the sonne upon the 18. degrees of height among thin almicanteras on the est side, and lay over thy label upon the degree of the sonne, and wyth the point of thy labell fynde in the bordure the ende of thin eveninge, that is very night. The nadyre of the sonne is thylke de-gre that is opposyte to the degree of the sonne in the 320. signe, as thus. Every degree of Aries by order, is nadire to every degree of Libra by order, and Taurus to Scorpion, Gemini to Sagittarius, Cancer to Caprycorne, Leo to Aquary, Virgo to Pisces. And yf any degree in thy zodiake be derke, hys nadire shall declare hym.

To knowe the arche of the day, that some folke callen the day artificial, fro the sonne rising tyl it go downe.

Sette the degree of the sonne upon thin Est orizonte, and lay thy label on the degree of the sonne, and at the poynte of thy label in the bordure sette a pricke: turne than thy rete aboute, tyll the degree of the sonne syt upon the Weste orizonte, and laye the label upon the same degree of the sonne, and at the poynte of the labell sette another pricke. Reken than the quantite of time in the bordure betwix both prickes, and take there thine arche of the daye: the remnaunt of the bordure under the orizonte is the arche of the night. Thus maist thou reken bothe arches of every porcion where that thou likeste, and by this maner of werking maist thou se how longe that any sterre fyxe dwelleth above the erthe, fro the time that he riseth tyll he go to reste. But the daye naturell, that is to sayne 24. houres, is the revolution of the equinoctiall, with as moche partye of the zodiake, as the sonne of his proper mowinge passethe in the mene while.

To turne the houres inequalles, and the houres equalles.

TO knowe the nombre of the degrees in the houres inequalles, and departe hem by 15. and take there thyne houres equalles.

To knowe the quantite of the day vulgare, that is to say, fro springe of the day unto the very night.

KNowe thy quantyte of thyne crepusculis, as I have it taught in the chapter before, and adde hem to the arche of the day artificial, and take there thy space of al the whole day vulgare unto the very nyght. In the same maner mayste thou werke to knowe the vulgare nyght.

To knowe the houres inequales by daye.

Understande well that these houres inequales ben cleped houres of the planettes: And understonde wel that sometye ben they longer by daye than they be by nyght, and sometye contrarie. But understand thou well, that evermore generally the houres inequale of the daye, with the houres inequale of the night, containeth 30. degrees of the bordure, the whiche bordure is evermore answeringe to the degrees of the equinoctiall, wherfore depart the arche of the daye artificial in 12. and take there the quantite of the houre inequale by daye, and if thou abate the quantite of the houre inequale by daye out of 360. degrees, than shall the remnaunt that leaveth performe the houre inequale by night.

To knowe the quantite of houres equales.

THE quantytes of houres equales, that is to sayne the houres of the clocke, ben departed by 15. degrees alreedy in the bordure of thy Astrolabie, as wel by night as by daye, generally for evermore. What nedeth any more declaracion? wherfore whan The lyste to knowe how many houres of the clocke clocke ben passed, or any parte of any of these houres ben to comen, fro soch a time to soche a time, by day or by nyght, knowe the degre of thy Sonne, and laye thy labell on it: than turne thy rete aboute joyntly with thy label and with the point of it reckon in the border fro the Sonne arisyng, into the same place there thou desirest by day as by night. This conclusion woll I declare in the fourthe partye of the laste chapter of this tretyse, so openly that there shal lacke no worde that nedeth declaracion.

Speciall declaracion of the houres of the planettes.

Understand wel that evermore fro the arising of the Sonne tyl it go to reste, the nadyre of the Sonne shal shewe the houre of the planet, and fro that time forward al the nyght tyll the Sonne arise, than shall the very degre of the Sonne shewe the houre of the planet. Ensampl as thus. The 13. day of Marche fel upon a saturday paraventure, and at the arising of the Sonne I founde the second degre of Aries sitting upon min Est orizonte, al be it was but lytel. Than founde I the seconde degre of Libra nadire of my Sonne discendynge on my West orizonte, upon whiche west orizont every day generally at the Sonne arisyng entrethe the houre of any planet, under the forsaide weste orizonte, after the whiche planete the day bereth his name, and endeth in the nexte strike of the planet, under the forsaide weste orizonte: and ever as the Sonne clymbeth upper and upper, so gothe his nadire downer and downer, and echinge fro soch strikes the houres of planettes by order, as they sitten in heven. The fyrst hour inequale of every saturday is Saturne, and the seconde to Jupiter, the thirde to Mars, the fourth to the Sonne, the fyfth to Venus, the sixt to Mercurius, the seventh to the Mone, and than ayen the eight to Saturne, the nineth to Jupiter, the tenth to Mars, the eleventh to the Sonne, the twelfth to Venus. And nowe is my Sonne gon to rest as for that saturday; than shewethe the very degre of the Sonne the houre of Mercury, entring under my weste orizont at even. And nexte him succedeth the Mone, and so forthe by order planete after planet, in houre after houre al the night longe til the Sonne arise. Now riseth the Sonne the sonday by the morowe, and the nadyre of the Sonne upon the weste orizont, shewethe me the entrynge of the houre of the forsaide Sonne. And in this maner succedeth planete under planete fro Saturne unto the Mone, and fro Mone up againe to Saturne, houre after houre generally, and thus knowe I this conclusion.

To knowe with which degre of the zodyake any sterre fixe in thin Astrolabie ariseth upon the Est orizonte, although the orizonte be in an other signe.

Sette the centure of the sterre upon the Est orizonte, and loke what degre of anye signe that sitteth upon the same orizonte at the same tyme: And understande wel that with the same degre ariseth the same sterre. And this mervailous arisyng with a stronge degre in another sygne, is bycause that the latitude of the sterre fyxe is either Northe or Southe fro the equinoctial. But sothly the latitudes of planettes ben comenly reckened fro the ecliptike, bycause that none of hem declineth but few degrees out fro the brede of the zodiake. And take gode kepe of this chapter of arisyng of celestiaall bodyes, for ther trusteth wel, that neither mone neither sterre in our ambolife orizont, that ariseth with the same degre of his longitude, save in one case, and that is whan they have no longitude fro the eclypticke lyne. But never the lesse somtime is everyche of these planettes under the same lyne.

To knowe the declinacion of any degre in the zodiake, fro the equinoctiall circle.

Sette the degre of any sygne upon the lyne meridional, and reken his altitude in the almicanteras, fro the Est orizonte up to the same degre sette in the forsaide lyne, and sette there a pricke: Turne up than thy rete and sette the hed of Aries or Libra in the same meridional line, and set there another pricke. And whan that this is done, consider the altitudes of hem bothe: for sothly the difference of thilke altitude is the declinacion of thilke degre fro the equinoctial. And yf it so be that thilke degre be northwarde fro the equinoctial, than is his declinacion North, and if it be southward, than it is south.

To knowe for what latitude in any region the almicanteras in my tables ben compowned.

Reken how many degrees of almicanteras in the meridional line, be from the circle equinoctial, unto the signet, or els from the pole artike unto the North orizont, and for so gret a latitude or so smale a latitude, is the table compowned.

To knowe the latitude of the Sonne, in the myddes of the day, that is cleped the altitude meridian.

SET the degre of thy Sonne upon the lyne meridional, and reken how many degrees of almicanteras ben bytwixe thin Est orizonte, and the degre of thy Sonne, and take there thin altitude meridian, that is to sayn, the highest degre of the Sonne, as for that daye. So mayst thou knowe in the same line the highest lyne that any starre fyxe clymbeth by nyght, this is to sayn, that whan any starre fyxe is passed the lyne meridional, than beginneth it to dissende, and so doth the Sonne.

To knowe the degre of the Sonne, by the rete for a maner curyofyte.

SEke busely with thy rule the highest of the Sonne in myddes of the daye, tourne than thyn Astrolabye, and with a pricke of ynke marke the nombre of the same altitude, in the lyne meridional. Tourne than thy rete aboute tyl thou finde a degre of thy zodiake, accordyng with the pricke, this is to sayn, sitting on the pricke, and in sothe thou shalt finde but two degrees in al the zodiake of that condicion. And yet thilke two degrees ben in divers sygnes. Than mayst thou lightly by the feson of the yere knowe the signe in whiche is the Sonne.

To knowe whiche day is like to other in length throughout the yere.

LOke whiche degrees ben lyke from the hedes of Cancer and Capricorne, and loke whan the Sonne is in any of thilke degrees, than ben the dayes lyke of length, that is to sayn, that as longe is that day in that moneth, as was soche a daye in soche a moneth, there varieth but lytell. Also if thou take two dayes naturelles in the yere, ylike farre from eyther points of the equinoctial, in the opposite parties, than as long is the day artificial on that one day as on that other, and eke the contrarie.

This chapter is a maner declaracion to conclusions that foloweth.

Understande well, that thy zodiake is departed into halfe circles, from the hed of Caprycorne unto the hed of Cancer, and ayenwarde from the hed of Cancer unto the hed of Capricorne. The hed of Capricorne is the lowest point, wher as the sonne goth in winter, and the hed of Cancer is the highest point, in which the sonne goth in sommer. And therefore understande wel, than any two degrees that ben ylyke far from any of these two hedes, trust wel that thilke two degrees ben lyke declinacion, be it Southward or Northwarde, and the dayes of hem ben lyke of length, and the nyghtes also, and shadowes ylyke, and the altitudes ylyke at mydday for ever.

To knowe the very degree of any maner starre straunge after his latitude, though he be indeterminate in thyn Astrolaby, sothly to the trowth thus he shal be knowen.

Take the altitude of thy starre, whan he is on the Est side of the lyne meridional, as nygh as thou mayste gesse, and take that ascendent anone right by some maner starre fyxe, which thou knowest, and forget not the altitude of the first starre ne thin ascendent. And whan that this is done, aspie dyligently whan this same first starre passeth any thing to the south westward, and catche him anone right in the same nombre of the altitude on the west syde of thys lyne meridional, as he was caught on the Est syde, and take a newe ascendent anone right by some maner fyxe, the whiche that thou knowest, and forgete not this seconde ascendent. And whan this is done, reken than howe many degrees ben bytwixt the first ascendent, and the seconde ascendent, and reken wel the middel degre bytwyxt bothe ascendentes, and set thilke myddel degre upon thin Este orizonte, and than loke what degre sit upon the line meridional, and take there the very degre of the ecliptike, in whiche the starre standeth for the tyme. For in the ecliptyke is the longitude of a celestiall body, rekened even fro the halfe of the hed of Aries, unto the ende of Pisces, and his latitude is rekened after the quantyte of hys declynacion Northe or South, towarde the poles of thys werke. As thus, if it be of the sonne or any fix starre, reken his latitude or his declinacion fro the equinoctial circle, and if it be of a planete, reken than the quantite of his latitude from the ecliptike line, al be it so that from the equinoctial may the declinacion or the latitude of any body celestiall be rekened, after the sight Northe or Southe, and after the quantite of his declinacion. And yet so may the latitude or the declinacion of anye body celestiall, save onelye of the Sonne, after his sight Northe or Southe, and after the quantite of his declinacion be rekened from the ecliptike line, fro whiche lyne all planettes somtime decline, North or Southe, save only the forsaide Sonne.

To know the degrees of longitudes of fyxe sterres, after that they ben determinate in thin astrolabye, if it so be that they ben trewly set.

Sette the centre of the sterre upon the lyne meridional, and take kepe of thy zodiake, and loke what degre of anye signe sitte upon the same lyne meridional at the same tyme, and there the degre in whiche the sterre standeth, and with the same degre cometh the same sterre unto the same line from the orizonte.

To know in special the latitude of our centre, I mene after the altitude of Oxenforde, and the hight of our Pole.

Understande wel that as farre is the hed of Aries or Libra in the equinoctial, from our orizonte, as is the synet from the pole artike, and as hie as the pole artike from the orizonte, as the equinoctial is ferre from the synet, I preve it thus by the latitude of Oxenforde, understande wel that the height of our pole artike from our North orizont is 51. degrees, and 50. minutes, than is the sinet from the pole artike 38. degrees and 10. minutes, than is the equinoctial from our sinet 51. degrees, and 50. minutes, than is our southe orizonte from our equinoctial 38. degrees, and 10. minutes. Understande well this rekening, also forget not that the sinet is 90. degrees of height from the orizont, and our equinoctial is 90. degrees from our pole artike. Also this shorte rule is soth that the latitude of any planet in a region, is the distaunce from the sinet unto the equinoctial.

To prove the latitude of any place in a region by the preffe of the height of the pole artike in that same place.

In some winter's nyght, whan the fyrmamente is clere and thicke sterred, waite a time tyll that every ster fix sit line right perpendicular over the pole artike, and clepe that ster A. and wayte another ster that sit lyne right under A. and under the pole, and clepe that ster F. and understand wel that F. is not confidred but onely to declare that A. that syt ever on the pole. Take than anone right the altitude of A. from the orizonte and forget it not, let A. and F. go farwel tyl againste the dawning a gret while, and come than again, and abyde tyll that A. is even under the pole under F. for sothely than wil F. sit over the pole, take than estones the altitude of A. from the orizonte, and note as wel the seconde altitude as the firste altitude. And whan that thys is done, reken how many degrees that the first altitude A. exceded his altitude, and take halfe the ilke porcion that is exceded, and adde it to his seconde altitude, and take there the elevacion of the pole, and eke the altitude of thy region. For these two ben of one nombre, that is to sayn, as many degrees as thy pole is elevat, so moche is the latitude of thy region. Ensample as thus. Paraventure the altitude of A. in the eveninge is 92. degrees of height, than wil the seconde altitude or the dawning be 21. that is to sayn, lesse than 92. that was his first altitude at even. Take than the halfe of 92. and adde to it 21. that was his seconde altitude, and than hast thou the height of the pole and the latitude of thy region. But understande wel to preve this conclusion, and many another faire conclusion, thou maiste have a plomet hanginge on a lyne hygher than thy hed on a perche, and that lyne mote hange even perpendicular bytwixe the pol and thine eye, and than shalte thou se yf A. syt even over the pole and over F. at even. And also if F. syt even over the pole and over A. at daye.

Another conclusion to preve the hyght of the pole artike from the orizont.

Take any sterre fyxe that ever descendeth under the orizont in thilk region, and consyder his hyghest altitude and his lowest altitude from the orizont, and make a number of these altitudes, take than and abate halfe that nombre, and take there the the elevacion of the pole artike in that same region, and for the more declaracion, &c.

082. 51. 0. 20.

Another conclusion to preve the latitude of a region that ye ben in.

Understande well that the latytude of any place in a region, is verely the space betwyxe the sygne of 'hem that dwellen there, and the equinoctial circle, North, or Southe, takinge the mesure in the merydyonall line, as sheweth in the almicanteras of thin astrolaby, and thilke space is as moch as the Pole artike is hie in the same place fro the orizont. And than is the depressiyn of the pole Antartike beneath the orizonte, the same quantite. of space, neither more ne lesse, than if thou desire to know this latitude of the region, take the altitude of the Sonne in the myddle of the daye, when the Sonne is the hed of Aries or of Libra, for than movethe the Sonne in the lyne equinoctial, and abate the nombre of that same Sonnes altitude out of 90 degrees, and than is the remnaunt of the nombre that levethe, the altitude of the region, as thus. I suppose that the Sonne is thilke daye at noone 38 degrees of heygth, abate than 38 degrees out of 90, so levethe ther 52, than is 52 degrees the latitude, I saye not this, but for ensample, for wel I wote the latitude of Oxenforde is certain minutes lesse. Nowe if it so be that The thinketh to longe a taryng to abyde til that the Sonne be in the hed of Aries or of Libra, than waite whan that the Sonne is in anye other degre of the zodiake, and consider the degre of this declinacion be Northward from the equinoctial, abate than from the Sonnes altytude at none the nombre of his declinacion, and than hast thou the highest of the hedes of Aries and Libra, as thus. My Sonne peraventure is in the 10 degre of Leo almoste 56 of height at none, and his declinacion is almost 18 degrees northward from the equinoctial, abate than thilke 18 degrees of declinacion out of the altitude at none, than levethe 38 degrees, so there the hed of Aries or Libra, and thin equinoctial in that region. Also if it so be that the Sonnes declinacion be southwarde from the equinoctial, adde than thilke declinacion to the altitude of the Sonne at none, and take there the hedes of Aries and Libra and thyn equinoctiall, abate than the height of the equinoctial out of 90 degrees, and than levethe there 38 degrees, that is the distaunce of the region from the equinoctial of any sterre fixe that thou knowest, and take the nether elongation lengthning from the same equinoctial lyne, and werke after the maner aforesaid.

Declaracion of the ascencion of signes as well in the circle directe, as in oblique.

THE excellence of the sphere solid amonges other notable conclusions, sheweth manifest the divers ascencions of signes in divers places, as wel in right circles as in embolyfe circle. These auctours writen that thilke sygne is cleped of right ascencion with which the more part of the circle equinoctiall and the lesse part of the zodiake ascendeth, and thilke sygne ascendeth embolyfe, with which the lesse of the zodiake equinoctial, and the more parte of the zodiake ascendeth, and ever mo the arche of the daye, and the arche of the night is there ylike longe, and the sonne twise every yere passing through the signet of ther hed and 2 sommers and 2 winters in a yere have these forsaide people, and the almycanteras in ther Astrolabie ben streight as a line, so hathe shewed in this fygure. The utilities to knowe the ascencions of sygnes in the right circle is this. Trust wel that by mediacyons of thilke ascencions, these Astrologiens by ther table and ther instrumentes, knowen verely the ascencion of every degre and minute in al the zodiake, in the embolyfe circle, as shal be shewed. And note that this forsayd right orizonte that is cleped orizont rectum, devideth the equinoctial into right angles, and embolyfe orizonte, where as the pole is enhaunced upon the orizonte, overcometh the equinoctial embolyfe angles.

This is the conclusion to knowe the ascencions of sygnes in the right circle, that is circulus directus.

Sette the hed of what sygne The lyst to knowe the ascencion on the right circle, upon the lyne meridionall, and wayte where thin almurie toucheth the bordure, and set there a pricke, tourne than thy rete westwarde til the ende of the forsaide sygne, sette upon the meridional lyne, and eftsones waite where thine almurie toucheth the bordure, and set there another pricke. Reken than the nombres of degrees in the bordure betwixe bothe prickes, and take than the ascencion of the sygne in the right circle, and thus maist thou werke with every porcion of the zodiake.

To knowe the ascencyons of signes in the embolyfe circle in every region, I mene in circulo obliquo.

Sette the hed of the sygne, which as The liste to knowe his ascencion upon the Est orizonte, and wayte where thine almurie toucheth the bordure, and sette there a pricke, tourne than thy rete upwarde til the ende of the same sygne, set upon the Est orizont and waite eftsones where as thine almurie toucheth the bordure, and set there another prycke, reken than the nombre of the degrees in the bordure bytwixe both prickes, and take there the ascencion of the sygne in the embolyfe circle. And understand wel that al the signes in the zodiake, from the hed of Aries unto the ende of Virgo, ben cleped signes of the Northe from the equinoctial, and these signes arisen betwixe the very Est and the verye Northe in our orizont generally for ever: and all the signes from the hed of Libra, unto the ende of Pisces ben cleped signes of the southe fro the equinoctial, and these signes arisen evermore betwixe the very Est and the very southe in our orizonte; also every sygne betwixe the hed of Capricorne unto the ende of Gemini, ariseth in our orizonte in lesse than two houres equalles and these same signes from the hed of Capricorne unto the ende of Gemini, ben called tortuous signes or croked signes, for they risen embolyfe in our orizonte, and these croked signes ben obedient to the signes that ben of the right ascencion. These signes of right ascencion ben fro the hed of Cancer unto the hed of sagittary, and these signes arisen more upright than dothe the other, and therefore they ben called souveraine signes, and everye of 'hem ariseth in more space than in two houres, of which sygnes Gemini obeyeth to Cancer, and Taurus to Leo, and Aries to Virgo, Pisces to Libra, Aquarius, to Scorpio, and Capricorne, to Sagitarie, and thus evermore two signes that ben like ferre from the hed of Capricorne obeyeth everiche of 'hem to other.

To knowe justly the foure quarters of the worlde, as Est, West, South, and North.

TAKE the altitude of thy sonne whan thou liste, and note well the quarter of the worlde in which the sonne is from the tyme by the asymutes, tourne than thin Astrolaby, and set the degre of the sonne in the almicanteras of his altytude, on thilke syde that the Sonne standeth, as is in maner of taking of houres, and ley thy labell on the degre of the Sonne

Sonne, and reken howe many degrees of the Sonne ben bytwene the lyne meridional, und the point of thy label, and note wel the nombres. Tourne than agayne thyne Astrolabie, and set the point of thy grete rule there thou takest thin altitudes, upon as many degrees in hys bordure from his meridional, as was the pointe of thy labell from the lyne meridional on the wombe syde. Take then thyne Astrolabye with both handes sadly and flyly, and let the sonne shine through bothe holes of thy rule, and flyly in thilke shyning laye thine Astrolabye couche adoune even upon a playne grounde, and than wyl the meridional lyne of thin Astrolabye be even south, and the Est lyne will lye even Est, and the West lyne West, and the Northe lyne Northe, so that thou werke softly and avisely in the couchynge, and thou haste thus the foure quarters of the firmament, &c.

To knowe the altitude of planettes from the way of the sonne, whether they ben Northe or Southe fro the way aforesayde.

LOke whan a planette is on the line meridional, yf that her altitude be of the same heighte, that is the degre of the Sonne for that daye, and than is the planette in the very way of the Sonne, and hath no latitude. And yf the altitude of the planette be hyer than the degre of the Sonne, than is the planette Northe from the way of the sygne Southe, a quantite of latitude as sheweth by thine Almicanteras, and yf the altitude be lesse than the degre of the Sonne, than is the planette South from the waye of the Sonne, soche a quantite of latitude as sheweth by thine Almicanteras. This is to saie from the waye of the Sonne in everye place of the zodiake, for on the morowe the Sonne wyll be in another degre.

For to knowe the signet for the arising of the Sonne, this is to saie the party of the orizonte in whiche the Sonne ariseth.

THou muste first consider that the Sonne ariseth not in the verie Este signet, sometye by North Este, and sometye by Southe Este, sothely the Sonne ariseth evermore in the verie Este in our Orizonte, but if he be in the hedde of Aries or Libra. Now is thine Orizonte departed into xxiiii parties, of thy Minutes in significacion of xxiiii partes of the worlde, though it be so, that shipmen reken all that parties in xxxii. Then is there no more but waite in the whiche minute, that the Sonne entreth at his arising, and take there the signet of the rising of the Sonne.

The maner of devision of thine Astrolabie, is thus enjoined, as in this case.

First, it is devidid in fower places principallie, with the line that cometh fro the Est to the Weste, and then with an other line, that goeth fro the South to the North, then is it divided in smal parties of minutes, as Est and Est by Southe, where that is the firste minute above the Est line, and so forthe fro partie to partie, till that thou come again to the Este line. Thus thou might understand the signet of every sterre, in whiche partie he ariseth.

To knowe in whiche partie of the firmament is the conjuncion.

Consider the tyme of the conjuncion, by the Kalender, as thus: howe many houres that the conjuncion is fro middaie of the daie before, as sheweth the Canon of the Kalender. Reken then that number in the bordure of thine Astrolabie, as thou were wont to doe in knowyng of the houres of the daie, or of the night, and lay thy labell over the degre of the sonne, then will the point of the labell sit upon the houre of the conjuncion. Loke then in whiche minute the degre of the Sonne sitteth, and in that partie of the firmamente is the conjuncion.

To knowe the signet of the altitude of the Sonne.

THis is no more to saie, but any time of the daie take the altitude of the sunne, and by the minutes in whiche he ascendeth thou might se in whiche partie of the Firmamente he is, and in the same wise might thou se by night any Sterre, whether he sit Este, Weste, or Southe, or any parte bitwixe, after the name of the minutes, in whiche the Sterres standeth.

To knowe sothlie the longitude of the Mone, or any Planette, that hath no latitude, fro the tyme of the Ecliptike line.

TAke the altitude of the Mone and reken thyne altitude up, emong thyne almicanteras, on whiche side that the Mone standeth, and set there a pricke. Take then anone right upon the Mone's side, the altitude of every sterre fixe that thou knowest, and set his circle upon his altitude, emong thyne almicanteras, there the Sterre is founden, waite then of whiche degre the zodiake is, to whiche the pricke of the altitude of the Mone, and there take the degre in whiche the Mone standeth. This conclusion is verie sothe, of the Starres in thine Astrolabie, and standeth after the trowth. Some tretise of the Astrolabie maketh non excepcion, whether the Mone have latitude or none, nor whether side of the Mone the altitude of the Sterre be founde. And note if the Mone shewe her self by daie, then thou maicste worche the same conclusion by the Sonne, as well as by the Sterre fixe.

This is the werching of the conclusions to knowe whether any Planette be directe, or retrograde.

TAke the altitude of any sterre, that is cleped a Planette, and note it well, anone righte take the altitude of some Sterre fixe, that thou knowest, and note it well also, and come againe the thirde or the fowerth night next folowyng, for then thou shalt perceve well the mevyng of the Planet, whether he meve forward, or backward, and waite well then when the Sterre fixe is in this same altitude that she was, when thou toke her firste altitude, of the foresaied Planet, and note it well, for truste well, if so be that the Planet be in the right side of the meridional line, so that his seconde altitude be lesse then the firste altitude was, then is the Planet directe, and if he be in the West side in that condition, then is he retrograde, and if so be that this Planet be in the Est side, when his altitude is take, so that the seconde altitude be more then his firste altitude, then is he retrograde, and if he be in the West side of the line meridional, then is he direct, but the contrary moving of these parties is the cours of the Mone, for sothlie the Mone moveth the contrary fro either Planettes, in her ecliptike line, but in none other maner.

The conclusion of equacions of houses, after the Astrolabie.

SET the beginning of the degre that ascendeth upon the ende of the viii. houre inequall, than will will the line of the second house sit upon the line of Midnight, remeve then the degre that ascendeth, and set hym upon the ende of the x. houre inequall, then will the beginnyng of the iii. house sitte upon the Midnight line, bring up again the same degre that ascendeth firste, and set hym upon the Este Orizonte, and then will the beginning of the iiiii. hous sit upon the Midnight line. Take then the nadire of the degre, that ascendeth firste, and set hym upon the ende of the ii. houre inequall, and then will the beginnyng of the v. house sit upon the Midnight line. Take then the nadire of the ascendent, and set him upon the ende of the iiiii. houre inequall, and then will the beginnyng of the vi. house sit upon the Midnight line. The beginnyng of the seventh house is nadire of the ascendente, and the beginnyng of the viii. house is nadire of the seconde, and the beginnyng of the ninth house is nadire of the thirde, and the beginnyng of the tenth house is nadire of the iiiii. and the beginnyng of the leventh house is nadire of the fiveth, and the beginning of the xii. house is nadire of the vi. house.

An other maner of equacions of houses, by the Astrolabie.

TAke thyne ascendente, and then thou haste the fower angles, for well thou woteste, that th' opposite is of thine ascendente, that is to saie, the beginnyng of the seventh hous, sit upon the West Orizont, and the beginnyng of the tenth house, upon the line Meridionall, and his opposite upon the line of Midnight, then laie thy labell uppon the degre that ascendeth, and reken then fro the point of thy labell all the degrees in the bordure, till that thou come to the Meridionall line, and departe all thilke degrees into thre even partes, and take there the even porcions of thre other houses, for to laie thy labell over every of these thre parties, and then thou might see by the labell in the Zodiake the beginning of these thre houses fro the ascendent, that is to saie, the twelveth next above the ascendente, and then the eleventh house and the x. house, upon the Meridional line, as I first saied, the same wise werche, fro the ascendent, doune to the line of Midnight, and thus thou haste thre houses, that is to saie, the beginning of the seconde, the thirde, and the fowerth house: then is the nadire of these thre houses, the beginnyng of these iii. houses that foloweth.

To finde the line Meridionall, to dwell fixe in any certain place.

TAke a rounde plate of metall, for warpyng the border the better, and make thereupon a iuste compace, a little within the bordure, and laie this rounde plate upon an even grounde, or some even stone, or on a even stocke fixe in the ground, and laie it even by a rule, in the centre of the compace sticke an even pinne or a wire upright, the smaller the better, and set thy pinne or thy wire, by a plomme rule's ende upright even, and let this pinne be no longer then a quarter of thy diameter of the compace fro the pinne, and waite busilie aboute tenne or eleven of the clocke, when the Sonne sheweth, when the shadow of the pinne entereth any thing, within the circle of the compace one here brede, and make there a pricke with ynke: abide then still waityng on the Sonne, after one of the cloke, til that the shadowe of the pinne, or of the wire, passe any thyng out of the circle or compace be it never so little, and sette there a pricke. Take then a compace and mesure even the middle, betwixt bothe prickes, and set there a pricke: Take then a Rule and drawe a strike, even fro the pinne unto the middle prick, and take there the line Meridional for evermore, as in the same place. And if thou draw a crosse overthwarte the compace, justly over the line Meridionall, then haste thou Est and West, and per consequens the oppositife, that is Southe and North.

Discripcion of the Meridionall line, and of the longitudes and latitudes, of citees and tounes, as well as of climates.

THis line Meridionall, is but a maner discripcion of a line ymaged, that passeth upon the poles of the worlde, and by the signette of our hedde: and it is cleped the signet, for in what place that any manne is at any tyme of the yere, when the Sonne by mevyng of the Firmamente cometh to his Meridionall place, then is it the verie Middaie, that we clepe None, and therefore it is cleped the line of Middaie. Then take hede that evermore of two Citees, or of two Tounes, of whiche the one approacheth nerer the Est, then doeth the other Toune, trust well that thilke two Tounes have divers Meridians. Take kepe also, that the arche of the Equinocciall, that is contained and bounded betwene the two Meridians, is cleped the Longitude of the Toune. And if so be that two Tounes have Meridian like; or one Meridian, then is the distaunce of hem bothe like farre: and in this maner thei chaunge not ther Meridian, but sothelie thei chaunge ther Almicanterras, for the haunsyng of the Pole, and the distaunce of the Sonne. The longitude of a climate maie be cleped the space of the yerth, fro the beginnyng of the firste climate, unto the laste ende of the same climate, even directe against the Pole artike, thus saie some aucthours. And some clerkes saie, that if men clepe the latitude of a center the arche Meridian, that is conteined or intercepte, betwixe the signet and the Equinocciall, then thei saie, that the distaunce fro the Equinocciall unto the ende of the climate, even ayenst the pole artike, is the longitude of the climate for Southe.

To knowe with what degree of the Zodiake, that any Planet ascendeth on the Orizonte, where his latitude be North, or South.

KNowe by thyne Almanacke the degre of the Ecliptike of any signe, in which that the planette is rekened for to be, and that is cleped the degre of his longitude. And knowe also the degre of his latitude, fro th' ecliptike, North or South, and by these ensamples folowing in especialle, thou maieste wirc with every signe of the Zodiake. The longitude peraventure of Venus, or of an other planet was of Capricorne, and the latitude of hem Northward degrees, fro the Ecliptike line, then toke I subtil compas, and cleped the one point of my compace A, and that other F. then toke I the point of A. and set in the ecliptike line, and my zodiake in the degre of the Longitude of heddes, that is to saie in the ende of Capricorne, and then set I the point of F. upward in the same signe, bicause that the altitude was North, upon the latitude of Venus, that is to saie, in the degre fro the hed of Capricorne, and thus have I the degrees betwixe my two prickes, then laid I doune softlie my compace, and set the degre of the longitude upon the Orizont, then toke I and waxed my label, in maner of a paire of tables to receve distinctly the pricke of my compace, then toke I this forsaied label, and laied it fixe over the degre of my longitude, then toke I up my compace, and the point of A. in in the waxe of my label, as I could gesse, over th' ecliptike line, in th' ende of the longitude I set the point point over endlonge on the labell, upon the space of the latitude inwarde, and on the zodiake, that is to say, Northward fro the ecliptike: then laied I down my compasse, and loked well in the waie upon th' ecliptike of A. and F. then tourned I my rete, till that the pricke of F. sate upon the Orizont, then sawe I well, that the bodie of Venus in her latitude of degrees septentrionals, ascendeth in the ende of degre, fro the hed of Capricorne. And note that in this manner, thou mightest werch with any latitude septentrionall in al signes: but sothly the latitude Meridionall of a planet in Capricorn maie not be take, because of the little space betwixe the ecliptike, and the bordure of the Astrolabie, and sickerly in al other signes it maie be take. Also the degre peraventure of Jupiter, or of any other planette, was in the first degre of Pisces in longitude, and his latitude was degrees Meridionall. Then toke I the point of A. and set it in the first degre of Pisces on th' ecliptike, then set I the point downward of F. in the same signe, because that the latitude was South degrees that is to saie, fro the hed of Pisces, and thus have I degrees betwixe both prickes. Then set I the degre of the longitude, upon the Orizont, then toke I my labell, and laied him fixe upon the degre of longitude, then sette I the point of A. on my labell even over the ecliptike line, in the ende of the degre of the longitude, and I sette the point of F. endelong on my labell, the space of degrees of the latitude outwarde fro the Zodiake, that is to saie, Southwarde fro the Ecliptike towarde the bordure, and then tourned I my rete, til the point of F. sate upon the Orizont, then sawe I well that the bodie of Jupiter, in his Latitude of degrees Meridionall, ascendeth with the degre of Pisces in horoscopo. And in this maner thou maiest werche, with any Latitude, as I saied first, save in Capricorne. And thou wilt plie this crafte, with the arifing of the Mone, loke thou reken well the course of houre by houre, for she dwelleth in a degre of her Longitude but a little while, as thou wolste well: but neverthelesse, if thou legen well her verie mevyng by the tables, or after her course houre by houre, thou shalte doe well inough.

Umbra recta.

IF thou wilt wirche with Umbra recta, if thou might come to the base of the toure, in this maner shalt thou wirche: take the altitude of the Toure with bothe holes, so that the rule lie even on a point. Ensam- ple, as thus. I se hym through the point of fower then mete I the space betwixe me and the Toure, and I finde it twentie fote, then behold I how fower is to twelve, and I find it is the third part of twelve. Right so the space betwixe The and the Toure is the thirde parte of the altitude of the Toure: then thrise twentie fote is the highest of the toure, with th' addicion of thine owne bodie fro thyne eye. If the Rule fall on five, then is five times twelve, the highest of the Toure.

Umbra versa.

IF thou maiest not come to the base of the toure, and thou fixe hym through the number of one, set there a pricke at thy fote, then go nere the Toure and se hym through at the point of two, and set there an other pricke, and then beholde howe one hath hym to twelve, and thou shalte finde that he hath hym twelve fithes, then behold how two have hym to xii, and thou shalte finde it sixe fithes, and therefore the space betwixe two prickes, is sixe times thyne altitude. And note that at the first altitude of one, thou setteest a prick, and afterward when thou seest hym through at two, there thou setteest a pricke, then thou findest betwene lxxx fote, then thou shalte finde that tenne is the 8th parte of lxxx. then is a fote the altitude of the Toure, but if it fall upon an other point, as thus. It falleth on fixe at the seconde tak- yng it, when it falleth on fower, then shalt thou find that fixe is the second part of twelve, and fower is the third parte of twelve, by the thirde parte, that is to say, the space betwixe two prickes, twice the height of the Toure, and if the difference wer three, then would it be thre times the height. Et sic de singulis. An other maner werchyng by Umbra recta. If thou maiest not come by the base of the Toure, wirche in this wise: Sette thy rule upon one, till thou se the the altitude, and set at thy fote a pricke, and then set thy rule upon two, and so doe in the same maner: then loke what is the difference betwixe one and two, and thou shalte finde that it is one. Then mesure the space betwixe the two prickes, and that is the twelveth part of the altitude of the Toure, and so of all other.

Umbra recta.

IF thy Rule fall upon the eighte point, on the right shadowe, then make the figure of eight, than loke howe moche space of the fete is, betwixe The and the Toure, and multiplie that by twelve, and when thou hast multiplied it by the same number then devide it by the number of eight, and kepe the residue, and adde thereto thy height unto thyne eye, to the residue, and that shall be the verie height of the Toure. And thus maiest thou worche on the same side, from one to twelve, &c.

Umbra recta.

AN other maner of working upon the same side. Loke upon what point thy rule falleth, when thou seest the toppe of the Toure, through the two holes, and then mete the space from thy fote, to the base of the Toure, and right as the number of the point hath hymself to twelve, right so the measure, betwixt The and the Toure, hath hym self to the height of the same Toure. Ensam- ple as thus. I sette case thy rule fall upon eight, then is eight two thirde partes of twelve, so is the space two thirde partes of the Toure.

Umbra versa.

TO knowe the heighte, by the point of Umbra versa. If the rule fall upon iii. when thou seest the toppe of the toure set a pricke there thy fote standeth, and go nere till thou maiest se the same toppe, at the point of iii. and sette there an other prick: then mete howe many fote is betwixe the two prickes, and the height up to thine eye, and that shall be the height of the toure. And note, that iii. is the fowerth part of xii. and iii. is the thirde parte of xii. Now passeth iii. the number of iii. by distance of i. therefore the same space with thy height to thy eye is the height of the toure. And if it were so that there were two or thre distances in the numbers, so should the mesure betwixe the prickes be twice or thrise the height of the toure.

Umbra recta.

TO know the height, if thou maiest not come to the base of the thing, set thy rule upon what point thou wilt, so that thou maist se the toppe of the thing through the two holes, and make a marke, there as thy fote standeth, and go nere or farther, ferther, till thou maieste se it through an other point, and make there an other marke, and loke what difference is betwixe the two poinctes in the scale, and right as that difference hath hym to xii. right so the spaces betwixe the two markes hath hym to the height of the thing. Ensample. I set the case, that thou seest it through the point of iiii. and after at the point of iii. Now passeth the number of iiii. the number of iii. the distance of i. and right as this difference of one, hath hymself to xii. right so the mesure betwixe both the markes hath him to the height of the same thing puttyng thereto the height of thy self to thine eye. And thus maiest thou werke from i. to xii.

Umbra versa.

FErthermore, if thou wilt knowe in Umbra versa, by the crafte of Umbra recta, I suppose to take thine altitude at the point of iiii. and makest a marke, and then thou goest nere, till thou haste it at the point of iii. and makest there an other marke, then must thou devise 144. by 4, the number that cometh thereof shall be 36. and after divide 144. by 3. and the number that cometh thereof is 48. then loke what difference is betwixe 36. and 48. and that shalt thou finde 12. and right as 12. hath hym to 12. so the space betwixe the two prickes hath him to the altitude of the thyng.

Here endeth the conclusions of the Astrolabie.

The Complaint of the blacke Knight.

The heavy Complaint of a Knight, for that he can not win his Lady's Grace.

IN Maie when Flora the freshe lustie Quene
The soile hath cladde, in grene, and red,
and whight,

And Phœbus gan to shede his stremis shene
Amidde the Bulle, with al the bemis bright,
And Lucifer to chace awaie the night
Ayen the morowe our Orizont hath take,
To bid all lovirs out of slepe awake.

And hertis hevie for to recomforte
From drieried of hevie night's sorowe,
Nature bad 'hem rise, and 'hem disporte
Ayen' the godelie and the glad greie morowe,
And hope also with saint Ihon to borowe,
Bad in despite of daungir and dispaire
For to takin the wholsome lustie aire.

And with a sigh I gan for to abreide
Out of my slombre, and sodainly up sterter;
As he (alas) that nigh for sorowe deide,
My sikenesse fate aye so nie my herte,
But for to findin soccours of my smerte,
Or at the lest some relese of my paine
That me so fore yhalte in every veine.

I rose anone, and thought I would' gone
Into the wodde, to here the birdis syng,
When that the mistie vapour was agone,
And cleare and faire ywas the morownyng;
The dewe also like silvir in shinyng
Upon the levis, as any Baume swete,
Till firie Titan with his persaunt hete

Had dryid up the lustie licour newe,
Upon the herbis in the grenè mede;
And that the floures of many divers hewe
Upon ther stalkis gonin for to sprede,
And for to splaie out ther levis in brede
Again the Sonne, golde burnid in his spere,
That doune to 'hem ycast his bemis clere.

And by a rivir forthe I gan costei
Of watir clere as birell or cristall,
Till at the last I founde a little weie
Toward a parke, enclosid with a wall,
In compace rounde, and by a gate small,

Who so that would he frelie mightin gone
Into this parke, ywallid with grene ston.

And in I went to here the birdis song,
Which on the braunchis both in plain and vale;
So loude ysang, that all the wode yrong,
Like as it should shivir in pecis smale,
And as methoughtin that the Nightingale
With so great might her voice began out wrest,
Right as her harte for love would all to brest.

10 The soile was plain and smoth, and wondir soft, 50
All oversprad with tapettes that Nature
Had made her self: covirid eke aloft
With bowis grene, the flouris for to cure;
That in ther beautie thei maie long endure
From all assaute of Phœbus fervent fere,
Whiche in his sphere so hotte yshone and clere:

20 The aire attempre, and the smothè winde
Of Zephyrus among the blofomes white
So wholsome was, and nourishing by kinde,
That smale buddis, and round blofomis lite, 60
In maner gan of her brethe to delite,
To yeve us hope that there fruit shall ytake
Ayenist Autumpne redy for to shake.

I sawe the Daphne closid undir rinde
With the grene Laurir and the wholsome Pine
The Mirre also that wepith ever' of kinde,
The Cedris hie, as upright as a line,
The Filbert eke, that lowe doith encline
Her bowis grene unto the yerth adoun,
Unto her knight callid Demophoon. 70

30 There sawe I growing eke the freshe Hawthorne
In white Motley, that so sote doeth ysmell,
Ashe, Firre, and Oke, with many a yong acorn;
And many a tre mo then I can tell,
And me beforne I sawe a little well
That had his course, as I could wele beholde
Undir an hill, with quicke stremis and colde.

40 The gravill gold, the watir pure as glasse,
The bankis rounde, the well invironing
And soft as Velvet was the yongè grasse

80
That

That thereupon lustilie came springyng,
The fute of trees aboutin compasyng
Ther shadowe cast, clofying the well arounde,
And all the herbis growyng on the grounde,

The water was so wholfome, and so vertuous
Through might of herbis growyng it beside
Not like to the welle where as Narcissus
Iflain was, through the vengeance of Cupide
Where so wondir covertly he did hide
The grain of deth upon eche fatal brinke, 90
That deth mote folowe, who that ever drinke.

Ne like unto the pitte of the Pegace
Undir Parnassus where Poëtis slept,
Nor like to the welle of pure chastite
Which that Diana with her nymphis kept,
When she nakid into the watir lepte,
That slowe Actæon with her handis felt,
Only for he came so nigh the well.

But this welle which that I now here reherse
So wholfome was, that it wouldin aswage 100
Wightes bollin hertis, and the venim perce
Of pensifed, withall the cruill rage,
And ovir more refreshin the visage
Of them that were in any werinesse
Of grete labour, or fallin in distresse.

And I that had through daungir and disdain
So drie a thurst thought that I would assaie
To tastin a draught of this Welle or twain,
My bittir langour if it might alaie, 110
And on the banke anone me doune I laie,
And with mine hed unto the Welle I raught,
And of the watir dranke I a gode draught.

Whereof me thought I was refreshid wele
Of the brennyng that sate so nigh my herte,
That verily anone I gan to fele
An huge parte relefid of my smerte,
And therewithall anone up I asterte,
And thought that I would walkin and se more,
Forthe in the parke, and in the holtis hore.

And thorough a launde as I yede apace, 120
And gan aboutin fast for to beholde,
I founde anone a delectable place,
That was beset with treis young and olde,
Whose namis here for me shall not be tolde,
Amidde of whiche there stode an herbir grene,
That benchid was with colours new and clene.

This herbir was all full of flouris gende,
Into the whiche as I beholde began,
Betwixt an Hulfere, and a Wode bende,
As I was ware, I sawe where laie a man 130
In blacke, and of white colour pale and wan,
And wondir dedly also of his hewe,
Of hurtis grene, and freshe woundis newe.

And ovirmore distrainid with sicknesse
Beside all this he was full grevoufflie,
For upon hym he had an hote accesse,
That daie by daie hym shoke full pitoufflie,
So that for constraint of his maladie 140
And hertely wo, thus lying all alone,
It was a deth for one to here hym grone.

Whereof astoined, my fote I gan withdrawe,
Full gretly wondiring what it might be,
That he so laye and haddin no felawe,
Ne that I coude no wight with him yfe,
Wherof I had grete routhe, and eke pite,

And gan anone, so softely as I coude,
Amonge the busshis prively me to shroude,

If that I myght in any wise aspie
What was the cause of this his dedly wo, 150
Or why that he so petouffly gan crie
On his fortune, and on his ure also,
With al my myght I layid an ere to Every worde, to marke wel what he saide,
Out of his swough anon as he abraide.

But first, if I shulde makin mencion
Of his persone, and plainly him discrive,
He was in sothe, without excepcion,
To speke of manhode, one the best one live, 160
There may no man ayen the trouth ystrive,
For of his time, and of his age also
He provid was, there men shuld have ado.

One of the best therto of brede and length,
So wel ymade by gode proporcion,
If he had be in his delivir strength,
But thought and sicknesse were occasyon
That he thus lay in lamentacyon
Grouffe on the grounde, in place so desolate,
Sole by him self, awhapid and amate.

And for me semith that it is fitting 170
His wordis al to put in remembraunce,
To me that herdin all his complaining,
And al the grounde of this his woful chaunce,
If there withall I maye you do plesaunce,
I wol to you so as I can anone
Lyke as he saide, reherce everichone.

But who shal helpin me nowe to complaine,
Or who shal nowe my stile gie or lede?
O Niobe, let nowe thy teris rayne
Into my penne, and helpe me eke in nede 180
Thou woful Myre, that felist mine hert blede
Of pitous sorowe, and myn hande eke quake,
Whan that I writin for this mann's sake.

For unto wo accordith complaining,
And doleful chere unto hevinesse,
To sorowe also sighing and weping,
And pitous mourning unto drerinesse,
And whoso that shall writin of distresse,
In party nedith to knowe felingly
The cause and rote of al soche malady. 190

But I alas! that am of witte but dul,
And that have no knowing of soche matere
For to discrive and writin at the ful
The woful complainte, which that ye shal here,
But evin like as doth a skrivinere
That can no more tell what that he shal write,
But as his maistr beside dothe endite,

Ryght so fare I, that of no sentement
Can sayin right naught in conclusioun,
But as I herde whan that I was present 200
This man complainin with a pitous soun,
For even like without addicioun
Or disacrese eythir of more or lesse,
For to reherse anone I wol me dresse.

And if that any nowe be in this place,
That felith in love breninge or fervence,
Or hindirid were to his ladie's grace,
With false tongis, that with pestilence
Sle trewe men, that nevir did offenc 210
In worde nor dede, ne yet in ther entent,
If any soche there be here nowe present,

Let

Let him of routhe lay him to audience
With doleful chere, and sobre countinaunce,
To herin this man by ful hye sentence
Hys mortal wo, and his dire perturbaunce
Complaining and now lying in a traunce
With lokis upcast, and with ruful chere,
Th' effecte of which was as ye now shal here.

The thought oppressed with inward fighis fore,
The painful lyfe, the body languishing; 220
The woful goft, the herte rent and tore,
The pitous chere all pale in complaining,
The dedly face, like ashis in shining,
The salte teris, that from min eyin fall,
Percel declare grounde of my painis al.

Whose herte is grounde to blede in heviness, e,
The thought receite of wo, and of complainte,
The brest is cheft of dole and dreriness, e,
The body eke so feble and so fainte, 230
With hote and colde mine axis is so mainte,
That nowe I chivir for defaute of hete,
And hote as glede nowe sodainly I fwete.

Nowe hote as fire, nowe cold as ashis ded,
Now hote for colde, now cold for hete again,
Now cold as yfe, and now, as colis red,
For hete I brenne, and thus betwixin twaine
I possid am, and al forcaste in paine,
So that my hete full plainly as I fele
Of grevous colde is cause every dele.

This is the colde of inward hie disdaine, 240
Colde of despite, and colde of cruil hate,
This is the colde that doth his besy payne
Ayenist trouthe to fight and to debate,
This is the colde that doth the fyre abate
Of trewe mening, alas the hardè while,
This is the colde that wol me begile.

For er the bettir that in trouth I mente
With al my myght her fathfully to serve,
With hert and al to be right diligent,
The lesse thanke, alas! I can deserve, 250
Thus for my trouthe daungir doth me sterue,
For one that shuld my deth of mercy let,
Hath made despite anew his swerde to whet

Against me, and his arowis to fyle,
To take vengeaunce of wilful cruilte,
And tongis false thorough ther sleightly wyle
Han gone a werre, that wil not stintid be,
And false envie, with wrathe and envyte
Have conspirid against al right and lawe,
Of ther malyce that trouth shal be yslawe. 260

And malebouche gan first the talè tel
To sclaudir trouth of indignacion,
And false reporte so loud yrange the bel,
That misbylese and false suspection
Have trouthe ybrought to his dampnacion,
So that alas! wrongfully he dyith,
And falsenesse nowe his place occupyith,

And entirid is into trouth's londe,
And hath thereof the ful possession,
O rightful God, that first the trouthe fonde, 270
Howe maie thou suffre soche oppressyon,
That falsshed shulde have jurisdiction
In troth's right to sle him giltiles!
In his fraunchise he may not live in pees.

Falsly accused, and of his Fone forjuged,
Withoutin answere, while he was absent,

He damnid was, and maie not be excused,
For cruilte yfate in judgèment,
Of hastinesse without advisèment;
And badde disdaine do execute anone, 280
His judgèment in presence of his fone.

Attourney there maye none admittid ben
To excuse trouthe, ne a worde to speke,
To faith or othe the judge ne lyfte not sene,
There ne is no gaine, but he will be wreke.
O Lorde of trouthe, to The I cal and clepe,
Howe may thou sein thus in thy presence
Withoutin mercy murdrid innocence!

Nowe God, that art of trouthe soveraine,
And seist how I lie for trouthe bounde, 290
So fore yknitte in lov's fyrie chaine,
Even at the deth through gyrtte with many'a wounde,
That lykily are nevir for to sounde,
And for my trouthe am dampnid to the deth,
And not abyde, but drawe along the breth:

Confidre' and se in thine eternal right
Howe that min herte professid whilom was
For to be trewe with al my ful myght
Onily to one, the whiche nowe alas!
Of volunte without any trespas 300
Myne accusours hath takin unto grace,
And cherishith 'hem, my deth to purchase.

What menith this? what is this wondir ure
Of purveiaunce, yf so I shal it cal,
Of God of love, that false 'hem so assure,
And trewe alas! downe of the whele ben fall!
And yet in sothe, this is the worst of al,
That falsshed wrongfully' of troth hath the name,
And trouth ayenward of falsshed the blame.

This blindè chaunce, this stormy avinture, 310
In love hath mostely his experience,
For who that doth with trouthe most his cure
Shal for his mede yfindin moste offence,
That servith love with al his diligence;
For who can fainin undir lowlyhede,
Ne failith not to findin grace and spede.

For I lovid one ful longe sythe agone
With all mine herte, and body, and ful might,
And to be ded my herte can not gone,
From his beheste, but hold that he hath hyght, 320
Though I be banishid out of her syght,
And by her mouth dampnid that I shall dey,
To my beheste yet I will er obey.

For evir sithins that the worlde began
Who so lyfte lokin, and in story rede,
He shal aye findin that the trewe man
Was put abacke there, where as the falshe
Yfurthered was, for love takith none hede,
To sle the trew, and hath of 'hem no charge,
Where as the false gothe frely at ther large. 330

I take recorde of true Palamedes
The giltless man, the noble worthy knight,
That evir lovid, and had no reles,
Notwithstanding his manhode and his might
Yet love unto him dyd ful gret unright,
For aye the bet he dyd in chivalrye
The more he still was hindrid by envye.

And aye the bett he did in every place
Thorough his knighthode and his busy paine,
The ferdir was he from his ladye's grace, 340
For to her mercy might he ner attaine,

And to his deth he coude it not refraine
For no daungere, but aye obey and serve,
As he beste coude, plainly tyl that he sterue.

What was the fyne also of Hercules,
For al his conquest and his worthinesse,
That was of manly strength alone pereles;
For lyke as bokis of him liste expresse
He set pillers thorough his hye prowesse
Away at Gades, for to sygnifie 350
That no man might him passe in chivalrye;

The whichè pilliris ferre beyonde Inde
Beset of golde for a remembraunce,
And for al that yet was he set behinde
With 'hem that love lyst feebly to avaunce,
For him alas! set last upon a daunce
Against whom there helpe may no strife;
And so for al his trouthe he losse his life:

Phœbus also for al his plefant lyght
Whan that he wouid here in yerthe belowe, 360
Unto the verry herte with Venus sight
Ywoundid was thorough Cupidis bowe,
And yet his lady lyst him not to knowe,
Though for the love of her his herte dyd blede,
She let him go, and toke of him no hede:

What shal I sayin of yonge Pyramus?
Of trewe Tristram, for al his hye renowe,
Of Achilles or of Antonius,
Of Arcytè, or of him Palomowne,
What was the ende of all ther passiwne, 370
But aftir sorowe deth, and than ther grave,
Lo here the guerdon that these lovirs have:

But false Jason with his doublenesse,
That was untrewed at Colchos to Medee,
And Theseus rote of unkindenesse,
And with these two also the false Enee,
Lo thus the false evir in one degre
Haddin in love ther lust and al ther wil,
And save falshode, there was none othir skil.

Of Thebis City eke the false Areite, 380
And falsir Demophon eke for his slouth,
They had ther lust and al that myght delite,
For al ther falshode and ther gret untrouth.
Thus evir love alas! and that is routhe,
His false liegis forthirith what he may,
And sleeth the trewe ungodely day by day.

For trewe Adonis was slayne with the bore
Amidde the forest in the grenè shade,
For Venus love he feltin al the fore,
But Vulcanus with her no mercy made, 390
The foulè chorle had many nightis glade,
Where Mars armipotent her knight and man
To fyndin mercy comforte none he can.

Also the yongè freshe Hippomenes
So lustly fre he was of his corage,
That for to serve with al his hert he ches
Atalanta so faire of her visage,
But love alas! quite him so ill his wage,
With cruil daungir plainly at the laste,
That with the dethè guerdonlesse he paste. 400

Lo here alas! the fine of love's service!
Lo howe that love can his servauntis quite!
Lo how he can his faithful men dispise
To sle the trewe men, and false to respite!
Lo howe he dothe the swerde of sorowe byte
In hert'is, soche as moste his luste obey

To save the false, and do the trewe to deye.

For faith, nor othe, nor worde, ne assuraunce,
Trewe mening nor awaite, nor busynesse,
Neithir stil porte, ne faithful attendaunce, 410
Manhode, ne might, in armis worthinesse,
Nor pursute of worship, nor hie prowesse,
Nor in straunge landis riding ne travaile,
Ful lytil or nought in love dothe availe.

Peril of dethe, neithir in Se ne lande,
Hungir ne thurst, sorowe ne sykennesse,
Ne gret emprisis for to take on hande,
Sheding of blode, ne manful hardinesse,
Ne ofte wounding at fautis by distresse, 420
Nor in parting of life, nor deth also,
Al is for nought, love taketh no hede therto.

But lesing oures with ther base flattirie
Through ther falshe, and with ther doublenesse,
With talis newe, and many fainid lie,
By false semblaunt, and counterfeit humblesse,
Undir colour depainte with stedfastnesse,
With fraude covered under a pitous face,
Acceptid be nowe rathist unto grace,

And can themselvin nowe best magnifie,
With fainid porte, and ther presumpcion, 430
They hauncin ther cause with false surquidrie,
Undir menyng of double entencion,
To thinkin one in ther opinion,
And saye' anothis to set them self alofte,
And hindir trouthe, as it is sene ful ofte.

The whichè thinge I bye nowe al to dére,
Thankid be Venus, and the god Cupide,
As it is sene by mine oppressid chere,
And by his arowes that stycken in my side, 440
That save my deth, I nothings elles abide Fro day to day, alas the hardè while!
Whenevir his darte that hym lyst to file,

My woful hertè for to rive atwo,
For faute of mercy, and lack of pite
Of her that causith al my paine and wo,
And lyst not onis of grace for to se
Unto my trothe thorough her cruelte,
And most of al for this I me complaine,
That she hath joy to laughin at my paine,

And wilfully she hath my deth ysworne 450
Al giltlesse, and wote no causè why,
Save for the trouthe that I had aforne
To her alone to servin faithfully,
O God of love, all unto The I crye,
And to thy blynde and double deite
Of this my gret wronge I complaine me,

And to thy stormy wilful variaunce
I ment with chaunge and gret unstablenesse,
Now up, now doune, so renning is thy chaunce,
That The to trust may be no sikirnesse, 460
I wite it nothings but thy doublenesse,
And who that is an archir and is blende,
Markith nothings, but shotith ay by wende,

And for that he hath no discrecion
Without advise he let his arowe go,
For lacke of sight, and also of reson,
In his shoting it happith oftin so,
To hurte his frendist rathir than his fo,
So doith this blind god with his sharpe fone,
The trew he sleeth, and lettith the false gone:

And of his wounding this is worst of al,
Whan he hurt doith to so cruil wretche;
And makith the fycke for to crie and cal
Unto his very foe to be his leche,
And harde it is sothe for a man to seche
Upon the point of deth in jeoperdye
Unto his foe to findin remedie.

Right thus farith, it nowe evin by me,
That to my foe that gave my herte a wounde
Mote askin grace, and mercy, and pite, 480
And namly there where none may be founde,
For nowe my fore my lechè wil confounde,
And God of kinde so ill hath set mine ure,
My lyv'is foe to have my wounde in cure.

Alas the while nowe that I was borne
Or that I evir sawe the brightè sonne!
For nowe I se plaine that ful longe asorne
Or I was borne my destiny was sponne
By the susterne to sle me yf they conne,
For they my deth had shopin or my sherte, 490
Onely for trouthe I may it not asterte.

The mighty goddesse also of Nature,
That undir God hath the whole govirnaunce
Of wordely thinges committid to her cure,
Disposid have through her wise purveiaunce
To give my lady so moche suffisaunce,
Of al vertues, and therwithal purvyde
To murdre trouthe, hath take daungir to gide.

For bounte, beaute, shape, and semelihede,
For prudence, wit, and passingly fairenesse, 500
For benigne porte, glad chere with lowlyhede,
Of womanhede right plenteous largenesse,
Dame Nature dyd in her fully empreffe,
Whan she her wrought, and althir last disdaine,
To hindir trouthe, she made her chambirlaine.

Whan mistrust eke, and false suspeccion
With misbeleve she madin for to be
Chefe of counsaile, to this conclusion
For to exilin trouthe, and eke pite,
Out of her courte to makin mercy fle, 510
So that dispite now holdith forthe her reine
Through hasty bileve of tales that men feine.

And thus I' am only for my trouthe alas!
Murdrid and slayn, with wordis sharpe and kene,
Although gyltleffe, God wote, of al trespas,
And lye and blede upon this coldè grene;
Nowe mercy, swete, mercy my liv'is quene,
And to your grace of mercye yet I preye,
In your service that your true man may deye.

But if so be that I shal die algate, 520
And that I shal none othir mercy have;
Yet of my deth let this yben the date,
That by your wil I was brought to my grave,
Or hastily, if that you lyste me save,
My sharpe woundis, that akin so and blede,
Of mercy charme, and also' of womanhede.

For othir charme plainly ne is there none,
But onely mercy, to helpe in this case,
For though my woundis blede evir in one,
My lyfe, my deth ystandith in your grace, 530
And though my gilte ybe nothings, alas!
I aske mercy in all my best entente,
Redy to dyin if that ye assente.

For there againist shal I nevyr strive
In worde ne werkè, plainly I ne may,

For levir I have then to be alyve
To dye sothly, and it be to her paye:
Ye though it shuldè be this same day,
Or whan that evir her lyste to devise,
Suffisith mè to die in your servise. 540

Thou God that knowest the thought of every wight;
Right as it is, in every thing maist se,
Yet er I dyin with al my ful myght
Lowly I pray to grauntin unto me,
That ye Lady godely, faire, freshe and fre,
Which onely sle me for defaute of routhe,
Or that I dyin ye may knowe my trouthe.

For that in sothe inow suffisith me,
And she it knowe in every circumstance,
And afir I am wel apaide that she, 550
If that her lyst of deth to do vengeance,
Unto me that am undir her lygeaunce,
It site me not her dome to disobeye,
But at her luste fulle wiffully to deye.

Withoutin grutchinge or rebellion
In wil or wordis wholy I assente;
Or any manir contradiction,
Fully to be at her commaundement,
And if I dyin, in my testament
My herte I sende, and my spirite also 560
What so evir she lyste with 'hem to do.

And aldir last unto her wömanhede,
And to her mercy, me I recommaunde,
That lye nowè here betwixin hope and drede,
Abidinge plainly what she list commaunde,
For uttirly this ne is no demaunde,
Welcome to me whilis me lastith breth
Ryght at her choise, where it be lyfe or deth.

And in this matir more what might I faine
Sithe in her hand, and in her wil is al, 570
Bothe lyfe and deth, my joye and al my peihe?
And finally my heste hoidin I shall
Tyl my spirite by destinye fatal,
Whan that her lystith fro my body wende,
Have here my trouthe, and thus I make an ende.

And with that worde he gan to fighe as fore,
Like as his hert yrivin would atwaine,
And helde his pece, and spake no wordè more,
But for to se his wo and mortal paine
The teris gonin fro mine eyin raine 580
Ful pitcoulsly for very inwarde rothe,
That I him sawe so lōng wishyng for troth.

And al this while my selfe I keptè close
Amonge the bowis, and my selfe gonne hide,
Tyl at the last the woful man arose,
And to a lodge ywent there close beside,
Where al the May his custome was r'abyde
Sole to complainin of his painis kene
From yere to yere undir the bowis grene.

And for bycause, that it drewe to the night, 590
And that the sonne his arke diurnal
Ypassid was, so that his perfaunt lyght,
His brightè bemis and his stremis al
Were in the wayis of the watir fal
Undir the bordure of our ocean,
His chare of golde his course so swiftly ran.

And while the twilight and the rowis rede
Of Phœbus light were deaurat alite,
A penne I toke, and gan me fast to spede
The woful plaintis of this man to write 600
All

All worde by worde right as he dyd endite,
Like as I herde and coude him tho reporte,
I have here set, your hertis to disporte.

If ought be misse, laye alle the wite on me,
For I am worthy for to bere the blame,
If any thinge amysle reportid be,
To make this ditte for to semè lame
Through myne unconning for to fain the same
Like as this man his complaint dyd expresse.
I aske you mercy and fougivèness. 610

And as I wrote, me thought I sawe aserre,
Aferre in the west lustily appere
Esperus the so bright and godely sterre,
So glade, so faire, so perlaunte eke of chere,
I menè Venus with her bemis clere,
That hevy hertis only to releve
Is wonte of custome for to shewe at eve.

And I as fast fel adowne on my kne,
And evin thus to her gan I to prey,
O lady Venus so feire on to fe, 620
Let not this sothfast man for his trouthe deye,
For that joy which thou haddist whan thou leye
With Mars thy knight, when Vulcanus yfonde,
And with a chaine unvisible you bonde

Togiðir bothè tway, in the same whyle
That al the courte above celestial
At your shamè began to laughe and smyle,
Ah, fairist lady willy fonde at al,
Comforte to careful Goddis immortal,
Be helping nowe, and do thy diligence 630
To let the stremis of thine influence

Discendin downe, in forthering of the trouthe,
Namely of 'hem that lye in sorowe bounde,
Shew now thy might, and on ther wo have routh,
Er that false daungir sle 'hem and confounde,
And special let thy might in this be founde
For to help and socour what that thou may
The trewe man that in the herbir lay;

And al that trewe are forthir for his sake,
O gladè sterre, O lady Venus myne, 640
And cause his lady him to grace to take,
Her hert of stele to mercy so encline,
Er that thy bemis go up to declyne,

And er that thou nowe go fro us adowne,
For that love which thou haddist to Adowne.

And whan that she was gone unto her rest,
I rose anone, and home to bed ywente,
For wery' I was, me thought it for the best,
Desiring thus in al my best entente,
That al trewe men, that be with daungir shente,
With mercy may in relese of ther paine
Recurid be, er Maye come este againe.

And for that I ne may no lengir wake,
Farewel ye loviris al that be trewe,
Praying to God, and thus my leve I take,
That er the sonne to morowe be ryfen newe,
And er he have ayen his rosin hewe,
That eche of you may havin soche a grace,
His owne lady in armis to embrace:

I mene thus only, in al honeste 660
Withoutin more ye may togiðir speke
What so ye lystin at gode liberte,
That eche may to othir ther herte ybreke
On jelousie only to be awreke,
That hath so long of malice and envy
Ywerrid Trouthe with his tyranny.

L'enjoye.

Princesse, plesith it your benignite
This lityl dyte for to have in minde
Of your womanhede, also for to fe
That your trew man may of you mercy find, 670
And pite eke, that longe hath be behinde,
Let him againe be provokid to grace,
For by my trouthe it is against alle kinde
That false Daungere should occupye his place.

Go lityl quaire unto my liv'is quene,
And to my very hert'is soveraine,
And be right glad, for that she shal The sene,
Soche is thy grace, but I alas! in paine
Am leste behinde, and n'ot to whom to plaine,
For mercy, ruthe, and grace, and eke pyte 680
Exilid be, that I may not attaine
Recure to finde of mine adversite.

Explicit.

A Praise of Women.

L tho that lyste of women ill to speke,
And sayin of 'hem worse than they deserve,
I pray to God that ther neckis to breke,
Or on some yll dethe mote tho janglirs
sterve,

For every man were holdin 'hem to serve,
And do 'hem worship, honour and servise,
In every manir they best coude devise.

For we ought first to think on what manere
Thei bring us forth, and what pain thei endure,
First in our byrth, and sith fro yere to yere, 10
How busily they done ther busy cure
To kepe us fro every mysfavinture
In our youthhed whan that we have no might
Our selfe to kepe, neythir by day nor night.

Alas! howe may we say on 'hem but wele,
Of whom we were yfostred and ybore,
And ben all our socoure, and trewe as stele,
And for our sake ful ofte they suffre fore,
Without women were al our joye ylore,
Wherefore we ought al women to obey 20
In al godenesse, I can no more ysay.

This is welknowin, and hath ben or this,
That women ben the cause of al lightnesse,
Knighthode, norture, eschewing al malis,
Encrese of worship, and of worthinesse,
Therto curteys, meke, grounde of alle godenesse,
Glad and mery, and trewe in every wise,
That any gentle' hert can thinke or devise.

And

And though any would trust to your untruth,
And to your faire wordis would aught assent, 30
In gode faith me thinkith it wer grete ruth,
That othre' women shold for ther gilt be shent,
That ner knew ne wist nought of ther entent,
Ne list not to here the faire wordes ye write,
Whiche ye you paine fro daie to daie t' endite.

But who maie beware of your tales untrue,
That ye so busilie painte and endite?
For ye will swerin that ye nevir knewe,
Ne sawe the woman, neithir moche ne lite, 40
Save only her to whom ye had delite,
As for to serve, of all that er ye sey,
And for her love must ye nedis dey.

Then wil ye swere that ye knew ner before
What love was, ne his dredfull observaunce,
But now ye felin that he can wounde sore,
Wherefore ye put you' into her govirnaunce,
Whom love hath ordeined you to serve and do plefaunce.
With al your might your lityl liv'is space,
Whiche endith sone, but if she doe you grace.

And then to bedde will ye you sone ydrawe, 50
And sone your selvis sicke ye will then fain,
And swerin fast your Ladie hath you flawe,
And brought you sodainly in so high pain,
That fro your deth maie no man you restrain,
With a daungerous loke of her eyin two,
That to your dethè must ye nedis go.

Thus will ye morne, thus will ye sighin fore,
As though your hert anon in two wold breft,
And swerin fast that ye maie live no more,
Myne owne Ladie, that might if ye left 60
Bryngin myne hertè somdele into rest,
As if you list mercie on me to have,
Thus your untrouth will evir mercie crave.

Thus woll ye plainin, tho you nothing smerte,
These innocent cretures for to begile,
And swere to 'hem, so woundid is your herte
For love of them, that ye maie live no while,
Scarlie so long as one might go a mile,
So hyith deth to bryng you to an ende,
But if your soverain lady list you' amende. 70

And if she comfort you in any wise
For routhe for pite' of your false othis fere,
So that she weneth it be as you devise,
And wenith your herte be as she maie here,
Thus to comfort, and somewhat do you chere,
Then woll these janglirs deme of her full ill,
And faine ye have her fully at your will.

Lo how redie ther tonguis ben, and preft,
To spekin harme of women causileffe,
Alas! why might ye not as well saie the' best, 80
As for to demin 'hem thus giltylesse?
In your herte iwis there' is no gentillesse,
That of your own gilt liste thus women fame,
Now by my trouth me thinke ye be to blame.

For of women comith this worldly wele,
Wherefore we ought worship 'hem evirmore,
And though it mishap one, we ought to hele,
For it is all thorough our false lore,
That daie and night we pain us evirmore
With many' an othe these women to begile 90
With false talis, and many' a wickid wile.

And if falskede should be reckened and told,
It n'ere in women iwis full trouth were
Not as in men is, by a thousande fold,
Fro all vicis iwis thei standin clere,
In any thyng that er I could of here,
But if entisyng of these men it make,
That 'hem to flatteren comin nevir flake.

I would fain wete where evir ye coud here
Without mens tising women did amis, 100
There ye get 'hem, ye lie fro yere to yere,
And many' a gabbyng ye make to' 'hem iwis,
For I could nevir here, ne knowen er this,
Where evir ye coud finde in any place
That evir women befought you of grace.

There ye you paining with al your full might,
With all your herte, and all your businesse,
To plesin 'hem aye both by daie and night,
Praying 'hem of ther grace and gentillesse
To have pite upon your grete distresse, 110
And that thei woldin on your pain have routh,
And fle ye not, sithin ye mene but trouth.

Thus maie ye sein that thei ben faultlesse,
And innocent to all your werkis lie,
And all your craftis, that touchin falsnesse,
Thei knowe 'hem not, ne maie 'hem not espie,
So swerin ye, that ye must nedis die,
But if thei woldin of ther womanhedde
Upon your trouth rewe, er that ye be dedde.

And then your lady, and your hert'is quene 120
Ye callin 'hem, and therewith ye sigh fore,
And saie, my ladie' I trowe that it be sene
In what plite that I have livid full yore,
But now I hope that ye wollin no more
In these painis suffre me for to dwell,
For of all godenesse iwis ye be the' well.

Lo whiche a paintid processe can ye make
These harmlesse creturis for to begile:
And when thei slepe, ye painin you to wake,
And to bethinke you' on many' a wickid wile, 130
But ye shal se the daie that ye shall curse the while
That ye so busily did your entent
'Hem to begile, that falsked nevir ment.

For this ye know wel, though I wouldin lie,
In women is all trouth and stedfastnesse,
For in gode faithe I nevir of 'hem sie
But moche worship, bounte, and gentillesse,
Right commyng, faire, and full of mekenesse,
Gode and glad, and lowlie I you ensure,
Is this godelie and angelike cature. 140

And if it happe a man be in disese,
She doeth her businesse, and her full paine,
With al her might, him to comfort and plesse,
If fro his disese she might hym restrain,
In worde ne dede iwis she woll not faine,
With al her might she doth her businesse
To bryngin hym out of his hevinesse.

Lo here what gentillesse these women have!
If we could knowe it for our rudenesse,
How busie thei be us to kepe and save 150
Bothe in hele, and also in sickenesse,
And alwaie right sorie for our distresse,
In every manir thus shewe thei routhe,
That in 'hem is all godenesse and all trouthe.

And sith we find in 'hem gentillesse, trouth,
Worship, bounte, and kindnesse evirmore,

Let nevir this gentilleſſe, through your ſlouth,
In ther kinde trowth be evir aught forlore,
That in women is, and hath ben full yore,
For in reverence of heven's quene
We ought to worship all women that bene.

For of all cretures that were get and borne
This wote ye well, a woman was the beſt,
By her was recovered the bliſ we' had lorne,
And through that woman ſhall we come to reſt,
And ben iſavid, if that our ſelf leſt;

Wherefore me thinkith, if that we had grace,
We oughten honour women in every place.

160 Therefore I rede, that to our liv'is ende
Fro this time forth, while that we havin ſpace, 170
That we have trespaced, purſue to amende,
Praying our Ladie, the welle of all grace,
To bryngin us unto that bliſfull place,
There as ſhe' and all gode women ſhal be' in fere
In heven above, emong the angils clere.

Explicit.

The House of Fame.

The PROLOGUE.

In this Book is ſhewed how the Deeds of all Men and Women, be they good or bad, are carry'd by Report to Poſterity.

OD tourne us everie dreme to gode,
For it is wondir thyng by the' Rode,
To my witte, what cauſith ſwevines
On the morowe or on evines,
And why the' effeſte ſoloweth of ſome,
And of ſome it ſhall nevir come,
Why that is an aviſion,
And this a revelacion,
Why this a dreme, why that a ſweven,
And not to every man liche even,
Why this a fantome, why that Oracles,
I n'ot: but whoſo of theſe miracles
The cauſis knowith bet than I,
Define he, for I certainly
Ne can 'hem not, ne nevir thinke
To buſie my witte for to ſwinke
To knowe of ther ſignificacions
The gendris, ne the diſtinccions
Of the tymes of 'hem, ne the cauſis,
Or why that this is more then that is,
Or if folkis complexion
Make 'hem dreme of reflexions,
Or ellis thus, as othir ſaine,
For the' grete ſcbleneſſe of ther braine
By abſtinence, or by ſickneſſe,
By priſon, ſtrief, or grete diſtreſſe,
Or ellis by diſordinaunce,
Or naturall accuſtomaunce,
That ſome men be to curious
In ſtudie, or melancolious,
Or thus, ſo inly full of drede,
That no man maie 'hem bore rede,
Or ellis that devocion
Of ſome, and contemplacion,
Cauſin to them ſoche dremis ofte,
Or that the cruill life unſoſte
Of 'hem that unkind lovis leden,
That oſtin hopin moche or dreden,
That purely ther impreſſions
Cauſin 'hem to have viſions,
Or if that ſpirites han the might
To makin folke to dreme on night,
Or if the ſoule of propir kinde
Be ſo perſite as men yinde,
That it wele wote what is to come,
And that he warnith all and ſome

Of everiche of ther avintures,
By aviſions, or by figures,
But that our fleſhe ne hath no might
To underſtandin it aright, 50
For it is warnid to derkely,
But why the cauſe is, not wote I,
Well wotin of this thyngè clerkes,
That treten of that and othir werkes,
For I of none opinion
10 N'ill as now makin mencion,
But onely that the holy Rode
Tournin us every dreme to gode,
For nevir ſithin I was borne,
Ne no man ellis me beforne 60
Ymette I trowe right ſtedfaſtly
So wondirfull a dreme as I,
The tenthe daie now of December,
The whiche, as I can remember,
I woll you tellin every dele;
20 But at beginnyng truſtith wele
I woll make invocacion
With devoute ſpeciall devocion
Unto the God of ſlepe anone,
That dwellith in a cave of ſtone, 70
Upon a ſtrete that cometh fro Lete,
That is a ſtode of hell unſwete
Beſide a Fulke, men clepe Cimerie,
There ſlepith aye this God unmerie,
With his ſlepith thouſande ſonnis,
30 That alwaie to ſlepe ther won is,
And to this God, that I of rede,
Praie I, that he wollin me ſpede
My ſwevin for to tell aright,
If every dreme ſtande in his might, 80
And he that movir is of all
That is and was, and evir ſhall,
So give 'hem joyè that it here,
Of all that thei dremen to yere,
And for to ſtandin all in grace
40 Of ther lovis, or in what place
That 'hem were levift for to ſtonde,
And ſhelde 'hem from poverte' and ſhonde,
And from every' unhappe and diſeſe,
And ſende 'hem that which maie 'hem pleſe, 90
That takith well, and ſcornith nought,
Ne it miſdemin in ther thought

Through

Through malicious entencion;
And whofo through prefumpcion,
Or hate, or fcorne, or through envie,
Dispite, or jape, or felonie,
Misdeme it, praie I Iesus gode,
Dreme he barefote, or dreme he shode,
That every harme, that any man
Hath had fithin the worlde began,
Befall hym thereof, or he fterve,
And graunt that he maie it deserve;
Lo! with right foche concludion
As had of his avifion
Crefus, that was the kyng of Lyde,
That high upon a gibet dyde;
This prayir fhall he have of me,
I am no bette in charite.

The First Boke.

NOW herkin, as I have you faied,
What that I mette or I abraied,
Of December the tenith daie,
When it was night, to flepe I laie,
Right as I was wonte for to doen,
And fill aflepè wondir fone,
As he that was werie forgo
On pilgrimagè milis two
To the corps of fainct Leonarde,
To makin lithe that crft was harde.

But as me fleep me mette I was
Within a temple imade of glas,
In whiche there werin mo Images
Of golde, ftand yng in fonderie ftages,
Sette in mo riche Tabiracles,
And with perrè mo pinnacles,
And mo curious portraitureis,
And queint manir of figuris
Of golde worke, then I fawe evir.

But certainly I n'ift nevir
Where that it was, but well wift I
It was of Venus redily
This temple, for in purtreiture
I fawe anone right her figure
Nakid yflet yng in a Se,
And alfo on her hedde parde
Her rofy garland white and redde,
And her combe for to kembe her hedde,
Her dovis, and Dan Cupido
Her blindè sonne, and Vulcano,
That in his face ywas full broune.

But as I romid up and doune,
I founde that on the wall there was
Thus writtin on a table of bras.

*I woll now fyg, if that I can,
The armis, and alfo the man,
That first came through his defline
Fugitive fro Troye the cowntre
Into Itaile, with full moche pine,
Unto the ftroind's of Lavine,
And tho began the ftorie anone,
As I fhall tellin you echone.*

First fawe I the diftruccion
Of Troie, thorough the Greke Sinon,
With his falfe untrue forfwerynges,
And with his chere and his lefynges,
That made a horfe, brought into Troye,
By whiche Trojans lofte all ther joye.

And aftir this was graved, alas!
How Ilions caftill affailed was,
And won, and kyng Priamus flain,
And Polites his sonne certain,
Dispitoufly of Dan Pyrrhus.

And next that fawe I howe Venus,

When that fhe fawe the caftill brende,
Doune from hevin fhe gan difcende,
And bade her sonne Æneas fle,
And how he fled, and how that he
Escapid was from all the pres,
And toke his fathre', olde Anchifes,
And bare hym on his backe awaie,
Crying alas and welawaie!

The whiche Anchifes in his hande
Bare tho the Goddis of the lande
I mene thilke that unbrennid were.

Then fawe I next that all in fere
How Creufa, Dan Æneas wife,
Whom that he lovid all his life,
And her yong sonne clepid Julo,
And eke Ascanius alfo,
Fleddin eke, with full drierie chere,
That it was pite for to here,
And in a foreft as thei went
How at a tournyng of a went
Creufa was ilofte, alas!

That rede not I, how that it was
How he her fought, and how her ghofte
Bad hym to fle the Grekis hofte,
And faied he muft into Itaile,
As was his deftinie, fauns faile,
That it was pitie for to here,
When that her spirite gan appere,
The wordis that fhe to hym faied,
And for to kepe her sonne hym praied.

There fawe I gravin eke how he
His fathir eke, and his meinè,
With his Shippis began to faile
Toward the cowntrey of Itaile,
As ftreight as ere thei mightin go.

There fawe I eke The, cruill Juno,
That art Dan Jupiter his wife,
That haft ihatid all thy life
Mercilefs all the Trojan blode,
Rennin and crie as thou were wode
On Æolus, the God of Windes,
To blowin out of allè kindes
So loudè, that he fhould ydrenche
Lorde, and ladie, and grome, and wenche
Of all the Trojanis nacion,
Without any' of ther favacion.

There fawe I foche tempeft arife,
That evèry herte might agrife
To fe it paintid on the wall.

There fawe I eke gravin withall,
Venus, how ye, my Ladie dere,
Ywepyng with full wofull chere
Yprayid Jupiter on hie,
To fave and kepin that navie
Of that dere Trojan Æneas,
Sithins that he your sonne ywas.

There fawe I Jovis Venus kiffe,
And grauntid was of the' tempeft liffe.

There fawe I how the tempeft ftente,
And how with allè pine he went,
And privilie toke a rivage

Into the cowntrey of Carthage,
And on the morowe how that he
And a Knight, that hight Achate,
Ymettin with Venus that daie
Goyng in a full queinte araie,
As fhe had be an huntireffe,

With winde blowyng upon her trefse,
And how Æneas gan to plaine,
When that he knewe her of his paine,

And how his Shippis dreint ywere,
Or els ilofte, he n'ifte not where;
How fhe began hym comforte tho,
And bade hym unto Carthage go,

170

180

190

200

210

220

230

And

And there he should his folke yfinde,
That in the Se were leste behinde.
And shortly of this thyng to pace,
She made Æneas so in grace
Of Dido, Quene of that countre,
That shortly for to tellin, she Became his love, and let hym do
All that weddyng ylongith to,
What should I spekin it more quainte,
Or pain me my wordis to painte?
To speke of love, it woll not be,
I can not of that faculte,
And eke to tellen of the manere
How that thei first acquaintid were,
It were a long proceste to tell,
And ovir long for you to dwell.

There sawe I grave how Æneas
Tolde to Dido evcry caas,
That hym was tidde upon the Se.

And eft gravin was how that she
Made of hym shortly at a worde
Her life, her love, her lust, her lorde,
And did to hym all reverence,
And laied on hym all the dispence
That any woman might ydo,
Wenyng that it had all be so
As he her swore, and hereby demed
That he was gode, for he soche semed.

*Alas what harme doth apparence
When it is false in existence!*

For he to her a traitour was,
Wherefore she slowe her self, alas!

Lo, how a woman doeth amis,
To love him that unknowin is!
For by Christ, lo thus it farith,
It is not all golde that glarith;
For al so broke I well myne hedde,
*There maie be un'ir godelihedde
Covirid many a shreude vice;*
Therefore let no wight be so nice
To take a love onely for chere,
Or speche, or for frendly manere,
For this shall every woman finde
That some man of his pure kinde
Woll shewin outward the fairist
Till he have caught that what hym list,
And then anon woll causis finde,
And swere how that she is unkinde,
Or false, or privie, or double was.
All this saie I by Æneas
And Dido, and her nice left,
That lovid all to sone a gest.
Wherefore I woll saie o proverbe,
That *He that fullie knoweth the herbe
Maie safely laie it to his eye,*
Withoutin drede this is no lie.

But let us speke of Æneas,
How he betrayid her, alas!
And left her full unkindelie.

So when she sawe all uttirle
That he would her of trouthe faile,
And wendin from her into' Itaille,
She gan to wring her handis two.

Alas (qð she) that me is wo!
Alas, is every man thus true,
That every yere woll have a newe,
If it so longe tyme endure,
Or ellis thre peravinture!
And thus of one he woll have fame,
In magnifying his owne name,
An othir for frendship saith he,
And yet there shall the thirde ybe,
That is ytaken for delite,
Lo! 'or els for singuler profite.

In soche wordis began complaine
This wofull Dido of her paine,
As me mette dremyng redily,
None other auctour aledge woll I.

Alas! (qð she) my swete herte,
Have pitie on my sorowes smerte,
And fle me not, go not awaie.

O wofull Dido, welawaie!
(Qð she) unto her selvin tho.

O Æneas, what woll ye do?
O that your love, neithir your bonde,
Which that ye swore with your right honde,
Ne yet my cruill deth (qð she)

Maie holdin you still here with me!

O! have ye' of my deth no pite?

I wis myne own dere herte that ye
Knowing full well that nevir yet,
As farre as evir I had wit,
Agilte you, in thought, ne in dede.

O! have ye men soche godelihede
In speche, and ner a dele of trouthe?
Alas Alas, that er had routh
Any woman on a false man!

Now I se well, and tellin can
We wretchid women can no arte,
For certaine, for the more parte,
Thus we ben servid everichone,

How fore so that ye men can grone;
Anon as we have you received
Full certainlie we ben deceived,
For though your love last a ceson,

Waite upon the conclusion,
And loke eke how ye determine,
And for the more parte define.
O welawaie that I was borne!
For thorough you my name is lorne.
And mine actis are redde and song
O'er all this lande in every tong.

O wickid fame, for there n'is
Nothing so swifte lo! as she is!
O sothe is, every thyng is wist,
Though it be coverde with the mist!

Eke though that I might durin ever,
That I have done recovre' I never,
That it ne shall be saied, alas!
I shamid was through Æneas,
And that I shall thus judgid be,

Lo! right as she hath doen, now she
Woll doen eftsonis hardily,
Thus saie the peple privily,
But that is doen n'is not to done.

But all her complaint ne her mone
Certain availed her not a stre:

And when she wist sothely that he
Was forthe into his ship agone,
She into chambir went anone,
And callid on her sustir Anne,
And gan her to complainin thanne,
And saied that she the cause ywas
That she first lovid him, alas!

And first coufailid her thereto.
But what whan this was saied and do
She roste her selvin to the herte,

And deide thorough the woundis smerte.
But all the manir how she deide,
And all the wordis how she feide,
Who so to knowe it hath purpose,
Rede Virgile in Æneidos,
Or the Epistils of Ovide,
What that she wrote or that she dide,

And n'ere it to long to endite
By God I would it here ywrite.
But welawaie! the harme and routh,
That hath betide for soche untrouth,

As men maie oft in bokis rede,
And al daie seen it yet in dede,
That for to thinkin it tene is.

Lo! Demophon, Duke of Athenis,
How he forswore him falsly,
And trayid Phyllis wickidly,
That kingis doughtir was of Thrace,
And falsly gan his termè pace,
And whan she wist that he was false,
She hong her self right by the halfe,
For he had doen her such untrouthe,
Lo! was not this a wo and routh?

Eke loke how false and richèles
Was to Briseida Achilles,
And Paris eke to Oenone,
And Jason to Hypsipyle,
And este Jason to Medea;
And Hercules to Deianira,
For he left her for Iole,
That made hym take his deth parde.

How false was eke Duke Theseus,
That as the storie tellith us,
How he betrayid Adriane,
The devill be his soul's bane,
For had he laughid or iloured
He must have ben anone devoured,
If Ariadne ne had be,
And for she had of hym pite,
She made hym fro the deth escape,
And he made her a full false Jape,
For aftir this within a while
He left her slepyng in an Ile
Desert alone right in the Se,
And stale awaie, and let her be,
And toke her sustir Phædra tho
With hym, and gan to shippe ygo,
And yet he had ysworne to here,
On all that evir he could swere,
That so she savid hym his life,
He would takin her to his wife,
For she desirid nothings elles
In certain as the boke us telles.

But for to excuse this Æneas
Fullliche of all his grete trespas,
The boke sayith withoutin faile
The Goddes bad hym go to Itaile,
And levin Affriques regioun,
And faire Dido and her faire toun.
Tho sawe I grave how to Itaile
Dan Æneas gan for to faile,
And how the tempest all began,
And howe he lost his sterisman
Whiche that the sterne, or he toke kepe,
Smote ovir the bordè as he slepe.

And also saugh I how Sibile
And Æneas beside an Ile
To helle went yfere for to se
His father Anchises the fre
And how he there founde Palinurus,
And also Dido and Deiphobus,
And everiche tourment eke in hell
Sawe he, whiche long is for to tell,
Whiche painis who so liste to knowe,
He must redin many a rowe
In Virgile, or in Claudian,
Or Dantes that it tellin can.

Tho sawe I all the arivaile,
That Æneas made in Itaile,
And with kyng Latine his trete,
And all the battailis that he
Was at himselfin and his knightes,
Or he had all iwonne his rightes,
And how he Turnus reft his life,
And wan Lavina to his wife,

And all the marveilous signals
Of the Goddis celestials,
How maugre Juno Æneas,
For all her sleighte and her compas,
Atchivid all his avinture,
For Jupiter toke on hym cure
At the praier of his Moðir Venus,
Whiche I praie alwaie favin us,
And us aie of our sorowes light.

When I had sein all this sight
Within this noble temple thus,
Hey! Lord, thought I, that madist us,
Yet sawe I nevir soch nobleste
Of Imagis, nor soche richesse,
As I se gravin in this churche,
But nought wote I who did 'hem worche,
Ne where I am, ne' in what countre,
But now will I out gone and se,
Right at the wickit if I can
Seen oughtwhere steryng any man,
That maie me tellin where I am.

When I out of the dore cam,
I faste aboutin me behelde,
Then sawe I but a large felde
As farre as evir I might se,
Withoutin toun, or house or tre,
Or bushe, or grasle, or arid lande,
For all the felde was but of sande
As smal as men maye se at eye
In the desertis of Lybye;
Ne ferthir no manir cature,
That is yformid by nature,
Ne sawe I, me to rede or wisse;
O Christ, thought I, that art in blisse,
From fanton and illusion
Me save, and with devocyon
Myne eyin to the heven I caste,
Tho was I ware lo! at the laste,
That faste by the sonne on hie
As kennin myght I with mine eye,
Me thought I sawe an Egle fore,
But that it semid mochil more
Than I had anye Egle' yseine,
This is as sothe as deth certaine,
It was of golde, and shone so bright,
That nevir sawe men soche a sight,
But yf the hevin had ywonne
Al newe of God anothir sonne,
So shone the Egl'is fethirs bright,
And somewhat downwarde gan it lyght.

Explicit liber primus.

Nowe herkin everye manir man,
That Englishe undirstandè can,
And lystith of my dreame to here,
For now at erst shallin ye lere
So sely' and dredefull avysion,
That I saye neithir Scipion,
Ne kinge Nabugodonosore,
Pharao, Turnus, ne Alcanore,
Ne mettin soche a dreame as this,
Nowe O Thou faire blisful Cipris,
So be my favour at this time,
That ye me to endite and rime
Helpith that in Parnassus dwel
Besyde Helicon the clere wel.
O thought, that wrote al that I met,
And in the tresorie it set
Of my braine nowe shal men yse
If any vertue in The be,
To tellin al my dreame aright
Nowe kith thy engin and thy might.

This Egle' of whiche I have you tolde,
 That with fethirs shone al of golde,
 Whiche that so hie began to fore,
 I gan beholdin more and more;
 To sene her beaute and the wonder,
 But nevir was that dente of thonder,
 Ne that thinge that men callin foudre,
 That smite sometime a toure to poudre,
 And in his swifte comminge brende,
 That so swithe gan downward discende,
 As this foule whan that it behelde
 That I arowme was in the felde,
 And with his grim pawis so stronge
 Within his sharpe nailis longe
 Me sleyn at a swappe he hente,
 And with his sours again up wente,
 Me caryng in his clawis starke,
 As lightly' as I had ben a larke,
 Howe hye I can not tellin yowe,
 For I came up, I n'ist ner howe,
 For so astonied and afweved
 Was every virtue in me heved,
 What with his sours, and with my dred,
 That al my felling gan to ded,
 For why, it was a gret affraye.

Thus I longe in his clawis laye,
 Til at the last he to me speke
 In mann'is voice, and said, Awake,
 And be not agast so for shame,
 And callid me tho by my name,
 And for I shulde bettir abraide,
 Me to awakin thus he saide,
 Right in the same voice and stevin,
 That usith one I can nevin,
 And with that voice the sothe to faine,
 My minde ycame to me againe,
 For it was godely saide to me,
 So n'as it nevir wonte to be,
 And herewithal I gan to stere,
 As he me in his fete ybere,
 Til that he felte that I had hete,
 And felte eke tho mine herte ybere,
 And tho gan he me to disporte,
 And with gentil wordes me comforte,
 And sayid twise by saint Mary
 Thou arte a noyous thinge to cary,
 And nothinge nedith it parde,
 For all so wisly God helpe me,
 As thou no harme shalte have of this,
 And this case, that betidde The is,
 Is for thy lore, and for thy prowé,
 Lette se, darist thou loke yet nowé,
 Be ful ensurid boldily
 I am thy frende, and therwith I
 Gan for to wondir in my minde.

O God (qð I) that madeſt al kinde;
 Shal I none otherwise ydie?
 Wheðir Jove wil me stellyſie,
 Or what thing maye this ſignifie?
 I'am neithir Enocke ne Helye,
 Ne Romulus, ne Ganimede,
 That werin bore up, as men rede,
 To hevin with Dan Jupiter,
 And made the goddis botiler;
 Lo! this was tho my fantasie:
 But he that bare me gan asprie
 That I so thought, and sayid this,
 Thou demist of thy selfe amis,
 For Jove ne is not thereabouté,
 I dare The put ful out of doute,
 To makin of The yet a sterre,
 But er I berin The moche ferre,
 I wil The tellin what I am,
 And where thou shalte, and why I came;

To doin this, so that thou take
 Gode herte, and not for fere yquake;
 Gladly (qð I) now wel (qð he)
 First I, that in my fete have The,
 Of whom thou haſte grete fere and wonder,
 Am dwellinge with the God of thonder, 106
 Whiche men ycallin Jupiter,
 That doth me flyin ful ofte fer,
 To do all his commaundement,
 30 And for this cause he hath me sent
 To The: Herkin nowé, by thy trouthe,
 Certaine he hath of The grete route,
 For that thou haſte ſo truly
 So long ſervid ententiſly
 His blindè nephewe Cupido,
 And the faire Quene Venus also, 110
 Withoutin guerdon evir yet,
 And nathéles haſt ſet thy wit,
 Althoughe in thy hed ful lite is,
 40 To make bokes, ſongis, and ditis,
 In rime or ellis in cadence,
 As thou beſt canſt, in reverence
 Of love, and of his ſervauntes eke,
 That have his ſervice ſought, and ſeke,
 And painiſt The to praiſe his arte,
 Althoughe thou haddiſt nevir parte, 120
 Wherefore ſo wiſly God me bleſſe,
 Jovis yhalte it grete humbleſſe,
 And vertue eke, that thou wilt make
 50 Anight ful oft thine hed to ake
 In thy ſtudy, ſo thou ywriſteſt,
 And evirmore of love enditeſt,
 In honour of him and praiſinges,
 And in his folkis fourthiringes,
 And in ther matir al deviſeſt,
 And not him ne his folke diſpiſeſt, 130
 Althoughe thou maiſte go in the daunce
 Of them, that him lyſt not avaunce,
 Wherefore as I now ſaide ywis,
 60 Jupiter conſidriſh wel this,
 And als, beaufire, of othir thinges,
 That is, that thou haſte no tidinges
 Of lov'is folke, if they be glade,
 Ne of nothinge els, that God made,
 And not onely fro ferre countre,
 That no tidinges comin to The, 140
 Not of thy very neighbouris,
 That dwellenalmoſt at thy doris
 Thou heriſt neithir that ne this;
 70 For whan thy labour al done is,
 And haſte made al thy reckininges,
 In ſtede of reſte and of newe thinges
 Thou goeſt home to thine houſe anone,
 And al ſo dombe as any ſtone
 Thou ſittiſt at anothis boke,
 Tyl fully daſid is thy loke, 150
 And lyviſt thus as an Hermite,
 Although thine abſtinence is lyte;
 And therefore Jovis throughe his grace
 80 Wil that I bere The to a place,
 Whiche that yhight the houſe of Fame,
 And for to doe The ſporte and game,
 In ſome recompencacion
 Of thy labour and devocion,
 That thou haſte hadde, lo! cauſeleſs,
 To God Cupido the recheles, 160
 And thus this God throughe his merite
 Wil with ſome manir thing The quite,
 So that thou wilt be of gode chere;
 90 For truſtith wel that thou ſhalte here,
 Whan we ben comen there as I ſay,
 Mo wondir thingis dare I lay,
 And of love's folke mo tidingis,
 Bothe ſothſawis and leſingis,

And of mo lovis newe begon,
And longe servid tyl love is won,
And of mo lovirs casuelly
That ben betide, nō man wote why,
But as a blinde man starteth an Hare,
And more jolite and welfare,
Whilis they findin love of stele,
As thinkin men, and o'r al wele
Mo discordes and mo jalousies,
Mo murmures, and mo novilties,
And also mo dissimulacions,
And eke feinid reperacions,
And mo berdis in two houres
Withoutin rasour or sifoures
Ymade, than grainis be of sandes,
And eke mo holdinge in mo handes,
And also mo renovelauces
Of olde foreletin aqueintaunes,
Mo love dayis, and mo accordes,
Than on instrumentis ben cordes,
And eke of love mo exchaungis
Than evir come were in graungis;
Unnethis maist thou trowin this,
(Qð he) no so' helpe me God as wis,
(Qð I) No why? (qð he) for it
Were impossible to my wit,
Although that Fame had al the pyes
In al a relme, and al aspies,
Howe that yet he shulde here al this,
Or they espyin; O yes yes,
(Qð he) to me, that can I preve
By reson, worthy for to leve,
So that thou give thin advertence
To understandin my sentence.

First shalt thou here where she dwellith,
Right so as thine owne boke tellith,
Her palais standeth as I shal say
Right even emiddis of the way
Bytwene hevin, and yerthe, and Se,
That what so er in al these thre
Is spoken' in prive or apperte,
The way therto is so overte,
And stante eke in so juste a place,
That every sowne mote to it pace,
Or what so cometh from anie tongue,
Whethre' it be rownid, redde, or longe,
Or spokin in fuertè or drede,
Certaine it motin thiðir nede.

Nowe herkin wel, for why I wil
Ytellin The a propir skil,
And worthy demonstracion
In mine imaginacion.

Geffray, thou wottist full wel this;
That every kindly thinge that is Yhath a kyndely stede, there he
May best in it conservid be,
Unto whiche place evèry thinge
Thorough his kyndely enclininge
Ymevith for to comin to,
Whan that it is away therfro,
As thus, Lo! thou maiste al day se;
Take any thinge that hevy be,
As stone or led, or thinge of weight,
And bere it ner so hie on height,
Let go thine hande, it fallith downe,
Right so say I by fire or sowne,
Or smoke, or othir thingis light,
Alway they seke upwarde on height,
Light thinges up, and hevie down charge,
While everiche of 'hem be at large,
And for this cause thou maist wel se,
That every rivir to the Se
Enclinid is to go by kynde,
And by these skillis as I finde

170 Have fishes dwellinge in fode and Se,
And treis eke on the erthe be:
Thus every thinge by his reson
Hath his owne propir mancion,
To whiche he sekith to repaire,
There as it shuldin nat appaire.

Lo! this sentence is knowin couthe
Of every Philosophir's mouthe, 250
As Aristotle', and dan Platone,
And othir clerkis many one,
And to confirmin my resoun,
180 Thou wotist wel that speche is sowne,
Or ellis no man might it here,
Nowe herkin what I wol The lere.

Sowne is not but eyre ybrokin,
And every speche, that is spokin,
Where loude or prive, foule or faire,
In his substaunce ne is but eyre, 260
For as flame is but lightid smoke,
Right so is sowne but eyre ybroke,
But this may be in many wise,

190 Of the whiche I will The devise,
As sowne comith of pype or harpe;
For whan a pype is blowin sharpe;
The eyre is twist with violence;
And rent: Lo! this is my sentence;
Eke, whan that men harpestringis smyte;
Wheðir that it be moche or lyte, 270
Lo! with the stroke the eyre it breketh,
And right so breketh it whan men speketh.

Thus wost thou wel what thing is speche,
200 Nowe hennisforthe I wil The teche
Howe evèrich speche, voice, or sowne;
Throughe his multiplicaciowne,
Thoughe it were pipid of a mouse,
Mote nedis come to Fam's house.
I prove it thus: takith hede nowe
By experience, for if that thou 280
Threwe in a watir nōwe a stone;
Wel wost thou it wil make anone
A lityl roundil as a circle,

210 Para'venture as brode as a covircle,
And right anone thou shalte se wele
That circle cause andthir whele,
And that the thirde, and so forthe brother;
Evèry circle causinge other
Moch brodir than himselfin was;
And thus from roundil to compas 290
Eche aboutin othir goinge
Ycausith of othirs steringe;

And multiplying evirmo;
220 Tyl that it be so far ygo;
That it at bothè brinkis be,
Although thou mayist it not se
Above, yet gothe it alwaye under;
Although thou thinke it a grete wonder;
And whofo saithe of trouthe I vary, 300
Bydde him provin the contrary.

And right thus every worde ywis,
That loude or pryve' yspokin is,
Ymovith firste an eyre aboute,
230 And of his movinge out of doute
Anothir eyre anone is moved,
As I have of the watir proved;
That every circle causith other,
Right so of eyre, my levè brother;
Everiche eyre anothir sterith

More and more; and speche up berith; 310
Or voise or noyse, or worde, or sowne;
Aye through multiplicaciowne,
Tyl it be at the house of Fame,
240 Take it in ernest or in game;
Nowe have I tolde, if thou have mind,
Howe speche or sowne of purè kinde

Enclinid

Enclinid is upward to meve,
 This mayist thou fele wel by preve,
 And that same kindly stede ywis,
 That every thinge enclined to is,
 Yhath also his kyndelyche stede,
 That shewith it withoutin drede,
 That kindly the mancoun
 Of everyche speche, of every founne,
 All be it either foule or faire,
 Yhath his kindly place in eyre;
 And sith that every thinge ywis,
 Out of his kindly place ywis,
 Ay movith thiðir for to go,
 Yf that it awaye be therfro,
 As I have before provid The,
 It shewith every founne perde
 Ymovith kindly to pace
 As up into his kindly place;
 And this place, of whiche I The tel,
 There as Fame doth yliste to dwell,
 Is sette amiddis of these thre,
 Hevin, and erthe, and eke the Se,
 As moste conservatife of soun;
 Than is this the conclusion,
 That every speche of every manne,
 As I The tellin firste beganne,
 Ymovith up on height to pace
 Kindly unto Fam's place.
 Telith me this nowe faithfully,
 Have I not provid thus simply,
 Withoutin any subtilte
 Of speche, or grete prolixite
 Of terms of Philosophie,
 Or figuris of Poetrie,
 Or colouris of Rhetorike,
 Perde it oughtin The to like,
 For harde langage, and harde matere,
 Is incombrous for The to here
 At onis, wofte thou not wel this?
 And I answerid and said, yes.
 Ah ha (qð he) lo! so I can
 Leudlye unto a leude man
 Yspeke, and shewin him soche skilles,
 That he maye shake hem by the bylles,
 So palpable they shuldin be;
 But tel me this nowe praye I The,
 Howe thinketh The my conclusioun?
 Parde a gode persuasioun
 (Qð I) it is, and lyke to be,
 Right so as thou haste provid me.
 By God (qð he) and as I leve
 Thou shalte have it or it be eve,
 Of every worde of this sentence
 A profe, by thine experience,
 And with thine eris herin wel
 The toppe and taile, and every del,
 That every worde that spokin is
 Comith into Fame's house ywis,
 As I have saide, what wilt thou more?
 And with this worde uppir to fore
 He began, and saide by sainte Jame,
 Nowe wyll we spekin al of game.

Howe farest thou now qð he to me,
 Right wel (qð I) now fe (qð he)
 By thy trouthe yondir adowne,
 Where that thou knowist any towne,
 Or house, or any othir thinge,
 And whan thou haste of ought knowynge
 Tho lokith that thou warne me,
 And I anone shal tellin The
 How farre that thou arte nowe therfro.

And I adowne gan lokin tho,
 And behelde feldis and plainis,
 Nowe hyllis, and nowe mountainis,

Nowe valeys, and nowe foreftis,
 And nowe unnethis grete bestis,
 Nowe riveris, nowe citeis,
 320 Nowe townis, and nowe grete treis,
 Nowe shippis sailinge in the Se,
 But thus sone in a while he
 Was flowin fro the grounde so hye;
 That al the worlde as to myne eye
 No more ysemid than a pricke,
 Or ellis was the eyre so thicke,
 400 That I ne might it not diserne;
 With that he spake to me so yerne,
 And said: Seist thou any token,
 330 Or ought, that in this worlde's of spoken?

I answered naye; no wondir is,
 (Qð he) for halfe so hye as this N'as Alexandre' of Macedon
 Kyng: Ne of Rome dan Scipion,
 That sawe in dreme at pointe devise
 Heven and erthe, hel, and paradise,
 410 Ne eke the bold wretche Dædalus,
 Ne yet his childe nice Icarus,
 That flewe so hiè, that the here
 340 Hys wingis molte, and he fel wete
 In mydde the Se, and there he dreinte,
 For whom was made a grete complainte.

Nowe tourne upwarde (qð he) thy face,
 And beholde here this large place,
 This eyre, but loke that thou ne be
 Adrad of hem that thou shalt se,
 420 For in this regioun certaine
 Dwellith many a citizeine,
 Of whiche yspekith dan Plato,
 350 These ben the eyrishe bestis lo!
 And tho sawe I al the menyne,
 That bothe ygone, and also flye.

Lo there! (qð he) cast up thine eye,
 Se yondir lo! the Galaxie,
 The whiche men clepe the milky way,
 430 For it is white: And some parfay
 Ycallin it han Watlynge strete,
 That onis was brente with the hete,
 Whan that the Sunn's sonne the rede,
 360 Which that hite Phaëton wolde lede
 Algate his fathir's carte, and gie.

The carte horsis gan wel alpie
 That he ne coude no govirnaunce,
 And gonin for to lepe and prounce,
 And bere him now up, and nowe downe,
 440 Tyl that he sawe the Scorpiowne,
 Whiche that in heven a signe is yit,
 And he for fere ylost his wit
 Of that, and let the reinis gone
 370 Of his horsis, and they anone
 Sone up to mounte, and downe discende,
 Tyl bothe the eyre and erthe ybrende,
 Tyl Jupiter lo! at the laste
 Hym flewe, and fro the carte ycaste.

Lo! is it not a grete mischaunce
 To let a fole have govirnaunce
 450 Of thinges, that he can not demaine?

And with this worde, sothe for to saine,
 He gan alway uppir to fore,
 380 And gladid me than more and more,
 So faithfully to me spake he.

Tho gan I to loke undir me,
 And behelde the eyrishe bestis,
 Cloudis, mystis, and tempistis,
 Snowis, hailis, rainis, and windes,
 And the engendringe in ther kindes,
 460 Al the way thoroughe whiche I came,
 O God (qð I) that made Adame,
 Moche is thy myght and noblenes!
 390 And tho thought I upon Boece,

That

That writeth a thought may flye so hie
With fethirs of Philosophie,
To passin everyche Element,
And when he hath so farre ywent
Than may ben sene behinde his backe,
Cloude, erthe, and al that I of spake.

Tho gan I wexin in'a were,
And said, I wote wel I am here,
But whether in body or in gost
I n'or ywis, but God thou wost,
For a more clere entendement
N'as to me nevir yet ysent.
And than thought I on Marcian,
And eke of Anticlaudian,
That sothe was ther discrpcion
Of al the hevin's region,
As farre as that I sawe the preve,
And therefore I can 'hem beleve.
With that the Egle gan to crie,
Let be (qð he) thy fantasie,
Wylte thou lernin of sterris ought?

Nay certainly (qð I) right nought;
And why? (qð he) for I am olde;
Or ellis wolde I The have tolde
(Qð he) the sterris namis lo!
And al the hevin's signis to,
And whiche they be: No force (qð I)

Yes perde (qð he) wost thou why?
For whan thou redist poëtry,
Howe the goddis can stellify
A birde, a fysh, or him, or her,
As of birdes, the Ravyn and other,
Or Ariones harpe tyne,
Or Castor, Pollux, or Delphine,
Or Atalante's doughtirs seven,
How al these are yset in heven,
For though thou have 'hem ofte in hande,
Yet n'oft thou nat where that they stande.

No force (qð I) it is no nede,
As wel I leve, so God me spede,
'Hem that writin of this matere,
As though I knewe ther placis here,
And eke they femin here so bright,
That it shulde shendin al my sight
To loke on 'hem; that may wel be,
(Qð he) and so forth bare he me
A while, and tho began to crie,
That nevir herde I thinge so hie,
Holde up thine hed, for al is wel,
Sainte Julian lo! bonne hostel,
Se here the house of Fame lo!
Mayist thou not here that I do?

Here what (qð I) the gretè sowne
(Qð he) that romblith up and downe.
In Fam's house ful of tidinges,
Bothe of faire speche and of chidinges,
And of false, and sothe compownid
Herkin wel, it is not rownid.

Herist thou not the gretè swough?
Yes perde (qð I) well ynough,
And what sowne is it lyke (qð he)

Peter, lyke the' beting of the Se
(Qð I) against the rochis halowe,
Whan tempestes done, ther shippis swalow,
And that a man stande out of doute
A myle off thens, and here it route:

Or ellis lyke to the humblinge
Aftir the clappe of a thundringe,
Whan Jovis hath the eyre ybete,
But it doth me for fere to fwete.

Nay drede The not therof (qð he)
It is nothing that will bytin The,
Thou shalte have no harme truly.

And with that worde both he and I

As nighe the place arivid were,
As men might castin with a spere,
I ne wist howe, but in a strete
He set me faire upon my fete,
And sayid, walkith forth a pace,
And tel thine advinture and case,
That thou shalte finde in Fam's place.

Nowe (qð I) while that we have space
To speke, or that I go fro The,
For the love of God tellith me
In sothe, that I will of The lere,
If this ilke noise which that I here
Be as I have herde The me tell
Of folke that done in erthe ydwell,
And comith here in the same wise
As I The herde or this devise,
And that here liv'is body n'is
In al that house, that yondir is,
That makith al this loude fare.

No (answerid he) by sainte Clare,
And al so wissely God rede me,
But o thinge I will warnè The,
Of the whiche thou wilt have wondir.

Lo! to the house of Fame yondir
Thou woste howe comith every speche,
It nedith not The este to teche,
But undirstande now right wel this,
Whan any speche ycomin is
Up to the palais, anone right
It wexith like the same wight,
Whiche that the worde in erth yspake,
Be he clothid in red or blake,
And hath so very his likenesse,
And spake the worde that thou wilt gesse
That it the same body be,

Wher Man or woman, he or she.
And is not this a wondir thinge?

Yes (qð I) tho by hevin kinge;
And with this worde farewel (qð he)
And here wil I abydin The,
And God of hevin sende The grace
Some gode to lernin in this place!
And I of him toke leve anone,
And gan forth to the palays gone.

Explicit liber secundus.

THou God of science and of light
Apollo thorough thy grete might
This litil last boke now thou gye,
Nowe that I will for maisterie,
Here arte potencial be shewde,
But for the rime is lyght and lewde,
Yet make it somewhat agreable,
Though some verse faile in a syllable,
And that I do no diligence
To shewin craftè but sentence,
And if that divine virtue thou
Wiltè helpin me to shewin nowe
That in my hed ymarkid is,
Lo! that is for to menin this,
The house of Fame for to discrive,
Thou shalt yse me go as blive
Unto the next laurir I se,
And kyse it for it is thy tre;
Nowe entre in my brest anone.

Whan I was from the egle gone,
I gan beholde upon this place;
And certaine or I furthir passe,
I wol you al the shape devise
Of house and cite, and al the wise,
Howe I gan to this place approche,
That stode upon so hie a roche,

6 C

Hyr

Hyr ystandith none in Spaine,
 But up I clambe with mochil paine,
 And though to clime ygrevid me,
 Yet I ententife was to fe,
 And for to porin wondre lowe,
 If I coude any wise yknowe
 What manir stene this roche ywas,
 For it was lyke a limid glas,
 But that it shone ful more clere,
 But of what congelid matere
 It was I ne wiste redily,
 But at the laste espyid I,
 And founde that it was everydele
 A roche of yse, and not of stele;
 Thought I by saint Thomas of Kent
 This were a feble foundement
 To buildin on a place so hie,
 He ought hym lite to glorifie,
 That heron builte, God so me save.

Tho sawe I all the hall igrave
 With famous folkis namis fele,
 That haddin ben in mochil wele,
 And ther famis full wide iblowe,
 But well unnethis might I knowe
 Any lettiris for to rede
 Ther namis by, for out of drede
 Thei werin almoste of thawed so,
 That of the lettiris one or two
 Were molte awaie of every name,
 So unfamous was wexe ther fame,
 But men saie, what maie evir list?

Tho gan I in myne herte cast
 That thei were molte awaie for here,
 And not awaie with stormis bete,
 For on that othir side I sey
 Of this hill, that Northward yley,
 How it was writin full of names
 Of folke that had afore grete fames
 Of oldè tyme, and yet thei were
 As freshe, as men had written 'hem there
 The self daie, or that verrey houre
 That I on 'hem began to poure:
 But well I wiste what it made,
 It was conservid with the shade,
 All the writyng which that I sie,
 Of a Castill that stode on hie;
 And stode eke in so cold a place,
 That hete ne might it not deface.

Tho gan I on this hill to gone,
 And found upon the coppe a wone,
 That all the men that ben on live
 Ne han the connyng to discrive
 The beaute of that ilke place,
 Ne condin castin no compace
 Soke an othir for to ymake,
 That might of beauteie be his make,
 Ne one so wondirly iwrought,
 That it astonieth yet my thought,
 And makith all my witte to swinke,
 Upon this Castill for to thinke,
 So that the wondir grete beauteie,
 Caste, craft, and curiositie,
 Ne can I not to you devise,
 My witte ne maie me not suffise,
 But nathelesse all the substaunce
 I have yet in my remembraunce;
 For why? me thoughtin by saint Gile,
 That all was of stene of Berile,
 Bothe the Castill and the Toure,
 And eke the hall, and every boure,
 Withoutin pecis or joynnynges,
 But many subtyll compallnynges,
 As Barbicans and pinnacles
 Imageries and tabernacles,

I sawe, and full eke of windowes,
 As flakis fallin in grete Snowes,
 And eke in eche of the pinacles
 30 Ywerin sondrie habitacles,
 In whiche stodin all withoutin
 Full the castill all aboutin
 Of all manir of Minstralis,
 And Jesters, that tellin talis
 Bothe of wepyng and eke of game,
 And all that longith unto fame,
 110 There herde I playin on an harpe,
 That ysound bothe well and sharpe,
 Hym Orpheus full craftily,
 And on this othir side fast by 40 Yfatte the Harpir Orion,
 And Gacides Chirion,
 And othir Harpirs many one,
 And the Briton Glaskirion
 And smale Harpirs with ther gleees
 Satte undir 'hem in divers sees,
 120 And gone on 'hem upwarde to gape,
 And counterfaited 'hem as an Ape,
 Or as crafte counterfettith kinde.

50 Tho sawe I standin 'hem behinde,
 Afarre from 'hem all by 'hem selve,
 Many a thousande tymis twelve,
 That madin loudè Minstralsies
 In Cornmuse and eke in Shalmies,
 And in many an othir pipe,
 That craftily began to pipe,
 130 Bothe in Douced and eke in Rede,
 That ben at festis with the brede,
 And many' a floite, and litlyng horne,
 60 And pipis made of grene corne,
 As have these little herdègromes,
 That kepin bestis in the bromes.

There sawe I then dan Citherus,
 And of Athenes dan Proserus,
 And Mercia that losse her skinne,
 Bothe in the face, bodie, and chinne,
 140 For that she would envyin, lo!
 To pipin bette than Apollo.

70 There sawe I famous old and yong
 Pipiris of all the Duche tong,
 To lernin love dauncis springis,
 Reyis, and the straunge thingis.

Tho sawe I in an othir place
 Ystandyng in a large space,
 Of 'hem that makin blodie soun
 In trumpe, beme, and Clarioun.
 150 For in fight and in blodeshedynges
 Is usid glad clarionynges.

80 There herde I trumpin Messenus,
 Of whom that spekith Virgilius.

There herd I Joab trumpe also,
 Theodomas, and othir mo,
 And all that usid clarion
 In Casteloigne, and Aragon,
 That in ther tymis famous were,
 To lernin sawe I trumpin there.
 160

90 There sawe I sit in othir sees,
 Playing on othir sondrie gleees,
 Whiche that I can not now nevin,
 Mo then Sterris ben in hevin,
 Of whiche I n'ill as now not rime,
 For ese of you, and losse of time,
 For tyme ilost, this knowin ye,
 By no waie maie recovered be.

100 There sawe I playing Jogelours,
 Magiciens, and Tragetours,
 And Phetonissis, Charmereffis,
 And olde Witchis, and Sorceressis,
 That usen Exorsifacions,
 And eke subfumigacions,

And

And clerkis eke, whiche connin well
All this Magike hight naturell,
That craftily doe ther ententes
To maken in certain ascendentis
Imagis lo! through whiche Magike
To maken a man ben whole or like.

There sawe I the quene Medea,
And Circe, and Caliopeia.

There sawe I Hermes Ballenus,
Limote, and eke Symon Magus.

There sawe I, and yknewe by name,
That by soche arte doen men have fame.

There sawe I eke Coll Tragetur
Upon a table of Sicamur
Playin an uncouth thyng to tell,
I sawe hym cary a windemell
Undir a Walnote shale.

What should I makin lengir tale?
Of all the peple that I sey
I could not tell till Dom'isdey.

When I had all this folke beho'de,
And founde me lece, and not yholde,
And I amufid a longe while
Upon this wall all of Berile,
That shone lightir then any glas,
And made well more then it ywas,
As it kindly thing of fame is,
And then right anone afir this,
I gan forthe romin till I fonde
The castill yate on my right honde,
Whiche all so well ycorvin was,
That nevir soche an othir n'as,
And yet it was by avinture
I wrought by grete and subtrill cure,
It nedith not you more to tellen,
To makin you to long to dwellen,
Of these ilke yatis florishynges,
Ne of compacis, ne karvynges,
Ne the hackyng in Masonries,
As corbettis, and Imageries.

But Lorde so faire it was to shewe!
For it was all with golde behewe;
But in I went, and that anone,
There met I crying many one,
A larges, larges, holde up well,
God save the ladie of this pell,
Our owne gentill Ladie Fame,
And 'hem that willen to have a name
Of us, thus heard I cryin all,
And fast comin out of the hall,
And shoke noblis and starlyngis,
And corounid were as kyngis
Withcrounis wrought full of Losynges,
And many ribans, many fringes,
Were on ther clothis truly.

Tho at the last espyd I,
That Pursevautes and Heraudis,
That cryin riche folkis laudis,
It werin all, and every man
Of 'hem, as I you tellin can,
Had on him throwin a vesture,
Whiche men yclepe a cote armure,
Imbrondirid wondirly riche.
As though thei werin not iliche;
But nought will I, so more I thrive,
Be now aboutin to discrive
All these armis that there yweren
That thei thus on ther cotis weren,
For to me were impossible,
Men might make of 'hem a bible
Full twentie fote thicke as I trowe,
For certain, who so coud it knowe,
Ymight there all the armis fene
Of famous folke that er had bene

In Affrike, Europe, and Asie,
Sithins first began chivalrie.

Lo! how should I now tell all this!
Ne of the hall eke what nede is,
To tellin you that every wall
Of it, and rose, and flore withall,
Was platid halfe a fote thicke
Of golde, and that ne was not wicke,
But for to provin in all wise
As fine as ducket in Venise,
Of whiche to lite all in my pouche is?
And thei were set as thicke of ouchis

Fine, of the finist stonis faire,
That men reden in the lapidaire,
Or as Grassis growen in a mede,
But it were all to long to rede

The namis: and therefore I pace.
But in this lustie and riche place
That Fam'is Hail ycallid was,
Full mochil pres of folke there n'as
Ne crouding for to mochil pres,
But all on hie above a des

Satte in a se Imperiall,
That made was of Rubie roiall,
Whiche that a Carbuncle is called,
I sawe perpetually istalled

A femine cecture,
That nevir formid by nature
Was soche an othir thyng I saie,
For althirfirste the sothe to saie,
Me thoughtin that she was so lite,
That the smale length of a cubite
Was lengir than she semid be,
But thus sone in a while she

Her self tho' wondirly ystreight,
That with her fete she th' erthe yreight,
And with her hedde she touchid heven,
There as shinith the Sterris seven,
And thereto yet, as to my wit,
I sawin a grete wondir yit,
Upon her eyin to beholde,
But certainly' I 'hem nevir tolde,

For as sele cyin haddin she,
As fethirs upon foulis be,
Or werin on the bestis foure,
That Godd'is trone can to honoure,
As writeth Ihon in the' Apocalyps,
Her here that was owndie and crips,

As burnid golde it shone to se,
And sothe to tellin also she
Had also sele upstandyng eres,
And tongis, as on best ben heres,
And on her fete woxin sawe I
Partrich'is wingis redily.

But Lorde the perrie' and the richeffe,
I sawe sittyn on the Goddesse,
And the hevinly melodie
Of songis full of 'armonie

I herde about her trone isong
That all the palais wall yrong!
So songe the mightie Musè, she
That clepid is Caliope,
And her sevin Sustirin eke,
That in ther facis femin meke,
And evirmore eternally

Thei songin of Fame, tho heard I,
Yheried be thou and thy name,
Goddis of renoun and of Fame,

Tho was I aware at the last,
As I myne cyin gan upcast,
That this ilke grete and noble Quene
Upon her shuldurs gan sustene
Bothè the armis and the name
Of tho that haddin large Fame,

250

260

270

280

290

300

310

320

Ali-

Alifander, and Hercules,
That with a sherte his life did lese;
And thus founde I sitting this Goddesse,
In noble honour and richesse,
Of which I stinte a while now,
Of othir thing to tellin you.

Tho sawe I stande on th' other side
Streight doune unto the doris wide,
From the dees many a pillere
Of metall, that shone not full clere,
But though thei were of no richesse,
Yet were thei made for grete noblesse,
And in 'hem was there grete sentence,
And folke of hie and digne reverence,
Of which to tellin will I fonde.

Upon a pillir sawe I stonde,
Alderfirst there I ylie
Upon a pillir stonde on hie,
That was of Lede and Iron fine,
Hym of the secte Saturnine,
The Ebraike Josephus the old,
That of the Jewis gestis told,
And he bare on his shuldurs hie
All the fame up of the Jurie;
And by hym stodin othir seven,
Full wise and worthie for to neven,
To helpe hym berin up the charge,
It was so hevie and so large,
And for thei writtin of batailles
As well as of othir marvailles,
Therefore ywas lo! this pillere,
Of the whiche I you tellin here,
Of Lede and Iron bothe iwis,
For Iron Mart's metall is,
Whiche that the God is of bataille,
And eke the Lede withoutin faile
Is lo! the metall of Saturne,
That hath ful large whele to turne,
To standin forthe on eithir rowe
Of 'hem, whiche that I could yknowe,
Though I by ordir 'hem not tell,
To makin you to long to dwell.

These, of the whiche I gan to rede,
These sawe I standin out of drede
Upon an Iron pillir strong,
That paintid was all endelong
With Tigr's blode in every place,
The Tholafen with that height Stace,
That bare of Thebis up the name
Upon his sholdirs, and the fame
Also of cruill Achilles;
And by hym stode withoutin lese
Full wondir hie on a piller
Of Iron he the grete Omer,
And with him Dares and Titus
Before, and eke he Lollius,
And Guido eke the Colempnis,
And Englishe Galfride eke iwis,
And eche of these, as I have joye,
Was busie for to bere up Troye,
So hevie thereof was the fame,
That for to bere it was no game;
But yet I gan full well espie
Betwene 'hem was a little' envie,
One saied that Omer made lies
And feinyng in his poetries,
And was to the Grekes favourable,
And therefore holde he it but fable.

Tho sawe I stonde on a pillere,
That was of timnid Iron clere,
Him the Latine Poete Virgile,
That hath bore up a longe while
The fame of Pius Æneas.

And nexte hym on a pillir was

Of Coppir, Venus clerke Ovide,
That hoth yfowin wondirs wide
The gretè God of lov's fame,
And there he bare up well his na me

330 Upon this piller al so hie
As I might se it with myne eye,
For why? this hall whereof I rede,
Was woxe on height, and length, and brede,
Well more by a thousande dele
Then it was erst, that sawe I wele.

Tho sawe I on a pillir by
Of Iron wrought full sternily
The grete Poete him dan Lucan,
That on his sholdirs bare up than 410 As hie as that I might it se
The fame of Julius and Pompe,
And by hym stodin all these clerkes,
That write of Rom's mightie werkes,
That if I would ther namis tell,
340 Tho all to long ymust I dwell.

And nexte hym on a pillir stode
Of Sulphure liche as he were wode,
Dan Claudian, sothe for to tell,
That bare up all the fame of hell,
420 Of Pluto, and of Proserpine,
That Quene is of the derkè pine.
What should I more tellin of this?
The hall ywas all full iwis
350 Of 'hem that writtin oldè jesses,
As ben on treis Rokis nestes,
But it a full confuse mattere
Were all these jestis for to here,
That thei of write, and how thei height.
But while that I beheld this sight,
430 I herde a noise approchin blive,
That fareth as Bees doen in an hive
Ayenst ther tyme of out flying,
360 Right soche a manir murmuring,
For all the worlde, it semid me.

Tho gan I loke about, and se,
That there come entryng into the' hall
A right grete companie withall,
And that of sondrie regions,
Of all kind of condicions,
440 That dwell in yerthe undir the Mone,
Bothe pore and riche, and al so sone,
As thei were come into the hall,
370 Thei gan on kneis doune to fall
Before this ilke noble quene,
And sayid, graunt us Ladie shene,
Eche of us of thy grace a bone.
And some of 'hem she grauntid sone,
And some she warnid well and faire,
450 And some she grauntid the contraire
Of ther asking all uttirle,
380 But this I saie you trullie,
What that her grace was I ne wist,
For of these folke full well I wist,
Thei haddin gode fame eche deserved,
Although thei were diversly served,
Right as her sistir dame Fortune
Is wont to servin in commune.

Now herkin how she gan to paie
'Hem that gan her of grace to praie,
460 And yet lo! all this companie
Ysaidin sothe, and not a lie.

Madame (thus sayid thei) we be 390 Folke whiche that here besechin The,
That thou grauntin us now gode fame,
And let our workis have gode name
In full recompensacion
Of gode worke, give us gode renoun.

I warne it you (qð she) anone,
Ye gettin of me gode fame none,

470
By

By God, and therefore go your waie.

Alas (qð thei) and welawaie.

Tellith us what your cause maie be.

For that me lifte it not (qð she)

No wight shall speke of you iwis

Ne gode ne harme, ne that ne this.

And with that worde she gan to call

Her messengir, that was in hall,

And bad that he should fast ygone

Upon pain to be blinde anone,

For Æolus the God of Winde,

In Thrace there ye shall hym yfinde,

And bid hym bryng his clarioun,

That is full divers of his soun,

And it is clepid clere Laude,

With whiche he wout is to heraude

'Hem that me list ipraisid be,

And also bid hym how that he

Bryng eke his othir clarioun,

That hight Sclaundir, in every toun

With whiche he wout is to diffame

'Hem that me list, and doe 'hem shame.

This messengir gan fast to gone

And founde where in a cave of stone

In a countre which that hight Thrace

This Æolus with hardè grace

Yhelde the windis in distresse,

And gan 'hem undir hym to presse,

That thei gone as the Beris rore,

He bounde and pressid 'hem so fore.

This messengir gan fast to crie,

Rife up (qð he) and fast The hie,

Untill thou at my Ladie be,

And take thy clarions eke with The,

And spede The fast; and he anone

Toke to him one that hight Tritone,

His clarions to berin tho,

And let a certain winde ygo,

That blewe so hidously and hie,

That it ne leftè not a skie

In all the Welkin long and brode.

This Æolus no where abode

Till he was come to Fam's fete,

And eke the man that Triton hete;

And there he stode as still as stone,

And here withall there came anone

An othir hugè companie

Of gode folke and began to crie,

Ladie, grauntith us now gode Fame,

And let our workis have that name,

Now in honour of gentilnesse,

And al so God your soule yblesse,

For we han well deservid it,

Therefore is right that we be quit.

As thrive I (qð she) ye shall faile,

Gode workis shall you not availe

To have of me gode Fame as now,

But wote ye what, I grauntin yowe

That ye shall havin a shrewde name,

And wickid loos, and worsè fame,

Though ye gode loos have well deserved,

Now goeth your waie, for ye ben served;

And thou Dan Æolus (qð she)

Take forthe thy trompe anone, let se,

That is iclepid Sclaundir light,

And blowe ther loos, that every wight

Speke of 'hem harme and shreudinesse

In stede of gode and worthinesse,

For thou shalt trompe all the contraire

Of that thei have doen well and faire.

Alas thought I what avintures

Yhavin these sorie cretures,

That thei emongis al the pres

Should thus be shamid giltles!

But what? it must nedis ybe.

What did this Æolus, but he

Toke out his blackè trompe of bras,

That foulir then the Devill was,

And gan this trompe for to blowe,

As all the worlde should ovirthrowe, 559

Throughout every regioun

Ywent this foulè trump'is soun

As swift as pellit out of gonne,

When fire is in the poudir ronne,

And soche a smokè gan out wende

Out of the foulè trump'is ende,

Blacke, blue, and grenishe, swartishe, rede,

As doith where that men melte lede,

Lo! all on hie from the tewell;

And thereto one thyng sawe I well, 569

That ay the ferthir that it ranne,

The gretir wexin it beganne,

As doeth the rivir from a well,

And it stanke as the pitte of hell;

Alas! thus was ther shame iron,

And gitleffe, on every tong.

Tho came the thirde companie,

And gone up to the dees to hie,

And doune on knees thei fell anone,

And saidin, we ben everichone 579

Folke, that yhan full truilie

Deservid fame rightfullie,

And prayin you it might be knowe

Right as it is, and forthe yblowe. 590

I graunte (qð she) for now me list

That your gode workis shall be wist,

And yet ye shall have bettir loos,

Right in dispite of all your foos,

Then worthie is, and that anone;

Let now (qð she) thy trompe gone, 589

Thou Æolus, that is so blacke,

And out thyne othir trompe take,

That hightin Laude, and blowe it so,

That through the worlde ther fame may go 510

All esily, and not to fast,

That it be knowin at the last.

Full gladly, Ladie myne, he saied,

And out his trompe of golde he braied

Anone, and set it to his mouthe,

And blewe it Est, and West, and Southe, 599

And Northe, as loude as any thonder,

That every wight hath of it wonder,

So brode it ran or that it stent,

And certis all the breth that went 520

Out of his trump'is mouthe ysmelde

As men a potte full of baume helde

Emong a basket full of roses,

This favour did he to ther loses.

And right with this I gan espie

There came the fowirth companie, 609

But certaine thei were wondir fewe,

And gonne to standin on a rewe,

And saidin, certis, Ladie bright,

We have doen well with all our might, 530

But we ne kepe to havin fame,

Hidith our workis and our name,

For Godd's love, for certis we

Have surely doen it for bounte,

And for no manir othir thyng.

I grauntin you all your askyng, 619

(Qð she) let your workis be dedde.

With that about I tourned my hedde,

And sawe anone the fivith rout,

That to this Ladie gan to lout, 540

And doune on knees anone to fall,

And to her though besoughtin all,

To hidin ther gode workis eke,

And sayid, thei yeve not a leke

For no fame, ne no soche renoun,
For thei for contemplacioun,
And Godd'is love, had it ywrought,
Ne of fame woldin thei have nought.

What (qð she) and be ye so wode?
And wenin ye for to doe gode,
And for to have of that no fame?
Have ye dispite to have my name?
Naie ye shall lvin everichone,
Blowith thy trumpe, and that anone,
(Qð she) thou Æolus, I hote,
And ring these folkis workes by note,
That all the worlde maie of it here,
And he gan blowe ther loos so clere
Within his goldin clarioun,
That through the worlde ywent the soun
Al so kindly, and eke so soft,
That ther fame was yblowe aloft.

And tho came the sixt companie,
And gonin fast to Fame to crie,
Right verily in this manere;
Thei saidin, mercie, Ladie dere,
To tellin certain as it is,
We have doen neithir that, ne this,
But idill all our life hath be,
But nathelless yet prayin we,
That we maie have as gode a fame,
And grete renome, and knowin name,
As thei that have doe noble jesses,
And have achevid all ther questes,
As well of love, as othir thyng,
All was us nevir broche, ne ryng,
Ne ellis what fro women sent,
Ne onis in ther herte iment,
To maken us onely frendly chere,
But mought ytemin us on bere,
Yet let us to the peple seme
Soche, as the worlde maie of us deme
That women lovin us for wode,
It shall do us as mochil gode,
And to our herte as moche availe,
The countirpeise, etc, and travaile,
As we had wonnin with labour,
For that is dere ybought honour,
At the regard of our grete ese;
And yet ye must us more yplese,
Let us beholdin eke thereto
Worthie, and wise, and gode also,
And riche, and happie unto love,
For Godd'is love, that sitteth above,
Though we maie not the bodie have
Of women, yet, so God me save,
Let men yglewe on us the name,
Suffisith that we have the fame.

I graunt it (qð she) by my trouthe:
Now Æolus, withoutin slouth
Take out thy trumpe of golde (qð she)
And blowe as thei have askid me,
That every man wene 'hem at ese,
Although thei go in full badde lese;
This Æolus gan it so blowe,
That through the worlde it was iknowe.

Tho came the seventh route anone,
And fill on kneis everichone,
And sayid Ladie, graunte us sone,
The fame thyng, the fame bone,
Which that this nexte folke you have done.

Fie on you (qð she) everichone,
Ye nastie swine, ye idle wretches,
Fullfillid of rottin flowe tetches,
What? false thevis, where ye wolde
Ben famid gode, and nothyng n'olde
Deservin why, ne nevir thought,
Men rathir you to hangin ought,

For ye be like the slepie Cat,
620 That would have fishe: but wost thou what?
He woll nothyng wete his clawis,
Evill thrifte come to your jawis,
And on myne, if I you it graunte,
Or doe favour you to avaunte.

Thou Æolus, thou kyng of Thrace,
Go, blowe this folke a forie grace,
(Qð she) anone, and wost thou how?
700 As I shal tellin The right nowe,
Say these ben they that wolde honour
Have, and do no kinde of labour,
630 Ne do no gode, and yet have laude,
And that men wende that belle I faude,
Ne coude 'hem not of love werne,
And yet she that ygrint at querne
Is al to gode to ese ther herte.

This Æolus anone up sterte,
710 And with his blacke clarioun
He gan to blasin out a soun
As loude as bellith winde in hel,
640 And eke therwith the sothe to tel,
This sowne was so ful of japes
As evir mowis were in apes,
And that went al the worlde aboute,
That every wight gan on 'hem shoute,
And for to laugh as they were wode,
Soche game yfoude they in ther hode.

Tho came anothir companie
That hadde ydone the trechery,
The harme and the grete wickidesse,
650 That any herte coudin ygesse,
And prayid her to have gode fame
And that she n'olde do 'hem no shame,
But give 'hem loos and gode renoun,
And do it blowe in clarioun.

Nay wis (qð she) it were a vyce,
730 Al be there in me no justice,
Me lyst not for to do it nowe,
Ne this I ne will graunt it you.

Tho came there lepinge in a route,
660 And gan to clappin al aboute
Every man upon the crowne,
That al the hal began to sowne,
And sayid, lady lese and dere,
We ben soche folkes, as ye may here,
To tellin all the tale aright,
We ben shrewis every wight,
740 And have delite in wickidnesse,
As gode folke havin in godenesse,
And joye to ben yknowin shrewes
670 And ful of vice and wickid thewes,
Wherefore we pray you on a rowe
That our fame be soche yknowe
In al thingis right as it is.

I graunte it you (qð she) ywis,
But what arte thou, that saiest this tale,
That werist on thy hofe a pale,
750 And on thy tippet soche a bel?

Madame (qð he) the sothe to tel,
I am that ilke shrewe ywis,
680 That brent the temple of Ifidis
In Athenis, lo! that cyte.
And wherefore diddest thou so (qð she)?
By my trouthe (answered he) madame,
I wold faine have had a name
As othir folke had in the towne,
Although they were of grete renowne
760 For ther vertue and ther thewis,
Thought I, as grete fame have shrewis
(Though it be nought) for shrewdenesse,
690 As gode folke havin for godenesse,
And sithen I may not have that one,
That othir n'yl I not forgone,

As for to gettin a fame here,
The temple sette I al on fire.

Nowe done our loos be blowin swithe,
As wisly be thou evir blythe.

Gladly (qð she) thou Æolus,
Herist thou not what they prayen us?
Madame I here ful wel (qð he)
And I will trumpin it parde,
And toke his blacke trumpe faste,
And gan to puffin and to blaste,
Tyl it was at the world's ende.

With that I gan aboutin wende,
For one that stode right at my bake
Me thought ful godely to me spake,
And sayid, frende, what is thy name?
Arte thou come hiðir to have fame?

Have Fame! nay for sothe, frende (qð I)

I come nat hithir, grant mercy,
For no soche cause by my hed,
Suffisith me as I were ded,

That no wight have my name in honde,

I wot my selfe best howe I stonde,

For what I drie, or what I thinke,

I wol my selfin al it drinke,

Certainly for the more parte,

As ferforth as I can mine arte.

What doist thou here than (qð he)?

(Qð I) that wol I tellin The,

The causè why I standin here

Is some new tidinges for to lere,

Some newè thing I ne wot what,

Tydingis eythir this or that,

Of love, or of soche thingis glade;

For certainly he that me made

To comin hiðir said to me,

I shuldin bothe yhere and se

In this place many wondir thinges,

But these ne be no soche tidinges

As I yment of: No (qð he?)

And I answerid no parde;

For ful wel I wote evir yet,

Sithinis that firste I had wit,

That some folke han desirid fame

Diversly, and loos and gode name,

But certainly I ne wist how,

Ne where that fame dwellid or nowe,

Ne eke of her discripcion,

Ne also her condicion,

Ne eke the ordir of her dome

Knewe I not till I hithir come.

Why than be lo! these tidinges

Which that thou nowe hethir bringis,

That thou hast herde (qð he) to me,

But nowe no force, for wel I se

What thou desirist for to lere,

Come forth, and stande no lengir here,

And I woll The withoutin drede

In to soche anothir place lede,

There thou shalte herin many one.

Tho gan I forthe with him to gone

Out of the castil sothe to sey.

Tho sawe I stande in a valey

Undir the castil faste by

An house, that domus Dadali,

That Labyrinthus ycleped is,

N'as made so wondirly ywis,

Ne halfe so quently was ywrought,

And evirmo, as swifte as thought,

This queint house aboutin ywent,

That nevirmo it still ystent,

And there came out so gret a noise,

That had it stondin upon Oyse,

Men might have herde it esily

To Rome, I trowin sikirly, 770

780

790

800

810

820

830

840

And the noise whiche that I yherde
For al the worlde right so it terde
As dothe the routing of the stone,
That fro th' engin is letyn gone.

And al this house of whiche I rede,
Was made of twyggis salowe, rede,
And grene eke, and some werin white,
Soche as men to the cagis twwhite,
Or makin of these paniers,
Or ellis hutchis or doffers,
That for the swough and for the twigges
This house was al so full of gigges,
And al so ful eke of chirkinges,

And of many othir wirkinges,
And eke this house hath of entrees
As many' as levis ben on trees
In sommir whan that they ben grene,
And on the rose yet men may sene
A thousande holis, and well mo,
To lettin the sowne out ygo,

And by day in every tyde
Ben al the doris opin wide,
And by night eche one is unshette,

Ne portir is there none to lette
No manir tydinges in to pace,
Ne nevir rest is in that place,
That it n'is filled full of tidinges,
Eythir loude, or of whisperinges,
And evir all the housis angles
Is ful of rowninges and of jangles,

Of werres, of pece, of mariages,
Of restes, of labour, of viages,
Of abode, of dethe, and of lyfe,
Of love, of hate, accorde, of strife,
Of losse, of lore, and of winninges,
Of hele, of sickenesse, or lesinges,
Of faire wethir, and tempestis
Of qualme, of folke, and of bestis,
Of divers transmutacions
Of estates, and of regions,
Of trust, of drede, of jalously,
Of witte, of winning, of foly,
Of plenty, and of grete famine,
Of chepe, of derthe, and of ruine,
Of gode or of misgovernement
Of tyre, and divers accident.

And lo! this house of whiche I write,
Sykir be ye it n'as not lite,
For it was syxtie mile of length,
Al was the tymbir of no strength,
Yet it is foundid to endure
While that it lyste to avinture,
That is the mothir of tidinges,
As the Se of wellis and springes,
And it was shapin lyke a cage.

Certis (qð I) in al mine age
Ne sawe I soche an house as this.
And as I wondrid me ywis
Upon this house, tho ware was I
How that myne Egle faste by
Was perchid hye upon a stone,
And I gan streight to him to gone,
And sayid Him thus, I pray The
That thou a while abidin me
For Godd'is love, and let me sene
What wondirs in that place ybene,
For yet parauntir I may lere
Some gode therin, or somwhat here,
That lese me were, or that I went.

Peter, that is nowe myne entent,
(Qð he to me) therfore I dwel,
But certaine one thinge I The tel,
That but I bringin The therin,
Ne shal thou nevir conne the gin

850

860

870

880

890

900

910

To

To come in to it, out of doute,
 So faste it whirlith lo! aboute;
 But sithe that Jov'is of his grace,
 As I have said wil The solace
 Finally with these ilke thinges,
 These uncourthe sightis and tidinges,
 To passe away thine hevinesse,
 Soche routhe hath he of thy distresse,
 That thou suffrest debonairly,
 And woste thy selvin uttirly
 Wholy desperate of al blisse,
 Sithe that fortune hath made amisse
 The fote of al thine hert'is rest
 Languishe, and eke in pointe to brest,
 But he through his mightie melite
 Wil do The ese, al be it lite,
 And gave in expresse commaundement,
 To whiche I am obedient,
 To forthir The with al my myght,
 And wishe and techin The aright,
 Where thou maiste moste tidings here,
 Thou shalte here many one ylere.
 And with this worde he right anone
 Yhent me up bytwene his tone,
 And at a windowe in me brought,
 That in this house was, as me thought,
 And therewithal me thought it stent,
 And nothings it aboutin wente,
 And me set in the flore adoun;
 But soche grete congregacioun
 Of folke, as I sawe rome about,
 Some it within, and some without,
 N'as nevir sene, ne shal be este,
 That certis in this worlde n'is leste
 So many formid by nature,
 Ne ded so many a cature,
 That wel unnethis in that place
 Had I a fot'is brede of space,
 And every wight that I sawe there
 Rownid everiche in othir's ere
 A newe tidinge privily,
 Or els he tolde it opynly,
 Right thus, and said; Ne wost nat thou
 That is betiddin, lo! right nowe?
 No certis (qð he) tel me what;
 And than he tolde him this and that,
 And swore therto, that it was sothe,
 Thus hath he said, and thus he dothe,
 And this shal be, and thus herde I say,
 That shal be founde, that dare I lay,
 That al the folke that is on lyve
 Ne have the konninge to discrive
 Tho thingis that I herdin there,
 What aloude, and what in the ere,
 But al the wondir moste was this,
 Whan one had herde a thinge ywis,
 He came streight to anothir wight,
 And gan him tellin anone right
 The same tale that to him was tolde
 Or it a forlonge way was olde,
 And began somewhat for to eche
 Unto this tidinge in his speche
 More than evir it spokin was,
 And nat so sone departid n'as
 Tho fro him, that he ne ymette
 With the thirde man, and er he lette
 Any stounde, he ytolde him alse,
 Werin the tidinges sothe or false,
 Yet wolde he tel it natheles,
 And evirmore with mo encre
 Than it was erst: thus northe and southe
 Went every tidinge, fro mouth to mouthe,
 And that encrefinge evirmo,
 As fire is wont to quicken and go,

From a sparcle sprongin amis,
 Tyl al a cite brent up is. 990
 And whan that that was ful up spronge,
 And waxin more on every tonge
 Than er it was, and went anone
 920 Up to a windowe out to gone,
 Or but it might out there ypassse,
 It gan out crepe at some crevasse,
 And flewe forthe faste for the nones.
 And somtyme I sawe there at ones
 A lesinge, and a sadde sothesawe,
 That gonnin of avinture drawe 1000
 Out at a windowe for to pace,
 And whan thei mettin in that place,
 They were acheckid bothè two,
 930 And neithir of 'hem myght out go,
 For eche othir they gonne so croude,
 Tyl eche of 'hem gan cryin loude
 Let me gone first, nay but let me,
 And here I wol ensurin The
 With vowis that thou wolt do so,
 That I shal nevir fro The go, 1010
 But be alway thin owne sworne brother,
 We wol meddle us eche in other,
 That no man be he ner so wrothe
 940 Shal have one of us two, but bothe
 At onis, as beside his leve,
 Come we amorowe or on eve,
 Be we ycryde or styl yrowned;
 Thus sawe I false and sothe compowned
 Togiðir flye for o tidinge;
 Thus out at holis gonne to wringe 1020
 Every tidinge streight to Fame,
 And she gan yevin eche his name
 Aftir her disposicion,
 950 And yeve 'hem eke duracion,
 Some to wexin and wanin sone,
 As dothe the faire and white mone,
 And let him gonne, there might I sein
 Wingid wondirs full fast flyin
 Twenty thousande all in a route,
 As Æolus 'hem blewe aboute, 1030
 And lorde! this house in allè times
 Was ful of shypmen and pilgrimes,
 With scrippis bretteful of lesinges,
 Entermedilid with tidinges,
 And eke alonè by 'hem selve
 A many thousande tymis twelve
 Sawe I eke of these pardoners,
 Currours, and eke of meffaungers,
 With boxis crommid ful of lyes,
 As evir vessil was with lies. 1040
 And as I althirfastist went
 Aboute, and dyd al myne entent
 Me for to playen and for to lere,
 970 And eke a tidinge for to here,
 That I had herde of some countre,
 That shal not nowe be tolde for me,
 For it no nede is, redyly
 Folke can ysinge it bet than I,
 For al mote but or late or rathe
 Alle the shevis in the fathe. 1050
 I herdin a grete noise withall
 Within a cornir of the hal,
 There men of love tydingis tolde,
 980 And I gan thiðirwarde beholde,
 For I sawe renninge every wight
 As faste as that they haddin might,
 And everyche cride, what thinge is that?
 And some said I n'ot nevir what,
 And whan they were al on an hepe,
 Tho thei behinde gonnin up lepe, 1060
 And clambin up on othir faste,
 And up the noise on hyghin caste,
 And

And tredin fast on othir's heles,
And stampe, as men done aftir eles.
But at the laste I sawe a man,
Whiche that I nought discrive ne can,
But he yfemid for to be
A man of grete auctorite.
And therewithal I'anon abraide
Out of my slepe halfe afraide,
Remembring wel what I had sene,

And howe hye and ferre I had bene,
In my gost, and had grete wonder
Of that the mighty god of thonder
Had let me knowen, and gan to write
Lyke as ye have herde me endite,
Wherfore to study' and rede alway
I purpose to do day by day.
1670 And thus in dreminge and in game
Endith this litil Boke of Fame.

1680

Here endeth the Boke of Fame.

The Flooure and the Leafe, written by GEEFFERY CHAUCER.

The Argument.

A Gentlewoman, out of an Arbour, in a Grove, seeth a great Company of Knights and Ladies in a Dance upon the green Grasse. The which being ended, they all kneel down, and do honour to the Daisie, some to the Flower, and some to the Leaf. Afterward this Gentlewoman learneth by one of these Ladies the meaning hereof, which is this: They which honour the Flower, a thing fading with every Blast, are such as look after Beauty, and worldly Pleasure: But they that honour the Leaf, which abideth with the Root, notwithstanding the Frosts and Winter Storms, are they which follow Virtue and during qualities, without regard of worldly Respects.

When that Phœbus his chair of gold so hie
Had whirlid up the sterrie Sky aloft,
And in the Bole was entrid certainly,
When shouris fote of rain descendid soft,
Causing the ground, felè timis and oft,
Up for to give many an wholesome air,
And every plain was yclothid faire.

With newè grene, and makith smale flours
To springin here and there in field and mede,
So very gode and wholesome be the shours, 10
That they renewin that was old and dede,
In wintir time, and out of every fede
Springith the herbè, so that every wight
Of this feson wexith richt glad and light.

And I so gladdè of the feson swete,
Was happid thus, upon a certain night,
As I lay in my bed, slepe full unmete
Was unto me; but why that I ne might Rest, I ne wist, for there n'as erthly wight 20
[As I suppose] had more of hertis ele,
Than I, for I n'ad sicknesse nor disese.

Wherfore I mervaile gretly of my self,
That I so long withoutin slepe lay,
And up I rose thre houris aftir twelfe,
About the springing of the gladfome day,
And on I put my gear, and mine aray;
And to a plefant grove I gan to pas,
Long or the bright Sonnè uprisin was.

In which were okis grete, streight as a line,
Undir the which the grasse so freshe of hew 30
Was newly sprong, and an eight fote or nine
Every tre well fro his fellow grew,

With brannchis brode, ladin with levis new,
That sprongin out agen the Sonnè shene,
Some very rede; and some a glad light grene.

Which [as me thought] was a right plefant sight,
And eke the birdis songis for to here,
Would have rejoisid any erthly wight;
And I, that couth not yet in no manere 40
Herin the Nightingale of all the yere,
Full busily herk'nid with hert and ere
If I her voice perceve could any where.

And at the last a path of litil brede
I found; that gretly had not usid be,
For it forgrowin was with grasse and wede,
That well unnethis a wight might it se,
Thought I, this path some whiðir goth parde!
And so I followid; till it me brought
To a right plefant herbir wel ywrought,

Which that benchid was; and with turfis new 50
Freshly turnid, whereof the grene grasse
So small, so thick, so short, so fressh of hew,
That most like to grene woll wot I it was:
The hegge also, that yedin in compas,
And closid in allè the grene herbere,
With Sycamor was set and Eglatere;

Within in fere so well and cunningly,
That every braunch and lefe grew by mesure
Plain as a bord, of an height by and by,
I se never a thing [I you ensure] 60
So well ydone; for he that toke the cure
It for to make [I trowe] did all his peine
To make it pass all tho that men have seine.

6 E

And

And shapin was this herbir rofe and all,
 As is a pretty parlour; and also
 The hegge as thick as is a Castil wall,
 That who that list without to stond or go,
 Thogh he wold all day pryin to and fro,
 He should not se if there were any wight
 Within, or no; but one within well might, 70

Perceve all tho, that yedin there without
 Into the field, that was on every side
 Cover'd with corn and grafs, that out of doubt
 Tho one would sekin all the worlde wide,
 So rich a felde could not be espyde
 Upon no cost, as of the quantity:
 For of aliè gode thing there was plenty.

And I, that all these plesant sightis se,
 Thought suddainly I felt so swete an air
 Of the Eglentere, that certainly 80
 There is no hert [I deme] in such dispair
 Ne yet with thoughtis froward and contraire
 So overlaid, but it should sone have bote,
 If it had onis felt this favour fore.

And as I stode, and cast aside mine eye
 I was ware of the fairist medler tre,
 That evir yet in all my life I se,
 As full of blossomis as it might be;
 Therein a Goldfinch leping pretily
 From bough to bough, and as him list, he ete 90
 Here and there of buddis and flouris swete.

And to the herbir side was adjoyning
 This fairist tre, of which I have you told,
 And at the last the bird began to sing,
 [Whan he had etin what he etin wold]
 So passing swetely that by many fold
 It was more plesant than I couth devise,
 And whan his song was endid in this wise,

The Nightingale with so mery a note
 Answerid him, that alle the wode yrong 100
 So sodainly, that as it were a sote
 I stode astonied, and was with the song
 Thorow ravishid, that till late and long
 I ne wist in what place I was, ne where,
 Ayen, methought, she song e'en by mine ere.

Wherefore I waitid about busily
 On every side if I her might se,
 And at the last I gan full well aspy
 Where she fate in a fresh grene laury tre,
 On the furthir side evin right by me, 110
 That gave so passing a delicious smell,
 According to the Eglantere full well.

Whereof I had so inly grete plesure,
 As methought I surely ravishid was,
 Into Paradise, wherein my desire
 Was for to be, and no ferthir to pas,
 As for that day, and on the sote grafs
 I sat me down; for as for mine entent;
 The birdis song was more convenient,

And more plesant to me by many fold, 120
 Than mete, or drink, or any othir thing,
 Thereto the herbir was so fresh and cold,
 The wholsome savours eke so comforting,
 That [as I demid] sith the beginning
 Of the worlde was never seen er than
 So plesant a ground of none erthly man.

And as I sat the birdis herkening thus,
 Methought that I herd voicis suddainly,

The most swetist, and most delicious,
 That evir any wight, I trow trewly, 130
 Herdin in ther life, for the armony
 And swete accord was in so gode musike
 That the voicis to Angels most were like.

At the last out of a grove evin by
 [That was right godely and plesant to sight]
 I se where there came singng lustily
 A world of Ladies, but to tell aright
 Ther beaury grete, lyith not in my might,
 Ne ther array; nevirthelès I shall
 Tell you a part, tho' I speke not of all. 140

The Surcots white of velvet well fitting
 They werin clad, and the femis eche one,
 As it werin a mannir garnishing,
 Was set with Emeraudis one and one
 By and by, but many a richè Stone
 Was set on the purflis out of dout
 Of Collours, Sieves, and trainis round about;

As of grete perlis round and orient,
 And Diamondis fine and rubys red, 150
 And many othir ston of which I went
 The namis now; and everich on her hede
 A rich fret of gold, which withourin drede
 Was full of stately rich stonys set,
 And every lady had a Chapelet

On ther hedis of braunchis fresh and grene,
 So wele ywrought, and so marvelously,
 That it was a right noble sight to sene;
 Some of Laurir, and some full plesantly
 Had Chapelets of wodebind, and sadly 160
 Some of Agnus Castus werin also,
 Chapelets fresh, but there were many of tho,

That dauncid and eke song full sobirly,
 But all they yede in maner of compae;
 But one there yede in mid the company,
 Sole by her self; but all follow'd the pace
 That she kept, whose hevynly figured face
 So plesant was, and her wele shape person,
 That of beauty she past them everichone.

And more richly beseen by manyfold
 She was also in every manir thing, 170
 Upon her hede full plesant to behold
 A Coron of gold rich for any King,
 A braunch of Agnus Castus eke bering
 In her hand, and to my sight trewly
 She Lady was of all the company.

And she began a roundell lustily
 That Sus le foyle de vert moy men call,
Sine & mon joly cœur est endormy,
 And than the Company answerid all
 With voicis swete entunid, and so small 180
 That methought it the swetist melody
 That evir I herd in my life sothly.

And thus they all came dauncing and singng,
 Into the middis of the Mede echone
 Before the herbir where I was sitting,
 And God wot I thought I was well bigone,
 For than I might avise them one by one,
 Who fairist was, who best could dance, or sing,
 Or who most womanly was in all thing.

They had not dauncid but a little throw 190
 When that I herd not fer of sodainly,
 So grete a noise of thundering trumpis blow,
 As though it should have departid the Skie,
 And

And aftir that within a while I fe,
From the same grove, where the Ladies came out,
Of Men of Armis coming fuch a rout;

As all men on erth had ben assemblid
On that place well horrid for the nonis,
Stering fo fast, that all the erth tremblid;
But for to speke of richis and stonis, 200
And men and horfe, I trow the large wonis
Of Pretir John, ne all his Trefory
Might not unneeth have bought the tenth party,

Of their array; whofo list to here more,
I fhall reherfe, fo as I can, a lite.
Out of the Grove, that I speke of before,
I fe come first all in their Clokis white
A company, that wore for ther delite
Chapelets fresh of okis ferial
But newly sprong; and trumpets were they all.

On every trump hanging a brode bannere
Of fine Tartarium full richly bete,
Every trumpet his Lord's armis bere,
About there neckis with grete perlis fete
Collaris brode, for cost they wou'd not lete,
As it would seem for ther scochons echone
Were fet about with many a precious stone.

Ther horfis harneis was all white also;
And aftir them next in one company
Camin Kingis at armis and no mo, 220
In clokis of white cloth with gold richly,
Chaplets of grene on their heds on hye,
The Crownis that they, on their Scotchons, bere,
Were fet with perl, and ruby, and faphere,

And eke grete Diamondis many one;
But all ther horfe harneis and other gere,
Was in a fute according everichone,
As ye have herd the forsaide trumpets were,
And by seming they were nothing to lere,
And ther guiding they did fo manirly; 230
And aftir them came a grete company

Of Heraudis and Purfevauntis eke,
Arrayid in clothis of white velvet,
And hardily they were nothing to feke,
How they on them shouldin the harneis fet,
And every man had on a chapelet,
Scotchonis and eke horfe harneis in dede
They had in fute of them that fore them yede.

Next after these appere in armour bright,
All save their hedis, semely knightis nine, 240
And every clasp and nail, as to my sight,
Of ther harneis were of red gold so fine;
With cloth of gold, and furrid with ermine
Were the tappouris of ther stedis strong,
Both wide and large, that to the ground did hong.

And every bos of bridle and paitrel,
That they had on, was worth, as I would wene,
A thousand pound, and on ther hedis well
Dressid were crounis of the laurir grene,
The best ymade that evir I had fene; 250
And every knight had aftir him riding
Thre henchmen still upon him awaiting;

Of which every (first) on a short trunchon
His lord's helmet bore so richly dight
That the worst of them was worth the ransoun
Of any King; the second a shield bright
Bare at his back; the thred barin upright
A mighty spere, full sharp yground and kene,

And every child ware of levis grene

A fresh chaplet upon his hairis bright; 260
And clokis white of fine velvet they were,
Ther stedis trappid and arayid right,
Without difference as ther lordis were,
And aftir them on many a fresh Courfere,
There came of armid knightis fuch a rout;
That they besprad the large field about.

And all they werin, aftir ther degrees,
Chappèlets new, or made of laurir grene,
Or some of oke, or some of othir trees,
Some in ther hondis barin boughis fhene, 270
Some of laurir, and some of okis bene,
Some of hawthorne, and some of the wodebind,
And many mo, which I have not in mind.

And so they came ther horfe freshly stirring
With bloudy fownis of ther trompis loud,
There se I many an uncouth disguising
In the array of thilkè knightis proud;
And at the last, as evenly as they coud,
They toke ther place, in middis of the mede,
And every knight turnid his horfis hede 280

To his felow, and lightly laid a spere
Into the rest, and so justis began
On every part aboutin here and there,
Some brake his spere, some drew down horfe and man,
About the felde astray the stedis ran.
And to behold their rule and govirnaunce,
I you ensure, it was a grete plesaunce.

And so the justis last an hour and more,
But tho, that crownid were in laurir grene,
Did win the prife; their dintis were so fore, 290
That there was none agenst them might sustene,
And the justing allè was left off clene:
And fro ther horfe the nine alight anon,
And so did all the remnaunt everichone.

And forth they yede togiðir, twain and twain,
That to behold it was a worthy sight,
Toward the Ladies on the grene plain,
That song and dauncid, as I said now right;
The ladies, as sone as they godely might,
They brakin off both the long and the daunce,
And yede to mete them with full glad semblaunce

And every lady toke full womanly
By the hond a knight, and so forth they yede
Unto a faire laurir, that stode fast by,
With levis laid the boughis of grete brede,
And to my dome ther nevir was indede
A man, that had sene half so faire a tre,
For undirneeth it there might well have be

An hundrid persons, at ther own plesaunce,
Shadowid fro the hete of Phoebus bright, 310
So that they shouldin have felt no grevaunce
Neithir for rain, ne haile, that them hurt might:
The Saviour eke rejoice would any wight,
That had be sick, or melancholious,
It was so very gode and vertuous.

And with grete rev'rence they enclinid low,
Unto the tre, so sote and fair of hew;
And aftir that, within a litil throw,
They all began to sing, and daunce of new;
Some song of love, some plaining of untrew, 320
Environing the tre, that stode upright,
And evir yede a lady and a knight.

And

And at the last, I cast mine eie aside,
 And was ware of a lusty Company,
 That came roming out of the feldè wide;
 And hond in hond a knight and a lady;
 The ladies all in Surcotes, that richly
 Purfilid were with many a rich stone,
 And every knight of grene ware mantlis on,

Embroudid wele, so as the Surcots were, 330
 And everich had a Chapelet on her hed,
 [Which did right wele upon the shining here]
 Makid of godely flouris, white and red,
 The knightiseke, that they in hondè led,
 In fute of them ware chaplets everichone,
 And before them went Minstrels many one:

As harpis, pipis, lutas, and fautory,
 Alle in grene, and on ther hedis bare
 Of diverse flouris made full craftily 340
 All in a fute, godely chaplets they were;
 And so dauncing into the Mede they fare.
 In mid the which they found a tuft that was
 All ovirsprad with flouris in compas.

Where to they enclinid everichone,
 With grete reverence, and that full humbly,
 And at the last there tho began anon
 A Lady for to sing right womanly
 A Bargaret in praising the daisie.
 For (as methought) among her notis swete,
 She said Si douce est la margarete. 350

Then they allè answerid her in fere,
 So passingly well, and so plesauntly,
 That it was a most blisfull noise to here,
 But I n'ot how it happid sodainly,
 As about None the Sonn so fervently
 Waxe hotè, that the pretty tendir floures
 Had lost the beauty of their fresh collours.

Forshronke with hete the Ladies eke to brent,
 That they ne wist where they them might bestow,
 The knightis swelt for lack of shade nie shent, 360
 And aftir that within a litil throw
 The wind began so sturdily to blow,
 That down goth all the floures everichone
 So that in all the Mede there laft not one;

Save such as succoured were among the leves
 Fro every Storme that mightè them assaile,
 Growing undir the heggis, and thick greves;
 And aftir that there came a storme of haile
 And rain in fere, so that withoutin faile
 The ladies ne the knightis n'ade o'thred 370
 Dry on them, so dropping wet was ther wede.

And when the storme was clene passid away,
 Tho in the white, that stode undir the tre,
 They felt nothing of all the grete affray,
 That they in grene without had in ybe;
 To them they yede for routh, and for pite,
 Them to comfort aftir their grete difese,
 So fain they were the helpelesse for to ese.

Than I was ware how one of them in grene
 Had on a Coron rich, and well-fitting; 380
 Wherefore I demid well she was a quene,
 And tho in grene on her were awaiting;
 The ladies then in white, that were coming
 Towardis them, and the knightis in fere
 Began to comfort them, and make them chere.

The quene in white, that was of grete beauty
 Toke by the honde the quene that was in grene,

And seidè, Sustir, I have grete pity
 Of your annoy, and of your troublous tene,
 Wherein ye, and your company have bene 390
 So long alas! and if that it you plesè
 To go with me, I shall do you the ese

In all the plesure that I can or may;
 Whereof that othir, humbly as she might,
 Thankid her, for in right evil array
 She was, with storme and hete I you behight;
 And every lady then anon right,
 That were in white, one of them toke in grene
 By the hond, which when the knightis had sene,

In like manir eche of them toke a knight.
 Clad in the grene, and forth with them they fare
 To an hegge, where that they anon right,
 To makin these justis they would not spare
 Boughis to hew down, and eke trees to square,
 Wherewith they made them stately firis grete,
 To dry ther clothis, that were wringing were.

And aftir that of herbis that there grew
 They made for blistirs of the Sonne brenning,
 Ointmentis very gode, wholsome, and new,
 Where that they yede the sick fast anointing; 410
 And aftir that they yede about gaðring
 Plesant Saladis, which they made them ete,
 For to refreshe ther grete unkindly hete.

The lady of the lefe then gan to pray
 Her of the floure [for so to my seming
 They should be callid as by ther array]
 To soupe with her, and eke for any thing
 That she should with her all her pepill bringe
 And she ayen in right godely manere
 Thankith her fast of her most frendly chere; 420

Saying plainely, that she would obay
 With all her hert all her commandement:
 And then anon without lengir delay
 The lady of the lefe hath one ysent
 To bring a palfray aftir her intent
 Arrayid wele in fair harnois of gold,
 For nothing lackid that to him long shold.

And aftir that to all her company
 She made to purvey horse and every thing 430
 That they nedid, and then full hastily
 Even by the herbir where I was siting
 They passid all, so merrily singing,
 That it would have comfortid any wight.
 But then I se a passing wondir sight,

For then the Nightingale, that all the day
 Had in the laurir sete, and did her might
 The whole service to sing longing to May,
 All sodainly began to take her flight,
 And to the Lady of the lefe forthright
 She flew, and set her on her hand softly, 440
 Which was a thing I mervail'd at gretly.

The Goldfinch eke, that fro the Medlar tre
 Was fled for hete unto the bushis cold,
 Unto the lady of the floure gan fle,
 And on her hond he set him, as he wold
 And plesauntly his wingis gan to fold,
 And for to sing they peine them both as fore,
 As they had do of all the day before.

And so these Ladies rode forth a grete pace,
 And all the rout of knightis eke in fere, 450
 And I that had sene all this wondir case
 Thought that I would assay in some manere,
 To

To know fully the trouth of this mattere;
And what they were that rode so plesantly;
And when they were the herbir passid by,

I drest me forth, and happid mete anon,
A right fair lady I do you ensure,
And she came riding by her self alone,
Allè in white, with semblaunce full demure,
I her salued, bad her gode avinture 460
Mote her befall, as I couð most humbly,
And she answered, my doughtir, gramercy.

Madame, quoth I, if that I durst enquire
Of you, I wold fain, of that company,
Wit, what they be, that passed by this harbere?
And she ayen answerid right frendly;
My doughtir, all tho that passid hereby
In white clothing, be servants everichone
Unto the lefe, and I my self am one.

Se ye not her, that crownid is, (qð she) 470
Allè in white? Madame, then qð I, yes.
That is Dian, Goddess of chastity,
And for bicause that she a Maidin is,
Into her hond the branch she berith this,
That Agnus Castus men call propirly;
And all the Ladies in her company

Which ye se, of that herbè Chaplets were,
Be such, as han alwey kept maidinhede:
And all they, that of laurir chaplets bere,
Be such as hardy were in manly dede 480
Victorious, name which nevir may be dede,
And all they were so worthy of ther honde,
In their time that no one, might them withstonde.

And tho that were chapèlets on ther hede
Of fresh wodebind, be such as nevir were
To love untrue in word, in thought, ne dede,
But ay stedfast, ne for plesance, ne fere,
Tho that they shulde ther hertis all to tere,
Woud never flit, but evir were stedfast,
Till that ther livis there assundir brast. 490

Now fair Madam, qð I, yet woud I pray
Your Ladiship [if that it mightin be]
That I might knowe by some manir of wey,
Sithin that it hath likid your beaute
The trouth of these ladies for to tell me,
What that these Knightis be in rich armour,
And what tho be in grene, and were the flour?

And why that some did rev'rence to the tre,
And some unto the plot of flouris fair?
With right gode will, my doughtir fair, qð she, 500
Sith your desire is gode and debonaire,
Tho nine crownid be very exempleaire
Of all honour longing to chivalry,
And those certain be clept the Nine Worthy,

Which that ye may se riding all before,
That in ther time did many' a noble dede,
And for ther worthines full oft have bore
The crown of laurir levis on ther hede,
As ye may in your oldè bokis rede:
And how that he, that was a conqueror, 510
Had by laurir alwey his most honour.

And tho, that barin bowis in ther hond
Of the precious laurir so notable,
Be such as were [I woll ye undirstond]
Most noble Knightis of the round table,
And eke the douseperis honourable,

Which they bere in the sign of victory,
As witness of ther dedis mightily.

Eke there be Knightis old of the Gartir,
That in ther timis did right worthily, 520
And the honour they did to the laurir,
Is for by it they have ther laud wholly,
Ther triumph eke, and martial glory,
Which unto them is more perfite riches
Than any wight imagin can or gessle.

For one lefe givin of that noble tre
To any wight, that hath done worthily,
[An it be done, so as it ought to be]
Is more honour than any thing erthly;
Witness of Rome that foundir was truly 530
Of all Knighthode, and dedis marvelous,
Record I take of Titus Livius.

And as for her, that crounid is in grene,
It is Flora, of these flouris Goddesse,
And all that here on her awaiting bene,
It are such folk that lovid idlenesse,
And not delite in no kind besinesse,
But for to hunt, and hawke, and pley in medes,
And many othir such like idle dedes.

And for the grete delite and the plesance 540
They have to the flour, and so reverently
They unto it doin such obeisaunce,
As ye may se, now fair madame, qð I,
[If I durst ask] what is the cause, and why,
That Knightis have the ensigne of honour,
Rathir by the lefe than by the flour?

Sothly, doughtir, qð she, this is the trouth,
For knightes evir shoud be persevering
To seke honour, without feintise, or slouth;
Fro wele to bettir in all manir thing, 550
In sign of which, with levis ay lasting,
They be rewardid aftir ther degre,
Whose lusty grene may not appairid be,

But ay keping ther beauty fresh and grene,
For ther n'is no storme, that may them deface,
Ne hail nor snowe, ne wind, nor frostis kene,
Wherfore they have this propriety and grace.
And for the flour, within a litil space,
Wollin be lost, so simple of nature
They be, that they no grevaunce may endure. 560

And every storme woll blowe them fone away,
Ne they laste not but for a selson,
That is the cause [the very trouth to say]
That they may not by no way of reson,
Be put to no such occupacion.
Madame, qð I, with all mine whole servise
I thank you now in my most humble wise.

For now I am ascertain'd thoroughly
Of every thing I desirid to knowe.
I am right glad that I have said, sothly, 570
Ought to your plesure, (if ye will me trow)
Quoð she ayen, but to whom do ye owe
Your service? and which wollin ye honour
[Pray tell me] this year? The lefe or the flour?

Madam, qð I, although I left worthy,
Unto the lefe I ow mine observaunce;
That is, qð she, right well done certainly,
And I pray God to honour you advaunce,
And kepe you fro the wickid remembraunce
Of Malèbouch, and all his crueltie, 580
And all that gode and well-condition'd be.

For here I may no lengir now abide;
 But I must follow the grete company;
 That ye may se yondir before you ride;
 And forthwith as I couth most humily
 I toke my leve of her, and she gan hie
 Aftir them as fast as evir she might:
 And I drow homeward for it was nigh night.

And put all that I had sene in writing
 Undir support of them that lust it rede. 590
 O little boke! thou art so unconning,
 How darst thou put thy self in prees for drede?
 It is wondir that thou wexist not rede!
 Sith that thou wost full lite, who shall behold
 Thy rude langage full boytously unfold.

F I N I S.

The PROLOGUE of the Testament of Love.

MAny men there ben, that with eres openly sprad so moche swalowen the deliciouf-nesse of jestes and of ryme, by queint knittinge coloures, that of the godenesse or of the badnesse of the sentence take they litel hede or els none.

Sothelye dulle witte and a thoughtfull soule so fore have mined and grafted in my spirites, that soche craft of enditinge woll nat ben of mine acquaintaunce.
 And for rude wordes and boistous percen the herte
 of the herer to the inrest point, and planten there the sentence of thinges, so that with litel helpe it is able to spring, this boke, that nothyng hath of the grete flode of wytte, ne of semelyche colours, is dolven with rude wordes and boistous, and so drawe togiðer to maken the catchers therof ben the more redy to hent sentence.

Some men there ben, that painten with colours riche and some with wers, as with red inke, and some with coles and chalke: And yet is there gode matter to the leude peple of thylke chalkye purtreyture, as hem thinketh for the time, and afterward the syght of the better colours yeven to hem more joye for the first leudenesse. So sothly this leude cloudy occupacyon is not to prayse, but by the leude, for comenly leude leudenesse commendeth.
 Eke it shal yeve sight that other precyous thynges shall be the more in reverence. In latin and french hath many souveraine wittes had grete delyte to en-dite, and have many noble thinges fulfild, but cer-tes there ben some that speken ther poysye mater in Frenche, of whiche speche the Frenche men have as gode a fantasye as we have in heryng of Frenche mens Englishe. And many termes there ben in Engylishe, whiche unneth we Englishe men connen declare the knowleginge: Howe should than a Frenche man borne? soche termes connejumpere in his matter, but as the Jay chatereth Englishe. Right so true-ly the understandyn of Englishmen woll not stretche to the privie termes in Frenche, what so ever we bosten of straunge langage. Let than clerkes endi-ten in latin, for they have the propertie of science, and the knowinge in that facultie: and lette Frenche
 men in ther Frenche also enditen ther queinte termes, for it is kyndely to ther mouthes, and let us shewe our fantasies in soche wordes as we lerneden of our dame's tonge. And although this boke be lytel thank worthy for the leudnesse in travaile, yet soch writing exiten men to thilke thinges that ben neces-sarie: for every man therby may as by a perpetual myrrour sene the vices or vertues of other, in whyche thyng lightly may be conceived to eschue perils, and necessities to catch, after as adventures have fallen to to other peple or persons.

Certes the souverainst thinge of desire and most creature resonable, have or els shuld have full appetite to ther perfeccyon: unresonable bestes mowen not, sithe reson hath in hem no workinge: Than resona-
 ble that wol not, is comparisoned to unresonable, and made lyke hem. Forsothe the most souveraine and finall perfeccion of man is in knowynge of a sothe, withouten any entent decevable, and in love of one very God, that is inchaungeable, that is to knowe, and love his creator.

Nowe principally the mene to bryng in knowleging and lovyng his creatour, is the consideracyon of thynges made by the creatour, wher through by thylke thinges that ben made, understandynge here to our wyttes, arne the unsene pryvities of God made to us syghtfull and knowinge, in our contem-placion and understandinge. These thinges than forsoth moche bringen us to the ful knowleginge sothe, and to the parfytte love of the maker of hevenly thynges. Lo! David saith: thou haste delited me in makinge, as who saith, to have delite in the tune how God hat lent me in consideracion of thy makinge. Wherof Aristotle in the boke de Animalibus, saith to naturell Philosophers: it is a grete likynge in love of knowinge ther creature: and also in know-inge of causes in kindelye thynges, confidrid forsothe
 the formes of kindelye thinges and the shap, a gret kyndely love we shulde have to the werkman that hem made. The crafte of a werkman is shewed in the werk. Herefore trulie the philosophers with a lyvely studie manie noble thinges, righte precyous, and worthy to memorye, writen, and by a gret swet and travaille to us lesten of causes the properties in natures of thinges, to whiche therfore Philosophers it was more joy, more lykinge, more herty lust in kindlye vertues and matters of reson the perfeccion by busy study to knowe, than to have had all the tresour, al the richesse, al the vaine glory, that the passed Emperours, Princes, or Kinges hadden. Therfore the names of hem in the boke of perpetuall memorie in vertue and pece arne writen; and in the contrarie, that is to saine, in Styxe the foule pitte of helle arne thilke pressed that soch godenes hated.
 And bicause this boke shall be of love, and the prime causes of stering in that doinge with passions and disseses for wantinge of desire, I wil that this boke be cleped the Testament of Love.

But nowe thou rede, who is thilke that will not in scorne laughe, to here a dwarfe or els halfe a man, say he wil rende out the swerde of Hercules handes, and also he shulde set Hercules Gades a mile yet ferther, and over that he had power of strength to pull up the spere, that Alifander the noble might never wagge, and that passinge al thinge to ben mayster

ster of Fraunce by might, there as the noble gracious Edward the thirde for al his grete prowesse in victories ne might al yet conquere?

Certes I wote well, ther shall be made more scorn and jape of me, that I so unworthely clothed altogether in the cloudie cloude of unconning, wil putten me in ptees to speke of love, or els of the causes in that matter, sithen al the grettest clerkes han had ynough to don, and as who saith gathered up clene toforne hem, and with ther sharp sithes of conning al mowen and made therof grete rekes and noble, ful of al plenties to fede me and many another. Envy forsothe commendeth noughte his reson, that he hath in hain, be it never so trusty. And although these noble repers, as gode workmen and worthy ther hier, han al draw and bounde up in the sheves, and made many shokes, yet have I ensample to gader the smale crommes, and fullin my walet of tho that fallen from the bourde among the smale houndes, notwithstanding the travaile of the almoigner, that hath draw up in the cloth al the remissalles, as trenchours, and the relese to bere to the almesse. Yet also have I leve of the noble husbnde Boece, although I be a straunger of conning to come after his doctrine, and these grete workmen, and glene my handfuls of the shedyng after ther handes, and yf me faile ought of my ful, to encrese my porcion with that I shal drawe by privyties out of shokes; a flye servaunte in his owne helpe is often moche commended; knowynge of trouthe in causes of thynges, was more hardier in the firste sechers, and so sayth Aristotle, and lighter in us that han folowed after. For ther passing study han frefhed our wittes, and our understandynge han excited in consideracion of trouthe by sharpenes of ther resons. Utterly these thynges be no dremes ne japes, to throwe to hogges, it is lyfelych mete for children of trouthe, and as they me betiden whan I pilgramed out of my kith in wintere, whan the wether out of mesure was boistous, and the wyld wynd Boreas, as his kind asketh, with dryng coldes maked the waves of the ocean Se so to arise unkindely over the commune bankes that it was in point to spill all the erthe.

Thus endeth the PROLOGUE.

Hereafter foloweth the first Boke of the Testament of Love.

This Book is an Imitation of BOECIUS de Consolatione Philosophie.

- I. In the first Part whereof, Love by way of Legacy bequeaths to all them that follow her Instructions, the knowledge of Truth from Error, whereby they may rightly judge of the Causes of crosse Fortune, and such Adversities as befall them, whether in their suits of Love, or otherwise, and so in the end obtain their wish'd Desires.
- II. In the second Part she teacheth the Knowledge of one very God our Creator, as also the State of Grace, and the State of Glory; all which good things are figur'd by a Margarite Pearl.

CHAUCER compil'd this Book as a Comfort to himself after great Griefs conceiv'd for some rash Attempts of the Commons, with whom he had join'd, and thereby was in fear to lose the Favour of his best Friends, and also therein to set an end to all his writing, being commanded by Venus (as appears by Gower in the end of his eighth Book, entituled Confessio Amantis) so to do, as one that was Venus Clerk; even as Gower had made his Confessio Amantis, his last Work, and shrift of his former Offences.

Las! Fortune alas! I that some tyme in delicious houres was wont to enjoy blifful stoundes, am now dryve by unhappy hevynesse to bewaile my fondrie yvels in tene. Trewlie I leve, in myn herte is writte of perdurable letters al the entencyons of lamentacion that now ben ynempned; for any maner disese outward in sobbyng maner sheweth sorowful yexynge from within. Thus from my comfort I ginne to spille, sith she, that shulde me solace, is ferre fro my presence. Certes her absence is to me an hell, my ster-vynge deth thus in wo it myneth, that endeleffe care is throughout myne herte clenched, blysse of my joye, that ofte me murthed, is turned into galle, to thynke on thing that may not at my wil in armes me hent.

Mirth is chaunged into tene, whan swink is there continually, that rest was wont to sojourne and have dwellynge place. Thus witleffe, thoughtfull, sightlesse lokynge, I endure my penaunce in this derke prisonne, caitified fro frendshippe and acquaintaunce, and forsaken of al that any worde dare speke. Straunge hath by way of intrucion made his home there me shoulde be, yf reson were herde as he shulde. Never the later yet hertly lady precious Margarit, have minde on thy servaunte, and thynke on his disese, howe lightles he lyveth, sith the bemes brennende in love of thin eien arn so bewet, that worldes and cloude atwene us tway wol not suffre my thoughtes of hem to be enlumyned. Thinke that one vertue of a Margarite precious is amonges manye other ther the sorowful to comforte, yet wil of that me sorowfull to comforte, is my luste to have nought els at this tyme, dede ne deth, ne no maner traveyle hath no power myne hert so moche to fade, as shulde to here of a twincklinge in your disese. Ah! God forbode that, but yet let me dey, let me sterue withouten any mesure of penaunce, rather than myne hertely thinking comforte in ought were disefed. What may my service aveile in absence of her, that my service shulde accepte? is this nat endelese sorowe to thinke? Yes, yes, God wote, myne hert breketh nie asonder; how should the ground without kindly noriture, bringen forth any fruites? How should a ship withouten a sterne in the grete Se be governed? how shold I withouten my blisse, my herte, my desire, my joye, my godenesse, endure in this contrarious prison, that thinke every houre in the daie an hundred Winter? Wel maie now Eve fain to me Adam, in sorowe fallen from welthe driven art thou out of Paradise, with swete thy sustenance to beswinke. Depe in this pinyng pitte with wo I ligge iflocked, with chaines linked of care, and of tene. It is so hie from thens I lie, and the common yerth, there ne is cable in no land maked, that might stretche to me, to drawe me into blisse, ne steys to stey on is none, so that without recover endelese here to endure I wote well I purveide. O! where art thou nowe frendship, that sometime with laughande chere madeft bothe face and countenance to me wardes? Truelye nowe arte thou wente out of rounne, but ever me thinketh, he wereth his olde clothes, and that the soule, in the whiche the life of frendship was in, is drawn out from his other spirites. Now then farewell, frendship, and farewell felawes, me thinketh ye all han taken your leve: no force of you all at ones.

But ladie of love, ye wote what I mene, yet think on thy servaunt, that for thy love spilleth, all thynges have I forsake, to folowen thine hestes: reward me with a thought, though ye doe naught els. Remembraunce of love lith so fore under my breste, that other thought cometh not in my mynde, but gladnesse to thinke on your godenesse, and your merie chere, frendnes, and sorowe to think on your wretche and your daunger, from whiche Christ me save. My grete joye it is to have in meditations the bounties, the vertues, the nobley in you printed: sorowe and hel comen at ones, to suppose that I be veined. Thus with care, sorowe, and tene am I shapt min ende with deth to make. Now gode godely thinke on this.

O wretched fole that I am fallen into so lowe, the hete of my brenning tene hath me all defased: how should ye, Lady, set prife on so foule filth? My conning is thinne, my witte is exiled, like to a fole naturell am I comparifoned. Truelye ladie, but your mercie the more were, I wote well all my labor were in idell: your mercie than passeth right. God graunt that propoficion to be verifed in me, so that by trust of gode hope, I mowe come to the haven of ese! and sith it is impossible, the colours of youre qualities to chaunge, and forsoth I wote well, wemme ne spot maie not abide, there so noble vertue haboundeth, so that the defasyng to you is verily imaginable, as countenance of godenes with encrefing vertue, is so in you knit to abid by necessarie maner, yet if the rivers might fal, which is ayenst kinde, I wold well myn hert, ne should therefore naught flit, by the leste point of Geometrie, so sadlie is it sonded, that awaie from your service in love, maie he not departe. O love, when shall I ben plesed? O Charitie, when shall I ben esed? O gode godelie, when shall the Dice tourne? O full of vertue, do the chaunce of comforte upward to fall. O love, when wolt thou think on thy servaunt? I can no more, but here out cast of all welfare abide the daie of my deth, or els to se the sight that might all my wellynge sorowes voide, and of the fode make an ebbe. These diseses mowen well by dureffe of sorowe make my life to unbodie, and so for to die: but certes, ye ladie in a full perfeccion of love ben so knitte with my soule, that deth maie not thilke knotte unbinde ne departe, so that ye and my soule together as endlesse in blisse should dwel, and there shall my soule at the full ben esed, that he maie have your presence, to shewe the entent of his desires: Ah! dere God, that shall be a grete joye. Now yerthlie Goddesse, take regarde of thy servaunt, though I be feble, for thou art wont to praise them better, that would conserve in love, all be he full mener then kinges or princes, that wold not have that vertue in minde. Now precious Margarite, that with thy noble vertue hast drawn me into love firste, me wenyng thereof to have blisse, as Galle and Aloes are so moche sprong, that savour of swetenesse maie I not atast; alas! that your benigne eyen, in which that mercie semeth to have all his noriture, n'll by no waie tourne the clerenesse of mercie to mewardes. Alas! that your brennande vertues, shynyng amonges all folke, and enluminyng all other people, by habundaunce of encrefing, sheweth to me but smoke, and no light. These thynges to thinke in myne herte, maketh every daie wepyng in myne eyen to renne. These ligen on my backe so fore, that importable burden me semeth on my backe to be charged, it maketh me backwarde to me, when my steppes by comon course even forthe pretende: These thynges also on right side and lefte have me so envolved with care, that wanhope of helpe is through-out me ronne truelie, and leve that gracelesse is my fortune, whiche that ever sheweth it mewardes by a cloudie disese, all redy to make stormes of tene, and the blisfull side halte still awaiward, and wold it not suffer to mewardes to turne: no force yet wold I not ben conquered.

O, alas! that your nobley so moche emong all other catures commended by folowyng streme, by al maner vertues, but there ben wonderfull, I not whiche that let the fode to come into my foul, wherfore purely mated with sorowe through fought, my self I crie on your godenes, to have pite on this caitife, that in the inrest degre of sorowe and disese is left, and without your godelie will, from any help and recovery. These sorowes maie I not sustene, but if my sorowe should be tolde, and to you wardes shewed, although moche space is betwene us twaine, yet me thynketh that by soche joleinyng wordes my disese ginneth eb. Truelie me thinketh that the founne of my lamentacious wepyng is right now flowe into youre presence, and there crieth after mercie and grace, to whiche thyng me semeth The lifte none answere to yeve, but with a deinous chere ye commaunded it to avoide, but God forbidde that any worde should of you spryng, to have so little ruth. Parde pite and mercie in every Margarit is closed by kinde, emongs many other vertues, by qualities of comforte, but comfort is to me right naught worthe, withouten mercie and pitie of you alone, whiche thynges hastily God me graunt for his mercie.

Rehersing these thynges and many other, without time or moment of rest, me semed for anguisse of disese that all together I was ravished, I can not tell how, but wholly al my passions and felynges weren losse, as it semed for the time, and sodainly a maner of drede light in me al at ones, nought soche fere as folke have of an enemye, that were mightie, and wold hem greve, or doen hem disese: for I trowe troue this is well knowe to many persones that other-while if a man be in his Sovereine's presence, a manner of ferdnesse creepeth in his hert, not for harme, but of godelie subjeccion: namelic as men reden that Aungelles ben aferde of our saviour in heven. And parde there ne is, ne maie no passion of disese be, but it is to mene, that Aungelles ben adradde, not by frendnes of drede, sithen thei ben perfidly blisfed, as affection of wonderfulness, and by service of obedience; soche ferde also han these lovers in presence of ther loves, and subiectes aforne their soveraines: right so with ferdnesse mine hert was caught, and I sodainlie astonied; there entered into the place, there I was lodged, a ladie, the semeliche and moste godelie to my sight, that ever to forne appeared to any cature, and trulie in the blustering of her loke she yave gladnesse and comforte sodainly to all my wittes, and right so she doeth to every wight, that cometh in her presence. And for she was so godelie (as me thought) mine herte began somdele to be embolded, and went a little hardie to speke, but yet with a quakyng voice as I durst, I salued her, and enquired what she was, and why she so worthie to fight dained to enter into so foule a dongeon, and namely a prison, without leve of my keepers. For certes, although the vertue of dedes of mercie stretchen to visiten the pore prisoners, and 'hem after that faculties ben had to comforte, me semed that I was so ferre fallen into miserie and wretched hid caitifnesse, that me should no precious thing neigh: and also that for my sorowe every wight should ben hevie, and wishe my recovery. But when this lady had somdele apperceved, as well by my wordes, as by my chere, what thought busied me within, with a gode womanlie countenance she said these wordes. O my norie, wenest thou that my manner be, to foryet my frendes, or my servauntes? Naie (qð she) it is my full entent to visite and comfort all my frendshippes and allies, as well in tyme of perturbation, as of moste propertie of blisse, in me shall unkindnesse never be founden. And also sithen I have so fewe especial true, now in these daies, wherfore I maie well at more leisir come to 'hem that me deser-ven, and if my comyng maie in any thyng availe, wete well I woll come often.

Now godeladie (qð I) that art so faire on to loke, rinyng honie by thy wordes, blisse of paradise arne thy lokynges, joye and comfort are thy movinges, What is thy name? How is it that in you is so mokell working vertues enpight, as me semeth, and in non other cature, that ever sawe I with mine eyen? My disciple (qð she) me wondreth of thy wordes and on The, that for a little disese hast foryetten my name. Wost thou not well that I am Love, that firste The brought to thy service? O gode Ladie (qð I) is this worship to The, or to thyne excellence, for to come into so foule a place? Parde sometime tho I was in prosperitie, and with forain godes envolved I had mokil to doen to draw The to mine hostell, and yet many werninges thou madest, ere thou list fullie to graunt thine home to make at my dwelling place: and now thou comest godelie by thine own vise, to comfort me with words, and so therethrough I ginne remember on passed gladnes. Trulie ladie I ne wot whether I shall saie welcome or none, sithen thy comyng woll as moche doe me tene and sorowe, as gladnesse and mirthe: se why. For that me comforteth to thinke on passed gladnesse, that me any-eth eft to be in doing. Thus thy comming both gladdeh and teneth, and that is cause of moche sorowe: lo! Ladie, how then I am comforted by your coming, and with that I gan in teres to distill, and tenderlie wepe. Now certes (qð Love) I se well (and that me overthinketh) that wit in The faileth, and art in point to dote. Trulie (qð I) that have ye maked, and that ever wol I rue. Wotest thou not well (qð she) that every Shepherde ought by reson to seke his sperkel and shepe that arne ren into wildernesse, among bushes and perils, and 'hem to ther pasture ayen bryng, and take of 'hem privie busie cure on keping? And tho the unconning Shepe scattred would ben lost renning to wildernesse, and to desertes drawe, or els woulde put 'hem self to the swallowyng Wolfe, yet shall the Shepherde, by businesse and travaile, so put him forthe, that he shall not let him be lost by no waie. A gode shepherd putteth rather his life to ben lost for his shepe.

But for thou shalt not wene me being of werse condicion, truelie for everiche of my folke, and for all tho that to mewarde be knit in any condicion, I woll rather die than suffre 'hem through errour to ben spilde. For me liste, and it me liketh, of all myne a Shepherdesse to be cleped. Wost thou not well, I failed never wight, but he me refused, and would negligentlie go with unkindnesse? And yet parde, have I many soche holpe and releved, and thei have ofte me begiled, but ever at th'ende it disceded in ther own neckes. Haste thou not radde, howe kinde I wasto Paris, Priamus sonne of Troie? How Jason me falsed for all his fals beheft? How Cesar sonke, I leste it for no tene, till he was troned in my blis for his service. What (qð she) moste of all, maked I not a lovedaie bitwene God and mankind, and chese a maide to be nompere, to put the quarell at ende? Lo, how I have travailed to have thanke on all sides! and yet list me not to reste, and I might finde on whom I should werche. But trulie mine own disciple, bicause I have The founde at all assaies in thy will to be redie mine hestes to have followed, and haste ben true to that Margarite Perle that ones I The shewed, and she alwaie ayenward hath made but daungerous chere, I am come in proper persone to put The out of errours, and make The glad by waies of reson, so that sorow ne disese shal no more hereafter The amais-trie. Wherthrough I hope, thou shalt lightlie come to the grace, that thou longe haste desired, of thilke Jewell. Haste thou not herd many ensamples, how I have comforted and releved the scholers of my lore? Who hath worthied kinges in the felde? Who hath honoured ladies in boure, by a perpetuall mirror of their truth in my service? Who hath caused wor-thie folke to voide vice and shame? Who hath holde citees and relmes in prosperitie? If The list clepe ayea thyne old remembraunce, thou coudest every pointe of this declare in especiall, and saie that I thy mai-stres have be cause, causyng these thinges, and many mo other.

Now iwis Madame (qð I) all these things I knowe well my self, and that thyne excellence passeth the understandyng of us bestes, and that no manne's witte yerthlie maie comprehende thy vertues. Well then (qð she) for I se The in disese and sorowe, I wote well thou art one of myne nories, I maie not suffer The so to make sorowe, thine owne self to shende: but I my self come to be thy fere, thine hevy charge to make to seme the lesse, for wo is him that is alone: And to the sory to ben moned by a sorowfull wight it is grete gladnes. Right so with my sicke frendes I am sicke, and with sorie I cannot els but sorowe make, till when I have 'hem releved, in soche wise that gladnesse in a maner of counterpaisyng shall restore as mokell in joye, as the passed hevinessse bitorne did in tene. And also (qð she) when any of my servauntes ben alone in solitarie place, I have yet ever busied me to be with 'hem, in comfort of ther hertes, and taught 'hem to make songes of plainte and of blisse, and to enditen letters of Rhetorike, in queint under-standinges, and to bethinke 'hem in what wise thei might beste ther Ladies in gode service plesse, and also to lerne maner in countenance, in wordes, and in beryng, and to ben meke and lowlie to every wight, his name and fame to encrese, and to yeve grete yestes and large, that his renome maie spryngen; but The thereof have I excused, for thy losse and thy grete costages, wherethrough thou arte nedie, arne nothing to me unknowen, but I hope to God sometime it shal ben amended, as thus, as I saied. In norture have I taught al mine, and in curtesie made hem expert, ther Ladies hertes to winne, and if any would be deinous, or proude, or be envious, or of wretches acquaintaunce, hasteliche have soche voided out of my schole: for all vices trulie I hate: vertues and worthinesse in all my power I auaunce.

Ah worthie creature! (qð I) and by iuste cause, the name of Goddes dignely ye mow bere: in The lithe the grace, through whiche any cature in this worlde hath any godenesse, trulie all maner of blisse, and precioufnesse in vertue out of The springen, and wellen, as brokes and rivers proceden from, ther sprynges, and like as all waters by kinde drawen to the Se, so all kindly thinges thresten by ful appetite of desire to drawe after thy steppes, and to thy presence aproche, as to ther kindlie perfeccion; how dare then bestes in this world aught forsete ayenst thy Divine purveighaunce? Also lady ye knowen all the privie thoughtes, in hertes no counsaile maie ben hidde from your knowyng. Wherefore I wote well, Ladie, that ye knowe your self, that I in my conscience am, and have ben willyng to your service, all coude I never doe as I should, yet forsothe fained I never to love otherwise then was in myne herte: and if I coude have made chere to one, and ithought an other, as many other doen aldaie afore myne eyen, I trowe it would not me have vailed. Certes (qð she) haddest thou so doen, I would not now have The here visited. Ye wete well Ladie eke (qð I) that I have not plaid racket, Nettlein, Docke out, and with the Wethercocke waved, and truely there ye me sette by accorde of my conscience, I would not flie till ye and reason by aperte strength maden myne herte to tourne.

In gode faithe (qð she) I have knowe The ever of tho condicions, and sithen thou wouldest (in as moche as in The was) amade me privie of thy counsaill, and judge of thy conscience, tho I forsoke it in tho daies, till I sawe better my tyme, would never God that I should now faile, but ever I woll be redie, witnessyng thy sothe, in what place that ever I shall ayenst al tho that woll the contrary sustene, and for as moche as to me is naught unknowen, ne hid of thy privie herte, but all haste thou tho thynges made to me open at the full, that hath caused my comyng in to this prison, to voide the webbes of thine eyen, to make The clere to se the errours thou haste ben in; and bicause that men ben of divers condicions, some adradde to saie a sothe, and some for a sothe anone redie to fight, and also that I maie not my self ben in place, to withsaie thilke men that of The speken otherwise then the sothe, I woll and charge The in vertue of obedience, that thou to me owest, to witten my wordes, and set hem in writynges, that thei mowe as my witnessyng ben noted among the peple. For bokes writen neither dreden ne shaming, ne strive conne, but onely shewen the entente of the writer, and yeve remembraunce to the herer: and if any woll in thy presence saie any thinge to tho writers, loke boldlie, trust on Mars to answer at the ful. For certes, I shal him enforme of all the trouthe in thy love, with thy conscience, so that of his helpe thou shalt not varie at thy nede. I trowe the strongest and the best that maie be founde, woll not transverse thy wordes, whereof then wouldest thou drede?

GRetelie was I tho gladded of these wordes, and as who saith, wexen somedele light in hert, bothe for th' auctoritie of witnesse, and also of sikernes of helpe of the foresaied behest, and saied. Truely, ladie, now am I well gladded, through comforte of your wordes: be it now likyng unto your nobly to shewe, whiche folke defame your servauntes, sith your service oughte above all other thynges to ben commended. Yet (qð she) I se well thy soule is not al out of the amased cloude: The were better to here thing, that The might light out of thyne hevie charge, and after knowyng of thyne owne helpe, then to stirre swete wordes, and soche resons to here: for in a thoughtfull soule (and namely soch one as thou art) woll not yet soche thinges sinken. Come of therefore, and let me seen thy hevie charge, that I maie the lightlier for thy comfort purveigh.

Now certes ladie (qð I) the moste comfort I might have, were utterlie to wete me be sure in hertes of that Margarite I serve, and so I thinke to doen with all mightes, while my life dureth. Then (qð she) maieste thou thereafter, in soche wise that mispleaunce ne entre? In gode faithe (qð I) there shall no mispleaunce be caused, through trespass on my side. And I doe The to weten (qð she) I sette never yet persone to serve in no place (but if he caused the contrary, in defaultes and trespasses) that he ne sped of his service. Myne owne yerthly ladie (qð I tho) and yet remember to your worthinesse how long sithen, by many revolving of yeres, in tyme when October his leve ginneth take, and November sheweth hym to sight, when Bernes ben full of godes, as is the Nutte on every halke, and then gode londe-tillers ginneth shape for the yerth with grete travaile to bryng forth the more Corne, to manne's sustenaunce, ayenst the next yeres folowing; In soche tyme of plentie, he that hath an home, and is wise, liste not to wander mervailles to seche, but he be constrained or excited: oft the lothe thing is doen, by excitation of other manne's opinion, whiche woulde faine have myne abidyng, take in herte of luste to travaile, and se the windyng of the yerth, in that tyme of Winter, by wodes that large stretes werne in, by small pathes, that swine and hogges hadden made, as lanes with ladels ther masse to seche, I walked thinkyng alone, a wonder grete while, and the grete bestes that the wode haunten, and adorneth al maner forestes, and herdes gone to wilde: then ere I was ware, I neighed to a Se banke, and for ferde of the bestes, shipcraft I cride: for ladie I trowe ye wete well your self, nothyng is werse then the bestes that shoulde ben tame, if thei cathe ther wildenesse, and ginne again waxe ramage: thus forsothe was I aferde, and to Shippe me hied. Then were there inow to lache myne handes, and drawe me to Shippe, of whiche many I knewe well the names. Sight was the firste, Luste was an other, Thought was the thirde, and Will eke was there a Master: these broughten me within borde, of this Shippe of travile. So when the faile was sprad, and this Shippe gan to move, the Winde and Water gan for to rise, and overthartlie to tourne the Welken, the waves semeden as thei kisse toghether, but often under colour of kysyng is mokell olde hate privelie closed and kepte. The storme so straungelie, and in a devouryng manner ganne so faste us assaile, that I supposed the date of my deth should have made there his ginning, now up, now down, now under the wawe, and now above was my shippe a grete while. And so by mokell durse of wethers, and of stormes, and with grete avowyng pilgrimages, I was driven to an Ile, where utterlie I wend first to have be rescowed, but truelie at the firste beginnyng, it semed me so perilous the haven to catch, that but through grace I had ben comforted, of life I was full dispaired. Truelie

Ladie,

Ladie, if ye remember a right of all maner thynges, your self came hastelie to seen us Se-driven, and to werten what we weren: but firste ye were deinous of chere, after whiche ye gon better alight, and ever as me thought, ye lived in grete drede of disese, it seemed so by your chere. And when I was certified of your name, the lenger I loked in you, the more I you godelie dradde, and ever myne herte on you opened the more, and so in a little tyme, my Shippe was out of mynde. But ladie, as ye me lad I was ware bothe of bestes and of fishes a grete number throngyng together: among whiche a Musckell in a blew shell had enclosed a Margarite Perle, the moste precious, and best that ever tofore came in my sighte, and ye tolden your self, that ilke jewell in his kinde was so gode and so vertuous, that her better should I never finde, all sought I thereafter to the worlde's ende, and with that I helde my pece a grete while: and ever sithen I have me bethought on the man, that sought the precious Margarites, and when he had founden one to his likyng, he solde all his gode to buy that jewell: I wis thought I, and yet so I think, now have I founden the jewell that mine herte desireth, where-to should I seche further! trulie nowe woll I stinte, and on this Margarite I sette me for ever. Now then also, sithen I wiste well it was your will, that I should to soche a service me take, and so to desire that thyng, of whiche I never have blisse, there liveth none but he hath disese: your might then that brought me to soch service, that to me is cause of sorow and of joy, I wonder of your worde that ye fain to bringen men into joye, and parde ye wot well that defaute ne trespase maie not resonable ben put to me wardes, as ferre as my conscience knoweth: but of my disese me liste now a while to speke, and to enforme you in what maner of blisse ye have me throng. For truly I wene that all gladnesse, all joye, and all mirthe is bestet under lock, and the keie throwe in soche place, that it maie not be found: my brenning who hath altered all my hewe. When I should slepe, I walowe and I thinke, and me disporte. Thus combred, I seme that all folke had me mased. Also ladie mine, desire hath long dured, some spekyng to have, or els at the leste have ben enmoised with sight: and for wantyng of these thynges, my mouthe would, and he durste, pleine right fore sithen evils for my godenesse, arne manifold to me holden. I wonder, Lady, truely, save evermore your reverence howe ye mowe for shame soche thynges suffer on your servaunte, to be so multiplied: wherefore kneeling with a lowe herte I praie you to rue on this carite, that of nothyng now maie serve. Gode ladie, if you liste, now your help to me shew, that am of your priviest servautes, at all assaies in this tyme, and under your wings of proteccion. No helpe to mewardes is shapen, how shall then straungers in any wise after succour loke, when I that am so privie, yet of helpe I do faile? Further maie I not, but thus in this prisone abide: what bondes and chaines me holden, Ladie, ye se well your self? A reniant forjudged hath not halfe the care. But thus sighyng and sobbyng I waile here alone, and n'ere it for comforte of your presence, right here would I sterve. And yet a little am I gladded, that so godelie soche grace and none happe have I hente, graciously to finde the precious Margarite, that all other leste, men should buie, if thei should therefore sell al ther substaunce. Wo is me! that so many let-games, and purpose brekers ben makid waiters, soche prisners as I am evermore to overloke and to hinder, and for soche lettours it is harde any soche jewell to winne. Is this, lady, an honour to thy deitie? Me thinketh by right, soche peple should have no maistrise, ne ben overlokers over none of thy servautes. Truely were it lesull unto you, to all the Goddes would I plaine that ye rule your Divine purveighaunce amonges your servautes nothing as ye should. Also Lady my mobile is insuffisaunte to countervaille the price of this jewell, or els to make th' eschaunge: eke no wight is, worthie soche perles to were, but Kynges or Princes, or els their peers: This jewell for vertue would adorne and make faire all a relme, the nobley of vertue is so moche that her godenesse over all is commended. Who is it that would not waile, but he might soche riches have at his wille? the vertue thereof out of this prisone maie me deliver, and nought els. And if I be not there thorowe holpen I se my self withouten recovery: although I mighte hence voide, yet would I not, I would abide the daie, that destenie hath me ordeined, which I suppose is withoute amendement, so fore is myne herte bounden, that I maie thinke none other. Thus strait (Ladie) hath sir Daunger laced me in stockes, I leve it be not your will: and for I se you taken so little hede, as me thinketh, and woll not maken by your might, the vertue in mercie of the Margarite on me for to stretch, so as ye mowe wel, in case that you list, my blisse and my mirth arne felde, sicknesse and sorowe ben alwaie redie, the cope of tene is wounde about all my bodie, that standyng is me beste, unneth maie I ligge for pure miserie sorowe, and yet al this is little enough to be the ernest silver, in forward of this bargaine, for treblefolde so mokell muste I suffer, ere tyme come of myne ese. For he is worthy no welth, that maie no wo suffer. And certes, I am hevie to thinke on these thynges, but who shall yeve me water inoughe to drinke, lest mine eyen drie for rennyng stremes of teres? Who shall wailen with me myne own happie hevinesse? Who shall counsaile me now in my likyng tene, and in my godelie harte? I not. For ever the more I brenne, the more I covete: the more that I sorowe, the more thirst I in gladnesse. Who shall then yeve me a contrarious drinke, to staunch the thrust of my blisfull bitternes? Lo thus I brenne, and I drenche, I shiver and swete; to this reversed yvel was never yet ordeined salve, forsoth al liches ben unconninge, save the Margarite alone, any soche remedy to purvey.

And wyth these wordes I braste out to wepe, that every tere of myne eyen for gretnesse semed they boren out the bal of my syght, and that al the water hadde ben out ronne. Than thought me, that love gan a litel to hevy for myscomforte of my chere, and gan soberly and in esy maner speke, wel avising what she said. Comenly the wise speken esylie and softe for many skilles: One is, ther wordes are the better beleved, and also in esy spekyng avisement men may catche what to put forthe, and what to holden in. And also the auctoritie of esye wordes is the more, and eke they yeven the more understanding to other intencion of the mater. Ryght so this ladye esily and in a softe manere gan say these wordes.

Mervaile (quod she) gret it is, that by no maner of semblaunt, as ferre as I can espie, thou lyste not to have any recour, but ever thou plainest and sorowest, and wayes of remedie for folishe wilfulnesse. The liste not to seche: but enquire of thy nexte frendes, that is thyne invitte, and me that have ben thy maistrise, and the recour and syne of thy disese, for of disese is gladnesse and joye, with a ful vessel so helded, that it quencheth the feling of the first tenes. But thou that were wonte not onely these thynges remembre in thyne herte, but also soles therof to enforment, in adnulling of ther errors, and destroyinge of ther derke opinions, and in comfort of ther fere thoughtes, now canste thou not ben comforte of thin owne soule, in thinkinge of these thynges. O where haste thou be so long commensal, that haste so mikel eten

eten of the potages of foryetfulness, and drunken so of ignorance, that the olde souking, whiche thou haddest of me, arne amastred and lorne fro al maner of knowinge? O this is a worthy persone to helpe other, that can not counsaile him selfe. And with these wordes for pure and strong shame I wox al red.

And she than seinge me so astonied by divers stoundes sodainly (whiche thyng kynde hateth) gan deliciously me comferte with sugred wordes, putting me in ful hope that I shulde the Margarite getten, if I folowed her hestes, and gan with a faire clothe to wipen the teres that hyngen on my chekes: and than said I in this wise. Now welle of wisdom and of all welthe, withouten The may nothyng ben lerned, thou berest the keies of all privy thinges. In vaine travaile men to catche anye stedship, but if ye, lady, firste the locke unshet, ye, lady, lerne us the waies and the bypathes to heaven: ye, lady, maken all the heavenly bodies godely and benignely to done ther course, that governen us bestes here on erthe: Ye armen your servauntes ayenst al debates, with imperciable harneis, ye setten in ther hertes insuperable blode of hardinesse, ye leden hem to the parfite gode. Yet al thinge desireth, ye werne no man of helpe, that wele done your lore, graunt me now a litell of your grace, all my sorowes to cese. Myne own servaunt (qð she) trewly thou sittest nie myne herte, and thy badde chere gan forely me greve: but amonge thy plaining wordes, me thought thou allegeth thinges to be letting of thine helping, and thy grace to hinder, wherthrough me thinketh that wanhope is crope through thine hert: God forbid that nise unthriftie thought should come in thy mynde thy wittes to trouble, sithen every thyng in commynge is contingent, wherefore make no more thy propo-sition by an impossible. But nowe I pray The reherse me ayen tho thynges, that thy mystrust causen, and thilke thinges I thinke by reson to distroyen, and put full hope in thine herte. What understandest thou there (qð she) by that thou saidest, many letgames are thin overlokers? And also by that, thy moeble is insuffysaunt? I n'ot what thou therof menest.

Trewly (qð I) by the first, I say that janglers evermore arne spekinge, rather of evyll than of gode, for every age of man rather enclineth to wickednesse, than any godenesse to avaunce. Also false wordes springen so wide, by the sterynge of false lyinge tonges, that fame als swyftly flieth to ther eres, and, and saithe many wicked tales, and as sone shal falsenesse ben leved as trouthe, for all his grete sothenesse. Now by that other (qð I) me thinketh thilke jewel so precious, that to no soch wretche as I am wolde vertue therof extende, and also I am to feble in worldely joyes, any soche jewell to contrevaille. For soche peple that worldely joyes han at ther will, ben sette at the highest degre, and moste in reverence ben accepted, for false weninge maketh felicity therein to be supposid: but soche caytives as I am evermore ben hindred. Certes (qð she) take gode hede, and I shal by reson to The shewen, that all these thinges mowe not let thy purpose, by the lest point that any wight coude pricke.

Remembreth nat (qð she) ensample is one of the strongest maner, as for to preve a manne's purpose. Than yf I nowe by ensample enduce The to any propo-sicion, is it nat proved by strength? Yes forsothe (qð I). Well (qð she) raddeste thou never howe Paris of Troye and Helen loved togidder, and yet had they not entrecomuned of speche? Also Acrisius shete Danae his daughter in a tour, for suertie that no wight shulde of her have no maistrise in my service, and yet Jupiter by sygnes without any spech had al his purpose ayenst her father's will. And many, soche mo have ben knitte in trouthe, and yet spake they never togidder, for that is a thinge enclosed under secretenes of privitie, why twey persons entremellen hertes after a sight. The power in knowing of soche thynges so preven shal nat alutterly be yeven to you bestes, for manye thynges in soche precious matters ben reserved to judgement of divine purveiaunce, for amonge lyving peple by manne's consideracion moun they not be determined. Wherefore I saye, all the envye, al the jangling, that welny peple upon my servauntes maken este, is rather cause of espoite, than of any hindringe. Why than (qð I) suffre ye soche wronge, and moun when ye list lightly all soche yvels abate? me semeth to you it is a gret unwurship. O (qð she) holde nowe thy pece, I have founden to many that han ben to me unkind, that trewly I woll suffre every wyght in that wise to have disese, and who that continueth to the end wel and trewly, hem wol I helpen, and as for one of mine into blyffe to wende; as marcial doing in Grece; Who was ycrownd? by God, nat the strongest, but he that rathest come and lengest abode and continued in the journey, and spared nat to travaile as long as the play left. But thilke person that profereth him nowe to my service, theryn is a while, and anon voideth and redy to another, and of nowe one he thinketh, and nowe another, and into water entreth, and anon respireth, soche one liste me nat into perfite blisse of my servyce bring. A tre oft set in divers places wold not by kinde endure to brynge forth fruites. Loke nowe I pray The, howe myne olde servauntes of tyme passed continued in ther service, and folow thou after ther steppes, and thanne might thou not faile, in case thou worche in this wise.

Certes (qð I) it is nothinge lich, this world to time passed, eke this cowntre hath one maner, and another cowntre hath another. And so maie not a man alwaye put to hys eye the salve that he heled with his hele. For this is sothe, betwyxe two thynges liche ofte diversite is required. Now (qð she) that is sothe, diversite of natyon, dyversite of lawe, as was makid by many resons, for that diversyte cometh in by the contrarious malice of wicked peple, that han envious hertes ayenst other. But trewly my law to my servauntes ever hath ben in generall, whiche maie not faile; for ryght as manne's law, that is ordeined by manie determinacions, may not be knowe for gode or badde, tyl assay of the peple han proved it, and to what end it draweth, and than it sheweth the necessite therof, or els the impossibilite, right so the law of my servauntes so wel hath ben proved in general, that hitherto hath it not failed. Wiste thou not well that all the lawe of kinde is my lawe, and by God ordained and stablished to dure by kinde resoun? wherefore al law by manne's witte purveid ought to be underputte to lawe of kinde, whiche yet hath be commune to every kinde-ly creature, that my statutes and my lawe that ben kyndely, arne generall to all peples. Olde doinges, and by many turninges of yeres used, and with the peple's maner proved, mowen not so lightly ben defased, but newe doinges contrariauntes soche old often causen diseses and breken many purposes.

Yet saie I nat therfore, that ayen new mischefe men should not ordaine a newe remedye, but alway loke it contrary not the olde no ferther than the malice stretcheth. Than foloweth it, the olde doinges in love han ben universall, as for moste exploite, forthi used: Wherefore I wold not yet that of my lawes nothyng be adouled.

But thanne to thy purpose, soche jangelers and lookers, and waiters of games, if thei thinke in ought they they mowe dere, yet love wel alway, and sette hem at nought, and lette thy porte ben lowe in every wightes presence, and redie in thine herte to mainteine that thou hast begone, and a litell The faine with mekenesse in wordes, and thus with sleight shalte thou surmounte and dequace the yvell in ther hertes. And wisdomes yet is to seme flye other while there a manne woll fight. Thus with soche thynges, the tonges of yvell shal ben stilled: els fully to graunte thy full mening, forsothe ever was and ever it shall be, that mine enemies ben aferde to trust to any fighting: and therefore have thou no cowarde's herte in my service, no more than somtime thou haddest in the countraye, for if thou drede soche janglers thy viage to make: understand wel, that he that dredeth any rain to sowe his cornes, he shall have thin berness, also he that is aferde of his clothes, let him daunce naked. Who nothinge undertaketh, and namelie in my service, nothinge achieveth. After grete stormes the wether is often mery and smothe. After moche clatering there is mokill rowninge: thus after jangling wordes cometh huishte, pece and be still. O gode lady (qð I than) se now how seven yere passed and more, have I graffed and groubed a vine, and with al the waies that I coude, I sought to afede me of the grape, but fruit have I non founde. Also I have this seven yere served Laban to awedded Rachel his doughter, but blere-eyed Leah is brought to my bedde, whiche alway engendreth my tene, and is full of children in tribulacion and in care: and although the clippinges and kyssynges of Rachell should seme to me swete, yet is she so baraine, that gladnesse ne joye by no way wol springe, so that I may wepe with Rachel, I may not ben counsailed with solace, sithen issue of men hertely desire is failed. Nowe than I pray that to me sone fredom and grace, in this eight yere, this eyghteth mow to me bothe be kynreste and masseday after these seven werke daies of travail, to folow the christen lawe: and what ever ye do ells, that thilke Margarite be holden so lady in your pryvy chambre, that she in this case, to none other person be committed. Loke than (qð she) in this case to none other persone be committed, loke than (qð she) thou persever in my service, in whiche I have The grounded, that thilke skorne in thy enemies mowe thus on thy person be not sothed: lo! this man began to edifie, but for his foundement is bad, to the ende maye he it nat bring. For mekenesse in countenance, with a manly herte in dedes and in longe countinaunce, is the consiance of my livery, to al my retinue delivered. What wenest thou that me lyst avaunce soche persones as loven the firste sittings at festes, the higheste stoles in churches, and in hal; loutinges of peples in markettes and faires, unstedfaste to byde in one place any while togither, wenyng his owne wit more excellent than other, scorning al maner devise but his owne. Nay, nay, God wor, these shul nothing parten of my blysse. Truly my maner heretofore hath ben worship with my blisse, Lions in the felde, and lambes in chambre, Egles at assaute, and maidens in hal, Foxes in counsaile, stil in ther dedes, and ther protection is graunted redy to ben a bridge, and ther baner is arered like wolves in the felde. Thus by these wayes shul men ben avaunced: ensample of David that from keping of shepe was drawn up into the order of kingly governaunce, and Jupiter from a boie to ben Europe's fere, and Julius Caesar from the lowest degre in Rome, to be maister of al erthly princes, and Æneas from hell, to be kynge of the countre there Rome is now stonding. And so to The I say thy grace by bering thereafter maye set The in soch plight, that no jangling may greve the lest tucke of thy hemmes, that all ther janggles is nought to counce at a cresse in thy disavantage.

EVer (qð she) hath the peple in this worlde desired to have had grete name in worthinesse, and hated foule to bere any fame, and that is one of the objections thou alegest to be ayen thin hertely desire. Ye forsothe (qð I) and that so comenly the peple wol lye and bringe aboute soche enfame. Now (qð she) if men with lesinges put on The enfame, wenest thy self thereby ben enpeired? that wening is wrong, se why, for as moch as they lien, thy merite encreseth, and thei make The ben more worthy to hem that knowen of The the sothe, by what thing thou art apeired, that in so mokil thou arte encrefed of thy beloved frendes: and sothely a wounde of thy frend is to The lasse harme, ye sir, and better than a false kyssyng in discevable glosinge of thin enemy, above that than to be wel with thy frende maketh soch enfame, ergo, thou art encrefed and nat apeired. Lady (qð I) somtyme yet if a man be in disese, th' estimation of the envious peple ne loketh nothing to desertes of men, ne to the merites of ther doynge, but onely to the aventure of fortune, and thereafter they yeven ther sentence. And some loken the voluntary wil in his herte, and thereafter telleth his judgement, not taking hede to reson ne to the qualyte of the doing, as thus. If a man be riche and fulfild with worldly welfulnesse, some commenden it, and saine it is so lente by juste cause, and he that hath adversite, they saine he is wicked, and hath deserved thilke anoie. The contraye of these thinges some men holden also, and sain that to the rich prosperite is purvaied into his confusion, and upon this matter, many autorites of many and grete-witted clerkes they alegen. And some men sayne, though all gode estimation forsaken folke that han adversite, yet is it merite and encrese of hys blisse; so that these purposes arne so wonderful in understondinge, that trewly for mine adversite, nowe I n'ot how the sentence of the indifferent peple wyll judgen my fame. Therefore (qð she) if anye wight shulde yeve a trew sentence on soche matters, the cause of the disese maist thou se well, understande therupon after what ende it drawethe, that is to sayne gode or bade, so ought it to have his fame by godenesse, enfame by baddenesse: for every resonable persone, and namelye of a wise man, his witte ought not without reson toforne herde, sodainly in a matter to juge. After the sawes of the wise, thou shalt not juge ne deme toforne thou knowe. Lady (qð I) ye remembre wel that in molte laude and praisynge of certain saintes in holy church, is to reherfen ther conversacion frome badde into gode, and that is so reherfed, as by a perpetuall myrour of remembrance in wurshiping of tho saintes, and gode ensample to other misdooers in amendement. How turned the Romaine zedeories fro the Romaines, to be with Haniball ayenst his kind nacion: And alterwardes him seming the Romaines to be at the next degre of confusion, turned to his olde alies, by whose witte after was Hanibal discomfited. Wherefore to enfourme you lady, the maner, why I mene, se now in my youth I was drawe to be assentaunt, and in my mightes helping to certaine conjuracions, and other grete matters of rulyng of citezins, and thylke thinges ben my drawers in, and exitours to tho matters werne so painted and coloured, that at the prime face, me semed them noble and glorious to al the peple: I than wenyng mykell merite have deserved in furthuring and maintenaunce of tho thinges, besyde and laboured with all my diligence, in workinge of thilke matters to the ende. And trewly, lady, to tell you the sothe, me rought lytell of any hate of the mighty fenatours in thilke cite, ne of communes malice, for two skilles: One was I had comforte to ben in soche plite, that both profite were to me and to my frendes. Another was, for comen profite in comunaltie is not but pece and tranquillite with iust governaunce proceden from thilke profite, sithen by counsaile of mine inwitte, me thought the first painted thinges, malice and evyll meninge, withouten any gode availinge to anye peple, and of tyrannye purposed, and so for pure sorowe and of my medlyng, and badde infame that I was in ronne, tho teres lashed out of myne eyen, were thus awaye washe, thanne the under hydde malice and the rancoure of purposinge envie forncaste and ymaged, in distruction of mokil peple, shewed so openly, that had I ben blinde, with mine handes all the circoumstaunce I might well have feled.

Nowe than tho persones that soch thinges have caste to redresse, for wrathe of my firste meddlyng, shopen me to dwel in this pynande prison, tyll Lachesis my threde no lenger woulde tweyne. And ever I was sought, if me lyst to have grace of my lyfe, and frenesse of that prison, I shulde openly confesse howe pece might ben endused to enden al the firste rauncours. It was fullie supposed my knowinge to be ful in tho matters. Than lady I thought that every man that by any waye of ryght, ryghtfully done, maye helpe any comune helpe to ben saved, whiche thing to kepe above all thinges I am holde to mayntaine, and namely in distroyng of a wrong, al shulde I therthrough enpeche myne owne fere, if he wer guilty, and to do misdede assentaunt, and maister ne frende maye nought availe, to the soule of hym that in falsenesse deyeth, and also that I nere desired wrathe of the peple, ne indignacion of the worthy, for nothinge that ever I wrought or dyd, in anye doinges my selfe els, but in the maintenaunce of these foresaid errours, and in hydyng of the privities thereof.

And that al the peples hertes holding on the errours side weren blinde and of elde so ferforthe begiled, that debate and strife they maintained, and in distruction on that other side, by whiche cause the pece, that moste in comunaltie should be desired, was in pointe to be broken and adnulled. Also the cytye of London, that is to me so dere and swete, in whiche I was forth growen, and more kindly love have I to that place, than to any other in yerth, as every kindly cature hath full appetite to that place of his kindly engendrure, and to wilne reste and pece in that stede to abyde: thilke pece should thus there have ben broken, and of al wise it is commended and desired. For knowe thyng it is, all men that desiren to comen to the parfite pece everlasting, muste the pece by God commended bothe maintaine and kepe. This pece by angels voice was confirmed, our God entrynge in this worlde. This as for his testament he lefte to al his frendes, when he retourned to the place from whence he came: This his Apostell admonesteth to holden, without whiche man partly may have none insight. Also this God by his comynge made not pece alone betwene hevenly and yerthely bodies, but also among us on yerth so he pece confirmed, that in one hed of love one body we should perfourme. Also I remembre well howe the name of Athenes was rather after the God of pece, than of bataile, shewyng that pece moste is necessarie to comunalties and cytyes. I than so stired by al these wayes toforne nempned, declared certain pointes in this wise. First that thilke persons that hadden me drawen to ther purposes, and me not witting the privy entent of ther meninge drawen also the feblewitted peple, that have none insight of gubernatife prudence, to clamoure and to crie on matters that they stired, and under pointes for commune avauntage, they embolded the passife to take in the active's doying, and also stired innocentes of coming to crie after thinges, whiche (qð they) maye not stand. but we ben executours of tho matters, and auctorite of execucion by comen election to us be delyvered, and that muste enter by strength of your maintenaunce, for we out of soch degre put, oppression of these olde hindrers shal againe surmounten and putten you in soche subjection, that in endlesse wo ye shul complaine. The governementes (qð thei) of your cite left in the handes of torcencious citezins shal bring in pestilence and distruction to you goue menne, and therfore let us have the comune administracion to abate soche yvelles. Also (qð they) it is worthy the gode to commende, and the guilty desertes to chastice. There ben citezins many for ferde of execucion that shal be done, for extorcions by hem committed, ben evermore ayenst these purposes, and al other gode meninges. Never the latter ladie, trewly the meninge under these wordes was fully to have apeched the mighty fenatours, whiche hadden hevie herte for the misgovernance that they seen. And so lady, when it fell that fre eleccion, by grete clamour of moche peple, for grete disefe of misgovernance so fervently stoden in ther eleccion, that they hem submitted to every maner face, rather than have suffered the maner and the rule of the hated governours, notwithstanding that in the contrary helden moch comune meiny, that have no consideration, but onelye to voluntary lustes withouten refon. But than thilke governour so forsaken, faininge toforne his undoinge for misrule in his time, shope to have letted thilke eleccion, and have made a newe him selfe to have bene chosen, and under that mokyl rore have arered. These thinges, lady, knowne amonge the princes, and made open to the peple, draweth in amendement, that every degre shal bene ordained to stande there as he shulde, and that of errours coming hereafter, men may lightly toforne hande purvaye remedye, in thys wise, pece and rest to be furthered and hold. Of the which thinges ladie, thilke persons broughten in answer toforne ther most soverain judge, not coarted by paininge dures openlye knowlegeden, and asked therof grace, so that apertely it preveth my wordes ben soche without forginge of lesinges.

But nowe it greveth me to remembre these divers sentences, in jangling of these shepy peple: certes me thinketh they oughten to maken joy that a sothe maie be knowe. For my trouth and my conscience bene witnesse to me bothe, that this knowing sothe have I saide for no harme, ne malyce of tho persones, but onely for trouth of my sacrament in my leigeaunce, by whiche I was charged on my kinges behalfe. But se ye not nowe lady, how the felonous thoughtes of this peple, and covins of wicked men, conspiren ayen my sothfast trouth? Se ye not every wight that to these erronious opinions were assentaunt, and helps to the noise, and knewen all these thinges better than I my selven, apparaylen to fynden newe frendes, and clepen me false, and studyen howe they mowen in ther mouthes werse plyte nempne. O God what maye this be, that thylke folke which that in tyme of my mayntenaunce, and whan my might availed to streth the forsaide matters, tho me commended, and yave me name of trouth, in so manye folde maneres, that it was nighe in every wight's ere, there as any of thylke peple weren, and on the other syde, thylke companie somtyme passed, yevynge me name of badde loos, nowe bothe tho peples turned the gode into badde, and badde into gode! whiche thinge is wonder, that they knowing me saying

ing but soth arne nowe tempted to reply ther olde prayfinges, and knowen me well in all doinges to ben trewe, and saine openly that I false have said many thinges. And they aleged nothings me to ben false or untrew, save thilke mater knowleged by the parties 'hemselfe: and God wot other matter is none. Ye also lady knowe these thinges for trewe, I avaunte not in praisinge of my self, therby shulde I lese the precious secrete of my conscience. But ye se well that false opinion of the peple for my trouthe, in tellinge out of false conspired maters, and after the judgement of these clerkes I shulde not hide the soth of no manner person, maister ne other, wherefore I wolde not drede, were it put in the consideracion of trewe and of wyse. And for comers hereafter shullen fully out of denwere all the sothe knowe of these thinges in acte, but as they werne, I have put it in scripture, in perpetuel remembraunce of true mening. For truly lady me semeth, that I ought to bere the name of trouthe, that for the love of rightwisenesse have thus me submitten: But nowe than the false fame whiche that clerkes saine flieth as faste as dothe the fame of trouthe, shall so wide sprede, til it be brought to the jewel that I of mene, and so shall I ben hindred withouten any mesure of trouthe.

THan gan Love sadlye me beholde, and saide in a chaunged voyce, lower than she hadde spoken in any tyme. Faine wolde I (qð she) that thou were holpen, but halt thou said any thinge, whiche thou might not proven? Parde (qð I) the persons every thinge as I have said han knowleged 'hem selfe. Yea (qð she) but what yf they hadden naied, how woldest thou have mainteined it. Sothelye (qð I) it is well wiste bothe amongest the grettest, and other of the relme, that I profered my body so largely into provinge of tho thinges, that Mars shuld have judged th'ende: but for sothnesse of my wordes they durst not to thilke judge trust. Now certes (qð she) above all fames in this world, the name of marcyal doynges moste plesen to ladies of my lore, but fythen thou were redy, and thine adversaires in thy presence refused thilke doyng, thy fame ought to be so borne, as if in dede it had take to the ende. And therefore every wight that anye droppe of reson hath, and hereth of the infame, for these thinges hath this answer to saye, trewly thou saidest, for thyne adversaries thy wordes affirmed. And yf thou haddest lied, yet are they discomfited, the prife lened on thy side, so that fame shall holde downe infame, he shall bringe upon none half. What greveth The thine enemyes to saine ther owne shame? as thus: We are discomfited, and yet oure quarell is trewe. Shall not the loos of thy frendes ayenward dequace thilke infame, and say they graunted a sothe without a stroke or fighting? Many men in batail ben discomfited and overcome in a rightfull quarell, that is Godde's privy judgement in heven: but yet although the partie be yolden, he may with wordes say his quarell is trew, and to yelde him in the contrarie for dred of dethe he is compelled, and he that graunteth and no stroke hath feled, he may not crepe away in this wise, by none excusacion. Indifferent folke will say, ye who is trew? who is false? himself knowlegeth tho thinges. Thus in every side fame sheweth to The gode and no badde. But yet (qð I) some will saye, I ne shuld for no deth have discovered my maistresse, and so by unkindnes they wol knette infame to pursue me aboute: thus enemies of wil in manifold maner wol seche privie serpentines queintises, to quenche and destroye by venime of many businesse the light of truthe, to make hertes to murmoure ayenst my persone, to have me in haine, withouten any cause. Nowe (qð she) here me a fewe wordes, and thou shalt fully ben answered, I trow. Me thinketh (qð she) right nowe by thy wordes, that Sacramente of sweryng, that is to saie, charging by othe, was one of the causes, to make The discover the malicious ymaginacions tofore nempned, every othe by knyttyng of copulacion must have these lawes, that is true judgement and rightwisenesse, in whiche thyng, if any of these lacke, the othe is iturned into the name of perjurie: then to make a true sermente muste nedes these thynges followe, for ofte tymes for a man to saie sothe, but judgement and justice folowe, he is forsworne: ensample of Herodes for holdyng of his serment, was dampned.

Also to saie truthe rightfulliche, but in judgement, otherwhile is forboden, by that all sothes be not to saine. Therefore in judgement, in truthe and rightwisenesse, is every cature bounden up paine of perjurie full knowyng to make, tho it were of his owne persone, for drede of sinne, after that worde better is it to dey, then live false, and all would perverted peple false reporte make in unkindnes, in that entent thy fame to reise, when light of truthe in these matters is forthe sprongen, and openly published among commons, then shall not soche dark enfame dare appere, for pure shame of his falsnes, as some men there ben that ther owne enfame can none otherwise voide, or els excuse, but by hindring of other mennes fame, whiche that by none other cause clepen other men fals, but for with ther own falsnesse mowen thei not ben avaunsed, or els by false sclandryng wordes other men shendin ther owne true sclander to make seme the lasse, for if soche men woulde ther eyen of ther conscience revolve, thei shoulde seene the same sentence, thei legen on other, spring out of ther sides, with so many branches, it wer impossible to nomber. The which therefore maie it be saied in that thing, this man thou demest, therein thy self thou condempnest. But (qð she) understande not by these wordes, that thou wene me saie The to be worthie sclander, for any matter tofore written, truly I would witness the contrary, but I saie that the bemes of sclandring words maie not ben doen awaie, till the daie of dome. For how should it not yet emonges so gret plentie of peple ben many shrewes, sithen when no mo but eighte persones in Noe's ship wer closed, yet one was a shrewe, and scorned his father? These things (qð she) I trowe, shewen that false fame is not to drede, ne of wise persones to accepte, and namely not of thy Margarite, whose wisdom hereafter I think to declare, wherefore I wot well soche thyng shall not her astert, then of unkindnesse thine oth hath The excused at the full. But now if thou woldest not greve, me liste a fewe thinges to shewe. Saie on (qð I) what ye wol, I trowe ye mene but trouthe, and my profite in tyme commyng. Truelie (qð she) that is sothe, so thou con wel kepe these wordes, and in the inrest secrete chamber of thine herte so faste 'hem close, that thei never flitte, then shalte thou finde 'hem availyng. Loke now what peple haste thou served, whiche of 'hem all in tyme of thine exile ever The refreshed, by the value of the left coigned plate, that walketh in money? Who was sorie, or made any rueth for thy disese? If thei hadden gotten ther purpose of thy misaventure, sette thei not an haw. Lo! when thou wer enprisoned, howe faste thei hied in helpe of thy deliveraunce. I wene of thy deth thei yeve but lite: Thei looked after no thyng, but after ther owne lustes. And if thou liste saie the sothe, all that meinie that in this brigge The broughten, looked rather after thyne helps, then The to have releved.

Owen not yet some of 'hem money for his commons? Paidest not thou for some of ther dispences, till till thei were tourned out of Seland? Who yave The ever ought, for any ridyng thou maideſt? Yet parde, ſome of 'hem token money for thy chamber, and putte tho pens in his pouſe, unwetyng of the renter.

Lo! for which a companie thou medleſt, that neither The, ne them ſelf mighten helpe, of unkindneſſe, nowe thei bere the name, that thou ſuppoſeſt of 'hem for to have. What might thou more have doen, then thou diddeſt, 'but if thou wouldeſt in a falſe quarell have ben a ſtinking martire? I wene thou fleddeſt as long as thou might, ther privitie to concele, whiche thyng thou heleſte lenger then thou ſhouldeſt. And thilke that ought The money, no pennie wold paie, thei wend thy returne had ben an impoſſible. How might thou better have 'hem proved but thus in thy nedie diſeſes? Now haſte thou enſample, for whom thou ſhalt meddle; truelie this lore is worth many godes.

Ofre gan love to ſterne me theſe wordes, thinke on my ſpech, for truelie here after, it wold doe The likyng, and how ſo ever thou ſe Fortune ſhape her whele to tourne, this meditation by no waie revolve. For certes fortune ſheweth her faireſt, when ſhe thinketh to begile. And as me thought heretoforne, thou ſaideſt thy loos in love, for thy rightwiſenelle ought to be raiſed, ſhould be allowed in tyme comyng, thou might in love ſo The have, that loos and fame ſhull ſo ben raiſed, that to thy frendes comforte, and ſorowe to thin enemies, endleſſe ſhul endure.

But if thou were that one Shepe emonges the hundred, were loſte in deſerte, and out of the waie had erred, and nowe to the flocke art reſtored, the Shepherde hath in The no joye, and thou ayen to the Forreſte tourne. But that right as the ſorowe and anguiſhe was grete, in tyme of thyne outwaigoyng, right ſo joye and gladnes ſhall be doubled, to ſeen The converted, and not as Lot's wife ayen lokyng, but whole counſaile with the Shepe folowyng, and with them graſſe and herbes gaðer. Never the later (qð ſhe) I ſaie not theſe thynges for no wantruſte that I have, in ſuppoſyng of The otherwiſe then I ſhould. For truelie I wote wel, that now thou art ſette in ſoche a purpoſe, out of whiche The liſte not to part. But I ſaie it, for many men ther ben that to knowyng of other mennes doyns ſetten all ther cure, and lightly deſiren the badde to clatter, rather than the gode, and have no will ther owne maner to amende. Thei alſo hate of old rancour lightly haven, and there that ſoche thing abideth, ſodainly in ther mouthes procedeth the habundaunce of the herte, and wordes as ſtones, ſtones out throwe. Wherefore my counſaile is evermore, openlie and apertlie, in what place thou ſit, counterplete th' errorrs and meninges, in as ferre as thou 'hem wiſteſt falſe, and leve for no wight to make 'hem be knowe in every bodies ere, and be alwaie pacient, and uſe Jacobe's wordes, what ſo ever menne of The clappen, I ſhall ſuſtain myladie's wrathe, whiche I have deſerved, ſo long as my Margarite hath rightwiſed my cauſe. And certes (qð ſhe) I witneſſe my ſelf, if thou thus converted, ſoroweſt in gode menyng in thyne herte, wolt from all vanitie parſitely departe, in conſolacion of al gode pleaſaunce; the Margarite, which that thou deſireſt, after wil of thine hert, in a maner of a mother's pitie, ſhull fullie accept The into grace. For right as thou renteſt clothes in open ſight, ſo openlie to ſowe 'hem at his worſhippe, withouten reprofe commended. Alſo, right as thou were enſample of mocheſolde errour, right ſo thou muſte be enſample of manyſolde correccion, ſo gode favour to forgoynge all erreure deſtroyinge cauſeth diligente love with many plaited praiſynges to followe, and then ſhall all the firſte errorrs make the followyng worſhippes to ſeme hugelie encreſed; blacke and white ſette togiðer every for other more ſemeth, and ſo doth every thing contrarie in kinde. But infame that goeth alwaie tofore, and praiſing worſhip by any cauſe folowyng after, maketh to riſe thilke honour, in double of welth, and that quencheſt the ſpote of the firſte enſame. Why weneſt I ſaie theſe thynges, in hinderyng of thy name? Naie, naie, God wotte, but for pure encreſyng worſhippe, thy rightwiſenelle to commende, and thy trouthe to ſeme the more. Woteſt not well thy ſelf, that thou in forme of makyng paſſeſt not Adame, that ete of the apple? Thou paſſeſt not the ſtedfaſtnes of Noe, that etyng of the grape become dronke. Thou paſſeſt not the chaſtite of Lot, that laie by his daughter. Eke the nobley of Abraham, whom God reproved by his pride. Alſo Davide's mekenelle, whiche for a woman made Urie be ſlawe. What? alſo Hector of Troie, in whom no defeaute might be founde, yet is he reproved that he ne had with manhod not ſuſſed the warre begon: ne Paris to have went into Grece, by whom ganne all the ſorowe: for truelie hym lacketh no venime of privie conſentyng, whiche that openly levethe a wrong to withſaie. Lo eke an olde proverbe, emong many other! He that is ſill; ſemeth as he graunted.

Now by theſe enſamples, thou might fully underſtand, that theſe thinges ben writ to your lernyng, and in rightwiſnes of tho perſones, as thus: To every wight his defeaut committed made godeneſſe afterwardeſ doen be the more in reverence, and in open ſhewyng; for enſample, is it not ſong in holy church? Lo how neceſſarie was Adame's ſinne? David the kyng gatte Salomon the king, of her that was Urie's wife. Truelie for reprofe is none of theſe thynges writte: Right ſo tho I reherſe thy beſoredeſe, I repreve The never the more, ne for no villany of The ar thei reherſed, but for worſhip, ſo thou continue well hereafter, and for profite of thy ſelf I rede thou on 'hem thinke.

Then ſaied I right thus. Ladie of unitie and accorde, envie, and wrathe lurken there thou comeſte in place; ye weten well your ſelve, and ſo doen many other, that while I adminiſtred the office of common doynge, as in rulyng of the ſtabliſhementes emonges the peple, I deſouled never my conſcience for no maner dede, but ever by wit and by counſail of the wiſeſt the matters weren drawen to ther right endes. And thus truly for you ladie, I have deſired ſoche cure, and certes in your ſervice was I not idle, as far as ſoch doing of my cure ſtretcheth. That is a thing (qð ſhe) that may draw many herts of noble, and voyce of common into glorie, and fame is not but wretched and fickle.

Alas! that mankind coviteth in ſo leud a wiſe to be rewarded of any gode dede, ſithe glorie of Fame in this worlde is not but hinderyng of glorie in tyme comyng. And certes (qð ſhe) yet at the hardeſte ſoche fame into heven is not the yerthe but a centre to the circle of heven? A pricke is wonder little, in reſpecte of all the circle, and yet in all this pricke maie no name be borne, in maner of perſyng, for many obſtacles, as waters and wilderneſſe, and ſtraunge languages, and not onelie names of menne ben ſtilled, and holden out of knowleging, by theſe obſtacles, but alſo citees and relmes of proſperitie ben letted to be knowe, and ther reſon hindred, ſo that thei mow not ben perſitely in mennes proper underſtandyng. Howe ſhould then the name of a ſingular londenoyſ paſſe the glorious name of London, whiche by many it is commended, and by many it is lacked, and in many mo places in yerth not known, en, then knowen? for in many countrees litle is London in knowyng, or in speche, and yet emong one maner of peple maie not soche fame in godenesse come, for as many as praisen, commonly as many lacken. Fie then on soche maner fame! slepe and suffre him that knoweth privitie of hertes, to dele soche fame in thilke place, there nothing ayenst a sothe shal neither speke, ne dare apere, by attorney, ne by other maner. How many grete-named, and many grete in worthinesse losed, han be tofore this tyme, that now out of memorie are slidden, and clenelie forgotten, for defaute of wrytynges, and yet scriptures for gret elde so ben defased, that no perpetualitie maie in hem ben judged. But if thou wolt make comparison to ever, what joye maiest thou have in yerthly name? it is a faire likenesse, a pees or one graine of Whete to a thousande shippes full of corne charged. What number is betwene the one and the other? and yet mowe bothe thei be nombred, and ende in reckenyng have. But truely al that maie be nombred, is nothing to reckon, as to thilke that maie not be nombred, for of thinges ended is made comparison, as one litle, an other grete, but in thynges to have an ende, and an other no ende, soche comparison maie nor be founden. Wherefore in heven to ben losed with God hath none ende, but endlesse endureth, and thou canste nothyng doen arighte, but thou desire the rumour thereof be heled, and in every wightes ere, and that dureth but a pricke in respecte of the other. And so thou sekest rewarde of folkes, smale wordes, and of vain praisynges. Truelie therein thou lefeste the guerdone of vertue, and lefeste the grettest valour of conscience, and uphap thy renome everlastyng. Therefore boldly renome of fame of the yerth should be hated, and fame after deth should be desired, of werkes of vertue asketh guerdoning, and the soule causeth all vertue: Than the soule delivered out of prison of yerthe, is moste worthie soche guerdone emong to have in the everlastyng fame, and not the bodie that causeth all manne's evils.

OF twey thynges art thou answered, as me thinketh (qð Love) and if any thing be in doubte in thy soule, shewe it forth, thyne ignorance to clere, and leve it for no shame. Certes (qð I) there ne is no bodie in this worlde, that aught could saie by reason ayenst any of your skilles, as I leve, and by my wit now fele I well, that evill spekers, or berers of enfame, may litle greve, or let my purpose, but rather by soche thing my quarel to be forthered. Yea (qð she) and it is proved also, that the ilke jewell in my keping shall not there-through be stered, of the lest moment that might be imagined. That is sothe (qð I). Well (qð she) then leveth there to declare that thy insuffisaunce is no maner letting; as thus, for that she is so worthie, thou shouldest not climbe so high, for thy moebles and thin estate arn voided, thou thinkest fallen in soche miserie, that gladnes of thy pursute woll not on The discende. Certes (qð I) that is sothe: right soche thought is in myne herte, for commonlie it is spoken, and for an olde proverbe it is ledged: he that beweth to hie, with chippes he maie lese his fight. Wherefore I have ben about in al that ever I might, to studie wayes of remedie by one side or by an other. Now (qð she) God forbede, ere thou seke any other doynge, but soche as I have lerned The in our restyng whiles, and soche herbes ben planted in our Gardins. Thou shalte well understande, that above man is but one God alone. How (qð I) han men tofore this tyme trusted in writtes and chauntementes, and in helpes of Spirites, that dwellen in the aire, and thereby thei han gotten ther desires, where as firste for all his manlie power he daunced behinde.

O (qð she) fie on soche matters! for truelie that is sacrilege, and that shal have no fort with any of my servauntes in myne eyen shal soche thing not be loked after. How often is it commanded by these passed wise, that to one God shall men serve, and not to Goddes? And who that list to have mine helpes, shall ask non helpe of foule spiritus. Alas! is not man makid semblable to God? Wofte thou not well, that all vertue of liveliche werkyng by Godd's purveighaunce is under put to resonable cature in yerth? is not every thyng a thishalfe God? Made buxome to manne's contemplacion, understanding in heven, and in yerthe, and in helle. Hath not manne beyng with stoness, soule of wexyng with trees and herbes?

Hath he not soule of feling with bestes, fishes, and foules, and soule of reson and understanding with Angels? so that in him is knitte all maner of livinges by a resonable proporcion. Also man is made of all the fower Elements. All univerfitie is rekened in him alone: he hath under God principalitie above althinges. Now is his soule here, now a thousande mile hence, now farre, now nighe, now lowe, as farre in a moment, as in mountenaunce of ten Winter, and all this in manne's governaunce and disposicion. Then sheweth it, that men ben liche unto Goddes, and children of moste height. But nowe sithen all thynges are underput to the wille of resonable creatures, God forbede any man to win that Lordship, and aske helpe of any thyng lower then hym selfe, and then namelie of foule thinges inopinable.

Nowe then, why shouldest thou wene to love to high, sithen nothing is The above, but God alone. Truelie I wote well, that the ilke jewell is in a maner even in line of degre there thou art thy selfe, and nought above, save thus. Angell upon Angell, man upon man, and Devill upon Devill, han a maner of Sovereintie, and that shall cese at the daie of Dome: and so I saie, though thou be put to serve thilke jewell, duryng thy life, yet is that no servage of underputtyng, but a maner of travailing plesaunce, to conquere and get that thou haste not.

I fet now the hardest in my servise, now thou deidest for sorowe of wantyng in thy desires: truelie all hevenlie bodies with one voyce shall come, and make melodie in thy coming, and saie welcome our fere, and worthie to enter into Jupiter's joy, for thou with mighte haste overcome dethe, thou wouldest never flitte out of thy servise, and we all shall now praie to the Goddes, rowe by rowe to make the ilke Margarite, that no routh had in this persone, but unkindely without comforte lette The deie, shall be set her self in soch wise, that in yerth for part of vengeaunce shall she no joye have in love's servise: and when she is dedde, then shal her soule ben broughte up into thy presence, and whither thou wilt chese, the ilke soule shal ben committed. Or els after thy deth, anone all the foresaid hevenlie bodies by one accorde shal be nommen from thilke perle, all the vertues that firste her were taken, for she hath hem forfeited, by that on The my servaunte in thy live she would not suffer to worche all vertues, withdrawn by might of the high bodies: Why then shouldest thou wene so any more? And if The list to loke upon the lawe of kinde, and wise order, whiche to me was ordained, sothlie none age, none overtourning tyme hitherto had no tyme ne power, to chaunge the weddyng, ne that knotte to unbinde of two hertes through one assente in my presence together accorded to endure till deth hem departe. What trowest thou every ideot wot the menyng and the privie entente of these thinges? Thei wene for sothe, that soche accorde mai not be, but the Rose of maidenhede be plucked, doe waie, doe waie, thei knowe nothyng of this: for consente of two hertes alone maketh the fastenyng of the knot, neither lawe of kind, ne manne's Lawe, determineth neither the age, ne the qualitie of persones, but onelie accorde betwene thilke twaie. And truelie, after tyme that soche accorde by ther consent in herte, is enfeled and put in my tresorie, amonges my privie thinges then ginneth the name of spoufaile, and althoughe thei breken forward bothe, yet soche matter enfeled is kepte in remembraunce for ever. And se now that spouses have the name anon after accorde, though the Rose be not take. The Aungell bade Joseph, take Mary his Spouse, and to Egypt wende: Lo! she was cleped spouse, and yet toforne ne after neither of 'hem bothe mente no fleshely luste knowe, wherefore the wordes of trouthe accorden, that my servautes shoulde forsake bothe father and mother, and be adherand to his spouse, and thei two in unitie of one fleshe shoulde accorde. And this wise two that werne firste in a little maner disacordaunte, higher that one, and lower that other, ben made evenliche in gre to stonde.

But nowe to enforme The, that ye benliche Goddes, these clerkes saine, and in determinacion shewen, that thre thinges haven the names of Goddes ben cleped, that is to saine, Man, Devill, and Images; but yet is there but one God, of whom all godenesse, all grace, and all vertue cometh, and he is loving and true, and everlasting, and prime cause of all beyng thynges: but men ben Goddes, loving and true, but not everlasting, and that is by adopcion of the everlasting God. Devils ben Goddes, stirring by a manner of livyng, but neither ben thei true, ne everlasting, and ther name of godlihedde thei han by usurpacion, as the Prophete saith: All Goddes of Gentiles, that is to saie Painims, are Devils. But Images ben Goddes by nuncupacion, and thei ben neither living ne true, ne everlasting: After these wordes thei clepen Goddes Images wrought with mennes handes.

But nowe resonable cature that by adopcion alone art to the grete God everlasting, and thereby thou art God cleped, let thy fathers maners so entre thy wittes, that thou might folowe, in as moche as longeth to The, thy father's worship, so that in nothing thy kinde from his will decline, ne from his nobley povertie. In this wise if thou werche, thou art above al other thinges, save GOD alone, and so saie no more thine herte to serve in to hie a place.

Fullie have I now declared thin estate to be so gode, so thou followe thereafter, and that the objection first by The aleged, in worthines of thy Margarite shal not The let, as it shal forther The, and encrese The, it is now to declare the last objection in nothing maie greve. Yes certes (qđ I) bothe greve, and let muste it nedes, the contrary maie not ben proved, and se now why. While I was glorious in worldlie welfulnesse, and had soch godes in welth, as maken men riche, tho was I drawe into compaignies that loos, prife, and name yeven: Tho louteden blasours, tho curreiden glosours, tho welcomeden flatterers, tho worshipped thilk, that now deinen not to loke. Every wight in soche yerthlie wele habundaunt is hold, noble, precious, benigne, and wise, to do what he shall in any degre that men hym set, all be it that the sothe be in the contrary of all tho thinges: but he that can, ne never so wel him behave, and hath vertue haboundaunte, in manyfolde maners, and be not welthed with soche yerthlie godes, is holde for a sole, and saied his wit is but sorted. Lo how false for ever is holde true! Lo howe true is cleped false, for wantyng of godes! Also Ladie, dignitees of office, maken menne mikell comended, as thus: he is so gode, wer he out, his pere should men not find. Truelie I trowe of some soch that art so praised, were thei out ones, an other should make him so be knowe, he should of no wise no more ben looked after: but onely soles well I wot, desiren soch newe thinges. Wherefore I wonder that thilke governour, out of whom alone the causes proceden, that governen all thinges, which that hath ordeined this worlde in werkes of the kindly bodies so be governed not with unstedfaste or happious thinge, but with rules of reson, whiche shewen the course of certain thinges: why suffreth he soche sliding chaunges, the misturnen soche noble thinges as ben we men, that arne a faire persell of the yerth, and holden the uppereste degre under God of benigne thinges, as ye saiden right now your self, should never man have ben set in so worthie a place, but if his degre were ordained noble. Alas! thou that knittest the purveighaunce of all thynges, why lokest thou not to amenden these defautes? I se shrewes that han wicked maners sitten in chaires of domes, Lambes to punishen, there Wolves should ben punished. Lo, vertue shined naturelly for povertie lurketh, and is hid under cloude: but the Mone false forsworne, as I knowe my self, for aver and yestes hath usurped to shine by daie light, with peinture of other mennes praisynges, and truely thilke forged light foully should fade, were the trouthe awaie of colours feined. Thus is night touned into daie, and daie into night, Winter into Sommer, and Sommer into Winter, not in dede, but in misclepyng of folishe peple.

Nowe (qđ she) what weneste thou of these thynges? How selest thou in thine hert, by what governaunce that this cometh about?

Certes (qđ I) that wotte I never, but if it be, that Fortune hath graunt from above, to lede the ende of menne as her liketh. Ah nowe I se (qđ she) the entent of thy menyng: Lo! bicause thy worldly godes ben fulliche dispente, thou berafte out of dignitie of office, in which thou madeest thy gathering of thilke godes, and yet diddest in that office, by counsaile of wise, any thyng were ended, and true were unto 'hem, whose profite thou shouldest loke, and seest now many, that in the ilke herveest made of The mokell, and now for glosyng of other deineth The nought to forther, but enhaunten fals shrewes by witnessyng of trouthe: These thinges greveth thine herte, to seen thy self thus abated, and then frailtie of mankinde ne setteth but litle by the lesers of soche richesse, have he never so moche vertue, and so thou wenest of thy jewell to renne in dispente, and not ben accepted into grace: All this shal The nothyng hinder. Now (qđ she) firste thou woste well, thou lostest nothyng that ever mightest thou challenge for thine own: When nature brought The forth, come thou not naked out of thy mother's wombe? Thou haddeest no richesse, and when thou shalt enter into the ende of every fleshy bodie, what shalte thou have with The then? So every richesse thou halte, in tyme of thy living, n'is but lent, thou might therein challenge no propertie. And se now, every thing that is a manne's owne, he maie do therewith what hym liketh, to yeve or to kepe: but richesse thou plainest from The loste, if thy might had stretched so forth, saie thou wouldest have kepte, multiplied with mo other: and so ayenste thy will ben thei departed from The, wherefore thei wer never thine. And if thou laudest and joyest any wight, for he is stuffed with soche maner richesse, thou art in that beleve begiled, for thou wenest thilk joye to be felinesse, or els ese, and he that hath loste soche haps, to ben unselie. Ye forsothe (qđ I). Well (qđ she) then woll I prove that unsely, in that wise is to praise, and so the tother is the contrary to be lacked. Howe so (qđ I)? For unselie (qđ she) begileth not, but sheweth the entent of her workyng. Et è contra. Selinesse begileth, for in prosperitie, she maketh a jape in blindenesse, that is, she windeth hym to make sorowe, when she withdraweth. Wolte thou not (q^d she) praise hym better, that sheweth to The his herte, tho it be with bitande wordes, and dispitous, then hym that gloseth, and thinketh in ther absence, to do The many harmes. Certes (q^d I) the one is to commende, and the other to lacke and despise. A ha (q^d she) right so ese while she lasteth, gloseth and flattereth, and lightly voideth, when she moſte pleaſantly ſheweth, and ever in her absence ſhe is aboute to doe The tene and ſorowe in herte: but unſelie all be it with bitande chere, ſheweth what ſhe is, and ſo doeth not that other, wherefore unſelie doeth not begile. Seleneſſe deceveth: unſelie putteth awaie doubt. That one maketh men blind, that other openeth ther eyen, in ſhewyng of wretchedneſſe. The one is full of drede, to leſe that is not his owne: That other is ſober, and maketh men diſcharged of mokell hevineſſe in burthen: The one draweth a man from very gode, the other haleth him to vertue, by the hokes of thoughtes. And weneſt thou not, that thy diſeſe hath doen The mokell more to winne, then ever yet thou loſteſt? And more than ever the contrary made The winne? Is it not a grete gode to thy thinking, for to knowe the hertes of thy ſothſaſt frendes. Parde thei ben proved to the full, and the true have diſcovered from the falſe. Truely at the goyng of thilke brotell joye, there yede no more a waie, then the ilke that was not thyn proper: He was never firm that lightly departed, thine own gode therfore levethe it ſtil with The. Nowe gode (q^d she) for how moche woldeſt thou ſometyme have bought this very knowynge of thy frendes, frome the flaterynge flyes that they glosed, whan thou thought thy ſelfe ſely! But thou that plaineſt of loſſe in richeſſe, haſt founden the moſt dere worthy thinge that thou clepeſt unſely hath made The moche thing to winnen. And alſo for concluſioun of all, he is frend that nowe levethe not his hert from thin helpeſ. And if that Margarit denieth now not to ſuffre her vertues ſhine to The wardes, wyth ſprede bemes, as farre or farther than if thou were ſely in worldely joye, Trewly I ſaye not elles but ſhe is ſome dele to blame.

Ah, pece (q^d I) and ſpeke no more of thys, mine herte braketh, nowe thou toucheſt any ſoche wordes. A well (q^d she) thanne lette us ſyngen, thou hereſt no more of theſe thinges at this thime.

Thus endeth the firſt boke of the Teſtament Love.

Here after ſoloweth the ſeconde.

Very welth may not be founden in al this world, and that is wel ſene: Lo! howe in my moſte comfort, as I wende and moſt ſuppoſed to have had full anſwer of my contrary thoughtes, ſodainly it was vaniſhed. And all the workes of man faren in the ſame wiſe, whan folke wenen beſte ther entente for to have, and willes to perſourm, anon chaunging of the liſt ſide to the right halve, tourneth it ſo clene into another kind, that never ſhal it come to the firſte plite in doynge.

O this wrongſul ſtering ſo ſone otherwiſed out of knowing! but for my purpoſe was at my beginnyng, and ſo dureth yet, yf God of his grace tyme woll me graunt, I thinke to perſorme this worke, as I have begonne in love, after as my thinne witte, wyth inſpyracyon of him, that hildeth all grace, woll ſuffre. Grevouſlye God wotte have I ſuffred a grete throwe that the Romain Emperour, whiche in unyte of love ſhuld accorde and every with other in cauſe of other to avaunce, and namely ſithe this Empire to be corrected of ſo many ſectes in hereſy, of faith, of ſervice, of rule in love's religion. Trewly all were it but to ſhende erroneus opinions, I maye it no lenger ſuffre: For many menne ther ben that ſain love to ben in gravell and ſande, that with Se ebbing and flowing woweth, as riches that ſodainly waniſheth. And ſome ſaine that love ſhulde be in windy blaſtes, that ſtoundemele tourneth as a plane, and glorie of renome, whiche after luſtes of the variaunt peple is areyſed or ſtilled. Manie alſo wenen that in the ſunne and the mone, and other ſterres, love ſhulde ben founden, for amonge all other planettes moſte ſoverainlie they ſhinen, as dignitees in reverence of eſtates rather than gode han, and occupien. Full many alſo there ben that in okes and in huge poſtes ſuppoſen love to ben grounded, as in ſtrength and in might, which mowen not helpen ther owne wretchedneſſe, whan they ginne to fal. But ſoche diverſite of ſectes ayenſt the rightfull byleve of love, theſe errours ben forth ſpredde, that loves ſervauntes in the true rule and ſtedfaſt faith in no place darne apere: Thus irrecuparable joy is went, and any endleſſe is entred. For no man aright reproveth ſoche errours, but confirment ther wordes, and ſain that badde is noble gode, and godenes is badde, to whiche folke the prophet biddeth wo without ende.

Alſo many tongues of grete falſe techinges in gi-linge maner, principallye in my times, not onely with wordes, but alſo with armes, loves ſervauntes and profeſſe in his religion of trew rule, purſewen to confounden and to diſtroyen. And for as moche as holy fathers, that our chriſten faith aproved and ſtrengthened to the Jewes, as to men reſonable, and of divinite lerned, proved thilke faith with reſones, and with auctoritees of the olde teſtament, and of the newe ther pertinacie to diſtroy: But to painyms, that for beſtes and houndes wer holde to putte hem out of ther errour, was myracles of God ſhewed. Theſe thinges were figured by coming of th' angell to the ſhepherdes, and by the ſterre to painims kinges as who ſaith: Angel reſonable, to reſonable cature, and ſterre of miracle to peple beſtial, not lerned, werne ſent to enforme. But I lovers clerke in al my conning and with al my mightes, trewly I have no ſoche grace in vertue of miracles, ne for no diſconſite falſhedes, ſuffiſeth not auctorites alone, ſithen that ſuche heretikes and mayntaynours of falſites. Wherefore I wot well, ſithen that they ben men, and reſon is approved in hem, the cloude of errour hath ther reſon bewond with probable reſons, whiche that catchende wit rightfully may not with ſitte. But my travayllynge ſtudie I have ordeined hem, with that auctorite myſgloſed by manne's reſon to graunt ſhall be enduced.

Now ginneth my penne to quake, to thinken on the ſentences of the envious peple, whiche alwaye ben redy, both ryder and goer to ſkorne and to jape this leude boke, and me for rancoure and hate in ther hertes they ſhullen ſo diſpyſe, that althoughe my boke be leude, yet ſhal it ben more leude holden, and by wicked wordes in manye maner apaired. Certes me thinketh the ſowne of ther badde ſpeche right nowe is full bothe mine eres. O gode precious Margarite, mine herte ſhulde wepe, yf I wiſt ye token hede of ſoche manere ſpeche, but trewly I wotte wel in that your wyſedome ſhall not aſterte. For of God maker of kind witneſſe I toke, that for none envy ne yvel have I drawe this matter togiðer, but only for godeneſſe to maintain, and errours in falſites to diſtroy. Wherefore (as I ſaid) with reſon I thinke thilke forſaid errours to diſtroye and dequace.

Theſe

These reſons and ſoch other, yf they enduce men in love's ſervice trewe to beleve of parſite bliſſe, yet to full faith in credence of deſerte fully mowe they not ſuffiſe, ſithen faith hath no merit of mede, whan manne's reſon ſheweth experience in doing. For utterly no reſon the parſite bliſſe of love by no way maye make to be comprehended. Lo! what is a perſell of lover's joye? parſite ſcience in gode ſervice, of ther deſire to comprehend in bodely doinge the likinge of the ſoule, nat as by a glaſſe to have contemplacion of tyme cominge, but thilke firſte imagined and thought, after face to face in beholdyng: what hert, what reſon, what underſtandinge can make his heaven to be ſeled and know without aſſay of doing? certes none. Sithen than of love cometh ſoche fruite in bliſſe, and love in himſelfe is the moſte amonge other vertues, as clerkes ſain: The fede of ſoche ſpringinge in all places, in all countreis, in all worldes ſhulde ben ſowe.

But o wellawaye! thilke fede is forſake, and mowen not ben ſuffred the londetillers to ſet a werke, without meddlyng of cockle, badde wedes which ſomtime ſtonken hath caught the name of love amonge ydiotes and baddemening peple. Never the latter, yet howe ſo it be that menne clepe thilke kinge preciouſeſt in kinde, with many eke names, that other thinges, that the ſoule yeven the ilke noble name, it ſheweth well that in a maner men have a grete lyking in wurſhipping of thilke name, wherfore this worke have I writte, and to the tytle of love's name I have it avowed in a maner of ſacrifice, that where ever it be radde, it mow in merite by the excellence of thilke name the more wex in authorite, and wurſhippe of takinge in hede, and to what entente it was ordained, the inferes mowen ben moved: Every thinge to whome is owande occaſion done as for his ende, Aristotle ſuppoſeth that the actes of every thinge ben in a maner his finall cauſe. A final cauſe is noblerer, or els even as noble as thilke thinge that is finally to thilke ende, wherfore accion of thinge everlaſting is demed to be eternall, and not temporall, ſithen it is his finall cauſe: Right ſo the actes of my boke love, and love is noble, wherfore though my boke be leude, the cauſe with whiche I am ſtered, and for whom I ought it don, noble forſothe ben bothe. But bycauſe that in conninge I am yonge, and canne yet but crepe, thys leude A, b, c, have I ſet into lerning, for I can not paſſen the tellinge of thre as yet: and yf God will in ſhorte time, I ſhall amende this leudenefſe in joyninge of ſyllables, whiche thinge for dulneſſe of witte I maye not in thre letters declare. For trewly I ſay the godeneſſe of my Margarite perle wolde yeve matter enditinge to many clerkes: certes her mercy is more to me ſweter than any lyvynges, wherfore my lyppes mowen not ſuffiſe in ſpeking of her ful laude and worſhippe as they ſhuld. But who is that in knowing of the orders of heaven, and putteth his reſones in the erthe: I forſothe may not with blere eyen the ſhininge ſonne of vertue in bright whele of this Margarite beholde, therfore as yet I maye het not diſcrive in vertue as I wolde. In time comming in another tretife thorow Godde's grace, this ſonne clerenefſe of vertue to be knowe, and howe ſhe enlumineth al this day, I think to declare.

IN this mene while this comfortable lady gan ſing a wounder mater of enditing in Latin, but trewly the noble colours in Rhetorike wiſe knit were ſo craftely, that my conning wold not ſtretch to remembre, but the ſentence I trowe ſomedeſe have I in minde. Certes they were wonder ſwete of ſowne, and they were touched al in lamentacion wiſe, and by no werbelles of mirthe. Lo! thus ganne ſhe ſing in Latin, as I may conſtrewe it in our Engliſhe tonge.

Alas! that theſe heavenlye bodies ther lyght and courſe ſhewen, as nature yave 'hem in commaundement at the ginning of the firſte age, but theſe thinges in fre choiſe of reſon han none underſtandinge: but manne that ought to paſſe all thyng of doinge, of right courſe in kinde, overwhelmed ſorthenefſe by wrongful tytle, and hath drawen the ſterre of envy to gon by his ſide, that the cliques of me that ſhoulde be his ſhinande ſonne, ſo ofte is ſey, that it wened thilke error thorowe him come in, ſhulde ben myne owne defaute. Trewly therfore I have me withdrawe, and made my dwellyng out of lande in an yle by my ſelfe, in the ocean cloſed, and yet ſaine there many they have me harberowed, but God wot they ſaylen. Theſe thinges me greven to thinke, and namely on paſſed gladneſſe, that in this worlde was wonte me diſporte of highe and lowe, and nowe it is failed: they that wolden maiſtries me have in thilke ſoundes, in heaven on high above Saturne's ſphere, in ſeſonable tyme wer they loged, but nowe come queinte counſaillours that in no houſe wold ſuffre me ſejourne, wherof is pite: And yet ſain ſome that they me have in celler with wine ſhed, in garnere ther corne is laide, covered with whet, in ſacke ſowed with wol, in purſe with money faſte knitte, among pames mouled in a wiche, in preſſe among clothes laid with riche pelure araied, in ſtable amonge horſe and other beſtes as hogges, ſhepe, and nete, and in other maner wiſe. But thou maker of light (in winkinge of thin eye the ſonne is queint) wolte right well that I in trewe name was never thus herberowed. Somtyme toſorne the ſonne in the ſeventh partie was ſmiten, I bare both croſſe and mitre, to yeve it where I wolde. With me the pope went a fore, and I tho was wurſhiped of al holy church, kinges baden me ther crownes holden. The lawe was ſet as it ſhuld tofore the judge as wel that pore durſt ſhewe his greſe as the riche, for all his money. I defended tho tailages, and was redy for the pore to pay. I made grete feſtes in my time, and noble ſonges, and married damoſelles of gentill feture, withouten golde or other rycheſſe. Pore clerkes, for witte of ſchole, I ſette in churches, and made ſoche perſones to preach: and tho was ſervice in holy churches honeſt and devoute, in pleaunce bothe of God and of the peple. But nowe the leude for ſimonie is avanced, and ſhendeth al holye church. Now is ſteward for his achates, nowe is courtiour for his debates, now is eſchetoure for his wronges, nowe is loſell for his ſonges, perſoner and provendre alone, with whiche many thriftye ſhulde encreſe. And yet is this ſhrew behinde, freherte is forſake, and loſengeour is take. Lo! it accordeth, for ſoche there ben that voluntarie luſtes haunten in courte with ribaudrie, that til mid-night and more wol playe and wake, but in the church at matins he is behinde, for evil diſpoſicion of his ſtomake: therfore he ſhuld ete benebrede, and ſo dyd his ſire, his eſtate therewith to ſtrengthen. His aulter is broke, and lowe lithe in pointe to gone to the yerthe, but his horſe muſt ben eſy and hie to bere him over grete waters. His chalice pore, but he hath riche cuppes. No towaile but a ſhete there God ſhall ben handeled. And on his meteborde there ſhall ben bordeclothes and towelles many paire. At maſſe ſerveth but a clergion: five ſquiers in hall. Pore chauncell, open holes in every ſidebeddes of ſilke with tapites going al about his chambre. Pore maſſeboke and leude chapelaine, and broken ſurplice with manye an hole: gode houndes and manye, to hunte after harte and hare, to fede in ther feſtes. Of pore men have they grete care, for they ever crave, and nothinge offren, they wolden have 'hem dolven. But amonge amonge legyftres there dare I not come, my doinge they faine maken 'hem nedie, they ne wolde for nothing have me in town, for than wer tort and forth nought worthe an haw about, and plesen no men, but thilke grevous and torcious ben in might and in doinge: thefe things toforne said mowe wel if men lifte ryme, trewly they acorde nothinge. And for as moch as al thinges by me fhulden of right ben governed, I am foye to fe that governaunce faileth, as thus: To fene fmale and lowe governe the hie, and bodies above. Certes that polifye is nought, it is forbode by them that of governaunce treten and enformen. And right as beftly witte fhulde ben fubjecte to refon, fo erthely power in it felf the lower fhuld ben fubject to the hier.

What is worth thy body but it be governed with thy foule? right fo litel or nought is worthe erthely power, but if regnatife prudence in hedes governe the fmale, to whiche hedes the fmal owen to obey, and fuffre in ther governaunce. But foverainneffe ayenwarde fhulde thinke in this wife, I am fervaunt of thefe creatures to me delivered, not lord but defendour, not maifter but enfourmer, not poffeffour but in poffeffion, and to 'hem lyche a tre in whiche fparowes fhullen ftelen, ther birdes to norifhe and forth bringe under fuertie ayenft al reveinous foules and beftes, and not to be tiraunt them felfe. And than the fmale in refte and quiete, by the hedes wel difpofed, owen for ther foveraines helth and profperite to pray, and in other doinges, in maintenaunce thereof performe, wythouten other adminiftracion in rule of anye maner governaunce. And they wit have in 'hem, and grace to come to foch thinges, yet fhuld they cefe tyll ther hedes them cleped, although profit and plesaunce fhulde folowe. But trewly other governaunce ne other medlinge ought they not to claime, ne the hedes on 'hem to put. Trewly amonges cofinage dare I not come, but if richesse be my mene, forthly fhe and other bodily godes maketh nigh cofinage, ther never propinquite ne aly-aunce in lyve was, ne fhulde have be, n'ere it for ther medlinge maners, wherfore kindly am I not there leged. Povert of kintred is behind, richesse fuffreth 'hem to paffe: trewly he faithe he come never of Japhete's children: wherof I am foy that Japhete's children for povert in no linage ben rekened, and Caine's children for riches be maked Japhete's heirs. Alas! this is a wonder chaunge bytwene tho two Noe's children, fithen that of Japhete's ofspringe comedn knyghtes, and of Cain difcended the line of fervice to his brother's children. Lo! howe gentilleffe and fervice as cofins, both difcended out of two bretherne of one body: wherfore I fay fothenesse that gentilleffe in kinrede maken not gentil linage in fuccelfion, without defert of a manne's own felfe. Where is nowe the lyne of Alyfaundre the noble, or els of Hector of Troye? Who is difcended of right blode of lyne fro kinge Artour? Parde fir Perdicas, whom that kinge Alyfandre made to ben his heire in Grece, was of no kinge's blod, his dame was a tombyftre. Of what kintred ben the gentils in our daies? I trow therfore if any gode be in gentyleffe, it is onely that it femeth a maner of neceffite be input to gentilmen, that they fhulden not varien fro the vertues of ther 'aunceftres. Certes all maner lynage of men bene evenlyche in birth, for one father marker of all godenes enformed 'hem al, and al mortal folke of one fede are greined. Wherto avaut men of ther lynage, in cofinage, or in elde fathers? Loke nowe the ginning, and to God maker of man's perfon, there is no clerke ne no worthy in gentyleffe: and he that norifheth his corare with vices and unrefonable lufes, and leveth the kinde counfe, to whiche ende him brought forthe his byrthe, trewly he is ungentil, and amonge clerkes may not ben nempned. And therfore he that wol ben gentil, he mote daunten his flefhe fro vyces that caufen ungentilleffe, and leve also reignes of wicked lufes, and draw to him vertue, that in al places gentilleffe gentilmen maketh. And fo fpeke I in feminine-gendre in generall, of tho perfonnes at the reverence of one, whom every wight honoureth, for her bountie and her nobleffe ymade her to God fo dere, that his moðer fhe became, and fhe me hath had fo gret in worship, that I n'il for nothinge in open declare that in any thing ayenft her efte may fowne: For al vertue and al worthineffe of plesaunce in 'hem haboundeth. And although I wolde any thinge fpeke, truly I can not, I may finde in yvel of 'hem no maner mater.

RYght with thefe wordes fhe finte of that lamentable melodie, and I ganne with a lyvely herte to praye, if that it were lykyng unto her noble grace, fhe wolde her deine to declare me the mater that firft was begonne in whiche fhe lefte and finte to fpeke before fhe ganne to finge.

O (qð fhe) this is no newe thyng to me to fene you menne defyren after mater, whiche your felfe caufed to voyde.

Ah gode lady (qð I) in whom victorie of strength is proved above all other thing, after the judgement of Efdram, whose lordfhypp al lignes, who is that right as Emperour 'hem commaundeth, whether thilke ben not women, in whose likenesse to me ye aperen. For right as man halte the principalte of al thing under his beinge, in the mafculyne gendre, and no mo genders ben there but mafculine, and femynyne, all the remnaunte ben no genders but of grace, in facultie of grammer. Ryght fo in the feminine, the women holden the upperest degre of al thinges, under thilke gendre conteyned. Who bringeth forth kinges, which that ben lordes of Se and of yerthe? and al peples of women ben borne: they norifhe 'hem that graffen vines, they make men comforte in ther gladde cheres. Ther sorowe is deth to manne's herte. Without women the beyng of men were impoffible. They conne with ther fweteneffe the cruel hert ravifh, and make it meke, buxome, and benyng, without violence meving. In beautie of ther eyen, or eiles of other manere fetures, is all mens defires, ye more than in golde, precyous ftones, eyther anye richesse. And in this degre lady your felf manye hertes of men have fo bounden, that parfite bliffe in womankind to ben men wenen, and in nothinge els. Also lady the godeneffe, the vertue of women, by propertie of difcrecion, is fo wel knowne, by litleffe of malice, that defire to a gode asker by no waye conne they warne, and ye thanne that woll not paffe the kinde werchinge of your fectes by general difcrecion, I wotte well ye woll fo encline to by prayere, that grace of my requette fhall fully ben graunted. Certes (qð fhe) thus for the more parte fareth al mankind to praye, and to crie after woman's grace, and faine maine fantasies to make hertes to encline to your defires: and whan thefe fely women frely of ther kind beleven your wordes, and wenen all be gofpell the promife of your behestes, than graunt they to you ther hertes, and fullfyllen your lufes, wherthrough ther liberty in maifterfhip that they toforn had is thrallled, and fomaiked foverain and to be praid, the firft was fervaunt, and voice of prayer ufed. Anone as filled is your lufte, manye of you be fo trewe, that litel hede take ye of foch kindneffe, but with traifoun anone ye thinke 'hem begile, and let light of that thyng whiche firft ye maked to you wonders dere, fo what thing to women is to love any wight er fhe him well know, and have him proved in many halfe, for every glittering thing is not golde, and under colour of faire speche many vices may be hid and conseled. Therefore I rede no wight to trust on you to rath, mens chere, and ther speche right gileful is ful ofte, wherefore without gode assaye, it is not worthe on many on you to truste: Truly it is right kindly to every man that thinketh women betraye, and shewen outward al godenes, tyl he have his wil performed. Lo! the birde is begiled with the mery voice of the fouler's whistell. Whan a woman is closed in your nette, than wol ye causes finden, and bere unkindnes her on hande, or falsset upon her putte, your own malicious traizon with soche thing to excuse. Lo! than han women non other wrech in vengeance, but blober and wepe til 'hem lyst stent, and forily ther mishap complaine, and is put into wenyng that al men ben so untrew. How often have men chaunged ther loves in a litel while, or els for failing ther wil in ther places 'hem sette: for frendship shal be one, and fame with another him list for to have, and a thirde for delyte, or els were he lost both in packe and in clothes: is this faire? nay, God wot. I maye nat tel by thousand partes the wronges in trechery of soche false peple, for make they never so gode a bonde, all set ye at a myte, whan your herte tourneth: And they that wenen for sorow of you dey, the pite of your false hert is flow out of towne. Alas therefore, that ever any woman wolde take any wighte in her grace, til she knowe at the ful on whome she might at all assayes truste! Women con no more crafte in queinte knowinge, to understande the false discevable coniectementes of manne's begilinges. Lo! howe it fareth, though ye men gromen and crien, certes it is but disceit, and that preveth wel by th'endes in your working. How many women have bene lorne, and with shame soule shent by longe lastyng time, whiche thorowe mennes gile have ben disceved? ever ther fame shall dure, and ther dedes radde and songe in many londes, that they have done recoveren shal they never, but alway ben demed lightly, in soche plite ayen shulde they fal, of whiche flanders and tenes ye false men and wicked bene the very causes, on you by right ought these shames and these reproves all wholly discende. Thus arne ye al nighe untrew, for all your faire speche your herte is full sickell. What cause han ye women to dispise? better fruite than they bene, ne swetter spices to your behove mowe ye not finde, as farre as worldly bodyes stretchen. Loke to ther forminge at the makinge of ther persones by God in joye of paradise, for godenesse of manne's propre bodye were they maked, after the sawes of the bible, reherfing God's wordes in this wise: It is gode to mankinde that we make to him an helper. Lo! in paradise for youre helpe was this tre grafted, out of whiche all linage of man discendeth: yf a man be noble frute, of noble frute it is sprongen: the blysse of paradise to mennes sory hertes yet in this tre abyde. O! noble helpes ben these trees, and gentil jewel to ben worshipped of every gode creature: He that 'hem annoieth doth his owne shame, it is a comfortable perle ayenst al tenes. Every company is mirthed by ther present being. Trewly I wist never vertue, but a women were therof the rote. What is heven the worse, though Sarazins on it lien? Is your faith untrew, though rennegates maken theron lesinges? If the fire doth any wight bren, blame his own witte, that put himself so farre in the hete. Is not fyre gentillest and mooste element comfortable amonges all other? fire is chese werker in forthering sustenance to mankinde, shal fire bene blamed for it brend a sole naturelly, by his owne stulty witte in sterenge? Ah wicked folkes! for your propre malice, and shrewdenesse of your self, ye blame and dispise the precious thinge of your kinde, and whiche thinges amonge other most ye desiren. Trewly Nero and his children ben shrewes, that dispisen so ther dames. The wickednesse and giling of men, in disclaundring of thilke that most hath 'hem gladded and plesed, were impossible to write or to nempne. Never the later yet I saye, he that knoweth a waye, may it lightly passe: eke, an herb proved may safely to smertande fores ben laide: So I say in him that is proved is nothing soch yvels to gesse. But these thinges have I reherfed to warne you women all at ones, that to lyghtly without gode assay ye assenten not to man's speche. The sonne in the day light is to knowen from the mone that shineth in the nighte. Nowe to The thy self (qð she) as I have oft said, I know wel thine herte, thou arte none of all the tofore nempned peple, for I know wel the continuance of thy service, that never sithen I set The a werke, might thy Margarete for plesance, frendship, ne fairehede of none other, be in pointe moved from thin herte, wherefore into myne housholde hastelye I woll that thou entre, and all the parfyte privyte of my werkynge make it be knowe in thy understandynge, as one of my privy familyers. Thou desirest (qð she) faine to here of tho thinges there I left.

Ye forsothe (qð I) that were to me a grete blisse. Nowe (qð she) for thou shalt not wene that womans condicyons for faire speche soche thinge belongeth,

THou shalte (qð she) understand first amonge all other thynges, that al the cure of my servyce to me in the parfyte blisse in doinge is desyred in every manne's herte, be he never so moche a wretche, but every man travaileth by divers studye, and sekith thilke blysse by divers waies, but all the endes are knitte in selynesse of desire in the perfite blisse, that is soche joye, whan men it have gotten, there liveth no thing more to ben coveted: But how that desire of soche perfeccion in my service be kindly set in lovers hertes, yet ther erroneous opinions misturne it by falsnesse of wenyng. And although mennes understandinge be misturned, to knowe whiche shoulde ben the waye unto my persone, and whyther it abyde: yet wote they ther is a love in every wight, weneth by that thing that he coveteth most, he shoulde come to thilke love, and that is parfite blysse of my servautes, but than fulle blysse maye not be, and there lacke anye thinge of that blisse in anye side. Eke it foloweth than, that he that muste have ful blysse, lacke no blysse in love on no side.

Therefore lady (qð I tho) thilke blisse I have desired, and sothe tosome this, my self, by wayes of riches, of dignite, of power, and of renome, weninge me in tho thrages had ben thilke blisse, but ayenst the here it turneth. Whan I supposed best thilke blisse have get and come to the full purpose of your service, sodainly was I hindred, and throwen so fer abacke, that me thinketh an impossible to come there I lefte. I wote (qð she) and therefore haste thou failed, for thou wentest not by the hye waye, a litell misgoynge in the ginnyng causeth mikell error in the ende, wherefore of thilke blisse thou failedest, for having of riches, ne none of th'other thinges thou nempnedest, mowen not make soche perfite blisse in love, as I shall shewe. Therefore thei be not worthie to thilke blisse, and yet somewhat must ben cause and waie to thilke blisse: Ergo, there is some soche thing, and some waie, but it is little in usage, and that is not openly iknow. But what felest in thin hert of that service, in which by me thou art entred? wenest aught thy self yet be in the hie waie to my blisse? I shall so shewe it to The, thou shalt not con. saie the contrary.

Gode

Gode Ladie (qð I) altho I suppose it in my herte, yet would I here thine wordes, how ye menen in this matter. (Qð she) that I shall with my gode will. The ilke blisse desired somedele ye knowen, altho it be not perfetely, for kindly entencion ledeyth you thereto, but in thre maner livynges is all soche waies shewed. Every wight in this worlde to have this blisse, one of the ilke thre waies of lives muste procede, whiche after opinions of grete clerkes, are by names cleped, bestialliche, resonabliche, and vertuous: Manliche is worldliche, bestiallich is lustes and delitable, nothing restrained by bridle of reson, all that joieth and yeveth gladnesse to the hert, and it be ayenst reson, is likened to bestiall living, whiche thing followeth lustes and delites, wherfore in soche thing maie not that precious blisse, that is maister of al vertues, abide. Your fathers tofome you have cleped soche lustie livynges after the flesh passions of desire, whiche are innominable tofore God and man bothe. Then after determinacion of soche wise, we accorden that soche passions of desire shull not ben nempned, but holden for absolute from all other livynges and provynges, and so liveth into livynges, manliche and resonable, to declare the matters begon. But to make The fullie have understanding in manliche livynges, which is holden worldlich in these things, so that ignoraunce be made no letter, I wol (qð she) nempne these forsaied waies by names and conclusions.

Firste, riches, dignite, renome, and power, shull in this worke be cleped bodily godes, for in hem hath ben a grete throw manne's trust of felmes in love, as in riches suffisaunce to have maintained that was begonne, by worldlie cattell in dignitie, honour, and reverence of hem that werne underput, by maiestrie thereby to obeie. In renome glory of peples praising, after lustes in ther herte, without hede taking to qualitie and maner of doying, and in power, by trowth of Lordships maintenaunce, thing to procede forthe in doying. In all whiche thynges a longe tyme manne's coveitise in commune hath ben gretly grounded, to come to the blis of my service, but truely thei wer begiled, and for the principall must nedes faile, and in helping mowe not availe. Se why, for holdest him not pore that is nedy? Yes parde (qð I). And him for dishonored that moche folke dein not to reverence? That is soth (qð I). And what him that his mightes failen and mowe not helpen? Certes (qð I) me semeth of all menne he shoud be holden a wretche. And wenest not (qð she) that he that is little in renome, but rather is out of the praisinges, of mo men then a fewe be not in shame? Forsothe (qð I) it is shame and villanie to hym that coveiteth renome, that more folke not praise in name then praise. Soth (qð she) thou saiest sothe, but all these thynges are folowed of soche maner doying, and wenden in riches suffisaunce, in power might, in dignitie worship, and in renome glorie, wherfore thei disceded into discevable wening, and in that service disceite is folowed. And thus in generall, thou and all soche other that so worchen, failen of my blisse, that ye long han desired, wherfore truely in life of reson is the hie waie to this blisse, as I thinke, more openly to declare hereafter. Never the later, yet in a little to comforte thy herte, in shewyng of what waie thou art entred thy self, and that thy Margarite maie knowe The set in the hie waie, I wol enforme The in this wise. Thou hast failed of thy first purpose, bicause thou wenteste wrong, and lefdest the hie waie on thy right side, as thus, thou lokest on worldly livyng, and that thyng The begiled, and lightly therfore as a litle assaie thou songedest, but when I tourned thy purpose, and shewed The a part of the hie waie, thio thou abode therin, and no deth ne ferdnesse of none enemy might The out of thilke waie reve, but ever one in thine hert, to come to thilk blisse, when thou wer arested, and first time enprisoned, thou wer loth to change thy waie, for in thy herte thou wendest to have ben there thou shouldest, and for I had routh to sene The miscaried, and wist wel thine ablenes my service to forther and encrese. I come my self without other mene to visite thy persone, in comforte of thy herte: and parde in my comyng thou were gretely gladed, after whiche time, no disese, no care, no tene might move me out of thy herte. And yet I am glad and gretly enpited, how continually thou haddest me in minde, with gode avisement of thy conscience, when thy king and his princes, by huge wordes and grete, looked after variaunce in thy spech, and ever thou wer redy for my sake, in plesauce of that Margarite perle, and many mo other, thy body to oblige in to Marce's doing, if any contraried thy sawes; stedfast waie maketh stedfast herte, with gode hope in the ende. Truely I woll that thou it well knowe, for I se The so set, and not chaunging hert haddest in my service, and I made thou haddest grace of thy king, in foryevenesse of mikel misdede: to the gracious king art thou mikil holden, of whose grace and godenesse sometime hereafter I thinke to enforme, when I shewe the ground, where as mortall vertue groweth. Who brought The to werke? Who brought this grace about? Who made thy herte hardie? Truely it was I, for haddest thou of me failed, then of this purpose had never taken in this wise. And therfore I saie, thou might well trust to come to thy blisse, sithen thy ginning hath ben herd, but ever graciously after thy herte's desire hath proceeded. Silver fined with many hetes menné knowen for true, and safely men maie trust in The alwaie in werkyng. This diseses hath proved, what waie hence forwarde thou thinkest to holde. Nowe in gode faith, Ladie (qð I tho) I am now in, me semeth it is the hie waie and the righte. Ye forsothe (qð she) and nowe I woll disprove thy first waies, by whiche many men wenen to gette thilke blisse. But for as moche as every hert that hath caught full love, is tied with queinte knittings, thou shalt understande that love, and thilke forsaied blisse tofome declared, in this provynges, shall hote the knotte in the herte. Well (qð I) this impossession I woll well understand. Now also (qð she) for the knotte in the herte must be from one to an other, and I knowe thy desire, I woll thou understande these matters to ben saied of thy self, in disprovyng of thy first service, and in strengthyng of thilk that thou hast undertake to thy Margarite perle. A Godde's halfe (qð I) right wel I se that all this case is possible and true, and therefore I admitted all toghether. Understanden well (qð she) these termes, and loke no contradiccion thou graunt. If God wol (qð I) of all these things woll I not faile, and if I graunte contradiccion, I shoud graunt an impossible, and that wer a foule inconvenience. Fro whiche things, Ladie, iwis hereafter I thinke me to kepe.

WELL (qð she) thou knowest that every thyng is Cause, where through any thyng hath beyng, that is cleped Caused, then if riches causen knot in hert, thilke riches arne cause of the ilke precious thyng beyng: But after the sentence of Aristotle, every cause is more in dignitye then his thyng caused, wherethrough it followeth richesse to ben more in dignitie then thilke knotte, but richesse arne kindly naughtie, badde, and nedy, and the ilke knotte is thing kindly gode, moste praised and desired: Ergo thyng naughtie, badde, and nedic, in kindly understanding standing is more worthie; then thyng kindly gode, moſte deſired and praiſed: The conſequence is falſe, nedes the antecedente more ben of the ſame condicion. But that riches ben badde, naughtie, and nedie; that woll I prove, wherfore thei mowe cauſe no ſoch thing, that is ſo glorious and gode: the more richeſſe thou haſte, the more nede haſt thou of help 'hem to kepe. Ergo thou nedest in richeſſe, whiche nede thou ſhouldest not have if thou 'hem wantest. Then muſt riches ben nedy, that in ther havynge maken The nedy to helpe; in ſuretie thy richeſſe to kepen, wherthrough foloweth richeſſe to ben nedie. Every thing cauſyng evils is bad and naughtie: but riches in one cauſen miſe, in an other thei mowen not evenly ſtretchen al about. Wherof cometh ple, debate, theft, begilinges, but riches to win, whiche thinges ben bad, and by richeſſe arn cauſed: ergo the ilke richeſſe ben badde, whiche badneſſe and nede ben knitte into riches, by a maner of kindlie propriete, and every Cauſe and Cauſed accorden, ſo that it followeth the ilke richeſſe to have the ſame accordaunce with badnes and mede, that ther cauſe asketh. Also every thyng hath his beyng by his cauſe, then if the cauſe be deſtroyed, the beyng of cauſed is vaniſhed: And ſo if richeſſe cauſen love, and richeſſe weren deſtroyed, the love ſhould vaniſhe, but the ilke knotte and it be true, maie not vaniſhe for no goyng of no richeſſe: Ergo richeſſe is no cauſe of the knotte. And many men, as I ſaid, ſetten the cauſe of the knotte in richeſſe, the ilke knitten the richeſſe, and nothyng the evil: the ilke perſones, what ever thei ben, wenen that richeſſe is moſte worthie to be had, and that make thei the cauſe: and ſo wene thei thilke riches, be better than the perſone. Commonly ſoche asken, rather after the quantitie, then after the qualitie, and ſoche wenen as well by 'hem ſelf, as by other, that conjunction of his life, and of his ſoule is no more precious, but in as mikell as he hath of richeſſe. Alas! howe maie he holden ſoche thynges precious or noble, that neither han life ne ſoule, ne ordinaunce of werchyng limmes: ſoche richeſſe ben more worthie, when thei ben in gatheryng, in departyng ginneth his love of other mennes praiſyng. And Avarice gatheryng maketh be hated, and nedie to many out-helpe: and when levethe the poſſeſſion of ſoche godes, and thei ginne vaniſhe, then entereth ſorowe and tene in ther herts. O bad and ſtraite ben thilke, that at ther departyng maketh men teneſul and ſorie, and in the gatheryng of 'hem make menne nedy moche folke at ones mowen not togyther moche thereof have. A gode geſte gladdeth his hoſte and all his meinie, but he is a bad geſte, that maketh his hoſte nedie, and to be aferde of his geſte's goyng. Certes (qð I) me wondereth therefore, that the common opinion is thus: he is worthe no more then that he hath in cattel. O (qð ſhe) loke thou be not of that opinion, for if golde or money, or other maner of riches, ſhinen in thy ſight, whoſe is that? Not thine: and tho thei have a little beautie, thei be nothyng in compariſon of our kinde, and therefore ye ſhould not ſet your worthineſſe in thing lower then your ſelf, for the riches, the faireneſſe, the worthineſſe of thilke godes, if there be any ſoche preciousneſſe in 'hem, ar not thin, thou madeſte 'hem ſo never, from other thei come to The, and to other thei ſhall from The: wherfore embraceſt thou other weightes godes, as tho thei wer thine kinde hath drawe 'hem by 'hem ſelf. It is ſoth the godes of the yerth ben ordeined in your fode and nouryſhing, but if thou wolte holde The apaied with that ſuffiſeth to thy kinde, thou ſhalt not be in daunger of no ſoch riches; to kind ſuffiſeth little thing, who that taketh hede. And if thou wolt algates with ſuperfluitie of riches be athroted, thou ſhalt haſteliche be anoiſed, or els evil at eſe. And faireneſſe of fieldes, ne of habitacions, ne multitude of meine, maie not be rekened as riches that are thine owne, for if thei be bad; it is grete ſclander and villanie to the occupier, and if thei be gode or faire, the matter of the workman that 'hem made is to praiſe. How ſhould otherwiſe bountie be compted for thine, the ilke godedeſſe and faireneſſe be proper to tho thinges 'hem ſelfe, then if thei be not thin, ſorowe not when thei wend: ne glad The not in pompe and in pride, when thou 'hem haſt for ther bountie and ther beauties cometh out of ther owne kind, and not of thine owne perſone: as faire ben thei in ther not having; as when thou haſte 'hem, thei be not faire, for thou haſte 'hem; but thou haſt gotten 'hem for the faireneſſe of them ſelf. And there the valance of men is demed in riches outforthe, wenen me to have no proper gode in them ſelf, but ſeche it in ſtraunge thinges. Truly the condicion of gode wening is in The miſtoured, to wene your noblenes be not in your ſelf, but in the godes and beautie of other thinges. Parde the beſtes that han but feling ſoules have ſuffiſaunce in ther owne ſelfe: and ye that ben like to God, ſeken increſe of ſuffiſaunce from ſo excellent a kinde, of ſo low thinges, ye do grete wrong to him that you made lordes over al yerthly thinges, and ye put your worthineſſe under the number of the fete of lower thinges and ſoule, when ye judge thilke riches to be your worthineſſe; then put ye your ſelf by eſtimation under thilke ſoule thinges, and then leve ye the knowing of your ſelf, ſo be ye viler then any dombe beſt, that cometh of ſhreude vice. Right ſo thilk perſon, that loven none evil, for dere worthines of the perſone, but for ſtraunge godes, and ſaith the adornement in the knotte lieth in ſoche thinge; his error is perilous and ſhreude, and he wrieth moche venime, with moche welth, and that knotte maie not be gode, when he hath it gotten. Certes thus hath riches with flickeringe ſighte anoiſed many: and often when there is a throwout ſhrewe, he coineth al the gold, all the precious ſtones that mowen be founden to have in his bandon, he wneneth no wight be worthi to have ſoch thinges but he alone. How many haſt thou knowe now in late time, that in ther richeſſe ſuppoſed ſuffiſaunce have folowed, and now it is all failed? Ye, ladie (qð I) that is for miſſe medling, and otherwiſe governed thilke richeſſe, then thei ſhould. Yea (qð ſhe tho) had not the flode gretlie areiſed, and throwe to 'hemwarde bothe gravell and Sande, he had made no medlyng. And right as Se yeveth flode, ſo draweth Se ebbe, and puleth ayen under wawe all the fiſte outthrowe; but if gode piles of noble governaunce in Love, in well-menyng maner ben ſadlie grounded, to whiche hold thilke gravell, as for a while, that ayen lightly mowe not it turne: and if the piles ben true, the gravell and ſande woll abide. And cerres, full warning in love ſhalt thou never through 'hem get ne cover, that lightlie with an ebbe, ere thou beware, it will ayen meve.

In richeſſe, many men have had tenes and diſeſes, which thei ſhould not have had, if thereof thei had failed. Through whiche nowe declared, partlie it is ſhewed, that for richeſſe ſhould the knotte in herte neither ben cauſed in one, ne in other: truly knot maie ben knitte, and I trow more ſtedfaſt in love, though richeſſe failed, and els in richeſſe is the knot, and not in hert. And then ſoche a knotte is falſe, when the Se ebbeth and withdraweth the gravel, that ſoche richeſſe voideth, thilke knotte woll unknitte. Wherefore no truſte, no waie, no cauſe, no paſſite being is in richeſſe, of no ſoche knot, therefore an other waie muſt we have.

Honor in dignitie is wened to yeven a full knotte. Ye certes (qð I) and of that opinion ben many, for thei saine dignitie, with honour, and reverence, causen hertes to encheinen, and so abled to knitte togethir, for the excellence in soverainte of soche degrees.

Now (qð she) if dignitie, honoure, and reverence, causen thilke knotte in herte, this knotte is gode and profitable. For every cause of a cause is cause of thyng caused: Then thus, gode thynges and profitable ben by dignitie, honour, and reverence, caused. Ergo thei accorden, and dignities ben gode with reverences and honour, but contraries mowen not accorden: whertore by reson there should no dignitie, no reverence, none honour accorde with shrewes, but that is false: Thei have ben cause to shrewes, in many shreudnesse, for with 'hem thei accorden. Ergo from beginning, to argue ayenward, till it come to the laste conclusion, thei are not cause of the knotte. Lo! all daie at eye aine shrewes not in reverence, in honour, and in dignitie? Yes forsothe, rather then the gode. Then foloweth it, that shrewes rather then gode, shall ben cause of this knotte. But of this contray of all lovers is beleved, and for a sothe openlie determined to holde.

Now (qð I) fain would I here, how soch dignities accorden with shrewes.

O (qð she) that wolie I shewe in manifolde wise. Ye wene (qð she) that dignities of office here in your Cite is as the Sonne, it shineth bright withouten any cloude: whiche thyng, when thei comen in the handes of malicious tyrautes, there cometh moche harme, and more grevaunce therof, then of the wilde fire, though it brende all a firete. Certes, in dignitie of office, the werkes of the occupier shewen the malice and the badnesse in the persone, with shrewes thei maken manifolde harmes, and moch peple shamen. How often han rancours, for malice of the governour should ben maintained? Hath not then soche dignities caused debate, rumours, and evils? Yes, God wote, by soche thynges have ben trusted to, make mennes understandyng encline to many queinte thynges. Tliou wottest well, what I mene. Ye (qð I) therefore as dignitie soche thyng in tene iwrought, so ayenwarde the substaunce in dignitie chaunged, relied to bryng ayen gode plite in doying. Do waie, do waie (qð she) if it so betide, but that is feld that soch dignitie is betake in a gode manne's governaunce. What thyng is to reckon in the dignities godenesse? Parde the bountie and godenesse is thers, that usen it in gode governaunce, and therefore cometh it, that honour and reverence should ben doen into dignitie, bicause of encrefing vertue in the occupier, and not to the ruler, bicause of soverainte in dignite. Sithen dignitie maie no vertue cause, who is worthie worship for soch godenesse? Not dignitie, but persone that maketh godenesse in dignitie to shine. This is wonder thyng (qð I) for me thinketh, as the persone in dignitie is worthie honour for godenesse, so tho a persone for badnesse magre hath deserved, yet the dignitie leneth to be commended. Let be (qð she) thou errest righte foule, dignitie with badnesse is helper to performe the felonous doing: parde wer it kindly gode, or any propertie of kindly vertue hadden in 'hem self, shrewes should 'hem never have, with 'hem should thei never accorde. Water and fire that ben contrarious, mowen not togiðer ben assembled, kinde woll not suffre soche contraries to joyn. And sithen at eye by experience in doying we seen that shrewes have 'hem more often, then gode men, siker maist thou be, that kindly gode in soch thynges is not appropred. Parde wer thei kindly gode, as well one as other shoulde evenliche in vertue of governaunce ben worthe: but one faileth in godenesse, an other doeth the contrary, and so it sheweth kindly godenesse in dignitie not be grounded. And this same reson (qð she) maie be made in generall on ail the bodily godes, for thei comen oft to throwout shrewes. After this he is stronge, that hath might to have grete burthens, and he is light and swifte that hath soverainte in ronning to passe other, right so he is a shrew, on whom shreude thynges and bad han moste werching. And right as Philosophy maketh Philosophers, and my service maketh lovers: right so if dignities weren gode, or virtuous, thei should maken shrewes gode, and tourne ther malice, and make 'hem be virtuous, but that doe thei not, as it is proved, but causen rancour and debate. Ergo thei be not gode, but utterly bad. Had Nero never ben Emperor, should never his dame have be slaine, to maken open the privitie of his engendrure. Herodes for his dignitie slewe many children. The dignitie of King Ihon would have destroyed all Englande. Therefore mokell wisdome and godenes bothe nedeth in a persone, the malice in dignitie slyt to bidell, and with a gode bit of areste to withdrawe, in case it would prauunce otherwise then it should: truly ye yeve to dignities wrongful names in your cleping. Thei shuld hete not dignitie, but monstre of badnesse, and manteiner of shrewes. Perde shine the sonne never so bright, and it bring forth no hete, ne sefonably the herbes out brynge of the yerth, but fuffre frostes and cold, and th'erth baraine to ligge, by time of his compas in circuite about, ye would wonder and dispreise that sonne. If the mone be at full, and sheweth no light, but dark and dimme to your sight appereth, and make distruction of the waters, wol ye not suppose it be under cloude, or in clips? And that some privie thing unknowen to your wittes is cause of soche contrarious doying? Then if clerkes that han full insight, and knowing of soche impedimentes, enforme you of the soth, very idiots ye ben, but if ye yeven credence to thilke clerkes wordes. And yet it doth me tene, to seen many wretches rejoycen, in soch many planettes. Truly little con thei on Philosophy, or els on my lore, that any desire haven soche lighting planettes, in that wise any more to shewe. Gode ladic (qð I) tell ye me how ye mene in these thynges. Lo! qð she) the dignities of your citee, Sonne and Mone, nothing in kinde shew ther shining as thei should. For the sonne made no brenning hete in love, but frefed envie in mens hertes, for feblenes of shining here: and the Mone was about under an old cloud the livynges by waters to destroye. Ladic (qð I) it is suppoled thei had shined as thei should. Ye (qð she) but now it is proved at the full, ther beutie in kindly shining failed, wherefore dignitie of him selven hath no beantie in fairenesse, ne driveth not away vices, but encrefeth, and so be thei no cause of the knotte. Now se in gode truthe, holde ye not soche sonnes worthie of no reverence and dignities, worthie of no worship, that maketh men to doe the more harmes? I n'ot (qð I). No (qð she) and thou se a wise gode man, for his godenesse and wisenesse wolt thou not doe hym worship thereof he is worthie? That is gode skil (qð I) it is dewe to soche, bothe reverence and worshippe to have. Then (qð she) a shrewe for his shreudnesse, altho he be put forth toform other for ferde, yet is he worthie for shreudnesse to be unworshipped: of reverence no parte is he worthie to have, to contrarious doying belongeth, and that is gode skille. For right as he besmiteth the dignities, thilk same thing ayenward him smiteth, or els should smite. And over this thou woste well (qð she) that fire in every place heteth where it be, and water maketh wet: why? For kindly werkyng is so iput in 'hem to do soche thynges: for every kindly in werking sheweth his kind. But though a wight had ben Maior of your Cite, many Winter together and come in a straunge place, there he were not known, he should for his dignitie have no reverence. Then neither worship ne reverence is kindelie proper in no dignitie, sithen thei shoulde doen ther kinde in soche doying if any were. And if reverence ne worshippe kindly be not sette in dignities, and thei more therein ben shewed than godenesse, for that in dignitie is shewed, but it proveth that godenesse kindlie in 'hem is not grounded. I wis neither worship ne reverence, ne godenesse in dignitie, doen none office of kind, for thei have none soche proper tie in nature of doying, but by false opinion of the peple. Lo! howe sometye thilke that in your Cite werne in dignitie noble, if thou liste 'hem nempne, thei ben nowe overturned, bothe in worshippe, in name, and in reverence; wherefore soche dignities have no kindly werchyng of worship, and of reverence, he that hath no worthinesse on it self: Now it riseth, and now it vanisheth, after the variaunte opinion in false hertes of unstable peple.

Wherefore, if thou desire the knotte of this jewelle, or els if thou wouldest suppose she should sette the knotte on The, for soche maner of dignitie, then thou wenest beautie or godenesse of the ilke somewhat encrefeth the godenesse or vertue in the bodie: but dignities of 'hem self ben not gode, ne yeven reverence ne worship by ther owne kinde, howe should thei then yeve to any other, a thing, that by no waie mow thei have 'hem self? It is seen in dignitie of the Emperour, and of many mo other, that thei mowe not of 'hem selve kepe ther worship, ne ther reverence, that in a little while it is now up, and now down, by unstedfast hertes of the peple. What bountie mowe thei yeve, that with Cloude lightlie levethe his shynyng? Certes to the occupier is mokell apeired, sithen soche doing doeth vilanie to him that maie it not maintain, wherefore thilke way to the knotte is croked: and if any desire to come to the knot, he must leve this waie on his left side, or els shal he never come there.

AVaileth aught (qð she) power of mighte in maintenaunce of worthie to come to this knot. Parde (qð I) ye, for hertes ben ravished from soche maner thyngs. Certes (qð she) though a sole's herte, is with thyng ravished, yet therefore is no generall cause of the powers, ne of a siker parfite herte to be loked after. Was not Nero the moste shrewe, one of thilke that men rede, and yet had he power to make Senatours, Justices, and Princes of many landes? Was not that grete power? Yes certes (qð I). Well (qð she) yet might he not helpe hymself out of diffe, when he gan fall. Howe many ensamples canst thou remember of kynges, grete and noble, and huge power holden, and yet thei might not kepe 'hem selve from wretchednesse. How wretched was kyng Henry Curtmantil ere he diede? He had not so moche as to cover with his members: and yet was he one of the gretest kynges of all the Normandes ofspring, and moste possession had. O, a noble thing and clere is power, that is not founden mightie to kepe hymself.

Now truelie a grete sole is he, that for soche thyng would set the knotte in thyne herte. Also power of relmes is not thilke gretest power emonges the worldlie powers reckened? And if soche powers han wretchednesse in 'hemself, it foloweth other powers of febler condicion to ben wretched, and then that wretchednesse should ben cause of soch a knot. But every wight, that hath reson, wote well that wretchednesse by no waie maie ben cause of none soche knotte, wherefore soche power is no cause. That powers have wretchednesse in 'hem self maie right lightly ben preved.

If power lacke on any side, on that side is no power, but no power is wretchednes: for all be it so, the power of Emperours or kinges, or els of ther relmes (which is the power of the Prince) stretchen wide and brode, yet besides is there 'mokell folke, of whiche he hath no commaundement ne lordship; and there as lacketh his power, his nonpower entereth, where under springeth, that maketh 'hem wretches. Nopower is wretchednesse, and nothyng els: but in this maner hath kinges more porcion of wretchednes, than of power. Truly soche powers ben unmightie, for ever thei ben in drede, how the ilke power from lesyng maie be keped of sorowe, so drede sorily pricketh ever in ther hertes: Little is the power, which careth and ferdeth it self to maintaine. Unmightie is that wretchednesse, whiche is entered by the ferdfull wenyng of the wretche hym self: and knotte imaked by wretchednesse, is betwene wretches, and wretches all thyng bewailen: wherefore the knotte should be bewailed, and there is no soche parfite blisse that we supposed at the ginning. Ergo, power in nothing should cause soch knottes. Wretchednesse is a kindlie propertie in soche power, as by waie of drede, whiche thei mowe not eschue, ne by no waie live in sikernes. For thou woste wel (qð she) he is nought mighty, that wolde done that he may not don ne performe. Therefore (qð I) these kinges and lordes that han suffaunce at the ful of men and other thynges, mowen well ben holden mighty: ther commaundementes ben done, it is nevermore denied. Fole (qð she) or he wot him selfe mightye or worre it not: for he is nought mighty, that is blinde of his might, and worre it not.

That is soth (qð I). Than yf he wot it, he must nedes ben adrade to lesen it. He that wote of his might is in doute that he mote nedes lese, and so ledeth him drede to ben unmightie. And if he retche not to lese, litel is that worth that of the lesing reson retcheth nothyng: and if it were mighty in power or in strength, the lesing shulde ben withset, and whan it cometh to the lesinge he may it not withsette. Ergo, thilke might is leude and naughty. Soch mightes arne ylike to postes and pilers, that upright stonden, and grete might han to bere manye charges, and yf they croke on any side, litel thing maketh 'hem overthrowe. This is a gode ensample (qð I) to pilers and postes that I have sene overthrowed my self, and hadden they ben underput with anye helpes, they had not so lightlye fal. Than holdest thou him myghty that hath many men armed and many servauntes, and ever he is adradde of 'hem in his herte, and for he gasteth 'hem somtime he mote the more fere have. Comenly he that oter agasteth, oter in him ayenward werchen the same: and thus warnished mote he be, and of warnishe the houre drede: Litel is that might and right leude, who so taketh hede. Than semeth it (qð I) that soche famulers aboute kinges and grete lordes, shull grete might have. Althoughe a sipher in augrim have no might in significacion of it selve, yet he yeveth power in significacion to oter, and these clepe I the helpes to a post, to kepe him from falling. Certes (qð she) thilke skilles ben leude. Why? but if the shores ben wel grounded, the helpes shullen sliden and suffre the charge to fal, ther myght lytel availeth. And so me thinketh (qð I) that a poste alone stondyng upright upon a basse, maye lenger in grete burthen endure, then croked pillers for all ther helpes, and ther grounde be not siker. That is sothe (qð she) for as if the blind in bering of the lame ginne stamble, bothe shuld fal, right so soch pillers pillers so environed with helpes in falinge of the grounde faileth all togiðer, howe ofte than soche famulers in ther most pride of prosperite ben sodainly overthrowen! Thou haste knowe manye in a moment so ferre overthrowe, that cover might they never, whan the heviness of soche faling cometh by case of fortune, they mowe it not eschewe: and might and power, if ther wer any, shulde of strenght soche thinges voide and weive, and so it is not. Lo than whiche thing is this power, that tho men han it they ben agast, and in no time of full having be they sicker: and if they wold weyve drede, as they mowe not, lytel is in worthines: Fye therfore on so noughty thing any knot to cause! Lo! in adversitie, thilke ben his foes that glosed and semed frendes in welth, thus arne his familiers his foes and his enemies: And nothing is werse ne more mighti for to anoye, than is a familier enemye, and these thinges may they not weive, so treuly ther might is not worth a cresse. And over al thinge, he that may not withdrawe the bridel of his fleshy lustes and his wretched complaintes (now thinke on thy self) trewly he is not mighty: I can sene no way that lithe to the knotte. Thilke peple than, that fetten ther hertes upon soch mightes and powers, often ben begiled. Parde he is not myghty that may do any thinge, that another may done him the selve, and that men have as grete power over hym as he over other. A justice that demeth men, ayenward hath ben often demed. Bufyris slew his gestes, and he was slayne of Hercules his gest. Hugelst betraihed many menne, and of Collo was he betraied. He that with swerde smiteth, with swerde shal be smitten. Than gan I to studien a while on these thinges, and made a countenance with my hande in maner to ben huiſte. Nowe let sene (qð she) me thinketh somwhat there is within thy soule, that troubleth thy understanding, saye on what it is. (Qð I tho) me thinketh that although a man by power have soche might over me as I have over other, that disproveth no might in my persone, but yet maye I have power and might never the later. Se now (qð she) thine owne leudenesse: He is mighty that maye without wretchednesse, and he is unmighty that may it not withſitte: but than he that might over The, and he woll put on The wretchednes, thou might it not withſitte. Ergo, thou seeſt thy selfe what foloweth. But nowe (qð she) wouldest thou not skorne and thou se a flye han power to don harme to an other flye, and thilke have no might ne ayenturninge him selfe to defende? Yes certes (qð I). Who is a frailer thinge (qð she) than the fleshye body of a man, over whiche have often tyme flies, and yet lasse thing than a flye mokel myght in grevaunce and anoyinge, withouten anye withſittyng, for all thilke manne's mightes. And sithen thou seeſt thine fleshy body in kindly power faile, howe shoulde than the accident of a thyng be in more suretie of being than substantial: wherfore thilke thinges that we clepe power, is but accident to the fleshy body, and so they maie not have that suretie in might, which wanteth in the substantial body. Why there is no waye to the knotte, that loketh aryght after the hie waye as he shulde.

Verelye it is proved that richesſe, dignite, and power ben not trewe way to the knotte, but as rath by soche thinges the knotte to be unbound: Wherfore on these thynges I rede no wight trust, to gette anye gode knotte. But what shuld we saye of renome in the peples mouthes, shuld that ben any cause? what suppoſest thou in thin hert?

Certes (qð I) yes I trowe, for your flye reſons I dare not safely it saye. Than (qð she) wol I prove that shrewes as rathe shul ben in the knotte as the gode, and that wer ayenſt kinde. Fayne (qð I) would I that here, me thinketh wonder how renome shuld as well knitte a shrewe as a gode persone: renome in every degre hath avaunced, yet wiſt I never the contrarye: shulde than renome accorde with a shrewe? It maye not sinke in my stomake till I here more. Now (qð she) have I nat ſaid alwayes, that shrewes shul not have the knotte. What nedeth (qð I) to reherſe that any more, I wotte wel every wight by kindly reſon shrewes in knittinge woll eschewe. Than (qð she) the gode ought thilke not to have. How els (qð I). It were grete harme (qð she) that the gode were weved and put out of elpoire of the knot, if he it deſired. O (qð I) alas! on soche thinge to thinke, I wene that heaven wepeth to ſe ſoch wronges here ben ſuffred on yerth: the gode ought it to have and no wight elles. The godenesſe (qð she) of a person maye not ben knowe outforth, but by renome of the knowers, wherfore he muſt be renomed of godenes to come to the knot. So muſte it be (qð I) or elles all loſte that we carpen. Sothly (qð she) that were grete harme, but if a gode man might have his deſyres in ſervice of thilke knot, and a shrewe to be veined, and they ben not knowen in general but by lacking and praifing and in renome, and ſo by the conſequence it foloweth, a shrewe ben praifed and knit, and a gode to be forſake and unknit. Ah (qð I tho) have ye lady ben herabouten, yet wold I ſe by grace of our argumentes better declared, howe gode and bad do accorden by lacking and praifing, me thinkethe it ayenſte kinde. Nay (qð she) that ſhalt thou ſe as yerne: theſe elementes han contrarious qualites in kinde, by whiche they mow not accorde no more than gode and bad: and in qualites they accorde, ſo that contraries by qualite accorden by qualyte. Is not yerth drie, and water that is nexte and bytwene th' erth is wete, drie and wete ben contrary and mowen not accorde, and yet this diſcordaunce is bounde to accorde by cloudes, for bothe elementes ben colde. Right ſo the eyre that is nexte the water is wete, and eke it is hot. This eyre by his hete contrarieth water that is colde, but thilke contrariouſtye is oned by moiſture, for both be they moiſt. Also the fyre that is nexte the yerth, and it encloſeth al about, is drie, wherthrough it contrarieth yerth that is wete: and in hete they accorde, for bothe they ben hote. Thus by theſe acordaunces diſcordantes ben joyned, and in a maner of acordaunce they accorden by conneccion, that is knittinge togiðer, of that accorde cometh a maner of melodye that is right noble. Right ſo gode and bad arne contrarie in doinges, by lackinge and praifinge: gode is bothe lacked and praifed of ſome, and badde is bothe lacked and praifed of ſome: wherfore ther contrariouſtye acorde bothe by lacking and praifing. Than foloweth it though gode be never ſo mokel praifed, oweth more to ben knit than the bad: or elles bad for the renome that he hath muſt be taken as wel as the gode, and that oweth not. No forſothe (qð I). Well (qð she) than is renome no waye to the knot: lo: ſole (qð she) how clerkes writen of ſoche glorie of renome. O glorie, glorie, thou art none other thinge to thouſandes of folke, but a grete ſweller of eres. Manye one hath had ful grete renome by falſe opinion of variaunt peple: And what is fouler than ſolk wrongfully to ben praifed, or by malice of the peple giltleſſe lacked? Nedes ſhame foloweth thereof to hem that wyth wronge prayſeth, and alſo to the deſertes praifed, and vylanye and reproſe of him that diſciaundreth

Gode childe (qð she) what echeth ſoche renome to the conſcience of a wiſe man, that loketh and meſureth

sureth his godenesse, not by slevelesse wordes of the peple, but by sothfastnesse of conscience? by God nothinge. And if it be faire a manne's name be eched by moche folkes praisynge, and fouler thing that mo folke not praisyn. I said to The a litel here before, that no folke in straunge countreies nought praisyn soch renom may not comen to ther eres, because of unknowynge, and other obstacles, as I saide: Wherefore more folke not praisyn, and that is right soule to him that renome desireth, to wete lesse folke praisyn than renome enhance. I trowe the thanke of a peple is naught worth, in remembraunce to take, ne it procedeth of no wise judgement, never is it stedfast pardurable: It is veine and flynge, with winde wasteth and encrefeth. Trewly soch glory ought to be hated. If gentillesse be a clere thyng, renome and glorie to enhance, as in reckenyng of thy linage, than is gentillesse of thy kinne, for why? it semeth that gentillesse of thy kinne is but praynyng and renome that come of thine auncestres desertes, and it so be that praynyng and renome of ther desertes make ther clere gentillesse, than mote they nedes ben gentill for ther gentill dedes, and not thou: for of thy self cometh not soche maner gentillesse, praynyng of thy desertes. Than gentillesse of thine auncestres, that foraine is to The, maketh The not gentil, but ungentil and reproved, and if thou continuest not ther gentillesse. And therefore a wise man ones said: Better is it thy kinne to ben by The gentiled, then thou to glorifye of thy kinne's gentillesse, and hast no desert thereof thy selfe.

How passynge is the beautie of fleshy bodyes? more flyttinge than movable floures of sommer. And if thine eyen weren as gode as the Lynx, that may fene thorow many stone walles, both and faire and foule in ther entrailes of no maner hew shulde apere to thy sight, that were a foule sight. Than is fairenesse by feblesse of eyen, but of no kind, wherefore thilke shuld be no way to the knot: Whan thilke is went the knot wendeth after. Lo! now at al proves, none of al these thynges mowe partilly ben in understanding, to ben waye to the duringe blisse of the knotte. But now to conclusion of these maters herkeneth these wordes. Very sommer is know from the Winter: in shorter course draweth the dayes of December, then in the moneth of June: The springes of May faden and folowen in Octobre. These thynges be not unbounden from ther olde kind, they have not losse ther worke of ther proper estate. Men of voluntarious wil withsitte that heaven governeth. Other thynges suffren thynges paciently to werche: Man in what estate he be, yet wolde he ben chaunged. Thus by queint thynges blisse is desired, and the fruit that cometh of these springes n'is but anguis and bitter, although it be a while swete, it may not be withhold, hastily they departe: thus all daye faileth thynges that soles wende. Right thus hast thou failed in thy first wenyng. He that thinketh to saile, and drawe after the course of that sterre, de polo antarctico, shall he never come Northward to the contrary sterre of polus arcticus, of whiche thynges list thou take kepe, thy first out waye goynge prysyn and exil may be cleped. The grounde falsed underneth, and so haste thou fayled. No wight I wene blameth him that stineth in misgoynge, and secheth redy way of his blisse.

Nowe me thinketh (qð she) that it suffiseth in my shewing the wayes, by dignite, richesse, renome, and power, if thou loke clerely arne no wayes to the knotte.

Very argumente lady (qð I tho) that ye han makid in these forenempned matters, me thinketh hem in my full wytte conceived, shall I no more

if God will in the contrarie be begiled: But faine wolde I and it were your will, blisse of the knotte to me wer declared, I might fele the better howe my herte might assente to pursue th'ende in service, as he hath begunne. O (qð she) there is a melodye in heaven, whiche clerkes clepen armony, but that is not in breking of voice, but it is a maner swete thing of kindly werchynge, that causeth joy out of nombre to recken, and that is joined by reson and by wisdom, in a quantite of proporcion of knytting. God made all thing in reson and in witte of proporcion of melodye, we mowe not suffice to shewe. It is written by grete clerkes and wise, that in erthly thynges lightly by studye, and by travale, the knowynge may be gotten: but of soche heavenly melodye moken travaille woll bringe out in knowynge right lytel. Swetnesse of this paradyse hath you ravished, it semeth ye slepten, rested from all other diseses, so kindly is your hertes therein ygrounded. Blisse of two hertes in full love knytte maye not aright ben imagined: ever is ther contemplacion in ful of thoughty study to pleaseunce, matter in bringing comforte everiche to other. And therefore of erthelye thynges, moken matter lyghtly cometh in your lernynge. Knowledge of understanding that is nyghe after ye, but not so nigh the covetise of knyttinge in your hertes: More soverain desire hath every wight in litel hering of heavenly connyng, than of moken materiall purposes in yerth. Right so it is in propertie of my servauntes, that they ben more affyched in sterynge of lytel thyng in his desyre, than of moken other matter, lasse in his conscience. This blisse is a maner of sowne delectuous, in a queint voice touched, and no dynne of notes: there is none impressyon of brekinge labour. I canne it not otherwise nempne, for wantynge of privie wordes, but paradyse terrestre ful of delectuous melodye, withouten travaille in sowne perpetuell service, in ful joye coveted to endure. Only kinde maketh hertes in understandinge so to slepe, that otherwise may it not ben nempned, ne in other manere names for lyking swetnesse can I nat it declare, all fygure and honye, al minstrelsy and melodye ben but fore and galle in comparisyn, by no maner proporcion to reken, in respecte of this blisful joye. This armony, this melodye, this perdurable joye may nat be in doynge, but betwene hevyns and elementes, or twey kindly hertes, full knyt in trouthe of naturell understanding, withouten wenyng and disceit, as hevyns and planettes, whiche thynges continually for kindly accordaunces forieteth al contrarious meynynge, that into passyve diseses maye sowne, evermore it thristeth after more working. These thynges in proporcion is so wel joynd, that it undoth al thing, whiche into badnes by any way may be accompted. Certes (qð I) this is a thing precious and noble. Alas that falsenesse ever or wantrist shuld ever be mainteyned, this joy to void! Alas that ever any wretch shulde thorow wrathe or envy, jangling dare make to shewe this melody so farr a backe that openly dare it not ben used! truly wretches ben fullfyllid with envy and wrathe, and no wight els. Flebring and tales in soche wretches dare apere openly in every wight's ere with ful mouth so charged, moken malyce moved many innocentes to shende, God wold ther soule therwith were strangeled. Lo! trouthe in this blisse is hid and over al under cover him hideth: he dare nat come a place for waiting of shrewes. Commonly badnes godnes amaistereth; with my self and my soule this joy wolde I bye if the godenesse wer as moch as the nobli in melodi. O (qð she) what godenesse may be accompted more in this material world! truly non that shalte thou understande. Is not every thing gode that is contrariant and distroynge yvel? How els (qð I)

I) Envy, wrathe and falsenes ben generall (qð she) and that wot every man beyng in his right mind, the knotte the whiche we have in this blisse is contrariaunt and destroieth soche maner yvelles. Ergo it is gode, what hath caused anye wight to do anye gode dede? Fynd me any gode, but if this knot be the chefe cause: Nedes mote it be gode, that causeth so many gode dedes. Every cause is more, and worthier than thing caused, and in that more's possession all thynges lesse ben compted. As the kinge is more than his peple, and hath in possession al his relme after: Right so the knot is more than al other godes, thou might reckon al thynges lasse, and that to him longethe owethe into his mores causes of worship and of wil do tourne, it is elles rebel, and out of his mores defending to voyd. Ryght so of every godenesse into the knot and into the cause of his worship oweth to tourne. And trewly every thinge that hath beyng profitable is gode, but nothing hath to ben more profitably than this knot: Kynges it maintaineth, and hem ther power to maintaine: It maketh misse to bene amended, with gode governaunce in doynge. It closeth hertes so togiðir, that rancour is outthresten. Who that it lengest kepeth, lengest is gladed. I trow (qð I) heretykes, and misse-mening peple hence-forward wol maintaine this knotte, for therthrough shull they ben maintained, and utterly woll tourne, and leve ther olde yvel understanding, and knitte this godenes, and proffer so ferre in service, that name of servautes might they have. Ther jangles shal cese, me thinketh hem lacketh mater now to aleg. Certes (qð love) if they of gode will thus tourned as thou sayst, wolen trewly perfourme, yet shull they be abled party of this blisse to have: and they wol not, yet shul my servautes the werre wel susteyne in min helpe of maynrenaunce to the end. And they for ther gode travaille shullen in rewarde so ben meded, that endelese joy body and soule togiðir in this shullen abyden, ther is ever action of blisse withouten possible corrupcion, there is action perpetuel in werke without travaille, there is everlastyng passyfe withouten any of labour: continuel plite without cefing coveted to endure. No tonge maye tell ne herte maye thinke the lesse pointe of this blisse. God bringe me thiðir (qð I than). Continueth wel (qð she) to the ende, and thou might not fail than, for though thou spede not here, yet shal the passion of thy martrid lyfe ben writen, and radde toforne the gret Jupiter, that God is of routhe, an highe in the holownesse of heven, ther he sit in his trone, and ever thou shalt forward ben holden amonge all these hevins for a knight, that mightest with no penaunce ben discomfited. He is a verie martyr that livingly goinge is gnawen to the bones. Certes (qð I) these ben gode wordes of comforte, a litell mine hert is rejoyced in a mery wise. Ye (qð she) and he that is in heven felith more joye, than whan he firste herde therof speke. So it is (qð I) but wist I the soth, that after disese comforte wold folowe with blisse, so as ye have often declared, I wold wel suffre this passion with the better chere, but my thoughtful sorow is endlesse, to think howe I am cast out of a welesfare, and yet daineth not this yvel none herte none hede to mewarde throwe, whiche thynges wold gretly me by wayes of comforte disporte, to weten in my selfe a litel with other me ben ymoned: and my sorowes peisen not in ther balaunce the weight of a pese: Slings of ther daunger, so hevily peysen, they drawe my causes so hye that in ther eyen they semen but light and right lytell.

O, for (qð she) heven with skies that foule cloudes maken and darke wethers with grete tempestes and huge, maketh the mery dayes with softe shinninge sonnes. Also the yere with-draweth floures and beaute of herbes and of yerth. The same yere maketh springes and jolyte in Ver so to renovel with peinted coloures, that erthe semeth as gay as heven. Sees that blasteth, and with wawes throweth shippes of which the living catures for grete peril of hem dreden: right so the same Sees maketh smothe waters and golden sailen, and comforteth hem, with noble havan that firste were so ferde. Hast thou not (qð she) lerned in thy youth that Jupiter hath in his wardrobe bothe garmentes of joye and of sorowe? What wost thou howe sone he wol tourne of The that garmente of care, and clothe The in blisse? Parde it is not ferre fro The. Lo an olde proverbe aleged by many wise! Whan bale is gretest, than is bote anie bore. Wherof wylt thou dismaye? hope wel and ferve wel, and that shall The save with thy gode byleve. Ye, ye (qð I) yet se I not by reson howe this blisse is comming, I wot it is contingent, it maye fal an other. O (qð she) I have mokel to done to clere thine understanding and voide these errours out of thy mynde, I woll prove it by reson thy wo maie not alway endure. Every thinge kindly (qð she) is governed and ruled by the heavenly bodies, whiche haven ful werching here on erth, and after course of these bodies all course of your doynge here ben governed and ruled by kind. Thou woste well by cours of planettes all your dayes proceden, and to everich of singuler houres be enterchaunged stoundemele about, by submitted worchyng naturelly to suffre, of whiche chaunges cometh these transitorie tymes, that maketh revolving of your yeres thus stoundmele, every hath ful might of worching, till all seven han hadde ther cours about. Of whiche worchings and possiession of houres, the dayes of the weke have take ther names, after denominacion in these seven planettes. Lo your sonday ginneth at the firste houre after none on the saturday, in whiche houre is than the sonne in ful might of worching, of whom sonday taketh this name. Next him foloweth Venus, and after Mercurius, and than the Mone, so than Saturnus, after whom Jovis, and than Mars, and ayen than the Sonne, and so forthe be xxiii. houres together, in whiche houre ginning in the ii. day stante the Mone, as maister for that time to rule, of whom monday taketh his name, and this course foloweth of al other dayes generally in doinge. This course of nature of these bodies chaunging flinten at a certaine terme, limited by ther first kind, and of hem al governementes in this clemented world proceden, as in springes, constellacions, engendrures, and al that folowen kind and reson; wherfore the course that foloweth sorow and joy, kindly moten entrechangen ther tymes, so that alway on wele as alway on wo may not endure. Thus seest thou apertly thy sorowe into wele mote ben chaunged, wherfore in soche case to better side evermore enclin thou shuldest. Trewly nexte the ende of sorowe anon entreth joye, by maner of necessite, it wol ne may non other betide, and so thy contingency is disproved: if thou holde this opinion any more, thy wit is right leud. Wherfore in ful conclusion of al this, thilke Margarite thou desirest, hath ben to The dere in thy herte, and for her hast thou suffred many thoughtfull diseses, hereafter shall be cause of mokell myrth, and joy, and loke how glad canst thou bene, and cese al thy passed hevinesse with manyfolde joyes. And than wol I as blithly here The speken thy myrthes in joy, as I now have yherde thy sorowes and thy complaints. And if I mowe in aughte thy joy encresce, by my trouthe on my side shal nat be leved for no maner travaille, that I with al my mightes right blithly wol helpe and ever ben redy you both to plesse. And than thanked I that lady with al godely manner that I worthily coude, and trewly I was gretly rejoyfcd in myne herte, of her faire behestes and profered me to be flawe in all that she me wold ordein whyl my life lasted.

ME thinketh (q^d I) that ye have rightewel declared, that way to the knot shuld not ben in none of these disproving thinges, and nowe order of our purpose this asketh, that ye shuld me shew if any way be thither, and which thilke way shuld ben, so that openly may be sey the very hye way in ful confusion of these other thinges.

Thou shalt (q^d she) understande, that one of thre lyves (as I firste said) every creture of mankind is sprongen, and so forth procedeth. These lyves ben thorow names departed in thre maner of kindes, as bestialliche, manlyche, and resonabliche, of whiche two ben used by fleshely body, and the thirde by his soule. Bestial amonge resonables is forbidden in every lawe and every secte, bothe in christen and other, for everye wight dispiseth him that lyveth by lustes and delites, as him that is thral and bounden fervaunte to thinges right foule, soche ben compted werse than men, he shal nat in ther degre ben rekened, ne for soche one alowed. Heritikes faine they chofen life bestial, that voluptuouslye lyven, so that (as I firste saide to The) in manly and resonable livinges our mater was to declare, but manly lyfe in lyving after flesh, or els fleshely waies to chese may nat blisse in this knot be conquered, as by reson it is proved. Wherefore by resonable life he must nedes it have, sihe a way is to this knotte, but nat by the first tway lyves, wherfore nedes more it ben to the thirde, and for to lyve in fleshe but nat after fleshe, is more resonablich than manlyche rekened by clerkes. Therefore how this way cometh in I wol it blithely declare.

Se now (q^d she) that these bodily godes of manliche livinges, yelden sorowfull stoundes and smerande houres. Who so wel remembre him to ther endes, in ther worchinges they ben thoughtful and forie. Right as a Be that hathe had his honie, anon at his flight beginneth to stinge: So thilke bodily godes at the laste mote away, and than sting they at ther goinge, wherthroughe entreth and clene voideth al blisse of this knot.

Forsothe (q^d I) me thinketh I am wel served, in shewing of these wordes. Although I hadde lyttell in respecte amonge other grete and worthy, yet had I a faire parcel, as me thought for the tyme, in furthering of my sustenance, whiche while it dured, I thought me having mokel hony to mine estate. I had richesse suffisauntly to weive nede, I had dignite to be reverenced in worship. Power me thought that I had to kepe fro min enemies, and me semed to shine in glory of renome, as manhode asketh in mene, for no wighte in myne administracyon coude non yvels ne trechery by sothe cause on me putte. Lady, your selve weten wel, that of tho confederacies maked by my soverains, I n'as but a servaunt, and yet mokel mene folke woll fully ayenste reson thilke maters mainteine, in whiche maintenaunce glorien them self, and as often ye haven saide, therof ought nothing in yvel to be laide to me wardes, sihen as repentaunt I am tourned, and no more I thinke, neither tho thinges ne none soch other to sustene, but utterly distroye without medling maner, in all my mightes. How am I now cast out of al swetenes of blisse, and mischevously stongen by passed joye? Sorowfully must I bewaile, and live as a wretche. Every of tho joyes, is turned into his contrary: for richesse now have I povertie, for dignitie now am I imprisoned, in stede of power, wretchednesse I suffre, and for glory of renome I am now dispised, and fouliche hated: thus hath farne fortune, that sodainly am I overthrowen, and out of all welth dispoiled.

Truely me thinketh this waie in entre is right harde God graunt me better grace er it be al passed, th' other waie lady, me thought right swete. Now certes (q^d Love) me list for to chide. What aileth thy darke dulnesse? Woll it not in clerenesse ben sharpened? Have I not by many resons to The shewed, soch bodily godes failen to yeve blesse, ther might so forth woll not stretch? Shame (q^d she, it is to saie) thou liest in thy wordes. Thou ne hast wist but right few, that these bodily godes hadde all atones commenie thei dwellen not togethir. He that plentie hath in riches, of his kinne is ashamed: an other of linage right noble and well know, but povertie him handeleth, he were lever unknowe. An other hath these, but renome of peples praïsing maie he not have, over all he is hated, and defamed of thinges righte foule. An other is faire and femely, but dignitie him faileth: and he that hath dignite is croked or lame, or els mishapen, and foully despised. Thus partable these godes dwellen, commonly in one housholde ben thei but silde. Lo how wretched is your trust, on thing that woll not accorde! Me thinketh thou clepest thilk plite thou wer in felines of fortune, and thou saiest for that that felines is departed, thou art awretch. Then foloweth this upon thy wordes, every soule resonable of man maie not die, and if deth endeth felines, and maketh wretches, as nedes of fortune maketh it an end. Than soules after deth of the body in wretchednes should live. But we knowe many that han gotten the blisse of heaven after ther deth. Howe then maie this life maken men blisful, that when it passeth, it yeveth no wretchednesse, and many times blisse, if in this life he con live as he should. And wolt thou accompt with fortune, that now at the first she hath doen The tene and sorowe: if thou loke to the maner of all glad thinges and sorowful, thou maist not naie it, that yet, and namely now thou standest in noble plite in a gode ginning, what gode forth going herafter. And if thou wen to be a wretch, for soch welth is passed, why then art thou not well fortunate, for badde thinges and anguis wretchednes ben passed? Art thou now come first into the hostrie of this life, or els the both of this world, art thou now a sodain gest into this wretched exile? Wenest there be any thing in this yerth stable? Is not thy first arest passed, that brought The in mortall sorowe? Ben these not mortall things agon with ignorance of bestial wit, and hast received reson in knowing of vertue? What comferte is in thy herte? The knowing fikerly in my service be grounded. And wolt thou not wel as I said, that deth maketh ende of all fortune? What then, standest thou in noble plite, litle hede or recking to take, if thou let fortune passe ding, or els that she flie when her list, now by thy live. Parde a man hath nothyng so lese as his life, and for to holde that he doeth all his cure and diligent travaile. Then saie I thou art blisfull and fortunate sely, if thou knowe thy godes, that thou hast yet beleved, whiche nothing may doubt that thei ne ben more worthy than thy life? What is that (q^d I); gode contemplacion (q^d she) of well-doing in vertue, in time coming, bothe in plesaunce of me, and of thy Margarite perle: hastily thyn hert in full blisse what her shal be esed. Therefore dismay The not, fortune in hate grevously ayenst thy bodilie person, ne yet to grete tempest hath she not sent to The, sihen the holding cables and ankers of thy life holden by knitting so faste, that thou discomferte The nought of time that is now, ne dispaire The not of time to come, but yeven the comfort in hope of well-doing, and of getting again the double of thy lesing, with encreasing love of thy Margarit perle therto. For this hitherto thou hast had al her ful daunger, and so thou mighte amend al that is misse and and all defaultes that sometime thou diddest, and that now in all thy time to that ilke Margarite in full service of my lore thine hert hath continued, wherefore she ought moche the rather encline fro her dangerous fete. These thynges ben yet knit by the holding anker in thy live, and holden mote thei: To God I praie al these thynges at ful ben performed. For while this anker holdeth, I hope thou shalt safely escape, and while thy true mening service about bryng, in dispite of all false meners, that The of newe haten for this true service, thou art now entered.

Certes (qð I) among thynges I asked a question, which was the waie to the knot. Trulie ladie, how so it be, I tempt you with questions and answeres, in speking of my first service, I am now in ful purpose in the prick of the hert, that thilke service was an enprisonment, and alwaie bad and naughtie, in no maner to be desired. Ne that in getting of the knot maie it nothing availe. A wise gentil hert loketh after vertue, and non other bodily joies alone. And bicause toforn this in tho waies I was fet, I wot well my self I have erred, and of the blisse failed, and so out of my waie hugely have I ronne. Certes (qð she) that is soth, and there thou hast miswente, eschue that pathe from henceforward I rede. Wonder I truelie, why the mortalle folke of this worlde seche these waies outforthe, and it is prived in your self. Lo how ye ben confounded with error and follie! The knowing of very cause and waie, is godenes and vertue. Is there any thing to The more precious than thy self? Thou shalt have in thy power, that thou wouldest never lese, and that in no waie maie be taken fro The, and thilk thing is that is cause of this knotte. And if deth mowe it not reve, more than an yerthly cature, thilke thing then abideth with thy self soule. And so our conclusion, to make soch a knot thus gotten, abideth with this thing, and with the soule, as longe as thei laste. A soule dieth never, vertue and godenes evermore with the soule endureth, and this knot is perfite blisse. Then this soul in this blisse endlesse shall endure. Thus shul hertes of a true knot ben esed: thus shul ther soules ben plesed: thus perpetually in joye shul thei sing. In gode trowth (qð I) here is a gode beginning, yeve us more of this waie. (Qð she) I saied to The not long sithen, that resonable life was one of thre thynges, and it was proved to the soule. Every soule of reson hath two thynges of steryng life, one in vertue, and an other in the bodily workyng: and whan the soule is the maister over the bodie, then is a manne maister of himself: and a man to be a maister over himself, liveth in vertue and in godenesse, and as reson of vertue techeth. So the soule and the body worching vertue togiðer, liven resonable life, whiche clerkes clepen felicitie in living, and therein is the hie waie to this knot. These olde Philosophers, that hadden no knowyng of divine grace, of kindly reson alone wenden that of pure nature, without any help of grace, me might have ishoned the other livinges: resonable have I lived, and for I thinke hereafter, if God woll (and I have space) thilke grace after my leude knowyng declare, I leve it as at this tyme. But (as I saied) he that outforthe loketh after the waies of this knotte, connyng with whiche he shold knowe the waie inforthe, slepeth for the tyme, wherefore he that woll this waie know, must leve the lokyng after false waies outforthe, and open the eyen of his conscience, and unclothe his hert. Seest not he that hath trust in the bodily life, is so busie bodily woundes to anoint in keypyng from smert (for all out maie thei not be healed) that of woundes in his true understanding he taketh no hede? the knowing even forth slepeth so harde, but anone as in knowing awake, then ginneth the privie medicines, for helyng of his true entent, inwardes lightlie heleth conscience, if it be well handled. Then must nedes these waies come out of the soul by steryng life of the bodie, and els maie no man come to perfite blisse of this knot: and thus by this mene he shal come to the knot, and to the perfite felinelle that he wende have had in bodily godes outforthe? Ye (qð I) shall he have bothe knot, riches, power, dignitie, and renome in this maner waie? Ye (qð she) that shall I shewe The. Is he not riche that hath suffisaunce, and hath the power that no man maie amaistrien? Is not grete dignitie to have worship and reverence? And hath he not glory of renome, whose name perpetuall is during, and out of number in comparacion? These be the thynges that men wenen to gotten outforthe (qð I). Ye (qð she) thei that loken after a thing that nought is, thereof in all ne in partie longe mowe thei gapen after: that is sothe (qð I:) therefore (qð she) thei that sechen gold in grene trees, and wene to gadher precious stones among vines, and laine ther nettes in mountaines to fish, and thinken to hunt in depe Sees after hert and hind, and sechen in yerth thilke thynges that surmounteth heven. What maie I of hem saie? But folishe ignoraunce misledeth wandring wretches by uncouth wayes, that shulden be foreteten, and maketh hem blind fro the right pathe of true waie, that should ben used. Therefore in generall error in mankind departeth thilke godes by misse seching, which he should have whole and he sought by reson. Thus goeth he begiled of that he sought, in his hode men have blowe a jape. Now (qð I) if a man be vertuous, and al in vertue liveth, how hath he al these thynges? That shall I proven (qð she). What power hath any man to let an other of living in vertue? For prisionment or any other disese he take it patiently, discomfite he not, the tiraunte over his soule no power maie have; then hath that man so tourmented soche power, that he nill be discomfite, ne overcome maie he not ben, sithen pacience in his soule overcometh, and is not overcome. Soche thing that maie not be amaistred, he hath nede to nothyng, for he hath suffisaunce inow to help himself. And thilke thing that thus hath power and suffisaunce, and no tiraunte maie it reve, and hath dignitie to set at naught all thynges, here it is a grete dignitie that deth maie amaistrie. Wherefore thilke power suffisaunce so enclosed with dignitie, by all reson renome must have. This is thilk riches with suffisaunce ye should loke after: this is thilk worshipful dignitie ye should covet: this is the ilke power of might, in whiche ye should trust: this is thilke renome of glory, that endlesse endureth, and al n'is but substaunce in vertuous living. Certes (qð I) all this is sothe, and so I se well that vertue with ful gripe encloseth al these thynges. Wherefore in soth I maie saie, by my troth, vertue of my Margarite brought me first into your service, to have knitting with that jewell, not sodaine longinges ne folkes smale wordes, but onely our conversacion togiðer: and then I seing th'entent of her true mening, with flourishing vertue of pacience, that she used nothing in evill, to quite the wicked lesynges, that false tonges oft in her have laied, I have sey it my self, godely foryevenesse hath spronge out of her hert, unitie and accorde above al other thynges she desireth in a gode meke maner, and suffreth many wicked tales.

TRuelie, Ladie, to you it were a gret worship, that soch thynges by due chaistifement were amended. Ye (qð she) I have The excused all soche thynges as yet now not be redressed: thy Margarite's vertue I commende commend well the more, that paciently soche anoies suffreth. David king was meke and suffred mokell hate, and many evil speches: no dispite ne shame, that his enemies him didin, might not move pacience out of his hert, but ever in one plite mercie he used. Wherefore God himself toke reward to the thinges, and thereon soche punishment let fal. Truly by reson it ought be ensample of drede to al maner peple's mirthe. A man vengeable in wrath no governance in punishment ought to have. Plato had a cause his servaunte to scourge, and yet cleped he is neighbour, to performe the doing, himself would not, lest wrath had him amaistred, and so might he have laid on to moche: evermore grounded vertue sheweth the entent fro within. And truly I wot well for her godenes and vertue, thou hast desired my service, to her plesant well the more, and thy self therto fully hast profered. Gode Ladie (q̃d I) is vertue the hie waie to this knot, that long we have ihandled? Ye forsoth (q̃d she) and without vertue godely this knotte maie not be gotten. Ah! now I se (q̃d I) how vertue in me faileth, and I as a fere tre, without buxioning or frute alwaie welke, and so I stonde in dispaire of this noble knotte, for vertue in me hath no maner working. A wide where about have I traiveled. Pece (q̃d she) of thy firste waie thy travaile is in idell, and as touching the seconde waie, I se well thy mening. Thou woldest conclude me if thou coudest, bicause I brought The to service, and every of my servauntes I helpe to come to this blisse, as I said here beforne: and thou saidest thy self, thou mightest not be holpen as thou wenest bicause that vertue in The faileth. And this blisse perfittly without vertue maie not be gotten, thou wenest of these wordes, contradiccion to folowe. Parde at the hardest I have no servaunt, but he be vertuous in dede and thought; I brought The in my service, yet art thou not my servaunt: but I saie, thou might so werch in vertue hereafter, that then shalt thou be my servaunt, and as for my servaunt accompted. For habite maketh no Monke, ne wering of gilt spurres maketh no knight. Never the later, in comfort of thine hert, yet wol I otherwise answere. Certes ladie (q̃d I tho) so ye muste nedes, or els I had nigh caught soche a-cordiale for sorowe, I wot it well I shuld it never have recovered. And therefore now I praie to enforme me in this, or els I hold me without recoverie. I maie not long endure, till this lesson be lerned, and of this mischefe the remedie knowen. Now (q̃d she) be not wrothe, for there is no man on live, that maie come to a precyous thyng, longe coveted, but he somtime suffre tenefull diseses, and wenest thy self to ben unliche to al other? That maie not ben: and with the more sorowe that a thing is gotten, the more hath he joye, the ilke thyng afterwarde to kepe, as it fareth by children in schole, that for lernyng arne beten, when ther lesson thei foryctten, commonly after a gode disciplinyng with a yerde, thei kepe right well doctrine of ther schole.

Right with these wordes, on this Ladie I threwe up myne eyen, to se her countinaunce and her chere, and she aperceving this fantasie in mine herte, ganne her semblaunte godelie on me cast, and said in this wise.

It is well knowe bothe to reson and experience in doying, every active worketh on his passive, and when thei ben together, active and passive ben icleped by these Philosophers, if fire be in place, chafyng thyng able to be chafed or hete, and the ilke thynges ben sette in soche a distaunce, that the one may werche, the other shall suffre. The ilke Margarite thou desirest, is full of vertue, and able to be active in godenesse: But every herbe sheweth his ver-tue, outforthe from within, the Sonne yeveth light, that thinges maie be seye.

Every fire heteth the ilke thyng that it neighed, and it be able to be hete, vertue of this Margarite outforthe wrethe, and nothyng is more able to suffer workyng, or worke cathe of the active, but passive of the same active, and no passive to vertues of this Margarite but The in all my donet canne I finde, so that her vertewe muste nedes on The werche, in what place ever thou be, within distaunce of her worthinesse, as her very passive thou art closed: but vertue maie The nothyng profite, but thy desire be performed, and all thy sorowes cesed. Ergo, through werchyng of her vertue thou shalt eslie ben holpen, and driven out of all care, and welcome to this long by The desired.

Ladie (q̃d I) this is a gode lesson, in ginyng of my joye: But were ye well forsoth, though I suppose she have moche vertue, I would my spousale wer proved, and then maie I live out of doubte, and rejoyce me gretlie, in thinkyng of tho vertues so shewed. I herd The saie (q̃d she) at my beginning, when I receved The first for to serve, that thy jewell, thilke Margarite thou desirest, was closed in a muskle, with a blewe shell. Ye forsothe (q̃d I) so I said, and so it is. Well (q̃d she) every thyng kindelie sheweth it self, this jewell closed in a blewe shell, excellence of colours, sheweth vertue from within, and so every wight should rather loke to the proper vertue of thynges, then to his foraine godes. If a thyng be engendred of gode matter, comonlie and for the more parte it followeth after the congelemente vertue of the first matter, and it be not corrupte with vices, to procede with encrese of gode vertues: Eke right so it fareth of badde. Truly grete excellence in vertue of lynage for the more part discendeth by kind to the succession in vertues to folowe. Wherefore I saie, the colours of every Margarite sheweth from within the finesse in vertue.

Kindely heven, when merie wether is alofte, appereth in manne's eye of colour in blewe, stedfastnesse in pece betokenyng within and without: Margarite is engendred by hevenlie dewe, and sheweth in it self, by finenesse of colour, whether the engendrure wer maked on morowe or on eve: thus saith kinde of this perle. This precious Margarite that thou serveest, sheweth it self discended by nobley of vertue, from his hevenliche dewe, norished and congeled in mekenesse, that mother is of all vertues, and by werkes that men seen withouten the signification of the coloures ben shewed mercie and pitie in the hert, with pece to al other, and al this is iclosed in a Muskle, who so redilie these vertues loken. All thyng that hath soule, is reduced into gode by mene thynges, as thus: Into GOD manne is reduced by soules resonable, and so forthe bestes, or bodies that mowe not moven after place ben reduced into man, by bestes meve that moven from place to place: so that thilke bodies that han felyng soules, and move not from places, holden the lowest degre of solyng thynges in felyng, and soche ben reduced into man by menes. So it foloweth, the muskle as mother of all vertues, halte the place of mekenesse, to his lowest degre discendeth doune of heven, and there by a maner of virgin engendrure, arne these Margarites engendred, and afterward congeled. Made not mekenesse so lowe the hie heven, to enclose and catch out thereof so noble a dewe, that after congelement a Margarite, with endles vertue and everlasting joy, was with ful vessel of grace yeven to every cature, that godely would it receive? Certes (q̃d I) these thinges ben right noble, I have er this herde these same sawes. Then (q̃d she) thou wost well these thynges ben sothe? Ye forsothe (q̃d I) at the full. Now (qð she) that this Margarite is full of vertue, it is well proved, wherefore some grace, some mercie among other vertues, I wotte right well on The shall discende? Ye (qð I) yet would I have better declared vertues in this Margarite kindelie to ben grounded. That shall I shewe The (qð she) and thou wouldest it lerne? Lerne (qð I) what nedeth soche wordes? wete ye not well, Ladie, your self, that all my cure, all my diligence, and all my might, have tourned by your counsaile, in plesance of that perle? al my thought and all my study, with your helpe desireth, in worshippe the ilke jewell, to encrese al my travail, and all my businesse in your service, this Margarite to glad in some halve: me were lever her honour, her plesance, and her gode there, thorowe me for to be maintained and kept, and I of soche thyng in her likyng to be cause, then all the welthe of bodily godes ye could reckon. And would never God, but I put my self in grete jeopardie of al that I would, that is now no more but my life alone, rather then I should suffer thilke jewel in any poynte ben blemished, as ferre as I maie suffre, and with my mightes stretch. Soche thing (qð she) maie mokel further thy grace, and The in my service avaunce. But now (qð Love) wilt thou graunte me thilke Margarite to ben gode: O gode gode (qð I) why tempt ye me and tene with soche maner speche? I would graunte that, though I should anone die, and by my trowth fight in the quarell, if any wighte would counterplede. It is so moche the lighter (qð Love) to prove our entent. Ye (qð I) but yet would I here, how ye would prove, that she were gode by resonable skill, that it mowe not ben denied, for although I knowe, and so doeth many other, manyfolde godenes and vertue in this Margarite ben printed, yet some menne there ben, that no godenesse speken: and wherever your wordes ben herd, and your resons ben shewed, soche evill spekers, Ladie, by auctoritie of your excellence shullen ben stopped and ashamed. And more thei that han none acquaintaunce in her persone, yet mowe thei know her vertues, and ben the more enformed in what wise thei mowe set ther hertes, when 'hem list into your service any entre make: for truly all this to begin, I wote well my self, that thilke jewel is so precious perle, as a womanly woman in her kinde, in whom of godenesse, of vertue, and also of aunswering shape of limmes, and fetures so well in all poyntes accordyng, nothing faileth: I leve that kinde her made with grete studie, for kinde in her persone nothyng hath foryet, and that is well seen. In every gode wighte's herte she hath grace of commendyng, and of vertuous praisyng. Alas that ever kinde made her dedlie: fave onelie in that I wote well, that Nature in formyng of her in nothyng hath erred.

Certes (qð Love) thou haste well begonne, and I aske The this question; Is not in generall every thyng gode? I not (qð I). No (qð she) saw not GOD everie thing that he made, and they werne right gode? Then is wonder (qð I) howe evill thynges commen a place, sithen that all thynges weren right gode. Thus (qð she) I woll declare everiche qualitie, and every accion, and every thing that hath any maner of beyng, it is of God, and GOD it made, of whom is all godenesse, and all beyng, of hym is no badnesse: badde to be is naught: Gode to be is somewhat, and therefore gode and beyng is one in understanding. How maie this be (qð I) for often han shrewes me assailed, and mokell badnesse therein have I founden, and so me semeth bad, to be somewhat in kind? Thou shalt (qð she) understande that soche maner badnesse, which is used to purifie wrong doers is somewhat, and God it made, and beyng hath, and that is gode: other badnes no beyng hath utterlie, it is in the negative of somewhat, and that is naughte, and nothyng beyng. The parties essenciall of beyng arne saied in double wise, as that it is, and these parties ben found in every cature, for al thing a this halfe the first beyng is beyng through participacion, taking partie of being, so that every cature is difference between beyng, and of him through whom it is, and his owne beyng: right as every gode is a maner of beyng, so is it gode through beyng, for it is naught other to be: and every thing though it be gode, it is not of hymself gode, but it is gode by that it is ordinable to the grete godenes. This dualitie after clerkes determission, is founden in every cature, be it never so single of onhed. Ye (qð I) but there as it is isaid, that God saw every thyng of his makyng, and they were right gode, as your self saied to me, not long tyme sithen, I aske whether every cature is isaid gode, through godenesse unformed, either els formed, and afterwarde if it be accepte utterly gode? I shall saie The (qð she) these grete passed clerkes han divided gode into gode being alone, and that is nothing but gode, for nothyng is gode in that wise, but God. Also in gode by participacion, and that is icleped gode, for farre sette, and representative of godelie godenesse, and after this manifolde gode is saied, that is to saie, gode in kinde, and gode in gendre, and gode of grace, and gode of joye.

Of gode in kind Augustine saith, al that ben, ben gode: but peraunder thou wouldest wete, whether of himself it be gode, or els of an others godenes, for naturell godenesse of every substance is nothing els than his substanciall beyng, whiche is icleped godenesse, after comparison that he hath to his first godenesse, so as it is inductatife by menes into the first godenesse. Boece sheweth this thing at the full, that this name gode is in generall name in kinde, as it is comparisoned generally to his principalle ende, whiche is God, knotte of all godenes. Every cature crieth God us made, and so thei han full apeted to thilke God by affeccion, soche as to 'hem belongeth: and in this wise all thynges ben gode, of the grete GOD, whiche is gode alone. This wonder thing (qð I) how ye have by many resons proved, my first waie to be errour and misgoyng, and cause of badnesse and fible menyng, in the ground ye aledged to be roted: whence is it, that soche badnesse hath springes, sithen all thynges thus in generall ben gode, and badnesse hath no beyng, as ye have declared: I wene if all thynges ben gode, I might then with the first waie in that gode have ended, and so by godenesse have comen to blisse in your service desired. All thing (qð she) is gode by beyng in participacion out of the first godenesse, which godenesse is corrupte by badnesse, and badmenyng maners: God hath in gode thynges, that thei ben gode by beyng, and not in evil, for there is absence of rightfull love, for badnesse is nothing only but evil wil of the user, and through giltes of the doer, wherefore at the ginning of the worlde, every thing by himself was gode, and in universall thei werne right gode. An eye or a hand is fairer, and better in a bodie sette in his kindelie place, then from the bodie discovered. Every thing in his kindelie place beyng kindlie, gode doth werche, and out of that place voided, it dissolveth and is defouled hym selve. Our noble GOD in gliterande wise by armonie this worlde ordeined, as in purtreitures, storied with colours medled, in whiche blacke, and other darke colours, commenden the golden and the assured painture, every put in kindly place, one beside an other, more for other glitereth: right so little faire maketh right faire more glorious, and right so of godenes, and of other thynges in vertue. Wherefore other bad, and not so gode perles as this Margarite, that we han of this matter, yeven by the aire little godenesse, and little vertue, right mokell godenesse and vertue in thy Margarite to ben proved, in shining wise to be found and shewed. How shuld ever godenes of pece have ben knowe, but if unpece somtime reigne, and mokell evill wrothe? Howe should mercie ben proved, and no trespasse were, by due justificacion to be punished? Therefore grace and godenesse of a wighte is founde, the sorowful hertes in gode mening to endure, ben comforted, unite, and accorde betwene hertes knitte in joye to abide.

What wenest thou that I rejoyce, or els accompte hym among my servautes, that pleseth Pallas, in undoyng of Mercurie, all be it that to Pallas he be knitte by title of Lawe, not accordyng to the resonable conscience, and Mercurie in doyng have grace to ben suffered: or els hym that weneth the Mone, for fairenesse of the Evesterre? Lo! other while by nightes light of the Mone gretlie comforteth in darke thoughtes and blinde. Understanding of love ycveth grete gladnesse: Who so liste no bileve, when a soth tale is shewed, adewe and adewblis, his name is entred. Wise folke and worthie in gentiltie, bothe of vertue and of livyng, yeven full credence in sothenes of love with a gode hert, there as gode evidence or experience in doinge shewethe not the contrarie. Thus mightest thou have ful prefe in thy Margarite's godenesse, by commendement of other jewels badnesse, and yvelnesse in doinge. Stoundemele disceses yeveth severall houres in joye.

Nowe by my trouthe (qð I) this is wel declared, that my Margarite is gode, for sythen other ben gode, and she passeth many other in godenes and vertue, wherthrough by maner necessarye she muste be gode: and godenesse of this Margarite is no-thinge elles but vertue, wherefore she is vertuous, and if there failed anye vertue in any side, there were lacke of vertue: badde nothings els is ne maye be but lacke and wante of gode and godenesse, and so shoulde she have that same lacke, that is to sayne badde, and that maye not be, for she is gode, and that is gode me thinketh all gode, and so by consequence me semeth vertuous, and no lacke of vertue to have. But the Sonne is not knowe but he shine, ne vertuous herbes but they have ther kinde werching, ne vertue but it stretche in godenesse or profite to another, is no vertue. Than by al waies of reson, sithen mercie and pite ben moste commended amonge other vertues, and they might never ben shewed refreshement of helpe, and of comforte, but nowe at my moste nede, and that is the kinde werkinge of these vertues, trewly I wene I shall not varie from these helps.

Fyre and if he yeve none hete, for fire is not demed. The Sonne but he shine, for sonne is not accompted. Water but it wete, the name shal ben chaunged. Vertue but it werche, of godenes dothe it faile, and into his contrarie the name shal be reversed, and these ben impossible: wherefore the contradictory that is necessarie, nedes must I leve. Certes (qð she) in thy person and out of thy mouth these wordes lien well to ben said, and in thine understandinge to be leved, as in entent of this Margarite alone: and here now my spech in conclusion of these wordes.

IN these thynges (qð she) that me list nowe to shewe openly, shal be founde the matter of thy sickenesse, and what shal ben the medicin that maye be thy sorowes liffe and comfort, as well The as all other that amisse have erred, and out of the waye walked, so that any drop of gode will in amendement ben dwelled in ther hertes. Proverbes of Salomon openly techeth, howe somtime an innocent walked by the waye in blindenesse of a derke night, whome mette a woman (if it be lesely to saye) as a strumpete araid, redily purveied in turning of thoughtes with veine janglinges, and of reste inpacient, in dissimulation of my termes, sayng in this wise: come and be we dronken of our swete pappes, use we covetous collinges. And thus drawen was this innocent, as an ox to the larder. Lady (qð I) to me this is a queinte thinge to understande: I praye you of this parable declare me the entente. This innocent (qð she) is a scholer lerninge of my lore, in seching of my blisse, in which thinge the daye of his thought turninge enclineth into eve, and the sonne of verye light failinge, maketh darke night in his conuinge. Thus in derkenesse of manye doutes he walketh, and for blindenesse of understanding, he ne wote in what way he is in: forsothe soche one may lightly ben begiled. To whome came love fained, not clothed of my livery, but unlesful lustie habite, with softe speche and mery, and with faire honied wordes heretikes and missemeneing peple, skleren and wimplen ther errors. Austin witnellith of an heretike that in his firste beginninge, he was a man right experte in resons, and swete in his wordes, and the werkes miscorden. Thus fareth fayned love in her first werchinges: thou knowest these thinges for trewe, thou hast hem proved by experience. Somtime in doinge to thin owne person, in whiche thing thou hast founde matter of mokel disese. Was not fained love redily purveied, thy wittes to catch and tourne thy gode thoughtes? trewly she hath wounded the conscience of manye, with florishinge of mokill jangling wordes: and gode worthe thanked I it for no glose, I am gladde of my prudence thou hast so manly her veined. To me arte thou moche holden, that in thy kinde course of gode meninge I returne thy minde: I trowe ne had I shewed The thy Margarite, thou haddest never returned. Of firste in gode perfite joye was ever fayned love impacient, as the water of Sylloc, which ever more floweth with stilnesse and privi noise tyl it come nyghe the brinke, and than ginneth it so out of mesure to bolne, with novelleries of chaungynge stormes, that in course of every renninge it is in pointe to spil al his circuit of banks. Thus fained love prively at the fullest of his flowinge newe stormes debate to arise. And al be it that Mercurius oten with whole understanding known soche perillous matters, yet Veneriens so lustie ben and so leude in ther wyttes, that in soche thinges right litel or naught don they sele, and witten and cryen to ther felowes: here is blisse, here is joye, and thus into one same errour mokel folke they drawen. Come they saine, and be we dronken of our pappes, that ben fallas and lying glose, of whiche mowe they not souke mylke of helthe, but dedly venim and poyson, corrupcion of sorowe. Mylke of fallas is venim of discete: Mylke of lyinge glose is venim of corrupcion. Lo what thinge cometh out of these pappes: use we coveted collinges, desire we and meddle we false wordes with lore, and sore with false, truely this is the sorinesse of fained love, nedes of these surfettes sickenesse must folow. Thus as an ox to thy langoryng deth wer thou drawen, the sore of the smoke hath The al defafed. Ever the deper thou somtime wadest, the soner thou it founde: yf it had The killed it had be littell wonder. But on that other side my trewe servautes not faynen ne disceve conne, sothly ther doying is open, my foundement endureth, be the burthen then never so grete, ever in one it lasteth: it yeveth lyfe and blisfull godenesse in the last endes, though the ginnings ben sharpe. Thus of two contraries contrarie ben the effectes. And so thilke Margarite thou serveest, shal sene The by her service out of perillous tribulacion delyvered, bycause of her service into newe disese fallen, by hope of amendemente in the laste ende with joye to be gladded, wherfore of kinde pure her mercy with grace of gode helpe shall she graunt, and elles I shal her so straine, that with pite shall she ben amaistred. Remembre in thine herte howe horrible sometyme to thine Margarite thou trespasshest, and in a gret wise ayenst her thou forgettest: clepe ayen thy minde, and knowe thine owne gyltes. What godenes, what bountie, with mokell folowing pyte founde thou in that tyme? Were thou not godely accepted into grace? By my pluckyng was she to foryevenesse enclined. And after I her stired to drawe The to house, and yet wendest thou utterlie for ever have ben refused. But wel thou woste, sithen that I in soche sharpe disese might so gretelye awayle, what thinkest in thy wyt? Howe ferre maye my witte stretch? And thou lach not on thy side I wol make The knotte: Certes in thy gode bering I woll accorde with the psauter, I have founde David in my service true, and with holy oyle of pece and of rest longe by him desired, utterly he shal be annoynted. Truste wel to me, and I wol The not faile. The lening of the first way wyth gode hert of continuance, that I se in The grounded, this purpose to parfourme, draweth me by maner of constraining, that nedes must I ben thine helper: although mirthe a while be taryed, it shal come at soche celson, that thy thought shal ben joyed, and wolde never God, sithen thyne herte to my resones arne assented, and openly haste confessed thyne amisse goynge, and now criest after mercy but yf mercy folowed: thy blisse shal ben redy ywis, thou ne wost how sone.

Nowe be a gode chylde I rede. The kind of vertues in thy Margaryte reherfed, by strength of me in thy persone shul werche. Comfort The in thys, for thou mayst not miscarie. And these wordes said, she streight her on length and rested a while.

Thus endeth the seconde boke.

Here after foloweth the thirde boke.

OF nombre faine these clerkes that it is naturel some of discret thinges, as in tellinge one, two, thre, and so forth: but among all nombres thre is determined for moste certain. Wherfore in nombre certaine this werke of my besye leudenesse I thynke to ende and parfourme.

Ensample by this worlde in thre tymes is divided: Of whiche the firste is cleped Demacian, that is to say, going out of trew waye, and all that tho deiden in hell were they punished for a manne's sinne, tyl grace and mercy sette hem thence, and there ended the first time. The second time lasteth from the coming of merciable grace, untill the ende of transitorie time, in which is shewed the true way in fordinge of the badde, and that is ycleped tyme of grace: and that thinge is not yeven by deserte of yeldinge one benefite for another, but onely through godenesse of the yever of grace in thilke tyme. Who so can wel understand, is shapen to be saved in souled blyffe. The thirde tyme shal gin when transitorie thinges of worldes han made ther ende, and that shal ben in joy, glory, and rede both body and soule, that wel han deserved in the time of grace. And thus in that heven together shul they dwel perpetuelli, without any ymaginatif yvel in any halve. These times are figured by tho thre dayes, that our God was closed in yerthe, and in the thirde arose, shewing our resurrection to joy and blisse of tho that it deserven by his merciable grace. So this leude boke in thre matters accordaunt to tho tymes, lightly by a gode insecr maye ben understande, as in the firste erroure of misse-going is shewed, with sorowful pine punished is, crieth after mercie. In the seconde is grace in gode waye proved, whiche is failing without deserte, thilke first misse amending in correccion of tho errours, and even waye to bringe with comforte of welfare, into amendemente wexinge. And in the thirde joye and blisse, graunted to him that wel canne deserve it, and hath favour of understanding in the tyme of grace. Thus in joye of my thirde boke shall the matter be till it ende. But speciall cause I have in my herte to make this processe of a Margarit perle, that is so precious a gemme with clere and litell stones, of whiche stones or jewel the tonges of us English peple tourneth the right names, and clepeth hem Margeryte perles: thus varieth our spech from many other langages. For trewely Latin, Frenche and manye mo other langages clepeth hem Margery perles, the name Margarite or Margrit perles: wherfore in that denominacion I woll me accorde to other mens tonges in that name cleping. These clerkes that treten of kindes, and studien out the propertie ther of thinges, faine the Margarit is a lytel white perle, throughout holow and rounde, and vertuous, and on the Se-sides in the More Britain in muskle shelles of the heavenly dewe the best ben engendred: in which by experience ben founde thre faire vertues. One is, it yeveth comforte to the felynge spirites in bodily persones of reason. Another is gode, it is profitable helth ayenst passions of forie mens hertes. And the thirde it is nedefull and noble in staunchinge of blode, there elles to moche wolde out ren. To which perle and vertues me list to liken at this tyme Philosophie with her thre species, that is naturell, and moral, and resonable: of whiche thinges hereth what faine these grete clerkes. Philosophie is knowinge of divinly and manly thinges joyned with studie of gode living, and this stante in two thinges, that is conninge and opinion: conninge is whan a thing by certaine reson is conceived. But wretches, and toles, and leude men many wil conceive a thing and maintain it as for a sothe, though reson be in the contrarie, wherfore conninge is a straunger. Opinion is while a thing is in non-certaine, and hidde from mens very knowlege, and by no parfite reson fully declared, as thus: if the sonne be so mokel as men wenen, or els if it be more than the erthe. For in sothnes the certaine quantite of the Planet is unknowen to erthly dwellers, and yet by opinion of some menne it is holden for more than midde erth. The firste spece of Philosophie is naturel, which in kindly thinges treten, and sheweth causes of heven, and strength of kindly course: as by arismetrike, geometry, musike, and by astronomye, techeth waies and course of hevens, of planetes and of sterres aboute heven and erthe, and other elementes. The second spece is morall, whiche in order of living maners techeth, and by reson proveth vertues of soule moste worthy in our living, whiche ben Prudence, Justice, Temperaunce, and strength. Prudence is godely wisdom in knowinge of thinges. Strength voydeth al adversitees aliche even. Temperaunce destroieth bestiall lying with esie bering. And Justice right fully judgeth, and judginge departeth to every wight that, that is his owne. The thirde spece tourneth into reson of understanding al thinges to be said soth and discussed, and that in two thinges is divided: one is art, another ther is rhetorique, in which two al lawes of man's reson ben grounded or els maintained. And for this boke is all of love, and thereafter bereth his name, and Philosophie and law must herto accorden by ther clerical discipions: as Philosophie for love of wisdom is declared: Lawe for maintainance of pece is holde, and these with love muste nede acorden, therefore of 'hem in this place have I touched. Ordre of homly thinges and honest maner of living in vertue, with rightfull judgement in causes, and profitable administracion in comunalties of relmes and cities, by evenhede profitably to raine, nat by singuler avauntage, ne by privy envy, ne by sole in purpose in covetise of worship or of godes ben disposed in open rule shewed, by love, Philosophie, and law, and yet love toforn al other. Wherefore as sultern in unite they acorden, and one ende, that is pece and rest, they causen norisshinge, and in the joye mainteinen to endure. Nowe than, as I have declared my boke acordeth with discipion of thre thinges, and the Margarit in vertue is likened to Philosophie with the thre spes. In whiche matters ever twei ben acordaunt with bodily reson, and the thirde with the soule: But in conclusion of my boke and of this Margarit perle, in knitting togither law by thre sondry maners shal be lykened, that is to saye, lawe, right, and custome, which I wol declare. Al that is law cometh of Godd's ordinaunce by kindly working, and thilke thinges ordained by man's wittes arne icleped right, whiche is ordayned by many maners and in constitucion writen: But custome is a thinge that is accepted for right or for lawe, ther as lawe and right failen, and ther is no difference, whether it come of scripture or of reson. Wherefore it sheweth that law is kindly governaunce: right cometh out of manne's probable reson: and custome is of comen usage by length of time used, and custome nat write is usage and if it be writte constitucion it is ywriten and ycleped: But lawe of kinde is comen to every nation, as conjuction of man and woman in love, succession of children in inheritance, restitution of thinge by strength taken or lent, and this lawe among al other halte the soverainest gre in wurship, whiche lawe began at the beginning of resonable cature, it varied yet never for no chaunging of time, cause for sothe in ordaining of lawe was to constrain mens hardinesse into pece, and withdrawinge his yvel will, and turning malice into godenesse, and that innocence likerly withouten teneful anoy amonge shrewes safely might inhabyte by protexcion of safe conduct, so that shrewes harme for harme by bridele of ferdenesse shulden restraine. But forsothe in kindly law nothinge is commended, but soche as Godde's wil hath confirmed, ne nothinge denied but contrarioustie of Godde's will in heven: eke than all lawes or custome, or els constitucion by usage, or wrytyng, that contrarien law of kinde, utterly ben repugnaunt and adversary to our Godd's wil of heven. Trewly law of kind for Godde's own lusty will is verily to maintaine under whiche lawe (and unworthy) bothe professe and reguler arn obediencer and bounden to this Margarit perle, and by knotte of love's statutes and stablishment in kinde, whiche that godely maye not ben withsetten. Lo! under this bonde am I constrained to abyde, and man under lyvinge lawe ruled, by that lawe oweth after desertes to ben rewarded by pain or by mede, but if mercie weyve the paine: so than by parte resonfulli maye be sey, that mercy both right and lawe passeth. Th' entent of al these matters is, the lest clere understanding to weten at th' ende of thys thirde boke ful knowinge thorow Godde's grace I think to make never the later, yet if these thinges han a gode and a sleight inseer, whiche that canne souke hony of the hard stone, oylie of the drie rocke, may lightly fele nobley of matter in my leude ymaginacion closed.

But for my boke shal be of joye (as I said) and I so ferre set fro thylike place, fro whens gladnes should come, my corde is to short to let my boket ought catche of that water, and fewe menne be abouten my corde to eche, and many in ful purpose ben redy it shorter to make, and to enclose th' enter, that my boket of joye nothings shulde catch but empty returne my careful sorowes to encrese, and if I die for pain, that wer gladnes at ther hertes. Gode lord, send me water into the cop of these mountaines, and I shall drinke therof my thrustes to stanch: and sey these be comfortable welles into helth of godenes of my saviour am I holpen. And yet I say more, the house of joy to me is not opened. How dare my sorowfull gost than in any mater of gladnes thynken to trete? for ever sobbynges and complaintes be redy refrete in his meditations, as werbles in manyfolde stoundes comming about I n'ot than. And therefore what maner of joye coude endite, but yet at dore shal I knocke, if the key of David wolde the locke unshyt, and he bring me in, whiche that childrens tonges bothe openeth and closeth. Whose spirite where he wil worcheth, departinge godely as him lyketh. Now to Godde's laude and reverence, profite of the reders, amendement of maners of the herers, encrefing of worship among love's servautes, releving of my herte into grace of my jewel, and frenship pleasaunce of this perle, I am stered in this making, and for nothing els: and yf any gode thing to mennes liking in this scripture be founde, thanketh the maister of grace which that of the gode, and al other is authour, and principal doer. And if any thing be insufficient or els myslyking, wit The that the leudnesse of myne unable conning, for body in disese anoyeth the understanding in soule. A disefely habytacion leteth the wittes many thinges, and namely in sorow. The custome never the later of love, by longe time of service in termes I thinke to pursue, whiche ben lively to yeve understanding in other thynges. But nowe to enform The of this Margarite's godenes, I may her not halfe praise. Wherefore not she for my boke, but this boke for her is worthy to be commended, tho my boke be leude: right as thinges nat for places, but places for thinges ought to be desired and praised.

NOW (qð love) trewely thy wordes I have well understonde. Certes me thinketh 'hem ryght gode, and me wondreth why thou so lightly pailest in the law. Sothlye (qð I) my wit is leude, and I am right blind, and that mater depe, how shuld I than have waded, lightly might I have drenched and spilt ther my self. Yea (qð she) I shall helpe The to swime. For right as lawe punisheth brekers of preceptes, and the contrary doers of the writen constitucions: right so ayenward, law rewardeth and yeveth mede to 'hem that law strengthen. By one law this rebel is punished, and this innocent is mede, the shrewe is emprisoned and this rightfull is coronned. The same lawe that joyneth by wedloke wythout forsakyng, the same law yeveth libel of departicion bycause of divorce, both demed and declared. Ye ye (qð I) I finde in no lawe to mede and reward in godenes the giltye of desertes. Fole (qð she) giltye converted in your law, mykel merite deserveth. Also Pauly of Rome was coronned, that by him the maintainers of Pompeius weren knowen and distroied: and yet toforn was this Paulin chiefe of Pompeius counsaile. This lawe in Rome hath yet his name of mesuring in mede, the bewraying of the conspiracy, ordained by tho senatours the deth. Julius Caesar is acompted into Catons right-wisenesse wisnesse, for ever in trouthe florisheth. his name amonge the knowers of reson. Perdiccas was corowned in the heritage of Alexander the great, for telling of a privy hate that king Porrus to Alexander hadde. Wherefore every wight by reson of law after his right-wisenes apertly his mede maye challenge: and so thou that maintaineist law of kinde, and therefore disese hast suffred in the law, reward is worthy to be rewarded and ordained, and apertly thy mede might thou challenge. Certes (qđ I) this have I well lerned, and ever hensforward I shall draw me thereafter in one hed of will to abide this lawe both maintain and kepe, and so hope I best entre into your grace, wel deserving in o worship of a wight without nedeful compulsion ought medefully to be rewarded. Truly (qđ Love) that is soth, and tho by constitucion gode service into profite and avauntage stretch, utterly many men it demen to have more desert of mede, than gode wil nat compelled. Se now (qđ I) how may men holden of this the contrary. And what is gode service? Of you wolde I here this question declared. I shall say The (qđ she) in a few wordes, resonable workinges in plesaunce and profite of thy soveraine. How shuld I thus performe (qđ I)? right well (qđ she) and here me now a lytell. It is hardely (qđ she to understande) that right as mater by due overchaunginges foloweth his perfeccion and his forme: right so every man by rightful werkinges ought to folow the letful desires in his hert, and so toforne to what ende he deserveth, for many-times he that loketh nat after th'ende, but utterly therof is unknowen, befalleth often many yvels to don, wherthrough er he be ware, shamfulli he is confounded, th' end therof neden to be before loked to every desire of soch foresight in gode service three thinges specially nedeth to be rulers in his workes. First that he do gode, next that he do by election in his owne hert, and the thirde that he do godely withouten any surquedry in thoughtes. That your werkes shulden be gode in service, or in any other actes, authorities many may be aleged, never the latter, by reson thus may it be shewed. Al your werkes be cleped second, and moven in vertue of the first wercher, which in gode works wrought you to procede, and right so your werkes moven into vertue of the last ende, and right in the first working wer nat, no man shuld in the second werche. Right so but ye feled to what ende, and sen ther godenes closed, ye shulde no more retch what ye wrought, but the ginning gan with gode; and there shal it cese in the last ende, if it be wel confided. Wherefore the mydle, if other wayes it draw than acordant to th'endes, there stineth the course of gode, and another maner course entreth, and so it is a party by him selve, and every part be nat acordant to his al, is foule and ought to be eschewe, wherefore every thing that is wrought and be nat gode, is nat acordant to th'endes of his al whole, it is foule, and ought to be withdraw. Thus the persons that neither don gode ne harme, shamen foule ther making: Wherefore without working of gode actes in gode service, may no man ben accepted. Trewly the ilke that han might to do gode, and done it not, the crowne of worshyp shal be take from 'hem, and with shame shul they be annulled. And so to make one werke accordant with his endes, everye gode servaunt by reson of consequence must do gode nedes. Certes it suffiseth not alone to do gode, but godely withal folow, the thanke of godenes els in nought he deserveth: For right as al your being come from the gretest gode, in whom al godenes is closed, right so your endes ben directe to the same gode. Aristotell determineth that ende and gode ben one, and convertible in understanding, and he that in wil doth away gode, and he that loketh not to th'end loketh not to gode, but he that doth gode and doth not godelye, draweth awaye thy dyrection of th'ende, not godely must nedes be bad. Lo! badde is nothing els, but absence or negative of gode, as derkenes is absence or negative of light. Than he that doth not godely directeth thilke gode into th'ende of badde. So must thing not gode folow, eke badnes to soch folk ofte foloweth. Thus contrariaunt workers of th'ende that is gode, ben worthy that contrary of th'ende that is gode to have. How (qđ I) may any gode dede be done, but if godely it helpe. Yes (qđ Love) the devill doth many gode dedes, but godely he leveth behinde, for even badly and in descevable wise he worketh. Wherefore the contrary of th'ende him foloweth. And do he never so many gode dedes, bicause godely is away, his godenes is not rekened. Lo than! tho a man do gode, but he do godelye, th'ende in godenesse wol not folowe, and thus in gode service both gode dede and godely don musten joyne together, and that it be done with free choise in hert: and els deserveth he nat the merite in godenes, thatwoll I prove, for if thou do any thing gode by chaunce or by happe, in what thing art thou therof worthie to be commended? for nothing by reson of that turneth into thy praisinge ne lacking. Lo! thilke thinge done by hap by thy wil is nat caused, and therby shulde I thanke or lake deserve: and sithen that sayleth, th'ende whiche that wel shuld reward, must nedes faile. Clerkes faine, no man but willing is blessed, a gode dede that he hath done is not done of free choise willing, without whiche blissednes may nat folow. Ergo nether thanke of godenesse ne service in that is contrary of the gode ende, so than to gode service longeth gode dede godely don, thorow fre choise in hert. Truly (qđ I) this have I wel understand. Wel (qđ she) every thing thus done sufficiently by law that is cleped justice, after reward claimes. For law and justice was ordained in this wise, soche desertes in godenes after quantitie in doinge, by mede to rewarde, and of necessite of soch justice, that is to say rightwisenes was fre choise in deserving of wel or of yvel graunted to resonable cretures. Every man hath fre arbitrement to chose gode or yvel to performe. Nowe (qđ I) tho if I by my gode wil deserve this margarit perle, and am not therto compelled, and have fre choise to do what me liketh: She is than holden as me thinketh to reward th'entent of my gode will. Goddes forbode els (qđ Love) no wight meneth otherwise, I trow fre-wil of gode hert after mede deserveth. Hath every man (qđ I) fre choise by necessary maner of wil in every of his doinges, that him liketh, by God's proper purveiaunce? I wolde se that well declared to my leude understanding, for necessary and necessite ben wordes of mokel intencion, closing (as to say) so mote it be nedes, and otherwise maye it nat betide. This shalt thou lerne (qđ she) so thou take hede in my spech. If it were nat in manne's own liberte of fre wil to do gode or bad, but to the one reied by bonde of Gode's pre-ordinaunce: Than do he never so wel it were by nedeful compulsion of thilke bonde and nat by fre choise, wherby nothing he desireth, and do he never so yvel it were nat man for to wite, but onelich to him that soch thing ordained 'hem to done. Wherefore he ne ought for bad be punished, ne for no gode dede be rewarded, but of necessite of rightwisnes was therefore fre choice of arbitrement put in manne's proper disposicion: truly if it were otherwise it contraried God's charitie, that badnes and godenes rewardeth after deserte of pain, or of mede. Me thinketh this wonder (qđ I) for God by necessitie forwote al thinges coming, and so mote it nedes be: and thilk thinges that that ben doen by our fre choice comen nothing of necessitie, but onely by wil: how maie this stande togither? and so me thinketh truly, that fre choice fully repugneth Godde's forweting. Truly, ladie, me semeth thei mowe not stande together.

THen gan love nigh me nere, and with a noble countenance of visage and limmes, dressed her nigh me my sitting place. Take forthe (qð she) thy penne, and redily write these wordes, for if God wolle, I shall 'hem so enforme to The, that thy leudenesse, whiche I have understand in that matter, shall openly be clered, and thy sight in full looking therin amended. First, if thou thinke that Godde's prescience repugne libertie of arbitrie of arbitrement, it is impossible that thei should accord in onhed of sothe to understanding. Ye (qð I) forsoth so I it conceive. Well (qð she) if thilke impossible were awaie, the repugnaunce that semeth to be therein, wer utterly removed. Shew me th' absence of that impossibilitie (qð I). So (qð she) I shall. Now I suppose that thei mowe stande together, prescience of God, whom foloweth necessitie of things coming, and libertie of arbitrement, through whiche thou belevest many thynges to be without necessitie. Bothe these propolitions be sothe (qð I) and well mowe stande togither, wherefore this case as possible I admit. Truly (qð she) and this case is impossible. How so (qð I)? For hereof (qð she) foloweth and wexeth an other impossible. Prove me that (qð I). That I shall (qð she) for some thyng is comyng without necessitie, and God wote that toforne, for all thing comyng he before wot, and that he before wot of necessitie is coming: as he before wot, be the case by necessary maner then, or els thorowe necessitie, is somthing to be without necessitie, and whider to every wight that hath gode understanding, is seen these thinges to be repugnaunt. Prescience of God, which that foloweth necessitie, and libertie of arbitrement, fro which is removed necessitie, for truly it is necessarie, that God have forweting of thinge, withouten any necessitie commyng. Ye (qð I) but yet remeve ye not awaie fro mine understanding, the necessitie followyng Godde's before weting, as thus. God before wote me in service of Love, to be bounden to this Margarite perle, and therefore by necessitie thus to love am I bound, and if I not had loved, through necessitie had I ben kept from all lovededes. Certes (qð Love) bicause this matter is gode and necessary to declare, I think herein wel to abide, and not lightlie to passe. Thou shalt not (qð she) saie all onely God before wote me to be a lover, or no lover, but thus: God before wote me to be a lover, without necessitie. And so it followeth, whither thou love, or not love, every of 'hem is and shal be. But now thou seest the impossibilitie of the case, and the possibilitie of thilke that thou wendest had ben impossible, wherefore the repugnaunce is adnulled. Ye (qð I) and yet doe ye not awaie the strength of necessitie, when it is said, though necessitie it is me in love to abide, or not to love without necessitie, for God before wote it. This maner of necessitie forsothe semeth to some men into coaccion, that is to saie, constrainyng, or els prohibicion that is defendyng, wherefore necessitie is me to love of wil. I understande me to be constrained, by some privie strengthe, to the will of lovyng, and if no love, to be defended from the will of loving, and so through necessitie me semeth to love for I love, or els not to love, if I not love, wherethrough neither thanke ne maugre in tho thynges maie I deserve.

Now (qð she) thou shalte well understande that often we saie thyng, through necessitie, to be that by no strengthe to be neither is coarted, ne constrained, and thorowe necessitie not to be, that with no defendyng is removed, for we saie, it is thorowe necessitie, GOD to be immortalle, nought dedliche, and it is necessitie, God to be rightfull, but not that any strengthe of violente maner constraineth hym to be immortall, or defendeth hym to be unrightful, for nothing maie make him dedly or unrightfull. Right so if I saie through necessitie is The to be a lover or els none, only thorow will, as God before wote, it is not to understande, that any thing defendeth or forbit The thy wil, which shal not be, or els constraineth it to be, which shal be: that same thing forsoth God before wot, whiche he before seeth, any thyng commende of onely wille, that wil neither is constrained ne defended through any other thinge. And so through libertie of arbitrement it is doe, that is doen of wil. And truly, my gode child, if these thynges be wel understand, I wene that none inconvenient shalt thou finde, betwene Godde's forweting, and libertie of arbitrement, wherefore, I wote well thei maie stande togither. Also farthermore, who that understanding of prescience properliche considereth, through the same wise, that any thing be afore wist, is saied for to be comyng, it is pronounced, there is nothing toforne wist, but thyng commyng, forewetyng is but of trouth, doubt maie not be wist: wherefore, when I sey, that God toforne wot any thyng, through necessitie is thilke thing to be commyng, all is one if I sey, if it shal be, but this necessitie neither constraineth, ne defendeth any thing to be, or not to be. Therefore sothly if love is put to be, it is saied of necessitie to be, or els for it is put not to be, it is affirmed not to be of necessitie: not for that necessitie constraineth or defendeth, love to be, or not to be. For when I saie, if love shal be of necessitie it shal be, here foloweth necessitie. The thinge toforne put, it is as moche to saie, as if it were thus pronounced, that thing shal be: none other thing signifieth this necessitie but onely thus, that shal be maie not togither be and not be. Evenliche also it is soth, love was and is, and shal be, not of necessitie, and nede is to have be all that was, and nedefull is to be all that is, and coming to all that shal be: and it is not the same to saie, love to be passed, and love passed to be passed, or love present to be present, and love to be present, or els love to be commyng; and love commyng to be commyng: diversite in setting of wordes maketh diversite in understanding, altho in the same sentence thei accorden of significacion, right as it is not all one, love swete to be swete, and love to be swete: for moch love is bitter and sorowfull ere hertes ben esed, and yet it gladdeth thilk sorowfull hert on soche love to thinke. Forsoth (qð I) otherwhile I have had mokell blisse in hert of love, that stoundmele hath me sorily anoied: and certes, lady, for I se my self thus knit, with this Margarite perle, as by bonde of your service, and of no libertie of will, my hert will now not accorde this service to love. I can demin in my self none otherwise, but through necessitie am I constrained, in this service to abide. But alas! then, if I through nedefull compulsion, maugre me, be with holde, little thanke for all my grete travaille have I then deserved. Now (qð this ladie) I saie as I saied: Me liketh this matter to declare at the full, and why? For many men have had divers fantasies and refons, bothe on one side therof, and in the other. Of which right sone I trowe, if thou wilt understand, thou shalt conyeve the sentence, to the partie more probable by refon, and in sothe knowing, by that I have of this matter maked an ende. Certes (qð I) of these thinges long have I had grete luste to be learned, ned, for yet I wene Godde's will and his prescience accordeth with my service, in lovyng of this precious Margarite perle, after whom ever in my herte with thursting desire wete I doe brenne, and wast- yng I langour and fade, and the daie of my desti- nie, in deth or in joye, I abide; but yet in the ende I am comforted be my supposaille in blisse; and in joye to determine after my desires. That thyng (qð Love) hastelie to The neigh, God graunt of his grace and mercie, and this shal be my praier, till thou be likened in herte at thine own wil. But now to enforme The in this matter (qð this Ladie) thou woste where I left, that was love to be swete, and love swete to be swete, is not all one for to saie: For a tre is not alwaie by necessitie white, som- time er it wer white, it might have be not white: and after time it is white, it maie be not white: but a white tre ever more nedefull is to be white: for neither toforne ne after it was white, might it be to- giðer white and not white. Also love by necessitie is not present as now in The, for er it wer present it might have be, that it should now not have be, and yet it may be, that it shal not be present: but thy love present, whiche to her Margarite The hath bound, nedefull is to be present. Truly some doing of accion, not by necessitie is coming farre toforne it be, it maie be that it shal not be coming: thing for- soth coming nedefull is to be coming, for it maie not be that coming shal not be coming. And right as I have saied of present and of future tymes, the same sentence in sothnesse is of the preterit, that is to say, time passed, for thing passed must nedes be passed, and er it were it might have not be, where- fore it should not have passed. Right so when Love comyng, is saied of love that is to come, nedefull is to be that is saied, for thing comming never is not commyng, and so oft the same thyng we saie of the same; as when we saie every man is a man, or every lover is a lover, so must it be nedes, in no waie maie he be man, and no man together. And if it be not by necessitie, that is to say, nedeful al thing comming to be comming, then some thyng comming is not comming, and that is impossible, right as these termes nedefull, necessitie, and necessa- rie, betoken and signifyng nedes to be, and it maie not otherwise be. Right these termes, impossible signifieth, that thing is not, and by no waie maie it be, then through perte necessite, all thing comming is comming, but that is by necessitie, foloweth with nothing to be constrained. Lo! when that com- myng is saied of thyng, not alwaie thinge through necessitie is, altho it be comyng. For if I saie to morowe, love is comyng in this Margarite's herte, not therefore through necessitie shal thilke love be, yet it maie be that it shal not be, altho it were comyng. Neverthelater, sometyme it is sothe, that some thyng be of necessitie, that is saied to come: and if I saie to morowe be commyng the risyn of the Sonne. If therefore with necessitie I pronounce commyng of thyng to come, in this maner love to morne commyng in thine Margarite, to The warde by necessitie is commyng, or els the risyn of the Sonne to morn comming through necessitie is com- myng. Love sothlie, whiche maie not be of necessitie alone followyng, through necessite commyng it is made certain. For future of future is saied, that is to saie, commyng of commyng is saied: as if to morowe commyng, is through necessite coming it is. Arising of the Sonne through two necessities in commyng, it is to understande, that one is to forgoynng necessite, whiche maketh thing to be, therefore it shal be, for nedefull is that it be. An other is folowyng necessitie, which nothing constraineth to be, and so by neces- sitie it is to come, why? for it is to come.

Now then, when we saie, that God before wote thyng commyng nedefull is to be commyng, yet therefore make we not in certaine, evermore thyng to be through necessitie commyng. Sothly tthing commyng maie not be not commyng by no waie, for it is the same sentence of understandyng: as if we saie thus: If God before wote any thing, nedefull is that to be comming. But yet therfore foloweth not that prescience of God, thing through necessitie to be coming: for altho God toforne wot all thinges comming, yet not therfore he before wot every thing coming thorow necessitie. Sum thinges he before wot coming of frewill, out of resonable creature. Certes (qð) these termes, nede and ne- cessitie, have a quaint maner of understandyng, thei woulde dullen many mennes wittes. Therfore (qð she) I wol 'hem openly declare, and more clerely then I have toforne er I depart hense. Here of this matter (qð she) thou shalte understande, that right as it is not nedeful, God to wiln that he wil, no more in many things is not nedefull, a man to wilne that he woll, and ever right as nedefull is to be, what that God woll, right so to be it is nede- full, that man woll in tho thinges, whiche that God hath put into manne's subjeccion of willyng: as if a man woll love, that he love: and if he ne woll love, that he love not, and of soche other things in man's disposicion. For why? now then that God woll maie not be, when he woll the will of man thorow no necessitie to be constrained, or els defended for to wiln, and he woll th' effeete to folowe the will, than is it nedefull wil of man to be fre, and also to be that he woll. In this maner it is soth that thorow necessitie is man's werke in loving, that he woll do altho he woll it not with necessitie. (Qð I than) how stant it in love of thilke will, sichen men loven willyng of fre choise in hert. Wherefore if it be thorow necessitie, I praie you, Ladie, of an answere this question to asloile. I woll (qð she) answer The blively: right as men will not thorow necessitie, right so is not love of wil thorowe necessitie, ne thorowe necessitie wrought the ilke same will; for if he would it not with gode will, it should not have ben wrought, although that he doeth it is nedefull to be doen. But if a man do sinne, it is nothing els but to will, that he should not: right so syn of will, is not to be maner necessary doen, no more then wil is necessary. Never the later this is soth, if a man woll sinne, it is necessary him to sinne, but through thilk neces- sitie nothing is constrained ne defended in the will, right so thilk thing that frewill woll, and maie, and not maie, not wiln, and nedefull is that to wilne he maie not wilne, but thilke to wilne nedefull is, for impossible to hym it is one thing, and the same to wilne, he maie not wilne, but thilk to wilne nede- full is: for impossible to hym it is one thing and the same to wilne, and not to wilne.

The werke forsothe of will, to whom it is yeve, that it be that he hath in will, and that he woll not, voluntarie of spontanie it is, for by spontanie will it is doe, that is to saie, with gode wil, not constrain- ed: then by wil not constrained, it is constrained to be, and that is it maie not together be. If this neces- sitie maketh libertie of will, whiche that aforne thei weren, thei might have ben eschued and shonned: God then, which that knoweth all truthe, and no- thing but truthe, all these thinges, as thei arne spon- tanie, or necessarie sight, and as he seeth so thei ben: and so with these thinges well considered, it is open at the fulle, that without all maner repugnance, God before wote al maner things ben doen by fre- will, whiche aforne thei weren, might have ben ne- ver thei should be, and yet ben thei thorow a maner necessitie, from frewill discended.

Hcreby

Hereby maie (qð she) lightly ben knowe that not all thinges to be is of necessitie, though God have hem in his prescience, for somthinges to be, is of libertie of will, and to make The to have full knowing of Godde's beforneweting, here me (qð she) what I shal saie. Blithly lady (qð I) me list this matter entirely to understande. Thou shalte (qð she) understande, that in heaven is Godde's being, although he be over al by power, yet there is abiding of divine persone, in which heaven is everlastyng presence, withouten any movable tyme there, sole have I not saied toforne this, as tyme hurteth, right so ayenwarde, tyme heleth and rewardeth: and a tre oft failed, is holde more in deintie, when it fruiet forthe bringeth.

A Marchaunte that for ones lesyng in the Se, no more to aventure thinketh, he shall never with aventure come to riches: so oft must menne on the Oke smite, till the happie dente have entred, whiche with the Oke's owne swaie, maketh it to come al at ones. So oft falleth the lethy water on the harde rocke, till it have through persed it. The even draught of the Wier drawer, maketh the wier to ben even, and supplie werchyng, and if he stinted in his draught, the Wier breketh asonder. Every Tre well springeth, when it is well grounded, and not often removed. What shall this fruiete be (qð I) now it ginneth ripe? Grace (qð she) in parfite joye to endure, and therewith thou begon. Grace (qð I) me thinketh, I should have a rewarde for my long travaile? I shall tell The (qð she) retribucion of thy gode willes, to have of thy Margarite perle, it bereth not the name of mede, but onely of gode grace, and that cometh not of thy desert, but of thy Margarite's godenslie, and vertue alone. (Qð I) should all my long travaile have no rewarde, but through grace, and sometyme yourselven saied, rightwisenesse evenliche rewardeth to quite one benefite for an other. That is sothe (qð Love) ever as I saied, as to hym that doeth gode, which to doen he were neither holden, ne yet constrained. That is sothe (qð I). Truly (qð she) all that ever thou doest thyne Margarite perle, of will, of love, and of reson thou owest to doen it, yet is it nothyng els but yelding of thy debte, in quiting of thy grace, which she The lente, when ye first mette. I wene (qð I) right little grace to me she delivered: Certes it was harde grace, it hath nigh me astrangled. That it was gode grace I wotte well thou wilt it graunte, ere thou departe hence. If any man yeve to an other wight, to whom that he ought not, and whiche that of himself nothyng maie have, a garmente or a cote, though he were the cote, or els thilke clothyng, it is not to put to him that was naked the cause of his clothing, but onelie to him that was yever of the garment; wherefore I saie, thou that were naked of love, and of thy self none have mighteste, it is not to put to thyne owne persone, sithen thy love came through thy Margarit perle; Ergo she was yever of the love, although thou it use, and there sente she The grace, thy service to beginne. She is worthie the thanke of this grace, for she was the yever.

All the thoughtes, busie doynges, and plesaunce in thy might, and in thy wordes, that thou canste devise, ben but right little, in quityng of thy debte: had she not ben, soche thyng had not ben studied. So all these matters kindlie drawn homward to this Margarite perle, for from thens were thei borrowed, all is whollie her, to witte, the love that thou havest, and thus quitest thou thy debte, in that thou stedfastlie serveest. And kepe well that love, I The rede, that of her thou hast borrowed, and use it in her service, thy debte to quite, and then art thou able right sone to have grace, wherefore after mede in none halve maieest thou loke.

Thus thy ginyng and endyng is but grace alone, and in thy gode deservyng thy debte thou aquiteste: without grace is nothyng worthe what so ever thou werche. Thanke thy Margarite of her grete grace that hitherto The hath guided, and pray her of continuaunce forthe in thy werkes hereafter, and that for no mishap thy grace overthwartlie tourne. Grace, glorie, and joye, is comyng through gode folkes desertes, and by gettyng of grace therein shullen ende. And what is more glorie, or more joie then wisdom, and love in perfite charitie, whiche God hath graunted to all tho that well can deserve? And with that this Lady all at ones starte into myne herte: here wol I onbide (qð she) for ever, and never woll I gone hence, and I woll kepe The from medlyng, while me liste here on bide: thyne entremetyng maners into stedfastnes shullen be chaunged.

Soberliche tho threwe I up myne eyen, and hugelie tho was I astonied of this sodain adventure, and faine would I have lerned how vertnes shulden ben knowen, in which thynges I hope to God, hereafter she shall me enformen, and namely sithen her resting place is now so nigh at my will: and anone all these thynges that this ladie saied, I remembred me by my self, and revolved the lives of myne understanding wittes.

Tho found I fully all these matters perfitelie there written, howe misserule by fained love bothe relmes and cities hath governed a grete throwe. Howe lightlie me might the fautes espie, howe rules in love should ben used, howe sometyme with fained love foule I was begiled, how I should love have knowe, and howe I shall in love with my service procede.

Also furthermore, I found of perdurable letters wonderlie there graven these matters, whiche I shall nempne. Certes none age, ne other thing in yerth, maie the lest syllable of this in no point deface, but clerly as the Sonne in myne understanding foule thei shinen. This maie never out of my minde, how I maie not my love kepe, but through willyng in hert: wilne to love maie I not, but I lovyng have. Love have I none, but through grace of this Margarite perle. It is no maner doubt, that will woll not love, but for it is lovyng, as wille woll not rightfully, but for it is rightfull it selve. Also will is not lovyng for he woll love, but he woll love for he is lovyng: it is all one to will to be loving, and lovynges in possession to have. Right so will woll not love, for of love hath he no partie, and yet I denie not lovyng, will wilne more love to have, which that he hath not, when he wold more than he hath, but I say he maie no love wilne, if he no love have, through whiche thilk love he should wilne: but to have this lovyng will, maie no manne of hym self, but onely through grace toforne goyng: right so maie no man it kepe, but by grace folowing. Consider now every man a-right, and lette seen if that any wight of himself, mowe this loving well get, and he thereof first nothing have: for if it should of himself spryng, either it must be willing, or not willyng. Willyng by hymself maie he it not have, sithen him faileth the matter that shuld it forth bring, the matter him faileth: why? He maie thereof have no knowing, till when grace put it in his herte. Thus willyng by himself, maie he it not have, and not willing maie he it not have. Parde every concepte of every reasonable creature otherwise wil not graunt: will in affirmatife with not willing by no waie now accord. And although this loving woll come in mine hert by frenesse of arbitrement, as in this boke fullie is shewed, yet owe I not therefore as moche alowe my frewill frewill, as grace of that Margarite, to me lened, for neither might I without grace toforne goyng, and afterwarde folowing, thilk grace get ne kepe, and lese shal I it never but if frewill it make, as inwilling otherwise then grace hath me graunted. For right as when any perione taketh willing to be sober, and throweth that awaie willing to be dronke, or els taketh will of drinking out of mesure: which thing anon as it is doen, maketh through his own gilt by frewill, that leseth his grace. In which thing therefore, upon the nobley of grace I mote trusten, and my busie cure set the ilke grace to kepe, that my frewill otherwise then by reson it shoud werche, cause not my grace to voide: for thus must I bothe loke to frewill and to grace. For right as naturell usage, in engendering of children, maie not ben without father, ne also but with the mother, for neither father ne mother in begetting may it lacke: right so grace and frewill accorden, and without 'hem both maie not lovyng will in no partie ben gotten. But yet is not frewill, in getting of that thyng, so mokell thanke worthie as is grace, ne in the kepyng thereof, so moche thanke deserveth, and yet in getting and kepyng bothe doen thei accorde. Truelie oftentime grace frewill helpeth in fordoynge of contrary thynges, that to wyllyng love not accorden, and strength will adversities to withsit, wherfore al together to grace oweth to ben accepted, that my wyllyng deserveth: Frewill to lovyng in this wise is accorded. I remember me well how all this boke (who so hede taketh) considereth all thynges, to werchinges of mankinde evenly accordeth, as in turning of this word love into troth, or els rightwisenesse, whether that it like. For what thing that falleth to man, in helping of fre arbitrement, thilke rightwisenesse to take, or els to kepe, through whiche a man shall be saved, of whiche thyng all this boke mencion hath made, in everie point thereof, grace oweth to be thanked.

Wherefore I saie, every wight havynge this rightwisenesse, rightfull is, and yet therefore I fele not in my conscience, that to all rightfull is behoten the blisse everlastyng, but to 'hem' that ben rightfull, withouten any unrightfulness. Some man after some degre maie rightfully ben accompted: as chaste men in livyng, and yet ben thei janglers, and full of envie pressed: to 'hem' shall this blisse never ben delivered. For right as very blisse is without al maner nede, right so to no man shall it be yeven, but to the rightfull, voide from al maner unrightfulness founde, so no man to her blisse shall ben folowed, but he be rightfull, and with unrightfulness not bounde, and in that degre fullie be knowe. This rightfulness in as moche as in hymself is, of none evill it is cause, and of all maner godenesse truely it is mother. This helpeth the spirite, to withsitte the leude lustes of fleshlye likyng: this strengtheth and mainteineth the lawe of kind, and if that otherwhile me weneth harme of this precious thinge to followe, therethrough is nothyng the cause, of somwhat els cometh it aboute, who so taketh hede. By rightfulness forsoth, werne many holie sainctes gode favour in swetenesse to God Almightye, but that to some folkes thei weren favour of deth into dedly ende, that come not of the sainctes rightwisnesse, but of other wicked mennes badnesse hath proceded. Truely the ilke will, whiche that the ladie of love me lerned affection of wille to nempne, whiche is in willing of profitable thynges, evill is it not, but when to fleshly lustes it consenteth, ayenst reson of soule: but that this thing more clerely be understande, it is for to knowe, whence, and how the ilke will is so vicious and so redie evil dedes to performe.

Grace at the ginning ordeined thilk wil in godenesse ever to have endured, and never to badnesse have assented: menne should not bileve, that God thilke wil made to be vicious. Our firste father as Adam and Eve, for vicious appetites, and vicious wille to soche appetites consentyng, ben not one thing in kinde, other thyng is doen for the other. And how this will first into manne first assented, I holde it profitable to shewe: but if the first condicion of resonable cature woll be considered and apertly loked, lightly the cause of soche wille maie ben shewed. Intencion of God was, that rightfully and blessed shoud resonable nature ben made, himself for to kepe, but neither blisfull ne rightfull might it not be, withouten will in them bothe. Will of rightfulness is the ilke same rightfulness, as here toforne is shewed: but wil of blisse is not the ilke blisse, for every manne hath not thilke blisse, in whom the will thereof is abiding. In this blisse after every understanding, is suffisaunce of covenable comodites, without any maner nede, whether it be blisse of angels, or els the ilke, that grace first in paradise suffred Adam to have. For although Angels blisse be more than Adam's was in paradise, yet maie it not be denied, that Adam in paradise ne had suffisaunce of blisse: for right as grete herte is without al maner of coldnesse, and yet maie an other hert more hete have, right so nothing defended Adam in paradise to ben blisfed, without all maner nede.

Although Angels blisse be moche more, forsothe it foloweth not lasse then an other to have therefore hym nedeth, but for to wante a thyng, whiche that behoveth to ben had, that maie nede ben cleped, and that was not in Adam, at the first ginning, God and the Margarite weten what I mene. Forsothe where as is nede, there is wretchednesse, God without cause toforne goyng made not resonable cature wretched, for him to understande and love hadde he first made. God made therefore man blisfed without all maner indigence, together and at ones toke resonable cature blysse, and of wil of blisfednesse, and will of rightfulness, whiche is rightfulness it selve, and libertie of arbitrement, that is fre wil, with which thilke rightfulness may he kepe and lese. So and in that wise ordained thilke two, that wil whiche that instrumente is cleped, as here toforne mencion is made, shulde use thilke rightfulness, by techinge of his soule to gode maner of governaunce, in thought and in wordes, and that it shoulde use the blisse in obedient maner, withouten anie incommode. Blisse forsothe into man's profite, and rightwisnes into his worship God delivered at ones: but rightfulness so was yeven that man might it lese, whiche yf he losse had not, but continually have it kept, he shoud have deserved the avauncement into the felowshippe of angels, in whiche thing if he that losse, never by himselfe forwarde shulde he it now ayenward recover: and as wel the blisse that he was in, as aungeles blisse that to him wardes was coming, shuld be nome at ones, and he deprived of them bothe. And thus fyl man unto likeness of unresonable bestes, and with 'hem' to corrupcion and unlustes appetites was he under throwne, but yet wil of blisse dwelleth, that by indigence of gode, which that he lost through gret wretchednes, by right shulde he ben punished. And thus for he weived rightfulness, losse hath he his blisse: but faile of his desire in his owne commodite maye he not, and where comodites to his resonable nature, whiche he hath losse may he not have, to false lustes, whiche ben bestial appetites, he is turned: folye of unconning hath him begiled, in wening that thilk ben the comodites that owen to ben desired. This affection of will by libertie of arbitrement is enduced to wiln thus thing that he shulde not, and so is wil not made yvel but unrightful, by absence of rightfulness, which thing by reson ever shulde he have. And frenesse of arbytrement may he not wilne whan he it not haveth, for while he it had, thilke helpe it not to kepe: so that without grace may it not ben recovered. Wil of comodite, in as moche as unrightful it is maked, by willing of yvel lustes, willing of godenesse may he not wilne, for wil of instrument to affection of wil is thralled, sithen that other thing may not it wilne, for wil of instrument to affection desireth, and yet ben bothe they wil cleped: for that instrument woll, through affection it wylne, and affection desireth thilke thing wherto instrument him ledeth. And so frewil to unlusty affection ful servaunt is maked, for unrightfulnes maye he not releve, and without rightfulness ful fredome may it never have. For kindly liberty of arbitrement without it veine and ydel is forsoth. Wherefore yet I say, as often have I said the same, whan instrument of will loseth rightfulness, in no maner but by grace may he ayen retourne rightfulness to wilne.

For sithen nothings but rightfulness alone shuld he wilne, what that ever he wilne without rightfulness, unrightfully he it wilne. These than unrightful appetites and unthrifty lustes which the flies desireth, in as mokel as they ben in kinde, ben they not bad, but they ben unrightful and badde, for they ben in resonable creature, wher as they beyng in no way shuld ben suffred. In unresonable bestes neither ben they yvel ne unrightful, for there is ther kinde beyng.

KNowen may it wel ben now, of these thinges toforne declared, that man hath not alwai thilke rightfulness, which by dute of right evermore haven he shuld, and by no way by him selfe maye he it get ne kepe; and after he it hath if he it lese, recover shall he it never, without especial grace: wherefore the commune sentence of the peple in opinion, that everye thinge after destinie is ruled, false and wicked is to beleve: For thoughe predestinacion be as wel of gode as of badde, sithen, that it is said God hadnest made, whiche he never ne wrought, but for he suffreth hem to be maked, as that he hardeth whan he nought missaieth, or ledde into temptacion whan he not delivereth, wherefore it is none inconvenient if in that maner be said, God toforne have destinied both badde, ande ther badde werkes, whan hem ne ther yvel dedes nether amendeth, ne therto hem grace levet. But speciallyche predestinacion of godenes alone is saide by these grete clerkes, for in him God doth that they ben, and that is godenes they werchen. But the negatife herof in badnesse is holden, as the lady of love hath me lerned, who so aright in this boke loketh. And utterly it is to weten, that predestinacion properly in God maye not ben demed, no more than beforne weting. For in the chapitre of Godde's beforne-weting, as love me reherfed, al these maters apertely maye ben founden. Al thinges to God ben now together, and in presence duringe. Trewly presence and predestinacion in nothinge disacorden, wherefore as I was lerned howe Godde's before-wetyng and fre choice of will mowe stonden together, me thinketh the same reson me ledeth, that destenie and fre wil acorden, so that neither of hem both to other in nothings contrarieth. And resonabliche may it not ben demed, as often as any thinge falleth frewil werching, as if a man another man wrongfully anoyeth, wherefore he him sleeth that it be constrained to that ende, as mokell folke crieth and saith: Lo! as it was destinied of God toforne know, so it is thorowe necessite fal, and otherwise might it not betide. Trewlye neither he that the wronge wrought, ne he that him selfe venged, none of thilke things thorow necessite wrought: for if that with fre wil ther had it not willed, neither had wrought that he perfourmed: and so utterly grace that fre wil in godenes bringeth and kepeth, and fro badnes it tourneth, in al thinge more thanke deserveth. This grace maketh sentence in vertue to abyde, wherefore in body and in soule in full plentie of conninge, after ther gode deserving in the everlastinge joye, after the day of dome, shul they endles dwel, and they shul ben lerned that in kingdome with so mokel affecte of love and of grace, that the lest joye shal of the gretest in glorie rejoyce and ben gladdened, as if he the same joye had. What wonder sith God is the gretest love, and The ne ought to loke thinges with resoning to prove, and so is instrument of wil, will: and yet varieth he from effecte and usinge both. Affeccion of wil also for wil is cleped, but it varieth from instrument in this maner wise, by that name, liche whan it cometh into minde, anon right it is in willing desired, and the negatife therof with willing maye not acorde: this is closed in hert, though usage and instrument slepe. This slepeth whan instrument and us waken: and of soche maner affection trewelye some man hath more, and some man lesse. Certes trewe lovers wenen ever therof to litell to have. False lovers in litell wenen have right mokell. Lo! instrumente of will in false and trewe bothe evenlich is proporcioned, but affection is more in some place than in some, bycause of godenes that foloweth, and that I think hereafter to declare. Use of this instrument is wil, but it taketh his name whan wilned thinge is in doyng. But utterly grace to catch in thy blisse, desire to ben rewarded. Thou muste have than affection of will at the ful, and use whan his tyme asketh wysely to ben governed. Sothly, my disciple, without fervent affection of will maye no man ben saved: this affection of gode service in gode love, may not ben grounded, without fervent desire to the thinge in will coveted. But he that never retcheth to have or not to have, affection of wil in that hath no resting place. Why? for whan thinge cometh to minde and it be not taken in hede to comin or not come, therefore in that place affection faileth: and for thilke affection is so litel, thorow whiche in godenes he shoulde come to his grace, the litalnes wil it not suffre to availe by no waye into his helps: Certes grace and reson thilke affection foloweth. This affection with reson knitte, dureth in everiche trewe herte, and evermore is encrefing, no ferdnes, no strength may it remove while truthe in herte abideth. Sothly whan falsed ginneth entre, truth draweth away grace and joye both, but than thilke falsed that trouthe hath thus voided hath unknit the bonde of understandinge reson bytween wil and the hert. And who so that bonde undoth, and unkitteth wil to be in other purpose than to the first accorde, knitteth him with contrary of reson, and that is unreson. Lo! than will and unreson bringeth a man from the blisse of grace, whiche thinge of pure kinde every man ought to shonne, and to eschew, and to the knot of wil and reson confirme. Methinketh (qð she) by thy student lokes, thou wenest in these wordes me to contrarien, from other sayinges heretofore in other place, as whan thou were sometime in affection of will, to thinges that now han brought The in disese, whiche I have The counsailed to voide, and thin hert discover, and there I made thy wil to ben chaunged, whiche now thou wenest I argue to witholde and to kepe. Shortlye I say the revers in these wordes may not ben founde: for though dronkenes be forbidden, men shull not alway ben drinkles. I trow right for thou thy wil out of reson shulde not tourne, thy will in one reson shuld not unbinde, I say thy wil in thy firste purpose with unreson was closed: Constrawe forth of the remnaunte what

The

The gode liketh. Trewly that wil and reson shuld be knit together was fre wil of reson, after time thine herte is assentaunt to them both, thou myght not chaunge, but if thou from rule of reson varye, in whiche variaunce to come to thilke blisse desired contrarioussly thou werchest: and nothing may know wil and reson but love alone. Than if thou voide love, than wevest the bonde, that knitteth, and so nedes, or els right lightly the other gon afondry, wherfore thou seest apertly that love holdeth this knot, and amaiseth hem to be bounde. These things, as a ring in circuit of wreth, ben knit in thy soule without departing. A! let be, let be (qð I) it nedeth not of this no reherfaile to make, my soule is yet in parfite blisse, in thinking of the knot.

NOW trewly, lady, I have my grounde wel understood, but what thinge is thilke spire that into a tre shoulde wexe: Expowne me that thyng, what ye therof mene. That shal I (qð she) blithlie, and take gode hede to the wordes I. The rede. Continuaunce in thy gode service, by long processe of tyme in full hope abiding, without any chaunge to wilne in thyn hert, this is the spire, whiche if it be well kept and governed shal so hugely spring, til the fruit of grace is plentuously out-sprongen: for altho thy will be gode, yet may not therfore thilke blisse desired hastely on The discenden, it must abyde his fesonable tyme. And so by proces of growing, with thy gode traveile, it shal into more and more wexe, til it be founde so mighty, that windes of yvel speche, ne scornes of envie make nat the travaile overthrow, ne frostes of mistrust, ne hailes of jelousy right litel might have in harming of soch springes. Every yong setling lightly with smal stormes is apeired, but whan it is woxen somdele in gretnes, than han grete blastes and wethers but litel might, any disavantage to him for to werche. Mine own sovereign lady (qð I) and welth of mine hert, and it were lyking unto your noble grace therthrough nat to be displeased, I suppose ye erren, now ye maken jelosy, envy, and distourbour to hem that ben your servautes. I have lerned ofte toforn this time, that in every lover's hert grete plentie of jelousie's greves ben sowe, wherfore me thinketh ye ne ought in no maner accompte thilke thing among these other welked winers and venomous serpentis, as envy, mistrust, and yvel speche. O sole (qð she) mistrust with foly, with yvel wil medled engendreth the welked padde. Trewly if they were distroied jelousy undowne were for ever, and yet some maner of jelousy, I wot wel is ever redy in al the hertes of my trew servautes, as thus: to be jelous over him self, lest he be cause of his own disefe.

This jelousye in ful thought, ever shuld be kept for ferdnes to lese his love by miskeping thorowe his owne doing in leudnes, or els thus: Lest she that thou serveest so fervently is beset ther her better lyketh, that of al thy gode service she compreth nat a cressie. These jelousies in hert for acceptable qualitees ben demed: these oughten every trew lover by kindly evermore haven in his minde, til fully the grace and blisse of my service be on him descended at wil. And he that than jelousy carcheth, or els by wening of his owne folishe wilfulnes mistrusteth, treuly with fantasy of venim he is soule begiled. Yvel wil hath grounded thilke mater of sorow in his leude soule, and yet nat for than to every wight shuld me not trust, ne everi wight fully misbeleve, the mene of these thinges owen to be used. Sothly withouten causful evidence mistrust in jelousye shulde not be wened in no wise person comenly, soch leude wickednes shulde me nat finde. He that is wise and with yvell wil nat be acomered, can abyde wel his time

til grace and blisse of his service folowing have him so mokell esed, as his abidinge tofore hande hath him disefed. Certes (lady qð I tho) of nothing me wondreth, sithen thilke blisse so precious is and kindly gode, and wel is, and worthy in kind, whan it is medled with love, and reson as ye toforn have declared. Why? anon as hie one is sprong, why springeth not the other? and anone as the one cometh, why receveth not the other? For every thing that is out of his kindly place by full appetite ever cometh thitherward kindly to drawe, and his kindly being therto him constraineth. And the kindly stede of this blisse is in soch wil medled to unbide, and nedes in that it shuld have his kindly beyng. Wherfore me thinketh anon as that wil to be shewed, and kinde him profereth, thilke blisse shulde hym hie thilke wil to receive, or els kind of godenes worchen not in hem as they shuld. Lo! be the sonne never so ferre ever it hath hys kynde werching in erth: grete weight on hie on loft caried stineth never til it come to his resting place. Waters to the Se ward ever ben they drawing, thing that is light blythly will not sinke, but ever ascendeth and upward draweth. Thus kind in every thing his kindly course, and his being place sheweth: Wherfore by kinde on this gode wil, anon as it were sprong, this blisse shuld theron discende, ther kinde wold they dwelleden together, and so have ye said your selfe. Certes (qð she) thyne hert sitteth wonder fore this blisse sot to have, thin herte is foregreved that it tarieth so longe, and if thou durstest, as me thinketh by thine words, this blisse woldest thou blame. But yet I say, thilke blisse is kindly gode, and his kindly place in that will to unbyde. Never the later, there comming together after kindes ordinaunce nat sodainly may betide, it must abide time, as kind yeveth him leve, for if a man, as this wil medled gonne him shewe, and thilke blisse in haste folowed, so lightly comming shulde lightly cause going, longe time of thrusting, causeth drinke to be the more delicious whan it is atasted. Howe is it (qð I than) that so many blisses se I all day at min eye, in the first moment of a sight with soche wil accord. Ye, and yet other while with wil assenteth, singularly by him selfe ther reson faileth, traveile was none, service had no time. This is a queint maner thinge, how soche doing cometh aboute. O (qð she) that is thus, the erthe kindly after fasons and times of the yere, bringeth forth innumerable herbes and trees bothe profitable and other, but soch as men might leve though they were nought in norishinge to man's kinde serven, or els soche as tournen sone unto mennes confusion in case that thereof they ataste, comen forthe out of the erthe by ther owne kind, withouten any mane's cure or any busynes in traveile: and the ilke herbes that to mennes livelode necessarily serven, withoute whiche godely in this li e creatures mowen not enduren, and moste ben nourishen to mankind, without grete traveile, grete tilthe, and longe abiding time, comen not out of the erthe, and it with fede toforn ordained soche herbes to make spring and forthe grow. Right so the parfite blisse that we have in mening of duringe tyme to abyde, maye nat come so lightly, but with grete traveile, and right besy tilth, and yet gode fede to be sowe, for oft the croppe failethe of hadde fede, be it never so wel traveiled. And thilke blisse thou spoke of so lightly in comminge, trewely is nat necessary ne abydinge: and but it the better be stamped, and the venomous jeuse outwongen, it is likely to enpoisonen all tho that thereof tasten. Certes right bitter ben the herbes that shewen first the yere of ther own kind. Wel the more is the harvest that yeldeth many graines, tho long and fore it hath ben traveyled. What woldest thou demen yf a man wolde yeve thre quarters of nobles of golde, that wer a precious gift? ye certes (qð I). And what (qð she) thre quarters ful of perles? Certes (qð I) that were a riche gifte. And what (qð she) of as mokel azure? (Qð I) a precious gyfte at ful. Were not (qð she) a noble gifte of all these at ones? In gode faith (qð I) for wanting of Englishe naming of so noble a worde, I can not for preciousnesse yeve it a name: Rightfully (qð she) hast thou demed, and yet love knitte in vertue passeth all the golde in this erthe. Gode wil accordant to reson, with no maner property may be countervailed, all the azure in the worlde is not to accounte in respecte of reson, love that with gode wil and reson accordeth, with non erthele riches maye nat ben amended. This yest hast thou yeven I knowe it my self, and thy Margarete thilke gift hath received, in which thing to reward she hath her self bounde. But thy gift as I said, by no maner riches maye be amended, wherefore with thing that may nat be amended thou shalt of thy Margarete's rightwisnesse be rewarded. Right suffred yet never, but every gode dede somtyme to be yolde. Al wolde thy Margarete with no reward. The quite, right that nevermore dieth thy mede in merite wol purvey. Certes soch sodaine blisse as thou first nempnest, right wil 'hem reward as The wel is worthy, and though at thin eye it semeth the reward the desert to passe, right can after sende soch biternes evenly it to reward: so the sodain blisse by al ways of reson in grete godenes may not be acompred, but blisse long, both long it abyde, and endlesse it woll last. Se why thy wil is endelese, for if thou lovedeste ever, thy will is ever ther t' abide and nevermore to chaunge: evenhed of reward must ben done by right: than muste nedes thy grace and this blisse endelese in joy to unbide. Evenlyche disese asketh evenlyche joy, whiche hastily thou shalt have. A (qð I) it sufficeth not than alone gode will, be it never so well with reson medled, but if it be in gode service long travailed. And so through service should men come to the joye, and this me thinketh should be the waxing tre of which ye first meved.

yve

Very trouthe (qð she) hast thou now conceived of these thinges in thin hert, hastily shalt thou be able very joye and parfite blisse to receive. And now I wote well thou desyrest to knowe the maner of branches, that out of the tre should spring. Therof lady (qð I) hertely I you pray: For than leve I wol, that right sone after I shall ataste of the frute that I so longe have desired. Thou haste herde (qð she) in what wise this tre tofore this have I declared, as in grounde and in stocke of waxing. First the ground shuld be thy frewil ful in thine herte, and the stocke (as I saide) should be continuaunce in gode service, by long time in travaille, til it were in gretnes right well woxen. And whan this tre soche gretnes hath caught, as I have reherfed, the braunches then that the frute should forth bringe, speche muste they be nedes in voice of prayer, in complaining wise used. Out alas! (qð I tho) he is sorowfully wounded that hideth his speche, and sparreth his complaints to make, what shal I speke? that care; but paine even lyke to hel fore hath me assailed, and so ferforth in paine me throng, that I leve my tre is sere and never shal it frut forth bring. Certes he is gretly esed, that dare his prevy mone discover to a true felow, that conning hath and might wherthrough his plaint in any thing may be amended. And mokel more is he joied that with hert of hardines dare complaine to his ladye, what cares that he suffreth, by hope of mercy with grace to be avaunced. Truly I say for me, sithe I came this Margarit to serve, durst I never me discover of no maner disese, and wel the later hath min herte hardied soch thinges to done, for the grete bounties and worthy refreshmentes that she of her grace godelye, without any deserte on my halve, ofte hath me reked, and n're her godenes the more with grace and with mercy medled, which passen all desertes, travailes, and servinges, that I in any degre might endite, I wold wene I shuld be without recover in getting of this blisse for ever. Thus have I stilled my disese, thus have I covered my care, that I bren in sorowful anoy, as gledes and coles wasten a fire under ded ashen. Wel the hotter is the fire, that with ashen it is overlain: right longe this wo have I suffered. Lo! (qð Love) how thou farest: me thinketh the pale yvel hath acomered thy wittes, as fast as thou hiest forwarde, anon sodainly backward thou movest. Shall nat yet all thy leudnes out of thy braines? dul ben thy skilful understandings, thy wil hath thy wit so amaistred. Wost thou not wel (qð she) but every tre in his sasonable time of buxioning shewe his blomes fro within, in signe of what fruite shuld out of him spring, els the frute for that yere men halt delivered, be the ground never so gode. And though the stock be mighty at the ful, and the braunches sere and no buxions shew, farewell the gardiner, he may pipe with an yve lese, his fruite is failed. Wherefore thy braunches must buxionen in presence of thy lady, if thou desire any frute of thy ladies grace, but beware of thy life, that thou no wodelay use, as in asking of things that stretchen into shame, for than might thou not spede by no way that I can espie. Vertue woll not suffre villany out of himself to springe. Thy wordes may not be queint ne of subtil maner understanding. Frelwitted peple supposen in soch poesies to be begiled, in open understanding must every word be used. Voice without clere understandinge of sentence, faith Aristotel, right nought printeth in hert. Thy wordes then to abide in hert and cleve in ful sentence of trewe mening platly must thou shew, and ever be obedient her hestes and her willes to performe, and be thou set in soche a wit to wete by a loke evermore what she meneth. And he that list nat to speke, but stilly his disese suffre: what wonder is it tho he never come to his blisse? Who that travaileth unwist, and coveteth thing unknowe, unweting he shal be quited, and with unknow thing rewarded. Gode lady (qð I than) it hath oft be sene, that wethers and stormes so hugely have fal in buxioning tyme, and by perte durelle han beten of the springes so clene, wherthrough the frut of thilk yere hath failed. It is a grete grace whan buxions han gode wethers, ther frutes forth to bring. Alas! than after soche stormes howe harde is it to avoide, till este weðring and yeres han maked ther circute cours al about, er any frute be able to be tasted! he is shent for shame, that sole is rebuked of his speche. He that is in fire brenning sore smarteth for disese. Him thinketh ful long er the water come that shuld the fire quenche. Whil men gon after a leche, the body is buried. Lo howe semely this frute waxeth! me thinketh that of tho frutes may no man atast, for pure biternes in favour. In this wise both fruit and the tre wasten away togiðer, though mokel besy occupation have be spent to bringe it so ferforthe, that it was able to spring. A litel spech hath maked that al this labour is in ydel. I n'ot (qð she) wherof it serveth thy question to assoile, me thinketh The now duller in wittes, than whan I with The first mette, although a man be leude communly for a sole he is not demed, but if he no gode wol lerne, sottes and soles let lightly out of minde the gode that men techeth 'hem. I said therefore thy stocke must be strong, and in gretnes welherted, the tre is ful feble that that at the first dent faileth: and although frute faileth one yere or two, yet shall soche a feson come one time or other, that shall bring out frute that is nothing preterit, ne passed ther is nothing, future ne coming, but al thinges togid̃er in that place ben present everlastyng without any meving, wherfore to God al thing is as now: and though a thing be nat in kindly nature of thinges as yet, and if it shoud be hereafter, yet evermore we shul saye God it maketh be time present, and now, for no future ne preterit in him may be found. Wherfor his wetinge and his beforeweting, is al one in understanding. Than if wetinge and beforewetinge of God putteth in necessite to al thinges which he wot or beforewot, ne thinge after eternite, or els after anye time, he wol or doth of liberte, but al of necessite; which thing if thou wene it be ayenst reson, nat thorowe necessite, to be or nat to be, al thinge that God wot or beforewot to be or nat to be, and yet nothing defendeth any thing to be wist or to be before wist of him in our willes or our doinges to be done, or els comming to be for fre arbitrement. Whan thou hast these deciaracions well understande, than shalte thou finde it resonable at prove, and that many thinges be nat thorowe necessite, but thorowe liberte of wil, save necessite of fre-wil, as I tofore said: and as me thinketh al utterly declared. Me thinketh lady (q̃d I) so I shoulde you nat displese, and evermore your reverence to kepe, that these thinges contrarien in any understandinge, for ye sain somtyme is thorowe lybertye of wyll, and also thorowe necessite. Of this have I yet no favour, without better declaracion. What wonder (q̃d she) is there in these thinges, sithen al day thou shalt Se at thine eye, in manye thinges receven in hem selfe revers, thorowe divers resons, as thus. I praye The (q̃d she) whiche thinges ben more revers than comen and gone: For if I bidde The come to me, and thou come, after when I bid The go and thou go, thou reversest fro thy firste comminge. That is sothe (q̃d I) and yet (q̃d she) in thy firste alone by divers reson was ful reversinge to understand. As how (q̃d I). That shall I shewe The (q̃d she) by ensample of thinges that have kindly moving. Is there any thing that meveth more kindly than doth the heavens eye, which I clepe the Sonne. Sothely (q̃d I) me semeth it most kindly to move. Thou saiest soth (q̃d she). Than if thou loke to the Sonne, in what parte he be under heaven, evermore he heigheth him in movinge fro thilke place, and heigheth mevinge towarde the ilke same place, to thilke place from whiche he gothe he heigheth comming, and without any cesinge to that place he neigheth from which he is chaunged and withdraw. But now in these thinges after diversite of reson, revers in one thing may be sey without repugnaunce. Wherfore in the same wise, without any repugnaunce by my resons tofore maked, all is one to beleve, somthing to be thorow necessite cominge, for it is coming, and yet with no necessite constrained to be comminge, but with necessite that comethe out of fre will, as I have said. Tho list me a litel to speke, and gan stint my penne of my writing, and said in this wise. Trewly, lady, as me thinketh, I can allege autoritees grete that contrarien your sayinges. Job saith of manne's person, thou hast putte his terme, whiche he might nat passe. Than saye I that no man maye shorte ne length the daye, ordained of his doing, altho somtyme to us it semeth some man to do a thinge of fre wil, wherthrowe his deth he henteth. Nay forsothe (q̃d she) it is nothing ayenst my sayyng, for God is nat begiled, ne he seeth nothing wheðer it shall come of liberte or elles of necessite, yet it is said to be ordained at God immovable, whiche at man or it be done maye be chaunged.

Soch thing also is that Poule the apostel saith of hem that tofore werne purposed to be saintes, as thus: whiche that God before wist, and hath predestined, conformes of ymages of his sonne, that he shuld ben the firste begeten, that is to say, here amonges many brethern; and whom he hath predestined, hem he hath cleped, and whom he hath cleped, hem he hath justified, and whom he hath justified, hem he hath magnified. This purpose after whiche thei ben cleped saintes, or holy in the everlastyng present, where is neither time passed, ne time coming, but ever it is only present, and now as mokell a momente, as vii. M. Winter, and so ayenward withouten any meving, is nothing liche temporell presence, for thyng that there is ever presente. Yet emonges you men, ere it be in your presence, it is movable through libertie of arbitrement. And right as in the everlastyng present, no maner thing was, ne shal be, but onely is, and now here in your temporel time, some thing was and is, and shal be but movyng stoundes, and in this is no maner repugnaunce, right so in the everlastyng presence, nothing maie be chaunged: and in your temporell time, other while it is proved movable, by libertie of will, or it be doe, withouten any inconvenience thereof to folow. In your temporell tyme is no soche presence, as in the other, for your presente is doen, when passed and to come ginnen entre, which times here emongs you, everich evely foloweth other, but the presente everlastyng dureth in one hed, withouten any imaginable chaunging, and ever is presente and now. Truly the course of the planettes, and overwhelmynges of the Sonne, in daies and nightes, with a newe ginning of his circuite after it is ended, that is to say, one yere to folowe an other, these maken your transitorie times, with chaungyng of lives, and mutacion of peple. But right as your temporell presence coveteth every place, and all thinges in every of your times be contained, and as now both sey and wist to God's very knowing. Than (q̃d I) me wondreth why Poule spake these wordes, by voice of significacion in time passed, that God his saintes beforewist hath predestined, hath cleped, hath justified, and hath magnified: me thinketh he shoulde have said tho wordes in time present, and that had ben more accordaunte to the everlastyng presente, then to have spoke in preterit voice of passed understanding. O (q̃d love) by these wordes, I se well thou hast little understanding of the everlastyng presence, or els of my before spoken wordes, for never a thing of tho thou haste nempned, was tofore other, or after other, but al atones evenliche at the God ben, and al togid̃er in the everlastyng presente be now to understanding, the eternall presence, as I saied, hath inclose togid̃er in one all tymes, in whiche close and one all thinges, that ben in divers times, and in divers places temporel, without posteriorite or priorite, ben closed therein perpetuell now, and maked to dwell in present sight. But there thou saiest that Poule should have spoke thilke forsaied sentence by time present, and that moste should have ben accordaunt to the everlastyng presence, why gabbest thou to thy wordes? Sothlie I saie Poule moved the wordes, by significacion of time passed, to shewe fullie that thilke wordes wer not put for temporell significacion, for al thilke time wer not thilke sentence temporallliche borne, whiche that Poule pronounced, God have tofore know, and have cleped then magnified; wherthrough it maie well be knowe, that Poule used tho wordes of passed significacion, for nede and lacke of a worde in man's bodily spech, betokenyng the everlastyng presence. And therefore in wordis most semelich in likenesse to everlastyng presence he toke his sentence, for thinges, that here before ben passed, utterly be immovable, ilike to the everlasting presence. As thilke that ben there never mowe not ben present, so thinges of time passed ne mowe in no wise not ben passed: but all thinges in your temporall presence, that passen in a litle while, shullen ben not present. So then in that it is more similitude to the everlasting presence significacion of tyme passed, than of time temporall presente, and so more in accordaunce. In this maner what thyng of these that ben doen through fre arbitrement, or els as necessarie, holy writ pronounceth, after eternitie he speketh, in whiche presence is everlasting soth, and nothing but soth immovable, that after tyme, in which naught alwaie ben your willes and your actes; and right as while thei be not, it is not nedefull hem to be, so oft it is not nedefull, that sometyme thei should be. As how (q^d I) for yet must I be lerned, by some ensample. Of love (q^d she) wol I now ensample make, sithen I knowe the hed knot in that yelke. Lo! sometyme thou writest no art, ne arte then in no wil to write, and right as while thou writest not, or els wolt not write, it is not nedeful The to write, or els wiln to write.

And for to make The knowe utterly, that thynges ben otherwise in the everlasting presence, than in temporall time: se now my gode child, for something is in the everlasting presence, then in temporel tyme, it was not in eternitie tyme, in eterne presence shall it not be. Then no reson defendeth, that some thing ne maie be in tyme temporell moving, that in eterne is immovable. Forsothe it is no more contrary ne revers, for to be movable in time temporell, and movable in eternitie, then not to be in any tyme, and to be alwaie in eternitie, and have to be, or els to come in tyme temporell, and not have be, ne nought comyng to be in eternitie. Yet never the later, I saie not somethyng to be never in tyme temporell, that ever is eternitie, but all onely in sometyme not to be. For I saie not thy love to morne in no time to be, but to daie alone I deny ne it to be, and yet never the later, it is alway in eternitie.

Also (q^d I) it semeth to me, that comyng thyng, or els passed, here in your temporall tyme to be, in eternitie ever now, and present oweth not to be demed, and yet foloweth not thilke thing, that was or els shall be, in no maner therto ben passed, or els coming: then utterly shull we deny, for there without cessing, it is in his present maner. O (q^d she) myne owne disciple, now ginest thou able to have the name of my servaunt. Thy witte is clered, awaie is now errour of cloud in unconnyng, awaie is blindnesse of love, awaie is thoughtfull study, of medling maners, hastlie shalte thou entre into the joye of me, that am thine owne maistres.

Thou haste (q^d she) in a fewe wordes well and clerely concluded mokell of my matter. And right as there is no revers, ne contrariouescie in the doinges, right so withouten any repugnaunce, it is saied, some thyng to be movable in time temporell, and for it be, that in eternitie dwelleth immovable, not afore it be, or after that it is, but without cessing; for right naught is there after time, that same is there everlasting, that temporaliche sometyme n^{is}, and to-forne it be, it maie not be, as I have saied. Now sothly (q^d I) this have I well understande, so that now me thinketh that prescience of God, and fre arbitrement, withouten any repugnaunce accorden, and that maketh the strenght of eternitie, whiche encloseth by presence, duryng all tymes, and all thynges that ben, han ben, and shull ben in any tyme.

I would now (q^d I) a litle understande, sithen that all thyng thus beforne wotte, whether thilke wetyng be of the thynges, or els thilke thynges ben to ben of God's wetyng, and so of God nothyng is:

and if every thyng be through God's wetyng, and thereof take his being, then should God be maker and aucthour of badde werkes, and so he should not rightfully punishe evil doinges of mankind. (Q^d Love) I shall tel The, this lesson to lerne, myne owne true servaunte, the noble Philosophicall Poete, in Englishe, whiche evermore hym busieth and travaileth rightfore, my name to encrese; wherefore all that willen me gode, owe to doe him worship and reverence both, truly his better ne his pere in schole of my rules coud I never finde: He (q^d she) in a tretise that he made of my servaunt Troilus, hath this matter touched, and at the full this question asfoiled. Certainly his noble sayngs; can I not amend: in godenes of gentil manlich spech, without any maner of nicitie of starieres imaginacion; in wit and in gode reson of sentence, he passeth al other makers. In the boke of Troilus, the answer to thy question maiest thou lerne, never the later, yet mare lightly thine understanding somdele ben lerned, if thou have knowyng of these toforsaid thinges, with that thou have understanding of two the last chapters of this seconde boke; that is to saie, gode to be some thing, and bad to want al maner being, for badde is nothyng els, but absence of gode; and that GOD in gode, maketh that gode dedes ben gode, in evill he maketh that thei ben but naught, that thei ben bad: for to nothing is badnesse to be. I have (q^d I tho) inough knowing therein, me nedeth of other thinges to here, that is to saie, how I shall come to my blisse so long desired.

IN this matter tosome declared (q^d Love) I have wel shewed, that every man hath fre arbitrement of thinges in his power to doe, or undoe what hym liketh. Out of this ground muste come the Spire, that by processe of tyme, shall in gretnesse sprede, to have braunches and blofomes, of waxyng fruite in grace, of whiche the taste and the savour is endelesse blisse in joye ever to onbide.

Now Ladie (q^d I) that tre to sette faine would I lerne. So thou shalte (q^d she) ere thou departe hence. The firste thyng thou must set thy werke on ground siker and gode, accordaunte to thy springes. For if thou desire grapes, thou goest not to the Hasell; ne for to fetchen roses, thou sekest not on okes: and if thou shalt have Honie-soukels, thou levest the fruite of the soure Docke. Wherefore if thou desire this blisse in parsite joye, thou must set thy purpose ther vertue foloweth, and not to loke after the bodily godes, as I saied when thou were writyng in thy seconde boke. And for thou hast set thy self in so noble a place, and utterly lowed in thine herte the misgoyng of thy firste purpose, this sette is the esier to spring, and the more lighter thy soule in grace to be lifted. And truly thy desire, that is to saie, thy will, algates mote ben stedfast in this matter, without any chaunging; for if it be stedfaste, no man maie it voide. Yes parde (q^d I) my will maie ben tourned by frendes, and disese of manace, and thretning in lesing of my life, and of my limmes, and in many other wise, that now cometh not to minde. And also it mote ofte ben out of thought, for no remembrance maie hold one thyng continually in herte, be it never so lustie desired. Nowe se (q^d she) thou thy will shal folowe, thy frewill to be grounded continually to abide: It is thy frewill that thou lovest and haste loved, and yet shalt loven this Margarete perle, and in thy wil thou thinkest to holde it. Then is thy will knitte in love, not to chaunge for no newe luste beside: This will techeth thyne herte, from all maner varyng. But then althoughe thou be thretened in deth, or els in otherwise; yet is it in thin arbitrement to chose, thy love to voide, or els to holde: and thilke arbitrement is in a maner a judgemente, judgemente, bitwene desire and thy herte. And if thou deme to love thy gode wil faileth, then art thou worthy no blisse, that gode will shuld deserve: and if thou chose continuance in thy gode service, then thy will abideth, nedes blisse folowyng of thy gode will muste come by strengthe of thilke judgemente: for thy firste will that taught thine herte to abide: and halt it from th' eschaunge, with thy reson is accorded. Truly this maner of will thus shall abide, impossible it were to turne if thy herte be true, and if every man diligently the menynges of his will consider, he shall well understande, that gode will knit with reson, but in a false herte, never is voided: for power and might of keping this gode wil, is through libertie of arbitrement in hert, but gode wil to kepe maie not faile. Eke then if it faile, it sheweth it self, that gode will in keping is not there. And thus false will that putteth out the gode, anone constraineth the herte to accorde in lovyng of thy gode will and this accordaunce bitwene false wille and thynne herte, in falsitie ben likened together. Yet a little wold I saie The in gode wille, thy gode willes to raise and strength. Take hede to me (q^d she) howe thy willes thou shalt understande. Right as ye han in your bodie divers members, and five sondrie wittes everiche aparte to his owne doying, whiche thynges as instrumentes ye usen, as your handes apart to handle, fete to goe, tongue to speke, eye to se: right so the soule hath in hym certaine sterynges and strengthes, whiche he useth as instrumentes, to his certain doyinges. Reson is in the soule, whiche he useth thinges to knowe and to prove and will, whiche he useth to wilne: And yet is neither wille ne reson all the soule, but everich of hem is a thing by hymself in the soule. And right as everich hath thus singuler instruments by hymselfe, thei han as well divers aptes, and divers maner usynges, and thilk aptes mowen in will ben cleped affections. Affection is an instrument of willyng in his appetites. Wherefore mokell folke saie if a resonable cature's soule any thing fervently wilneth, affectuouly he wilneth, and thus maie wille by terme of equivocac in three waies ben understande: one is instrument of willyng, an other is affection of this instrument: and the third is use, that setteth it a werke. Instrumente of willing is the ilke strength of the soul, which The constraineth to wiln, right as reson is instrument of resons, which ye usen when ye loken. Affection of this instrument is a thing, by whiche ye be drawe desirously any thing to wilne in covetous maner, all be it for the time out of your mind: as if it come in your thought thilk thing to remember, anon ye ben willing thilke to doen, or els to have. And thus is instrument will, and affection is will also, to wilne thing as I saied: as for to wilne helth, when will nothyng theron thinketh, for anone as it cometh to memorie, it is in wil; and so is affection to wilne slepe, when it is out of minde, but anon as it is remembered wil wilneth slepe, when his time cometh of the doing. For affection of wil never accordeth to sicknesse, ne alwaie to wake. Right so in a true lover's affection of willing instrument is to wilne truthe in his service, and this affection alway abideth, although he be sleeping or threted, or els not thereon thinkyng, but anone as it cometh to minde, anone he is stedfast in that will to abide. Use of this instrument forsoth is an other thing, by hymself, and that have ye not but when ye be doying, in willed thing by affecte or instrument of will, purposed or desired: and this maner of usage in my service wisely nedeth to be ruled, from waiters with envie closed, from spekers full of jangeling wordes, from proude folke and hautain, that lambes and innocentes both scornen and despisen. Thus in doying varieth the actes of willing everiche from other, and yet ben thei cleped wil, and the name of will utterly owen thei to have, as instrument of wil is wil, when ye turne into purpose of any thing to doen, be it to sit or to stande, or any soche thing els. This instrument maie ben had, although affecte and usage be left out of doying, right as ye have sight and reson, and yet alway use ye gretest wisdom, in hem shal he be, and thei in God. Nowe then when all false folke be ashamed, whiche wenen al bestialtie and yerthly thing be sweter and better to the body, then heavenly is to the soule: this is the grace and the fruit that I long have desired, it doth me gode the favour to smel. Christe now to The I crie of mercy and of grace, and graunte of thy godenes to every maner reder ful understanding in this leud pamphlet to have, and let no man wene other cause in this werke, then is verily the soth: for envy is ever redy all innocentes to shend, wherfore I would that gode spech envie evermore hinder. But no man wene this werke be sufficiently maked, for God's werke passeth man's, no manne's wit to parfit werke maie by no waie purvaie th' ende: how shold I then so leude aught wene of perfeccion any ende to get? Never the later grace, glorie and laude, I yelde and put with worshipful reverence to the sothfast God in Thre, with Unitie closed, whiche that the hevielangor of my sicknesse hath touned into mirth of helth to recover: for right as I was sorowed, through the gloton cloud of manifold sickly sorowe, so mirth ayen coming helth hath me gladed and gretly comforted. I beseeche and praie therfore, and I crie on God's grete pitie, and on his mokell mercie, that these present scorges of my flesh now make medicine and lechecraft of my inner man's helth, so that my passed trespas and tenes through wepyng of mine eyes ben washe, and I voided from al maner disese, and no more to wepe hereafter, I now be kept thorowe God's grace: so that God's hand which mercially me hath scorged, hereafter in gode plite fro thence mercially me kepe and defende. In this boke be many privie thinges wimpled and fold, unnethe shall leude men the plites unwind, wherfore I praie to the holy ghoste lene of his ointmentes mens wittes to clere, and for God's love no man wonder, why or how this question cum to my minde, for my grete lustie desire was of this ladie to ben enformed, my leudnesse to amende. Certes I know not other mens wittes, what I should aske, or in answer, what I should saie, I am so leude my self, that mokell more lernyng yet me behoveth. I have made therfore as I could, but not sufficiently as I would, and as matter yave me sentence, for my dul wit is hindred, by stepmother of foryetyng, and with cloude of unconnyng, that stoppeth the light of my margarite perle, wherfore it maie not shine on me as it should. I desire not onely a gode reder, but also I covete and praie a gode boke amender, in correccion of wordes, and of sentence: and onely this mede I covete for my travaile, that every inker and herer of this leude fantasie, devoute horisons and praiers to God the grate judge yelden, and praien for me, in that wise that in his dome my sinnes now ben relefed and foryeven: he that praieeth for other, for hymself travaileth. Also I praie that every man parfitelie mowe knowe, through what intencion of hert this tretise have I drawe. How was it the sightfull Manna in desert to children of Israel was spirituall mete? bodily also it was, for menne's bodies it nourisheth. And yet never the later, Christe it signified. Right so a jewell betokeneth a gemme, and that is a stone vertuous, or els a perle. Margarite a woman betokeneth grace, lernyng, or wisdom of GOD, or els holie Church. If bred through vertue is made holie fleshe, what is that our God saith? It is the spirit that yeveth life, the fleshe of of nothyng it profiteth. Fleshe is fleshly understand- yng. Charitie is love, and love is Charitie, God ing: Fleshe without grace and love naught is worthe. graunte us all therein to be frended. And thus the

The letter sleeth, the spirite yeveth lifelich understand- Testament of love is ended.

Here endeth the testament of Love.

The Lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine.

This Treatise is taken out of St. Origen wherein Mary Magdalen lamenteth the cruell Death of her Saviour Christ.

Longid in the wawe of mortall distresse
Alas for wo to whom shal I complein!
Or who shall devoide this grete hevinesse
Frome' wofull Marie, wofull Magdalein!

My Lord is gon, alas who wrought this tein!
This sodain chaunce perfith my herte so depe,
That nothing can I do, but waile and wepe.

My Lorde is gone, that here in grave was laied,
Aftir his grete passion, and deth cruell,
Alas who hath hym thus again betraied!
Or what man here aboutin can me tell
Where he' is become the Prince of Israell,
Jesus of Naz'areth, my ghostly succour,
My parsite love, and hope of all honour!

What cature hath hym hennis caryid,
Or how might this so sodainly befall?
I would I had here with him taryid,
And so should I have had my purpose all;
I bought ointmentes full precious and roial,
Where with I hoped his corps to have anointed,
But he thus gone, my minde is disapointed.

While I therefore advertise and beholde
This pitous chaunce, here in my presence,
Full little marvaile though my hert be colde,
Confidiryng lo! my Lord's absence;
Alas! that I so full of negligence
Should be foundin, bicause I come so late,
All men maie saie I am infortunate.

Cause of my sorowe you maie undirstonde,
Quia tulerunt Dominum meum,
An othir is, that I ne maie Him fonde,
I wote nere Ubi posuerunt eum,
Thus I muste bewaile Dolorem meum.
With hertie wepyng I can no bet deserve,
Till deth approche, my herte for to kerve.

My herte opprest with sodain avinture
By fervent anguishe is bewrappid so
That long this life I ne maie not endure,
Soche is my pain, soch is my mortall wo,
Nevirthelesse to what parte shall I go
In hope to findin myne owne Turtill true,
My liv'is joye, my soverain Lorde Jesu?

Sith all my joye, that I call his presence,
Is thus removed, now I am full of mone,
Alas the while I made no providence
For this mishap, wherefore I sigh and grone,
Succour to finde, to what place might I gone!

Fain I would to some man my herte breke,
I n'ot to whom I maie complain or speke.

Alone I stande, full sorie, and full sad,
Which hopid to have seen my Lorde and Kyng,
Small cause have I to be merie or glad,
Remembryng this bittirfull departyng,
In this worlde ne is no cature livyng,
That was to me so gode and gracious,
His love also then golde more precious.

Full sore I sigh, without comfort again,
There is no cure to my salvacion,
His brenning love my hert so doth constrain,
Alas here is a wofull permutacion!
Whereof I finde no joye nor consolacion,
Therefore my pain all onely to confesse!
With deth I fere woll ende my hevinesse.

This wo and anguish is intollerable,
If I bide here, life can I not sustain,
If I go hence my paines be uncurable,
Where him to finde I knowe no place certain,
And thus I ne wote of these things twain
Whiche I maie take, and which I maie refuse,
My hert is wounded heron to thinke or muse.

A while I shall stande in this morowning
In hope if any vision would appere,
That of my love might tell some gode tyding,
Whiche into joy might chaunge my wepyng chere,
I trust in his grace and his mercie dere,
But at the lest, though I therewith me kill,
I shall not spare to waile and wepe my fill.

And if that I die in soche avinture
I can no more, but welcome as my chaunce,
Mo bones shall rest here in this sepulture,
My life, my deth, is at his ordinaunce,
It shal be tolde in lasting remembraunce.
Thus to departin is to me no shame,
And also thereof I'am nothyng to blame.

Hope against me so hath her course itake
That there is no more, but thus shall I die,
I se right well my Lorde hath me forsake,
But in my conceipt cause know I none why,
Although he be farre hence and nothing nye,
Yet my wofull herte after hym doeth seke,
And causeth teres to ren down by my cheke.

Thinking alas! I have lost his presence,
Which in this worlde was all my sustinaunce,

I crie

I crie and call with hertie diligence,
But there is no wight givith attendaunce,
Me to certifie of myne enquireaunce,
Wherefore I will to all this worlde bewraie
How that my Lorde is slain and born awaie.

Though that I mourne it ne is no grete wonder
Sithe he is all my joye in speciall, 100
And nowe I thinke we be so farre asonder,
That hym to se I fere nevyr I shall,
It helpith no more astir hym to call,
Ne after hym to'enquire in any coste,
Alas! how is he thus ygone and lost?

The Jewis I thinke full of miserie,
Yet in malice by ther busie cure,
With force and might, of gilefull trecherie,
Hath entermined my Lord's sepulture, 110
And borne awaie that precious figure,
Levyng of it nothyng, if thei' have doen so,
Married I am, alas what shall I do!

With ther vengeance insaciabie
Now have thei hym gileless entretid so,
That to reporte it is to lamentable,
Thei bete his bodie from toppe to the toe,
Nevyr man was yborne that felte soche woe,
Thei woundid hym alas! with all grevaunce,
The blode doun reilid in most habundaunce.

The blodie rowis stremed doun ovir all, 120
Thei him assailid so malicioussie
With ther scourgis and strokis bestiall,
Thei sparid not, but smote incessauntlie,
To satisfe ther malice thei were busie,
Thei spit in his face, thei smote here and there,
He groned full fore, and swete many a tere.

Thei crounid hym with thornis sharpe and kene,
The vainis rent, the blode ran doun apace,
With blode ovircome were bothe his eyen,
And boine with strokis was his bleffid face, 130
Thei hym entretid, as men without grace,
Thei knelid to hym, and made many a scorne,
Like helhoundis they have hym all to torne.

Upon a mightie crosse in length and brede,
(These turmentours shewid ther cursidnesse)
Thei nailid hym without pitie or drede,
His precious blode braft out in largenessse,
Thei strained hym along as men mercilette,
The verie jointes all to myne apparence 140
Rived asondir, for ther grete violence.

All this I beholding with mine eyen twain
Stode there beside, with rufull attendaunce,
And er me thought, he beyng in that pain
Lokid on me with dedly countinaunce,
As he' had said in his speciall remembraunce
Farwell Magdalen, depart must I nedes hens,
My herte is Tanquam cera liquefscens.

Whiche rufull sight when that I gan beholde,
Out of my witte I almoſte tho distraught,
I tare my here, my handis wrang and folde, 150
And of the sight my hert dranke soche a draught,
That many a fall swounyng there I caught,
I brused my bodie fallyng on the grounde,
Whereof I fele many a grevous wounde.

Then these wretchis, full of all frowardnesse,
Gave hym to drinke Eisell temprid with gall,
Alas! that poison full of bittimesse
My lov's chere causid then to appall,

And yet thereof might he not drinke at all,
But spake these wordis, as him thought it best,
Fathir of hevin, Consummatus est.

Then knelid I doune, in pain's outrage
Clipping the crosse within myne armis twain,
His blode distillid doune on my visage,
My clothis eke the droppis did distain,
To have dyid for hym I would full fain,
But what shoulde it availe if I did so
Sith he' is, Suspensus in patibulo.

And thus my Lorde full dere was all disgised,
With blode, and pain, and woundis many one, 170
His veinis braft, his jointis all to rived,
Partying asondir the fleshe fro the bone,
But I sawe that he hing not there alone,
For Cum iniquis deputatus est,
Not like a man, but like a leprous best.

A blinde knight men ycallid Longias
With a spere aproched to my soverain,
Launsyng his side full pitoussie alas!
That his precious herte be clave in twain, 180
The purple blode eke fro the hertis vain
Doun railid right fast, in moste rufull wise,
With chrystal water brought fro Paradise.

When I behelde this wofull passion,
I wote not how, by sodain avinture
My hert was perfed with very compassion,
That in me remained no life of nature,
Strokis of dethe I felt without mesure,
My deth's wounde I caught with wo opprest,
And brought to point as my hert shuld ybrest.

The wounde, the hert, and blode of my darling 190
Shal never slide fro my memorial,
The byttir paines also of tourmenting
Within my soule be gravin principal,
The spere alas! that was so sharpe withall
So thrillid my herte, as to my feling,
That body and soule were at departing.

Sone as I might I releved up againe,
My brethe I coude not very wel restore,
Feling my self drownid in so grete paine,
Both body' and soule me thought wer al to tore,
Violent fallis grevid me right fore,
I wept, I bledde, and with my selfe I fared
As one that for his life nothing had cared.

I lokyng up unto that rufull Rode
Sawe first the visage pale of that figure;
But so pitous a sight spottid with blode
Sawe nevyr yet no living creature,
So it excedid the boundes of mesure,
That mann's minde with al his wittis five 210
Is nothing able that paine to discrive.

Than gan I there min armis to unbrace,
Up lifting my handis ful mournyngly
I sighid and fore sobbid in that place,
Both hevin and erthe might have herde me crie
Weping, and said alas! incessauntly,
Ah my swete herte, my gostly paramour!
Alas I may nat thy body focour!

O bleffid Lorde, how fierse and how cruel
These cursid wightis nowe hath The yllaine, 211
Kerving alas! thy body everidel,
Wounde within wounde, full byttir is thy pain,
Nowe wolde God that I might to The attaine
To naile my body fast unto thy tre

So that of this paine thou mightst go fre!

I can nat reporte, ne make reherfaile
Of my demening, with the circumstance,
But wel I wote the spere with every naile
Thirlid my soule by inwarde ressemblaunce,
Which nevir shall out of my remembraunce,
During my life it woll cause me to waile, 230
As ofte as I remembre that bataile.

Ah ye Jewes, worfe than doggis rabiate
What moved you thus cruilly him to'aray?
He nevir displefed you, nor caused debate,
Your love and true hertes he coveytid aye,
He preched, he teched, he shewid the right way,
Wherefore ye lyke tyrantes wode and way-warde
Nowe have him thus yslaine for his rewarde.

Ye ought to'have remembrid one thing special
His favour, grace, and his magnificence, 240
He was your prince botne, and Lorde ovir all,
Howe be it ye toke him in smal reverence,
He was ful meke in suffring your offence,
Nertheles ye devoured him with one assent,
As hungry wolves doth the lambe innocent.

Where was your pite,'o peple mercilesse?
Arming your selfe with falshed and trefon,
On my Lorde ye have shewid your wodenesse,
Like no men, but bestis without reson,
Your malyce he suffrid for the feson, 250
Your paine wol come, ne thinke it nat to slacke,
Man without mercy of mercy shal lacke.

O traitours and maintainirs of madnesse,
Unto your foly' I ascribe al my paine,
Ye have me deprived of joye and gladnesse,
So deling with my Lorde and souveraine,
Nothing ne shulde I nede thus to complaine
If he' had lived in pece and tranquillite,
Whom ye have slaine through your inquite.

Farewel your noblenesse that somtime did raine, 260
Farewel your worship, your glory and fame,
Hereaftir to lyve in hate and disdaine
Marvaile ye not, for your trespase and blame
Unto shame is tournid al your gode name,
Upon you now wol wondir every nation,
As peple of a most vile reputation.

These wickid wretchis these houndis of hel,
As I have tolde plaine here in this sentence,
Were not content my dere love thus to quel,
But yet they must embefile his presence, 270
As I perceve, by covert violence
They have him conveyed, to my displeure,
For here is lafte but nakid sepulture.

Wherefore of trouth and rightfull judgèment,
That ther malice againe maye be acquitted,
Aftir my verdict and avisèment,
Of false murdre they shullin be endited,
Of theft also, which shal not be respited,
And in al haste they shal be hanged and drawe,
I wol my selfe plede this cause in the lawe. 280

Alas! yf I with a trewe attendaunce
Had styl abiddin with my Lord's corse,
And kept it stil with trewe perseveraunce,
Than had nat befall this woful devorse,
But as for my paine welcome and no force,
This shal be my songe where so er I go,
Departing is the grounde of al my wo.

I se right wel now in my painis smerte,

There is no wounde of so grevous dolour
As is the wounde of my carefal herte, 290
Sithin I have losse thus my paramour,
Al my swetnesse is tournid into sour,
Mirthe to my herte nothing ne maie convey
But he that bereth therof bothe locke and key.

The joye excellent of blissed paradise
Maye me alas! in no wise re-comforte,
Songe of angel nothing may me suffice,
As in min herte nowe to make disporte,
Al I refuse, but that I might resorte
Unto my love, the wel of godelihede, 300
For whose longing I trowe I shal be ded.

Of painful labour and tourment corpo'ral
I ne make therof none excepcion,
Painis of hel I wol passe ovir al,
My love to finde, in myne affeccion,
So grete to him is my delectacion,
A thousande timis martrid wolde I be,
His bleffid body ones if I might se.

About this worlde so large in all compace
I shal not spare to renne my life during, 310
My fete also shal not rest in one place,
Tyl of my love I may here some tiding,
For whose absence my handis nowe I wring,
To thinke on him cese shal nevir my minde,
O gentil Jesu, where shal I The finde!

Jerusalem I wol serche place fro place,
Sion, the vale of Josaphath also,
And if I finde him not in al this space,
By mount Oilvet to Beth'any woll I go, 320
These waies wol I wandir, and many mo,
Nazareth, Bethleem, Mountana Jude,
No travaile shal me paine him for to se.

His blissid face if I might se and finde,
Serche I wolde every coste and countrey,
The farðist parte of Egypt or hote Inde
Shulde be to me but a litil journey;
Howe is he thus gone or takin away!
If I knewe the ful trouth and certentè,
Yet from this care relefid might I be.

Into wildirnesse I thinke best to go, 330
Sithe I can no more tidinges of him here,
There may I my lyfe ledin to and fro,
There may I dwel, and to no man apere;
To towne ne village woll I not come nere,
Alone in wodes, in rockes, and in caves depe
I may at mine owne will both waile and wepe.

Myn eyin twaine withoutin variaunce
Shal nevir cese, I promise faithfully,
There for to wepin with gret aboundaunce
Byttir teris renning incessauntly, 340
The whiche teris medlid ful petoufly
With the very blode er shall renne also,
Expressing in mine hert the grevous wo

Worldely fode and sustenaunce I desire none,
Soche living as I finde soch wol I take,
Rotis that growin on the craggy stone
Shal me suffice with watir of the lake;
Than thus may I say for my Lord's sake
*Fuerunt mihi lacryma mea
In deserto panes, die ac nocte.*

My body to clothe it makith no force,
A mourning mantil shal be sufficient.
The grevous woundis of his pitous corse

Shal

Shal be to me a ful royal garnement,
He departid thus I am best content,
His crosse with nailis and scourgis withal
Shal be my thought and paine especial.

Thus wol I live, as I have here ytolde,
If I may any longè time endure,
But I fere deth is ovir me so bolde 360
That of my purpose I can not be sure,
My painis encrefin without mesure,
For of longe lyfe who can lay any reson?
Al thing is mortal and hath but a selson.

I figh ful fore, and it is ferre yfet,
Myne hert I fele now bledith inwardly,
The bloody teres I may in no wise let,
Sith of my paine I finde no remedye,
I thank God of al, if that I nowè dye,
His will perfourmid I holde me content, 370
My soule let him have that hath it me lent.

For lengir to' endure it 'is intollerable,
My woful herte is inflamid so huge,
That no sorow to myne is comparable,
Sith of my minde, I ne finde no refuge,
Yet I him require as a rightful juge
To devoide fro me the inwarde sorowe,
Lest that I live not to the nexte morowe.

Within mine hert is impressid ful fore,
His royal forme, his shappe, his semelines,
His porte, his chere his godenes evirmore,
His noble persone with al gentilnes,
He is the welle of allè parfitnes,
The very redemir of al mankinde,
Him love I best with herte, and soule, and minde.

In his absence my paines ful bittir be,
Right wel I may it fele nowè inwardely,
No wondir is though they hurte or sle me,
They causin me to crie so rufully,
Myne herte opprest is so wondirfully, 390
Onely for him, which so is bright of ble,
Alas I trowe I shal him nevir se!

My joye is translate ful farre in exile,
My myrthe is chaungid into paynis colde,
My lyfe I think endurith but a while,
Anguiste and paine is that that I beholde,
Wherefore my handis thus I wringe and folde,
Into this grave I loke, I cal, I pray,
Deth remainith, and life is borne away.

Now must I walk, and wandir here and there, 400
God wot to what partis I shal me dresse,
With quaking hert wepinge many a tere,
To seke out my love, and all my swetnes,
I wolde he wyft what mortal hevines
About min herte renewith more and more,
Than wolde he nat kepe pite long in store.

Withoutin him I may not longe endure,
His love so fore workith within my brest,
And er I wepe before this sepulture,
Sighing ful fore, as mine herte shulde ybrest, 410
During my lyfe I shal obtaine no rest,
But mourne and wepe, where that evir I go,
Making complaint of al my mortal wo.

Fast I crie but there is no audience,
My comming hiðir was him for to plesse,
My soule opprest is here with his absence,
Alas he list not set mine herte in esle!
Wherefore to paine my selfe with al disese

I shal not spare tyl he take me to grace,
Or ellis I shal sterve here in this place. 420

But onis if that I might with him speke
It were al my joy, with parfite plesaunce,
So that I might to him myne hertè breke,
I shulde anone devoide al my grevaunce,
For he' is the blisse of very recreaunce;
But now alas! I can nothing do so,
For in stede of joy naught have I but wo.

His noble corse within min hert'is rote,
Depe is ygravid, whiche shal nevir flake,
Nowe is he gone, to what place I ne wote, 430
I mourne, I wepe, and al is for his sake,
Sithin he is paste, here a vowe I make
With hertely promise, and therto me binde,
Nevir to cese til that I may him finde.

Unto his mothir I thinke for to go,
Of her haply some comforte may I take,
But one thinge yet me ferith and no mo,
Yf that I any mencion of him make,
Of my wordis she wolde trimble and quake,
And who coude her blame, she having but one,
The sonne borne away the mothir wol mone.

Sorowes many hath she suffrid trewly
Sith that she first conceivid him and bare,
And sevin thinges there be most specially,
That drownith her hert in sorowe and care,
Yet lo! in no wise maye they not compare,
With this one now, the whiche if that she knew
She wolde her painis everichone renewe.

Gret was her sorowe by mennis saiying,
Whan in the temple Simeon Justus 450
Shewid to her these wordis prophesying,
Tuam animam pertransibit gladius;
Also whan Herode that tyraunt furious
Her childe pursuid in every place,
For his life went neithir mercy ne grace.

She mournid fore whan that she knewe him gone,
Full longe she sought or she him founde ayen,
Whan he went to deth his crosse him upon,
It was to her sight a full rewful paine,
Whan he hong theron, betwene thevis twaine, 460
And the spere unto his herte thrust was right,
She swounid, and to the grounde there ypright.

Whan ded and bloody in her lappè lay
His blissed body, bothe handes and fete al tore,
She cryid out and said, now welaway!
Thus arayid was nevir man before;
Whan hast was made his body to be bore
Unto sepulture here for to remaine,
Unnethis for wo she coude her sustaine.

The sorowes sevin, like swerdes every one 470
His mothir's herte woundid fro syde to syde,
But if she knewe her sonne thus ygone,
Out of this worlde she shuld with deth yride,
For care she coude no lengir here abide,
Having no more joy nor consolacioun,
Than I here standing in this stacioun.

Wherefore her to se I dare nat presume,
Fro her presence I wol my selfe refraine,
Yet had I levir to dye and consume,
Than his mothir shulde have any more paine, 480
Netheles her sonne I wolde se ful faine,
His presence was very joye and swetnes,
His absence is but sorowe' and hevinesse.

There

There is no more, sith I may him nat mete,
Whom I desire above al othir thing,
Nede I must take the souir with the swete,
For of 'his noble corse I here no tiding,
Ful oftin I crie, and my handis wring,
Myne herte alas! relentith al in paine,
Whiche wol ybrastin both sinewe and vaine. 490

Alas howe' unhappy was this woful hour,
Wherin is thus mispendid my service!
For min entent and eke my true labour
To none effecte may come in any wise;
Alas! I thinke if he do me dispise,
And list not take my simple observaunce,
There is no more, but deth is my finaunce.

I have him called, Sed non respondet mihi,
Wherefore my mirth is tournid to mourning,
O my dere Lord Quid mali feci tibi 500
That me to comforte I finde no' erthely thing?
Alas! have compassion of my cryng,
Yf fro me Faciem tuam abscondis,
There is no more, but Consumere me vis.

Within myne hert is groundid thy figure,
That al this world's horrible tourment
May' it not awage, it' is so without mesure,
It is so brenning, it is so fervent;
Remembir, Lorde, I have ben diligent
Evir The to plesse onely and no mo, 510
Myne herte is with The where so er I go.

Therefore my dere darling, Trabe me post te,
And lette me not standin thus desolate,
Quia non est, qui consoletur me,
Myne herte for The is so disconsolate,
My paines also nothing me moderate,
Nowe if it list The to speke with me' alyve,
Come in hast, my herte asondir will rive.

To The I profit lo! my pore service,
The for to plesse astir mine owne entent, 520
I offre' here, as in devout sacrifice
My boxe replete with precious oyntment,
Myne eyin twaine weping sufficient,
Myne herte with anguiste fulfilled is alas!
My soule eke redy for love out to pas.

Naught ellis have I The to plesse or pay,
For if min herte were golde or precious stone,
It shulde be thine without any delay,
With hertely chere thou shulde have it anone,
Why suffrist thou me than to stande alone? 530
Thou hast I trowe my weping in disdaine,
Or els thou knowist nat what is my paine.

If thou withdrawe thy noble daliaunce,
For ought that evir I displeid The,
Thou knowest right wel it is but ignoraunce,
And of no knowlege for a certainte,
If I' have offendid Lorde, forgive it me,
Gladde I am for to make ful repentaunce
Of all thing that hath ben to thy grevaunce.

Myne herte alas! swellith within my brest, 540
So sore opprest with anguiste and with payne,
That al to pecis forsothe it wol brest,
But if I se thy blyssid corse againe,
For lyfe ne deth I can nat me refraine,
If that thou make delay, thou maist be sure,
Myne hert wol lepe into this sepulture.

Alas my Lorde, why farest thou thus with me!
My tribulacion yet have in minde,

Where is thy mercy? wher is thy pite,
Whiche evir I trustid in The to finde? 550
Sometime thou were to me both gode and kinde,
Lette it plesse The my prayir to accept,
Whiche with my teris I have here bewept.

On me thou oughtist to have very routh,
Sith for The onely is al this mourning,
For sith I to The plightid firste my trouthe
I nevir varyid with discording,
And that knowist thou best my owne darling,
Why constrainist thou me thus for to wayle?
My wo forsothe can The nothing avail. 560

I have endurid without variaunce,
Right as thou knowst, thy lovir just and trew,
With hert and thought aye, at thyn ordinaunce,
Lyke to the saphire alwaye in one hewe,
I nevir woulde chaungin The for no newe,
Why withdrawist thou The fro my presenche,
Sithins al my thought is for thine absence?

With hert intier, swete Lorde, I crie to The,
Encline thine eres to my peticioun,
And come Velociter, exaudi me, 570
Remembre mine hert's disposicioun,
It may not endure in this condicioun,
Therefore out of these paines Libera me,
And where thou arte Pone me juxta te.

Let me beholde, O Jesu, thy blissed face,
Thy faire, thy glorious angelike visage,
Bowe thine eris to my complaint, alas!
For to convey me out of this wode rage,
Alas! my Lorde, take fro me this dommage,
To my desire for mercy condiscende, 580
For non but thou may my grevaunce amende.

Now yet gode Lorde, I The besech and pray,
As thou raistid my brothir Lazarous
From deth to life, that upon the fourth day
Came ayen in body and soule precious,
As gret a thing maist thou shewe unto us
Of thy self, by powir of thy godhed,
As thou dyd of him lyng in grave ded.

Myne hert is woundid with thy charite,
It brennith, it flamith incessantly, 590
Come my dere Lorde, Ad adjuvandum me,
Nowe be not longe, my paine to multiplie,
Lest in the mene time I departe and die,
In thy grace I put hope and confidence,
To do as plesith thy magnificence.

Flodis of dethe, and tribulacioun,
Into my soule I fele entrid ful depe,
Alas that here' is no consolacioun!
Evir I waile, evir I mourne and wepe,
And sorow hath woundid myn hert ful depe, 600
O dere love, no marvaile though that I die,
Sagitta tua infixæ sunt mihi.

Wandringe in this place, as in wildirnesse,
No comforte have I ne yet assuraunce,
Desolate of joye, replete with faintnesse,
No' answere receving of mine enquirance,
Myne herte also grevid with displeaunce,
Wherefore I may saye, O Deus, Deus,
Non est dolor sicut dolor meus.

Myne hert expressith Quod dilexi multum, 610
I may nat endure although I wold faine,
For now Solum superest sepulchrum,
I know it right wel by my huge paine,

And

And thus for love I may not life sustaine,
But o my God, I muse what aylith The,
Quod sic repente precipitas me.

Alas! I fe' it wil none othirwise be,
Nowe must I take my leve for evirmore,
This fore paine hath almost discomfite me,
My love's corse I can in no wise restore, 620
Alas to this wo that er I was bore!
Here at this tombe nowe must I die and starve,
Deth is aboutin my hert for to carve.

My testament I wol begin to make,
To God the fathir my soule I commende,
To Jesu my love, that died for my sake,
My herte and al both I gyve and ysende,
In whose dere love my lyfe ymakith ende,
My body also to this monument
I here bequeth, bothe boxe and oyntement. 630

Of al my willes lo nowe I make the last,
Right in this place within this sepulture
I woll be buried whan I' am ded and past,
And on my grave I wol have this scripture,
*Here within restith a gostly cature,
Christ is true lovir, Mary Magdalaine,
Whose hert for love ybracke in pecis twaine.*

Ye vertuous women, tendir of nature,
Ful of pite and of compassion,
Resorte I pray you to my sepulture, 640
To singe my dirige with grete devocion,
Shewe your charite' in this condicion,
Sing with pite, and let your hertis wepe,
Remembring I am ded, am layd to slepe.

Than whan that ye begin to parte me fro,
And endid have your mourning observaunce,
Remembre where so evir that ye go
Alway to serche and make due enquirance
Aftir my love, mine hert'is sustinaunce, 650
In every towne, and in every village,
If ye may here of his noble ymage,

And if it happe by any grace at laste,
That ye my trew love finde in any cost,
Say that his Magdalaine is ded and paste,
For his pure love hath yeldid up the gost,
Say that of al thing I lovid him most,
And that I ne might not this deth eschewe,
My painis so fore dyd evir renewe.

And in tokin of love perpetual,
Whan I am buried in this place present, 660
Take out myne hert, the very rote and al,
And close it within this boxe of oyntment,
To my dere love make therof a present,
Kneling downe with wordis lamentable
Do your message, speke faire and trefable.

Say that to him my selfin I commende
A thoufande timis, and with herte so fre
This povir tokin say to him I sende,
Plesith his godenesse to take it in gre,
It is his owne of right, it is his fe, 670
Whiche he askid, whan he said longe before,
Gyve me thy hert, and I desire no more.

Adue my Lorde, my love so faire of face,
Adué my turtle dove so freshe of hue,
Adué my mirthe, adue al my solace,
Adué alas! my Saviour Lorde Jesu,
Adué the gentillist that er I knewe,
Adué my most excellent paramour,
Fairir than rose, swetir than lylly flour.

Adué my hope of plesure eternal, 680
My lyfe, my welth, and my prosperite,
Mine herte of golde, my perle oriental,
Myne adamant of parfite charite,
My chese refuge, and my felycite,
My comforte, and my recreacioun,
Farewel my perpetual salvacioun.

Farewel mine Emperour Celestial,
And most beautiful prince of al mankinde,
Adué my Lord, of hert moste lyberal, 690
Farwel my swetist bothè soule and minde,
So loving a spouse shall I nevir finde,
Adué my soveraine, very gentilman,
Farewel dere herte, as hertely as I can.

Thy wordes eloquente flowinge in swetnesse
Shal no more alas: my minde recomforte,
Wherfore my life must ende in bittirnesse,
For in this worlde shal I nevir resorte
To The, whiche was mine hevinly disporte,
I se alas! it wol none othir be,
Nowe farewel the grounde of al dignite. 700

Adué the fairist that evir was bore,
Alas I may nat se your bleffid face:
Nowe welaway that I shal se no more
Thy bleffid visage, so replete with grace,
Wherin is printid my parfite solace!
Adué mine hert'is rote and al for ever,
Nowe farith wel, I must from The discever.

My soule for anguishe is nowe ful thrusty
I faint I faint right fore for hevines,
My Lorde, my spouse Cur me dereliquisti? 710
Sith I for The suffre al this distresse,
What causith The to seme thus mercileffe?
Sith it The pleseth of me to make an ende,
In manus tuas my spirite I commende.

F I N I S.

The Remedie of Love.

The PROLOGUE.

Eyng the manyfolde inconvenience
Falling by unbrydlid prosperite,
Whiche is not temprid with moral pru-
dence,

Nothing more welthie than in youth's frelte,
Moved I am, bothe of right and equite,
To youth's wele somewhat for to endite,
Whereby he may himselfin safecondite.

And firste I note as a thinge most noyous,
And unto youth a grevous malady,
Amongis us callid love encombrous,
Vexyng alway yonge peple straungely,
Oftin by force it causith 'hem to dye,
And age is also turmentid by love,
I mene bineth the girdle', and not above.

Wherefore this werke, whiche is right laborous,
For age me nedith nat in honde to take,
To youthe me owith to be' obsequious;
Nowe I begin thus to worke for his sake,
Whiche may the fervence of love aslake,
To the lovir, as a mitigative,
To him that is none a preservative.

That mighty Lorde, whiche that me govirneth,
'Tis youthe I mene, mesure if that I pace,
In every matir whiche that him concerneth,
First, as is behoveful, I wol aske grace,
And forthwithal now in this same place,
Er I begin, I wol yknele and say
These fewe wordis, and him of helpe praye.

Thou flouring youth, whiche hast the avauntage
In strength of body, in luste, and beaute,
Also a precelling haste above age
In many' a singuler commodite,
Howe be it one thing he hath beyonde The
To thy most profite, and gretist availe,
Whiche shuld The conduit, I mene sad counsaile,

And yet gode Lorde, of a presumption,
I n'il deprave thy might and deite,
I lyve but undir thy protection,
I am thy subiecte, I were thy lyverie,
For thou arte grounde of my prosperite,
And freshist flowir of al my garlande,
My singuler aide, as I well undirstande.

But as he that oweth his Lorde best service,
And entire faithe, his honour to supporte,
Right so I speke, and in none othir wise,
I knowlege my self one of the lest forte
Of thy servantes, to our eldirs comforte,
Drawe sadde counsaile unto The if thou list,
The and thy powir who maie then resiste.

Fie on age, I say, undir wordis fewe,
And his erronous opinion,
What spekest of him, whiche saith moste untrue
All youth to be of ill disposicion,
Dampnith us all without excepcion?
And for a colerable avauntage
He saith in hym restith all counsaill sage.

Well sothly maie sadde counsaile in him rest,

But yet his dedis ben full ferre therefro,
He maie wel sayin with our parishe prest,
Doith as I saie, and not as I do;
For I my selfin know wele one or two
Well strikin in age that for neighbourhedde
Ywollin to ther neighbours wivis bedde.

He will in presence of the yonge man
Her clippe and kisse, ye and her doune ylaie
And to blere his eye, thus he sayith than,
O suffre yet olde Morell for to plaie,
Now have I doin that I can or maie,
Thus he sayith her husband for to queme,
That he nor no man shouldin not misdeme.

In worde nor dede nedith him not be coie,
It' is impossible that he doe amisse,
If the yong man speke, anon he saith, boie,
To rebuke age besemeth The not iwis,
And thus his olde face aye his warrant is,
All is in hym but sleight and subtilte,
And ferre from right reson I tellin The.

And shortly age is not abovin me,
Age is impotent, and of no resistence,
Age unweldie ne maie not fight nor fle,
What werin age withoutin my defence?
Sad counsaile saiest givith hym assistance,
Right reson is freshist where that I ame,
Wherefore in thy sayng thou art to blame.

Sith reson to me' is rathir accompanied
Then unto age, whiche is the opinion
Of every wise man not to be denied,
And sith sad counsaile procedith of reson,
Sad counsaile in me hath his chefe mancion;
This is no naie, but what than is the ende
Of this thy suasion, what doest entende.

Age to compare unto thyne excellence,
I n'ill presume hym so to dignifie,
Ye be not egall, how be it experience
Hym avauntagerh, for she moste certainly
Hym techith what thing to hym is contrary,
And ofte to fore se, 'and warily eschewe,
Whiche thou never assaidist yet nor knewe.

Experience makith a man moste certain
Of thing ertly, and of necessite
Sad counsaile requirith certaintie plain,
So ferre to movin thus whereto nede we?
But to my purpose, as thou commaundest me,
Shortly mine entent is thus, and none other,
Under thy licence to counsaile my brother.

How shouldist give any counsaile so yong,
Lacking experience? unto thyne owne speche
I report me, I wote as for thy tong
Will serve The right wel, but than for to tech,
I doubt me lest that thy wit woll not rech,
Youth and experience thou saist be not convert,
How shouldist thou then teche well unexpert?

Scripture witnissith that God will oft shitte
Fro the' hie wittid man, and shew it the child,
To hym I mene that of his ownè witte

Presumeth

Prefumeth not, but is debonaire and milde,
By counsaile I entend vertue to bilde,
Whiche of myne elders part have I borowed,
And part of experience, which I' have sorowed.

Well than, if it be as thou lettist fare, 120
Shewe forthe thy doctrine, be not ought agaste,
I woll The supporte, loke thou doe not spare,
Maugre age, although that he frete or gnaste,
To aske age counsaile herein were but wast,
Boldely begin, go forthe to the processe,
Fere not, sithins thou art of soche surenesse.

Graunt mercie Lorde, sithin it The doeth like
To licence me, now I woll and dare boldly,
Assaile my purpose, with scriptures autentike
My werke woll I ground, undirset, and fortessie. 130
Aspire my ginning, O thou wode furie,
Alecto, with thy sustirs, and in speciall
To The, mother of jelousie, Juno I call.

Explicit Prologus.

This Book, taken for the most part out of the Proverbs of Solomon, is a Warning to take heed of the deceitful Company of Women.

 His werke who so shall se or yrede
Of incongruite doe me not impeche,
Ordinatelie behoveth me first to' procede
In deduccion thereof, right as the leche
His paciente's sicknes oweth first for to seche,
The which knowne medicin he should aplie,
And shortly as he can, shape remedie.

Right so by counsaile, willing The to' exhoit,
O yong man prosperous, which doth abounde
In thy floures of luste, belongeth on The sort, 10
Me first to considir what 'is rote and ground
Of thy mischefe, whiche is plainlie yfound
Woman yfarcid with fraude and disceipt,
To thy confusion moste allective baite.

Flie the miswoman, lest she The disceve,
Thus saith Salomon, which taught was fullie
The falsed of women in his daies to' conceive,
The lips of a strumpet ben swetir than honie,
Her throte souplid with oile of flatirie
How be it the ende and effecte of all 20
Bittir is then any wormwode or gall.

Flie the miswoman, if thou love thy life,
Beware of the straungir's blande eloquence,
Straungir I call her that is not thy wife,
Of her beautie have no concupiscence,
Her countinaunce, pretending benevo'lence,
Beware her signes and eye so amiable,
Holde it for ferme, thei ben discevable.

Lo here an ensample what women be
In ther signis and countinaunce shortlie! 30
I woll shewin The how loviris thre
Ylovid one woman right entirelie,
Eche of them knewe othiri's maladie,
Wherefore it was all ther daily labour
Who coud approchin next in her favour.

At fondrie sasons, as fortune requireth,
Severallie thei came to se her welfare,
But ones it happinid, love them so fireth,
To se ther Ladie thei all would not spare,
Of othir's comyng none of them were ware, 40
Till all thei mette, whereas thei in o place
Of ther Ladie sawe the desirid face.

To suppir set, full smallie thei coude ete,
Full sobir and demure in countinaunce,
There taried none of 'hem for any mete,
But on his Ladie to give attendaunce,

And in secrete wise some signifaunce
Of love to have, the whiche percevyng she Fetelie' executid thus her properte.

In due seson, as she alwaie aspied 50
Every thyng to' execute convenientlie,
Her one lovir first frendelie she eyed,
The seconde she' offrid the cuppe curtislie,
The thirde she gave a token secretlie,
Undirneth the borde she trade on his fore,
Through his entrais tiklid the herte rote.

By your leve, might I here aske a question
Of you my maistirs that sewe lov'is trace,
To you likely belongeth the solucion
Whiche of these thre ystode now in her grace? 60
Clere to answere ye would aske long space,
The mattir is doubtfull and opinable,
To' ascertain you I woll my self enable.

Of the foresayid thre my self was one,
No man can answere it bettir then I,
Hertely of us bilovid was there none,
But watt'is packe we bare all by and by,
Whiche at the last I my self gan asprie,
And time as me thought, then I left the daunce,
O thoughtfull herte, gret is thy grevaunce! 70

Hence fro me, hence, that me for to endite
Halpe aie here afore, o ye musis nine,
Whilom ye were wont be mine aide and light,
My penne to direct, my brain to' illumine,
No lenger alas maie I sewe your doctrine!
The freshe lustie metirs, I wont to make
Have ben here afore, I' uttirie forsake.

Come hither Erinnys, and ye furies all,
Whiche fer ben undre' us, nigh the nethir pole, 80
Where Pluto reignith, o kyng internall,
Sende out thine arpies, send anguishe and dole,
Miserie and wo, leve ye me not sole,
Of right be present must pain and turment,
The pale deth besemeth not to be absent.

To me now I call all this lothsome sort,
My paines t' encrese, my sorowes to augment,
For worthie' I am to' be bare of all comfort,
Thus sith I have consumid and mispent
Not onely my daies, but fivesolde talent,
That my Lorde gave me, I can not recompence, 90
I maie n'ot to dely' abyn my negligence.

By

By the path of penaunce yet woll I revert
 To the well of grace, mercie there to fetch,
 Despisist not, God, the meke contrite herte,
 Of the cocke crowe, alas I would not retche
 And yet it is not late in the seconde wetche,
 Mercie shall I purchase by incessaunt cryng,
 The mercies of our Lorde er shall I syng.

But well mayist thou waile, wicked woman,
 That thou shuldest disceve thus an innocent, 100
 In recompence of my sinne, so 'as I can,
 To' al wol I make and leve this monument,
 In shewing part of thy falsheid is myne entent,
 For all were to moche, I cann'ot, well I wote,
 The cause shewith plainly he that thus wrote.

If al the yerth wer parchment scribable,
 Spedie for the hande, and all manir wode
 Wer hewed and proporcioned to pennis able,
 All water Ynke, eithir in damme or fode,
 Every man being a parfite Scribe and gode, 110
 The curfidenesse yet and desceipt of women
 Coud not be shewid by the mene of penne.

I flie all odious resembraunces,
 The Devil's bronde call women I might,
 Whereby man is encensid to mischaunces,
 Or a stinkyng rose, that faire is in sight,
 Or dedly' empoison, like the sugir white,
 Whiche by his swetnesse causith man to tast,
 And sodainly sleeth and bringeth him to' his last.

It is not my manir to use soche langage, 120
 But this my doctrine, as I maie lawfullie
 I woll wholly grounde with auctoritie sage,
 Willing wisdome, and vertue edefie,
 Wine and women into apostasie
 Cause wisemen to fall, what is that to saie?
 Of wisdome cause them to forget the waie.

Wherefore the wiseman doith The advise,
 In whose wordis can be founde no lesyng,
 With the straungir to sittin in no wise,
 Whiche is not thy wife, fall not in clippyn 130
 With her, but beware eke of her kysyng,
 Kepe with her in wine no altercacion,
 Lest thyne herte fall by inclinacion.

Maie a man thinkist hide and safely laie
 Fire in his bosome, without empairement,
 And brenning of his clothes, or whider he may
 Walke on horte colis, his fete not ybrente?
 As who sayith naie, and whereby is mente
 This foresaied proverbe and similitude,
 But that thou ridde The plainly to denude 140

From the flattirirs forgettyng her gide,
 The gide of her youth, i mene shamfastnes,
 Whiche should cause her maidinhed to abide,
 Her Godd's behest eke she full rechelesse,
 Not retching committeth to forgetfulnes,
 Neithir God ne shame in her havyn place,
 Nedis must soche a woman lacke grace.

And all that neighin her in waie of fin,
 To tourne of grace shall lacke the influence,
 The pathis of life no more to come in; 150
 Wherefore first frende The with Sapience,
 Remembring God, and afir with Prudence,
 To thyne owne wele that so thei may The kepe.
 Unto thyne herte lest her wordis crepe.

In his boke where I take my moste ground,
 And in his proverbis sage Salomon

Tellith a tale, which is plainly found
 In the fiveth chapter, whe'ir in dede don,
 Or mekely feined to our instruccion,
 Let clerkes determine, but this am I sure 160
 Moche like thyng I my self have had in ure.

At my windowe saieth he I lokid out,
 Faire yongè peple where I sawe many Emong 'hem all, as I lokid about
 To a yong man fortunèd I lent myne eye,
 Estraungid from his minde it was likely,
 By the strete at a cornir, nigh his own hous,
 He went about with eye right curious.

When that the daie his light began withdrawe,
 And the night approchid in the twilight, 170
 How a woman came and met hym I sawe,
 Talking with him undir shade of the night,
 Now bleffid be God (qð she) of his might,
 Whiche hath fulfillid myne hert's desire,
 Afflaked my painis, which were hote as fire.

And yet myne aucthour, as it is gode skill,
 To folowe, I must tell her araiment,
 She was full nice soulis like to spill,
 As nice in countenance yet as in garmente, 180
 For janglyng she was of rest impaciente,
 Wandiryn still in no place she ystode,
 But restless now, and now out forthe she yode.

Now in the hous she was, now in the strete,
 Now at a cornir she standeth in awaite,
 Incessauntly busie her praie to gete,
 To bring to the lure whom she doith laite.
 Now where I left, unto my mattir strait
 I woll tournin again, how she hym met,
 Swetely kissid, and frendly him grette.

With wordes of curtisie many 'and diverse, 190
 Right as in part I have before ytolde,
 Now as I can I purpose to reherse
 How she flattiring saied with visage bolde,
 I have made vowes and offringes manifolde
 For thy sake, O myne herte, O my love dere,
 This daie I thanke God all performid were.

Therefore I came out, and made thus asterte,
 Verie desirous your welfare to se,
 Now I have seen you plefid is myne herte,
 In faithe shall none yhave my love but ye, 200
 As true as I am to you be to me,
 I praie you hertily dere herte come home,
 No man should be to me so much welcome.

And in gode faithe, the sothè for to saie,
 Your comyng unto me ran in my thought,
 Harke in your ere, my beddè freshe and gaie
 I have behanged with tapettis new bought
 From Egypte, and from far countries ybrought,
 Steinid with many a lustie freshe hue,
 Excedyng Golde or Jaspir in value. 210

My chambir is strowed with Mirre and Infence,
 With sote sav'oring Aloes and Synamome,
 Brethyng an Aromatike redolence,
 Surmountyng Olibane, in any man's dome,
 Ye shall bitwene my brestes rest if ye come,
 Let us now have our desirid halfyng,
 For we maie safe be till in the mornyng.

Myne husband is not at home, he is went
 Forthe in his journey, a farre waie from hence,
 A bagge with money he hath with hym hent, 220
 As hym thought nedefull was for his expence,

Unto

Unto my wordis give faith and credence,
Now is the Mone yong, and of light dulle,
Ere he come home it woll be at the fulle.

And thus craftily hath she hym besette,
With her lime rodis, and pantir, and snare,
The felie soule ycaught hath in her nette,
Of her sugrid mouthe alas! nothyng ware.
And thus is he left gracelesse and bare
Of helpe, and comfort, and ghostlie succour, 230
And furthirmore as sayith myne authour,

As a best ledde to his deth doith pante,
This yong man folowith her in that stounde,
And as a wanton Lambe full ignorante
How he is pulled and drawin to be bounde,
Unto the tyme he hath his deth's wounde,
And like a birde that hastith to the grin,
Not knowyng the perill of his life therein.

Now gentle sonne, faith Salomon, take hede,
My wordis in thy brest kepe and make faste, 240
Let her not thy mynde in her waies mislede,
Be not decevid, leith not thy taste,
Many hath she woundid, many doune caste,
Many strong men by her hath losse ther breth,
Her waies are waies of hell ledyng to deth.

And in this lite narracion precedente
The womanne's manifolde gilt I attende,
The yong man alas how she hath shent!
Discevid her husbunde, her owne next frend,
In these bothe her God she doith offende, 250
To breke her spousail, to her is of noweight;
Furthirmore to shew woman's craft and sleight,

A woman at her dore fate on a stall
To se folke passe by stretes of the cite,
With eye and countinaunce eke she gan call,
If there be any pretie one, come to me,
Come hithir ye pigges nye, ye little babe,
At last she saied to a yong man hertlesse
Of her disceipt unware and defencelesse :

Moche swetir, she faith, and more acceptable 260
Is drinke when it is stollin privily,
Then when it is taken in form avowable,
Bread hiddin and gottin jeoperdouslie
Ymust nedis be swete and semblable
Venison stolin is aie the swetir,
The ferthir the narowir fet the bettir.

And whom this woman, faith Salomon, festes,
The yong man wotith not whom she doth fede,
Of the darke depenesse of hell ben her gestes;
Beware, O yong man, therefore I The rede, 270
And how be it chiefly for thy gode spede
This werke to compile I have take in charge,
I must of pitie my charitie enlarge.

With the felie man whiche is thus begiled,
Her husband I mene, I wol wepe and waile
His painfull infortune, whereby reviled
Causelesse he is, nevir to convaile,
Every man yong and olde woll him assaile
With wordes of occasion, with the loth name,
And alas! gode soule, he nothyng to blame. 280

But the whiche that coud so ill doe and wolde
Hers be the blame for her foule demerite,
And leve that opprobrious name cokcold
To apropir to hym as in dispite.
Ransake yet we wouldin if that we might
Of this wordè the true ortographic,

The verie discent and etymologie.

The well and grounde of the firste invencion
To knowe the ortographic we must derive, 290
Whiche is coke and cold in composition,
By reson, as nigh as I can contrive;
Then how it is writtin we knowe belive;
But yet lo! by what reson and what grounde
Ywas it of these two wordis compounde.

As of one cause to give very judgement,
The Etymology let us firste beholde,
Eche lettir an whole worde doeth represent,
As C put for colde, and O put for olde,
K is for knave, thus divers men don holde,
The firste parte of this name we have yfounded,
Let us ethimologise the secounde.

As the firste findir mente I am right sure
C for calot, for of we havin O,
And L for leude, and D for demenure,
The craft of the eventour ye maie se lo!
How one name signifieth personis two,
A colde olde knave, cokcold himself wenyng,
And eke a calot of leude demenyng.

The secounde cause of the imposition
Of this foresayid name was jelousie, 310
To be jelouse is gretist occasion
To be cokcold, that men can wel aspie,
And though the passion be very fire,
And of continuell fervence and hete,
The pacient aye sufferith colde on his fete.

And who that is jelous, and aye in a drede,
Is full of Melancolie and gallie ire,
His wiv's nose if she onis misfetrede
He woll cutte of, ye and he woll conspire
His deth who evir that woll her desire, 320
Whiche she percevyng brastith streight his gall,
And anone his grete wodenesse doith fall.

As sone as she hath knit for hym that knot,
Now is he tame that was so ramagious,
Mekely sittith he doune and taketh his lot,
Layid ben now his lokes so furious,
And he but late as a cocke batailous
Hore in his quarell, to avenge hym bolde,
Now is he callid both coke and colde.

This sayyng, to all curtisie dissonant, 330
Whiche ysemith that it of malice grewe,
In this rude tretise I ne woll not plant
As parcill thereof, but onely to shewe
The opinion of the talcatife shrewe,
Whiche in ill sayyng is ever merie,
No man as I is thereof so werie.

But I as parcill of this my lite boke
Woll graffin in some sadde counsaill wherby
The weddid man, if that he daigne to loke
In it, the bettir shall mowin hym gie, 340
And provide for his saied infortunie,
Whiche as I have sayid with him complaine
I woll, as partinir of his grete paine.

As moste expedient unto his wele
I woulde that all jelousie were abjecte,
If he be jelous, that he it concele,
And in his labour be full circumspecte
To knowe her waies, if thei semin suspecte,
And not for to breke, for one worde brokin
She woll not misse but she woll be wrokin. 350

Forbid her not that thou n'oldist have don,
For loke what thyng so e're she is forbod,
To that of all thyngis she is most prone,
Namely if it be ill and no gode,
Till it be executid, she' is nigh wode,
Soche is a woman, and soche is her fete,
Her craft by craft than labour to defete.

If thou hereaftir, now a single man,
Shouldist be jelous if thou haddest a wife,
Wedde not but if thou can trust a woman,
For els shouldist thou lede a carefull life,
That thou moste lothist should ybe full rife,
Yet I ne will gainsaie Matrimonie,
But Melius est nubere quam uri.

That is to saie, bettir is in Wedlocke
A wife to take as the churche doith kenne,
Then for to ben undir the flesh's yoke,
In fleshlie lustis alwaie for to brenne,
But as I sayid, for all jelous menne,
So thei livin chaste, I holde it lasse ill,
That thei ne wedde not, than them selfin spill.

The single man whiche that is yet to wedde,
And not the weddid man, thus I arede,
To warne hym now he is to farre yspedde,
It is all to late hym for to forbede,
But let hym take as for his owne nede
Soche counsaile as is hym before ytolde,
These wordis folowyng eke to beholde.

Thy watir to kepe the wiseman doeth teche,
That thou in no wise let it have issue
At a narowe rifte waie it woll yseche,
And semblablie the woman that 'is untrue
To give her fre walke in all wise eschue,
If she at large, not at thine hande walke,
She woll The shamyn, thou shalt it not balke.

Weddid or single, thus saith the wiseman
Her which that both daie and night evirmore
Lithe in thy bosome, wife or yet lemman,
Love not to hote, lest thou repent it fore,
Lest she The brynging into some ill lore,
Thy wife not to love yet I n'ill support,
But that thou dote not thus I The exhort.

Lo! if thou love her, love thine honestie,

Be she not idill, for what woll betide,
If she sit idle, of very necessitie
Her minde woll serchin ferre and eke wide,
Namelie if she be not accompanide;
How accompanied? not with yonge men,
But with maidinis I mene or women.

Maidin servauntes be right convenient
In house to helpin to doe her service,
In whom she maie use her commaundement,
In the selson all at her owne device,
To techin 'hem gode yeve her thine advice
To make them huswifs, thus businesse
Maie yet refrainin her from idlenesse.

But bid not her that thou wolt have her do,
Of thine entent that might be a lettyng,
But craftily encourage her therto
By othir menis, as by commendying,
And not to moche but duily mengyng
Bothe praise and blame, and in thy reson
First praise wisly the place and selson.

Of faithfull will, and herte full tender,
One thing I call into remembraunce
Again, whiche though my wit be to slender,
Aftir my powir and my suffisaunce
I purposie to makin a purveiaunce,
Sith women of nature ben chaungeable,
Frele, and not ware, also discevable,

Be' it that thy wife be excellently gode,
That none be bet of disposicion,
In processe of time she might turn her mode,
By some misse-liver's instigacion,
Divers men to thilke occupacion
Aplyin daily ther mynde and eke herte,
From ther godenelle frele women to perverte.

If thou asprie any suspect person
Drawe to thy wife, beware in alle wise,
To hym nor her of thy suspeccion
Breke not one worde, though that thin herte agrise.
Kindle no fire and no smoke woll arise,
Although he be of a corrupt entent,
She peraventure is not of assent.

Explicit.

The Complaint of Mars and Venus.

Ladith ye lovirs in the morowe graie,
Lo Venus risen emong yon rowis rede!
And flouris freshe honour ye this daie,
For when the sonne, uprist, then would thei sprede;
But ye lovirs that lie in any drede,
Flyith leste wickid tonguis you asprie,
Lo yonde the Sonne, the candle' of jelousie!

With teris blewe, and with a woundid hert
Taketh your leve, and what saint Ihon to borowe
Apefith somwhat of your painis smert,
Time comith est, that cessin shall your sorow,
The glad night is worthe an hevie morowe,
Saint Valentine, a foule thus herde I sing,
Upon thy daie or Sonne gan up spring.

Yet sang this foule, I rede you all awake,
And ye that have not chosin in humble wise,
Without repentyng chesith now your make,
Yet at the lest renoveleth your service,
And ye that have full chosin, as I devise,
Confermith it perpetually to dure,
And pacientlie takith your avinture.

And for the worship of this highè feste,
Yet woll I in my bridd's wife ysyng,
The sentence of the complaint at the leste,
That wofull Mars made at the departyng
Fro freshe Venus in a morownyng,
When Phœbus with his frie torchis rede
Ranfaked hath every lovir in his drede.

Whilome

Whilome the thre hevenis lorde above,
As well by hevenliche revolucion,
As by deferte, hath wonne Venus his love,
And she hath take hym in subjeccion,
And as a maistresse taught him his lesson,
Commaundyng hym nevir in her service
He were so bolde no lovir to dispise.

For she forbade hym jelousie at all,
And crueltie, and bofte, and tirannie,
She made him at her luste so humble and thrall,
That when she dained to cast on him her eye,
He toke in pacience to live or die,
And thus she bridlith him in her manere,
With nothing, but with scorning of her chere.

Who reignith nowe in blisse but faire Venus,
That hath this worthi knight in govinaunce?
Who singith nowe but Mars that servith thus
The fayre Venus, the causir of plesaunce?
He bint him to perpetuel obeissaunce,
And she binte her to lovin him for ever,
But so be that his trespase it discever.

Thus be they knitte, and reignin as in heven,
By loking most, as it fel on a tide,
That by ther bothe assent was set a steven,
That Mars shall entre as fast as he may glyde
Into her nexte palays to abyde,
Walking his course til she had him ytake,
And he prayed her to haste her for his sake.

Than saide he thus myne hert's lady swete
Ye knowin wel my myschefe in that place,
For sikirly tyl that I with you mete
My lyfe stante there in avinture and grace,
But whan I se the beaute of your face
There is no drede of deth may do me smerte,
For al your luste is ese unto mine herte.

She hath so grete compassion of her knight,
That dwellith in solitude til she come,
For it stode so, that ylkè time no wight
Counsaillid him, ne saide to him welcome,
That nigh her wit for sorowe was oercome,
Wherefore she spedd her as fast in her way
Almoste in one daye as he did in tway.

The gret joye that ywas betwixe 'hem two,
Whan they be mette, there maye no tonge tel,
There is no more but unto bedde they go,
And thus in joye and blisse I lette 'hem dwel,
This worthy Mars that is of knighthode wel,
The floure of fairnesse happith in his armes,
And Venus kyssith Mars the god of armes.

Sojournid hath this Mars, of which I rede,
In chambre amydde the palais privily,
A certaine time, til that him fele a drede
Through Phœbus that was comin hastily
Within the palais yatis sturdily,
With torch in honde, of which the stremis bright
On Venus chambre knockidin ful light.

The chambre there as laye this freshe queene,
Depaintid was with white bolis grete,
And by the light she knew that shon so shene
That Phœbus came to bren 'hem with his herte,
This silly Venus ny dreint in teres were,
Enbraisith Mars, and said alas I die!
The torch is come, that all this worlde wol wrie.

Up sterte tho Mars, him listid not to slepe,
Whan he his lady herdin so complaine,

30 But for his nature was not for to wepe,
In stede of teris from his eyin twaine
The fire sparclis sprongin out for paine,
And hente his hauberke that lay him beside,
Fly wold he nought ne might him selfin hide.

He throwith on his helme of huge weight,
And girt him with his swerde, and in his honde
His mighty spere, as he was wont to feight
He shakith so, that it almost to wonde,
Ful hevy was he to walken ovir londe,
He may not holde with Venus company,
But badde her flye leste Phœbus her espy.

O woful Mars alas! what maist thou sain,
That in the palais of thy disturbaunce
Arte leste behind in paril to be slaine,
And yet thereto is double thy penaunce,
For she that hath thine hert in govinaunce
Is passid halfe the stremis of thine eyen,
That you n're swift wel maist thou wepe and crien.

Nowe flyeth Venus into Ciclinius tour,
With voidè corse, for fere of Phœbus light,
Alas! and there ne hath she no socour;
For she ne founde ne sey no manir wight,
And eke as there she had but litil might,
Wherefore her felvin for to hide and save,
Within the gate she fledde into a cave.

Darke was this cave, and smoking as the hel
Nat but two paas within the yate it stode,
A naturel day in darke I let her dwel,
Now wol I speke of Mars furious and wode,
For sorowe he wolde have seen his hert blode,
Sith that he might done her no companie,
He ne rought not a mite for to die.

So feble' he wext for hete and for his wo,
That nigh he swelt, he might unneth endure,
He passith but a sterre in dayis two,
But nertheles, for al his hevy armure,
He foloweth her that is his liv's cure,
For whose departing he toke gretir yre,
Than he did for his brenning in the fire.

Aftir he walkith softly a paas,
Complaining that it pite was to here,
He saide, O lady bright Venus alas!
That er so wide a compas is my sphere!
Alas, whan shal I mete you herte dere!
This twelve dayis of April I endure,
Through jelous Phœbus, this misavinture.

Now God helpe fely Venus all alone!
But as God wolde it happid for to be,
That while that weping Venus made her mone,
Ciclinius riding in his chyvaunche
Fro Venus, Valanus might this palais se,
And Venus he salvith, and makith chere,
And lier recevith as his frende ful dere.

Mars dwellith forth in his adversite,
Complaining evir in her departing,
And what his complaint was remembrith me,
And therefore in this lustie morowning
As I best can, I wol it saine and sing,
And aftir that I wol my leve ytake,
And God yeve every wight joy of his make.

The

The Complaint of Mars.

THE' ordir of complaynt requireth skilfully,
 That if a wight shall plainin pitously,
 Ther mote be cause wherfore that men yplaine,
 Or men may deme he playnith folily,
 And causeles, alas! that am not I,
 Wherfore the grounde and cause of all my paine,
 So as my troublid witte may it attaine,
 I wol reherse, not for to have redresse,
 But to declare my grounde of hevinesse.

The first time alas! that I was ywrought,
 And for certain effectis hiðir brought,
 By him that lordith eche intelligence,
 I yave my trewe service and my thought
 For evirmo, how dere I have it bought!
 To her, that is of so gret excellence,
 That what wight that shewith first her offence,
 Whan she is wrothe and taketh of him no cure,
 He may not longe in joye of love endure.

This is no fainid matir that I tel,
 My lady is the very fours and wel
 Of beaute, luste, fredome, and gentilnesse,
 Of riche array howe dere so men it sel,
 Of al disporte in whiche men frendly dwel,
 Of love and play, and of benigne humbleesse,
 Of sowne of instrumentes of al swetnesse,
 And thereto so wel fortunèd and thewid,
 That through the world her godenes is shewid.

What wondir is than though that I besette
 My service on soche one that may me knette
 To wele or wo, sithe it lithe in her might,
 Therfore myne herte for er I to her hette,
 Ne trewly for my deth shall I not lette
 To ben her trewist servant and her knight,
 I flattir nat, that may wete every wight,
 For this day in her service shal I dye,
 But grace be, I se her nevir with eye.

To whom shal I plainin of my distresse?
 Who may me help, who may my hert redresse?
 Shal I complaine unto my lady fre?
 Nay certis, for she hath soche hevynesse
 For fere and eke for wo, that, as I gesse,
 In litil time it wold her bane ybe,
 But were she safe, it were no force of me,
 Alas that evir lovirs mote endure
 For love so many per'ilous avinture!

For though so be that lovirs be as trewe
 As any metal that is forgid newe,
 In many' a case 'hem tidith oft sorowe,
 Somtime ther ladies wol nat on 'hem rewe,
 Somtims if that jelousy it knewe
 They mightin lightly lay ther hed to borowe,
 Somtime envious folke with tongis horowe
 Depravin 'hem, alas! whom may they plesse?
 But he be false, no lovir hath his ese.

But what availith soch a long sermoun
 Of avinturis of love up and down?
 I wol retourne and spekin of my paine,
 The point is this of my distructioun,
 My right lady and my salvacioun
 Is in affray, and not to whom to plaine;
 O herte swete, o lady soverayne!

For your disese I ought wel swoun and swelt,
 Though I none othir harme ne drede yfelt.

To what fine made the God that sytte so hie
 Beneth him othir love or companye,
 And strainith folke to love maugre ther hed,
 And than ther joye for aught I can espie
 Ne lastith not the twinkeling of an eye?
 And some have nevir joye til they be ded,
 What menith this, what is this mistithed?
 Wherto constrainith he his folke so fast
 Thing to desirin but it should ylast?

And though he made a lovir love a thing,
 And makith it seme stedfast and during,
 Yet putteth he in it soche misavinture,
 That rest ne is there none in his yewing,
 And that is wondir that so juste a king
 Ydothe soche hardnesse unto his cature,
 Thus whethir love breke or ellis dure,
 Algatis he, that hath with love to done,
 Hath astir wo, than chaungid is the Mone.

It semeth he hath to lovirs enmyte,
 And lyke a fishe, as men may al day se,
 Baitith his anglehoke with some plesaunce,
 Til many' a fishe is wode to that he be Cefid therwith, and then at erst hath he
 Al his desire, and therwithal mischaunce,
 And though the line ybreke he hath penaunce,
 For with that hoke he woundid is so fore,
 That he his wagis hath for evirmore.

The broche of Thebis was of soche a kinde,
 So ful of rubyes and of stones of Inde,
 That every wight, that sette on it an eye,
 He wende anone to worthe out of his mynde,
 So fore the beaute wold his hert ybynde,
 Til it he had, him thought he must ydie,
 And when that it was his, than should he drie
 Soche wo for drede aye while that he it had,
 That welnigh for the fere he should be mad;

And whan it was fro his possession,
 Than had he double wo and passion,
 That he so faire a jewil hath forgo;
 But yet this broche, as in conclusion,
 Was not the cause of his confusion,
 But he that wrought it enfortuned it so,
 That every wight that had it shoud have wo;
 And therfore in the worchir was the vice,
 And in the coveitour that was so nice.

So farith it by lovirs, and by me,
 For though my lady have so grette beaute,
 That I was mad to I had gette her grace,
 She was not cause of mine adversite,
 But he that wroughtin her, as mote I The,
 That put so gret a beaute in her face,
 That made me coveitin, and so purchase
 Myne ownè deth, him wite I that I die,
 And mine unwit that er I clambe so hie.

But to you hardy knightis of renowne,
 Sithe that ye be of my devisyowne,
 Al be' I not worthy to so gret a name,
 Yet saine these clerkis I am your patrone,
 Therfore ye ought have some compassioun
 Of my disese, and take it nat agame,
 The proudest of you may be made ful tame;
 Wherfore I pray you of your gentillese
 That ye complainin for mine hevinesse.

And

And ye my ladyes, that ben trew and stable,
By way of kinde ye oughtin to ben able
To have pite of folke that ben in paine,
Nowe have ye cause to clothin you in fable,
Sith that your empères the honorable
Is desolate, wel oughtin ye to plaine,
Nowe shoude your holy teris fal and raine,
Alas your honour and your emperice
Nigh ded for drede ne can her not chevice.

Complainith eke ye lovirs al in fere,
For her, that with unfainid humble chere
Was evir redy to do you focour,
Complainith her that er hath be you dere,
Complainith beaute, fredome, and manere,
Complainith her, that endith your labour,
Complainith thilke ensample' of al honour,
That nevir yet dyd ought but gentillesse,
Kythith therfore in her some kindenesse.

The Complaint of Venus.

THere n'ys so high comfort to my plesaunce,
Whan that I am in any hevinesse,
As for to have leysir of remembraunce
Upon the manhode and the worthynesse,
Upon the trouthe, and on the stedfastnes
Of him whose I am al while I maye dure,
There ought to blamin me no creature,
For every wight praisith his gentillesse.

In him is bounte, wisedome, govirnaunce,
Weil more than any mann's witte can gesse,
For grace hath wolde so ferforth him avaunce,
That of knightthod he his parsite richesse,
Honour honourith him for his noblesse,
Therto so wel hath fourmid him nature,
That I am his for er, I him ensure,
For every wight praisith his gentillesse.

And natwithstanding all his suffisaunce,
His gentil herte is of so gret humbleesse,
To me, in worde, in werke, and in countenaunce,
And me to serve is al his besinesse,
That I am sette in very sykirnesse,
Thus ought I to blisse wel mine avintour,
Sith that him list me servin and honour,
For every wight praisith his gentillesse.

Nowe certis, love, it is right covenable,
That men ful dere aby thy noble thinges,
As wake abedde, and fastin at the table,
Weping to laugh, and singe in complainynges,
And downe to castin visage and lokinges,
Oftin to chaunge visage and countinaunce,
Playe in slepinge, and dremyn at the daunce,
Al the revers of any gladd feling.

Jelousy he hangid by a cable,
She wolde al knowin through her espiying,
There dothe no wight nothing so resonable,
That al n'is harme in her ymagining,
Thus dere abought is love in his yeving,
Whiche ofte he yevith without ordinaunce,
As sorowe' ynough, and litil of plesaunce,
Al the revers of any glade feling.

A litil tyme his yest is agreable,
But ful accomberous is the usinge,
For subtil jelousy the discevable
Ful oftin tyme ycausith distourbinge,
Thus ben we evir in drede and sufiring,
In no certaine, we languishen in penaunce,
And have wel ofte many an harde mischaunce,
Al the revers of any gladd feling.

But certis, love, I saye not in soche wife,
That for to scape out of your lace I ment,
For I so longe have ben in your service,
That for to lete of wil I ner assent,
No force though jelousye me doe toutment,
Suffisith me to se him whan I may,
And therfore certis to mine ending day
To love him best shal me nevir repent.

And certis, love, whan I me wel advise,
Of any' estate that man may represent,
Than have ye made me thorough your franchise
Chesin the best that evir in erthe went,
Nowe love well, hert, and loke thou nevir stent,
And lette the jelous putte it in assaye,
That for no paine ne wol I not say naye,
To love him best shal I nevir repent.

O herte, to The it ought ynoughe suffice,
That love so highe a grace hath to you sent,
To chose the worthyist in allè wise,
And most agreable to mine entent,
Sekith no ferthir, neithir way ne went,
Sith ye have suffisaunce unto my paye.
Thus wol I ende this complaint or this lay,
To love him best shal I nevir repent.

L'envoye.

Princes, receveth this complaininge in gre,
Unto your excellent benignite
Directe astir my litil suffisaunce,
For elde, that in my spirite dullith me,
Hath of enditing al the subtilte
Welnigh berafte out of my remembraunce,
And eke to me it is a grete penaunce,
Sith rime in Englishe hath soche scarcite,
To' folowe worde by worde the curiosite
Of Gransonflour, of'hem that make in Fraunce.

Explicit.

Here foloweth the Letter of CUPIDE.

This Letter is said to have been made by Tho. Occleve of the Office of the Privy Seal, Chaucer's Scholar; and the Author telling us at the Conclusion it was made Anno Dom. 1402. it can't be Chaucer's, who dy'd A.D. 1400.

Upido, unto whose commaundement
The gentill kinrede of goddis on hie,
And peple infernall ben obedient,
And al mortal folke servin busily,
Of the goddesse sonne Cythera onely,
Unto al tho that to our deite
Ben subiectes, hertily greting sende we.

In general we wollin that ye knowe,
That ladies of honour and of reverence,
And othir gentilwomen havin sowe
Soche fede of complaint in our audience
Of men that do 'hem outrage and offence,
That it our eris grevith for to here,
So pitous is the' effecte of this matere.

Passing al londis, on the lytil yle,
That cleped is Albion, they muste complaine,
They say that ther is croppe and rote of gile,
So con tho men dissimulin and faine,
With standing dropis in ther eyin twaine,
Whan that ther hertis felith no distresse,
To blindin women with ther doubleness.

Ther wordis spokin be so fighingly,
With so pitous a chere and countinaunce,
That every wight, that menith trewly,
Demith they in herte havin soch grevaunce,
They say so' importable is ther penaunce,
That but ther lady lust to shewe 'hem grace,
They right anone must stervin in the place.

Ah lady myne they say, I you ensure,
As dothe me grace, and I shal evir be,
While that my lyfe may lastin and endure,
To you as humble' and lowe in eche degre,
As possible' is and kepe al thinges in secre
Right as your selfin listith that I do,
And ellis myne hertè mote braft in two.

Ful harde it is to knowe a mann's herte,
For outwarde may no man the trouthe deme,
Whan word out of the mouth may none afterte,
But it by reson semed a wight to queme,
So it is said of herte as it would seme;
O faithful woman, ful of innocence,
Thou art discevid by false apparence.

By proceffe movith ofte woman's pite,
Wening al thing were as these men ysey,
They graunt 'hem grace of ther benignite,
For that men shouldin not for ther sake dey,
And with gode hert settin 'hem in the wey
Of blisful love, kepin it if they conne,
And thus othir while women bethe ywonne.

And whan this man the pan hath by the stele,
And fully is in his possession,
With that woman kepeth he no more to dele,
Astir yf he may findin in the toun
Any woman his blinde affectioun
Unto bestowe, but yvel mote he preve!
A man for al his othes is harde to' beleve.

And for that every false man hath a make,
As unto every wight is light to know,
Whan this traitour this woman hath forsake,
He fast spedith him unto his felowe, 60
Til he be there his herte is on a lowe,
His false discete ne may him not suffise,
But of his trayson tellith al the wife.

Is this a fair avaunt, is this honour,
A man himselfe accuse thus and diffame?
10 Is' it gode to confesse him selfe a traitour
And bring a woman unto sclaudrous name,
And tel howe he her body hath do shame?
No wurshippe may he thus to him conquer,
But grete disclaundir unto him and her. 70

To her? nay, yet ywas it no represe,
For al for vertue was that she ywrought;
But he that brewid hath al this mischefe,
That spake so faire, and falsely inwarde thought,
His be the sclauder, as it by reson ought,
And unto her be thanke perpetuell,
That in soche a nede helpin can so wel.

Although through mann's sleight and subtilte
A sely simple' and innocent woman
Betraied is, no wondir sithe the cite 80
Of Troye, as the storie tellin can,
Betrayed was through the discete of man;
And set on fyre, and al downe ovirthrowne
And finally destroyid as men knowen.

Betrayin nat men cites gret and kinges?
30 What wight is it that can shape remedy
Ayenist these falsely purposid thinges?
Who can the crafte soche craftis to espy,
But man, whose witte is er redy t' aply
To thing that sowning is into falschede? 90
Woman bethe ware of false men I The rede.

And farthirmore have these men in usage,
That where they nat lykily ben to spede,
Soche as they ben, with a double visage,
They procurin for to pursewe ther nede,
40 He prayith him in his cause to procede,
And largely guerdonith he his travayle,
Litol wote women howe men 'hem assaile.

Anothir wretche unto his felowe faith,
Thou fischist faire, she which that The hath fired, 100
Is false, inconstaunt, and she hath no faith,
She for the rode of folke is so desired,
And as an horse fro daie to daie she' is hired,
That when thou twinnist fro her companie,
Comith an othir, and blered is thine eye.

Now prick on fast, and ridin thy journey,
50 While thou art there, for she behinde thy backe
So liberall is, she woll nothyng withsey,
But smartly of an othir take a smacke,
And thus farin these women all the packe, 110
Who so 'hem trustith hangid mote he be,
Evir thei desire chaunge and novilt.

Whereof

Whereof procedith this but of envie?

For that he hymself her ne winnin maie,
He spekith her represe and villanie,
As mann'is blabbyng tong is wont alwaie;
Thus divers men full oftin make assaie
For to distourbin folke, in sondrie wise,
For thei maie not eschuin ther emprite.

Many one eke would spekin for no gode,
That hath in love his tyme spent and used,
Men wist his ladie his askyng withstode,
Ere that he were of her plainly refused,
Or waste and vaine al that he had ymused,
Wherefore he can none othir remedy,
But on his lady shapith him to lye.

Every woman he saithe is light to gete,
Can none say nay, yf she be wel ysought,
Who so may leisir have with her to trete,
Of his purpose ne shal he failin nought,
But he on madnesse be so depe ybrought,
That he shende al with opin homlynesse,
That loven women, they dotin as I gesse.

To sclaudir women thus what may profite?
To gentillesse namely that 'hem arme should
In defence of women, and 'hem delite,
As that the ordre of gentillesse wolde?
If that a man list gentill to be holde,
He must al eschewe that therto' is contrary,
A sclaudrous tonge is his gret adversarye. 140

A foul vice it is of tonge to be light,
For who so mochil clappith, gabbith ofie,
The tonge of man so swifte is and so wight,
That whan it is yreisid up on losfe,
Refon is shewid so slowly and softe,
That it him nevir ovirtakin may,
Lorde! so these men ben trusty in assay.

Al be it that men find one woman nice,
Inconstaunt, rechelesse, and variable;
Deignous, and proude, fulfillid of malyce,
Without faithe or love and discevable,
Slye, quaint, false, in al untrust coulpable,
Wickid, or feirse, or ful of cruilte,
Yet foloweth not that soche all women be.

Whan the High God aungelis fourmid had,
Amongis 'hem al fourmid were there none,
That foundin was malicious and bad?
Yet al men wotin ther were many one,
That for ther pride fill fro hevin anone,
Shuld weforthy yeve all angils proude name? 160
Nay, he, that that susteinith, is to blame.

Of twelve Apostils one a traitour was,
The remenante yet gode werin and trewe,
So yf it happin men findin percas
O woman false, soche gode is to eschewe,
And deme not al that they therfore be' untrewre,
I se wel that mennis owne falsines
'Hem causith woman for to trust the lesse.

O! every man ought have an hert tendre
To a woman, and deme her honorable,
Whethir his shape be thicke, or els slendre,
Or he be gode or badde, it is no fable,
Every wight wote that witte hath resonable,
That of a woman he discendid is,
Than is it shame of her to speke amyffe.

A wickid tre gode frute may non forth bring,
For soche the frute is aye as is the tre,

Take hede of whom thou toke thy beginning,
Let thy mother be mirrou unto The,
Honour her, yf thou wolte honourid be, 180
Dispisith her than not in no manere,
Lest that therby thy wickidnesse apere.

An olde proverbe there said is in Englishe,
That birde or foule sothly is dishonest,
What that he be, and holdin ful churlishe,
That usith to defoulin his own nest,
Men to say wel of women it' is the best,
And naught to dispisin 'hem ne deprave,
If that they wol ther honour kepe or save.

The ladies evir complaine 'hem on clerkes, 190
That they have made bokis of ther diffame,
In whiche they dispise women and ther werkes,
And spekin of him grete reprofe and shame,
And causelesse yeve 'hem a wickid name,
Thus they dispisid be on every side,
Disclaundirid and blowin on ful wyde.

Tho fory bokis makin mencion
Howe women betraide in especial
Adam, David, Sampson, and Salomon,
And many' one mo, who maye reherse 'hem al, 200
The treason that they havin do and shal?
The worlde ther malice may not comprehende,
As clerkis saine, for it ne hath none ende.

Ovide, in his boke callid Remedie
Of love, grete reprofe of women ywriteth,
Wherin I trowe that he dyd grete folie,
And every wight who' in soche case him delyteth,
A clerk'is costome is whan he enditeth
Of women, be it prose, or rime, or vers,
Say they be wicked, al know he the revers. 210

And the boke scholirs lerned in ther childhede,
For they of women beware should in age,
And to lovin 'hem evir be in dred,
Sithe to disceve is set al ther corage,
They say' of peril men should cast th'avauntage,
Namely of soche as men havin bewrapped,
For many' a man by women hath mishapped.

No charge is what so these clerkis ysaine,
Of all ther writing I ne doe no cure,
All ther labour and travaile is in vain, 220
For betwene me and my ladie nature
Shal not be suffrid, while the world maie dure,
Thus these clerkis by ther cruell tirannie
On felie women kithin ther maistrie.

Whilom for many of 'hem wer in my cheine
Ytyd, and now for unweldie age,
And unlust, thei maie not to love atteine,
And saine now that love' is but verie dotage,
Thus for thei 'hem selfin lackin courage,
Thei folke excitin by ther wickid sawes 230
For to rebell ayenst me and my lawes.

But maugre 'hem that blamin women moste,
Soche is the force of myne impressioun,
That sodainlie I can fell all ther bolste,
And all ther wrong imaginacion,
It shal not ben in ther elccion
The foulisf slutte in all the rounne to' refuse,
If that me luste, for all that thei conne muse,

But her in herte as brenningly desire,
As though she were a ducheffe or a quene, 240
So can I folkis hertis set on fire,
And as me list sendin 'hem joye or tene,

Thei

Thei that to women ben ywhet so kene,
 My sharpe perfyng strokis how thei smite
 Shull fele and knowin, how thei kerve and bite

Parde this clerke, this subtyll flyc Ovide,
 And many' an othir discevid have be
 Of women as it is knowin full wide,
 What? no men more; and that is great deinte;
 So excellent a clerke as was he, 250
 And othir mo, that coudin full well preche,
 Betrappid wer, for aught that thei coud teche.

And trustith well that it is no marvaile,
 For women knowin plainly ther entent.
 Thei wist how sottile thei coud assaile
 'Hem, and what faishede thei in herte mente,
 And thus thei clerkis in ther daungir hente,
With o venime an othir is destroyed,
 And thus these clerkis otin were anoied.

These ladies, ne these gentiles nerthelless, 260
 Were none of tho that wroughtin in this wise,
 But soche women as werin vertulelle,
 Thei quittin thus these oldé clerkis wise,
 To clerkis mochil lette ought to suffice,
 Then to dispravin women generally,
 For worship shullin thei none gette thereby.

If that these men that lovirs 'hem pretend,
 To women werin faithfull, gode, and true,
 And dredde 'hem to disceve, or to offende,
 Women to love 'hem wouldin not eschue, 270
 But every daie hath man an herte newe,
 It upon one abidin can no while,
 What tortie is it soche a wight to begile?

Men bering eke the women upon hond,
 That lightly and withoutin any pain
 Thei women be, thei can no wight withstond,
 That his disce liff to 'hem to complain,
 Thei be so trele, thei maie 'hem not refrain,
 But who so likith 'hem maie lightly have, 280
 So be ther hertis esie in to grave.

To maistr John de Mone, as I suppose,
 Then it was a leude occupacioun,
 In makynge of the Romante of the Rose,
 So many' a slygh imaginacioun,
 And perilles for to rollin up and down,
 The long processe, so many' a slyght cautell,
 For to disceve a felie damosell.

Nought can I saie, ne my wit comprehende,
 That art, and pain, and subtyltie should faile
 For to conquere, and sone to make an ende, 290
 When men a tible place shullin assaile,
 And sone also to venquishe a battaile,
 Of whiche no wight maie makin resistance,
 Ne herte hath none to make any defence.

Then mote it folowe of necessitie,
 Sith art askith so grete engine and pain,
 A woman to disceve, what so she be,
 Of constaunce be thei not so barain,
 As that some of these fely clerkis sain, 300
 But thei be as women oughtin to be,
 Sadde, constante, and fulfillid of pite.

How frendly was Medea to Jafon,
 In his conquirynge of the Fleece of gold:
 How fally quit he her true affection,
 By whom victorie he gate as he would!
 How maie this man for shame be so bolde
 To falsin her, that fro his deth and shame

Him kept, and gate him so grete prife and name!

Of Troie also the Traitour Æneas,
 The faithlesse wretche, how he himself forswore
 To Dido, which that quene of Carthage was,
 That hym relevid of his smertis fore!
 What gentilesse might she have doin more,
 Then she with herte unfainid to hym kidde,
 And what mischefe to her therof betidde!

In my legende of natures maie men finde,
 Who so ylikith therein for to rede
 That othis ne beheft maie man not binde,
 Of reprobable shame have thei no drede, 320
 In mann's herte trouthe ne hath no stede,
 The soile is naught, there maie no troth ygrow,
 To women namely it is not unknowe.

Clerkis saine also there is no malice
 Like unto womans wickid crabbidnesse;
 O woman, how shalt thou thy self chevice,
 Sith men of The so mochil harme witnesse!
 Beth ware o woman of ther sikilnesse,
 Kepith thine ownè, what men clappe or crake,
 And some of 'hem shall smarte I undirtake.

Malice of women what is it to drede? 330
 Thei sle no man, destroyin no citees,
 Ne oppresse peple, ne them ovirlede,
 Betraie Empiris, Relmis, or Duchees,
 Ne bireven men ther landis ne ther mees,
 Enpoyson folke, ne housis set on fire,
 Ne false contractis makin for no hire.

Trust, parfite love, and entire charite,
 Fervent will, and entalentid corage,
 All thewis gode, as sittith well to be,
 Have women er of custome and usage, 340
 And well thei connin mann's ire awage,
 With softè wordis, discrete and benigne,
 What thei be'inward thei shewe outward by signe.

Womanis herte unto no crueltie
 Enclinid is, but thei be charitable,
 Pitous, devote, full of humilitie,
 Shamefaste, debonaire, and amiable,
 Dredfull, and of wordis mesurable,
 What women these have not paraventure
 Folowith not the waie of ther nature. 350

Men saine that our first mothir nathelless
 Made all mankinde lesin his libertie,
 And nakid it of joyè doutilless,
 For Godd's heste disobeyid she,
 When she presumid to taste of the tre
 That God forbade, that she ete therof should,
 And ne 'had the devill be, no more she would.

The envious swelling, that the fende our foe
 Had unto man in herte for his welth,
 Sent a serpent, and made her for to goe 360
 To disceve Eve, and thus was man's welth
 Birafte him by the fende in a stelh,
 The woman not knowyng of that disceipt,
 God wote ful ferre was it from her conceipt.

Wherefore I saie that this gode woman Eve
 Our fathir Adam ne discevid nought,
 There maie no man for a disceipt it preve
 Propirly, but that she in herte and thought
 Had it compassid first or she it wrought,
 And for soche was not her impressioun, 370
 Men maie it call no deceipte by reson.

Ne no wight disceivith, but he purpose;
The fende this disceipt caste, and nothyng she;
Then it is wrong to demin or suppose,
That of his harme she should the cause be;
Wytith the fende, and his be the maugre,
And all excusid have her innocence,
Save onely that she brake obedience.

And touchyng this, full fewe men there be,
Unnethis any dare I safely saie, 380
Fro daie to daie, as men maie all daie se,
But that the beste of God thei disobaie;
Have this in minde sirs I you praie,
If that ye be discrete and resonable
Ye woll her holde the more excusable.

And wher men saie in man is stedfastnesse,
And woman is of her courage unstable,
Who maie of Adam bere soche a witnesse,
Tellith me this, was he not chaungeable?
Thei bothe werin in o case semblable, 390
Save that willyng the fende discevid Eve,
And so did she not Adam by your leve.

Yet was this sinne happie to mankinde,
The fende discevid was for all his sleight,
For aught he coud him in his sleightis winde,
For his trespase came fro hevin on height
God, to discharge man of his hevy weight,
He fleshe and blode ytoke of a virgine,
And suffrid deth, hym to deliver of pine.

And God, to whom there maie nothing hid be, 400
If he in woman knowen had soch malice,
As men record of 'hem in generalte
Of our Ladie of life reperatrice
He n'olde have be borne, but that she of vice
Was voide, and full of vertue, well he wiste,
Endowid, of her to be borne hym liste.

Her hepid vertue hath soche excellence,
That all to lene is mann's facultie
To declare it, and therefore in suspence
Her due praisyng put nedis must ybe, 410
But thus I sayin, verily that she
Next God, best frende is that to man longith,
The keye of mercie by her girdle hongith.

And of mercie hath every man soche nede,
That refyng that, farwell the joye of man,
And of her power now takith right gode hede,
She mercie maie well, and purchacin can,
Displeisith her not, honoureth that woman,
And othir women honour for her sake,
And but ye doe, your sorowe shall awake. 420

In any boke also where can ye finde
That of the werkis of deth or of life
Of Jesu spelleth or makith any minde,
That women hym forfoke for wo or strife,

Where was there any wight so ententife
Aboutin hym as woman? provid none,
The'Apostlis hym forlokin everichone.

Women forfoke hym not, for all the faieth
Of holic churche in women left onely, 430
This is no lecs, for thus holy writte saieth,
Loke and ye shall so finde it hardily,
And thereibre I maie well previn thereby
That in woman reignith stable constauce,
And in meh is the chaunge of variaunce.

Thus precious gemme of martirs Margarite,
That of thy blode dredest none effusion,
Thou lovir true, thou maidin manfuete,
Thou constante woman in thy passioh,
Ovircame the fend's temptacion, 440
And many' a wight convertid thy doctrine
Unto the faith of holy God, thou virgine.

But understandeth this, I commend her nought
By encheson of her virginite,
Trustith it came nevir into thought,
For evir were I ayenst chastitie,
And evir shall, but lo! this mevith me,
Her lovyng herte, and constant to her laie,
Drive out of my remembraunce I ne maie.

Now holdith this for ferme, and for no lie,
That this true and juste commendacion 450
Of women tell I for no flattirie,
Ne bicause of pride or elacion,
But onely lo! for this entencion,
To yeve 'hem courage of perseveraunce
In vertue, and ther honour to avaunce.

The more the vertue, the lasse is the pride,
Vertue so digne is and so noble in kinde
That vice and he woll not in fere abide;
He puttith vicis clene out of his minde,
He flieth fro 'hem, he levith 'hem behinde; 460
O woman that of vertue art hostfresse,
Grete is thy honour, and thy worthinesse.

Then woll I thus concludin and define,
We you commaunde our ministirs echone,
That redie ye be our hestes to encline,
That of these false men our rebell sone
Ye doin punishment, and that anone,
Voide 'hem our court, and banishe 'hem for ever.
So that therein more comin may thei never.

Fulfillid be it, cefyng all delaie. 470
Loke that there be none excusacion.
Writtin in the lustie moneth of Maie,
In our paleis, where many' a million
Of lovirs true have habitacion,
In the yere of grace joyfull and joconde
A thousande fowir hundrid and seconde

Thus endeth the letter of Cupide.

A Ballade in commendacion of our Ladie.

Thoufande stories coud I mo reherce.
A Of olde Poetis touching this matere,
 How that Cupide the hertis gan so perce
 Of his servauntis setting 'hem in fere!
 Lo here the fine of th' errour and the fere!
 Lo here of love the guerdone and grevaunce,
 That er what wo her servautes do avaunce!

Wherefore now plainly I woll my stile dresse
 Of one to speke, at nede that woll not faile;
 Alas for dole I ne can ne maie' expresse
 Her passyng prife, and that is no mervaille!
 O winde of grace, now blowe unto my saile,
 O auriate licour of Clio, to write
 My penne enspire of that I woll endite.

Alas! unworthie I am and unable
 To love soche one, all women surmountyng,
 But she be benigne to me and merciabie,
 That is of pitie the welle and the spryng;
 Wherefore of her in laude and in praisyng,
 So as I can, supportid by her grace,
 Right thus I saie, knelyng before her face.

O sterre of steris with thy stremis clere,
 Sterre of the Se, to shipmen light and gide,
 O lustie livyng moste plesaunt to appere,
 Whose bright bemis the cloudis maie not hide,
 O waie of life to 'hem that go or ride,
 Haven aftir tempest surist up to rive,
 On me have mercie for thy joyis five.

O rightfull rule, O bote of holinesse,
 And lightsome line of pitie for to plain,
 Originall of grace and all godnesse,
 And clenest conduct of vertue moste soverain,
 Mothir of mercie, our trouble to restrain,
 Chambir and cloist clenest of chastitie,
 And namid herbrough of the deitie,

O cloist garden voide of wedis wicke,
 Cristallin welle, of clerenesse clere consigned,
 Fructified olive of foiles faire and thicke,
 And redo'lent Cedre most dere worthy digned,
 Remember on sinnirs that to The be' affined,
 Or wickid fendis ther wrathe on 'hem wreche,
 Lanterne of light, thou art ther livis leche.

Paradise of plesaunce, gladsome to all gode,
 O benigne braunchet of the Pine tre,
 Vinarie' envermailed, refreshir of bode,
 Licour ayen langour that palled maie not be,
 Blisful blomie blomie, bidyng in bounte,
 Thy mantell of mercie on our miserie sprede,
 And er we' awaie wrappe us undir thy wede.

O rodie rofier, flouring without spine,
 Fountain filthlesse, as birill current clere,
 Sum drop of gracefull dewe to us propine;
 Light without nebule shynyng in thy sphere,
 Medecine to mischeves, pucell without pere,
 Flambe down the full light of thin influence,
 Remembring thy servantes for thy magnificence.

Of all christin protectrice and tutele,
 Retourne of exiled put in the proscriptcion,
 To 'hem that even in the' pathe of ther sequele,

To werie forwandrid, rent and pavillon,
 To faint and to freshe the pausacion,
 To unrestie bothe rest and remedie,
 Fructfull to all tho that in her affie.

To 'hem that rennin thou art itinerarie,
 O blisfull brave to knightes of thy werre,
 To werie werkmen the' is diourne denarie,
 Mede unto mariners that have failed ferre,
 Laureate coroune stremyng as a sterre,
 To 'hem put in palastre for thy sake
 Tours of ther conquest, white as any lake.

O mirthe of martyrs, sweter than Siole,
 Of Confessours also riche donatife,
 Unto virgines eterhall Laureole,
 Fore all woman havynng prerogative,
 Mothir and maide, bothe widowe and eke wife,
 Of all the worlde is none but thou alone,
 Now sith thou maie, be succour to my none.

Trustie turtle truefastist of all tyme,
 Curteise columbe, replete of all mekenesse,
 O Nightingale with thy notis newe,
 O Popinjaie purid with all clemensse,
 O laverocke of love, singyng with swetnesse,
 Phœbus waityng till on thy brest he light,
 Undir thy wing at domisdale us dight.

O rubie rubified in the passion
 Of thy sonne, us have emongis in minde,
 O steadfast diametre of duracion,
 That fewe feris any time might thou finde,
 For none to hym was foundin halfe so kinde,
 O hardie herte, O lovyng creature,
 What was 'it but love that made The so endure?

Semely saphre, depe loupe, and blew ewage,
 Stable as the loupe ewage of pitie,
 This is to saie the freshist of visage,
 Thou lovest unchaungid 'hem that servin The,
 And if offence or varyng in 'hem be
 Thou art aie redie on ther wo to rue,
 And 'hem recevist aye with herte full true.

O godelic gladdid when that Gabriel
 With joy The grette, that maie not be nombred,
 Or halfe the blithe who coud ywrite or tell,
 When the holy Ghooste to The was obumbrid,
 Wherthrough fendes were bittirly encombrid,
 O wemlesse maide, embelished in his birthe,
 That man and angill therof haddin mirthe.

Lo here the blomie, and the budde of glorie,
 Of whiche the prophet so long spake before!
 Lo here the fame that was in memorie
 Of Esaie, so long or she was yborne!
 Lo here of David the delicious corne.
 Lo here the grounde of life into bilde,
 Becomyng man our ransome for to yilde.

O glorious viole, vite inviolate,
 O frie Titan, persyng with thy bemes,
 Whose vertuous brightnes was in brest vibrat,
 That al the world embelished with the lumes,
 Conservatrice of Kingis, Dukes and relmes,
 Of Jesse his sede the swete * sunamite,

* Perhaps Cinnamonite, or Cinnamomite.

Mesure my mourning, mine own Margarite.

O soverainist yfought out of Syon,
Cockle with gold-dewe from above berainid,
Dewe-bushe unbrent, firelesse fire set on,
Flaming with fervence, not with hete painid,
Duryng daise that no wether stainid,
Fleece undefouled of gentilist Gidion,
And fructifying fairist yerde of Aaron.

The mightie arche, the probatise piscine,
Laughing aurora, and of pece olive,
Columpne and base, up beryng from abyme,
Why n'ere I connyng here for to discriue,
Chosyn of Joseph, whom he toke to wive,
Unknowyng hym, childyng by miracle,
And of our manly figure the tabernacle.

I have none Englishe convenient and digne,
Myne herte's hele lady, The with to honour,
Ivorie clepe, therefore I woll resigne
Into thyne hande till that thou list succour,
To helpe my makyng both florisse and flour,
Then should I shewe in love how that I brehde,
In songis makyng, thy name to commende.

For if I could before thyne excellence
Syngin in love I woldin what I fele,
And evir standin Ladie' in thy presence,
To shewe in opyn how I love you wele,
And sith although your hert be made of stele
To you withoutin any disceveraunce
J'ay en vous toute ma fiance.

Where might I love evir bettir beset,
Then in this Lillie likyng to beholde,
That lace of love, the bonde so well thou knit,
That I maie se The or myne herte colde,
And or I passe out of my dayis olde,
Tofore syngyng evirmore uttirly,
Your eyin two woll sle me sodainly.

For love I langour, blissed be soch sicknesse,
Sith it is for you my hertely suffisaunce,
I can not ellis saie in my distresse,
So faire one hath myne hert in govirnaunce,
And aftir I begin on esperance,
With feble entune, though it thine hert perce,
Yet for thy sake this lettir I reherse.

God wore on Musike I can not, but I gesse,
Alas why so, that I might saie or syng,
So love I you my own soveraine maistrelle,
And evir shall withoutin departyng,
Mirrour of beautie, for you out shuld I ring,
In remembraunce eke of your eyin clere,
Thus ferre from you my soverain Ladie dere.

So woldin God your love would me yflo,
Sith for your sake I singyng daie by daie,
O herte why he nilt thou breke a two,
Sith with my Ladie dwellin I ne maie!
Thus many a roundell, many a virolle,
In freshe Englishe, when I me leisir finde,
I doe recorde, on you to havin mynde.

Now ladie mine, sith I you love and drede,
And you' unchaunged evir finde in a degre,
Whose grace ne maie flie fro your womanhede,
Disdainith not for to remembre on me,
Myne herte bledith for I maie not you se,
And sith ye worre my menyng desirous
Pleures pour moy s'il vous plaist amoureux.

What marveile is though I in painybe,
I' am departid from you my soverain,
Fortune alas, dont vient la deslenie,
That in no wise I can ne maie attain
To se the beautie of your eyin twain,
Wherefore I saie, for tristesse doeth me grame,
Tout me fait mal departir de ma dame.

Why n'ere my wiffing brought to soche esloit,
That I might saie for joye of your presence,
Or amoureur ce qui voullon,
Or amoureux, the highist excellence,
That er had wight, and sith mine advertence
Is in you, rewith on my painis smerte,
I am so fore ywoundid to the herte.

To live well merie two lovins were isert,
So maie I saie withoutin any blame,
And if that any man to wilde were,
I could hym techin for to be full ramed,
Let hym go love and se where it be game,
For I am bridlid unto sobirnesse,
For her that is of women chief princelesse.

But ehir when thought my hert shuld unbrace,
Then unto me it is best remedie
When I take on your godely freshe face,
So merie a mirrour could I ner espie,
And if I could I would it magnifie,
For nevir none ywas so faire yfoude,
To reken hem all, and also Rosamonde.

And finally with mouth, and will present,
Of double eye withoutin repentance,
Mine hert I yeve you Ladie' in this entent,
That ye shall therof have the govirnaunce,
Takyng my leve with hert's obeisaunce,
(Salve Regina) synging last of all
To be our helpe when that we to The call.

All our love is nought els but idlenesse,
Save your love alone, who might therto' attain,
Who so woll have a name of gentillesse,
I counsaile hym in love that he not fain,
Thou swete Ladie, refute in every pain
Whose mercie moste unto me availith,
To gie by grace, when that fortune failith.

Nought maie be told withoutin any fable
Your high renome, your womanly beaute,
Your govirnaunce to all worship able,
Putteth every herte in cle in his degre,
O violet, O flowir desire,
Sithin I am for you so amorous,
Estreignes moy de cœur joyeux.

With fervent hert my brest hath brost on fire
L'ardant espoer en mon cœur point est mort.
D'avoir l'amour de celle que je desire,
I mené you swete moste plesaunt of porte
Et je scay bien que ce n'est pas mon tort.
That for you syng, so as I maie for monne,
For your departyng alone, I live alone.

Though that I might I would none othir chese,
In your service I woud ben foundin fadde,
Therefore I love no labour that ye lese,
When that in longyng sorist ye be stadde,
Loke up your lovins and be right gladde,
Now ayenist sainte Valentin's daie,
For I have chese that ner forsake I maie.

Explicit

John

JOHN GOWER, unto the noble King HENRY IV.

Noble worthie Kyng Henrie the ferth,
In whom the gladdè fortune is befall
The peple to governe here upon yerth,
God hath The chosèn in comfort of us all,
The worship of this land, which was down fal,
Now stant upright through grace of thy godnesse,
Which every man is hold for to blesse.

The most high God of his justice alone
The right whiche longith to thy regalie
Declarid hath to stande in thy persone,
And more then God maie no man justifie,
Thy title' is knowe upon thyne auncestrie,
The land's folk hath eke thy right affirmed,
So stant thy reigne, of God and man confirmed.

There is no man maie saie in othirwise,
That God hymself ne hath the right declared,
Whereof the lande is bounde to thy service,
Whiche for defeaute of helpe hath long yeared,
But now there is no mann's herte spared,
To love and serve, and worchin thy plesaunce, 20
And all this is through God's purveiaunce.

In allè thing whiche is of God begonne
There foloweth grace, if it be well governed,
Thus tellin thei whiche oldè bokis conne,
Wherof my lorde I wote well thou art lerned,
Aske of thy God, so shalt thou not be werned
Of no request the whiche is resonable,
For God unto the gode is favourable.

King Salomon, whiche had at his askyng
Of God, what thing hym was levist to crave, 30
He chafe wisdom to the right govirnyng
Of Godis folke, the whiche he wouldin save,
And as he chafe it fill hym for to have,
For through his wit while that his reign did last
He gate hym pece and rest into his last.

But Alexandre', as tellith his storie,
Unto the God besought in othir waie,
Of all the worlde to win the victorie,
So that undir his swerde it might obaie, 40
In werre he had all that he wouldin praie,
The mightie God behight hym that beheste,
The worlde he wanne, and had it of conqueste.

But though it fill at thilkè tyme so,
That Alexandre' his askyng hath atchived,
This sinfull worlde was all Painim tho,
Was none whiche hath the High God beleved,
No wondir was though thilk world was greved
Though a tyrant his purpose might ywin,
All was vengeance and infortune of sin.

But now the faith of Christ is come aplace 50
Emongis the princis in this yerth here,
It fitte 'hem well to doe pite and grace,
But yet it must be temprid in manere,
For that thei findin cause in the mattere,
Upon the point, what aftirward betide,
The lawe of right shall not be laied aside.

So maie a king of werrè the voyage
Ordain and take, as he thereto is holde,
To claime and aske his rightfull heritage,
In al placis whereas it is with olde,
But othirwise if God himselfe would

Affirmin love and pece bitwene the kinges,
Pece is the best above al erthely thinges.

Gode is to eschewe warre, and nathèles,
A king may makin werre upon his right,
For of bataile the final ende is pece,
Thus stant the lawè that a worthy knight
Upon his trowth may goin to the fight,
But if so werè that he mightin these,
Betit is pece, of which may no man lese. 70

To stere pece ought everyche one on lyve
First for to settin his liege lorde in rest,
And eke these othir men that they ne strive,
For so this lande may standin at best,
What king that woldè be the worthiest,
The more he might our dedly werris cese,
The more he shold his worthinesse encrese.

Pece is the chefe of al the world's weith,
And to the heven it ledith eke the way, 80
Pece is of soule and life the main's helth,
Of pestilence and doth the werre away,
My liegè lorde take hede of that I say,
If that werre may be leste, take pece on hande,
Whiche may not be withoutin Godd's sande.

With pece stant every creature in rest,
Withoutin pece there may no lyfe be gladdè,
Above al othir gode pece is the best,
Pece hath himself, whan werre is all bestadde,
The pece is safe, the werre is evir dradde, 90
Pece is of allè charite the kay,
Whiche hath the life and soule for to way.

My liegè lorde if that The lyst to seche
The soth ensamplis what the werre hath wrought,
Thou shalt wel herin of wise mennis speche,
That dedly werrè tournith into nought,
For if these old bokis be wel ysought,
There might thou se what thing that werre hath do
Both of conquest and conquerour also.

For vaine honour, or for the world's gode
They that whilom the strongè werris made, 100
Wher be they now, bethinke wel in thy mode,
The day is gone, the night is derke and fade,
Ther cruilte, whiche that made 'hem than glade,
They sorowen now, and yet have naught the more,
The blode is shad, which no man may restore.

The werre is mothir of the wrongis al,
It sleeth the priest in holy churche at masse,
Forlith the maide, and doth her flour to fal,
The werrè makith the grete cite lasse, 110
And dothe the lawe his rulis ovirpasse,
Ther is nothing, wherof mischefe may growe,
Whiche is not causid of the werre, I trowe.

The werre bringith in povirtie' at his heles,
Wherof the comin peple is fore greved,
The werre hath set his cart on thilkè wheles,
Where that fortune he may nat be beleved,
For whan men wenin best to have acheved,
Ful oftin it is al newe to begin,
The werre hath nothing sikir, tho he win.

60 Forthy, my worthy prince, in Christ's halve, 120
As for a parte whose faith thou hast be gide,
Ley

Ley to this oldè fore a newè salve,
And do the werre away, what so betide;
Purchacin pece, and set it by thy syde,
And suffre nat thy peple be devoured;
So shal thy name er aftir stand honoured.

If any man be nowe or evir was
Ayen the pece thy privy counsaillour,
Let God be of thy counsaile in this caas;
And put away the cruil warriour, 130
For God, whiche is of man the creatour,
He woldè not men slough his creature,
Withoutin cause of dedly forfaiture.

Where nedith most, behovith most to loke,
My lorde, howe so thy werris be without;
Of time ypassid who that hede ytoke,
Gode were at home to se right wel about,
For evirmore the worste is for to dout,
But if thou mightist parfite pece attaine, 140
There should ybe no causè for to plaine.

About a king gode counsaile is to preise,
Above al othir thinges most vailable,
But yet a king within himselfe shal peise,
And seen the thingis that ben resonable,
And therupon he shal his wittis stable,
Among the men to settin pece in evin,
For love of him whiche is the King of hevyn.

A! wel is him that ne shedde nevir blode,
But if it were in cause of rightwysenes,
For yf a kynge the peril undirstode, 150
What is to sle the peple, than I gesse,
The dedly werris and the hevines,
Wherof the pece distourbid is ful ofte,
Shuld at some timè cesse and wexin soft.

O kinge fulfillid of grace and knighthode,
Remembre upon this pointe for Christe's sake,
If pece be profered unto thy manhode,
Thine honour save, let it not be forsake,
Though thou the werris darst wel undirtake, 160
Aftir reson yet tempre thy courage,
For lyke to pece there is none avauntage.

My worthy lorde, thinke wel, howe so befall,
Of thilkè lore, as holy bokis faine,
Christ is the hed, and we be membris al,
As wel the subiecte as the soveraine,
So sitte it wel that charite be plaine,
Whiche unto God himselfe most accordeth,
So as the lore of Christ's worde recordeth.

In the olde lawe, or Christ himselfe was bore,
Amonge the x. commaundementes I rede, 170
Howe that manslaughter shoulde be forbore,
Soche was the wil that tyme of the Godhede,
But aftirward, whan Christ toke his manhede,
Pece ywas the first thing he let do crie,
Ayenst the world's rancour and envie.

And or Christ went out of this erthe here,
And stighed to heaven, he made his testament,
Where he bequath to his disciplis there,
And yave his pece, whiche is the foundement
Of charite, withoutin whose assent 180
The world's pece may nevir wel be tried,
Ne love be kept, ne lawe be justified.

The Jewis with the Painims haddin werre,
But they among 'hemselfe stode er in pece,
Why shoulidin than our pece stande out of erre,
Which Christ hath chose unto his owne encrese,

For Christ is more than ywas Moyfes,
And Christ hath sette the parfite of the lawe,
The whiche ne shoulde in no wise be withdrawe.

To yeve us pece was cause why Christ ydide, 190
Withoutin pece may nothing stonde availed,
But nowe a man may se on every side,
Howe Christ's faith is every day assailed,
With painims distroyid and so batailed,
That for defaute of helpe and of defence,
Unnethis hath Christ his dewe revèrence.

The right faith to kep'in of holy church
The first point is ynamid of knighthode,
And every man is holde for to worche
Upon the point that stante to his manhode, 200
But now alas! the fame is spred so brode,
That every man this thing complainith,
And yet is there no man that helpe ordainith.

The world's cause is waitid ovir al,
There be the werris redy to the ful,
But Christ's owne cause in special,
There ben the swerdis and the speris dul,
And with the sentence of the Pop's bul,
As for to done the folke paine obey,
The church is tournid al anothir wey. 210

It's wondir above any mann's wit
Withoutin werre how Christ's faith was won,
And we, that be upon this erthe yet,
Ne kepe it not as it was first begon,
To every creature undir the sonne
Christ bad himselfe that we shoulde preche,
And to the folke his Evangely teche.

More light it is to kepe than to make,
But that whiche we foundin made tofore honde
We kepe not, but let it lightly slake, 220
The pece of Christ hath al to broke his bonde,
We rest our selfe, and suffrin every lond
To sle eche othir, as thinge undefended,
So stant the werre, and pece is not amended.

But though the hed of holy church above
Ne doith not al his whole businessse
Amonge the peple to set pece and love,
These kingis oughtin of ther rightwysenesse
Ther owne cause among 'hemselfe redresse,
Tho Peter's ship as now hath lost his sterc, 230
It lythe in 'hem the barge for to sterc.

If that holy church aftir the dewte
Of Christ's worde ne be nat al avised,
To makin pece, accorde, and unite,
Amonge the kingis that be now devised
Yet natheles the lawe stand assised
Of mann's witte to be so resonable,
Withoutin that to stande himselfe stable.

Of holy church we ben the childrin al,
And every childe is holde for to bowe 240
Unto the mothir, how that er it fal,
Or ellis he must reson disalowe,
And for that cause a knight shall first avowe
The right of holy church for to defende,
That no man shal the privilege offende.

Thus were it gode to sette al in evyn,
The world's princis, and the prelats bothe,
For love of him whiche is the King of hevyn,
And if men shoulde algatis wexin wrothe,
The Sarazins, whiche unto Christ ben lothe; 250
Let

Let men be armid ayenst 'hem to fight,
So maye the knight his dede of armis right.

Upon iii. pointis stant Christ's pece oppressed,
First holy churchè in her selfe dividid,
Whiche ought of reson first to be redressed,
But yet so highe a cause is not defidid,
And thus whan humble pacience is pridid,
The remenaunt, whiche that they shuldin rule,
No wondir is though it stande out of rule.

Of that the hed is sicke the lymmis aken, 260
These reynis, that to Christ's pece belongen,
For world's is gode these dedly werris maken,
Whiche helpelisse, as in balaunce yhongen,
The hed above 'hem hath nat undirfongen
To set pece, but every man sleith other,
And in this wise hath charite no brother.

The two defautis bringin in the thirde,
Of myscreantes, that seen how we debate,
Betwene the two they fallin in amydde, 270
Where now al day they finde an opin gate;
Lo! thus the dedly werrè stant algate,
But evir I hope of king Henrie's grace,
That he it is which shal the pece embrace.

My worthy noble prince, and king anoynt,
Whom God hath of his gràcè so preserved,
Beholde and se the world upon this point,
As for thy part, that Christ's pece be served,
And so shal thy high medè be deserved,
To him, whiche al shal quite The at the laste,
For this life here ne may no while laste. 280

Se Alexandir, Hector, and Julius,
Se Machabeus, David, and Josue,
Se Charlemaine, and Godefray, and Arthus,
Fulfilled of werre, and of mortalyte,
Ther fame abytte, but al' is but vanite,
For deth, which hath the werris undir fore,
Hath made an ende, of which ther is no bote.

So many a man the soth wete and know,
That pece is gode for every kinge to have,
The fortune of the werre is er unknowe, 290
But wher pece is, ther is the marchis fave,
That now is up, to morow' is undir grave,
The myghtye God yhath al grace in hande,
Withoutin him men may not longe stande.

Of the tennis to winne or lese a chace
May no life wete or that the bal be ronne,
Al stant in God what thing men shal purchase,
Th' ende is in hym or that it be begonne,
Men faine the wolfe, when it is well ysponne,
Doth that the cloth is stronge and profitable, 300
And ellis it maye nevir be durable.

The world's chauncis upon avinture
Ben evir sette, but thilkè chaunce of pefe
Is so behovely to the créature,
That it is above al othir pereles,
But it may not begetin nathèles
Amonge the men to lastin any while,
But where the herte is plaine withoutin gile.

The pece is as it were a sacrament,
Tofore the God, and shal with wordis plaine, 310
Without any double entendement,
Be tretid, for the trouth ne can not faine,
But yf the men within 'hemselve ben vaine,
The substance of the pece may not be trewe,
But every day it chaungith upon newe.

But who that is of charite parfite,
He voidith allè sleightis ferre awaye,
And sette his worde upon the samè plyte
Where that his hert hath found a sikir waye,
And thus when conscience is trewly waye, 320
And that these ben yhandlid with the wise,
It shal abyde, and stande in allè wise.

The' Apostil saith, ther may no life be gode
Whiche is not groundid upon charite,
For charite ne shedde nevir blode,
So hath the werre as there no properte,
For thilkè vertue whiche is sayd pite,
With charite so ferforth is acquainted,
That in her may no false semblant be paynted.

Cassodore, whose writinge is authorised, 330
Saihte: where that pite reignith there is grace,
Thruugh which the pece hath al his welth assyfed,
So that of werre he dredith no manace,
Where pyte dwelith in the samè place
There may no dedly cruilte sojourne,
Wherof that mercy shoulde his wayè tourne.

To se what pyte forth with mercy doth,
The cronique is at Rome in thilke empire
Of Constantine, whiche is a tale sothe, 340
When him was levir his owne deth desire
Then do the yongè childrin to martire,
Of cruilte he lestin the quarele,
Pyte he wrought, and pyte was his hele.

For thilkè mann's pyte whiche he dede
God was pytous, and made him whole at al,
Silvester came, and in the samè stede
He yave him baptisme first in special,
Whiche did awaye the sinne original,
And al his lepre' it hath so purified,
That his pyte for er is magnified. 350

Pyte was the cause why this Emperour
Was whole in body and in soule bothe,
And Rome also was sette in thilke honour
Of Christ's faith, so that they leve or loth,
Whiche haddin be with Christ tofore wroth,
Recevid werin unto Christ's lore,
Thus shal pyte be praisid evirmore.

My worthy liegè lorde Henry by name,
Whiche Englande haste to governin and right, 360
Men oughtin wel thy pyte to proclame,
Whiche opinliche in al the world's fight
It shewith, with the helpe of God almight,
To yeve us pece, which long hath be debated
Wherof thy prife shal nevir be abated.

My lorde, in whom hath evir yet be founde
Pyte, withoutin spotte of violence,
Kepe thilkè pece alwayis within bounde,
Whiche God hath plantid in thy counscience,
So shal the cronique of thy pacience
Amonge the saintes be taken into memorie, 370
To the legende of perdurable glorie.

And to thin erthely prife, so as I can,
Whiche every man is holdin to commende,
I Gower, whiche am al thy liegè man,
This lettir to thine excellence I sende,
As I whiche evir unto my live's ende
Wol pray for the estate of thy persone,
In worshippè of thy sceptre and thy throne.

Not onely to my kinge of pece I write,
But to these othir princis Christin al, 380
That

That eche of 'hem his ownè herte endite,
And cese the werre or more mischese yfal,
Sette eke the rightful puppe upon his stall,
Kepe charite, and drawe pite to hande,
And maintaine lawe, and so the pece shall stande.

*Explicit carmen, de pacis commendatione, quod, ad
laudem & memoriam serenissimi principis domini regis Henrici quarti, suus humilis orator Johannes Gower com-posuit.*

*Electus Christi pie rex Henrice fuisti,
Qui bene venisti, cum propria regna petisti,
Tu mala vicistique bonis bona restituiisti,
Et populo tristi nova gaudia contibuiisti.
Et mihi spes lata, quod adhuc per te renovata
Succedent fata prisca probitate beata,
Est tibi nam grata gratia sponte data.
Henrici quarti primus regni fuit annus,
Quo mihi defecit visus ad acta mea.
Omnia tempus habent, finem natura ministrat,
Quem virtute sua frangere nemo potest.
Ultra posse nihil, quamvis mihi velle remanet,
Amplius ut scribam non mihi posse manet.
Dum potui scripsi, sed nunc quia curva senectus
Turbavit sensus, scripta relinquo scholis.
Scribat, qui veniet post me, discretior alter,
Ammodo namque manus & mea penna silent.
Hoc tamen in finem verborum quæso meorum
Prospera quod statuatur regna futura Deus.*

Explicit.

A faiyng of dan John.

Ther bethe foure thinges that makith man a fole,
Honour first puttith him into outrage,
And aldir next solitarie and fole,
The second is unweldy crokid age,
Women also bring men into dotage,
And mighty wine in many divers wise
Distemprin folke whiche ben yholdin wise.

Yet of the same.

THer ben foure thingis causing grete folye,
Honour first, and second unwildy age,
Women and wine I dare eke specify
Ymake wise men fallin into dotage,
Wherfore by counseil of Philosophers sage,
In gret honour lernith this rule of me,
With thine estate havith humilite.

Balade de bon conseil.

If it befall that God The list visite
With any tourment or adversite,
Thanke firste the Lorde, and tho thy selfe to quite
Upon sufferance and humilite
Founde thou thy quaril, what er that it be,
Make thy defence, and thou shalt have no losse,
The remembraunce of Christ and of his crosse.

Explicit.

Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale.

CHAUCER dreameth that he heareth the Cuckow and the Nightingale contend for Excellency in singing.

THE God of love, ah benedicite!
Howe mighty and howe gret a Lorde is he!
For he can makin of lowe hertis hie,
And of hye lowe, and lyke for to die,
And hardè hertis he can makin fre:

He can makin within a litil stounde
Of sickè folke whole, and freshe, and sounde,
And of the whole he can ymake feke,
He can ybindin and unbindin eke,
That he wol have yboundin or unbounde,

To tel his might my wit may not suffise,
For he can makin of wise folke ful nice,
For he may do al that he wol device,
And lithy folke to distroyin vice,
And proude hertis he can make agrise.

Shortly al that evir he wol he may,
Against him there dare no wight say naye,
For he can glad and greve whom him lykith,
And who that he wol he loweth or sikith,
And most his might he shedith er in May.

For every true gentle hertè fre,
That with him is or thinkith for to be,

Against May nowe shal have some sferinge,
Or to joye, or ellis to some mourning,
In no feson so moche, as thinkith me.

For whan that they may here the birdis singe,
And se the flouris and the levis springe,
That bringith into ther remembraunce,
A manir ese ymedlid with grevaunce,
And lusty thoughtis ful of grete longing;

And of that longing comith heviness,
And therof growth oft grete sikèness,
And for the lacke of that that they desire;
And thus in May ben hertis set on fire,
So that they brennin forth in gret distresse.

I speke this of feling trewily,
What? tho that I be olde and unlusty,
Yet I have felse of the sicknesse through May,
Bothe hote and cold, and axis every day,
How fore iwis there wote no wight but I.

I am so shakin with the fevirs white,
Of al this May ne slepe I but a lite,
And also it is not lyke unto me
That any hertè shouldin slepy be,

In

In whom that love his fry darte wol smite.

But as I lay this othir night waking
I thought howe lovirs had a tokining,
And amonge 'hem it was a commune tale,
That it were gode to here the Nightingale,
Moche rathir than the leude Cuckowe singe.

And than I thought anon as it was day
I woldè faine go somewhere to assay
If that I might a Nightingale yhere,
For yet had I none herde of al that yere,
And it was tho the thirde night of May.

And right anon as I the day aspidè,
No lengir would I in my bedde abide,
But unto a wodde that was me fast by
I went forthe my self alone boldily,
And helde the way downe by a broke side,

Tyl I came to a launde of white and grene,
So faire an one had I nevir in bene,
The grounde was grene, ypoudrid with daisye,
The flouris and the grevis alike hie,
Al grene and white was nothing ellis sene.

There fate I downe among the faire flouris,
And sawe the birdes trippe out of ther bowris,
There as they restid 'hem had al the night,
They were so joyful of the day's lyght,
They began of Maye for to done honouris.

They coudin wel that service al by rote,
And there was many a full lovely note,
Some songin loudè as they had yplained,
And some in othir manir voice yfained,
And some songin al out with the ful throte.

They proynid 'hem, and madin 'hem right gay,
And daunsidin, and leptin on the spray,
And evirmore were two and two in fere,
Right so as they had chosin 'hem to yere,
In Feverere on saint Valentine's day.

And the rivir whiche that I sat upon,
It madin soche a noisè, as it ron,
Accordaunt with the birdis armony,
Me thought that it was the best melody
Thar mightin ben yherde of any mon.

And for delyte, I ne wotte nevir howe,
I fel in soche a flombre and a swowe,
Nat al aslepe, ne fully awaking,
And in that swowe me thought I herdè singe,
The sory birde, I mene the leude Cuckowe.

And that was upon a tre right fast by,
But who was than evil apaide but I?
Now God (qð I) that dyid on the crois,
Yeve sorowe on The, and on thy leude vois,
Ful litil joye havè I now of thy crie.

And as I with the Cuckow thus gan chide,
I herdin in the nextè bush beside
A Nyghtingale so lustily ysinge,
That with her clere voice she madin ringe,
Ecchoing thorough al the grene wode wide.

Ah! gode swete Nightingale (qð I) then,
A litil haft thou ben to longè hen,
For here hath ben the leude sory Cuckow,
And songin songis rathir than haft thou,
I pray to God that evil fire her bren.

But now I wol you tel a wondre thing,
As longe as I ylay in that swouning
Me though I wist what that the birdis ment,
And what they fayd, and what was ther entent,
And ofther speche I had full gode knowing. 110

There herdin I the Nightingale ysay,
Now gode Cuckow goith some where awaye,
And let us that can singin dwellin here,
For every wight eschevith Thé to here,
Thy songis ben so elenge in gode fay.

What (qð she) what may The aylin as nowe?
It thinkith me, I singe as wel as thou,
For my songè is both true and eke plaine,
And though I can not crakil so in vaine
As thou dost in thy throte, I wot ner how. 120

And every wight may understandin me,
But, Nightingale, so may they not done The,
For thou hast many a nice queintè crie,
I have The herdè faine, ocy, ocy,
Howe might I knowin what that should ybe?

Ah fole (qð she) wost thou not what it is?
Whan that I say, ocy ocy ywys
Than menin I that I would wondre faine,
That al they werin shamfully yslaine,
That menin ought against love amis. 130

And also' I would that al tho had the dede,
That thinkin not in love ther life to lede.
For who so wol not the God of love serve,
I dare wel say he is worthy to sterve,
And for that skil, ocy ocy I grede.

Eye (qð the Cuckow) this is a queint lawe,
That every wight shal love or be to draw,
But I forfakin al soche company,
For myne entent ne is not for to die,
Ne ner while I live on love's yoke to draw. 140

For lovirs ben the folke that ben on lyve
That most difese yhave, and most unthrive,
And most endurin sorow, wo and care,
And that the left yfelin of welfare,
What nedith it ayenist trowth to strive?

What (qð she) thou art alle out of thy minde,
How might thou in thy churlinesse yfynde
To speke of lov'is servauntes in this wise?
For in this world is none so gode service,
To every wight that gentle is of kinde. 150

For therof truly comith al godenesse,
Therof al honour and al gentilesse,
Thereof worship, ese, and al hert'is lust,
And parfite joye, and ful assurid trust,
And jolytie, and plesauce and freshenesse.

And lowlyhed, largesse, and curtisye,
And semelyhed, and trew company,
And drede of shamè for to done amys,
For he that truly lov'is servaunt is
Were lothir to be shamid than to die. 160

And that thys is the sothe whiche that I sey,
In that beleve I wil bothe live and dey,
And, Cuckow, so I rede thou do ywys.
Than (qð he) let me nevir havin blisse,
Yf evir I to that counsaile obey.

Nyghtingale, thou yspekist wondre faire,
But for al that is the soth contrayre,

For love ne is in yongè folke but rage,
And is in oldè folke a grete dotage,
Who most it usith he most shal enpaire. 170

For therof commeth disese and hevynesse,
So sorow' and care and many' a grete sikeness,
Despise, debate, and angre, and envy,
Depraving, shame, untrust and jelousie,
Pride, mischefe, povertie and wodeness:

Loving is aye an office of dispaire,
And one thing is therin that is not faire,
For who that getteth of love a litil blisse,
But if he be alwaie therewith iwis,
He maie full sone of age yhave his haire. 180

And Nightingale therefore hold The nie,
For leve me well, for all thy queintè crie,
If thou be ferre or longè fro thy make,
Thou shalt be as othir that ben forsake,
And then thou shalt yhotin as do I.

Fie (qð she) on thy namè and on The,
The God of Love ne let The nevyr the,
For thou art worfe a thousandfolde than wode,
For many' one is full worthie and full gode,
That had be naught ne haddin love ibee. 190

For evirmore love his servauntes amendeth,
And from all evill tachis 'hem defendeth,
And makith 'hem to brenne right in a fire,
In trouthe and in worshipfull desire,
And when him likith, joy inough 'hem sendeth.

Thou Nightingale he sayid, be still,
For love have no reson, but it is will,
For oft tymis untrue folke he esith
And true folke so birtirly displeith,
That for defaute of courage he let' hem spill. 200

Then toke I of the Nightingale kepe,
How that she cast a sigh out of her depe,
And saied, alas that evir I was bore!
I can for tene not saie one wordè more,
And right with that worde she braist out to wepe.

Alas (qð she) my hertè woll to breke,
To herin thus this leudè birdè speke
Of love, and of his worshipfull service,
Now God of love, thou helpe me in some wise,
That I maie on this Cuckowe ben awreke. 210

Me thoughtin then that he sterre up anon,
And glad was I tho that he was agon,
And evirmore the Cuckowe as he flaie
Ysayid farewell, farewell Poppingaie,
As though he had yscornid me alone.

And then ycame the Nightingale to me,
And sayid, frende, forsoth I thankè The,
That thou hast likid me for to rescowe
And one avowe to love ymake I now,
That all this Maie I woll thy singir be. 220

I thankid her, and was right well apaied,
Ye (qð she) and ne be thou not dismaied,
Tho thou have herd the Cuckow erst than me,
For if I live it shall amendid be,
The nextè Maie, if I be not affraied.

And one thing I woll redin The also,
Ne leve thou not the Cuckow ne' his loves so,
For all that he hath saied is strong lesyng;
Naie (qð I) thereto shall nothing me bryng,

For love and it hath do me mochil wo. 230

Ye hath it? use (qð she) this medicine,
Every daie this Maie or that thou dine
Go lokin upon the freshe Daïsie,
And though thou be for woe in poinct to die,
That shall full gretly lessen The of thy pine:

And loke alwaie that thou be gode and true,
And I woll sing one of the songis newe,
For love of The, as loude as I maie crie,
And then she began this songè full hie,
I shrewe all 'hem that ben of love untrue. 240

And when she had ysong it to the ende,
Now farewell (qð she) for I motè wende,
And God of love, that can right well and may,
As mochil joyè sendè The this daie,
As any yet lovir he evir sende.

Thus taketh the Nightingale her leve of me,
I praie to God alwaie with her to be,
And joye of love he sende her evirmore,
And shilde us fro the Cuckowe and his lore,
For there is not so false a birde as he. 250

Forthe she yflewe the gentill Nightingale
To all the birdis that were in that dale
And gate 'hem all into a place in fere,
And besoughtin 'hem that they wouldin here,
Her disese, and thus she began her tale.

The Cuckowe, well it is not for to hide,
How the Cuckowe and I fast havin chide
Evir sithin that it ywas daie light,
I praie you all that ye doin me right
Of that foule and false and unkindè bride. 260

Then speke o birde for all by one assent,
This mattir askith gode avisement,
For we ben allè birdis here in fere,
And sothe it is, the Cuckowe is not here,
And therefore we woll have a parlyment.

And thereat shall the Egle be our Lorde,
And othir peris that ben of recorde,
And the Cuckowe shall be aftir ysent,
And there shall be yevin the judgèment,
Or els we shall finally make accorde. 270

And this shall be ydone withoutin naie
The morowe aftir sainct Valentine's daie,
Undir a Maple that is faire and grene,
Before the chambir windowe of the quene,
At Wodestocke upon the grenè laie.

She thankid 'hem, and then her levè toke,
And flew into an Hawthorne by that broke,
And there she fate and song upon that tre,
For terme of life love hath withholdè me,
So loudè, that I with that song awoke. 280

Explicit.

O Leudè boke with thy foule rudeness,
Sithe thou hast neithir beautie ne' eloquence,
Who hath The caused or yeve The hardiness
For to appere in my Ladie's presence,
I' am ful sikir thou knowest her benevo'lence,
Full agreable to all her abiyng,
For of all gode she is the best livyng.

Alas that thou ne haddist worthiness

To shewin to her some plesant sentence
 Sith that she hath thorough her gentillesse 290
 Acceptid The servaunt to' her digne reve'rence!
 O! me repentith that I ne' had science
 And leisir als, to make The more flourishyng,
 For of all gode she is the best livyng.

Beseche her mekely with all lowlinesse,
 Though that I be ferre from her in absence,
 To thinke on my trowth to' her and stedfastnesse,
 And to' abridge of my sorowes the violence,
 Which caused is, wherof knowith your sapience,

She like among to notifie me' her liking, 300
 For of all gode she is the best living.

L'envoye.

A Urore of gladnesse, daie of lustinesse,
 Lucerne anight with hevenlie influence
 Illumined, rote of beautie and godenesse,
 Suspiris, whiche I effunde in silence
 Of grace I beseche aledge let your writyng,
 Now of all gode sith ye be best livyng.

Explicit.

SCOGAN, unto the Lordes and Gentilmen of the Kinge's House

Here followeth a Moral Ballad to the Prince, to the D. of Clarence, the D. of Bedford, the D. of Glocester, the King's son, by Henry Scogan, at a Supper among the Merchants in the Vintry at London, in the House of Lewis John.

MY noble sonnes and eke my lordis dere,
 I your fathir callid unworthilie,
 Sende unto you this litil tretise here,
 Writtin with mine owne hand full rudilie,
 Although it be that I not reverentlie
 Have written to your estatiss, I you prairie
 Myne unconnyng takith benigne lie
 For Godd's sake, and herkin what I saie.

I complain fore when I remembre me
 The sodain age that is upon me fall,
 But more complain my mispent juventute
 The whiche is impossible' ayen to call,
 But certainly the moste complaint of all
 Is to thinkin that I have be so nice
 That I ne wouldin vertues to me call,
 In all my youth, but vices aie cherice.

Of whiche I aske mercie of The, Lorde,
 That art Almightye God in majestie,
 Besekeyng to make so evin accorde
 Betwixt The and my soule, that vanitie,
 Ne worldlie lust, ne blinde prosperitie
 Have no lordship ovir my fleshe to frele,
 Thou Lorde of reste and perfite unitie
 Put fro me vice, and kepe my soule in hele.

And yeve me might, while I have life and space,
 Me to confirme fully to thy plesauce,
 Shewe to me the abundaunce of thy grace,
 And in gode werkes graunt me perseveraunce,
 Of all my youth forget the ignoraunce,
 Yeve me gode will to serve The aie to queme, 30
 Set all my life after thyne ordinaunce,
 And able me to mercaie or thou deme.

My lordis dere, why I this complaint write
 To you whom that I love most entirely,
 Is for to warne you as I can endite
 That tyme losse in youthhed folily
 Grevith a wight bodily and ghostly,
 I mene hym that to luste and vice entende,
 Wherefore, lordis, I prairie you specially, 40

Your youth in vertue shapith to dispende. 40

Plantith the rote of youth in soche a wise,
 That in vertue your growyng be alwaie,
 Loke alwaie godenesse be your exercise,
 That shall you mightie make at eche assaie,
 The fende to withstandin at eche affraie,
 Passith wisely this perillous pilgrimage,
 Thinke on this worde, and werke it every daie,
 That shall you yeve a parfite flourid age.

Taketh also hede how that these noble clerkes
 Writin in ther bokes of grete sapience, 50
 Saiyng that faith is ded withoutin werkes,
 And right so is estate with negligence
 Of vertue, and therefore with diligence
 Shapith of vertue so to plante the rote
 That ye thereof have full experience,
 To worship of your life and soul's bote.

Taketh also hede that lordship ne estate
 Withoutin vertue maie not long endure,
 Thinketh eke how vice and vertue at debate
 Have ben and shal while that the worlde maie dure,
 And evir the vicious by avinture
 Is ovirthrowe, and thinkith evirmore
 That God is Lorde of all vertue', and figure
 Of all godenesse, therfore folowe his lore.

My maistr Chaucer, God his soule save,
 That in his langage was so curious,
 He said the fathir whiche is ded and grave
 Biqueth nothing his vertue with his hous
 To his childrin, and therefore labourous
 Ought ye to be, besekeyng God of grace 70
 To yeve you might for to be vertuous,
 Thro whiche ye mightin have parte of his place.

Here maie ye se that vertuous noblesse
 Cometh not to you by waie of auncestrie,
 But it comith by lesfull businesse
 Of honest life, and not by slogardrie,
 Wherefore in youth I rede you edifie

The

The house of vertue in soche a manere,
That in your age it maie you kepe and gie
Fro the tempest of world's wawis here.

Thinkith how betwixe vertue and estate
There is a parfite blessid Mariage,
Vertue is cause of pece, vice of debate,
In manne's soule, the which be full of corage,
Cherishith then vertue, vice to outrage,
Driveth it away, let it have no winning
In your soules lesith not the heritage,
Whiche God hath yere to vertuous livyng.

Take hede also how men of pore degre
Through vertue have be set in gret honour,
And evir lived in grete prosperitie,
Through cherishyng of vertuous labour,
Thinkith also how many a govirnour,
Callid to estate hath be set full lowe,
Through misfusing of right, and of errour,
Therefore I counsaile you vertue to know.

By your auncestirs ye maie nothing claime,
As that my maistir Chaucer saith expresse,
But tempo'ral thing, that men may hurt or maim;e;
Then is God stocke of vertuous noblesse,
And sithe that he is lorde of blissidnesse,
And made us all, and for us all ydeide,
Folowe' hym in vertue with full businesse,
And of this thing herke how my maistir seide:

The first stocke the fathir of gentilnesse,
What man that claimith gentill for to be,
Must folowe' his trace, and all his wittis dresse
Vertue to love, and vicis for to flie,
For unto vertue longith dignitie,
And not the revers safely dare I deme,
All were he mitre, croune, or diademe.

The firste stocke was full of rightwisenesse,
True of his worde, sobre, pitous, and fre,
Clene of his ghost, and lovid businesse,
Ayenst the vice of sloth in honeste,
And but his heire love vertue as did he,
He is not gentill though he richè seme,
All were he mitre, croune, or diademe.

Vicè maie be an heire to olde richesse,
But there maie no man, as all men maie se,
Biqueth his heire his vertuous noblesse,
That is appropriated unto no degre,
But to the first fathir of Majestie,
That maketh his heiris 'hem that can him queme,
All were he mitre, croune, or diademe.

Lo here this noble Poete of Bretaine,
How lightlie he in vertuous sentence
The losse on youth of vertue can complain!
Therefore I praie you with your diligence,
For your profite and Godd's reverence,
Tempirith fully vertue in your mynde,
That when ye come to your judg's presence,
Ye be not founde vertulesse then behinde.

Many lordes have a manir now adaies,
Though one shewe hym a vertuous matterc,
Ther fervent youth is of so false alaies,
That of that arte thei have no joye to here,
But as a ship that is without a stere,
Drivith up and down without govirnaunce,
Wenyng that calme would lastin yere by yere,
Right so fare thei for very ignoraunce.

For verie shame knowin thei not by reson,

That aftir an eb cometh a flode ful rage?
In the same wise when youth passith his seson,
Cometh crokid, and unweldie pallid age,
And sone after the Kalendes of dotage,
And if her youth have no vertue provided,
All men woll saie fie on ther vassalage,
Thug hath ther sloth fro worship 'hem divided.

Boccus, as men may rede and se,
Saith in his boke of Consolacion,
What man desirith of Vine or of tre,
Plentuous fruit in the repyng seson,
Must er escue to doe oppression
Unto the rote, while it is yong and grene;
Thus maie ye se well by that inclusion,
That youth vertulesse doith mochil tene.

Seeth there ayenst how vertuous noblenesse
Rotid in youth with gode parseveraunce
Drivith awaie all vice and wretchidnesse,
As slogardrie, and riote, and distaunce,
Seeth eke how vertue causith suffisaunce,
Seeth eke how vertue voidith allè vice,
And who so' hath vertue hath all habaudaunce
Of wele, as ferre as reson can devise.

Taketh hede of Tullius Hostilius,
That fro povertè came to high degre,
Through vertue, redith eke of Julius
The conquerour, how pore a man was he,
Yet through his vertue' and his humilite
Many countrey had he in govirnaunce;
Thus vertue bringeth a man to gret degre,
Eche wight that lust to do hym entendaunce.

Rede here ayenst of Nero vertules,
Takith hede also of proude Belthasare,
Thei hatid vertue, equitie and pese,
And loke how 'Antiochus fill fro his chare,
That he his skin and bonis all to tare,
Loke what mischaunce thei had for ther vicis,
Who so woll not by these signis beware,
I dare well saie infortunate and nice is.

I can no more now saie, hereby ye se
How vertue causith parfite sikirnesse,
And vicis exilen all prosperite,
The best is eche man to chose as I gesse,
Doeth as you list, I me excuse expresse,
I would be right forie if ye mischese,
God confirme you in vertuous noblesse,
So that through negligence ye not it lese.

Explicit.

Somtime the worlde so stedfast was and stable,
That manne's worde was an obligacioun,
And now it is so false and discevable,
That worde and dede as in conclusioun
Is nothyng like, for tourned is up so down
All the worlde, thorough mede and sikilnesse,
That all is losse for lacke of stedfastnesse.

What maketh the worlde to be so variable
But lust that men have in discension?
For among us a man is holde unable,
But if he can by some collusion
Doe his neighbour wrong and oppression:
What causith this but wilfull wretchidnesse?
That all is losse for lacke of stedfastnesse.

Trouthe is put doune, reson is holde fable,
Vertue hath now no dominacion,
Pitie 'is exiled, no man is merciable,

Through

Through covetise is blente discrecion,
The worlde hath made a permutacion
Fro right to wrong, fro trouthe to fikelnesse, 210
That all is losse for lacke of stedfastnesse.

L' envoie.

Prince aye desire to be honourable,
Cherishe thy folke, and hate extorcion,
Suffre nothyng that maie be reprovable
To thine estate doeh in thy region,
Shewe forthe the yerde of castigation,
Drede God, do law, love treuth and worthines,
And wedde thy folke ayen to stedfastnesse.

Explicit.

Gode counsaile of Chaucer.

FLie fro the prese and dwell with sothfastnesse,
Suffise unto thy gode though it be small, 220

For horde hath hate, and climbyng tikilnesse,
Prece hath envie, and wele it brent oer all,
Savour no more then The behovin shall,
Rede well thy self, that othir folke canst rede,
And trouthe The shall delivir it 'is no drede.

Painè The not eche crokid to redresse,
In trust of her that tournith as a balle,
Grete rest standith in litil businesse,
Beware also to spurne again a nalle,
Strive not as doith a crocke with a walle,
Demith thy self that demist othir's dede,
And trouthe The shall deliver it 'is no drede.

That The is sent receive in buxomenesse;
The wraстыng of this worlde askith a fall;
Here is no home, here is but wildirnesse,
Forthe pilgrim, forthe o best out of thy stall,
Loke up on high, and thanke thy God of all,
Weivith thy luste and let thy ghoft The lede,
And trouthe The shall delivir, it 'is no drede.

Explicit.

Balade of the village without paintyng.

Plaintife to Fortune.

THis wretchid world 'is transmutacion
As wele and wo, nowe pore, and now honour,
Without ordir or due discrecion
Govirnid is by fortun's errour,
But nathelless the lacke of her favour
Ne maie not doe me syng though that I die,
J'ay tout perdu, mon temps & mon labour
For finally fortune I doe desie.

Yet is me left the sight of my resoun
To knowin frende fro foe in thy mirrour, 10
So moche hath yet thy tournyng up and down,
Itaughtin me to knowin in an hour,
But truily no force of thy reddour
To hym that ovir hymself hath maistrice,
My suffisaunce yshal be my succour,
For finally fortune I do desie.

O Socrates, thou stedfast champion,
She ne might nevir be thy turmentour,
Thou nevir dreddist her oppression, 20
Ne in her chere foundin thou no favour,
Thou knewe wele the disceipt of her colour,
And that her moste worship is for to lie,
I knowe her eke a false dissimulour,
For finally fortune I do desie:

The answere of Fortune.

No man is wretchid but hymself it wene,
He that yhath hymself hath suffisaunce,
Why saiest thou then I am to The so kene,
That hast thy self out of my govirnaunce?
Saie thus graunt mercie of thin habundaunce,
That thou hast lent or this, thou shalt not strive,
What wost thou yet how I The woll avaunce?
And eke thou hast thy bestè frende alive.

I have The taught divison betwene
Frende of effeste, and frende of countinaunce,
The nedith not the galle of an Hine,
That curith eyin derke for ther penaunce,
Now seest thou clere that wer in ignoraunce,
Yet holt thine anker, and thou maiest arive
There bountie bereth the key of my substaunce,
And eke thou haste thy bestè frende alive. 40

How many have I refused to sustene,
Sith I have The soltrid in thy plesaunce?
Wolt thou then make a statute on thy quene,
That I shall be aie at thine ordinaunce?
Thou born art in my reign of variaunce,
About the whele with othir must thou drive
My lote is bet, then wicke is thy grevaunce,
And eke thou hast thy bestè frende alive.

The answere to Fortune.

Thy lore I dampne, it is adversitie,
My frend maist thou not revin blind goddesse, 50
That I thy frendis knowe I thanke it The,
Take 'hem again, let 'hem go lie a presse,
The nigardis in kepyng ther richesse
Pronostike is thou wolt ther toure assaile,
Wicke appetite cometh aie before sickenesse,
In generail this rule ne maie not faile.

Fortune.

Thou pinchist at my mutabilitie,
For I The lent a droppe of my richesse,
And now me likith to withdrawin me, 60
Why shouldist thou my roialtie oppresse?
The Se maie ebbe and flowin more and lesse,
The welkin hath might to shine, rain, and haile,
Right so must I kithin my brotilnesse,
In generail this rule ne maie not faile.

The

The Plaintiffe.

Lo, the' execucion of the majestie,
That all purveighith of his rightwisenesse,
That same thyng fortune yclepin ye,
Ye blindè bestis full of leudenes!
The heven hath propirtie of sikirnes,
This worlde hath evir restlesse travaille,
The last daie is the ende of myne entresse,
In generall this rule ne maie not faile.

Th' envoye of Fortune.

Princes I prairie you of your gentillesse,
Let not this man and me thus crie and plain,
And I shall quitin you this businesse,
And if ye liste releve hym of his pain,
Praie ye his best frende of his noblenesse
That to some bettir state he maie attain.

L'envoye.

TO brokin ben the statutes hie in heven,
That create were eternally t' endure,
Sith that I se the brighte Goddis seven
Mowe wepe and waile and passion endure,
As maie in yerth a mortall creature,
Alas fro whenis maie this thyng procede
Of whiche errour I die almofte for drede!

By words eterne whilom was it yshape,
That fro the fift circle in no manere
Ne might of teris nothing doune escape,
But now so wepith Venus in her sphere,
That with her teris she woll drench us here,
Alas Scogan! this is for thine offence,
Thou causist this deluge of pestilence.

Hast thou not saied in blasfeme of the goddis,
Through pride, or thorough thy gret rekilnes,
Soche thinges as in the law of love forboide is,
That for thy ladie sawe not thy distresse?
Therefore thou yave her up at Mighelmesse?
Alas Scogan! of oldè folke ne yong
Was nevir erst Scogan blamed for his tong.

Thou drewe in scorne Cupide eke to recorde
Of thilke rebell worde that thou hast spoken,
For whiche he wol no lengir be thy Lorde,
And Scogan, though his bowe be not ybroken,
He woll not with his arowes be iwroken,
On thee ne me, ne none of our figure,
We shall of hym have neithir hurte ne cure.

Now certis frende, I drede of thine unhappe,
Lest for thy gilte the wreche of love procede
On all 'hem that ben bore and round of shap,
That be so likely folke for to spede,
Then we shall of our labour have our mede,
But well I wot thou wolt answere and saie,
Lo oldè Grisill list to renne and plaie.

Naie Scogan saie not so, for I me' excuse,
God helpe me so in no rime doutiles
Ne thinke I nevir of slepe wake my muse,
That rustith in my steth still and in pese,
While I was yong I put her forthe in prese,
But al shall passin that men prose or rime,
That every man his tourne as for his tyme.

Scogan, thou knelist at the strem's hedde
Of grace, of honour, and of worthinesse,
In the ende of whiche I am dull as dedde,
Forgotten in solitarie wildirnesse,

Yet Scogan thinke on Tullius kindenesse,
Mynd thy frende there it maie fructifie,
Farwell, and loke thou ner est love desie.

Explicit.

GO forthe kyng, and rule The by Sapience;
Bishoppe, be able to ministir doctrine,
Lorde to true counsaie yeve thou audience, 130
Womanhode, to chastitie er encline,
Knight let thy dedis worship determine,
Be rightous, Judge, in favyng of thy name,
Rich, do almofte, lest thou lese blisse with shame.

Peple obei your kyng and eke the lawe,
Age, be rulid by gode religion,
True servaunt, be dredfull kepe the' undir awe,
And thou povir, sic on presumption,
Inobedience to youth is uttir destruccion,
Remembir you how God hath set you, lo! 140
And doe your parte as ye be ordained to.

80
Chaucer to his emptie purse.

TO you my purse and to none othir wight
Complain I, for ye be my ladie dere,
I am forie now that ye be so light,
For certis ye now make me hevie chere,
Me were as lese be laide upon a bere,
For whiche unto your mercy thus I crie,
Be hevy againe, or els mote I die.

Nowe vouchsafin this day or it be night
That I of you the blisful sowne may here, 150
Or se your colour lyke the sonne bright,
That of yelownesse ne had nevir pere,
Ye be my life, ye be my hert's flere,
Quene of comfort, and of gode companye,
Be hevy againe, or els mote I die.

Nowe purse, that art to me my lyv's light,
And favyour, as downe in this worde here,
Out of this towne helpe me by your might,
Sithin that you wol not be my tresoure,
For I am shawe as nighe as any frere, 160
But I prayin unto your curtisye,
Be hevy againe, or els mote I die.

Explicit.

Chaucer unto the kinge.

O conquereour of Brut's Albion,
Whiche that by lyne and fre eleccion
Ben very kinge this unto you I sende,
And ye whiche that may al harmis amende
Have minde upon my supplication.

Explicit.

A Balade of gode counsaile translated out of latin verses into Englihe, by dan Ihon Lidgat cleped the monke of Burie.

COnfydir well every circumstance,
Of what estate soever thou ybe,
Or riche, or stronge, or mighty' of puissaunce,
Prudent or wyle, or discret, or bely,
The dome of folkes in soth thou may nat flie,
What evir thou doist trustith wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

For in thy porte, or in thine appaile
If thou be cladde and honestly be saine,
Anone the peple' of malice wol not faile
Without advice or reson for to saine,
That thin array is made or wrought in vain,
Suffre 'hem speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Thou wil to kingis be equipolent,
With grete lordis evin and peregal;
And if thou be to tome and al to rent,
Than wol they say, and jangle ovr al,
Thou art a slogarde that never thrive shal,
Suffre 'hem speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If it befallin that thou take a wife,
They wollin falsly say in ther entent,
Thou art likely evir to lyve in strife,
Voide of al rest, without aledgement,
Wivis ben maistris, this is ther judgement,
Suffrin al ther speche, and trust right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If thou be faire and exce'llent of beaute,
Yet wol they say that thou art amorous,
If thou be foule and ugie on to se,
They wol affirme that thou art vicious,
The peple' of langage is so dispitous,
Suffre al ther speche, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If so be that of holic parfitenesse
Thou hast vowid to live in chastite,
Than wollin folke of thy persone expresse,
Thou 'art impotent t' engendre' in thy degre,
And thus wher thou be chaste or deslavia,
Suffre 'hem speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If thou be fatter, othir corpulent,
Than woll thei say thou art a grete gloton,
A devourir, or ellis vinolent,
Yf thou be lene or megre of fashion,
Cal The a nygarde in ther opinion,
Suffre them speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If thou be richè, some wol yeve The laude
And say it cometh of prudent govinaunce,
And some wol sain that it comith of fraude,
Othir by sleight, or false chevisaunce,
To what the worst folke have so gret plesaunce,
What? suffre 'hem say, and trust right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

If thou be sadde or sobre' of countinaunce,
Men wollin sayn thou thinkist some trefon,
And if that thou be gladde of daliaunce,
Men wollin deme it desolucion,
And callin faire speche adulacion,
Yet let him speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Who that is holy by perfeccion,
Men of malice wol clip him ypocrite,
And who is mery' of clene entencion
Men sain in riot he doth hym delite,
Some mourne in black, some lovin clothis white,
Suffre men speke, and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Honest araie men deme it pompe and pride,
And who goeth pore, men cal him a wastir,

And who goeth stil men marke him on the syde,
Seine that he is a spie or agilir,
Who wastith not men sain he hath trefoure,
Wherof conclude and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Who spekith moche men clepith him prudent,
Who that debateth, men sain that he' is hardie,
And who saith litil with grete sentement,
Some folke yet wollin wite him of folie,
Trowth is put downe, and up goth flattiry,
And who list plainly knowe the cause of this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

For though a man ywere as pacient,
As was David throw his humilite,
Or with Salomon in wifdome as prudent,
Or in knighthode egale with Josue,
Or manly proved, as Judas Machabe,
Yet for al that ytrustith right wel this
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

And though a man yhad the grete prowesse
Of worthy Hector, Troy's champion,
The love of Troilus, or the kindnesse,
Or of Cesar the famous high renoun,
With al Alexandir's dominacioun,
Yet for al that ytrustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Or thoughe a man of highe or lowe degre
Of Tullius had the fugrid eloquence,
Or of Seneca the moralite,
Or of Caton the foright and providence,
Conquest of Charles, Arrures magnificence,
Yet for al that ytrustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Touchyng women the parfit innocence
Thoughe that they had, of Ffester the nobleste,
Or of Grisilde the humble pacience,
Or of Judith the previd stabillnesse,
Or Polixene's virginal clennessse,
Yet dare I seine, and trustith right wel this,
Some wickid tonge wol deme of them amis.

The wisely trowthè of Penelope,
Though they it had in ther possession,
Helene's beaute, the kindnesse of Medee,
The love unfained of Martia Caton,
Or Alceste's most trewe affection,
Yet dare I sain and trustith right wel this,
A wickid tonge wol alway deme amis.

Than sevith it that no man maye eschewe
The swerde of tonges, but it wil kerve and bite,
Ful harde it is a man for to remewe,
Out of ther daungir him for to acquite,
Wo to the tongis that 'hem selfe delite
To hinder or sleaunders, and set their study' in this,
And ther plesaunce to deme alway amis,

Moste noble princis, cherishers of vertue,
Remembrith you of high discrecion,
The first vertue moste plesing to Jesu,
(By the writing and sentence of Caton)
Is a gode tonge in his opinion,
Chastice the reverse of wifdome do this
Voideth your heringe from al that deme amis.

A b

A Balade in the praise and commendation of Maister Geffray Chaucer, for his golden eloquence.

MAistir Geffray Chaucer that now lithe in grave,
The noble Rhetoricien, and Poet of Grete
Bretaine,

Worthy was the laurir of Poetry to' have,
For this his labour, and the palme to' atteine,
Whiche first ymade for to distil, and reine,
The gold dewe dropes, of speche and eloquence
Into English tong, through his excellence.

Explicit.

Here foloweth certaine Workes of GEFFRAY CHAUCER, whiche hath not heretofore been printed, and are gathered and added to this Book by JHON
STOWE, Anno 1561.

A Balade made by Chaucer, teching what is gentilnes, or who is worthy to be caled gentil.

THE firste stocke fathir of gentilnes,
What man desirith gentill for to be,
Must folowe' his trace, and all his wittis dres
Vertue to love, and vicis for to fle,
For unto vertue longith dignite,
And not the revers safly dare I deme,
Al were he mitir, crowne or diademe.

This firste stocke was full of rightwisnes,
Trewe of his worde, sobir, pitous, and fre, 150
Clene of his goste, and lovid besinesse,
Against the vice of slooth, in honeste,
And but his eyre love vertue as did he,
He is not gentyl though he richè seme,
All were he mitir, crowne or diademe.

Vicè may wel be eyre to olde richesse,
But ther may no man, as men may well se,
Byquette his eire his vertuous noblesse,
That is appropriated unto no degre,
But to the first fathir in majeste, 160
That makith his eyre him that can him queme,
Al were he mitir, crowne or diademe.

Explicit.

A Proverbe agaynst Covetise and Negligence.

WHat shal thes clothes thus manifolde
Lo this hote somirs daye!
Aftir grete hère comith colde,
No man caste his pilche awaye;
Of al this world the large compasse
Wil not in myne armes tweine,
Who so mokil wol embrace. 170
Lite therof shall distreine.

Explicit.

A Balade whiche Chaucer made against women
unconstaunt.

MAdame, ye have for your newfanglenesse
Many a servaunt put out of your grace
I take my leve of your unstedfastnesse,
For well I wote, while ye to live have space,

Ye can not love full halfe yere in a place,
To new thingis, your luste is evere kene,
In stede of blew, thus may ye were al grene.

Ryght as a mirour that nothing may' enpresse,
But lightli as it cometh, so mote it passe,
So fareth your love, your workis bereth witnes, 180
Ther is no faithè may youre herte embrace,
But as a weðircock, that turneth his face
With every windè, ye fare, and that is sene,
In sted of blew thus may ye were al grene.

Ye might be shrinid for your brotilnesse
Bettir than Dalila, Cresseide, or Candace,
For ever in chaunging stondeth your sikirnesse,
That tatche may no wight strom your hert arace,
If ye lose one, ye can wel tweine purchase,
Allight for somar, ye' wot wel what I mene, 190
In stede of blewe thus may ye were al grene.

Explicit.

Here foloweth a Balade whiche Chaucer made in the praise, or rather dispreise, of Women for ther doublenes.

THis world is full of variaunce
In evere thinge who takith hede,
That faithè and truste, and all constauce
Exilid ben, this is no drede,
And save only in womanhed,
I can yse no sikirnes,
But for al that yet, as I rede,
Beware alwaye of doublenes.

Al so that the freshe somir floures,
The white and rede, the blewe and grene,
Ben sodenly with wintir shours 200
Made feinte and fade, withoutin wene,
That trust is none, as ye may sene,
In no thing, nor no stedfastenes,
Except in women, thus I mene,
Yet aye beware of doublenes.

The crokid Mone, this is no tale,
Some while ishene, and bright of hewe,
And aftir that, ful derke and pale,
And every monith, chaungith newe,
That who the veray sothè knew 210
Al thinge is bilt on broklenes,
Save that women alwaye be trewe,
Yet aye beware of doublenes.

The

The lusty freshe sommits daye,
And Phœbus, with his bemis clere,
Towardis night they drawe awaye,
And non lengir list to appere,
That in this presente life now here
Nothinge abieth in his fairenes,
Save women aye be found intere,
And devoide of alle doublenes.

The Se eke with his sternè wawes,
Eche daye yflowith new againe,
And by the concours of his lawes
The ebbe yflowith in certeine,
Aftir grete drought there cometh a raine,
That farewell here al stablilnes,
Save that women be whole and pleine,
Yet aye beware of doublenes.

Fortune's whele goith round aboute
A thousand timis daye and nighte,
Whose cours standith evir in doute
For to transmew, she is so lighte,
For whiche advertith in your fight
The' untrust of worldely sikilnes
Save women, whiche of kindly right
Ne hath no teche of doublenes.

What man ymay the wind restreine,
Or holdin a snake by the taile,
Who may a slippir elle constreine
That it will voide, withoutin faile,
Or who can drivin so a naile
To make suere newfongilnes,
Save women that can gie ther faile
To row ther bote with doublenes.

At every haven they can arive
Wher as they wote, is gode passage,
Of innocence they can not strive
With wawis, nor no rockis rage,
So happy is ther lodemanage,
With nedle' and stone ther cours to dresse,
That Salomon was not so sage
To finde in them no doublenes.

Therefore who so doth them accuse
Of any double entencion,
To speke rowne, othir to muse,
To pinch at ther condicion,
All is but false collusion,
I dare right wel the sothe expresse,
They have no bettir protection
But shroud them undir doublenes.

So wel fortunid is ther chaunce,
The dice to turnin uppe so doune,
With sife and sincke they can avaunce,
And than, by revolucioun,
They set a fel conclusioun
Of lombis, as in sothefastnes,
Though clerkis makin mencionioun
Ther kinde is fret with doublenes.

Sampson yhad experience
That women were ful trew ifound,
Whan Dalila, of innocence
With sferis gan his here to round,
To speke also of Rosamonde,
And Cleopatri's feithfulnes,
The stories plainly wil confounde
Men that apeche ther doublenes.

Single thinge ne is not ypraised,
Nor of olde is of no renoun,

In balance whan they be ypeised,
For lacke of waighe they be bore doune,
And for this caule of juste resoun
These women al of rightwisenes
Of chois and fre electioun
Most love eschaunge and doublenes.

L'envoye.

O Ye women whiche ben enclined
By influence of your nature
To ben as pure as golde yfined,
And in your trowth for to endure,
Armith your selfe in strong armure,
Lest men assaile your sikirnes,
Set on your brest, your self to' assure,
A mightie shelde of doublenes.

Explicit.

This Worke folowinge was compiled by
Chaucer, and is caled the Craft of Lovers.

Moral is a symylytude, who list ther balades
sewe,
The craft of lovirs curious arguments,
For som bin false and som ben foundin trewe,
And som bin double of entendements,
Thus lovirs with ther moral documents,
And elo'quent langage can examplifie
The craft of love what it doth signifie.

Who list unto this Balades have inspeccion,
Thinke that lov'is lordshipis excellent
Is remedy for disefe and correccion
To woful herte and body impotente,
Suppose the maker that he be negligent
In his compilinge, holde him excusable,
Because his spi'rites be sory' and lamentable.

Soverain lady, surmounting your nobles,
O' intenuate Jenipre' and daifi delicious,
My trust, mine helth, my cordial foundresse,
O medi'cine sanatife to sores lango'rous,
Comfortable cature of lovirs amo'rous,
O' excellent herbir of loveli countinaunce,
Registir my love in your remembraunce.

Certis, sir, your ypeintid eloquence,
So gay, so freshe, and eke so talcatife,
It doth transcende the wit of dame Prudence,
For to declare your thought, or to discrive
So gloriously glad langage ye contrive,
Of your conseite, your thought and your entente
I wil be ware for drede or I be shent.

O rubi'cunde Rose, and white as the lyly,
Clari'fied Christal of worldly portraiture,
O Courfin figure, resplendent with glory,
Geme of beaute', o Carbounle shining pure,
Your fairnes exceedeth the craft of nature,
Most womanli your lovely countinaunce,
Registir my love in your remembraunce.

What availeth, sir, your proclamacion
Of curious talking, not touching sadnes,
It is but winde, flatering and adulation,
Imesurable thought of worldly wildnes,
Whiche is chief cause of gostly feblenes;

Your

Your wil, your thought, your double entendement
I wil beware of drede, or I be shent.

My witte, my thought, and myne entencion,
Is for to plesse you my lady soveraine,
And for your love throw many a region
I would be' exiled, so ye wold not disdein 340
To have pity on me, when I compleine,
In wele and wo to suffre perturbaunce,
So that ye wol have me in remembraunce.

What is your wil plainly ye doe expresse,
That maketh this curious supplicacion,
Sey on fir on hertely tendirnesse,
Beth wel advised of veine delectacion,
At beginning think on the terminacion,
Passe not your boundes, be not to negligente,
And er beware for dred or ye be shente. 350

Your behaving, beaute, and countinaunce,
Maketh me encline to do you reverence,
Your lovely loking, glorious govirnaunce,
Oercometh my spirites, my wit, and prudence,
Some drop of grace, of your magnificence
Unto your servaunt ye shewe attendaunce
And register my love in your remembraunce.

O comberous thought of manne's fragilite,
O fervente wil of lustis furious,
O cruel corage causinge adversite, 360
Of women corrupcion, and contrariouse,
Remembir man that chaunge is perilous,
To breke the' virginite of virgines innocente,
Wherefore beware mankind or thou be shent.

My peine is prevy' impossible to' deferne,
My lamentabel thoughtes by casting mourninge,
O general Juge Jesu sitting superne,
Graciously converte the love of my swete thing,
O' amiable lady gracious and benigne,
I put me wholly in your govirnaunce, 370
Exile me not out of your remembraunce.

Me semeth by langage ye be some potestate,
Or els som curious glosir discevable,
What is your name mekely I make regrate,
Or of what science or craft commendable,
I' am a lady' excellent, and honorable,
He must be gay that should be to' min entente,
Wherefore I wil be ware or I be shent.

Lorde God, this is a sharpe examinacion
Of her that is most in my memorie, 380
Unto you lady' I make certification,
My name' is trew love of carnal desidery,
Of manne's copulacion the verye exemplary,
Which am one of your servauntes of plesaunce,
I must be chese callid to remembraunce.

I have fought true love of yeres gret proces,
Yet fond I never love but for a seson,
Some men be diverse, know no gentilnes,
And some lackin both wisdom and reson, 390
In som men is trust in som men is treson,
Wherefore I wil conclude by avysemente,
And er beware for drede that I be shente.

The retour Tullius gay of eloquence,
And Ovide that sheweth craft of love expres,
With habundaunce of Salomon's prudence,
And pulcritude of Absalon's fairenesse,
And I wer possess'd with Job's grette richesse,
Manly' as Sampson my persone to avaunce,
Yet shuld I submit me' in your remembraunce.

Now sir yf that it plesse your nobilnesse 400
To gyve advertence to my question,
What thinge is the plesure of swetnesse,
And most bittir in final successioun?
Or what thing gevith man occasion,
In tendir age to be concupiscent?
Resolve this question or drede sir ye' be shent.

My soveraigne lady', Ovide in his writinge
Saith desire of worldly concupiscent
As for a time is swete in his worching,
And in his ende he causith grette offence, 410
Notwithstandinge my lady dame Prudence,
Grene flowring age and manly countinaunce
Causith ladies to have' it in remembraunce.

Your godely answir, so notable' in substaunce,
Wold cause the hert of womanhede converte,
Unto delyte of natural plesaunce,
But of one thing I wold faine be experte,
Why menne's langage wol procure and transverte
The wil of women and virgines innocente, 420
Wherefore I am aferd or I be shente.

Let never the love of true love be losed,
My soveraigne lady, in no manir wise,
In your confidence my wordes I have closed,
My' amyable love to you I doe promise,
So that ye knit the knot of exercyse,
Both locke and key ye have in govirnaunce,
Emprint my love in your remembraunce.

Of very trust and I were certified,
The plain entencion of your herte's cordial, 430
Me semeth in blisse than were I glorified,
Unto your plesure I would be' at your call,
But er I fere of chauncis casual,
Of fraude, disceipte, and langage insolente,
Then were I sure maidined shoud be shent.

Ther was ner tresour' of terrestiall richesse,
Nor precious stones rekened innumerabell,
To be' of comparison to your high godenes,
Above al cretures to' me most amiable,
Trust not the contrary' I was ner discevable, 440
Kepe wel true love, forge no dissemblaunce,
And graciously take me to' your remembraunce.

Me semeth by feiture of manly properte
Ye shuld be trusty' and trewe of comprimis,
I finde in you no false duplicite,
Wherefore, true love, ye have my hert I wis,
And ermore shal endure, so have I blis,
The fede'rasy made with gode avisement,
God graunt grace that nothir of us be shent.

Whan Phoebus freshe was in his chare splendente 450
In the moneth of Maye erly in a morninge,
I herd two lovirs profir this argu'mente,
In the yere of our Lorde a M. by rekening,
CCCXL. and VII. yere folowing.
O potent princeesse, conserve true lovers al,
Graunt them thy region and blisse celestial.
Explicit the craft of lovers.

A Balade.

O F ther nature they gretly them delite,
With holy face yfeinid for the nones,
In saintwarie ther frendis to visite,

More for reliquis than for faintis bones, 460
 Though they be clofid undir precious stones
 To gete them pardon, lyke ther olde ufages,
 To kisse no shrines, but lusty quike images.

Whan maidens ar wedded and houshold have take,
 Al ther humility' is exiled awaye,
 And the' cruil hertes begynnith to awake,
 They do' al the besy cure they can or maye
 To vex ther housholdes-maistirs soth to saye,
 Wherefore ye yong men I rede you forthy
 Beware alwaye, the blinde eteth many flye. 470

Of this matir I dare make no relation,
 In defeaute of slepe my spirites wex fainte,
 In my studie I' have had long habitacion,
 My body' and goft are greuously attaint,
 And therefore I make no lengir complaint,
 But whethir that the blind ete flesh or fish,
 I pray God kepe the fly out of my dishe.

Now' I make an ende, and laie me doun to rest,
 For I knowe by experience veramente,
 If maidinis and wivis knewe and wist 480
 Who made the mattir, he should sone be shent,
 Wherefore I praie that God omnipotent
 Hym save and kepin bothe night and daie;
 Written in the lustie selson of Maie.

Explicit.

The X. Commaundementes of Love.

Certis ferre extendith yet my reson
 This matir as it should be to discrive,
 But I truste your grace will in this selson,
 Confidir howe with conyng that I strive,
 For in his favour coud I ner arrive,
 Eloquence this Balade hath in grete dispite, 490
 The makir lackith manir to endite.

Of Love's commaundementes x. is the nomber,
 As aftirward shall rudely be reherfed,
 And lovirs in no wise departe afunder,
 Where as thei be observid and redressed,
 Daungir and unkindnes yben oppressed,
 And he that is commaundid this to make
 Is your owne all othir for to forsake.

Faith.

Faith is the first and principally to tell,
 And verie love requirith soche credence, 500
 That eche beleve othir true as the Gospel,
 Without adulacion or flatteryng audience,
 In true menyng and trustie confidence.
 Paint not your connyng with colour ne fable,
 For then your love mult nedis be unstable.

Entencion.

In the seconde to trete of Entencion,
 Your lovir to plesse doe your busie cure,
 For as myn auethor Romance maketh mencion,
 Without entent your love maie not endure,
 As women will thereof I am right sure 510
 Endeavour with ther hertè, will, and thought
 To plesse hym onely that ther love hath sought.

Discrecion.

In your delyng evir ybe discrete,
 Set not your love there as it shall be losed,
 Advertise in your minde whether he be mete,
 That unto hym your herte maie be disclosed,
 And aftir as you finde hym then disposed
 Poinct by discrecion your hour, time, and place,
 Conveniently metyng with armes to' embrace.

Pacience.

Of these commaundementes, the iiiii. is pacience, 520
 Though by' irous corage your lovir be meved,
 With soft wordis and humble obedience
 His wrathe maie sone be swagid and releved;
 And thus his love obtainid and acheved
 Will in you rote, with gretir diligence,
 Bicause of your meke womanly pacience.

Secretnesse.

Secretlie behave you in your werkis,
 In shewing countenance or mevyng your eye,
 Though soche behavior to some folk be derke,
 He that hath lovid will it sone aspie, 530
 Thus you your self your counsaill maie descrie,
 Make privy to your delyng few' as ye maie,
 For iii. may kepe a counsel if twain be awaie.

Prudence.

Let prudence governe aye your bridil reine,
 Set not your love in so fervent a wise
 But that in godely hast ye may refreine,
 If that your lovirs list you to dispise,
 Romaunce min auctour wold you this advise,
 Ty slacke your love, for if ye doe not so,
 That wanton list will tourne you into wo. 540

Perseveraunce.

Stablishe your love in so stedfast a wise,
 If that ye thinke your lovir will be true,
 As entirely, as ere you can devise,
 Love hym onely, and refuse allè newe,
 Then shall not your worship ychaunge his hew,
 For certis, maistris, then is he to blame,
 But if that he will quite you with the same.

Pitie.

Be piteous to' hym, as womanhod requireth,
 That for your love endurith painis smerte,
 Whom so sorely your plesaunt loke enfireth, 550
 That printid is your beautie in his herte,
 And woundid lyith without knife or darte.
 There let your pitie spred without restrainte,
 For lacke of it let not your servaunt feint.

Mesure.

Take mesure in your talkyng be n'ot outrage,
 For this reherfith Romance de la Rose,
 A man endued with plenteous langage
 Ott tymis is denyid his purpose,
 Take mesure in langage, wiledome ingrose,
 For mesure, as rightwel proved is by reson, 560
 Thyngis unsefo'nable settith in selson.

Mercie.

Soche daungir exile hym all uttirly,
 Ovir all mercie to' occupie his place,

To

To piteous complaintis your eres applie,
And receve your true servaunte into grace,
To him that boundin is in lov's lace
Shewe favour, ladie, and be not merciles,
Lest ye be called a common murdires.

L'envoye.

When ye unto this balade have inspeccion,
In my making holde me excusable, 570
It is submittid unto your correccion,
Confidir that my connyng is disable,
To write to you the figure uniable,
All devoide of connyng and experience,
Maner of indityng, reson, and eloquence.

Trust it well the makir is alle your owne,
You to obeie while his life maie endure,
To doe you service as a man unknowne,
No guerdone desirying of yerthly trefure, 580
But if it might accorde with your plesure
For his true service hym for to avaunce,
And call hym into your remembérance.

Explicit the X. Commaundementes of Love.

The ix. Ladies worthie.

Quene Sinope.

Profulgent in preciousnes O Sinope the quene,
Of all feminine berynge the sceptir and regalie,
Subduyng the large cuntrye of Armenie as it was sene,
For maugre ther mightis thou ybrought them for
to applie,
Thin honor to encrefin, and thy power to magnifie,
O most renoumid Hercules with al thy pompous
bofte,
This princes toke the prisonir and put to fighte
thine host.

Ladie Hippolyte.

Yet Hercules waxed red for shame, when I spake of Hippolyt 590
Chief patrones and captain of the peple of Sinope,
Which with her amorous chere and with coragious might
She smote The unto the ground for all thy crueltie,
Wherefore the dukeship of Diamedes and dignitie
Unto her gretè laudè and glorie perpetuall
Attributid by all is with triumphè Laureall.

Ladie Deiphile.

The most noble triumphè of this Ladie Deiphile
In releve and succor of the gret duke of Athenis,
She chastifid and brought into perpetual exile
The aureat citizeinis of the mightie Thebis, 600
The strongè brasin pilliris there haddin no reles,
But she with her fistir Argife them did dounè cast,
And with furious fire the cite ybrent at last.

Ladie Teuca.

O pulchrior sole in beautie and full ylucident
Of all feminine creturis the mostè formous flour,
In Italy reigning with gret chevalry right fervent,
Chastifid the Romainis as maistris and conquèrour,
O lady Teuca mochil was thy glorie and honour,

Yet mochil more was to commende thy grete
benignite,
In thy perfite living and virginall chastitie.

Quene Penthesilea.

O ye Trojanis for this noble quene Penthesile, 610
Sorowe her mortalitie with dolorous compassion,
Her lovè was towardis you so pregnante and fertile,
Which that against the proude Grekis made de-fension,
With her victorious hand was al her affection
To lashe the Grekis to ground, and with ther
hert's joie
To revengin the coward deth of noble' Hector of Troie.

Quene Thamyris.

O thou most rigorous quene Thamyris invincible,
Upon the strong and hideous peple of citees reining,
Whiche by thy grete powir and by wittis sensible
Ytokist in bataille captive Cyrus the grete King, 620
Of Persia and of Media, his hed in blode lying,
Thou baddist him to drinkin of the blode he had thurstid,
And xxii. M. of his hoste there were distresid.

Ladie Lampedo.

The famous loude trumpè ymade of gold yforgid so bright,
Hath blowin so up the fame and glory environ
Of this lady Lampedo with her fistir Masifit,
That al the land of Feminie, Europe and Epheson,
Be yeldin and applied lowly to her subjeccion,
Many an high toure she raifid, and ybilt touris long,
Perpetuall to lastin with hugè wallis strong. 630

Quene Semiramis.

Lo here Semiramis the quene of grete Babilon,
The mostè generous gem and the floure of lovily favor,
Whose excellent powir from Mede unto Septentrion
Florished in her regally as a mightie conqueror,
Subdued al Barbary and Zorast the king of honor,
She slue Ethiop and conquirid Armenie and Inde,
In which non entrid but Alexander and she as I finde.

Ladie Menalippe.

Also the ladie Menalippe thy fistir so dere,
Whose martial powir there was no man that coud withstand,
For thorough the wide worldè there was not yfound
her pere, 640
The famous Duke of Athenis Theseus she had in hande,
And she sorely chastifid him, and conquirid his lande,
The proude Grekis mightilie also she did assaile,
And ovircame and vanquishid them bravely in bataile.

Explicit the Balade of the ix. Worthies of Ladies.

A Lone walkyng
In thought plainyng } All desolate.
And fore sighyng

Me

Me remembryng
Of my livyng
My death wishyng } Bothe erly and late. 650

Infortunate
Is so my fate
That wote ye what } Out of mesure.

My life I hate
Thus desperate
In soche pore estate } Doe I endure.

Of othir cure
Am I not sure
Thus to endure } Is hard certain.

Suche is my ure
I you ensure
What creature } Maie have more pain?

My truthe so plain
Is take in vain
And grete disdaine } In remembraunce.

Yet I full faine
Would me complaine
Me to abstaine } From this penaunce.

But in substaunce
None allegeaunce
Of my grevaunce } Can I not finde. 670

Right so my chaunce
With displeaunce
Doeth me avaunce } And thus an ende.

Explicit.

A Ballade.

IN Feverere when that it was full colde,
Froste, Snowe, Haile, Raine, hath dominacion,
With chaungable' elementes, and windes manifolde,
Whiche hath of ground, floure, herbe jurisdiction,
For to dispose aftir their correccion,
And yet Aprilis with his plesant shoures 680
Disolveth the snow, and bringith forthe his floures.

Of whose invencion lovirs maie be glade,
For thei bring in the Kalendis of Maie,
And thei with countenaunce demure, meke and sad,
Owe to worship the lustie floures alwaie,
And in speciall one called Se of the daie,
The Daisie a flowir white and rede,
And in Frenche callid La bel Margarete.

O commendable floure and moste in minde,
O floure and gracious of excellence, 690
O amiable Marga'rite, of natife kind,
To whom I must resort with diligence,
With hert, wil, thought, most lowly obedience
I to be your servaunt, ye my regent,
For life ne deth, nevyr for to repent.

Of this processe now forth will I procede,
Whiche happith unto me with grete disdaine,
As for the time thereof I take lest hede,
For unto me was brought the fore paine,
Therefore my cause was the more to complaine, 700
Yet unto me my grevaunce was the lesse,
That I was so nigh my ladie' and maistresse.

4

There where she was present in this same place,
I having in herte grete adversite,
Except onely the fortune and gode grace
Of her, whose I am the whiche releved me,
And my grete dures unlasid hath she,
And brought me out of the ferfull grevaunce,
If it were her else it were to me plesaunce.

As for the wo whiche that I did endure 710
It was to me a verie plesant pain,
Seyng it was for that faire creature,
Whiche is my Ladie and my soverain,
In whose presence I would be passyng fain,
So that I wist it werin her plesure,
For she' is from all distaunce my protectour.

Though unto me dredfull ywere the chaunce,
No maner of gentilnes oweth me to blame,
For I' had levir suffre' of deth the penaunce,
Than she should for me' have dishonor or shame, 720
Or in any wise losin her gode name.
So wisely God for his endlesse mercie
Graunt every lovir joy of his lady.

Explicit.

A Ballade.

O Mercifull, and o merciabile,
Kyng of Kyngis, and fathir of pite,
Whose might and mercie is incomperable,
O Prince eterne, O mightie Lorde, saie we,
To whom mercie is given of propirtie,
On thy servaunt, that lieth in prison bounde,
Have thou mercie, or that his herte wounde. 730

And that thou wilt graunt to him thy prisoner,
Fre libertie, and lose hym out of pain,
All his desires, and all his hevie chere
To all gladnesse thei were restored again,
Thy high vengeance why should thou not refrain,
And shewe mercie, sith he is penitent?
Now helpe hym, Lorde, and let him not be shent.

But sith it' is so, there is a trespas done,
Unto mercie let yelde the trespassour, 640
It is her office to redresse it sone,
For trespasse to mercie is a mirrour,
And like as the swete hath the price by soure,
So by trespasse mercie hath all her might,
Without trespasse mercie hath lacke of light.

What should phisike doe but if sikenes were?
What nedith salve, but if there were a fore?
What nedith drink, wher thirst hath no power,
What should mercie doe, but trespas go' afore?
But trespas mercie woll be litil store, 750
Without trespas ner excusyon
Maie mercie have, ne chief perfeccion.

The cause at this tyme of my writyng,
And touchyng mercie, to whom I make mone,
Is for fere lest my soveraigne and swetyng,
I menin her, that lovelyir is none,
With me' is displefed for causis more than one,
What causis thei be that knoweth God and she,
But so do n'ot I alas it forthinketh me!

What se she' in me, what defeaute or offence?
What have I doe that she on me disdaine? 760
How might I doe come into her presence,

To

To tell my complaint whereof I were faine?
I drede to loke, to speke or to complaine,
To her that hath my herte every dele,
So help me God I would al thing wer wele.

For in this case came I nevir or now,
In lov'is dauncè so ferre in the trace,
For with myne ese escapin I ne mow
Out of this daungir, except her gode grace,
For though my countenaunce be mery in her face,
As semith to her by worde or by chere,
Yet her gode grace settith myne hertè nere.

And if my soveraine have any marvaile
Why I to her now and afore ywrote,
She maie well thinke it is no grete travaile
To him that is in love brought so hote,
It is a simple tre, that falleth with one stroke,
That mene I, though that my soveraine toforn
Me hath denied, yet grace may come to morn.

Maistris, for the gode will I have you ought,
And evir shall as long as life durith,
Pitie your servant, kepe him in your thought,
Give' him som comfort or medi'cin, and curith
His ague, that encrefith, that renuith:
So grevous ben his paines and sighis fore,
That without mercy his dais be forlore.

Go litil bill, go forth and hie The fast,
Recommende me', and excuse me as you can,
For very feble am I at the last, 790
My pen is worn, my hew is pale and wan,
My eyen ben sonke, disfigured like no man,
Till deth his dart, that causith for to smert,
My corps have consumed them farwel swet hert.

Doughtre' of Phœbus in vertuous apparence,
My love elect in my remembërance,
My carefull herte distreined cause of absence,
Till ye my' Empresse me relese my grevaunce,
Upon you 'is set my life, myne attendaunce,
Is sette without recure I wis untill 800
Ye grauntin my true herte to have his will.

Thus my dere swetyng in a traunce I lye,
And shal, til drops of pitie from you spring,
I mene your mercie, that lieth my herte nye,
That me maie rejoyce, and cause for to syng,
These termes of love, lo I have won the ring,
My godely maistris: thus of his gode grace
God graunt her blisse in heven to have a place.

Explicit.

Here foloweth how Mercurie with Pallas, Venus, and Minerva, appered to Paris of Troie,
he slepyng by a fountain.

Pallas loquitur ad Parin.

Sonne of Priam gentill Paris of Troie,
Wake of thy slepe, beholde us Goddesse thre,
We havin brought to The encrese of joye, 810
To thy discrecion reportyng our beautie,
Take here this Appill, and well advise The;
Whiche of us is the fairist in thy sight,
And give thou it, we prais The, gentil knight?

Pallas loquitur primo.

If so be thou give it to me, Parise,

This shal I give unto thy worthines,
Honour, and conquest, nobley, lose and prise,
Victorie, courage, force and hardines,
Gode avinture, and famous manlines,
For that appil all this give I to The, 820
Considir this, Parise, and give it me.

Venus loquitur ad Parin.

Naie give it me, and this I shall you give,
A glad aspekte with favour and fairnes,
And love of ladies also while ye live,
Famous stature and princely semelines,
Accordyng to your natife gentilnes,
Undirstand this gift well, I you advise,
And give it unto me hardly, Parise.

Minerva loquitur ad Parin.

Ye ye Parise takith hede unto me,
Thou art a prince yborne by thy discente, 830
And for to rule thy royall dignite
I shall The givin first intendemente,
Discrecion, prudence in right judgemente,
Whiche in a prince is thing most covenable,
Give it to me, I am to have it able.

Explicit.

A balade plesante.

I Have a Ladie where so that she be,
That seldome is she soveraine of my thought,
On whose beautie when I beholde and se,
Remembryng me how well she is ywrought,
I thanke fortune that to her grace me brought,
So faire is she, but nothyng angelike,
Her beautie is unto none othir like.

For hardily and she were made of brasse
Her face and all, she hath enough fairnesse,
Her eyen ben holow', and grene as any grasse,
And ravenish yelow is her sounitresse,
Thereto she hath of every comeliness
Soche quantitie givin her by nature,
That with the lest she is of her stature.

And as a bolt her browis ben ibent, 850
And betill browed she is also with all,
And of her witte as simple' and innocent
As is a childe that can no gode at all,
She is not thicke, her stature is but small,
Her fingirs ben litil, and nothyng long,
Her skin is smothe as any Ox'is tong.

Thereto she is so wise in daliaunce,
And beset her wordis so womanly,
That her to here it doeth me displeaunce,
For that she saieth, is saied so connyngly, 860
That when there be no mo then she and I,
I had levir she were of talkyng still,
Then that she should so godelie spechè spill.

And slothe none shall ye have in her entresse,
So diligent is she, and vertulesse,
And so busie aie all gode to undresse,
That as a she Ape she is harmelesse,
And as an Harnet meke and pitelesse,
With that she is so wise and circumspecte,
That prudence none her folie can infeste.

Is it not joye that soche one of her age
 Within the boundes of so grete tendirnesse
 Should in her werke be so fadde and so sage,
 That of the weddyng sawe all the noblesse
 Of quene Jane, and ywas tho as I gesse
 But of the age of yeris ten and five!
 I trowe there are not many soche alive.

For as Jesu my sinfull soule save
 There n'is cature in all this worlde livyng,
 Like unto her that I would gladly have, 840
 So plesith mine hert that godely swete thyng,
 Whose soule in haste unto his blis ybryng
 That first her formid to be a cature,
 For were she well, of me I did no cure.

Explicit the discrivyng of a faire Ladie.

An other Balade.

O Mossie Quince yhangyng by your stalke,
 The whiche no man dare plucke awaie nor take,
 Of all the folke that passe forthe by or walke,
 Your flouris freshe be fallen awaie and shake,
 I am right sorie, maistresse, for your sake,
 Ye seme a thyng that all men have forgotten, 890
 Ye be so ripe ye waxin almoste roten.

Your ugle chere deinous and froward,
 Your grene eyin frownyng and nothing glad,
 Your chekes enbolned like a melowe Costard,
 Colour of Oreng your brestes Satournad,
 Gilt on wara'ntise the colour wil not fade,
 Bawfin buttockid, belied like a tonne,
 Men crie S. Barba'ry at the' losyng of your gonne.

Lovely leude maistris, take consideracion,
 I 'am so sorowfull there as ye be' absent, 900
 Floure of the barkfate foulest of al the nacion,
 To love you but a little' is myne entent,
 The swert hath swent you the smoke hath you shent,
 I trow ye' have ben laid on some kill to drie,
 You do soch worship there as ye be present,
 Of al women I love you best a M. timis fie.

Explicit.

A balade warnyng men to beware of deceitfull women.

LOke well aboute ye that loviris be,
 Let not your lustis lede you to dotage,
 Be not enamoured on all thynges ye se,
 Sampson the forte, and Salomon the sage 910
 'Decevid were for all ther grete courage,
 Men demin it right that thei se with eye,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie.

I mene of women, for all ther cheres queint
 Trust them not to moch ther truthe is but trefon,
 The fairist outward wel can thei ypaint,
 Ther stedfastnesse endurith but a seson,
 For thei faine frendlines and worchin trefon,
 And for thei are chaungable natu'rally,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie. 920

What wight on lyve ytrustith on ther cheres

Shall have at last his guerdon and his mede,
 Thei can shave nerir than rasours or sheres,
Al is not gold that shinith, men take hede
 Their galle is hid undir a sugrid wede,
 It is but queint ther fantasie to' aspie,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie.

Though all the worldè doe his busie cure
 To make women standin in stablenesse,
 It would not be, it is against nature, 930
 The worlde is doe, when thei lacke doublenes,
 For thei laugh and love not, this is expresse,
 To trust on them it is but fantasie,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie.

Women of kindè hath condicions thre,
 The first is that thei be full of disseite,
 To spinnin also is ther propertie,
 And women have a wondirfull conseite,
 For thei can wepe oft, and all is a sleite, 940
 And when thei list the tere is in the eye,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie.

In soth to saie, though all the yerth so wanne
 Wer parchement smoth, white and scribabell,
 And the gret Se, that called is the' Ocean,
 Were tournid into ynke blackir then Sabell,
 Eche sticke a pen, eche man a scrivener abel,
 Not coud thei writin woman's trechirie,
 Beware therefore, the blind eteth many' a fie.

Explicit.

These Verses next folowing were compiled by Geffray Chaucer, and in the writen copies folowe at the ende of the complainte of pite.

THE longè nyghtis when every cature
 Shuld have ther rest in somewhat as by kind,
 Or ellis ne may ther life not longe endure,
 It fallith moste into my wofull minde,
 How I so farre have brought my self behind,
 That safe the deth ther may nothing me lisse,
 So dispairid I am from allè blisse.

This same thought me lastith til the morow,
 And from the morowe forth til it be eve,
 There nedith me no care for to borow,
 For both I have gode laisir and gode leve, 960
 There is no wight that will my wo byreve,
 To wepe enough and wailin all my fyll,
 The fore sparke of peine now doth me spil.

This love that hath me set in soche a place
 That my desire he wil nevir fultyl,
 For neithir Pite, Mercy, neithir Grace
 Can I not find, and yet my wofull herte
 For to be dede I can it not arace,
 The more I love the more she doth me smerte,
 Thorowe whiche I fe withoute remedie
 That from the deth I may no wise asterte.

Now sothly what she light I wol reherse, 970
 Her name is Bountie, set in womanhed,
 Sadnes in youth, and Beautie pridelesse,
 And Plesance undir Govirnaunce and drede,
 And her surname is eke faire Ruthelless,
 The wise knit unto gode avinture,
 That for I love her, she sleth me gitlese,
 Her love I best, and shall while I may dure:

Bett

Bett than my selfe a hundrid thousand dele,
Than al this world's richis or crature,
Now hath not lovè me bestowid wel,
To lovin there I nevir shal have parte?
Alas right thus is turnid me the whele!
Thus am I flaine with lov's furious darte:
I can but love her best my swetè fo,
Love hath me taught no more of his arte,
But servin alwaye, and stigt for nò wo.

Within my trewè carefull herte ther is
So mochil wo, and eke so litil blisse,
That wo is me that evir I was bore!
For al that thinge which I desirè I misse,
And al that evir I wolde not iwis
That finde I redy to me evirmore,
And of all this I n'ot to whom me plaine,
For she that might me out of this ybring
Ne rechith nought whethir I wepe or sing,
So litil routh hath she upon my paine!

Alas! whan slepinge tyme is then I wake!
Whan I shuld daunce, for fere lo than I quake!
This hevy life I lede lo! for your sake!
Though ye therof in nò wise hedè take,
Myn hert'is lady, and whole my live's quene,
For truly durst I say as that I fele,
My femth that your swetè herte of stele
Is whettid now againist me to kene.

My derè herte, and best beloved fo,
Why lykith you to do me al this wo?
What have I don that grevith you, or saide?
But for I serve and love you and no mo,
And whilest I live I wil evir do so:
And therefore swete, ne berthe not il apaide,
For so gode and so faire as that ye be,
It wer a right gret wondir but ye had
Of al servauntis both of gode and badde,
And best worthy of al them I am he.

But nevir the lesse, my righte lady swete,
Though that I be unkonninge and unmete
To serve as I could best aye your highnes,
Yet is ther none fainir, that would I hete,
Than I to do you ese or ellis bete,
What so I wist that were to your highnes,
And had I might as gode as I have wil,
Than shuld ye fele wher it were so or none,
For in this world livinge than is ther none,
That fainir wolde your hert'is wil fulfil.

For both I love and eke drede you so sore,
And ald gates mote and have don you ful yore,
That bettir loved is non ne nevir shal,
And yet I would besèche you of no more,
But lovith wel, and be not wroth therfore,
And let me serve you forth, lo this is al!
For I am nought so hardy, ne so wode,
For to desire that ye should lovin me,
For wel I wotte alas that may not be!
I am so litil worthy and ye so gode,
For ye be one the worthyist on live,
And I the most unlikely for to thrive.

Yet for al this wetith ye full righte wel,
That ye ne should me from your servyce drive,
That I ne wil aye with my witis five
Serve you truly what wo so that I fele,
For I am fet so hy upon your whele,
That though ye nevir wil upon me rewe,
I must you love and bene evir as trewe
As any man ycan or maye on live.

But the more that I love you godely fre,
The lasse finde I that ye lovin me,
Alas whan shal that hardè wit amende!
Wher is now al your womanly pite,
Your gentilnes and your debohairte!
Wil ye nothings therof upon me spend,
And so whole swete as I am youris all,
And so grete wil as I have to you serve?
Now certis, and ye let me thus ysterve
Yet have ye worin therupon but small.

For at my knowing I do nothing why,
And thus I wil besèche you hertily,
That if evir ye finde whiles ye live
A truir servaunte to you than am I,
Levith than, and sleith me hardily,
And I my deth to you wil al forgive,
And yf ye finde no trewir verily,
Wollin ye suffir than that I thus spil,
And for no manir gilt but my gode will?
As gode were than untrue as true to be.

Explicit.

A balade declaring that womens chastite doeth
moche excel all trefure worldly.

IN womanhede, as auctours al ywrite,
Most thing commendid is chaste honeste,
Thing most slaund'rous ther nobles to atwite,
As when women of hasty fraëlth
Exceden the bondes of wifely chastite,
For what availeth lynage or rial blode
When of ther lyving the report 'is not gode?

The holy bed defoild of mariage
For ones defoiled may not recovered be,
The vice goth forth, and the froward langage
By many a relme, and many a grete cite,
Slaundir hath a custome, and that 'is grete pite,
That true or fals, by a contrarious sounne,
Onis areised it goth not lyghtly downe.

For when a lechour by force or mastery
Defoild hath of virgins the clennes,
Widous oppressed, and lye in advoutry,
Assailid wives that stode in stablesnes,
Who may then ther slaund'rous harme redresse,
When ther gode name is hurt by soch report?
For fame lost ones can ner have his resort.

A thefe may robbe a man of his richesse,
And by some mene make restitution,
And some man maye dysherit and oppresse
A povir man from his possession,
And astir make him satisfaccion,
But no man may restore in no degre,
A maid robbid of her virginite.

A man may also bete a castil downe,
And bilde it astir more freshe to the sight,
Exile a man out of his regiounne,
And him revoke, whether it be wrong or right,
But no man hath the powir ne the might
For to restore the palace virginal
Of chastite when brokin is the wal.

Men may also put out of ther service,
And officirs remeve out of ther place,
And at a day, when fortune list devise,
They may again restorid be to grace,

But

But ther n'is tim' nothir set ne space,
Nor nev in story neithir rad ne sain,
That maydenhode lost recovered was again.

For whiche men shouldin have a conscience,
 Rewe in ther hertis, and repentin fore,
 And havin a remorse of gret offence, 1110
 To ravish thing, which they may not restore,
 For it is faide, and hath be faid ful yore,
The emeraud grene of parfite chastite
Stole ones away may not recovered be.

And hard it is to ravish a tresour,
 Whiche of nature is not recuperable,
 Lordship may not of Kinge nor Emperour

Reforme a thinge, whiche is nat reformable,
 Rust of defame is inseparable,
 And maidinhode ylost of newe or yore
No man on live may it again restore.

The Romanes olde thorough ther pacience
 Suffrid tyrauntes in ther tyranyes,
 On ther cites to do grete violence,
 The peple to oppresse, with ther robberies,
 But them to punishe, they set gret espies
 On false avouterers as it is wel couth,
 Which widowes ravish, and maidens in ther youth.

Explicit.

The Court of Love.

This Book is an Imitation of the Romaunt of the Rose, shewing that all are subject to Love, what impediments soever to the contrary, containing also those 20 Statutes that are to be observ'd in the Court of Love.

ith timorous herte, and trembling hand of drede,
 Of cunning nakid, bare of eloquence,
 Unto the flour of port in womanhede
 I write, as he that none intelligence
 Of metris hath, ne flouris of sentence,
 Saufe that me list my writing to convey,
 In that I can to plesse her high nobley.

The blofomes fresh of Tulus gardein sote
 Present thei not, my mattir for to borne
 Poemes of Virgile takin here no rote, 10
 Ne crafte of Galfride may not here sojourne,
 Why n'am I cunning 'o wel maie I morne
 For lacke of science, that I can nat write,
 Unto the princes of my lyfe aright!

No termes are digne unto her excellence,
 So is she spronge of noble stripe and high,
 A world of honour and of reverence
 There is in her, this wil I testifie,
 Caliope, thou sistir wise and fly,
 And thou Minerva guide me with thy grace, 20
 That langage rude my mattir not deface!

Thy sugir dropis swete of Helicon
 Distil in me, thou gentle muse, I praye,
 And The, Melpomene, I cal anone,
 Of ignoraunce the misse to chace awaye,
 And geve me grace so for to write and faie,
 That she my lady of her worthinesse
 Accept in gre this litil short trefesse,

That is entitlid thus, the Courte of Love,
 And ye, that ben Metriciens, me excuse, 30
 I you besече, for Venus sake above,
 For what I mene in this ye nede not muse,
 And if so be my lady it refuse
 For lake of ornate speche, I wolde be wo,
 That I presume to her to writin so.

But my entente and al my busie cure
 Is for to write this trefesse as I can,
 Unto my lady stable true and sure,

Faithful and kind sith firste that she began
 Me to accept in service as her man, 40
 To her be al the plesure of this boke,
 That when her like she may it rede and loke.

When I was yong at xviii yere of age
 Lusty and light, desirous of plesaunce,
 Approching on full sadde and ripe corage,
 Love artid me to do my observaunce
 To his estate and done him obeisaunce,
 Commaunding me the Court of Love to se,
 A lite beside the mounte of Cithere:

There Citherea goddesse was and quene, 50
 Honourid highly for her majeste,
 And eke her sonne, the mighty God I wene
 Cupide the blind, that for his dignite
 A M. lovirs worshipp on ther kne,
 There was I bid in paine of deth to pere,
 By Mercury the wingid messingere.

So than I went by strange and ferre countrees,
 Enquiringe aye what coaste had to it drewe
The Court of Love, and thiðward as bees 60
 At last I se the peple gan pursue,
 Anon me thought some wight was ther that yknew
 Where that the Court was holdin ferre or nie,
 And aftir than ful faste I ganne me hie.

Anon as I them ovirtoke I said
 Heile frendis, whithir purpose ye to wend?
 For soth (qð one) that answered lyche a maid,
 To Lov's Courte, now go we, gentil frend;
 Where is that place (qð I) my felowe hend?
 At Citheron, sir, saide he, withoute doute, 70
 The kinge of Love, and al his noble route,

Dwelling within a castil rially.
 So than apace I journid forth amonge,
 And as he saide, so fond I there truly,
 For I behelde the touris high and stronge,
 And high pinacis large of hight and longe,
 With plate of gold bespred on every side,

And

⁴ precious stones, the stone werke for to hide.

No Saphire of Inde, no Rube riche of price,
There lackid then, nor Emèraude so grene,
Balis Turkis, ne thing to my devise, 80
That may the castil makin for to shene,
All was as bright as sterres in Wintir bene,
And Phœbus shone to make his pece ageine
For trespas done to high estatis tweine :

Venus and Mars, the God and Goddesse clere,
When he them founde in armis cheinid faste,
Venus was than ful sad of herte and chere,
But Phœbus bemis streight as is the maste
Upon the castil ginnith he to cast, 90
To plesse the lady, princes of that place,
In signe he lokith aftir lov'is grace.

For ther n'is God in heven or hel iwys
But he hath ben right soget unto love,
Jove, Pluto, or what so evir he is,
Ne creature in erth or yet above,
Of this the revers may no wight approve ;
But furthirmore the castill to descric,
Yet sawe I nevir none so large and hie,

For unto heven it stretchith I suppose,
Within and out depeintid wondirly, 100
With many' a thousand daisy rede as rose,
And white also, this sawe I verily,
But what tho deifis might do signifie
Can I not tel, saufe that the quen'is floure
Alceste it was that kept ther her sojoure,

Which undir Venus lady was and quene,
And Admete kyng and soverain of that place,
To whom obeied the ladies gode xix,
With many' a thouland othir bright of face,
And yong men fele came forth with lusti pace, 110
And agid eke ther homage to dispoise,
But what they were I could not well disclose.

Yet nere and nere forth in I gan me dresse,
Into an halle of noble apparaile,
With arras spred and cloth of gold, I gessie,
And othir filke of esyir availe,
Undir the cloth of ther estate, fauns faile,
The king and quene there sat, as I beheld,
It passid joye of Helise the feld.

There saintis have ther cominge and resorte, 120
To seen the kinge so rially besene,
In purple clad, and eke the quene in sorte,
And on ther heddis sawe I crounis tweine,
With stonis fret, so that it was no paine
Withoutin mete and drinke to stand and se
The king'is honor, and the rialte.

And for to trete of statis with the king,
That ben of counsell chese, and with the quene,
The king had Daungir nere to him standing,
The quene of love Disdain, and that was sene, 130
For by the faith I shal to God, I wene,
Was nevir straungir none in her degre
Than was the quene in castinge of her eye.

And as I stode perceving her aparte,
And eke the bemis shininge of her eyen,
Me thought they werin shapin lyche a darte,
Sharpe, and perfinge, smale, and streight as a line,
And al her here it shone as golde so fine,
Disshivil, crispe, doune hanging at her backe,
A yard in length, and southely than I spake, 140

O bright Regina, who made The so faire?
Who made thy colour vermelet and white?
Wher wonneth the God, how far above the eyre?
Grete was his crafte, and grete was his delite,
Now marvil I nothing that ye do hight
The quene of love, and occupie the place
Of Cithare, now swete lady thy grace.

In mewet spake I, so that nought asterte
By no condicion word that might be hard, 150
But in my inward thought I gan adverte,
And oft I said my wit is dul and hard,
For with her beautie thus God wot I ferde
As doeth the man yravishid with sight,
When I beheld her cristal eyen so bright,

No respecte havying what was beste to done,
Till right anone beholding here and there
I spied a frend of myne, and that ful sone;
A gentil woman, was the chambirere
Unto the quene, that hote as ye shall here, 160
Philobone, that lovid al her life,
Whan she me sey she led me forth as blife,

And me demaundid how and in what wise
I thithir come, and what my erand was?
To sene the Courte (qð I) and al the guise,
And eke to sue for pardon and for grace,
And mercy aske for al my grete trespasse,
That I none erste come to the courte of love,
Foryeve me this, ye goddis al above.

That is wel said (qð Philobone) in dede,
But were ye not assomoned to appere, 170
By Mercurius, for that is al my drede?
Yes gentill feire (qð I) now am I here,
Ye, yet what tho? though that be true, my dere,
Of your fre wil ye shuld have come unsente,
For ye did not I deme ye will be shente.

For ye that reigne in youth and lustines,
Pampired with ese and jalous in your age,
Your dutie is as far as I can gesse
To lov'is courte to dressin your viage
Assone as nature makith you so sage, 180
That ye may know a woman from a swan,
Or whan your fote is growin halfe a span.

But sithe that ye by wilful negligence
This xviii. yere hath kept your selfe at large,
The gretir is your trespas and offence,
And in your neck you mote bere all the charge,
For bettir were ye ben withoutin barge
Amidde the Se in tempest and in rayne,
Then bidin here receving wo and pain,

That ordeined is for soche as them absente 190
Fro lov'is courte by yeris long and fele,
I ley my life ye shal ful sone repente,
For love wil reive youre coloure, lust, and hele,
Eke ye must baite on many' an hevy mele.
No force iwis, I stired you longe agon
To drawe to courte qð litil Philobon.

Ye shal wel se how rough and angry face
The king of Love wil shewe when ye him se,
By myn advise knele down and aske him grace,
Eschewing peril and adversite, 200
For wel I wot it wolle none othir be,
Comforte is none ne council to your ese,
Why wil ye then the king of Love displese?

O mercie God (qð iche) I me repent,
Caitife and wretche in hert, in wil and thought,
7 D And

And aftir this shal be mine whole entent
To serve and plesse, how dere that love be bought,
Yet sith I have mine owne penaunce isought,
With humble spirite shal I it receive,
Though that the king of Love my life bereve. 210

And though that fervent lov'is qualite
In me did never worche truly, yet I,
With al obeisaunce, and humilite,
And benigne herte shal serve him til I die,
And he, that Lord of might is grete and hie,
Right as him list me chastice and correcte,
And punishe me with trespase thus enfecte.

These wordis said, she caught me by the lap,
And led me furth in til a temple round,
Bothe large and wide, and as my blessid hap 220
And gode avinture was, right sone I founde
A tabernacle reifid from the grounde,
Where Venus sat, and Cupide by her side,
Yet half for drede I can my visage hide.

And eft againe I lokid and behelde,
Seing ful sundry peple in the place,
And mistir folke, and som that might not welde
There limmis wele, me thought a woundir case,
The temple shone with windowes al of glasse,
Bright as the day, with manie' a faire ymage, 230
And there I se the freshe quene of Carthage

Dido, that brent her beaute for the love
Of fals Æneas, and the weimenting
Of her Anelida true as Turtill dove
To Arcite fals, and there was in peinting
Of many' a prince, and many' a doughty king,
Whose martirdom was shewed about the walles,
And how that fele for love had suffrid falles.

But fore I was abashid and astonied
Of al tho folke that there were in that tide, 240
And than I askid where they haddin woned?
In divers courtis (qð she) here beside,
In fondrie clothing mantilwise full wide,
They were arraied, and did ther sacrifice
Unto the God and goddesse in ther guise.

Lo yondir folke (qð she) that knele in blewe!
They were the colour ay and evir shal,
In signe they were and evir wil be true,
Withoutin chaunge, and southely yondir all,
That ben in blak, with mourning crie and call 250
Unto the goddes, for ther lovis bene
Some ferre, som dede, som al to sherpe and kene.

Yea than (qð I) what done these prestis here,
Nonnis, and Hermites, Freris, and all tho,
That sit in white, in russet, and in grene?
Forsothe (qð she) they wailin of ther wo.
O mercie Lord may they so come and go
Frely to court, and have soche libertie?
Yea, men of eche condicion and degre,

And women eke, for truly there is none 260
Excepcion made, ne never was, ne may,
This courte is ope and fre for everichone,
The king of love he wil not say them nay,
He takith al, in pore or riche array,
That mekely sewe unto his excellence,
With al ther herte, and al ther reverence.

And walking thus aboute with Philobone
I se where come a messengere in hie
Streight from the king, whiche let commaunde anone,
Throughout the courte to make an ho and crie, 270

All new come folke abide, and wote ye why?
The king'is lust is for to seen you sone;
Come nere, let se, his wil mote nede be done.

Than gan I me present tofore the king,
Trembling for fere, with visage pale of hewe,
And many' a lovir with me was kneling,
Abashed sore, til unto the time they knewe
The sentence yve of his entent full trew,
And at the last the king hath me behold
With sterne visage, and seid what doth this olde

Thus ferre ystope in yeris com so late
Unto the courte? for sothe my liege (qð I)
An hundrid tyme I have ben at the gate
Afore thus tyme, yet coude I ner espie
Of myne acqueintaunce eny if mine eye,
And Shamefastenes away me ganne to chace,
But now I me submitte unto your grace.

Wel, al is pardoned with condicion
That thou be trew from hensforth to thy might,
And servin love in thine entencion, 290
Swere this, and than as ferre as it is right
Thou shalte have grace here in my quen'is sight,
Yes by the faith I owe your crown I swere
Though deth therfore me thirlith with his spere.

And whan the kinge had sene us everychone,
He let commaunde an officir in hie
To take our faith, and shew us one by one
The statutes of the courte full besily,
Anon the boke was leide before ther eye,
To rede and se what thing we must observe, 300
In Lov'is Courte, till that we dye and sterve.

AND for that I was lettrid there I red,
The statutes whote of Lov'is Courte and hall;
The firste statute that on the boke was spred,
Was to be true in thought and dedis al,
Unto the king of love the Lorde ryall,
And to the quene as faithful and as kinde,
As I coude thinke with herte and will and minde.

The seconde statute, secretly to kepe
Council of love, not blowing every where 310
Al that I knowe, and let it sinke and flete,
It may not sowne in every wight'is ere,
Exiling slaundir ay for dred and fere,
And to my lady, whiche I love and serve,
Be true and kinde, her grace for to deserve.

The thirde statute was clerely writ also,
Withoutin chaunge to live and die the same,
None othir love to take for wele ne wo,
For blinde delite, for ernest, nor for game,
Without repent, for laughing or for grame, 320
To bidin stil in ful perseveraunce,
Al this was whole the king'is ordinaunce.

The fourth statute to purchase er to here,
And stirin folke to love and betin fire
On Venus auter here aboute and there,
And preche to them of love and hote desire,
And tel how love wil quitin wel ther hire,
This must be kept, and loth me to displese,
If love be wroth, passe, for therby is ese.

The V. statute not to be daungirous, 330
If that a thought would reve me of my slepe,
Nor of a sight to be ovir squemous,
And so verely this statute was to kepe,
To turne and wallowe in my bed, and wepe,

When

When that my lady of her crueltie
Would from her herte exilin al pite.

The VI. statute it was for me to use
Alone to wandir voide of company,
And on my lad's beautie for to muse,
And to thinkin no force to live or die,
And eft again to thinke the remedy,
How to her grace I might anon attain,
And tel my wo unto my soveraine.

The VII. statute was to be pacient,
Whethir my lady lady joyful were or wroth,
For wordis glad or hevly diligent,
Whedir that she me heldin lese or loth,
And hereupon I put was to mine othe
Her for to serve and lowely to obey,
And shewe my chere the xx. sith aday.

The VIII. statute to my remembraunce
Was for to speke and pray my lady dere,
With hourelly labour and gret entendaunce,
Me for to love with al her herte entere,
And me desire and make me joyful chere,
Right as she is surmounting every faire,
Of beautie wel, and gentil, debonaire.

The IX. statute with lettris writ of golde,
This was the sentence how that I and al
Shulde evir dred to be to ovirbolde
Her to displese, and truly so I shal,
But ben content for all thing that may fale,
And mekely take her chastisement, and yerde,
And to offende her evir ben aferde.

The X. statute was egally to' discerne
Betwene the lady', and thine abilite,
And thinke thy selfe arte nevyr like to yerne
By right her mercy, nor of equite,
But of her grace, and womanly pite,
For though thy selfe be noble in thy strene,
A thousande folde more nobil is thy quene,

Thy liv'is lady, and thy soveraine,
That hath thin herte all whole in govirnaunce,
Thou maieft no wise it takin to disdaine
To put The humblie at her ordinaunce,
And give her fre the reine of her plesaunce,
For libertie is thing that women loke,
And truely els the mattir is acroke.

The XI. statute thy signis for to knowe,
With eye and fingir, and with smilis softe,
And lowe to couche, and alwaie for to showe
For drede of spyis, for to winkin ofte,
But secretly to bryng a sigh alofte,
And eke beware of ovir moche resorte,
For that para'venture spillith all thy sport.

The XII. statute remembir to observe,
For all the paine thou hast for love and wo
All is to lite her mercie to deserve,
Thou musten then thinke wher er thou ride or go,
And mortall woundis suffre thou also,
All for her sake, and thinke it well besette
Upon thy love, for it maie not be bette.

The XIII. statute, whilome is to thinke
What thing maie best thy ladye like and plesse,
And in thine hert's botome let it sinke,
Some thing devise, and take for it thine esse,
And sende it her, that maie her herte appese,
Some herte or ryng, or lettir, or devise,
Or precious stone, but spare not for no price.

The XIV. statute eke thou shalt assaie 400
Formely to kepe the moste parte of thy life,
Wifhe that thy ladye in thine armis laie,
And nightly dreame, thou hast thy night's herte's wife
Swetly in armis, straining her as blife,
And when thou seest it is but fantasie,
Se that thou sing not ovir merily.

For to moche joye hath ofte a wofull ende,
It longith eke, this statute for to holde,
To deme thy ladye evirmore thy frende,
And thinke thy self in no wise a cocolde, 410
In every thyng she doeth but as she should,
Construe the best, beleve no talis newe,
For many' a lye is tolde, that semeth full true.

But thinke that she, so bounteous and faire,
Coud not be false, imagine this algate,
And think that tonges wickid would her appaire,
Slanderyng her name, and worshipfull estate,
And lovirs true to settin at debate,
And though thou seest a faute, right at thine eye,
Excuse it blive, and glose it pretilie. 420

The XV. statute, use to swere and stare,
And counterfeite a lesyng hardily,
To save thy ladye's honour every whare,
And put thy self to fightin boldily,
Saie she is gode, vertuous, and ghostly,
Clere of entent, and herte, and thought, and will,
And argue not for reson, ne for skill

Againe thy ladye's plesure, ne entent,
For love will not be counterpleted in dede,
Saie as she saith, then shalt thou not be shent, 430
The Crowe is white; ye truly, so I rede;
And aye what thing that she The will forbode,
Eschue all that, and give her soverainte,
Her appetite folowe in all degre.

The XVI. statute, kepe it, if thou maie,
Seven sith at night, thy ladye for to plesse,
And seven at midnight, se'ven at morow daie,
And drinke a caudill, erely for thine esse,
Doe this, and kepe thine hedde from all disese,
And winne the garlande here of lovirs all, 440
That evir came in court, or evir shall.

Full fewe think I, this statute hold and kepe,
But truely this my reson giveth me fele,
That some lovirs should rather fall aslepe,
Then take on hande to plesse so oft and wele,
There laie none othe to this statute adele,
But kepe who might, as gave him his corage,
Now get this garlande, lustie folke of age.

Now win who maie, ye lustie folke of youth,
This garlande fresh, of flouris red and white, 450
Purple and blewe, and colours fell uncouth,
And I shall croune hym kyng of all delite,
In all the courte, there was not to my sight
A lovyr true, that he ne was adrede,
When he expresse hath herd the statute rede.

The XVII. statute, when age approacheth on,
And lust is laied, and all the fire is queint,
As freshly then thou shalt begin to sonne,
And dote in love, and all her image paint, 460
In thy remembraunce, till thou gin to faint,
As in the first seson thyne herte began,
And her desire, though thou ne maie ne can

Performe thy livyng aduell, and lust,
Registir this in thyne remembraunce,

Eke

Eke when thou maist not kepe thy thing from rust,
Yet speke and talke, of plesaunt daliaunce,
For that shall make thyne hert rejoyce and daunce,
And when thou maist no more the game assaie,
The statute bidde The praie for them that maie.

The XVIII. statute, wholly to commende, 470
To plesse thy ladie, is that thou eschewe
With fluttishnesse thy self for to offende,
Be joilife, freshe, and fete with thingis newe,
Courtlye with manir, this is all thy due,
Gentill of porte, and lovyng clenlinesse,
This is the thing, that likith thy maistresse.

And not to wandir, liche a dullid Assie,
Raggid and torne, disguisid in araie,
Ribaude in speche, or out of mesure passe,
Thy bounde excedyng, thinke on this alwaie, 480
*For women ben of tendir hertis aye,
And lightly set ther plesure in a place,
When thei misthinke, they lightly let it passe.*

The XIX. statute, mete and drinke forgete,
Eche othir daie se that thou fast for love,
For in the courte thei live withoutin mete,
Save soche as cometh from Venus al above,
Thei take none hede, in pain of grette reprove,
Of mete and drinke, for that is all in vaine,
Onely thei live by sight of ther soveraine. 490

The XX. statute, last of of everichone,
Enrolle it in thyne hert's privite,
To wring and waile, to turne, and sigh, and grone,
When that thy ladie absent is from The,
And eke renewe the wordis all that she
Betwene you twain hath said, and all the chere,
That The hath made thy liv'is lady dere.

And se thyne herte in quiete, ne in rest
Sojourne to tyme thou seen thy Ladie este,
But where she won, by South, or Est, or West, 500
With all thy force now se it be not leste,
Be diligent, till tyme thy life be restre,
In that thou maist thy ladie for to se,
This statute was of old antiquite.

An officir of high aucthorite,
Yclepid Rigour, made us swere anone
He n'as corrupt with parcialite,
Favour, prayir, ne gold that clerely shone,
Ye shall (qð he) now swerin here echone,
Both yong and old, to kepe in that thei maie, 510
The statutes truly, all aftir this daie.

O God! thought I, hard is to make this othe,
But to my powir shall I them observe,
In all this worlde n'as mattir halfe so lothe
To swere for all, for though my body sterve,
I have no might, them wholly to observe,
But herkin now the cace how it befell,
Aftir my othe was made, the trothe to tell.

I tournid levis, lokyng on this boke,
Where othir statutes were of women shene, 520
And right forth with rigour on me gan loke,
Full angrily, and saied unto the quene,
I traitour was, and chargid me let ben,
There maie no man (qð he) the statute knowe,
That long to woman, hie degre ne lowe.

In secrete wise, thei keptin ben full close,
Thei sounne echone to libertie my frende,
Plesaunt thei be, and to ther own purpose,
There wote no wight of them, but God and fende,

Ne naught shall witte, unto the world's ende, 530
The quene hath yeve me charge, in pain to die,
Nevir to rede ne seen them with myne eye.

For men shall not so nere of counsaill ben
With womanhode, ne knowin of ther guise,
Ne what thei think, ne of ther wit th' engine,
I me report to Salomon the wise,
And mightie Sampson, which begilid thrise
With Dalila was, he wot that in a throwe,
There maie no man statute of women knowe.

For it peraventure maie right so befall 540
That thei be bounde by nature to disceve,
And spinne and wepe, and sugre strew on gal,
The herte of man to ravishe and to reve,
And whet ther tonge, as sharpe as swerde or gleve,
It maie betide, this is ther ordinaunce,
So must thei lowlie doen ther observaunce,

And kepe the statute, yevin them of kinde,
Of soche as love hath yeve 'hem in ther life,
Men maie not wete, why turnith every wind,
Nor waxin wise, nor ben inquisitive 550
To knowe secrete of maide, widowe, or wife,
For thei ther statutes have to them reserved,
And nevir man to knowe them hath deserved.

Now dresse you forth, the God of love you guide,
Qð Rigour then, and seke the temple bright
Of Citherea, Goddes here beside,
Beseeche her by the influence and might
Of all her vertue you to teche aright
How for to serve your ladies, and to plesse,
Ye that ben sped, and set your herte in ese. 560

And ye that ben unpurveied, pray her eke,
Comforte you sone with grace and destinie,
That ye may set your hert, there ye maie like,
In soche a place, that it to love maie be,
Honour, and worship, and felicitie
To you for aie, now goeth by one assent.
Graunt mercie sir (qð we) and forth we went,

Devoutly soft and esie pace, to se
Venus the Godd's Image all of golde,
And there we found a thousand on ther kne, 570
Some freshe and faire, some dedly to beholde,
In fondrie mantils new, and some wer olde,
Some paintid were, with flamis red as fire,
Outward to shewe ther inward hote desire.

With dolefull chere, full fele in ther complaint,
Cried, "Ladie Venus, rewe upon our sore,
"Receve our billes, with teris all bedreint,
"We maie not wepe, there is no more in store,
"But wo and pain us frettith more and more,
"Thou blisfull Planet, lovirs sterre so shene, 580
"Have routh on us, that sigh and careful ben;

"And punishe, Ladie, grevously, we praie,
"The false untrue, with counterfeite plesaunce
"That made ther othe, be true to live or deie,
"With chere assurid, and with countinaunce,
"And falsly now thei forin lov'is daunce,
"Barain of routh, untrue of that thei saied,
"Now that ther lust, and plesure is alaid.

"Yet este againe a thousande milion,
"Rejoylyng love, ledyng ther life in blisse, 590
"Thei saied Venus, redresse of all division,
"Goddes eternell, thy name heryed is,
"By lovirs bonde is knit all thing iwis,

"Best

" Best unto best, the yerth to watir wanne,
" Birde unto birde, and woman unto man.

" This is the life of joye, that we ben in,
" Resemblyng life of hevenly paradise,
" Love is exilir aie of vice and finne,
" Love makith hert's lustie to devise,
" Honour and grace have thei in every wife, 600
" That ben to lov'is lawe obedient,
" Love makith folke benigne and diligent,

" Aie steryng them, to dredin vice and shame,
" In ther degre it maketh them honourable,
" And swete it is of love to bere the name,
" So that his love be faithfull, true, and stable,
" Love prunith hym, to femin amiable,
" Love hath no faute, there it is exercised,
" But sole with them that have all love dispised.

" Honour to The, celestiaall and clere 610
" Goddes of Love, and to thy celsitude,
" That yevest us light so ferre doune from thy spere,
" Persyng our hertis with thy pulchritude,
" Comparison none of similitude
" Maie to thy grace be made in no degre,
" That hast us set with Love in unitie.

" Grete cause have we to praise thy name and The,
" For thorough The we live in joye and blisse,
" Blessid be thou, moeste soveraine to se,
" Thy holy courte of gladnesse maie not misse, 620
" A thousande sith we maie rejoyce in this,
" That we ben thine, with herte and all yfere,
" Enflamid with thy grace, and hevenly fere.

Musyng of tho, that spakin in this wise,
I me bethought, in my remembraunce,
Myne orison right godely to devise,
And pleasauntly, with hert's obeisaunce,
Besече the Goddis voidin my grevaunce,
For I loved eke, saufe that I wist not where,
Yet down I set, and saied as ye shall here. 630

Fairist of all, that evir were or be,
Licour and light to pensife creature,
Myne whole affiaunce, and my ladie fre,
My Goddes bright, my fortune and my ure,
I yeve and yelde my herte to The full sure,
Humbly besechyng, ladie, of thy grace,
Me to bestowin in some bleffid place.

And here I vowe me, faithfull, true, and kind,
Without offence of mutabilitie,
Humbly to serve, while I have wit and mind, 640
Myne whole affiaunce, and my ladie fre,
In thilkè place, there ye me signe to be,
And sith this thing of newe is yeve me aie
To love and serve, nedely must I obeie.

Be merciable with thy fire of grace,
And fixe myne herte, there beautie is and routh,
For hote I love, determine in no place,
Saufe only this, by God and by my trowth,
Troublid I was, with slombir, slepe, and slouth,
This othir night, and in a visoun 650
I se a woman romin up and doune,

Of mene stature, and semely to beholde,
Lustie, and freshe, demure of countinaunce,
Yong, and well shap, with here that shone as golde,
With eyen as cristall, fercid with plesaunce,
And she gan stirre mine herte a lite to daunce,
But sodainlic she vanishe gan right there,
Thus I maie saie, I love, and wote not where.

For what she is, ne her dwellyng, I n'ot,
And yet I fele, that love distreinith me 660
Might iche her knowe, that would I faine God wor,
Serve and obeie, with all benignitie,
And if that othir be my destinie,
So that no wise I shall her nevir se,
Then graunt me her, that best maie likin me,

With glad rejoyce to live in perfite hele,
Devoide of wrathe, repent, or variaunce,
And able me to doe that maie be wele
Unto my ladie, with herte's hie plesaunce;
And, mightie goddes, through thy purviaunce, 670
My wit, my thought, my lust, and love so guide,
That to thine honour I maie me provide,

To set mine hert in place there I maie like,
And gladly serve, with all affection,
Grete is the pain, which at mine hert doth sticke,
Till I be sped by thyne eleccion,
Helpe, Ladie Goddes, that possession
I might of her have, that in all my life
I clepin shall my quene, and hert's wife.

And in the Courte of Love to dwell for aie 680
My will is, and doin The sacrifice
Daily with Diane eke to fight and fraie,
And holdin werre, as might will me suffice,
That Goddes chaste I kepin in no wise
To serve, a Figge for all her chastite,
Her lawe is for Religioufite.

And thus gan finishe prayir, laude, and preice,
Whiche that I yove to Venus on my kne,
And in myne herte to pondir and to peice,
I gane anone her Image freshe beautie, 690
Heile to that figure swete, and heile to The,
Cupide (qð I) and rose, and yede my weie,
And in the temple, as I yede, I seie

A shrine surmountyng all in stonis riche,
Of whiche the force was plesaunce to mine eye,
With Diamonde or Saphire, nevir liche
I have none seen, ne wrought so wondirliche,
So when I met with Philobone, in hie
I gan demaunde, whose is this sepulture?
Forsothe (qð she) a tendir creature 700

Is shrinid there, and Pitie is her name,
She sawe an Egle wreke hym on a flie,
And plucke his wing, and eke him, in his game,
And tendir herte of that hath made her die,
Eke she would wepe and morne right pitously,
To seen a lovir suffre grete destresse,
In all the courte n'as none, as I do gesse,

That coud a lovir half so well availe,
Ne of his wo the torment or the rage
Askin, for he was sure withoutin faile 710
That of his grief she coud the hete aswage,
In stede of Pitie spedith hote corage
The mattirs all of courte, now she is dedde,
I me reporte in this to womanhedde.

For weile, and wepe, and crie, and speke, and praie,
Women would not have pitie on thy plaint,
Ne by that mene to ese thine herte convaie,
But The recevin, for ther owne talent,
And saie that Pitie causith them consent
Of reuth to take thy service and thy paine, 720
In that thou maiest, to plesse thy soveraine.

But this is counsaill, kepe it secretly,
(Qð she) I n'olde for all the worlde about

The quene of Love it wist, and witte ye why?
 For if by me this mattir springin out,
 In courte no lengir shoulde I out of doubt
 Dwellin, but shame in all my life endry,
 Now kepe it close (qð she) this hardily.

Well, all is well, now shall ye seen, she saied,
 The fairist ladie undir Sonne that is, 730
 Come on with me, demene you lich a maide;
 With shamefast drede, for ye shall speke ywis
 With her, that is the mirrour, joie, and blisse,
 But somewhat straunge, and sad of her demene
 She is, beware your countinaunce be fene.

Nor ovrilght, ne rechelesse, ne to bolde,
 Ne malapert, ne rennyng with your tong,
 For she will you obeisin and beholde;
 And you demaunde, why ye wet hens so long
 Out of this courte, without resort emong, 740
 And Rosiall her name is hote aright,
 Whose herte is yet yvein to no wight.

And ye also ben, as I undirstonde;
 With love but light avauncid by your worde,
 Might ye by hap your fredom makin bond,
 And fall in grace with her, and wele accorde,
 Well might ye thanke the God of Love and Lord,
 For she, that ye sawe in your dreame appere,
 To love soche one, what are thei then the nere?

Yet wote ye what? as my remembraunce 750
 Me yevith now, ye faine where that ye saie,
 That ye with love had never acquaintaunce,
 Save in your dreame, right late this othir daie,
 Why yes parde, my life that durst I laie,
 That ye were caught upon an heth, when I
 Sawe you complain, and sigh full pitously,

Within an herbir, and a gardein faire,
 Where flowirs growe, and herbis vertuous,
 Of whiche the favour swete was and the eire,
 There were your self full hote and amorous, 760
 Ywis ye ben to nice and daungirous,
 I would ye now repent, and love some newe.
 Naie by my trothe I saied, I never knewe

The godely wight, whose I shal be for aye,
 Guide nie the Lorde, that love hath made and me,
 But forthe we went, into a chambre gaie,
 There was Rosiall, womanly to se,
 Whose stremis, sotill persyng of her eye,
 Mine hert gan thrill for beautie in the founte
 Alas (qð I) who hath me yeve this wounde! 770

And then I drede to speke, till at the laste
 I grete the ladie, reverently and wele,
 When that my sigh was gone and ovirpasse,
 And doune on knees full humbly gan I knele,
 Besechyng her, my fervent wo to kele,
 For there I toke full purpose in my mynde
 Unto her grace my painfull herte to bynde.

For if I shall all fully her discrive,
 Her hed was rounde, by compasse of nature,
 Her here as gold, she passid all on live, 780
 And Lillie forehed had this creature,
 With livelisse browis, flawe of colour pure,
 Betwene the which was mene disleveraunce
 From every browe, to shewin a distaunce.

Her nose directid streight, and even as line,
 With forme and shape thereto convenient,
 In which the godis milkewhite path doth shine,
 And eke her eyen ben bright and orient

As is the Smaragde, unto my judgement,
 Or yet these sterris heavenly small and bright, 790
 Her visage is of lovely rede and white,

Her mouthe is short, and shutte in litil space,
 Flamyng somdele, not ovir redde I mene,
 With prenaunt lips, and thicke to kisse percace,
 For lippis thinne not fat, but evir lene,
 They serve of naught, they be not worth a bene,
 For if the basse ben full, there is delite,
 Maximian truly thus doeth he write.

But to my purpose, I saie white as snowe
 Ben all her tethe, and in ordir thei stonde 800
 Of one stature, and eke her breth I trowe
 Surmountith all odours, that er I founde
 In swetenesse, and her body, face, and honde
 Ben sharply slendir, so that from the hedde
 Unto the fote, all is but womanhedde.

I holde my pece of othir thingis hidde,
 Here shal my soule, and not my tong bewraie;
 But how she was arraied, if ye me bidde,
 That shall I well discovir you and saie;
 A benche of gold and filke, full freshe and gaie, 810
 With her intresse ybroudirid full wele,
 Right smothly kept, and shynyng every dele.

About her necke a flower of freshe devise;
 With Rubies set, that lustie were to fene,
 And she in gounne was light and sommir wife,
 Shapin full wele, the colour was of grene,
 With aureat sent aboute her sidis clene,
 With divers stonis, precious and riche,
 Thus was she raied, yet sawe I ner her liche:

For if that Jove had this ladie yseine, 820
 Tho the faire Calisto, ne Alcmena,
 Thei never haddin in his armis leine,
 Ne he had lovid the faire Europa,
 Ye ne yet Danae ne Antiopa,
 For all ther beautie stode in Rosiall,
 She semid lich a thyng celestially,

In bountie, favour, porte and similineffe,
 Pleasunt of figure, mirrour of delite,
 Gracious to seen, rote of all gentilnesse,
 With angell visage, lustie, redde, and white, 830
 There was not lack, fause daungir had alite
 This godely freshe in rule and govirnaunce,
 And somdele straunge she was for her pleasaunce.

And truly sone I toke my leve and went,
 When she had me enquirid, what I was,
 For more and more impressin gan the dent
 Of lov's darte, while I behelde her face,
 And este againe I come to sekin grace,
 And up I put my bill, with sentence clere,
 That foloweth aftir, rede, and ye shall here. 840

O ye freshe lovelie, of beautie the rote,
 That nature hath formid so wele and made,
 Princes and quene, and ye that maie do bote
 Of all my langoure, with your wordis glad,
 Ye woundid me, ye made me wo bestad,
 Of grace redrelle my mortall grefe, as ye
 Of all my harme the very caucir be.

Now am I caught, and unware sodainly,
 With perfaunt stremis of your eyin clere, 850
 Subjecte to ben, and servin you mekely,
 And all your man, ywis my ladie dere,
 Abidyng grace, of whiche I you requere,

That

That mercilesse ye cause me not to sterue,
But guerdon me, liche as I maie deserve.

For by my trothe, the dayis of my breth
I am and will be your, in will and herte,
Pacient and meke for you to suffir deth,
If it require, now rue upon my smerte,
And this I swere, I nevyr shall out sterue
From lov's courte, for none adversitie,
So ye would rue on my distresse and me.

My destinie, my fate, and houre I blisse,
That have me set to ben obedient
Onely to you the floure of all ywis,
I trust to Venus nevyr to repent;
For evyr redy glad and diligent
Ye shall me finde in service to your grace,
Till deth my life out of my bodie rale.

Humble unto your excellence so digne,
Enforcing aye my wittis and delite
To serve and plesse with glad herte and benigne,
And ben as Troilus, Troie's worthie knight,
Or Antonie for Cleopatra bright,
And nevyr you me thinkis to renay,
Thus shall I kepe unto myne endyng day.

Enprint my speche in your memoriall
Sadly, my princes, salve of all my fore,
And thinke that for I would becomin thrall,
And ben your owne, as I have saied before,
Ye must of pitie cherishe more and more
Your man, and tendir attir his deserte,
And give hym corage for to ben experte.

For where that one hath set his herte on fire,
And findith neithir refute ne plesaunce,
Ne worde of comforte, deth will quite his hire,
Alas that there ne is none allegaunce
Of all ther wo, alas the grete grevaunce
To love, unloved! but ye, my ladie dere,
In other wise maie governe this matere.

Truly, gramercie, frende, of your gode will,
And of your profir in your humble wif,
But for your service, take and kepe it still,
And wher ye saie I ought you well to' cherishe
And of your grete the remedie devise,
I knowe not why, I n'am acquaintid well
With you, ne wote not sotily where ye dwell.

In art of love I write and songis make,
That maie be song in honour of the kyng,
And quene of love, and then I undirtake
He that is sadde, shall then full mery syng,
And daungirous not ben in every thyng,
Beseeche I you, but seen my will and rede,
And let your answere put me out of drede.

What is your name? reherse it here I praie,
Of whens and where, of what condicion
That ye ben of? let se come of, and saie,
Faine would I knowe your disposicion
Ye have put on your old entencion,
But whate ye mene, to serve me, I ne wote,
Saufe that ye saie, ye love me woundir hote.

My name alas, my herte why makes thou straunge
Philogenet I cal'd am ferre and nere,
Of Cambridge clerke, that nevyr thinke to chaunge
Fro you, that with your heavenly stremis clere
Ravishe myne herte and ghost, and all in fere,
Since at the first I write my bill for grace,
Me thinke I se some mercie in your face.

And what I mene, by God that al hath wrought,
My bille now makith finall mencion
That ye ben ladie in myne inward thought
Of all myne herte, withoutin offencion,
That I beste love, and have sith I begon
To drawe to courte, lo then what might I saie!
I yelde me here unto your high nobleye:

And if that I offende, or wilfully
By pompe of herte your precept disobaie,
Or doch againe your wille unskilfully,
Or grevin you for earnest or for plaie,
Correcte ye me right sharply then I praie,
As it is seen unto your womanhede,
And rewe on me, or els I n'am but dede.

Naie God forbede to fesse you so with grace;
And for a word of sugrid eloquence
To have compassion in so lityl space,
Then were it tyme that some of us wer hens,
Ye shall not finde in me soche insolence,
Aye, what is this, maie ye not suffre sight?
How maie ye loke upon the candill light,

That clere is and hottir then is myne eye?
And yet ye saied the bemis perfe and frete,
How shall ye then the candill light endrie?
For well wotte ye that hath the sharpir herte,
And there ye bidde me, you correct and bere,
If ye offende, naie that maie not be doen,
There come but few, that spedin here so sone.

Withdrawe your eye, withdrawe from presens eke,
Hurte not your self through foly with a loke,
I would be sory so to make you sicke,
A woman should beware eke whom she toke,
Ye beth a clerke, go serchin wel my boke,
If any women ben so light to winne,
Naie' abide a while, tho ye were all my kinne.

So sone ye maie not win myne hert in truth,
The guise of court will seen your stedfastnesse,
And as you doen to have upon you reuth,
Your owne deserte, and lowly gentilesse,
That will reward you joye for hevinessse,
And tho ye waxin pale; and grene, and dede,
Ye muste it use a while withoutin drede,

And it accept, and grutchin in no wif,
But whereas ye me hastily desire
To bene to love, me thinke ye be not wif,
Cese of your language cese I you requere,
For he that hath this xx yere bene here
May nat optaine, than marvaile I that ye
Be now so bold of love to trete with me.

A mercy, hert, my lady and my love,
My rightwif princeesse and my lyv's guide,
Nowe may I plein to Venus al above,
That routhles ye me gave this wounde so wide,
What have I done, why may it not betide,
That for my trouthe I may receivid be?
Alas than your daungit and cruiltie!

In woful houre I gote was welaway!
In woful hour toltirid and yfedde,
In woful hour yborne, that I ne may
My suplicacion swetely have yspedde,
The frosty grave and cold muste be my bedde;
Withoute ye list your grace and mercy shewe,
Death with his axe so faste on me doth hewe.

So grete disese and in so litil while,
So litil joy that felte I nevyr yet,

And

And at my wo Fortune ginnith to smyle,
That nevir arst I felte so harde a fitte,
Confoundid ben my spirites and my witte,
Til that my lady take me to her cure,
Whiche I love beste of erthely creature.

But that I like that may I not come by,
Of that I plain that have I habondaunce,
Sorowe and thought they sit me wondir nye, 990
Me is withhold that might be my plesaunce,
Yet turne again my worldly suffisaunce,
O lady bright, and saufe your faithful true,
And or I die yet ones upon me rewe.

With that I fell in founde, and dede as stone,
With coloure flaine and wanne as ashe pale,
And by the hande she caught me up anon,
Arise (qð she) what have ye dronkin dwale?
Why slepin ye? it is no nitirtale.
Now mercy swete (qð I) iwis affraied: 1000
What thing (qð she) hath made you so dismaied?

Now wote I wel that ye a lovir be,
Your hew is witnesse in this thing she said,
Yf ye were secret, ye might knowe (qð she)
Curteise and kinde all this shuld be aleide,
And now myne herte al that I have misseid
I shal amend, and set your herte in ese,
That worde it is (qð I) that doth me plesse.

But this I charge that ye the stentis kepe,
And breke them not for sloth nor ignoraunce, 1010
With that she gan to smile and laughin depe:
Ywis qð I) I will do your plesaunce,
The xvi statute doth we grete grevaunce,
But ye must that releffe or modifie:
I graunte (qð she) and so I wil truly.

And softely than her coloure gan appeire
As rose so red throughout her visage al,
Wherefore me thinketh that it is according here
That she of right be clepid Roial.
Thus have I wonne with wordis gret and smal
Some godely worde of her that I love best,
And trust she shall yet sette mine herte in rest.

GOth on, she said to Philobone, and take
This man with you, and lede him al aboute
Within the courte, and shewe him for my sake
What lovirs dwel within, and al the route
Of officers, for he is oute of doute
A straungir yet, come on (qð Philobone)
Philogenet, with me now must ye gon.

And stalking softely with esy pace I sawe 1030
Aboute the king ystondin environ
Attendaunce, Diligence, and ther fellow
Forthir Asperaunce, and many one,
Dred to offende there stode, and not alone,
For there was eke the cruil adversarye
The lovirs so that cleped is Displeasure,

Whiche unto me spake angrily and felle,
And said, my lady, me dissevin shall,
Trowest thou (qð she) that al that she did tell
Is true? nay nay but undir hony gall 1040
Thy birth and hers thei be nothing egal
Caste of thine herte, for all her wordis white,
For gode faith she lovith The but alite,

And eke remembre thine habillite
May not compare with her, this wel thou wot,
Ye than came Hope and said my frende, let be,

Beleve him not, Dispaire he ginnith dote.
Alas (qð I) here is both cold and hote!
The tone me biddith love, the toðir nay,
Thus wote I not what me is best to say. 1050

But wel wote I my lady grauntid me
Truly to be my wound's remedy,
Her gentilnesse may not infectid be
With doublenesse, thus trust I til I die.
So cast I voide dispairis company,
And takin hope to council and to frende,
Yea kepe that wel (qð Philobone) in minde.

And there beside, within a bay windowe
Stod one in grene ful large of bred and length,
His berd as black as fethirs of the Crow, 1060
His name was lust, of woundir might and strength,
And with Delite to argue there he thinkth,
For this was alway his opinion
That love was sinne, and so he hath begonne

To reson faste, and ledge auctorite.
Nay (qð Delite) love is a vertue clere,
And from the soule his progresse holdith he,
Blinde appetite of lust doth oftin stere,
And that is sinne, for reson lackith there,
For thou doest think thy neighbour's wife to winne,
Yet thinke it wel that love may not be sinne.

For God and seint they love right verily,
Voide of al synne and vife, this know I well,
Affeccion of fleshe is sinne truly,
But verray love is vertue as I fele,
For verray love may freile desire ackele,
For love is love withoutin any sinne,
Nowe stint (qð Luste) thou spekest not worth
a pinne.

And there I left them in ther arguing,
Roming ferthir into the castil wide, 1080
And in a cornir Lier stode talking
Of lesings fast with Flattery there beside,
He said that women were attire of pride,
And men were founde of nature variaunte,
And coude be false, and shewin beau semblaunt.

Than flattery bespake and said iwis,
Se so she goth on patins faire and fete,
It doth right well, what pretty man is this,
That romith here? now truly drink ne mete
Nede I not have, mine herte for joye doth bete
Him to beholde, so is he godely freshe,
It semeth for love his herte is tendre and neshe.

This is the courte of lusty folke and glad,
And wel becometh ther abite and arraye,
O why be som so sory and so sadde,
Complaining thus in blak and white and gray?
Freris they ben and Monkis in gode fay,
Alas! for routh gret dole it is to sene,
To se them thus bewaile and sory bene!

Se how they crie and wring ther handis whit, 1100
For they so sone went to religion,
And eke the Nonnes with vail and wimple plight
Ther thought that they ben in confusion,
Alas! they fain we fain perfeccion
In clothis wide, and lacke our libertie!
But al the sinne more on our frendis be.

For Venus wote we wold as faine as ye,
That bene attirid here and wel be sene,
Desyrin man and love in our degre,

Ferre

Ferne and faithful, right as ywold the quene, 1110
Our frendis wicke in tendir youth and grene
Ayenst our will made us religious,
That is the cause we mourne and wailin thus.

Than saide the Monke and Freris in the tide
Wel may we curse our Abbis and our place,
Our statutes sharpe to sing in copis wide,
Chastely to kepe us oute of lov'is grace,
And nevir to fele comforte ne solace,
Yet suffre we the hete of lov'is fire,
And aftir othir happily we desire. 1120

O Fortune courlid, why nowe and wherfore
Hast thou, they said, berafte us libertie,
Sithe nature yave us instrument in store,
And appetite to love and lov'irs be?
Why mot we suffer soche adversite,
Diane to serve and Venus to refuse?
Ful oftin fythe this matier doth us muse.

We serve and honour sore ayenste our will
Of chastite the goddess and the quene, 1130
Us lesir were with Venus bidin stil,
And have reward for love and so get bene
Unto these women courtely freshe and shene,
Fortune, we curse thy whele of variaunce,
Ther we were wel thou revist our plesaunce.

Thus leve I them with voice of plaint and care
In raging wo cryng ful pitouly,
And as I yede ful nakid and ful bare
Some I beholde loking dispiteously,
On povirte that dedly cast ther eye,
And welaway they cried, and were not faine,
For they ne might ther glad desire attaine,

For lacke of richeffe worldly and of gode,
They banne and curse and wepe and fain alas!
That povertie hath us hent that whilom stode
At hert'is eke and fre and in gode case,
But now we dare not shew our selfe in place,
Ne us embolde to dwel in company,
There as our hert wold love right faithfully.

And yet againewarde shrikid every nonne,
The pange of love so strainith them to crie, 1150
Now wo the time (qð they) that we be boun,
This hateful orde nise wil doen us die,
We sigh and sobbe and bleding inwardly,
Fretting our selfe with thought and hard complaint,
That nye for love we waxin wode and faint.

And as I stode beholding here and there,
I was wate of a sorte ful languishing,
Savage, and wilde, of loking, and of chere,
Ther mantilles and ther clothisey tering,
And ofte they were of nature complaining, 1160
For they ther membirs lackid fote and hand,
With visage wry and blinde I undirstand.

They lackid shap and beautie to preferre
Them self in love, and said that God and kind
Hath forgid them to worshipping the sterre
Venus the bright, and leftin al behinde
His othir werkis clene and oute of minde,
For othir have ther full shappe and beautie,
And we (qð they) ben in deformite.

And nye to them there was a company, 1170
That have the sustirs waried and mislaide,
I mene the thre of fatall destine,
That be our werdis sodenly abraide

Oute gan they crie, as they had ben affraied,
We curse (qð they) that evir hath nature
Yformid us this wofull life to' endure.

And there he was, contrite, and gan repent,
Confessing whole the wounde that Cithere
Hath with the darte of hote desire him sent,
And howe that he to love muste subjeet be, 1180
Than held he al his skornis vanite,
And said that lov'irs lede a blissid life,
Yong men and olde, and widowe maid and wife.

Bereve me goddesse (qð he) of thy might
My skornis al and skoffis that I have,
No powir for to mockin any wight,
That in thy service dwel, for I did rave,
This knowe I wel right now, so God me save,
And I shal be the chief post of thy faith,
And love uphold, the revers who so faith. 1190

Dissemble stode not ferre from him in trouth,
With party mantil, party hode, and hofe,
And said he had upon his lady routh,
And thus he wound him in and gan to glose,
Of his ententful double I suppose,
And al the worlde he said he loved it wele,
But ay me thought he loved her nere adele.

Eke shamefastnesse was there, as I toke hede,
That blushid rede, and darst nat ben aknowe 1200
She lov'ir was, for therof had she drede,
She stode and hing her visage downe alowe,
But soche a sight it was to sene I trowe,
As of these rosis rody on ther stalke,
Ther coud no wight her spy to speke or talke.

In lov'is arte so gan she to abashe,
Ne durst not uttir al her privite,
Many a stripe and many a grevouise lashe
She gave to them that woldin lov'irs be,
And hindered fore the simple com'naltie, 1210
That in no wise durst grace and mercie crave,
For were not she, they nede but aske and have,

Where yf they now aprochin for to speke,
Than shamefastnesse returnith them again,
They thinke if we our secret counsel breke,
Our ladies wil have scorne on us certain,
And peravinture thinkin grete disdain,
Thus shamefastnesse may bringin in dispeire,
When she is dede the toðir will be heire,

Come forth, Avauntir, now I ring thy Bel, 1220
I spied him sone to God I make a vowe,
He lokid black as fendis doth in hell,
The firste (qð he) that evir did I wowe
Within a worde she come I wotte not how,
So that in armis was my lady fre,
And so hath ben a thoulande mo than she.

In England, Britain, Spain, and Picardie,
Artois, and Fraunce, and up in hie Holande,
In Burgoine, Naples, and in Italye,
Navarre, and Grece, and up in Hethin lond, 1230
Was nevir woman yet that wolde withstond
To ben at commaundement whan I wolde,
I lackid neithir silvir coigne ne gold.

And there I met with this estate and that,
And here I brochid her, and here, I trowe,
Lo! there goeth one of myn, and wotte ye what?
Yon freshe attirid have I leide ful lowe,
And soche one yondir eke right wel I knowe,
I kepte the statute whan we lay if ere,

And yet yon same hath made me right gode
chere. 1240

Thus hath Avauntir blowin every where
Al that he knoweth, and more a thousande fold,
His auncistrie of kinne was to lier,
For firste he makith promise for to hold,
His ladis council, and it not unfolde,
Wherefore the secrete when he doth unshutte,
Than lyith he that all the worlde maye witte.

For falsing so his promise and behest
I wondir fore he hath soche fantasie,
He lackith witte I trowe or is a beste, 1250
That can no bette himselfe with reson guy,
By mine advice love shall be contrarie
To his availe, and him eke dishonoure,
So that in courte he shall no more sojoure.

Take hede (qð she) this litil Philobone,
Where envie rockith in the cornir yonde,
And sittith derke, and ye shal se anone
His lene bodie, his fading face and honde,
Him self he frettith, as I undirstonde,
Witnesse of Ovide Metamorphosofe, 1260
The lovirs so he is, I wil not glose.

For where a lovir thinkith him promote,
Envie wil grutche repining at his wele,
It swellith fore about his hertis rote,
That in no wise he canne not live in hele,
And if the faithful to his lady stele,
Envie will noife and ringe it rounde aboute,
And sey moch worfe than done is out of doute.

And privie thought, rejoyfing of him selfe,
Stode not ferre thens in abite mervilous, 1270
Yon is, thought I, some spirite, or some else,
His sotil Image is so curious,
How is (qð I) that he is thadid thus
With yondir cloth I n'or of what coloure,
And nere I went, and gan to lere and pore.

And frainid him a question ful harde,
Whate is (qð I) the thing thou lovist beste?
Or what is bore unto thy painis harde?
Me thinke thou livist here in gret unrest,
Thou wandrist aye from south to est and west,
And est to northe as ferre as I canne se,
There is no place in Court may holdin The.

Whom folowest thou, wher is thy hert isat?
But my demaunde afoile I The require.
Me thought (qð he) no creature may let
Me to ben here and where as I desire,
For whare as absence hath done out the fire,
My mery thought it kindeleth yet againe,
That bodily me thinke with my soveraine,

I stand, and speke, and laugh, and kisse, and halfe,
So that my thought comfortith me ful oft,
I think, God wote, though al the world be false
I wil be true, I thinke also howe softe
My lady is in speche, and this on loft
Bringith mine herte with joie and gret gladnesse
This privey thought alaieth mine hevinesse.

And whate I thinke or where to be no man
In al this erthe can tel ywis but I,
And eke there n'is no swalow swift ne swan
So wight of wing, ne halfe so yerne can fle, 1300
For I canne ben and that right sodenly
In heven, in hell, in paradise, and here,
And with my lady whan I wil desire.

I am of counfel ferre, and wide I wote,
With lorde and lady, and ther privite,
I wotte it al, and be it hote or colde,
They shall not speke without licence of me,
I myne in soche as sefonable be,
For firste the thing is thought within the hert,
Er any worde oute from the mouth asterte. 1310

And what that word thought bad farewell and yede,
Eke furthe went I to sene the court's guife,
And at the dore came, in so God me spede,
Twenty courteours of age, and of assise,
Liche high and brode, and as I me advise,
The goldin love, and ledin love they hight,
The tone was sad, the t'oðir glad and light.

Yes draw your hert, with all your force and might
To lustinesse, and ben as ye have seid,
And thinke that I no drope of favour hight, 1320
Ne ner had unto your desire obeide,
Til sodenly me thought me was affraied
To sene you waxe so dede of countinaunce,
And pite bade me done you some plesauce.

Oute of her shrine she rose from deth to live,
And in mine ere ful privily she spake,
Doth not your servaunt hens away to drive,
Rosial (qð she) and than mine herte brake,
For tendiriche, and where I founde moch lacke
In your persone, then I my self bethought, 1330
And saide this is the man myne herte hath sought.

Gramercy Pite might I not suffice
To yeve due laude unto thy shrine of golde,
God wotte I wold, for fith that ye did rise
From deth to live for me I am behold
To thankin you a thousand tymis tolde,
And eke my lady Rosial the shene,
Whiche hath in comforte set mine herte I wene.

And here I make myne protestacion,
And depely swere as mine powir to bene 1340
Faithful devoide of variacion,
And her forbere in angir or in tene,
And serviceable to my world's quene,
With al my reson and intelligence,
To done her honour high and reverence.

I had not spoke so sone the worde, but she,
My soverain did thanke me hertily,
And said abide, ye shal dwelle still with me,
Till sefon come of May, for than truly,
The king of love and al his company 1350
Shall holde his feste ful rially and welle,
And there I bode til that the sefon felle.

ON May-day whan the larke began to ryse,
To Matins went the lusty Nightingal,
Within a temple shapin hauthorn wise,
He might not slepe in all the nyghtirtale,
But Domine labia gan he crie and gale,
My lippis opin, lord of love, I crie,
And let my mouth thy prising now bewrye.

The Egle sang Venite bodies al, 1360
And let us joye to love that is oure helth
And to the deske anon they gan to fall,
And who came late he precid in by stelth,
Then saied the Faucon our owen hertis welth
Domine Dominus noster, I wote,
Tē be the God that donne us brenne thus hote.

Cæli enarrant said the Poppingay,
Your might is told in heven and firmament,
And then came in the goldfinche freshe and gay
And saied this Psalme with herrtely glad intent,
Domini est terra, This latin intent,
The God of love hath yerth in gouvraunce,
And than the Wren gan scippin and to daunce,

Jube Domine, O Lorde of love I pray
Commaunde me wel this lesson for to rede,
This legende is of al that woldin dye
Martirs for love, God yef the foulis spede,
And to The Venus singe we oute of drede,
By influence of al thy vertue grete,
Beseching The to kepe us in our hete. 1380

The seconde lesson Robin Redebreste sang,
Hail to the God and Goddes of our lay,
And to the lectorn amorily he sprang,
Hail (qð he) O thou freshe selson of May,
Our monith glad, that singin on the spray,
Hail to the flouris rede and white and blewe,
Whiche by ther vertue makith our lust new.

The thirde lesson the Turtill dove toke up,
And therat lough the Mavis in a scorne,
He said O God as mote I dine or suppe, 1390
This solishe Dove wil gife us al an horne,
There bin right here a M. bettir borne
To rede this lesson, whiche as wel as he,
And eke as hote, can love in al degre.

The Turtill dove said, welcom, welcom May,
Gladfom and light to lovirs that ben trewe,
I thanke the lord of love that doth purvey
For me to rede this lesson al of dewe,
For in gode soth of corage I pursue
To serve my make, tyll deth us must departe,
And than Tu autem sang he al aparte.

Te Deum amoris sang the Thrustil cocke,
Tuball him self the firste Musician
With key of armony coude not on locke
So swete a tewhe as that the Thrustil can,
The lorde of love we praisin (qð he) than,

And so done al the foulis gret and lite
Honour we May in fals lovirs dispite.

Dominus regnavit said the Pecoche there,
The lord of love that mighty prince was,
He is recevid here and every where. 1410
Nowe Jubilate sang, what menith this?
Said than the Lynet, welcom Lord of blisse,
Oute sterte the Owle with Benedicite,
What menith al this mery fare (qð he.)

Laudate sang the Larke with voice ful shril,
And eke the Kight O admirabile,
This quire wil throw min eris pers and thril,
But what? welcom this May selson (qð he)
And honoure to the lord of love mote be, 1420
That hath this feste so solempne and so hie,
Amen said al, and so said eke the Pic.

And forth the Cockowe gan procede anon,
With Benedictus thanking God in hast,
That in this May wolde visite them echon,
And gladdin them al while the fest shal last,
And therwithal a laughtir oute he braste,
I thanke it God that I shuld ende the song,
And al the Service whiche hath ben so long.

Thus sang they al the service of the feste, 1430
And that was done right erly to my dome,
And furth goth al the courte both most and lest,
To fetch the flouris fresh, and braunch, and blome,
And namely hauthorn brought both page and grome,
With fresh garlantis party blew and white
And than rejoyfin in ther grete delite.

Eke eche at othir threwe the flouris bright,
The Prymerose, the Violete and the gold,
So than as I beheld the roial sight,
My lady gan me sodenly behold, 1440
And with a trewe love, plitid many' a folde,
She smot me through the very herte as blive,
And Venus yet I thanke I am alive.

Explicit.

CHAUCER'S Dreame, never before the Year 1597. Printed.
That which heretofore hath gone under the name of his Dreame, is the Book of the Duchesse: or the Death of Blanch, Duchesse of Lancaster.

This Dreame devised by CHAUCER, semeth to be a covert report of the Marriage of John of Gaunt the King's sonne, with Blanch the daughter of Henry Duke of Lancaster, who after long love, (during the time wherof the Poet faineth them to be dead) were in the end by consent of friends happily married: figured by a bird bringing in her bill an hearbe, which restored them to lyfe againe. Here also is shewed CHAUCER's match with a certain Gentlewoman, who although she was a stranger, was notwithstanding so well liked and loved of the Lady Blanch, and her Lord, as CHAUCER himselfe also was, that gladly they concluded a marriage betweene them.

When Flora the quene of plesaunce,
Had whole achievid th' obeysaunce,
Of the fresh and the new felon,
Thorow out every region,
And with her mantle whole covert
That wintir made had discovert,
Of avinture withoutin light,
In May I lay upon a night,
Alone, and on my lady thought,
And how the Lord that her ywrought,
Couth well entayle in Imagery,
And shewid had grete mailltiry,
When he in so litil a space
Made such a body and a face,
So grete beautie with swich fetures,
More than in othir creatures.
And in my thoughtis as I lay,
Within a lodge out of the way,
Beside a well in a forest,
Where aftir hunting I toke rest,
Nature and kind so in me wrought,
That halfe on slepe they me ybrought,
And gan to dreame to my thinking
With mind of knowliche like making:
For what I dremid, as me thought,
I saw it, and I sleptin nought,
Wherefore is yet my full beleve,
That some gode spirit that ilke eve
By mene of some curious port,
Bare me, where I saw payne and sport:
But whether it were I woke or slept,
Well wot I oft I lough and wept,
Wherefore I woll in remembrance,
Put whole the payne, and the plesaunce,
Which was to me axin and hele,
Would God ye wist it everydele;
Or at the lest, ye might o night
Of such anothir have a sight,
Although it were to you a payne,
Yet on the mo'row, ye would be fayne,
And wish that it might long endure,
Then might ye say ye had gode cure,
For he that dremes, and wenes he se,
Mochil the bettir yet maie he
Ywit what, and of whom, and where,
And eke the lasse it woll hindere,
To thinke I se this with mine eene,
Iwis this may not dremè kene,

But signe or a signifaunce,
Of hasty thing founing plesaunce;
For on this wise upon a night,
As ye have herd withoutin light,
Not all wakyng, ne full on slepe,
About such hour as lovits wepe,
And crie aftir thier ladies grace,
Betell me tho this wondir cace,
Which ye shall here and all the wise,
So wholly as I can devise:
In playne English evill writtin,
For slepe writir well ye wittin
Excusid is, though he do mis,
More than one whiche that waking is,
Wherefore here of your gentilnesse,
I you requyre my boistousnesse
Ye lettin passe, as thinge rude,
And herith what I woll conclude,
And of the endityng takerh no hode,
Ne of the termes, so God you spede,
But let all passe as nothing were,
For thus befell, as you shall here.

Within an yle methought I was,
Where wall, and yate was all of glasse,
And so was closid round about,
That levelesse none come in ne out;
Uncouth and straunge to behold,
For every yate of fine gold,
A thousand labris, aie turning,
Entunid had, and briddes finging,
Divers, and on eche, fane a paire,
With opin mouth again the aire;
And of a sute were all the toures,
Subtily corvin aftir floures,
Of uncouth colours, during aye,
That nevir ben none sene in May,
With many a small turret hie;
But man on live could I non sie,
Ne creturis, save ladies play,
Which werin such of ther array,
That as me thought of godelihed,
They passeden all, and womanhed,
For to behold them daunce and sing,
It semid like none erthly thing,
Such was ther uncouth countinaunce,
In every play of right usaunce,

And

And of one age everichone
 They semid all save onely one,
 Which had of yeris suffisaunce,
 For she might neythir sing ne daunce,
 But yet her countenaunce was so glad,
 As she so fewe yeris had had,
 As any ladie that was there,
 And as litil it did her dere,
 Of lustines to laugh and tale,
 As she had full stufid a male
 Of disportis and new playis:
 Faire had she ben in her dayis,
 And maistresse semid well to be
 Of all that lusty companie,
 And so she might, I you ensure,
 For one the conningist cature
 She was, and so said everichone,
 That er her knew, there failid none,
 For she was sober, and well avised,
 And from every fault disguised,
 And nothing used but faith and truth,
 That she n'as young it was grete ruth,
 For every where, and in ech place,
 She govirnid her, that in grace
 She stode alway with pore and riche,
 That at a word was none her liche,
 Ne halfe so' able maistres to be,
 To such a lusty companie.

Befell me so, when I avised
 Yhad the yle that me suffised,
 And whole th' estate every where,
 That in the lusty yle was there,
 Which was more wondir to devise,
 Than is the joyous paradise,
 I dare well say; for floure he tre,
 Ne thing wherein pleasaunce might be,
 There faylid none, for every wight,
 Had they desirid, day and night,
 Richis and helle, beauty and ese,
 With every thing that them might plesse,
 But thinke and have, it cost no more,
 In such a country there before
 Had I not ben ne herdin tell,
 That livis creature might dwell.
 And when I had thus all about
 The yle avised thoroughout,
 The state, and how they were arayed,
 In my hert I wexe well appayed,
 And in my selfe I me assured,
 That in my body' I was well ured,
 Sithin I might have such a grace,
 To se the ladies and the place,
 Which were so faire, I you ensure,
 That to my dome though that nature
 Would evir strive and do her paine,
 She should not con ne mow attaine
 The lest feture for to amend,
 Though she would all her conning spende,
 That unto beautie might availe,
 It were but paine and lost travaile,
 Such part in ther nativite
 Was then alargid of beautie,
 And eke they had a thing notable,
 Unto ther deth ay durable,
 And was, that ther beauty should dure,
 Which was never sepe in cature,
 Save onily there (as I trow)
 It ne hath not be wist ne know,
 Wherefore I praise with ther conning
 That during beautie, richè thing,
 Had they ben of ther lives certaine,
 They had ben quite of every paine,

And when I wend thus all have sene,
 The state, the riches, that might bene,
 That me thought impossible were
 To se one thing more than was there,
 That to beautie or glad conning
 Serve or availe might any thing,
 All sodainly, as I there stode,
 This lady, that couth so much gode,
 Unto me came with smiling chere,
 And said benedicite! this yere
 Saw I never man here but you,
 Tell me how ye come hiðir now?
 And your name, and where that ye dwell?
 And whom ye seke eke mote ye tell,
 And how ye come be to this place,
 The soth well told may cause you grace,
 And ellis ye mote prifoner be
 Unto the ladies here, and me,
 That have the governaunce of this yle:
 And with that word she gan to smile,
 And so did all the lusty rout
 Of ladies that stode her about.
 Madame (qð I) this night ypast,
 Lodgid I was and slepte fast,
 In a forest beside a well,
 And now am here, how should I tell,
 Wot I not by whose ordinance,
 But onely fortune's purveiance,
 Which puttith many, as I gesse,
 To travaile, paine, and businesse,
 And lettith nothing for ther truth,
 But some sleeth eke, and that is ruth,
 Wherefore I doubt her brittilnes,
 Her variance and unstedfastnes,
 So that I am as yet afraid,
 And of my beyng here amaid,
 For wondir thing it semith me,
 Thus many fresh ladies to se,
 So faire, so cunning, and so yong,
 And no man dwelling them among:
 N'ot I not how I hiðir come,
 Madame (qð I) this all and some,
 What should I faine a long processe,
 To you that seme such a princeffe?
 What plesith you commaund or say,
 Here I am redy to obay,
 To my powir, and all fulfill,
 And prifonir bide at your will,
 Till you duly enformid be
 Of every thing ye aske me.

This lady there right well apaid,
 Me by the hande ytoke, and said,
 Welcome prifoner adventurus,
 Right glad am I ye have said thus,
 And for ye doubt me to displese,
 I will assay to do you ese:
 And with that word, ye right anon,
 She, and the ladies everichon,
 Assemblid, and to counsaile went,
 And aftir that sone for me sent,
 And to me said on this manere,
 All word for word, as ye shall here.

To se you here us thinke marvaile;
 And how withoutin bote or faile,
 By any subtilty or wyle,
 Ye get have entre in this yle,
 But not for that, yet shall ye se,
 That we gentill women ybe,
 Loth to displese any wight,
 Notwithstanding our grete right;
 And for ye shall well undirfond
 The olde custome of this lond,

Which hath continued many yere,
Ye shall well wete that with us here
Ye may not bide, for causis twaine,
Which we be purposed you to saine.

The one is this, our ordinance,
Which is of long continuance,
Ne wolle not, sothly we you tell,
That no man here among us dwell,
Wherefore ye mote nedis retourne,
In no wise may you here sojourne.

The othir is eke, that our Quene,
Out of the Relme, as ye maie sene,
Is, and may be to us a charge,
If we let goe you here at large,
For whiche cause the more we doubt
To doe a fault while she is out,
Or suffir that may be noysance,
Againe our old accustomance.

And when I had these causis twaine
Yherd, O God, what mochil paine
All sodainly about mine hert
There came at onis, and how smert !
In creping soft as who should stele,
Or doe me robbe of all mine hele,
And made me in my thought so fraid,
That in courage I stode dismaid.
And standing thus, as was my grace,
A Lady came more than apace,
With a huge preise her about,
And told how that the Quene without
Was arivid, and would come in,
Well were they that hiȝir might twin,
They hied so they would not abide
The bridiling ther horse to ride,
By five, by sixe, by two, by thre,
There was not one abode with me,
The quene to mete everichone
They went, and bode with me not one,
And I went aftir a soft pale, :

Imagining how to purchase
Grace of the Quene, there to abide,
Till gode fortune some happy guide
Me sendin might, that would me bring
Where I was borne to my wonning,
For way ne fote ne knew I none,
Ne whithirward I n'ist to gone,
For all was Se about the yle,
No wondir though me list not smile,
Seing the case uncouth and straunge,
And so in like a perilous chaunge,
Imagi'ning thus walking alone,
I saw the Ladies everichone,
So that I might somewhat offer,
Sone aftir that I drew me nere,
And tho I was ware of the Quene,
And how the Ladies on ther knene,
With joyous words, gladly advised,
Her welcomed so that it suffised,
Though she the princes whole had be
Of all environed is with Se:
And thus avising, with chere sad,
All sodainly I was right glad,
That gretir joy, as mote I thrive,
I trow had nevir man on live,
Than I tho, ne an hert more light,
When of my lady I had sight,
Which with the Quene ycome was there,
And in one clothing both they were,
A knight also there well besene,
I saw that come was with the Quene,
Of whom the Ladies of that yle
Had hugè wondir a long while,
Till at the last right sobirly
The Quene her self full cunningly,

240 With softe wordis in gode wise,
Said to the Ladies yong and nise,
My sistirs, how it hath befall,
I trow ye know it one and all,
That of long time here have I bene,
Within this yle bidding as Quene,
Living at ese, that nevir wight
More parfit joy havin ne might,

250 Aftir our custome and our low,
Which how they first yfoundin were,
I trow ye wote all the manere,
And who the Quene is of this yle,
As I have ben this longè while,
Ech sevin yeres mote of usage,

260 Vifit the heavenly armitage,
Which on a rock so high ystonds,
In strangè Se out from all londs,
That to makin the pilgrimage,
Is called a long per'ulous viage ;

270 For if the wind be not gode frend,
The journey duris to the end
Of him whiche that it undirtakes,
Of twenty thousand one not scapes,
Upon which rock growith a tre,
That certaine yeres beres applis thre,

280 Which thre applis who so may have,
Ben from all displeaunce ysave,
That in the sevin yere may fall,
This wote ye well bothe one and all,
For the first apple and the hext,
Which ygrowith unto you next,
Yhath thre vertues notable,
And kepith youth aie durable,
Beauty and loke evir in one,
And is the best in everichone.

290 The second apple red and grene,
Onely with lokis of your yene
You nourishis in grete plefaunce,
Bettir than Partridge or Fesaunce,
And fedis every liv'is wight,
Plesantly onely with the sight.

300 And the third apple of the thre,
Which growith lowist on the tre,
Who it beris ne may not faile,
That to his plefaunce may availe,
So your pleisure and beauty rich,
Your during youth evir yliche,

310 Your truth, your cunning, and your wele,
Hath aye flourid, and your gode hele,
Without sicknes, or displeaunce,
Or thing that to you was noysaunce,
So that you have as goddesses,
Livid above all princesses:

320 Now is befall, as ye may se,
To gathir these said applis thre
I have not failed againe the day,
Thithirward is to take the way,
Wening to spede as I had oft,

330 But when I come, I find aloft
My sistir, which that here ystands,
Having those applis in her hands,
Avising them, and nothing said,
But lokid as she were well paid :

340 And as I stode her to behold,
Thinking how my joyis were cold,
Sith I those applis have ne might,
Evin with that so came this knight,
And in his armes of me aware
Me toke, and to his ship me bare,
And said, though him I ner had sene,
Yet had I long his lady ben,

Wherefore

Wherefore I should with him ywend,
 And he would to his liv'is end
 My servant be, and gan to sing,
 As one that had wonne a rich thing :
 Tho were my spirits fro me gone
 So sodainly everichone,
 That in me apperid but deth,
 For I felt neithir life ne breth,
 Ne gode ne harme none I knewe,
 The sodaine paine me was so new,
 That had not the hasty grace be
 Of this lady, that fro the tre
 Of her gentillesse so hyid,
 Me to comfort, I had dyid,
 And of her thre applis she one
 Into mine hand there put anone,
 Which brought againe my mind and breth,
 And me recovered from the deth ;
 Wherefore to her so am I hold,
 That for her all things do I wold,
 For she was lech of all my smert,
 And from grete paine so quite mine hert,
 And as God wote, right as ye here,
 Me to comfort with frendly chere
 She did her prowesse and her might,
 And truly eke so did this knight,
 In that he couth, and oftyn said,
 That of my wo he was ill paid,
 And curst the ship that them there brought,
 The mast, the mastir that it wrought ;
 And as ech thing mote have an end,
 My sistir here your brothir frend,
 Con with her words so womanly
 This knight entrete and conningly,
 For mine honour and his also,
 And said that with her we should go
 Both in her ship, where she was brought,
 Which was so wondirfully wrought,
 So clene, so rich, and so araid,
 That we were both content and paid,
 And me to comfort and to plesse,
 And mine hert for to put at ese,
 She toke grete paine in litil while,
 And thus hath brought us to this yle,
 As ye may se : wherefore echone
 I pray you thanke her one and one,
 As hertly as ye can devise,
 Or imagine in any wise.
 At once there tho men mightin seen,
 A world of Ladies fall on kneen,
 Fore my Lady that there about
 Was left none standing in the rout,
 But altogether they went at ones
 To knele, they spared not for the stones,
 Ne for estate, ne for ther blode,
 Well shewid there they couth much gode :
 To my Lady they made such fest,
 And with such wordis, that the left
 So frendly and so faithfully
 Ysaid was, and so cunningly,
 That wondir was seing ther youth,
 To here the language that they couth ;
 And wholly how they governed were,
 In thanking of my Lady there,
 And said by will and maundement,
 They were at her commaundement,
 Which was to me as grete a joy,
 As winning of the toun of Troy
 Was to the hardy Grekis strong,
 When they it wan with siege long,
 To se my Lady in such a place,
 And so recevid as she was.
 And when they talkid had a while
 Of this and that, and of the yle,

My lady, and the ladies there,
 Altogithir as they ywere,
 The Quene her self began to play,
 And to the agid lady say :
 390 Now semith you not gode it were,
 Sith we be altogithir here,
 To ordaine and devise the best,
 To set this knight and me at rest,
 For woman is a feble wight
 To vere a warre against a knight,
 And sith he here is in this place,
 At my left in dangir, or grace,
 470 It were to me grete villany,
 To do him any tyranny ;
 But faine I would, now will ye here,
 In his owne country that he were,
 And I in pece, and he at ese,
 This were a way us both to plesse :
 If it might be, I you besече,
 With him hereof you fall in speche.
 This lady tho began to smile,
 Avising her a litil while,
 480 And with glad chere she said anone,
 Madam, I will unto him gone,
 And with him speke, and oftyn fele ;
 What he desiris every dele :
 And sobirly this lady tho
 Her selfe, and othir ladies two
 She toke with her, and with sad chere,
 Said to the knight on this manere.
 Sir, the grete princes of this yle,
 Whom for your plesance many mile
 490 Ye sought have, as I undirstond,
 Till at the last ye have her fond,
 Me sent hath here, and ladies twaine,
 To herin all thing that ye faine,
 And for what cause ye have her sought,
 Faine would she wote, and whole your thought,
 And why you do her all this wo,
 And for what cause you be her so,
 And why of every wight unware,
 By force ye to your ship her bare,
 500 That she so nigh ywas agone,
 430 That mind ne spech ne had she none,
 But as a painfull creature,
 Dying, abode her advinture,
 That her to se indure that paine,
 Here we all say unto you plaine,
 Right on your selfe ye did amisse,
 Seing how she a princes is ?
 This knight the which ycowth his gode,
 Right of his truth mevid his blode,
 510 That pale he woxe as any led,
 440 And lok't as tho he wold be ded,
 Blode was there none in nothir cheke,
 Wordlesse he was and semid sicke,
 And so it provid well he was,
 For without moving any paas,
 All sodainly as thing dying,
 He fell at onis downe fowning,
 That for his wo this lady fraid
 Unto the quene her hyed and said,
 520 Cometh on anon as have you blisse,
 450 But ye be wise, thing is amisse,
 This knight is ded or will be sone,
 Lo ! where he lyith in a swone,
 Withoutin word, or answiring
 To that I have said any thing !
 Wherefore I doubt moche that the blame
 Might be hindiring to your name,
 Which flourid hath so many yere,
 So longe that for nothing here
 530 I would in no wise that he dyed.
 460 Wherefore it gode were that he hyed,

His

His life to fain at the lest,
 And aftir that his wo be cest,
 Commaundith him to voide, or dwell,
 For in no wise dare I more mell
 Of thing wherein such perill is,
 As like is now to fall of this.
 This Quene right tho full of grete fere,
 With all the ladies present there,
 Unto the knight came where he lay,
 And made a Lady to him say:
 Lo! here the Quene awake for shame,
 What will you doe, is this gode game?
 Why lye you here, what is your mind?
 Now is well fene your wit is blind,
 To se so many Ladies here,
 And ye to make none othir chere;
 But as ye set them all at nought,
 Arise, for his love that you bought:
 But what she said, a word not one
 He spake, ne answere gave her none.
 The Quene of very pitty tho,
 Her worship, and his life also
 To fain there she did her paine,
 And quoke for fere, and gan to faine:
 For woe alas! what shall I doe!
 What shall I say this man unto!
 If he die here, lost is my name,
 How shal I play this perillous game?
 If any thing be here amisse,
 It shall be said it rigour is,
 Whereby my name impayrin might,
 And like to die eke is this knight:
 And with that word her hand she laid
 Upon his brest, and to him said,
 Awake my knight, lo! it am I,
 That to you speke, now tell me why
 Ye faire thus, and this paine endure,
 Seing you be in country sure,
 Among such frends that would you hele,
 Your hert is ese eke and your wele?
 And if I wist what you might ese,
 Or know the thing that you might plesse,
 I you ensure it should not faile,
 That to your hele you might availle:
 Wherefore with all my hert I pray
 Ye rise, and let us talke and play,
 And se how many Ladies here
 Be comin for to make gode chere.
 All was for nought, for still as stone
 He lay, and word ne spoke he none,
 Long while was or he might braid,
 And of all that the Quene had said
 He wist no word, but at the last,
 O mercy twise he cryid fast,
 That pittie was his voice to here,
 Or to behold his painefull chere,
 Which was not feined was well to sein,
 Both by his visage and his eyn,
 Which on the Quene at once he cast,
 And sighid as he would to braft,
 And aftir that eke he shright so,
 That wondir was to se his wo,
 For sithin that payne was first named,
 Was ner more wofull payne attained,
 For with voyce ded he gan to plaine,
 And to himselfe these wordis saine;
 I wofull wight full of malure,
 Am worse than ded, and yet I dure,
 And maugre any paine or deth,
 Against my will I fele my breth:
 Why n'am I ded sith I ne serve,
 And sith my lady will me sterve?
 Where art thou deth, art thou agast?
 Well shall we mete yex at the last,

Though thou The hide, it is for nought,
 For where thou dwelst, thou shalt be sought,
 Maugre thy subtill double face,
 Here will I die right in this place, 610
 To thy dishonour and myne ese,
 Thy mannir is no wight to plesse,
 What nedis The sith I The seche,
 So The to hide my payne to eche?
 And well wost thou I will not live,
 Who would me all this world here give,
 For I have with my cowardise
 Lost joy, and hele, and my servise,
 And made my soveraigne Lady so, 620
 That while she lives I trow my fo
 She will be evir to her end,
 Thus have I neithir joy ne frend;
 Wote I not whethir hast or sloth
 Hath causid this now by my troth, 550
 For at the hermitage full hie,
 When I her saw first with myne eye,
 I hyid till I was aloft,
 And made my pace small and soft,
 Till in mine armes I had her fast,
 And to my ship bare at the last, 630
 Whereof she was displeid so,
 That endles there semid her wo:
 And I thereof had so grete fere,
 That me repent that I come there, 560
 Which hast I trow gan her displese,
 And is the cause of my disese:
 And with that word he gan to cry,
 Now deth, deth, come twyis or thry,
 And motrid I n'ot what of slouth,
 And even with that the Quene of routh 640
 Him in her armis toke and sayd,
 Now mine owne knight be' not ill apayd,
 That I a lady to you sent,
 To have knowledge of your entent, 570
 For in gode faith I men't but well,
 And would ye wist it every dele,
 Nor will not do to you ywis,
 And with that word she gan him kisse,
 And prayed him rise, and said she would
 His welfare by her truth, and told 650
 Him how she was for his disese
 Right fory, and faine would him plesse,
 His lyfe to save: these wordis tho,
 She said to him, and many mo, 580
 In comforting, for from the paine,
 She would he were delivered faine;
 The knight tho up ycast his een,
 And when he saw it was the Quene,
 That to him had these wordis said,
 Right in his wo he gan to braid, 660
 And him up dressis for to knele,
 The Quene avising wondir wele:
 But as he rose he ovirthrew,
 Wherefore the Quene yet eft anew 590
 Him in her armis anone toke,
 And pitiously gan on him loke,
 But for all that nothyng she sayd,
 Ne spake not like she were well payd,
 Ne no chere made, nor sad, ne light,
 But all in one to every wight, 670
 There was fene conning, with estate,
 In her without noyse or debate,
 For save onely a loke piteous
 Of womanhed undispiteous, 600
 That she showid in countenance,
 For semed her hert from obeifance,
 And not for that she did her reine,
 Him to recovir from the peine,
 And his hert for to put at large,
 For her entent was to his barge 680
 Him

Him for to bryng agaynst the eve,
 With certaine ladies, and take leve;
 And pray him of his gentilnesse,
 To suffir her thenceforth in pece,
 As othir Princis had before,
 And from thenceforth for evirmore,
 She would him worship in all wise,
 That gentilnesse ymight devise,
 And payne her wholly to fulfill,
 In honour, his plesure, and will.
 And during thus this knightis wo,
 Present the Quene and othir mo,
 My lady' and many' an othir wight,
 Ten thousand shippis at a sight,
 I saw come oer the wawy fode
 With sayle and ore, that as I stode
 Them to behold, I gan marvaile,
 From whom might come so many' a faile;
 For sith the tyme that I was bore,
 Such a navie there ne're before
 Had I not sene, ne so arayed,
 That for the sight my hert yplayed,
 Aye to and fro within my brest,
 For joy, long was or it would rest,
 For there was saylis full of floures,
 Aftir castils with huge toures,
 Yfeming full of armis bright,
 That wondir lusty was the sight,
 With large toppis, and mastis long,
 Richly depeint, and reare among
 At certaine timis gan repayre,
 Smale birdis doune from the aire,
 And on the shippis bounds about
 Yfate and song with voyce full out
 Ballades and Layes right joyously,
 As they couth in ther harmony,
 That you to write that I there se,
 Mine excuse is, it may not be.
 For why? the mattir were to long,
 To name the birds and write ther song;
 Whereof anon the tydings there
 Unto the Quene sone brought ywere,
 With many' alas, and many' a doubt,
 Shewing the shippis there without;
 Tho gan the agid lady wepe,
 And said alas! our joy on slepe,
 Sone shal be brought, ye long or night,
 For we discried ben by this knight,
 For certes it may none othir be,
 But he is of yond companie,
 And they be come him here to seche,
 And with that word her faylid speche;
 Without reme'dy we be destroid,
 Full oft said all, and gan conclude,
 Wholy at onis at the last,
 That best was shifit ther yatis fast,
 And arme them all in gode langage,
 As they had done of old usage,
 And of fayre wordis make ther shot,
 This was ther counsaile and the knot,
 And othir purpose toke they none,
 But armid thus forth they all gone
 Toward the wallis of the yle,
 But or they comin there long while,
 They mettin the grete lord of bove;
 That callid is the God of Love,
 That them avisid with such chere,
 Right as he with them angry were,
 Avayled them not ther wals of glasse,
 This mighty lord let not to passe,
 The shutting of ther yatis fast,
 All they had ordained was but wast,
 For when his ships had foundin land,
 This lord anon with bow in hand,

Into this yle with huge prese,
 Yhyid fast, and would not cese,
 Till he came there the knight ylay,
 Of Quene ne lady by the way
 Toke he no hede but forth he past,
 And yet all followed at the last,
 And when he came where lay the knight,
 Well shewid he, he had grete might,
 And forth the Quene callid anone,
 And all the ladies everichone;
 And to them said, is not this routh,
 To se my servaunt for his trowth
 Thus lene, thus sicke, and in this payne,
 And wor not unto whom to playne,
 Save onely one withoutin mo,
 Which might him hele, and is his fo?
 And with that word, his hevy brow
 He shewed the Quene, and lokid row,
 This mighty lord forth tho anone,
 With o loke her faultis echone,
 He can her shew in litil spech,
 Commaunding her to be his lech;
 Withoutin more, shortly to say,
 He thought the Quene sone should obay,
 And in his hond he shoke his bow,
 And said right sone he would be know,
 And for she had so long refused
 His service, and his lawes not used,
 He let her wit that he was wroth,
 And bent his bow and forth he goth
 A pace or two, and evin there
 A large draught, up to his ere,
 He drew, and with an arrow ground
 Bothe sharpe and new the Quene a wound
 He gave, that perfed unto the hert,
 Which aftirward full fore gan smert,
 And was not whole of many yere,
 And even with that, be of gode chere,
 My knight, q'ð he, I will The hele,
 And The restore to parfite wele,
 And for ech payne thou hast endured,
 To have two joies thou art enured,
 And forth he passid by the rout,
 With sobir chere walking about:
 And what he said I thought to here,
 Well wist he which his servaunts were,
 And as he passed anon he fond,
 My lady', and her toke by the hond,
 And made her chere as a Goddes,
 And of beaute called her princes,
 Of bounty eke gave her the name,
 And sayd there was nothyng to blame
 In her, but she was vertuous,
 Saving she would no pity use,
 Which was the cause that he her fought,
 To put that far out of her thought;
 And sithin she had whole richesse
 Of womanhed, and frendlinesse,
 He said it was nothing fitting,
 To void pity his owne leggyng,
 And gan her prech, and with her play,
 And of her beauty told her aie,
 And said she was a creature,
 Of whom the name should endure,
 And in bokis full of plesaunce,
 Be put for er in remembraunce,
 And as me thoughtin more frendly,
 Unto my lady, and godelily
 He spake, than any that was there,
 And for the' applis, I trow, it were,
 That she had in possession,
 Wherefore long in procession,
 Many a pace arme undir other,
 He welke, and so did with none other,

But what he would commaund or say,
 Forthwith nedis all must obay,
 And what he desired at the lest
 Of my lady, was by request,
 And when they long together had bene,
 He brought my lady to the Quene,
 And to her said, so God you spede,
 Shew grace and consent, that is nede;
 My lady tho full conningly,
 Right well avised, and womanly
 Downe gan to knele upon the floures,
 Which Aprill nourished had with shoures,
 And to this mighty lord gan say,
 That plesith you, I woll obay,
 And me restraine from othir thought,
 As ye woll all thyng shall be wrought,
 And with that word kneling she quoke.
 That mighty lord in armes her toke,
 And said you have a servaunt one,
 That truir living is there none,
 Wherefore gode were, seing his trowth,
 That on his painis ye had routh,
 And purpose you to here his spech,
 Fully avised him to lech,
 For of one thyng ye may be sure,
 He will be yours, while he may dure:
 And with that word right on his game
 Me thought he lough, and told my name,
 Which was to me marvaile, and fere,
 That what to do I ne wist there,
 Ne whethir was me bet or none
 There to abide, or thus to gone,
 For well wend I my lady wold
 Imagin, or deme, I had told
 My counsaile whole, or made complaint
 Unto that lord, that mighty saint,
 So verily ech thyng unfought,
 He said, as he had knowne my thought,
 And told my trowth and mine unese,
 Bet than I couth have for mine ese,
 Though I had studied all a weke,
 Well wist that lord that I was seke,
 And would be lechid wondir faine,
 No man me blame, mine was the paine:
 And when this lord had all ysaid,
 And long while with my lady plaid,
 She gan to smile with spirit glade,
 This was the answer that she made,
 Which put me there in double peine,
 That what to do, ne what to seine
 Wist I not, ne what was the best,
 Ferre was my hert then fro his rest;
 For as I thought, that smiling signe
 Was token, that the hert encline
 Would to requestis resonable,
Because smiling is favorable
To every thing that shall thrive;
 So thoughtin I tho anon blive,
That worldlesse answer in no toun
Was tane for obligatioun,
 Ne callid surety in no wise,
 Amongst them that callid ben wife.
 Thus was I in a joyous dout,
 Sure and unsurist of that rout,
 Right as mine hert ythought it were,
 So more or lesse wexin my fere,
 That if one thought ymade it wele,
 Anothir shent it everydele,
 Till at the last I couth no more,
 But purposed as I did before,
 To serve truly my lyv's space,
 Awaiting er the yere of grace,
 Which may yfall yet or I sterve,
 If that it pleseth her that I serve,

And servid have, and woll do ever,
 For thyng is none, that me is lever,
 Than is her service, whose presence
 Mine heven is whole, and her absence
 An hell all full of divers paines,
 Whych to the deth full oft me straines:
 Thus in my thoughtis, as I stode,
 That unneth felt I harme ne gode,
 I saw the Quene a litil paas
 Come where this mighty lord ywas,
 And knelid doune in presence there
 Of all the ladies that there were,
 With sobir countinaunce avised,
 In few wordis that well suffised,
 And to this lord anon present
 A bill, wherein whole her entent
 Was writtin, and how she besought,
 As he knew every will and thought,
 That of his godhed and his grace
 He would forgyve all old trespass,
 And undispleid be of time past,
 For she would evir be stedfast,
 And in his service to the deth
 Use every thought while she had breth;
 And sight and wept, and said no more,
 Within was writtin all the sore:
 At whyche bill the lord gan smile,
 And said he would within that yle
 Be lord and syre, both est and west,
 And cal'd it there his new conquest,
 And in grete counsell toke the Quene,
 Long were the talis them betwene,
 And ovir her bill he red thrise,
 And wondir gladly gan devise
 Her fetures faire, and her visage,
 And bad gode thrift on that Image,
 And saied he trowid her compleint
 Should astir cause her be corseint,
 And in his sleve he put the bill,
 Was there none that yknew his will,
 And forth he walke apace about,
 Beholding all the lusty rout,
 Halfe in a thought with smiling chere;
 Till at the last, as ye shall here,
 He turned unto the Queene agene,
 And said to morne here in this pleine,
 I woll that ye be, and all yours,
 That purposid ben to were flours,
 Or of my lusty colour use,
 It may not be to you excuse,
 Ne to none of yours in no wise,
 That able be to my servise,
 For as I said have here before,
 I will be lord for evirmore
 Of you, and of this yle, and all,
 And of all yours, that havin shall
 Joy, pece, or ese, or in plesaunce
 Your livis use without noysaunce,
 Here will I in state be ysene,
 And turned his visage to the Quene,
 And you give knowledge of my will,
 And a full answer of your bill;
 Was there no nay, ne wordis none,
 But very' obeisaunt semed echone,
 The Quene and othir that were there,
 Well semid it they had grete fere,
 And there toke lodging every knight,
 Was none departid of that night,
 And some to rede old Romances,
 Them occupied for ther plesances,
 Some to make verelaies and laies,
 And some to othir diverse plaies:
 And I to me a Romance toke,
 And as I reding was the boke,

910

920

930

940

950

960

970

Mc

Methought the sphere had so run,
That it was rising of the Sun,
And such a pres into the plaine
Assemble gone, that with grete paine
One might for othir gone stand,
Ne none take othir by the hand,
Withoutin they distourbid were,
So huge and gret the pres was there.

And aftir that within two houres,
This mighty lord clad all in floures
Of divers colours many a paire,
In his estate up in the aire,
Well nigh two fathom, as his hight,
He fet him there in all ther sight,
And for the Quene and for the Knght,
And for my lady and every wight,
In hast he sent, so that ner one
Was there absent, but come echone:
And when they thus assemblid were,
As ye have herd me say you here,
Without more tarrying on hight,
There to be sene of every wight,
Up stode among the pres above
A counsaylir, servaunt of love,
Which semid well, of gret estate,
And shewid there, how no debate
Othir then godely might be used,
In gentilnesse and be excused,
Wherefore he said his lord's will
Was every wight there shoud be still,
And in pees, and of one accord,
And thus commaundid at a word,
And can his tongue to swiche language
To turne, that yet in all mine age
Herd I never so conningly
Man speke, ne halfe so faithfully,
For every thing he said there,
Semid as it infelid were,
Or approvid for very trew:
Swiche was his cunning language newe,
And well according to his chere,
That where I be, me thinke I here
Him yet alway, when I mine one,
In any place may be alone:
First con he of the lusty yle,
All the astate in lityl whyle
Reherse, and wholly every thing,
That causid there his lord's comming,
And every wele and every wo,
And for what cause eche thing was so,
Well shewed he there in esie spech,
And how the sicke had nede of lech:
And that whiche whole was, and in grace,
He told plainly why ech thing was,
And at the last he con conclude,
Voidid every language rude,
And said, that Prince, that mighty Lord,
Or his departing, would accord
All the parties were there present,
And was the fine of his entent,
Witnesse his presence in your sight,
Which sits among you in his might:
And knelid downe withoutin more,
And not o word yspake he more.

Tho gan this mighty Lord him dresse,
With chere avised, to do largesse,
And said unto this knight and me,
Ye shall to joy restorid be,
And for ye have ben true ye twaine,
I graunt you here for every paine
A thousand joies every weke,
And loke ye be no lengir seke,

And both your ladies, lo 'hem here!
Take ech his own, beth of gode chere,
Your happie day is new begun,
Sith it was rising of the sun,
And to all othir in this place
I graunt wholly to stand in grace,
That servith truely without slouth,
And to avauncid be by trouth.
Tho gan this knight and I downe knele,
Wening to doin wondir wele,
Seing, O Lord, your grete mercy
Us hath enriched so opinly,
That we deserve may never more,
The leste part, but evirmore
With soule and body truely serve
You and yours till that we ysterve.
And to ther Ladies there they stode:
This knight that couth so mikil gode,
Ywept in hast, and I also,
Joyous, and glad werin we tho,
And al so rich in every thought,
As he that all hath and ought nought,
And them besought in humble wise,
Us to accept to ther service,
And shew us of ther frendly cheres,
Which in ther trefure many yeres
They keptin had, us to grete paine,
And told how ther servauntis twaine,
We were, would be, and so had ever,
And to the deth chaunge would we never,
Ne doe offence, ne thinke like ill,
But fill ther ordinance and will:
And made our othis freshe and new,
Our old service for to renew,
And wholly ther's for evirmore
We there become, what might we more?
And well awaiting, that in slouth
We made no fault, ne in our trouth,
Ne thought not do, I you ensure,
With our will, whilis we may dure.

This sefon past, againe an eve,
This Lord of the Quene toke his leve,
And said he would hastely returne,
And at gode leisure there sojourne,
Both for his honour and his ese,
Commaunding fast the knight to plesse,
And gave his statutes in papirs,
And ordent divers officers,
And forth to ship the same night
He went and sone was out of sight.
And on the morow, when the aire
Attemprid was and wondir faire,
Erly at rising of the sun,
Aftir the night away was run,
Yplaying us on the rivage,
My Lady spake of her voyage,
And said she madin small journies,
And held her in straunge counteries,
And forthwith to the Quene went,
And shewed her wholly her entent,
And toke her leve with chere weping,
That pitty was to se that parting:
For to the Quene it was a paine,
As to a Martyr new yslaine,
That for her woe, and she so tender,
Yet I wepe oft when I remember,
She offerid there to resigne
To my Lady eight times or nine,
Th' astate, the yle, shortly to tell,
If it might plesse her there to dwell,
And said, for evir her linage
Should to my Lady doe homage,
And hers be whole withoutin more,

Ye, and all thers for evirmore!
 Nay, God forbid, my lady eft,
 With many conning word and soft,
 Said, that evir such thing should bene,
 That I consent should, that a Quene
 Of your estate, and so well named,
 In any wise should be attained:
 But would be faine with all my hert,
 What so befell, or how me smert,
 To doin thing that you might plesse,
 In any wise or be your ese,
 And kissid there, and bad gode night,
 For which leve wept many a wight.
 There might men here my Lady praised,
 And such a name of her araised,
 What of cunning and frendlinesse,
 What of beauty with gentilnesse,
 And what of glad and frendly cheres,
 That she usid in all her yeres,
 That wondir was here every wight
 To say well how they did ther might,
 And with a pres upon the morow
 To ship her brought, and what a forow
 They made, when she should undir faile,
 That and ye wist, ye would mervaile.
 Forth goeth the ship, our goeth the sond,
 And I as a wode man unbond,
 For doubt to be left behind there,
 Into the Se withoutin fere
 Anon I ran, till with a waw
 All sodenly I was oerthraw,
 And with the watir to and fro
 Backward and forward travailed so,
 That mind and breth nigh was ygone,
 For gode ne harme ne knew I none,
 Til at the last with hokis tweine
 Men of the ship with mikil peine,
 To save my life, did such travaile,
 That and ye wist ye would mervaile,
 And in the ship me drewe on hie,
 And saidin all that I would die,
 And laid me long downe by the mast,
 And of ther clothis on me cast,
 And there I made my testament,
 And wist my selfe not what I ment,
 But when I said had what I would,
 And to the mast my wo all told,
 And tane my leve of every wight,
 And closed mine eyen, and lost my sight,
 Avised to die, without more spech,
 Or any remedy to sech
 Or grace new, as was grete nede,
 My lady of my paine toke hede,
 And her bethought how that for trouth
 To se me die it were gretè routh,
 And to me came in sobir wise,
 And softly said, I pray you rise,
 Come on with me, let be this fare,
 All shall be wel, have ye no care,
 I will obey ye and fulfill
 Wholly in al that lordis will,
 That you and me not long ago
 Aftir his list commaundid so,
 That there againe no resistance
 May be withoutin gret offence,
 And therefore now loke what I say,
 I am and will be frendly aye,
 Rise up, behold this avauntage,
 I grauntin you in heritage,
 All peceably withoutin strive,
 During the dayis of your live,
 And of her applis in my fleve
 One she yput, and toke her leve
 In wordis few, and said gode hele
 He that all made you send and wele,

Wherewith my painis all at ones
 Tokin such leve, that all my bones,
 For the new durense plesauce,
 So as they couth desired to daunce,
 And I as whole as any wight,
 Up rose with joyous hert and light,
 Whole and unsicke, right wele at ese,
 And all forget had my difese,
 And to my lady where she plaid
 I went anone, and to her said:
 He that all joies, persons to plesse,
 First ordainid with parsite ese,
 And every plesure can depart,
 Send you, madame, as large a part,
 And of his godis such plenty,
 As he has done you of beauty,
 With hele, and all that may be thought,
 He send you all as he all wrought:
 Madame (qð I) your servaunt trew
 Have I ben long, and yet will new,
 Withoutin chaunge or repentaunce,
 In any wife or variaunce,
 And so will do as thrive I ever,
 For thing is none that me is lever
 Than you to plesse how er I fare,
 Mine hert's lady and my welfare,
 My life, mine hele, my lech also
 Of every thing that doth me wo,
 My helpe at nede and my futele
 Of every joy that longs to me,
 My succours whole in allè wise,
 That may be thought or man devise,
 Your grace, Madame, such have I found,
 Now in my nede that I am bound
 To you for er, so Christ me save,
 For hele and live of you I have,
 Wherefore is resoun I you serve
 With due obeisaunce till I sterve,
 And ded and quicke be evir yours,
 Late, erly, and at allè hours.
 Tho came my lady small alite,
 And in plaine english con consite
 In wordis few whole her entent
 She shewed me there, and how she ment
 To me ward in evèry wise,
 Wholly she came at ther devise,
 Without processe or long travell,
 Charging me to kepin counsell,
 As I would to her grace attaine,
 Of which commaundment I was faine.
 Wherefore I passe oer at this time,
 For counsell cords not well in rime,
 And eke the oth that I have swore
 To breke, me were bettir unbore,
 Why? for untrue for evirmore
 I should be hold, that nevirmore
 Of me in place should be report
 Thing that availe might, or comfort
 To mewardis in any wise,
 And eche wight wouldin me dispise
 In that they couth, and me repreve,
 Which were a thing sore for to greve;
 Wherefore hereof more mencion
 Make I not now, ne long sermon,
 But shortly thus I me excuse,
 To rime a counsell I refuse:
 Sailing thus two dayis or thre
 My lady towards her countre,
 Ovir the wavis high and grene,
 Which werin large and depe betwene,
 Upon a time me called and said,
 That of my hele she was well paid,
 And of the Quene and of the yle
 She talkid with me a long while,

1200

1210

1220

1230

1240

1250

1260

1270

And

1

And of all that she there had sene,
 And of th' estate, and of the quene,
 And of the ladies name by name,
 Two houres or mo this was her game,
 Till at the last the wind can rise,
 And blew so fast, and in such wise
 The ship, that every wight can say,
 Madame, er eve be of this day,
 And God tofore, ye shall be there,
 As ye would fainist that ye were,
 And doubtrith not within sixe hours
 Ye shall be there, as ail is yours.
 At which wordis she gan to smile,
 And said that was no longè while,
 That they her fet, and up the rose,
 And all about the ship she gose,
 And made gode chere to every wight,
 Till of the land she had a sight,
 Of whichè sight glad God it wot
 She was abashid and abote,
 And forth goeth, shortly you to tell,
 Where she accustomed was to dwell,
 And recevid was as gode right,
 With joyous chere and hert's light;
 And as a glad new avinture,
 Plefant to evèry cature:
 With which landing tho I awoke,
 And found my chambir full of smoke,
 My chekis eke unto the eres,
 And all my body wet with teres,
 And all so feble' and in such wise
 I was, that unneth might I rise,
 So far travaillid and so faint,
 That neithir knew I kirke ne faint,
 Ne what was what, ne who was who,
 Ne avised what way I would go;
 But by an adventurous grace,
 I rise and walkt, fought pace and pace,
 Till I a winding staire yfound,
 And held the vice aye in my hond,
 And upward softly so can crepe,
 Till I came where I thought to slepe,
 More at mine ese, and out of prece,
 At my gode leisure, and in pece,
 Till fomwhat I recomfort were
 Of the travill and the grete fere,
 That I endurid had before,
 This was my thought withoutin more;
 And as a wight witlesse and faint,
 Without more, in a chambir paint
 Full of stories old and divers,
 More than I can as now reherse.
 Unto a bed full sobirly,
 So as I mightin full southly,
 Pace aftir other, and nothing said,
 Till at the last downe I me laid,
 And as my mind would give me leve,
 All that I dremid had that eve,
 Before that all I can reherse,
 Right as a child at schole his verse
 Doth aftir that he thinketh to thrive,
 Right so did I for all my live,
 I thought to have in remembraunce,
 Both the paine and eke the plesaunce,
 The dreame whole, as it me befell
 Which was as ye herin me tell;
 Thus in my thoughtis as I lay,
 That happy or unhappy day,
 Ne wot I not, so have I blame,
 Of the two which shulde be the name:
 Befell me so, that there a thought
 By processe new on slepe me brought,
 And me governed so in a while,
 That ones againe within the yle

Me thought I was, where of the knight,
 And of the ladies I had sight,
 And were assemblid on a grene,
 Bothe knight and lady, with the quene,
 At which assembly there was said,
 How that they all content and paid
 Werin wholly as in that thing,
 That the Knight there should be the king,
 And they would all for sure witnesse,
 Yweddid be both more and lesse,
 In remembraunce withoutin more,
 Thus they consent for evirmore,
 And was concludid that the knight
 Departin should the samè night,
 And forthwith there toke his voiage,
 To journey for his marriage,
 And returnin with such an host,
 That weddid might be lest and most:
 This was concluded, written and seled,
 That it ne might not be repeled,
 In no wise but continue firme,
 And all should be within a terme,
 Without more excusation,
 Both fest and coronation.
 This knight, which had thereof the charge,
 Anon into a little barge
 Ybrought was late against an eve,
 Where of all he ytoke his leve,
 Which barge was as a man's thought
 Aftir his plesure to him brought,
 The Quene her selfe accustomed aye
 In the same barge oft for to play,
 It nedith neithir mast ne rothir,
 I have not herd of such another,
 No maistir for the govirnaunce,
 He saylid by thought and plesaunce,
 Withoutin labour Est and West,
 All ywas one, calme or tempest,
 And I went with at his request,
 And was the first praied to the fest.
 When he came into his countre,
 And passid had the wavy Se,
 In an havin bothe depe and large
 He left his rich and noble barge,
 And to the court shortly to tell,
 He went, where he wont was to dwell,
 And was recevid as gode right,
 As heire, and for a worthy knight,
 With all the statis of the lond,
 Which came anon at his first sond,
 With glad spiritis full of trouth,
 Loth to do fault, or with a slouth,
 Attaint to be in any wise,
 Ther richis was ther old servise,
 Which evir trew had ben yfond,
 Sith first inhabit was the lond.
 And so recevid thei ther King,
 That forgottin ywas no thing,
 That ought to be done ne might plesse,
 Ne ther sovèraine Lord do ese,
 And with them so, shortly to say,
 As they of custome had done aye,
 For seven yere past was and more,
 The father, the old, wise and hore,
 King of the land, ytoke his leve
 Of all his barons on an eve,
 And told them how his dayis past
 Were all, and comin was the last,
 And hart'ily prayed hem to remember
 His sonne, which yong was and tender,
 That borne ywas ther prince to be,
 If he returne to that countre
 Might by adventure or by grace,
 Within any shorte time or space,
 And

And to be true and frendly aye,
 As they to him had ben alway:
 Thus he them prayd, withoutin more,
 And toke his leve for evirmore.
 Knowin was, how tendir in age,
 This yonge prince a grete viage
 Uncouth and straung, honours to seche,
 Ytoke in hond with lityl speche,
 Which was to sekin a princes,
 That he desired more than riches,
 For her grete name that flourid so,
 That in that time there was no mo,
 Of her estate, ne so well named,
 For borne was none that er her blamed:
 Of which princes somwhat before
 Here have I spoke, and some will more.
 So thus befell as ye shall here,
 Unto ther lord they made such chere,
 That joy was there to be present,
 To se ther troth, and how they ment,
 So very glad they were ech one,
 That them among there was no one,
 Whiche that desired more riches,
 Than for ther Lord such a princes,
 That they might plesse, and that were faire,
 For fast desired they an heire,
 And said grete surety were ywis.
 And as they were speking of this,
 The prince himselfin him avised,
 And in plaine English undisguised,
 Them shewid wholly his journey,
 And of ther counsell can them prey,
 And told how he enfurid was,
 And how his day he might not passe,
 Withoutin diffame and grete blame,
 And to him for evir a shame;
 And of ther counsell and avise
 There he prayith them once or twise,
 And that they would within ten daies,
 Avise and ordaine him such waies,
 So that it were no displeaunce,
 Ne to this Relme oer grete grievance,
 And that he might have to his fest,
 Sixty thousand Gestes at the lest,
 For his intent within short while
 Was to returne unto this yle
 That he came fro, and kepe his day,
 For nothing would he be away.
 To counsaile tho the Lords anon
 Into a chambir everychone
 Togithir went, them to devise,
 How they might best and in what wise,
 Purvey for their Lord's pleasaunce,
 And the Relm's continuaunce
 Of honor, which in it before,
 Had continuid evirmore;
 So at the last they found the waies,
 How that within the next ten daies,
 All might with paine and diligence
 Be done, and cast what the dispence
 Might draw, and in conclusion,
 Made for ech thing provision.
 When this was done, wholly tofore
 The prince, the lordis all before
 Come, and shewid what they had done,
 And how they couth by no reson
 Findin that within the ten daies,
 He might departin by no waies,
 But would be fittene at the lest;
 Or he returne might to his fest:
 And shewed him every reson why
 It might not be so hastily
 As he desired, ne his day
 He might not kepe by no way,

For divers causis wondir grete,
 Which when he herd, in such an hete
 He fell, for sorow and was seke,
 Still in his bed whole that weke,
 And nigh the tothir for the shame,
 And for the doubt, and for the blame,
 That mightin on him be aret,
 And oft upon his brest he bet,
 And said alas! mine honour for aye,
 Have I here lost clenely this day,
 Ded would I be, alas my name
 Shall aye be more henceforth in shame,
 And I dishonoured and reprieved,
 And nevir more shall be beleved:
 And made swich sorow, that in trowth,
 Him to behold it was grete routh:
 And so endured the dayes fiftene,
 Till that the Lords on an even,
 Him come and told they redy were,
 And shewid in few wordis there,
 How and what wise they had purvey'd,
 For his estate, and to him said,
 That twenty thousand knights of name,
 And fourty thousand without blame,
 All come of noble liginie,
 Togiðir in a compane,
 Were lodgid on a river's side,
 Him and his plesure there t'abide.
 The prince tho for joy up arose,
 And where they lodgid were, he goes
 Withoutin more that samè night,
 And these his suppir made to dight,
 And with them bode till it was dey,
 And forthwith to take his journey,
 Leving the streight, holding the large,
 Till he came to his noble barge:
 And when this prince this lustie knight,
 With his peple in armis bright
 Was comin where he thought to pas,
 And knew well none abiding was Behind, but all were there present,
 Forthwith anon all his intent
 He told them there, and made his cries,
 Thorough his Hostè that day twise,
 Commaunding every livis wight
 There being present in his sight,
 To be the morow on the rivage,
 Where he begin would his viage.
 The morow come, the cry was kept,
 But few was there that night that slept,
 But trussed and purveid for the morow,
 For fault of ships was all ther sorrow,
 For save the barge, and othir two,
 Of shippis there saw I no mo:
 Thus in ther doubtis as they stode,
 Waxing the Se, comming the fode,
 Was cried to ship goe every wight,
 Then was but hie, that hie him might:
 And to the barge me thought echone,
 They went, without was left not one,
 Ne horse, ne male, trusse, ne baggage,
 Salad ne spere, gardbrace ne page,
 But was lodgid and rome ynough;
 At which shipping me thought I lough,
 And gan to marvaile in my thought,
 How evir such a ship was wrought,
 For what peple that can encrese,
 Ne ner so thicke might be the prese,
 But all had rome at ther will,
 There was not one was lodgid ill:
 For as I trowe, my selfe the last
 Was one, and lodgid by the mast,
 And where I loked I saw such rome,
 As all were lodgid in a towne.

Forth

Forth goth the ship said was the crede,
 And on ther knees for ther gode spede
 Downe knelid every wight a while,
 And prayid fast that to the yle
 They mightin comin in safety,
 The prince and all the company,
 With worship and withoutin blame,
 Or disclaundir of his gode name,
 Of the promise he should retourne,
 Within the time he did sojourne,
 In his londè biding his host,
 This was ther prayir left and most:
 To kepe the day it might not ben,
 That he' appointid had with the quene,
 To returnin withoutin slouth,
 And so assurid had his trowth,
 For which default this prince this knight,
 During the time slept not a night,
 Such was his wo and his disese,
 For doubt he should the quene displese.
 Forth goith the ship with such spede
 Right as the prince for his grete nede
 Desirin would aftir his thought,
 Till it unto the yle him brought,
 Where all in hast upon the sand
 He and his peple toke the land,
 With hertis glad, and chere light,
 Wening to be in heven that night:
 But or they passid had a while,
 Entring in towardis that yle,
 All clad in blacke with chere piteous,
 A lady, which ner dispiteous
 Had be in all her life tofore,
 With sory chere, and hert to tore,
 Unto this prince where he gan ride,
 Ycome and said, abide, abide;
 And have no hast, but fast retourne,
 No reson is ye here sojourne,
 For your untruth hath us discried,
 Wo worth the time we us allied
 With you that are so sone untrew,
 Alas! the day that we you knew!
 Alas! the time that ye were bore,
 For all this lond by you is lore,
 Accursed be he you hiðir brought,
 For all our joy is turnd to nought,
 Your acquaintance we may complaine,
 Which is the cause of all our paine.
 Alas! madame, qð tho this knight,
 And with that from his horse he light,
 With colour pale, and chekis lene,
 Alas! what is this for to mene,
 What have ye said, why be ye wroth?
 You to displese I would be loth,
 Knowe ye not full well the promesse,
 Which I made have to your princeffe,
 Which to perfourme is mine intent,
 So mote I spede as I have ment,
 And as I am her very trew,
 Withoutin change or thoughtis new,
 And al so fully her servand,
 As creature or man livand
 May be to lady or princeffe;
 For she mine heven, and whole richeffe
 Is, and the lady of mine hele,
 My worldis joy and all my wele.
 What may this be, whence coms this spech,
 Tell me, Madame, I you besech?
 For sith the first of my living
 Was I so ferefull of nothing,
 As I am now to here you speke,
 For doubt I fele mine hert to breke:
 Say on, madame, tell me you will,
 The remnaunt is it gode or ill?

Alas (qð she) that ye were bore
 For for your love this land is lore,
 The quene is ded and that is ruth,
 For sorow of your gret untruth,
 Of two partes of the lusty rout
 Of ladies that were there about,
 That wont werin to talk and play,
 Now are thei ded and clene away,
 And undir earth tane lodging new,
 Alas! that er ye were untrew!
 For when the time ye set was past,
 The quene toke counsaile sone in hast,
 What was to doe, and said grete blame
 Your acquaintance cause would and shame,
 And the ladies of ther avise,
 Prayid, for nede was to be wise,
 In eschewing talis and songs,
 That by them makin would ill tonges,
 And sey they were lightly conquest,
 And prayid to a pore fest,
 And foully had ther worship weved,
 When so unwisely they conceived
 Ther richè trefour, and ther hele,
 There famous namè, and ther wele,
 To put in such an avinture,
 Of which the sclaundir evir dure
 Was like, without helpe of appele,
 Wherefore they nede had of counsele,
 For every wight of them would say,
 Ther closid yle an opin way
 Was become to every wight,
 And well apprevyd by a knight,
 Which he alas! without payfaunce
 Had sone achevid th'obeisaunce:
 All this was moved at counsell thrise,
 And was concludid daily twise,
 That bet was die withoutin blame,
 Than lose the riches of ther name,
 Wherefore the deth's acquaintance
 They chese, and left have ther plesaunce,
 For doubt to livin as reprevd,
 In that they you so sone beleved,
 And made ther othes with one accord,
 That ete, ne drinke, ne speke o word,
 They should nevir, but er weping
 Bide in a place without parting,
 And use ther dayis in penaunce,
 Without desire of allegeaunce,
 Of which the truth anon con preve,
 For why? the quene forthwith her leve
 Toke at them all that were present,
 Of her defaults fully repent,
 And dyid there withoutin more,
 Thus are we lost for evirmore,
 What should I more hereof reherse?
 Comin within, come se her herse,
 Where ye shall se the piteous sight,
 That er yet was shewin to knight,
 For ye shall sein ladies stond,
 Ech' with a grete rod in her hond,
 Yclad in black with visage white,
 Redy ech othir for to smite,
 If any be that will not wepe,
 Or who that makes countenance to slepe,
 They be so bet, that all so blew
 They be as cloth that died is new,
 Such is ther parfite repentance,
 And thus they kepe ther ordinance,
 And will do evir to the deth,
 While them enduris any breth.

This knight tho in his armis twaine
 This lady toke and gan her saine,

Alas!

Alas! my birth, wo worth my life,
 And even with that he drew a knife,
 And thorough gown, doubler, and shert,
 He made the blode come from his hert,
 And set him doune upon the grene,
 And full repent closid his ene,
 And save that ones he drew his breth,
 Without more thus he toke his deth.
 For whichè cause the lusty host,
 Which in a battaile on the cost
 At once for sorrow such a cry
 Gan rere, thorow the company,
 That to the heven herd was the sowne,
 And undir th' erth als fer adowne,
 That wildè bestis for the fere,
 So sodainly afrayid were,
 That for the doubt, while they might dure,
 They ran as of their lives unsure,
 From the wodis unto the plaine,
 And from valleys the high mountaine
 They fought, and ran as bestis blind,
 That clene forgottin had ther kind.
 This wo not cesed, to counsaile went
 These Lords, and for that lady sent,
 And of avise what was to done,
 They her besought she say would sone;
 Weping full fore all clad in blake
 This lady softly to them spake,
 And said, my lordis, by my trouth,
 This mischefe it is of your slouth,
 And if ye had that judge would right,
 A prince that were a very knight,
 Ye that ben of affate echone,
 Die for his fault shoud one and one,
 And if he hold had the promesse,
 And done that longs to gentilnesse,
 And fulfilled the princes behest,
 This hastie farme had ben a fest,
 And now is unrecoverable,
 And as a slaundir aye durable,
 Wherefore I say as of counsaile
 In me is none that may availe,
 But if ye list for remembraunce
 Purvey and make such ordinaunce,
 That the quene whiche that was so mcke,
 With all her women dede or seke,
 Might in your land a chappill have,
 With some remembraunce of her grave,
 Shewing her end with the pity,
 In some notable old city,
 And nigh unto an highè way,
 Where every wight might for her pray,
 And for all hers that have ben trew,
 And even with that she changid hew,
 And twise withid aftir the deth,
 And sight, and thus passid her breth.
 Then said the Lordis of the host,
 And so concludid lest and most,
 That they would in housis of thacke
 Ther livis lede and were but blacke,
 And forsake all ther plesaunces,
 And turne all joy to penaunces,
 And bere the ded prince to the barge,
 And namid them shoud have the charge,
 And to the herse where lay the Quene,
 The remnaunt went and doune on knene,
 Holding ther honds on high con crie,
 Mercy, mercy, everich thrie,
 And cursed the time that evir slouth,
 Shoud have soche mastirdome of trouth,
 And to the barge a longè mile
 They bare her forth, and in a while
 Allè the Ladiès one and one,
 By companies were brought echone,

And past the Se and toke the land,
 And in new herfis on a sand,
 Put and brought werin all anon
 Unto a city closed with stone,
 Where it yhad ben usid aye,
 The kingis of the land to lay,
 Aftir they raigned in honours,
 And writ was which were conquerours,
 In an abbey of Nunnis blake,
 Which accusomid were to wake,
 And of usage rise ech a night,
 To pray for every livis wight:
 And so befell as is the guise,
 Ordeint and said was the servise,
 Of the prince and eke of the Quene
 So devoutly as might yben,
 And aftir that about the herfes
 Full many orisons and verses
 Withoutin note full softly,
 Said were and that full hertly,
 That all the night till it was day
 The peple in the Church con pray
 Unto the holy Trinitie,
 Of those soulis to have pitie.

And when the night ypast and ronne
 Was, and the newè day begonne,
 The yong morow with rayis red,
 Which from the Sonne oer all con spred,
 Atempirid clere was and faire,
 And made a tyme of wholsome aire,
 Befell a wondir case and strange,
 Among the peple, and gan change
 Sone the word and every wo,
 Unto a joy, and some to two:
 A bird all feðrid blew and grene,
 With bright rayis like gold betwene
 As small thred ovr every joynt,
 All full of colour strange and coint,
 Uncouth, and wondirfull to sight,
 Upon the quen's herse con light,
 And song full low and softly
 Thre songis in her harmony,
 Unlettid, of every wight,
 Till at the last an agid knight,
 Which semid a man in grete thought,
 Like as he set all thing at nought,
 With visage and ein all forwept,
 And pale, as a man long unslept,
 By the herfis as he ystode
 With hasty hondling of his hode,
 Unto a prince that by him past,
 Ymade the bridde somewhat agast:
 Wherefore she rose and left her song,
 And departid from us among,
 And spred her wingis for to passe
 By the place where he entrid was,
 And in his hast shortly to tell,
 Him hurt, that backward downe he fell,
 From a window richly ypeint
 With lives of many divers seint,
 And bet his wingis and bled fast,
 And of the hurt thus died and past;
 And lay there well an hour and more,
 Till at the last of briddes a score,
 Come and assemblid at the place
 Where the window ybrokin was,
 And made swiche wamentacioun,
 That pity was to here the soun,
 And the warblis of ther throtis,
 And the complaint of ther notis,
 Which from joy clene ywas reversed;
 And of them one the glas sone perfed,

And

And in his boke of colours nine,
 An herbe he brought flouresse all grene;
 All full of small levis and plaine,
 Swart and long with many a vaine,
 And where his fellow lay thus dede,
 This herbe he down laid by his hede,
 And dressid it full softly,
 And hong his hed and stode thereby:
 Which herb in lesse than half an houre
 Gan oer all knit, and astir floure
 Full out and wexin ripe the fede,
 And right as one anothir fede
 Would, in his beke he toke the graine;
 And in his fellowes beke certaine
 It put, and thus within the third
 Up stode and prunid him the bird,
 Which ded had be in all our sight
 And both toghithir forth ther flight
 Toke, singin from us, and ther leve,
 Was none disturb 'hem would ne greve.
 And when they partid were, and gone,
 Th' abbesse the fedis sone echone
 Gathirid had, and in her hand
 The herbe she toke, well avise
 The lese, the fede, the stalke, the floure;
 And said it had a gode favour,
 And was no common herb to find,
 And well approved of uncouth kind,
 And than othir more vertuouse,
 Who so have it might for to use
 In his nede, flowre or lese, or graine,
 Of ther hele might ybe certaine:
 And laid it downe upon the herse
 Where lay the quene, and gan reherse;
 Echone to' othir that they had sene,
 And taling thus the fede wex grene,
 And on the drie herse gan to spring,
 Which me thought was a wondrous thing;
 And astir that floure and new fede,
 Of which the peple all toke hede,
 And said it was some grete miracle,
 Or medicine fine more than triacle,
 And were well done there to assay,
 If it might ese in any way
 The corsis, which with torchè light
 They wakid had there all that night.
 Sone did the lordis there consent,
 And all the peple' thereto content,
 With ese words and litil fare,
 And made the quen'is visage bare,
 Which shewid was to all about;
 Wherefore in swone fell whole the rout;
 And were so sory most and lest,
 That long of weping they not cest,
 For of ther lord the remembraunce
 Unto them was such displeaunce,
 That for to live they called a paine,
 So were they very true and plaine.
 And after this the gode abbesse,
 Of the graine gan to chese and dresse,
 Thre, with her fingirs cleane and smale,
 And in the quen'is mouth by tale
 One astir othir esily,
 She put 'hem and full conningly,
 Which shewid sonè such vertue,
 That previd was the medi'cine true:
 For with a smiling countinaunce,
 The quene uprose, and of nsaunce,
 As she was wont to every wight,
 She made gode chere; for whichè sight,
The peple kneeling on the stones
Thought they in heven were soule and bones:
 And to the prince where he ylay,
 They went to make the same assay,

And when the Quene it undirstode,
 And how the medicine was gode,
 She prayid she might have the graines,
 To relevin him from the paines
 Which she and he had both endured,
 And to him went and so him cured,
 That streight within a litil space
 Lusty and fresh on live he was, 1940
 And in gode hele, and whole of spech,
 And lough, and said, gramercy, lech:
 For which the joy throughout the town
 So gret was that the bellis sown
 Afraied the peple, a journey.
 About the cite every way,
 And come and askid cause and why
 They rongin were so statily?
 And astir that the quene, th' abbesse,
 Made diligence or they would cesse, 1950
 Such, that of ladies sone a rout,
 Sewing the quene was all about,
 And called by name echone and told,
 Was none forgettin young ne old,
 There mightin men se joyis new,
 When the medicine fine and trew
 Thus restorid had every wight,
 So well the quenè as the knight,
 Unto full perfit joy and hele,
 That fleting they were in such wele 1960
 As folke that wouldin in no wise
 Desire more parfit paradise.
 And thus when passed was the sorow,
 With mikil joye sone on the morow,
 The king, the quene, and every lord,
 With all the Ladies by' one accord,
 Helde a generall assembly.
 Gret cry was made through the country;
 The which astir as ther intent
 Was turnid to a Parliament, 1970
 Where was ordainid and avised,
 Every thing and wel devised,
 That plesin might, to most and lest;
 And there concludid was the fest
 Within the yle for to behold
 With full consent of young and old.
 All in the same wise as before,
 As thing should be withoutin more,
 And thei shippid and thithir went,
 And into straunge Relmis sent, 1980
 To kingis, quenes, and duchesses;
 To divers princes and princeesses,
 Of ther linage, and can them pray,
 That it might like them at that day
 Of mariage, for ther disport,
 Come se the yle, and them disport,
 Where should be joustis and turnaies,
 And armis done in othir waies,
 Signifying oer all the day
 Astir Aprilis within May, 1990
 And was avised that ladies tweine,
 Of gode estate and well beseine,
 With certaine knightis and squiers,
 And of the quen'is officers,
 In mannir of an embassade,
 With certain lettirs closed and made,
 Should take the barge and depart,
 And seke my lady every part,
 Till they her found for any thing,
 Both chargid have the quene and king, 2000
 And as ther lady and maistres,
 Her to beseke of gentilnes,
 At the day there for to yben,
 And oft her recommaund the quene,
 And prayis for all loves to hast,
 For but she come all woll be wast,

And the fest but a businesse
 Withoutin joy or lustinesse :
 And toke them tokins and gode spede
 Praid God send 'hem aftir ther nede.
 Forth went the ladies and the knights,
 And were out fourtene daies and nights,
 And brought my lady in ther barge,
 And had well sped and done ther charge :
 Whereof the quene so herti'ly glad,
 Was, that in soth such joy she had,
 When that the ship approchid lond,
 That she my lady on the sond
 Met, and in armis so constraine,
 That wondir was behold them twaine,
 Which to my dome during twelve houres,
 Neithir for hete ne watry shoures,
 Departid not no company,
 Saving themselfe but none them by,
 But gave them layfour at ther ese
 To reherfin joy and disese,
 Aftir the plesure and couragis,
 Of ther young and tendir agis :
 And aftir, with many a knight,
 Brought thei were, where as for that night
 They partid not, for to plesaunce,
 Content, was hert and countinaunce,
 Both of the quene, and my maistresse,
 This was that night ther businesse :
 And on the morow with huge rowt,
 This prince of lordis him about,
 Come and unto my Lady said,
 Of her comming glad and well paid
 He was, and full right conningly
 Her thankid, and full hertily,
 And lough and smiled, and said ywis,
 That was in doubt, in safety is :
 And commaundid do diligence,
 And spare for neithir gold ne spence ;
 But make redy, for on the morow,
 Yweddid with Saint John to borow
 He would ybe, withoutin more,
 And let them wite this lese and more.
 The morow come, and the service
 Of mariage in such a wise
 Ysaïd was, that with more honour
 Was nevir prince ne conquerour
 Ywedde, ne with such company,
 Of gentilnesse in chivalry,
 Ne of Ladies so gretè routs
 Ne so befeen as all abouts
 They werin there, I certifie
 You on my life, withoutin lie.

And the fest hold was in tentis,
 As to tell you mine entent is,
 In a rome in a large plaine,
 Undir a wode in a champaine,
 Betwixt a rivir and a well,
 Where nevir had abbay, ne fell
 Yben, ne kirke, house, ne village,
 In time of any man's age :
 And durid three moniths the fest
 In one estate, and nevir cest,
 From erly rising of the sonne
 Till the day spent was and yronne,
 In justing, dauncing, lustinesse,
 And all that fowned to gentilnesse.

And as me thought the second morow,
 Whan endid was all oldè sorow,
 And in surety every wight
 Had with his lady slept a night,

The Prince, the Quene, and all the rest,
 Unto my lady made request,
 And her besought oftin and praied,
 To mewardes to be well apaied,
 And confidir mine oldè trowth,
 And on my painis havin routh,
 And me accept to her servise,
 In such formè and in such wise,
 That we both mightin be as one,
 Thus praied the Quene, and everichone :
 And for there should ne be no nay,
 They stintin justing all a day,
 To pray my lady and requere,
 To be content and out of fere,
 And with gode hert make frendly chere,
 And said it was a happy yere :
 At which she smiled, and said ywis,
 I trow well he my servaunt is,
 And would my welfare as I trift,
 So would I his, and would he wist
 How and I knewè that his trowth
 Continue would withoutin flouth,
 And be such as ye here report,
 Restraining both courage and sport,
 I couth consent at your request,
 To be ynamid of your felt,
 And doin aftir your usaunce,
 In obeying of your plesaunce :
 At your request this I consent,
 To plesin you in your entent,
 And eke the soveraine above,
 Commandid hath me for to love,
 And before othir him prefer,
 Against which Prince may be no wer ;
 For his powir ovir all raigneth,
 That othir would for nought him paineth.
 And sith his will and yours is one,
 Contrary in me shall be none,
 Tho (as me thoughtin) the promise
 Of marriage before the mese
 Desirid was of every wight,
 To be madin the same night,
 To put away all manir doubts
 Of every wight thereabouts.
 And so was do, and on the morow,
 When every thought and every sorrow
 Dislodgid was out of mine hert,
 With every wo and every smert,
 Unto a tent Prince and Princes,
 Me thought brought me and my maistres,
 And said we werin at full age,
 There to conclude our marriage,
 With ladies, knightis, and squiers,
 And a gret host of ministers
 With instruments and sounes diverse,
 That long werin here to reherse ;
 Which tent was church parochiall,
 Ordaint was in especiall
 For the fest and for the sacre,
 Where archbishop and archdiacre
 Ysongin full out the servise,
 Aftir the custome and the guise,
 And holie church's ordinaunce.
 And aftir that to dine and daunce
 Brought were we, and to divers plaies,
 And for our spedè ech wight praies,
 And merry was both most and lest,
 And said amendid was the fest,
 And were right glad lady and lord,
 Of the marriage and th' accord,
 And wishid us hert'is plesaunce,
 In joy and hele continuaunce,
 And to the minstrels made request,
 That in encrefing of the fest,
 They

They wouldin touchin ther cordis,
 And with some new joyeux accordis,
 Ymove the peple to gladnesse,
 And praidin of all gentilnesse,
 Ech to painin them for the day,
 To shew his cunning and his play.
 Tho began sownis mervelous;
 Entunid with accords joyous,
 Round about and in all the tents,
 With thousandis of instruments,
 That every wight to daunce them pained,
 To be merry was none that fayned:
 Which sowne me troublid in my slepe,
 That fro my bed anone I lepe,
 Wening to have be at the fest,
 But when I woke all was yfist,
 For there n'as lady ne creature,
 Save on the wals old portraiture
 Of horsmen, hawkis, and houndis,
 And hurt dere all full of woundis,
 Some like bittin, some hurt with shot,
 And as my dreame semed that was not.
 And when I wake, and knew the trowth,
 And ye had seen of very routh,
 I trow ye would have wept a weke,
 For nevir man yet halfe so seke,
 I went escapid with the life,
 And was for fault that sword ne knife
 I find ne might my life r' abridge,
 Ne thing that kervid, ne had edge,
 Wherewith I might my wofull pains
 Have voidid with bleding of vains.
 Lo! here my blisse, lo! here my paine!
 Which to my lady' I do complaine,
 And grace and mercy her requere,
 To end my wo and busie fere,
 And me accept to her servise,
 And to her service in such wise
 That of my dreme the substaunce
 Might turnin once to cognisaunce,
 And cognisaunce to very preve,
 By full consent, and by gode leve:
 Or els withoutin more I pray,
 That this same night, or it be day,
 I mote unto my dreame retourne,
 And sleping so forthe aie sojourne,

Aboutin the yle of plesaunce,
 Undir my ladie's obeisaunce,
 In her service, and in such wise,
 As it plesse her may to devise,
 And grace onis to be accept,
 Like as I dremid when I slept,
 And dure a thousand yere and ten,
 In her gode will, Amen, Amen.

2200

L'envoy.

Fairist of faire, and godelyist on live,
 All my secre to you I plaine, and thrive,
 Requiring grace and of my fore complaint
 To be helid or martired as a saint,
 For by my trowth I swere, and by this boke,
 Ye may both hele, and sle me with a loke.

2210

Go forth mine ownè true hert innocent,
 And with humblenelle do thine observaunce,
 And to thy lady on thy knees present
 Thy service new, and think how grete plesaunce
 It is to live undir the obeisaunce
 Of her which that may with her lokis soft
 Give The the blisse that thou desirist oft.

Be diligent, awake, obey, and drede,
 And be not to wild of thy countinaunce,
 But meke and glad, and thy nature yfede,
 To do ech thing that may her doe plesaunce,
 When thou shalt slepe have aie in remembraunce
 Th' image of her which may with lokis soft
 Give The the blisse that thou desirist oft.

And if so be that thou her namè find
 Writtin in boke, or ellis upon wall,
 Loke that thou do as servaunt true and kind
 Thine obeisaunce, as she were therewithall,
 Fayning in love is breeding of a fall
 From the grace of her, whose lokis soft
 May give the blisse that thou desirist oft.

Ye which that this Ballade yredin shall,
 I pray you that you kepe you fro the fall.

CHAUCER'S A. B. C. called La Priere de nostre Dame.

CHAUCER'S A. B. C. called La Priere de nostre Dame: Made, as some say, at the request of Blanch, Duchesse of Lancaster, as a praier for her private use, being a woman in her religion very devout.

A.
lmightie and allmerciable Quene,
 To whom all this world fleith for foccour,
 To have relese of sinne, of so'row, of tene,
 Glorious Virgine of all flouris flour,
 To The I fle confoundid in errour;
 Helpe and releve, almightie, debonaire,
 Have mercy of mine perillous langour,
 Venquist me hath my cruill adverfaire.

B.
 Bountie so fixe hath in my hert his tent,
 That well I wote thou wilt my succour be,
 Thou canst not warnin that with gode entent
 Axith thyne helpe, thine hert is aye so fre,
 Thou art largesse of plaine felicite,
 Havin and refute of quiete and rest,
 Lo how that Thevis sevin chafin me,
 Helpe, Ladie bright, or that mine ship to brest.

C.
 Comfort is none, but in you, Lady dere,
 For lo! mine sinne and mine confusioun,
 Which ought not in thin presence for to' apere,
 Han taken on me a grevous actioun,
 Of veray right and disperatioun,
 And as by right they mightin well sustene,
 That I were worthy mine damnationn,
 Ne were it of thy mercy blisfull Quene.

D.
 Dout is there none, o Quene of mise'ricord,
 That thou n'art cause of grace and mercy here,
 God vouchidesafe, through The with us to' accord:
 For certis, Christ's blisfull mo'oir dere,
 Were now the bow ybent in swiche manere,
 As it was first of justice and of ire,
 The rightfull God would of no mercy here:
 But through The han we grace, as we desire.

E.
 Ever' hath mine hope of refute in The be:
 For here before full oft in many' a wise,
 Unto mercy hast thou recevid me,
 But mercy, Lady, at the gret assise,
 When we shall come before the high Justise,
 So litil freut shall then in me ben found,
 That but thou or that day correctin me,
 Of very right mine werke will me confound.

F.
 Flying I fle for succour to thine tent,
 Me for to hide fro tempest full of drede,
 Beseking you, that ye you not absent,
 Though I be wicke: O help yet at this nede,
 All have I ben a best in wit and dede,
 Yet, Lady, thou me close with thine owne grace,
 Thine enemye and mine (Lady take hede)
 Unto mine deth in point is me to chafe.

G.
 Gracious maid and mo'oir, which that never
 Were bittir, nor in erth nor in the Se,

But full of swetenesse and of mercy ever,
 Helpe that mine fa'oir be not wroth with me:
 Speke thou, for I ne dare him not yse,
 So have I done in erth, alas the while!
 That certis but if thou mine succour be,
 To sinke eterne he will mine ghost exile.

H.
 He vouchidesafe, tell him, as was his will,
 Become a man as for our alliaunce,
 And with his blode he wrote that blisfull bill
 Upon the crosse as generall acquitaunce,
 To every penitent in full cryaunce:
 And therefore, Lady bright, thou for us prey,
 Then shalt thou stentin alle his grevaunce,
 And maken our foe to faylin of his prey.

I.
 I wote well thou wilt ben our succour,
 Thou art so full of bountie in certaine;
 For when a soule fallith in errour,
 Thine pitie goeth, and halith him againe,
 Then makist thou his pece with his soverain
 And bringist him out of the crokid strete:
 Whoso The lovith, shall not love in vaine,
 That shall he find, as he the life shall lete.

K.
 Kalendiris enluminid ben they,
 That in this world ben lightid with thine name,
 And who so goith with The the right wey,
 Him dar not dredin in soule to ben lame,
 Now Quene of comfort, sith thou art the same,
 To whom I sechin for my medicine:
 Let not mine so no more mine wound entame,
 Mine hele into thine hond all I refine.

L.
 Lady, thine sorrow can I not portrey
 Undir the crosse, ne his grevous pennatunce:
 But for your bothis peine, I you do prey,
 Let not our aldir so make his bostaunce,
 That he hath in his lestis with mischaunce,
 Convict that, that ye both han bought so dere:
 As I said erst, thou ground of all substaunce,
 Continue' on us thin pitous eyin clere.

M.
 Moyfes that saw the bosh of flambis rede
 Brenning, of which then never a sticke brend,
 Was signe of thine unwemmid maidinhede,
 Thou art the bosh, on which there can descend
 The Holy Ghost, the which that Moyfes wend
 Had ben on fire: and this was in figure.
 Now, Lady, fro the fire us defend,
 Which that in hell eternally shall dure.

N.
 Noble princeffe, that never haddist pere,
 Certis if any comfort in us be,
 That commith of The, Christis mo'oir dere,
 We han none othir melodie ne gle,
 Us to rejoyce in our adversite,

Ne

Ne advocat, that will and dare so prey
For us, and that for as lite hire as ye,
That helpin for an Ave'mary or twey.

O.

O very light of eyin tho ben blind,
O very lust of labour and distresse,
O treforere of bountie to mankind!
The whom God chese to moðer for humbleffe,
From his ancille he made The maistèresse
Of heven and erth, our bill up for to bede,
This world awatith ay on thine godenes,
For thou ne failed'est nevir wight at nede.

P.

Purpose I have sometime for to enquire,
Wherefore and why the Holy Ghost The sought,
When Gabriel's voice come to thine ere,
He not to werre us swich a wondir wrought,
But for to save us, that he sithin bought:
Then nedith us no wepon us to save,
But onely there we did not as us ought,
Do penitence, and mercy aske and have.

Q.

Queene of comfort, right when I me bethinke,
That I agiltid have both him and The,
And that mine soule is worthy for to sinke:
Alas! I caitife, wheðir shall I fle?
Who shall unto thine sonne mine menè be?
Who but thine selfe, that art of pitie well?
Thou hast more routh on our adversite,
Than in this world might any tonguè tell.

R.

Redresse me moðir, and eke me chaſtise,
For certainly my faðir's chaſtising
Ne dare I not abidin in no wise,
So hidèous is his full reckining.
Moðir of whom our joy began to spring,
Be ye mine judge, and eke my soul's lech,
For ay in you is pitie abounding,
To each that will of pity you besech.

S.

Soth is that he ne grauntith no pite
Withoutin The, for God of his godenesse
Forgivith none, but it like unto The:
He hath The made vicaire and maistèresse
Of all this world, and eke govimeresse
Of hevin: and repressith his justise
Aftir thine will: and therefore in witnesse
He hath The crownid in so royall wise.

T.

Temple devout, ther God chese his wonning,
For which theſe misbeleved deprivid ben,
To you mine soule penitent I bring,
Receve me, for I can no ferthir flee.
With thoris venemous O hevin Quene,
For which the erth accurfid was full yore,
I am so woundid, as ye may well sene,
That I am lost almost, it smert so fore.

V.

Virgine that art so noble' of appaile,
That ledist us into the highè toure
Of Paradise, thou me wise and counsaile,
How I may have thy grace and thy succour:
All have I ben in filth and in errour,
Lady, on that countrey thou me adjourne,
That clepid is thine bench of freshe flour,
There as that mercy evir shall sojourne.

X.

Xpen thine sonne that in this world alight
Upon a crosse to suffir his passioun,
And suffred eke that Longeus his hert pight,
And made his hert's blodè renne adoun,
And all this was for my salvatioun:
And I to him am fals and eke unkind,
And yet he will not mine dampnatioun:
This thanke I you, succour of all mankind.

Y.

Ysaac was figure of his deth certaine,
That so ferreforth his faðir would obey,
That him ne rought nothing for to be slaine:
Right so thy sonnè list a lambe to dey:
Now, Lady, full of mercy I you prey,
Sith he his mercy surid me so large,
Be ye not scant, for all we sing or say,
That ye ben fro vengeaunce alway our targe.

Z.

Zacharie you clepith the opin well,
That wisht his sinfull soule out of his guilt,
Therefore this lessonn out I will to tell,
That n'ere thine tendir hert, we werin spilt.
Now, Lady bright, sith that thou canst and wilt,
Ben to the fede of Adam merciable,
Bring us unto that paleis that is built
To penitents, that ben to mercie able.

Explicit.

JACKE UPLAND.

In this Treatise is set forth the blind ignorance and variable discord of the Churchmen, how rude and unskilful they were in matters and principles of our Christian Institution. This is thought to be that Crede which the Pellican speaketh of in the Plowman's tale in these words:

Of Freris I have told before
Now, in a making of a Crede,
And yet I could tell worse and more,
But men would werrien it to rede.

Jacke Upland make my mone to very God, and to all true in Christ, that antichrist and his disciples (by colour of holines) walk and deceve Christ's church by many false figures, wherethrough (by antichrist and his) many vertues ben transposed to vices.

But the felliest folke that ever Antichrist found, ben last brought into the church, and in a wonder wise, for they ben of diverse sects of antichrist, sown of diverse countries and kindreds. And all men knowne well, that they be not obedient to bishops, ne legemen to kings: neither they tillen, ne sownen, weden, ne repen wode, corne, ne grasse, neither nothing that man should helpe; but onely themselves ther lives to susteine. And these men han all manner power of God, as they sein, in heaven and in yerth, to sell heaven and hell to whom that them liketh, and these wretches were never where to ben themselves.

And therefore (frere) if thine order and rules ben grounded on God's law, tell thou me, Jacke Upland, that I aske of The, and if thou be or thinkest to be on Christ's side, kepe thy paciens.

Saint Paule teacheth, That all our dedes should be do in charitie, and els it is nought worth, but displeasing to God and harme to our owne soules. And for that freres challenge to be gretest clerkes of the church, and next following Christ in living: men should for charitie aske them some questions, and pray them to ground ther answeres in reson and holy writ, for else ther answeres would nought be worth, be it flourished never so faire, and as me thinke men might skillfully aske thus of a frere.

1. Frere, how many orders be in erth, and which is the perfectest order? Of what order art thou? Who made thine order? What is thy rule? Is there any perfecter rule than Christ himself made? If Christ's rule be most perfect, why rulest thou The not thereafter? Without more, why shall a frere be more punished if he breke the rule that his patron made, than if he breke the hefts that God himself made?

2. Approveth Christ any more religions than one, that S. James speaketh of? If he approveth no more, why hast thou left his rule and takest another? Why is a frere apostata that leaveth his order, and taketh another sect, sith there is but one religion of Christ?

3. Why be ye weddid faster to your habits than a man is to his wife? For a man may leave his wife for a yere or two, as many men done: and if you leve your habite a quarter of a yere, ye should be holden apostataes.

4. Maketh your habit you men of religion or no? If it do, than ever as it wereth, your religion wereth, and after that your habit is better, your religion is better, and when ye have ligen it beside, then lig ye your religion beside you, and ben apostataes: why buy ye you so precious clothes, sith no man seeketh such, but for vaine glorie, as Saint Gregorie sayth?

What betokeneth your grete hode, your scaplerie, your knotted girdle, and your wide cope.

5. Why use ye all one colour, more than other christian men do? What betokeneth that ye ben clothed all in one manner clothing?

If ye say it betokeneth love and charitie, certes then ye be oft hypocrites, when any of you hateth another, and in that that ye wol be said holy by your clothing.

Why may not a frere were clothing of another sect of freres, sith holinesse stondeth not in the cloths?

6. Why hold ye silence in one house more than another, sith men ought over all to speke the gode and leve the evill?

Why ete you flesh in one house more than in another, if your rule and your order be perfect, and the patron that made it?

7. Why get ye your dispensations to have it more esie? Certes, either it semeth that ye be unperfect, or he that made it, so hard, that ye may not hold it. And siker, if ye hold not the rule of your patrons, ye be not then ther freres, and so ye lie upon your selves.

8. Why make you as dede men, when ye be professed, and yet ye be not dede, but more quicke beggars than you were before? and it semeth evil a dede man to go about and beg.

9. Why will ye not suffer your novises here your counsels in your chapter house, ere that they have ben professed, if your counsels ben true, and after God's law?

10. Why make ye you so costly houses to dwell in? sith Christ did not so, and ded men should have but graves, as falleth it to dede men, and yet ye have more courts than many lords of England: for ye now wenden thogh the relme, and ech night will lig in your own courts, and so mo but right few lords doe.

11. Why hire you to ferme your limitors, giving therefore ech yere a certain rent, and will not suffer one in another's limitation, right as ye were your selves lords of countries?

Why be ye not under your bishops visitations, and legemen to our king?

Why

Why aske ye no letters of bretherheds of other mens praiers, as ye desire that other men should aske letters of you?

If your letters be gode, why grant ye them not generally to all maner of men for the more charitie?

12. Mowe ye make any man more perfect brether for your prayers, than God hath by our beleve? by our baptisme and his own grant? if ye mow, certes then ye be above God.

Why make ye men beleve that your golden trentall sung of you, to take therefore ten shillings, or at lest five shillings, woll bring soules out of hell, or out of purgatorie? if this be soth, certes ye might bring all soules out of paine, and that woll ye nought, and then ye be out of charitie.

13. Why make ye men beleve, that he that is buried in your habit, shal never come in hel, and ye wete not of your selfe whether ye shall to hell or no? and if this were soth ye should sell your high houses to make many habites for to save many mens soules.

14. Why stele ye mens children for to make 'hem of your sect, sith that theft is against God's hefts, and sith your sect is not perfect? ye know not whether the rule that ye bind him to, be best for him or worst.

15. Why underneme ye not your brethren for ther trespasses after the law of the Gospell, sith that underneming is the best that may be? but ye put them in prison oft, when they do after God's law, and by S. Augustine's rule if any doe amisse, and would not amend him, ye should put him from you.

16. Why covet ye shrift, and burying of other mens parishens, and none other sacrament that falleth to christian folke?

Why busie ye not to here to shrift of pore folke, as well as of rich lords and ladies, sith they mow have more plentie of shrift fathers than pore folke mow?

Why say ye not the gospel in houses of bedrid men, as ye do in rich mens, that mowe goe to church and here the gospel?

Why covet you not to burie pore folke among you? sith that they ben most holy (as ye faine that ye ben for your povertie.)

17. Why will ye not be at ther diriges as ye have ben at rich mens? sith God praiseth 'hem more than he doth other men.

What is thy prayer worth? sith thou wilt take therefore, for all chapmen ye nede to be most wise for dred of simone.

What cause hast thou, that thou wilt not preach the gospel, as God saith that thou shouldst? sith it is the best lore and also our beleve.

Why be ye evill apaid that secular prestes should preach the gospel? sith God himseife hath bodden 'hem.

18. Why hate ye the gospel to be preached, si h ye be so much hold thereto? for ye win more by yere with In principio, than with all the rules that ever your patrones made, and in this minstrels ben better than ye, for they contrarien not to the mirths that they maken, but ye contrarien the gospel both in word and dede.

19. Frere, when thou recevest a penie for to say a masse, whether sellest thou God's bodie for that penie, or thy praier, or els thy travell? if thou saiest thou wolt not travell for to say the masse, but for the penie, than certes if this be soth, then thou lovest to litle mede for thy soule: and if thou sellest God's bodie, other thy prayer, then it is very simonie, and art become a chapman worse than Judas, that sold it for thirtie pence.

20. Why writest thou ther names in thy tables that yeveth The mony? sith God knoweth al thing? for it semeth by thy writing, that God would not reward him, but thou writest in thy tables, God would els forgotten it.

Why bereft thou God in hand, and slanderest him that he begged for his mete? sith he was Lord over all, for then had he bene unwise to have begged, and have no nede thereto.

Frere, after what lawe rulest thou The? where findest thou in God's lawe that thou shouldst thus beg?

21. What manner men nedeth for to beg?

For whom oweth such men to beg?

Why beggest thou so for thy brethren?

If thou saiest, for they have nede, then thou doest it for the more perfection, or els for the lest, or els for the mene. If it be the most perfection of all, then should all thy brethren do so, and then no man neded to beg but for himself, for so should no man beg but him neded. And if it be the lest perfection, why lovest thou then other men more than thy selfe? For so thou art not well in charitie, sith thou shouldst seke the more perfection after thy power, living thy self most after God. And thus leving that imperfection, thou shouldst not so beg for them. And if it is a gode mene thus to beg as thou doest, then should no man do so, but they ben in this gode mene, and yet such a mene granted to you may never be grounded on God's law, for then both lerid and leud that ben in mene degre of this world, should go about and beg as ye do. And if all should do so, certes well nigh all the world should go about and beg as ye done, and so should there be ten beggers against one yever.

Why procurest thou men to yeve The ther almes, and saiest it is so nedeful, and thou wilt not thy selfe win The that mede?

22. Why wilt thou not beg for pore bedrid men, that bin porer than any of your sect, that ligen and mow not go about to help 'hemselfes, sith we be all brethren in God, and that bretherhed passeth any other that ye or any man could make, and where most nede were, there were most perfection, either els ye hold them not your pure brethren, but worse, but then ye be unperfect in your begging?

Why make ye so many maisters among you, sith it is against the teching of Christ and his Apostles?

23. Whose ben all your rich courts that ye han, and all your rich jewels? sith ye seen that ye han nought ne in proper ne in common. If ye sain they ben the popes, why gather ye then of pore men and lords so much out of the king's hand to make your pope rich? And sith ye sain that it is grete perfection to have nought in proper but in common, why be ye so fast about to make the pope, that is your father, rich, and put on him imperfection? sithen ye faine that your godes ben all his, and he should by reson be the most perfect man, it semeth openlich that ye ben cursed children so to slander your father, and make him imperfect. And if ye faine that the godes be yours, then do ye ayenst your rule; and if it be not ayenst your rule, then might ye have both plough and cart, and labour as other gode men done, and not so to beg by losengery, and idle as ye done. If ye say that it is more perfection to beg, than to travell or to worch with your hand, why preach ye not openly, and tech all men to do so? sith it is the best and most perfect life to the help of ther souls, as ye make children to beg that might have ben rich heirs.

Why make ye not your fests to pore men, and yeveth 'hem yests, as ye done to the rich? sith pore men han more nede than the rich.

What

What betokeneth that ye goe tweine and tweine together? if ye be out of charitie, ye accord not in soule.

Why beg ye and take salaries thereto more than other priests? sith he that most taketh, most charge hath.

24. Why hold ye not S. Francis rule and his testament? sith Francis saith, that God shewed him this living and this rule: and certes if it were God's will, the pope might not fordo it; or els Francis was a liar, that saied in this wise. And but this testament that he made, accord with God's will, or els erred, he is a liar that were out of charitie, and as the law saith, he is accursed that letteth the rightful last wil of a ded man. And this testament is the last will of Francis that is a dead man, it semeth therefore that all his freres ben cursed.

25. Why will ye not touch no coined money with the crosse, ne with the king's hed, as ye done other jewels both of gold and silver? certes if ye despise the crosse or the king's hed, then ye ben worthy to be despised of God and the king: and sith ye will receive money in your herts, and not with your hands, it semeth that ye hold more holinesse in your hands than in your herts, and then be false to God.

26. Why have ye exempt you from our king's lawes, and visiting of our bishops more than other christen men that liven in this relme, if ye be not guiltie of traitorie to our relme, or trespassers to your bishops? but ye will have the king's lawes for the trespassse doe to you, and ye wil have power of other bishops more than other priests, and also have leve to prison your brethren as lords in your courts more than other folks that han ben the king's legemen.

27. Why shal som sect of your freres payeth a yere a certaine to ther generall provinciall or minister, or els to ther soverienes, but if he stele a certaine number of children (as some men saine) and certes if this ben soth, then ye be constrained upon certein pain to do theft against God's commaundement, Non furtum facies.

28. Why be ye so hardie to grant by letters of fraternitie to men and women, that they shal have part and merite of all your gode dedes, and ye weten never whether God be apayed with your dedes because of your sinne? Also ye witten never whether that man or woman be in state to be saved or damned, then shal he have no merit in heven for his owne dedes ne for none other mans. And all were it so, that he shold have part of your gode dedes: Yet should he have no more than God would give him after that he were worthie, and so much shal ech man have of God's yest without your limitation. But if ye will say that ye ben God's fellowes, and that he may not doe without your assent, then be ye blasphemers to God.

29. What betokeneth that ye have ordeined, that when such one as ye have made your brother or sister, and hath a letter of your sele, that letter mought be brought in your holye chapter, and there be rad, or els ye will not pray for him. And but ye willen pray especially for all other that were not made your brethren or sistren, then were ye not in right charitie, for that ought to be commen, and namely in ghostly things.

30. Frere, what charity is this, to overcharge the peple by mightie begging, under colour of preaching or praying, or masses singing? Sith holy write biddeth not thus, but even the contrarie: for all such ghostly dedes should be done frely, as God yeveth them frely?

31. Frere, what charitie is this, to beguile children or they commen to discretion, and bind 'hem to your orders, that ben not grounded in God's law, against ther frends will? Sithen by this follie bene many apostataes, both in will and dede, and many bene apostataes in ther will during all ther life, that would gladly be discharged, if they wist how, and so many ben apostataes, that shoulden in other states have ben true men.

32. Frere, what charitie is this, to make so many Freres in every country to the charge of the peple? sith parsons and vicars alone, ye secular priests alone, ye monkes and cannons alone, with bishops above them were ynough to the church to doe the priests office? And to adde more than ynough is a foule error, and gret charge to the peple, and this openly against God's will, that ordained all thyngs to be done in weight, number, and mesure. And Christ himselfe was apayed with twelve apostles and a fewe disciples, to preach and doe priests office to all the whole world, then was it better doe than is now at this time by a thousand dele. And right so as foure fingers with a thombe in a man's hand, helpeth a man to worch, and double number of fingers in one hand should let him more, and so the more number that there were passing the mesure of God's ordinaunce, the more were a man letted to worch: right so (as it semeth) it is of these new orders that ben added to the church, without grounde of holy write and God's ordinance.

33. Frere, what charity is this, to the peple to lie, and say, that ye follow Christ in povertie more than other men done? and yet in curious and costly housing, and fine and precious clothing, and delicious and liking feding, and in trefure and jewels, and rich ornaments, freres passen lords and other rich worldly men, and sonest they should bring ther cause about, (be it never so costly) though God's law be put abacke.

34. Frere, what charitie is this, to gather up the bokes of holy write, and put 'hem in treforie, and so emprison them from secular priestes and curats, and by this cautell let 'hem to preach the gospell frely to the peple without worldly mede, and also to defame gode priestes of heresie, and lien on 'hem openly for to let 'hem to shew God's law by the holy gospell to the christian peple?

35. Frere, what charitie is this, to faine so much holines in your bodily clothing, (that ye clepe your habit) that many blind soles desiren to die therein more than in another? And also that a Frere that leaveth his habit late founden of men may not be affoiled till he take againe, but is apostata as ye saine, and cursed of God and man both? The Frere beleveth truth, and patience, chastitie, mekenesse, and sobrietie, yet for the more part of his life he may sone be affoiled of his prior, and if he bring home to his house much gode by the yere (be it never so falsely begged and pilled of the pore and nedie peple in countries about) he shal be hold a noble Frere, O Lord, whether this be charitie?

36. Frere, what charitie is this, to prese upon a rich man, and to intice him to be buried among you from his parish church, and to such rich men give letters of fraternitie confirmed by your generall sele, and thereby to bere him in hand that he shal have part of all your masses, mattins, preachings, fastings, wakings, and all other gode dedes done by your brethren of your order (both whilest he liveth, and after that he is ded) and yet ye witten never whether your dedes be acceptable to God, ne whether that man that hath that letter be able by gode living to receive any part of your dedes, and yet a pore man (that ye wite well or supposen in certen to have no gode of) ye ne given to such letters, though he be a better man to God than such a rich man: nevertheless this pore man doth not retch therof. For as men supposen, such such letters and many other that Freres behoten to men, be full false deceits of Freres, out of all reson, and God's law and christian mens faith.

37. Frere, what charitie is this, to be confessors of lords and ladies, and to other mightie men, and not amend 'hem in ther living? but rathir as it semeth to be the bolder to pill ther pore tenants and to live in lechery, and there to dwell in your office of confessor for winning of worldlie godes, and to be hold grete by colour of such ghostly offices? this semeth rather pride of Freres, than charitie of God.

38. Frere, what charitie is this, to sain that who so liveth after your order, liveth most perfectlie, and next followeth the state of Apostles in povertie and penance, and yet the wisest and gretest clerkes of you wend or fend, or procure to the court of Rome to be made cardinals or bishops of the pope's chaplens, and to be assoiled of the vow of povertie and obedience to your ministers, in the which (as ye sain) standeth most perfection and merit of your orders, and thus ye faren as Pharisees that sain one and do an other to the contrarie.

Why name ye more the patron of your order in your Confiteor when ye begin masse, than other Saints, Apostles, or Martyrs, that holy Church hold more gloriotis than 'hem, and clepe 'hem your patrons and your avowries?

Frere, whether was St. Francis in making of his rule that he set thine order in, a sole and a liar, or else wise and true? If ye sain that he was not a sole, but wise; ne a liar, but true: why shew ye contrarie by your doing, when by your suggestion to the Pope ye said; that your rule that Francis made was so hard, that ye mow not live to hold it without declaration and dispensation of the Pope, and so by your dede ye let your patron a sole that made a rule so hard that no man may well kepe, and eke your dede proveth him a liar, where he saith in his rule, that he toke and lerned it of the Holy Ghost. For how might ye for shame pray the Pope undo that the holy ghost bit, as when ye prayed him to dispense with the hardnesse of your order!

Frere, which of the foure orders of friers is best to a man that knoweth not which is the best, but would faine enter into the best, and none other? If thou saiest that thine is the best, then saiest thou that none of the other is as gode as thine, and in this ech frere in the thre other orders woll say that thou liest, for in the self same maner ech other frere woll say that his order is best. And thus to ech of the foure orders bin the other thre contrary in this point: in the which if any say soth, that is one alone, for there may but one be the best of foure. So followeth it, that if ech of these orders answered to this question as thou doest, thre were false, and but one true, and yet no man should wite who that were. And thus it semeth, that the most part of freres bin or should be liars in this point, and they should answere thereto. If you say that another order of the freres is better than thine, or as gode, why toke ye not rather thereto as to the better, when thou mightst have chose at the beginning? And eke why shouldst thou be an apostata to leve thine order and take The to that is better, and so why goest thou not from thine order into that?

Frere, is there any perfecter rule of religion than Christ God's sonne gave in his gospell to his brethren? Or than that religion that S. James in his epistle maketh mencion of? If you say yes, then puttest thou on Christ (that is the wisedome of God the father) unkunning, unpower, or evill will: for then he could not make his rule so gode as an other did his. And so he had be unkunning, that he might not make his rule so gode as an other man might, and so were he unmightie, and not God, as he would not make his rule so perfect as an other did his, and so he had bin evill willed, namely to himselfe.

For if he might, and could, and would have made a rule perfect without default, and did not, he was not God's sonne almighty. For if any other rule be perfecter, than Christe's, then must Christe's rule lacke of that perfection by as much as the other weren more perfecter, and so were default, and Christ had failed in making of his rule: but to put any default or failing in God, is blasphemie. If thou say that Christe's rule, and that religion which S. James maketh mencion of, is perfectest; why holdest thou not thilke rule without more? And why elepest thou the rather of S. Francis or S. Dominik's rule or religion or order, than of Christe's rule or Christe's order?

Frere, canst thou any default or assigne in Christe's rule of the gospell (with the which he taught all men sikerly to be saved) if they kept it to ther ending? If thou say it was to hard, then saiest thou Christ lied; for he said of his rule: My yoke is soft, and my burden light. If thou say Christe's rule was to light, that may be assigned for no default, for the better it may be kept. If thou saist that there is no default in Christe's rule of the Gospell, sith Christ himself saith it is light and esie: what nede was it to patrons of freres to adde more thereto? and so to make an harder religion to save freres, than was the religion of Christe's apostles and his disciples helden and were saved by? But if they woulden that ther freres sate above the apostles in heven for the harder religion that they kepen here, so would they sitten in heven above Christ himselfe, for ther more and strict observations, then so should they be better than Christ himself with mischance.

Go now forth and fraine your clerks, and ground ye you in God's law, and gif Jacke an answer, and when ye han assoiled me that I have said sadly in truth, I shall soile The of thine orders, and save The to heven.

If freres can not or mow not excuse 'hem of these questions asked of 'hem, it semeth that they be horrible giltie against God, and ther even christian; for which gilts and defaults it were worthy that the order that they cal ther order were fardone. And it is wonder that men susteine 'hem or suffer them live in such maner. For holie write biddeth that thou do wel to the meke, and give not to the wicked, but forbed to give 'hem bred, lest they be made thereby mightier through you.

This Prologue and the Tale which follows it, were never before printed, and are taken out of a MS. borrowed from the Honourable Lady Thinn's; and not to be met with in any of the other MSS. which Mr. Urry had perused: So that if the sense and measure of the Verse are not so perfect here as in the other Tales, it must be attributed to the want of MSS. upon the authority of which all the other corrections are chiefly grounded: The Verse in all probability is of the same kind with that of Gamelyn, and were it to be found in as many MSS. might no doubt be as easily compleated, but having no other besides the forementioned, the Reader must be content with only a faithfull Transcript of it out of that MS.

The PROLOGUE,

Or, the mery adventure of the Pardonere and Tapstere at the Inn at Canterbury.

WHEN all this fresh feleship were com to Cantirbury,
As ye have herde to fore with talys glad and merry;
Som of sotill sentence of vertue and of lore,
And som of othir mirthis, for them that hold no store
Of wisdom, ne of holynes, ne of chivalry,
Nethir of vertuouse matere, but to foly
Leyd wit and lustis all to such Japis
As hurlewaynes meyne in every hegg that rapes
Thorough unstabill mynde, ryght as the levis grene
Stondewn ageyn the weðir, ryght so by them I mene.
But no more hereof nowe at this ilche tyme
In saving of my sentence, my prolog, and my ryme.
They toke their In and loggit them at mydmorowe
I trowe,
Alle cheker of the hope that many a man doth knowe;
Their hooft of Southworke that with them went, as ye have herde to fore,
That was rewler of them al of las and eke of more,
Ordeyned their dyner wisely, or they to church went,
Such vitailis as he fonde in town, and for noon othir
sent,
The Pardonere behelde the besynes how statis wer iservid,
Diskennyng hym al prively and a fyde swervid; 20
The hostelcre was so halowid fro o plase to another,
He toke his staffe to the tapstere; welcom myne own
brother,
Qð she, with a frendly loke alreedy for to kys;
And he, as a man i lerned of such kyndnes,
Bracyd hir by the myddyll and made hir gladly chere,
As thoughe he had iknowen hir al the rathir yeer:
She halid hym into the tapstry there hir bed was ma-
kid
Lo here I ligg, (qð she) my self al nyght al nakid
Without manny's company, syn my love was dede, Jenkyn Harpour, yf ye hym knewe, from fete to the hede
Was not a lustier persone to daunce ne to lepe,
Then he was, thoughe I it sey; and therwith to wepe
She made, and with hir napron feir and white ywafsh
She wyped soft hir eyen for teris that she out lath,
As grete as any myllstone, upward gon they stert,
For love of her swetyng, that sat so nighe hir hert.
She wept and waylid and wrong hir hondis and made much to done;
For they that loven so passyngly such trowes they have echon.

She snyffith, sighith, and shoke hire hede, and made
rouful cher;
Benedicite, qð the Pardonere, and toke hir by the swere,
Yee make sorowe inowgh, qð he, your life though ye
shuld lese;
It is no wondir, qð she than, and therwith she gan
to snefe.
Aha, al hole, qð the Pardonere, your pennaunce is somewhat passid;
God forbede it els, qð she, but it were somewhat lassid;
I myght nat lyve els, thowe wotist, and it shuld long endure;
Now blessid be God of mendement of hele and eke
of cure,
Qð the Pardonere tho anon, and toke hir by the chynne,
And sayd to hir these wordis tho, alas! that love is syn!
So kynd a lover as yee be oon, and so trew of herte,
For be my trewe conscience yit for yewe I smerte, 50
And shall this month hereafter for your soden disese:
Now wele wer hym ye lovid, so he coud you plesse.
I durst swere upon a book that trewe he shuld yewe
fynd:
For he that is so yore dede is grene in yeur mynd.
Ye made me a sory man, I dred ye wold have stervid.
Graunt mercy, gentil Sir, qð she, that yee unaservid;
Yee be a nobile man, iblessid mut yee be:
Sit down ye shul drynk, nay I wis (qð he,)
I am fastyng yit, myne own hert'is rote,
Fastyng yit alas! qð she, therof I can gode bore. 60
She stert into the town and fet a py al hore,
And set to fore the Pardonere; Jenken, I ween I n'ote
Is that your name I yow prey ye I wis myne own fustir;
So was I enformyd of them that did me fostir.
And what is yowrs? Kitt, iwis; so cleped me my dame,
And Godd'is blessing have thow, Kitt; now broke
wel thy name;
And privylich unlasid his both eyen liddes,
And lokid hir in the visage paramour amyddis;
And sighed there with a litil time, that she it here
myghte,
And gan to rown and feyn this song, Now love then do me righte: 70
Ete and be merry, qð she, why breke ye nowt your fast?
To wait more feleship it were but work in waste.
Whi make ye so dull chere? for your love at home?

Nay
I

Nay forsooth, myne own hert, it is for yow aloon,
For me? alas! what sey ye? that wer a simple prey.
Trewlich yit, qð the Pardonere, it is as I yewe sey.
Ye etith and beth mery, we wol speke thereof sone;
Brennyd Cat dredith feir; it is mery to be aloon:
For by our lady Mary, that bare Jesus on hir arm,
I could nevir love yit but it did me harm: 80
For evir my manere hath be to love ovirmuch.
Now Crist is blessing, qð the Pardonere, go with al such.

Lo! how the clowdis worchyn, ech man to mete his mach,

For trewly, gentil cristian I use the same tach,
And have ydo many a yer; I may it nat forbere;
For kynd will have his cours, though men the contrary
swere.

And therewith he stert up smertly, and cast down a grote,

What shal this do, gentil Sir? nay Sir for my cote
I n'old ye payd a peny her, and so sone pas.

The Pardonere swore his grett othe, he wold pay no las.

I wis, Sir, it is ovir do, but sith it is yowr will,
I woll putt it in my purse, lest yee it take in ill
To refuse your curtesy: and therewith she gan to bowe.
Now trewly, qð the Pardonere, your maners been to lowe.

For had ye countid streytly, and nothing left behind,
I might have wele ydemed that yee be unkind,
And eke untrew of hert, and sooner me forgete;
But ye list be my tresorer, for we shall offer mete.

Now certen, qð the tapster, ye have a redeful even,
As wold to God ye couth as wele undo my sweven
That I my self did mete this nyght that is ypassid,
How I was in a chirch, when it was all ymassid;
And was in my devocioun tyl service was al doon,
Tyl the preest and the clerk boystly bad me goon,
And put me out of the chirch with an egir mode.

Now Seynt Daniel, qð the Pardonere, your swevyn
turn to gode;

And I woll halow it to the best, have it in yeur mynd;
For comynly of these swevyngs the contrary men shul
fynd.

Ye have be a lover glad, and litil joy yhad;
Plick up a lusty hert, and be mery and glad; 110
For ye shul have an husbond, that shall yewe wed to wyve,

That shal love yewe as hertly as his own lyve.
The preest that put yew out of chirch shal lede you
in ageyne,

And helpe to yeur mariage with al his might and main:
This is the sweven al and som Kit, how likith The?
Be my trowith wondir wele; bleffid mut thowe be,
Then toke he leve at that tyme, tyll he com efftione,
And went to his feleship (as it was to doon)

Thoughe it be no grete holynes to prech this ilk ma-
tere,

And that som list to her it, yit, Sirs, ner the latter
Endurith for a while and sufferith them that woll,
And ye shull her how the Tapster made the Pardonere pull

Garlik all the long nyghte til it was ner end day;
For the more chere she made of love, the falsere was her lay.

But litil charge gaff she therof, tho she aquit his while,
For ethir is thought and tent was othir to begile;
As ye shul here hereaftir, when tyme comith and spafe

To meve such matere——but now a litil spafe
I wol return me ageyn to the company,
The knyghte and al the feleship and nothing for to ly,
Whan they wer al yloggit, as skil wold and reson,
Everich aftir his degre, to chirch then was seson
To pas and to wend, to make their offringis,

Righte as their devocioun was, of silver broch, and ryngis.

Then at chirch dorr the curtesy gan to ryse,
Tyl the knyght, of gentilnes that knewe right wele
the guyse,

Put forth the prelatis, the parson, and his fere,
A monk, that took the spryngill with a manly chere,
And did as the manere is, moilid al their patis
Everich aftir othir, righte as they wer of statis. 140

The frei feynyd fetously the spryngill for to hold
To spryng oppon the remnaunt; that for his cope he n'old

Have laft that occupacioun in that holy plafe;
So longid his holy conscience to se the Nonn's safe.
The knyght went with his compers toward the holy shryne,

To do that they wer com for, and aftir for to dyne,
The Pardonere and the miller and othir lewde fotes
Sought hem self in the chirch, right as lewd gotes;
Pyrid fast and poudid high upon the glafe,

Counterfetyng gentilmen the armys for to blafe,
Diskynering fast the peyntur and for the story mournid
And a red al so right as rammys hornyd,
He berith a balstaff, qð the toon, and els a rakid
end;

Thow failest, qð the miller, thow hast nat wel thy
mynd;

It is a spere, yf thow canst se, with a prik tofore,
To bush a down his Enmy and through the shoulder bore.

Pese, qð the hoost of Southwork, let stond the wyn-
dow glafid,

Goith up and doith your offerynge, ye semith half amassid,

Sith ye be in company of honest men and good,
Worchith somwhat aftir them and let the kynd of brode 160

Pas for a tyme, I hold it for the best;
For who doith after company may live the bet in rest.

Then passid they forth boystly gogling with their hedis,

Knelid adown to fore the shryne and hertlich their bedis

They preyd to seint Thomas, in such wyse as they couth;

And sith the holy relikes ech man with his mowith
Kissid, as a goodly monk the names told and taught.
And sith to othir places of holynes they raught,
And wer in their devocioun tyl service wer al doon:

And sith they drowgh to dynerward, as it drew to noon, 170

Then, as manere and custom is, sigtes there they bought;

For men of contre shuld know whome they had sought:
Eche man set his silver in such thing as they likid:

And in the meen while the miller had ypickid
His bosom ful of signys of Caunterbury brochis;

Though the Pardonere and he pryvely in hir pouchis
They put them afterwards, that noon of them it wist,

Save the Sompner seid somwhat, and seyde to he list
Half part, qð he, prively rownyng on their ere:

Hufst, pees, qð the miller, seist thow nat the frere,
How he lowrith undir his hood with a doggish eye?

Hit shuld be a privy thing that he could nat aspy:
Of every craft he can somwhat our lady give hym so-
rowe.

Amen, tho qð the Sompner, on eve and eke on mo-
rowe.

So curfid a tale he told of me, the devill of hell hym
spede,

And me, but yf I pay him wele and quyte wele his mede,

Yf it hap homward that ech man tell his tale,
As we did hiðerward, though we shuld fet at sale

All

All the shrewdnes that I can, I woll hym nothing spare,

That I n'ol touch his takerd somwhat of his care.

They set their signys upon their hedes, and som upon their capp,

And fith to the dynerward they gan for to stapp;

Every man in his degre wissh and toke his fete,

As they wer wont to doon at soper and at mete,

And wer in silence for a tyme, tyl good ale gan arise,

And then as nature axith as these old wise

Knownen wele, when veynys been somwhat replete,

The spirits wol stere, and also metis swete

Causen oft myrthis for to be ymevid,

And eke it was no tyme tho for to be ygrevid: 200

Every man in his wyfe made hertly chere,

Telling his felowe of sportys and of chere,

And of othir mirthis that fellyn by the wey,

As custum is of pylgryms, and hath been many a dey.

The hooft leid to his ere, of Southworke as ye knowe,

And thenkid al the company both high and lowe,

So wele kepeing the covenaut, in Southwork that was made,

That every man shuld by the wey with a tale glade

All the whole company in shorting of the wey;

And al is wele performed, but than now thus I sey,

That we must so homeward ech man tel anothir,

Thus we wer accordit, and I shuld be a rathir

To set yewe in governaunce by right ful jugement.

Trewly hooft, qð the Frer, that was all our assent,

With a litil more that I shall sey therto.

Yee graunted of yeur curtesy that we shuld also

All the hole company sope with yewe at nyght:

Thus I trow that it was, what sey you, Sir knyght?

It shal nat hede qð the hooft, to axe no witnes;

Your record is good I now; and of yeur gentilnes

Yit I prey yew eft ageyn: for by feynt Thomas shryne

And ye woll hold covenaut, I woll hold myne.

Now trewly hooft, qð the knyght, ye have right wel yseyd;

And as towching my persone, I hold me payde;

And so I trowe that al doith. Sirs, what sey yee?

The Monk and eke the Marchaunte and al seid, ye.

Then al this afir-mete I hold it for the best

To sport and pley us, qð the hooft, eche man as hym left,

And go by tyme to soper and to bed also;

So mowe we erly ryfen, our journey for to do. 230

The knyght arose therwithal, and cast on a fresher gown,

And his sone anothir, to walk in the town.

And so did all the remnaunt that wer of that aray,

That had their chaungis with them, they made them fresh and gay;

Sortid them togidir, right as their lustis lay,

As they were more usid travelling by the way.

The knyght with his meyne went to se the walle,

And the wards of the town as to a knyght befall;

Devising ententiflich the strengthis al about,

And apointid to his sone the perell and the dout,

For shot of arblast and of bowe, and eke for shot of gonne, 241

Unto the wardis of the town, and how it might be wone;

And al defence ther ageyn afir his intent

He declarid compendiously, and al that evir he ment,

He sone perseyvid every poynt, as he was full abil,

To armes and to travaile and persone covenabill

He was of all factur afir fourm of kynd,

And for to deme his governaunce it semed that his mynd

Was much in his lady that he lovid best;

That made hym oft to wake when he shuld have his rest. 250

The clerk that was of Oxenforth onto the Sompnore feyd,

Me semeth of grete clerge that thow art a mayde;

For thou puttest on the Frer in maner of repreff,

That he knoweth falshe, vice, and eke a theff.

And I it hold vertuouse and right commendabill

To have very knowlech of things reprovabill.

For who so may eschew it, and let it pas by,

And els he myght fall theron unward and fodenly.

And thouge the Frer told a tale of a Sompnour;

Thow oughtist for to take it for no dishonour: 260

For of al craftis and of eche degre

They be not al persite, but som nyce be.

Lo! what is worthy, feyd the knyght, for to be a clerk.

To sommon among us them this mocioume was ful derke;

I comend his wittis and eke his clerge;

For of ether parte he saveth honeste.

The Monk toke the Parson then and the grey Frer

And preyd them for curtesy for to go in fere.

I have ther acquaintaunce, that al this yeris thre

Hath preyd hym by his lettris that I hym wold se:

And ye my brothir in habit and in possessioun.

And now I am here, methinkith it is to doon,

To preve it in dede what chere he wold me make,

And to yew my frende also for my sake.

They went forth togidir talking of holy matere;

But woot ye wele, in certeyn they had no mind on watere

To drynk at that tyme, when they wer met in fere:

For of the best that myght be founde and therewith mery chere

They had, it is no doute, for spycys and eke wine

Went round about the gastoyne, and eke the ruyne.

The wyfe of bath was so wery she had no wyl to walk;

She toke the Piores by the honde; Madam, wol ye stak

Pryvely into the garden to se the herbis growe?

And afir with our host's wife in hir parlour rowe?

I wol gyve yewe the wyne, and ye shul me also.

For tyl we go to soper we have naught ellis to do.

The Piores, as woman taught of gentil blood and hend,

Assentid to hir counsel; and forth gon they wend,

Passyng forth sofftly into the herbery:

For many a herb grewe for fewe and surgery; 290

And all the aleys feir and parid, and raylid, and y-makid:

The savage and the isope yfretid and ystakid;

And othir beddis by and by fresh ydight,

For comers to the hooft righte a sportful sight.

The Marchaunt, and the Mancipill, the Miller, and the Reve,

And the Clerk of Oxenforth, to townward gan they meve;

And al the othir meyne; and lassit noon at home,

Save the Pardoner, that pryvelich when al they wer goon

Stalkid into the tapstry: for nothing wold he leve,

To make his covenante in certeyn that same eve,

He wold be loggit with hir, that was his hole ententioun.

But hap and eke fortune and all the constellacioun

Was clere hym ageyns, as ye shul afir here.

For hym had better be yloggit al nyght in a myere,

Then he was the same nyght or the sun was up:

For such was his fortune he drank without the cupp,

But thereof wist he no dele; ne no man of us alle

May have that high connyng, to know what shal befall.

He stappid into the tapstry wondir pryvely,

And fond hir ligging liryng with half slopy eye, 310

Pourid fellich undir hir hood, and sawe al his comyng, And

And lay ay still, as naught she knewe, but feynid hir slepyng.
 He put his hond to hir brest, awake, qð he, awake:
 A! benedicite, Sir, who wist yew her? out tho I myght be take
 Prisoner, qð the tapstere, being al aloon;
 And therwith breyd up in a frite, and began to groon:
 Now sith ye be my prisoner, yeld yew now, qð he,
 I must nedis, qð she, I may nothyng fle;
 And eke I have no strength and am but yong of age,
 And also it is no mastery to catch a mouse in a cage, 320
That may no where stert out, but closid wondir fast;
 And eke, Sir, I tell yew, though I had grete hast,
 Ye shuld have coughed when ye com, wher lern you
 curtesy;
 Now trewlich I must chide, for of right pryvery
 Women ben som tyme of day, when they be aloon.
 Wher coud I yew prey when ye com cistone?
 Nowe mercy, dere swetyng, I wol do so no more:
 I thank you an hundrit sithis; and also by your lore
 I wol do hereafter in what plase that I com.
 But lovers, Kitt, ben evil avysid full oft and to lom.
 Wherfor I prey you hertlich hold me excusid,
 And I behote yew trewly it shall no more be usid.
 But now to our purpose; how have ye fare,
 Sirh I was wyth you last? that is my most care.
 For yf yee eylid eny thing othir wife then good,
 Trewly it wold chaunge my chere and my blood.
 I have farid the wers for yewe, qð Kitt, do ye no
 drede
 God that is above? and eke ye had no nede
 For to congir me, God woot, wyth your nygromancy,
 That have no more to vaunte me but oonly my body;
 And yf it were disteynid, then wer I on do;
 I wis I trowe, Jenkyn, ye be nat to trust to.
 For evir more ye clerkis con so much in book,
 Yee wol wynn a woman at first look.
 Thought the Pardonere, this goith wele; and made his beter chere,
 And axid of hir softly; love, who shall ligg here
 This nyght that is to comyng? I prey yewe tell me.
 I wis it is grete nede to tell yewe, qð she:
 Make it nat overqueynt, though yew be a clerk,
 Ye knowe wele inough iwis, by loke, by word, by work. 350
 Shal I com than, christian, and fese away the cat?
 Shal ye com? per benedicite, what question is that?
 Wherfor I prey you hertly to be my Counsail;
 Comyth somwhat late, and for nothing fail;
 The dorr shall stond thar up; put it from yew soft:
 But be wele avysid, ye wake nat them on lofft.
 Care ye nat, qð Jenkin, I can theron at best;
 Shal no man for my stepyng be wakid of his rest.
 Anoon they dronk the beverage, and wer of oon accord
 As it femed by their chere, and also by their word: 360
 And al a staunce she lovid hym wele, she toke hym
 by the swere;
 As though he had lernyd cury favel of som old frere,
 The Pardonere plukkid out of his purs, I trow the dowry;
 And toke it Kitt, in hir hond, and bad her pryvely
 To orden a rere sopor for them both to,
 A cawdell ymade with swete wyne, and with fugir
 also;
 For trewly I have no talent to ete in yeur absence;
 So longith my hert toward yew to be in yeur presence.
 He toke his leve and went his wey as though nothing
 wer,
 And met wyth al the felfhip; but in what plase ne
 wher 370
 He spake no word therof, but held hym close and styll;
 As he that hopid sikirlich to have had al his wyll;
 And thought many a mery thought by hymself aloon;
 I am a loggit, thought he, best, how soevir it goon;
 And thoughe it have costid me, yit wol I do my peyn
 For to pike hir purs to nyghte and win my cost ageyn.
 Now leve I the Pardonere tyll that it be eve,
 And wol returne me ageyn righte ther as I did leve.
 Whan al wer com togiðir in their herbegage,
 The hooft of Southwork, as ye knowe, that had no
 spice of rage, 380
 But al thing wrought prudenciall as sobir man and wife;
 Now wol we to the soup, Sir knyght, scith yeur avyse,
 Qð the hooft ful curteysly, and in the same wise.
 The knyght answer'd him ageyn, Sir as ye devyse
 I must obey, ye woot wele; but yf I fail wytt,
 Then takith these prelatys to yewe and waslith and go sit;
 For I woll be yewr Marchall and serve yewe ech one,
 And then the officers and I to soper shall we gone.
 They wissh and sett right as he bad, eche man wyth
 his fere,
 And begonne to talk of sportis and of chere, 390
 That they had the astir-mete whiles they wer out;
 For othir occupacioun tyll they wer servid about
 They had nat at that tyme, but eny man kitt a loff;
 But the Pardonere kept hym close, and told nothing of The myrth and hope that he had, but kept it for hymself;
 And thoughe he did it is no fors; for he had nede to solve.
 Long or it wer mydnyght, as ye shul her sone;
 For he met with his love in croking of the moon.
 They wer yservyd honestly, and eche man held hym
 payde:
 For of o manere of service their soper was araide, 400
 As skill wold and reson, sith the lest of all
 Payid ylike much, for growing of the gall.
 But yit as curtesy axith, though it wer som dele streight,
 The statys that wer above had of the feyrest endreyte.
 Wherfor they did their gentilnes ageyn to all the rout,
 They dronken wyne at their cost onys round about;
 Now pass I lightly ovir, when they soupid had,
 Tho that were of governaunce as wyse men and sad
 Went to their rest, and made no more to doon;
 But Miller and the Coke dronken by the moon 410
 Twyes to eche othir in the repenyng.
 And when the Pardonere them espy'd, anoon he gan
 to sing,
 Doubill me this bourden, chokelyng in his throte;
 For the Tapster shuld here of his mery note.
 He clepid to hym the Sompnour that was his own
 discipill,
 The Yeman, and the Reve, and the Mancipill;
 And stoden so holowyng; for nothing wold they leve,
 Tyl the tyme that it was well within eve.
 The hooft of Southwork herd them wele, and the Marchaunt both,
 As they wer at a countis, and wexen somewhat wroth.
 But yet they preyd them curteysly to rest for to wend,
 And so they did all the rout, they dronk and made an
 end:
 And eche man droughe to cussy to slepe and take his rest.
 Save the Pardonere, that drew apart, and weytid by a cheste
 For to hide hymself, tyl the candill wer out;
 And in the meen while, have ye no doute,
 The Tapster and hir Paramour, and the hosteler of the house
 Sitt togiðir pryvelich, and of the best gause
 That was yfound in town and yset at sale.
 They had there of sufficiant, and dronk but litill ale; 430
 And

And fit and ete the cawdell, for the Pardoner that was made,
With fugir and with swete wyne, right as hymself
bade:

So he that payd for all in feer had not a twynt;
For oft is more better ymerkid then ymynt.
And so farid he ful right, as ye have yherd.
But who is that a woman could not make his berd,
And she wer therabout and set hir wytt therto?
Ye woot wele I ly nat, and wher I do or no
I wol nat here termyn it, lest ladies stond in plase
Or els gentil women, for lesing of my grace 440
Of daliaunce and of sportis and of goodly chere;
Therfor anenst their estatys I wol in no manere
Deme ne determyn, but of lewd kitts,
As Tapsters, and othir such that hath wyly wyttis,
To pike mennys pursis, and eke to bler their eye;
So wele they make seme soth when they falsest by,
Now of Kitt Tapster, and of hir Paramour,
And the hosteler of the house that sit in Kittis bour,
When they had ete and dronk right in the same plase,
Kit began to rendir out all thing as it was: 450
The wowing of the Pardoner, and his cost also,
And how he hopid for to lygg al nyght wyth hir also;
But therof he shall be sikir as of God's cope.
And sodeynly kysid her Paramour; and seyde, we shul scope

Togidir hul by hul, as we have many a nyght:
And yf he com and make noyse, I prey yewe dub hym knyght.

Yes dame, qð hir Paramour, be thow not agast;
This is his own staff thou seyest, therof he shall a taff.
Now trewly, qð the hosteler, and he com by my lot
He shall drink for Kittis love wythout cup or pot;
And he be so hardy to wake eny gift,

I make a vowe to the peacock there shal wake a foul mist,

And arose up therewithal and toke his leve anon;
It was a shrewid company, they had servid so many oon.

With such manere of feleship ne kepe I never to dele
Ne no man that lovith his worship and his hele.

Qð Kitt to hir Paramour, ye must wake a whyle
For trewlich I am sikir that within this myle
The Pardoner wol be comyng his hete to aswage;
But loke ye pay hym redelich to kele his corage;
And therfor love dischance yewe not tyll this chek be do.

No for God Kitt that wol I no.

Then Kitt went to bed, and blewe out all the light;
And by that tyme it was ner hond quarter nyght,
Whan all was still, the Pardoner gan to walk,
As glad as eny goldfynch, that he herd no man talk:
And drowghe to Kittis dordward to herken and to list,
And went to have fond the dor up by the hasp, and eke the twist

Held hym out a whils and the lok also;
Yit trowid he no gile, but went ner to, 480
And scrapid the dorr welplich, and wynyd wyth his
mowith,

Aftir a doggis lyden, as nere as he couith.
Away dog with evill deth, qð he, that was within,
And made hym all redy the dorr to unpin.

A! thought the Pardoner, tho I trow my berd be made,

The Tapster hath a Paramour and hath made them
glade

With the cawdell that I ordeyned for me as I gues:
Now the devill hir speide, such oon as she is.
She seid I had ycongerid hir, our lady gyve hir sorowe
Now wold to God she wer in stokis-tyl I shuld hir
borowe: 490

For she is the falsest that evir yit I knewe,
To pik the mony out of my purs; Lord! she made hir trewe.

And therewyth he caught a cardiakill and a cold sot;
For who have love longing and is of corage hote,
He hath ful many a myry thought tofore his delyte;
And right so had the Pardoner, and was in evil plight:
For fayling of his purpose he was nothing in ese;
Wherfor he fill sodenlich into a wood rese;

Entryng wondir fast into a frensy,
For pur very angir, and for jelousy, 500
For when he herd a man within, he was almost wood;
And because the cost was his, no marvel tho the moud
Wer turned into vengauce, yf it myght be:
But this was the myschief, all so strong as he
Was he that was within, and lighter man also;
As provid wele the bataile betwene them both to.
The Pardoner scrapid eftt ageyn, for nothyng wold
he blyn;

So feyn he wold have herd more of hym that was within.

What dog is that, qð the Paramour? Kit, wost thou ere?

Have God my trowith, qð she, it is the Pardoner.
The Pardoner with myscheff! God gyve hym evil preff.

Sir, she seid, by my trowith he is the same theff.
Therof thou lieft, qð the Pardoner, and might nat
long forbere,

A thy fals body, qð he, the devil of hell The tere!
For by my trowith a falscher sawe I never noon:

And nempnid hir namys many mo then oon.
Though to rech hir wer noon honeste,
Among men of good of worship and degre.

But shortly to conclude; when he had chid inowe;
He axid his staff spitouslich wyth wordis sharp and
rowe. 520

Go to bed, qð he within, no more noyse thow make,
Thy staff shal be redy to morowe I undertake,
In soth, qð he, I wol nat fro the dorr wend, Tyl I have my staff, thow bribour, then have the toðir end,

Qð he that was within; and leyde it on his bak,
Right in the same plase, as chapmen berith their pak;
And so he did to mo, as he could a rede,
Graspyng aftir with the staff in lengith and eke in brede;

And fond hym othir whyle redlich inoughe
With the staffys end high upon the browe. 530

The hosteler ley oppon his bed, and herd of this af-
fray,

And stert hym up lightlich, and thought he wold asay:
He toke a staff in his hond, and highed wondir blyve
Tyl he wer with the feleship that shuld never thryve:
What be yee, qð the hosteler? and knew them both
wele,

Hyust pese, qð the Paramour; Jak, thow must be fele.
Ther is a theff I tell The within this hall dorr.

A theff, qð Jak? this is a nobill chere
That thou hym hast yfound; yf wee hym myght cach.
Yis, yis, care The nought; with hym we shul mach
Wele inowe, or he be go, yf so we had lighte;
For we to be stronge inowe with o man for to fighte.

The Devill of hell, qð Jak, breke this thev's bonis.
The key of the kitchen, as it wer for the nonys,
Is above with our dame? and she hath such usage,
And she be wake of her slepe, she fallith in such a rage,
That al the weke aftir there may no man hir plese,
So she sterith aboute this house in a wood rese.

But now I am avysid bet how we shul have lyte;
I have too giftis within, that this same nyght 550
Sopid in the halle, and had a litill feir.

Go up, qð Jak, and loke and in the ashis pire;
And I wol kepe the dorr, he shall not stert out.

Nay for God that woll I nat, lest I cach a clout,
Seid the toðir to Jak; for thou knowist bettir then I.
All the eftis of this house, go up thy self and spy.

Nay

Nay for soth, qð Jak, that were grete unrighte:
To aventur oppon a man that with hym did not fighte.
Sithens thou hast hym bete and with thy staff ypiit,
Me thinkith it wer no reson that I shuld bere the gilt: 560

For by the blyfing of the cole he myght se myne hede,
And lightly leve me such a stroke my hond to be dede.
Then wol we do by common assent sech hym al about,

Who that metith hym first pay him on the snout:
For methought I herd hym here last among the pannys.
Kepe thou, the toðir side, but ware the watir cannys,
And if he be herin, ryght sone we shull hym fynde;
And we to be strong inowghe o theffe for to bynde.
Aha ha, thought the Pardoner, beth the pannys aryn?
And drowghe oppon that side, and thought oppon a
gynne; 570

So at last he fond oon, and set it on his hede.
For, as the case was fall, ther'to he had grete nede.
But yit he graspit ferthir more to have somwhat in honde,

And fond a grete ladill, right as he was gonde,
And thought for to sterte out betwene them both to;
And waytid wele the Paramour that had doon hym
woo;

And set him with the ladill on the gruscill on the nose,
That all the week after he had such a pose,
That both his eyin waterid erlich by the morowe.
But the that was the cause of it had ther'of no fo-
rowe. 580

But now to the Pardoner; as he wold stert away
The hosteler met with hym, but nothyng to his pay:
The Pardoner ran so swith the pan fill him fro,
And Jak hosteler astir hym, as blyve as he myght go;
And flapid oppon a brondeal unware,
That hym had bin beter to have goon more asware:
For the egg of the pann met with his shynne,
And karff atoo a veyn, and the next syn.
But whils that it was grene he thought litil on,
But when the grenenels was apast, the greff fat ner
the bone. 590

Yit Jak leyd to his hond to grope wher it sete,
And when he fond he was yhurt, the Pardoner he gan to threte;

And swore by Seynt Amyas, that he shuld abigg
With stroks hard and sore, even oppon the rigg;
Yf he hym myght fynd, he nothyng wold hym spare,
That herd the Pardoner wele, and held hym bettir a square.

And thought that he had strokis ryght inough,
Wytnes on his armys, his bak, and his browe.
Jak then, qð the Paramour, wher is the theff ago?
I n'ote, qð tho Jak; right now he lepte me fro, 600
That Crist's curs go with hym, for I have harm and spite;

Be my trowith and I also and he goith nat al quyte;
But and we myght hym fynd, we wold aray hym so
That he shuld have legg, ne foot, to morowe on to go.

But how shull we hym fynd? the moon is adown,
(As grace was for the Pardoner) and eke when they did roun,

He herd them evir wele inowe, and went the more
asyde,

And drew him evir bakward, and let the strokis glide.
Jak, qð the Paramour, I hold it for the best,
Sith the moon is down, for to go to rest, 610
And make the gatis fast; he may not then astert,
And eke of his own staff he berith a redy mark,
Wherby thou mayest him knowe among all the route,
And thou ber a redy ey and weyt wele aboute,
To morowe when they shul wend; this is the best rede.
Jak, what seyft thou therto? is this wele yseyd?
Thy wit is clere, qð Jak, thy wit mut nedis stonde.

He made the gatis fast; ther is no more to doon,
The Pardoner stode asyde, his chekis ron and bled,
And was ryght evil at ese al nyght in his hede: 620
He must of force lige lyke a colyn swerd;

Yit it mevid him wondir fore for making of his berd,
He payd at full ther'fore, through a womans art,
For wyne, and eke for cawdill, and had ther'of no part;

He ther'for preyd Seynt Juliane, as ye mowe order-
stonde,

That the devill her shulde spede, on watir, and on londe;

So to disseive a travellyng man of his herbegage;
And coud not els, save curs, his angir to aswage;
And was distract of his wit, and in grete despayr;
For aftir his here he caught a cold through the nyght's
eyr; 630

That he was ner afoundit, and coud none othir help,
But as he fought his loggyng, he happid oppon a whelp

That ley undir a steyir, a grete Walssh dog,
That bare about his neck a grete huge clog;
Because that he was spetoufe, and wold sone bite:

The clog was hongit about his nek, for men shuld
nat wite

Nothyng the dogg's maister, yf he did eny harm;
So, for to excuse them both, it was a wyly charm.

The Pardoner wold have loggit hym ther, and lay
somwhat nigh;

The Warrok was awakid and caught hym by the thigh, 640

And bore hym wondir spetoufly, defending wele his couch,

That the Pardoner myght nat ne hym nether touch,
But held hym a square by that othir side,
As holfom was at that tyme, for tereing of his hyde:
He coud noon othir help, but leyd adown his hede
In the dogg's littir, and wisshid aftir brede,
Many a time and oft, the dog for to plesse;

To have yley more nere for his own ese.
But wifh what he wold, his fortune seyde ney;
So trewly for the Pardoner it was a dismal dey. 650

The dog ley evir grownyng, redy for to snache;
Wher'for the Pardoner durst nat with hym mache;
But ley, as still as eny stone, remembryng his foly,
That he wold trust a tapster of a common hostry:
For commonly for the most part they ben wyly echon.
But now to alle the company a morrow, whan they shuld gon,

Was noon of all the feleship half so sone ydight
As was the gentil Pardoner; for al tyme of the nyght
He was aredy in his aray, and had nothing to doon,
Saffe shake alite his eris, and trus, and be goone. 660
Yet or he cam in company, he wissh away the blood,
And bond the sorys to his hede with the typet of his hood;

And made lightfom chere; for men shuld nat spy
Nothyng of his turment, ne of his luxury;
And the hosteler of the house, for nothyng he coud
pry,

He coud nat knowe the Pardoner among the company.
Amorowe when they shuld wend, for ought that they coud pour,

So wysfely went the Pardoner out of the dogg's bour;
And blynched from the hosteler, and turned oft about;
And evir more beheld hym amyward of the rout; 670
And was evir syngyng to make al thyng good;
But yit his notis wer somwhat low, for aking of his hede.

So at that tyme he had no more grame;
But held hym to his hapynes to scape shame.

The knyght and al the feleship forward gon they wend,

Passyng forth merely to the town's end;
And

And by that tyme they wer ther, the day began to rype,
 And the Son merely upward gan he pike,
 Pleying undir the egge of the firmament.
 Now, q^d the hooft of Southwork, and to the felsehip bent;
 Who sawe evir so feyr, or so glad a day?
 And how sote this seson is entring into May:
 The Thrustelis, and the Thrushis, in this glad mor-
 nyng,
 The Ruddok, and the Goldfynch, but the Nyghtyngale
 His amorous notis lo! how he twynyth small.
 Lo! how the trees grenyth, that nakid wer, and nothing
 Bare this month afore, but their sommer clothing!
 Lo! how nature makith for them everichone!
 And, as many as ther be he forgettith noone!
 Lo! how the seson of the yere, and averell shouris, 690
 Doith the busshis burgyn out blossoms, and flouris!
 Lo! the pryme rosis how fresh they ben to sene!
 And many othir flouris among the gras grene!
 Lo! how they spryng, and sprede, and of divers hue!
 Beholdith, and seith both rede, white, and blue!
 That lusty bin and comfortabill for mann's sight!
 For I sey for my self, it makith my hert to light.
 Now sith Almighty Soveryn hath sent so feir a dey,
 Let se now, as covenantis, in shorting of the wey,
 Who shall be the first that shall unlace his male, 700
 In comfort of us al, and gyn some mery tale?
 For and we shuld now begyn to draw lot,
 Peraventure it myght fal ther it ought not,

On som unlusty persone, that wer not wele awakid,
 Or semybousy ovyr eve, and had ylong, and crakid,
 Somwhat ovir much; how shuld he than do?
 For who shuld tell a tale he must have good wyll therto.
 And eke som men fastyng beth glewid, and ybound
 In their tongis; and some fastyng beth nothyng jo-cound;
 And som in the morning their mouthis beth adoun, 710
 Tyll that they be charmyd their wordis woll not foun.
 So thys is my conclusioun, and my last knot,
 It wer grete gentilnes to tell without lot.
 By the rood of Bromholm, q^d the Marchant tho,
 As fer as I have sailed, riden, and ygo,
 Sawe I nevir man yet, tofore this ilk day,
 So wele coud rule a company, as our host in fay.
 His wordis ben so comfortabill, and comyth so in seson,
 That my wit is ovircome, to make eny reson
 Contrary to his counsaill, at myn ymagynacioun, 720
 Wherfor I woll tell a tale to your consolacioun;
 In ensampill to yowe; that when that I have do,
 Anothir be right redy then, for to tell; ryght so
 To fulfyll our hooft's wyll, and his ordinaunce.
 There shall no fawte be found in me, gode wyl shal
 be my chaunce,
 With this I be excusid of my rudines,
 Altho' I cannot peynt my tale, but tell it as it is;
 Lepyng ovir no sentence, as ferforth as I may,
 But tell yewe the Yolke, and put the White away.

The MERCHANT'S second Tale, or the History of BERYN.

Whilom yeris passid in the old dawis,
 When rightfullich by reson governyd wer
 the lawis,
 And pryncipally in the cete of Rome that was so rich,
 And worthiest in his dayes, and noon to hym ilich,
 Of worship, ne of wele, ne of governaunce;
 For alle londis christened therof had dotaunce;
 And all othir nationis, of what feith they were;
 Whils the Emperour was hole, and in his paleys there
 I mainteyned in honour, and in Pop's Se,
 Rome was then obeied of all Cristiante. 10
 But it farith therby, as it doith by othir thingis:
 For though nethir cete, regioun, ne kyngis
 Beth nat now so worthy, as wer by old tyme;
 As we fynd in romaunces, in gestis, and in ryme.
 For all things doith wast, and eke mann's lyff
Is more shorter then it was; and our wittis fyve
 Mowe nat comprehende, now in our dietes,
 As som tyme myght these old wise poetes.
 But sith that terrene things ben nat perdurabill;
 No mervaille is, though Rome be somewhat variabill 20
 Fro honour and fro wele, sith his frendis passid;
 As many anothir town is payrid, and ylassid
 Within these few yeris, as we mowe se at eye,
 Lo! sirs here fast by Wynchelse and Ry.
 But yit the name is evir oon of Rome, as it was groundit
 After Remus & Romulus, that first that cete foundit;
 That brethren weren both to, as old bokis writen;
 But of ther les and governaunce I wol nat now en-
 diten;

But of othir mater, that fallith to my mynd,
 Wherfor, gentill sirs, ye that beth behind, 30
 Drawith somwhat nere thikker to a rout;
 That my wordis may soun to ech man about.
 Aftir these 2 brethren Romulus and Remus,
 Julius Caesar was Emperour, that rightful was of Domus:
 This cete he governed nobilich wele,
 And conquered many a regioun, as cronicull doth us
 telle.
 For shortly to conclude, al tho wer adversaries
 To Rome in his dayis, he made them tributaries:
 So had he in subjeccioun both frend and foon;
 Of which I tell yew trewly Englonde was oon. 40
 Yit aftir Julius Caesar, and sith that Crist was bore,
 Rome was governed as wele as it was before.
 And namelich in that tyme, and in the same yeris,
 When it was governed by the doseperis:
 As semeth wele by reson, who so can entend,
 That o man's wyt, ne wyll, may not comprehend
The boucheff and the myscheff, as may many hedis:
 Therfor ther operaciouns, ther domes, and ther dedes;
 Were so egallich ydoon; for in all cristen londis,
 Was noon that they sparid for to mend wrongis. 50
 Then Constantyne the third, aftir these doseperis,
 Was Emperour of Rome, and regnyd many yeris.
 So shortly to pas ovir, after Constantyn's dayis,
 Phis Augustinus, as songen is in layes,
 That Constantyn's son, and of plener age,
 Was Emperour ychose, as fill by heritage;
 In whose tyme likerlich, the 7 Sages were
 In Rome dwellyng decently; and yf yee lust to lere,
 How

How they were yclepid, or I ferther goon,
I woll tell you the names of them everichone; 60
And declare yeu the cause why they ther namys bere,
The first was ycleped Sother Legifeer;
This is thus much for to sey, as man bering the lawe;
And so he did trewly; for levir he had be sclawe,
Then do; or sey, eny thing that fownyd out of reson:
So cleen was his conscience yset in trowith and reson:
Marcus Stoycus the second, so pepill hym highte;
That is to mene in our constert, a keper of the right:
And so he did full trewe; for the record and the plees,
He wrote them evir trewly; and took noon othir fees,
But such as was ordeynid to take by the yere.
Now, Lord God? in Cristendom I wold it were so clere.
The third Crassus Asulus among men clepid was;
An huse of rest, and ese, and counsail in every case;
For to onderstond that was his name full right,
For evirmore the counsails he helpid wyth al his myght.
Antonius Judeus, the fcrth was yclepid:
That was as much to meen, as wele me myght have clepid,
As eny pposid of all the long yere,
That myght have made hym sory or chongit onys
chere; 80
But evirmore rejoycing, what that evir betid;
For his hert was evir mery, right as the somer bridd.
Summus Philopater was the fift's name:
That thoughe men wold flee hym, or do hym al the shame,
Angir, or disese, as evil as men couthe;
Yet wold he love them nevir the wers, in hert, ne in mowith.
His will was cleen undir his foot, and nothing hym
above;
Therfor he was clepid fathir of perfite love.
The 6. and the 7. of these sevin Sages,
Was Stypio, and Sithero; as thes word astrolages 90
Was sirname to them both, aftir their sciences.
For of Astronomy sikerlich the cours, and all the fences
Bothe they knowhit wele inoughe, and wer right sotil
of art.
But now to othir purpose for her I woll depart,
As lightly as I can, and draw to my matere.
In that same tyme, that these Sages were
Dwellyng thus in Room, a litill without the walles,
In the subarbis of the town, of chambris, and of hallis,
And all othir howseing, that to a Lord belongit,
Was noon wythyn the cete; ne noon so wele be-hongit;
With docers of highe pryse, ne wallid so aboute,
As was a Senatours hous, wythyn, and eke wythoute.
Favinus was his name, a worthe man, and rich;
And for to sey shortlych, in Room was noon hym lyche.
His portis and his esttis were full evenaunte
Of tresour, and of lordshyp; also the most vailant
He was, and eke ycom of high lynage.
And at last he toke a wyff, like to his peerage;
For noriture, and connyng, bewte, and parentyne
Wer tho coun'id more worth, than gold or sylvir fyne. 110
But now it is al othir in many mann's thought;
For muk ys now ymarried, and vertu set at nought.
Fawnus and his worthy wyff wer to giðir aloon,
Fyveteene wyntir fullliche, and issu had they noon.
Wherfor ther joyis wer nat half perfite;
For uttirlich to have a child was al ther delite,
That myght enjoy ther heritage, and weld their honour;
And eke, when they were febill, to their trew socoure.

Their fastyng, and their preyir, and all that evir they wrought.
As pilgrimage, and almsded, ever they besought 120
That God would of his goodnes som fruyte betwene them send.
Fro gynnynge of their spousaill, the myddil, and the
end,
This was their most besynes; and all othir delites,
And eke this world's rychis they set at litil price.
So at last, as God wold, it fill oppon a dey;
As this lady fro chirchward went in the wey;
A child gan stere in her womb, as Godd's wyl was;
Wherof she gan to mervill, and made shortir pas,
Wyth colour pale, and eke wanne, and full in he-vynes;
For she had nevir, tofore that day, such manere seke-
nes. 130
The wymmen, that with her were, gon to behold
The lady and her chere, but nothyng they told;
But feir and soft wyth ese homward they her led:
For her soden sekenes full fore they were adred.
For she was inlich gentil, kynd, and amyabill,
And eke trewe of hert, and nothyng variabill.
She lovid God above all thing, and dred syn and shame;
And Agea sikerly was her rightfull name.
So aftir in breff tyme, when it was purseyvyd,
That she had done a womans dede, and had a child
conseyvyd; 140
The joy that she made, ther may no tung tell:
And al so much, or more, yf I ne ly shell,
Favinus made in his behalf, for this glad tyding:
That I trowe, I leve the Emperour, ne the Kyng,
Made no bettir cher to wyff, ne no more myrth,
Then Fawnus to Agea. And when the tyme of birth
Nygheid ner and ner, aftir cours of kynd,
Wetith wele in certen, that all the wyt and mynd
Of Fawnus was continuell of feir delyveraunce, Betwene Agea and his child; and made grete orde-
naunce, 150
Ageyn the tyme it shuld be bore, as it was for to doon.
So as God wold, whan tyme cam, Agea had a Son.
But joy that Fawnus made, was dobil tho to fore,
When that he knew in certen she had a son ybore:
And sent anoon for nurfis four, and no less,
To reule this child: afterward as yeris did pas,
The child was kept so tenderly, that it throff wel
the bet:
For what the norishes axit, anoon it was yfett.
In his chambir it norished was, to town it mut nat go; Fawnus lovid it so cherely, hit myght nat part hym
fro. 160
It was so feyr a creature, as myght be on lyve,
Of lymys, and of fetours, and growe wondir blyve.
This child, that I of tell, Berinus was his name,
Was ovir much cherished, which turned hym into grame;
As yee shull here aftir, when time comyth and spase:
For aftir swete the soure comyth full oft, in many a plase.
For as sone as he coud go, and also speke;
All that he set his ey on, or aftir list to beke,
Anoon he shuld it have; for no man hym wernyd.
But it had be well bettir, he had be wele ylernyd 170
Noriture, and gentilnes; and had yhad some hey.
For it fill so aftir, wyth what child he did pley,
Yf the pley ne likid hym, he wold breke his hede;
Or wyth a knyff hym hurt, ryght nygh hond to be dede.
For ther nas knyght, ne squyer, in his faðirs hous,
That thought his owne persone moste corajouse,
That did, or seyde, eny thing Berinus to displese,
That he n'old spetoussly anoon oppon him rese.
Wherof his faðir had joy, and his moðir also:
Yit it semeth to many a man, it was nat wisely do. 180
When

When Beryn passid was 7 yere, and grew in more age,
He wrought ful many an evil chek; for such was his corage,

That there he wist, or might, do eny evill dede;
He wold nevir sefe, for ought that men him seid.
Wherfor many a pore man ful oft was agrevid:
But Fawnus and Agea ful light theron belevid:
And thoughe men wold pleyne, full short it shuld a-
vaile;

For Fawnus was so myghty, and cheff of all counsaill,
With Augustyn the Emperour, that all men hym drad,
And lete pas ovir mischefe, and harmys that they
had. 190

Berinus ferthermore lovid wel the dife,
And for to pley at hazard, and held ther'of grete pryfe,
And all othir gamys, that losery was in;
And evirmore he lost, and nevir might wyn.
Berynus at hazard many a nyght he wakid;
And oft tyme it fill so, that he cam hom al nakid;
And that was all his joy: for right wele he knew,
That Agea his moðir wold cloth hym newe.
Thus Berynus lyvid, as I have told to fore,
Tyll he was of the age of 18 yere or more. 200

But othir whyls amongis for pleyntis, that were grete,
Fawnus made amendis, and put them in quiete:

So was the faðir cause the sone was so wyld:
And so have many mo such, of his own child
Be cause of his undoyng, al we mowe se al day;

For thing ytake is hard to put away;

As hors that ever trotid, trewlich I yew telle,

It were hard to make hym astir to ambill welle;

Ryght so by Beryn, when he had his lust and wyll,
when he was lite,

It shuld be hevy afterward to reve his old delite; 210
Save the whele of fortune, that no man may with-
stonde;

For every man on lyve ther'on he is gond,
O spoke she turnyd bakward, righte at high noone,
All ageyn Berinus, as ye shull here sone.

Agea his moðir fell in grete sekeneis,
And sent astir husbond wyth wordis hire to lis;
And for she wold tell hym hir hole hertis wyll,
Er she out of the world partid, as it was right and skill.
When Fawnus was ycome, and saw so rodylese
Hys wyff, that was so dcre, that for love he chese; 220
No mervell, though his hert wer in grete mournyng,
For he purseyvyd fullich, she drew to hir endyng:
Yit made he othir chere, then in his hert was,
To put away discomfourt, dissimilyng wyth his fise
The hevynes of his hert, wyth chere he did it close:
For such a manner craft ther is wyth them can glose,
Save that tournyng all to cantele: but Fawnus did
nat so,

For, wetith wele, in certeyn his hert was full of wo,
For his wyff Agea; and yit for craft he couth
The teris fro his eyin ran down by his mowith; 230
When he saw the pangis of deth comyng so fast
Oppon his wyff Agea, almost his hert to braist.
Agea lyft up hir eyen, and beheld the chere
Of hir husbond Fawnus, that was so trew a fere;
And seyde, Sir, why do ye thus? this is an elyng fare,
In comfourt of us both, yf yee myght spare,
And put away thys hevynes; whyle that yee and I
Myght speke of othir thyngis; for Deth me nyghith nygh.

For to body, ne to soule, this vailyth nat a karfe.
Now tellyth on, qð Fawnus, and I wol lete it pas, 240
For the tyme of talkyng, as wele as I may:
But out of my remembraunce, onto my endyng day,
Yeur deth woll nevir, I woot it wele, but evir be in my mynd.

Then, good Sir, qð Agea, beth to my soule kynd,
When my body is out of sight; for therto have I nede:
For truer make, then yee be, in word, ne in dede,

Had nevir woman; ne more kyndnes
Hath shewed unto his make; I know, right wele iwis:
Now wold ye so her astir, in hert be as trewe,
To lyve wythout make; and on yeur sone rewte, 250
That litill hath ylernid, sithens he was bore.
Let hym have no stepmoðir; for children have tofore
Comelich they lovith nat. Wherfor wyth hert I prey,
Have chere onto yeur sone, astir my endyng day:
For so God me help, and I lassit yew behynd;
Shuld nevir man on lyve bryng it in my mynd
To be no more yweddit, but lyve soule aloon.
Now yee know all my wyll, good sir, think ther'on.
Certis, qð Fawnus, whils I have wyttis fyve,
I think nevir, astir yew, to have anothir wyff. 260
The Preeft was com therwythall, for to do hir
rightis:

Fawnus toke his leve, and all the othir knyghtis,
Hir kyndrid, and frendis, kissed hir echone.
It is no nede to axe, wher ther was dole, or noon.
Agea cast hir ey up, and lokid all aboute,
And wold have kissid Beryn; but then was he wythoute
Pleying to the hazard, as he was wont to doon.
For as sone as he had ete, he wold ren out anoon;
And when she saw he was not ther, that she thought most on;

Hire sekeneis, and hire mournyng, berst her hert a-
noon. 270

A damfell tofore that was ron into the tounne
For to seche Beryn, that pleyed for his gowne,
And had almost lost it, right as the damfell cam;
And swore, and starid, as he was wood, as longit to the game.

The damfell seyde to Beryn, Sir, ye must com home:
For, but ye hygh blyve, that yee wer ycome,
Your mothir woll be dede; she is yit on lyve;
Yf ye wol speke wyth her, yee must hygh blyve.
Who bad so, lewd Kitt? your faðir, sir, qð she;
Go home, lewd visenag, that evil mut thow the, 280
Qð Beryne to the damfell, and gan her fray and feer;
And bad the devill of hell hir shoud to tere.
Hast thow ought els to do but let me of my game?
Now by God in hevin, by Peter, and by Jame, Quoth Beryn in grete angir, and swore be book and bell,

Rehersyng many namys, mo than me lyst to tell;
N'er thow, my faðirs messenger wer thou shuldist
nevir ete brede;

I had levir my moðir, and also thou, wer dede,
Then I shuld lese the game, that I am nowgh in:
And smote the damfell undir the ere, the weet gon upward spyn. 290

The death of Agea he set at litill pryfe:
So in that wrath frolick, Beryn threw the dyse,
And lost wyth that same cast al was leyde adown;
And stert up in a wood rage, and ballid on his crown,
And so he did the remnaunt, as many as wold abyde:
But, for drede of Fawnus, his felawis gan to hyde;
And nevir had wyll, ne list, wyth Beryn for to fyght,
But evir redy to pley, and wyn what they myght.
The deth of Agea sprang about the towne;
And every man, that herd the bell for her sowne, 300
Bemony'd her full fore; fast Beryn toke none hede,
But sought anothir feleship, and quyklich to them
yede,

To such manner company, as shuld nevir thryve,
For such he lovid, bettir then hir moðir's lyve:
And evirmore, it shuld be nyght or he wold home
drawe;

For of his faðir, in certeyn, he had no manner awe.
For evir in his yowith he had al his wyll,
And was ypassid chastising; but men wold hym
kyll.

Fawnus for Agea, as it was well fitting,
Made grete ordenaunce for hir burying;

310
Of
3

Of prelatys, and of preeftis, and of al othir thyng;
As thoughe she had be a wyff of a worthy kyng,
It myght nat have be mendit; such was his gentilnes;

For at hir enteryng was many a worthy messe.
For four weeks full, or he did her intere,
She ley in lede wythyn his houle. But Beryn cam not there,

Namelich into the place where his moðir ley,
Ne onys wold he a Pater noster for hir soule sey.
His thought was all in unthryft, lechery, and dyse,
And drawyng all to foly; for yowith is rechles; 320
But there it is refreyned, and hath som manere eye.
And therfore methinkith, that I may wele sey,
A man ypassid yowith, and is wythout lore,
May be wele ylikened to a tre wythout more,
That may nat bowe, ne bere fruyte, but root, and ever waft.

Ryght so by yowith farith, that no man list to chaste.
This mowe we know verely by experience,
That yerd makith vertu and benevolence

In childhode for to growe, as provith ymagynacioun;
A plant, whils it is grene, or it have dominacioun, 330
A man may wyth his fyngers ply it, wher hym lyst,
And make therof a shakill, a with, or a twist;
But let the plant stond, and yeris ovirgrowe,
Men shull not wyth both his hendis unnethis make it growe:

No more myght Fawnus make his sone Beryn,
When he grew in age, to his lore enclyne.
For every day when Beryn rose, unwasch he wold dyne,
And draw hym to his sekship, as even as a lyne;
And then com home, and ete, and soop, and slepe at nyght:

This was al his besynes, but yf that he did fight. 340
Wherfor his faðir's heart Fawnus gan for to blede,
That of his moðir, that ley at home, he toke no more hede;

And so did all the pepill that dwellid in the town
Of Beryn's wildnes gon speke, and eke roun.
Fawnus oppon a dey, when Beryn cam at eve,
Was set oppon a purpose to make his sone leve
All his shrewd raichis, wyth goodnes if he myght,
And taught hym feir and soft: but Beryn toke it light,

And countid at litill pryse al his faðir's tale.
Fawnus saw it wold nat; with colour wan and pale
He partid from his sone, and wyth a sorowfull hert.
I ne can write halfyndele, how fore he did smert
The disobeying of his sone, and his wyf's deth:
That, as the book tellith, he wisshed that his breth
Had ybeen above the serkill celestyne:
So fervent was his sorowe, his angir, and his pyne.
So shortly to conclude Agea was interid;
And Fawnus livid wythes 3 yere wer ywerid;
Wherof ther was grete speche for his high honour.
Tyll at last word cam onto the Emperour, 360
That Fawnus was without wyfe, and feld was jo-counde,

But mournyng for Agea, that he was to ybound,
And lyvid as an hermyte, soule and destitute,
Wythout consolacioun, pensyff oft and mute.
Wherfor Augustinus, of Rome the Emperour,
Was inwardlich fory, and in grete dolour.
Wyth that the 7 Sagis and senatouris all
Were assemblid, to discryve what shuld therof fall.
The wych seyde shortly, for a molestatioun
Ther was noon othir remedy, but a consolacioun. 370
For whoso wer in any thing displeid or agrevid,
Must by a like thing egall be remeid.
And when the Emperour knew all their determinacioun;

Quicklich in his mynd he had imaginacioun,
That Fawnus for Agea was in high distres,

And must ycurid be wyth passyng gentilnes
Of som lusty lady, that of pulchritude
Were excellent al othir; so shortly to conclude,
The Emperour had a love, tofore he had a wyf,
That he lovid as hertlich, as his own lyf, 380
As was as feir a creature, as Sone myght beshyne;
So excellent of bewte, that she myght be shryne
To all othir wymmen, that wer tho lyvand.
But for the Emperour had a wyf, ye shul wele onder-
stond,

He cam nat in hir company, to have his delite.
For cristendome and conscience was tho more perfite,
Then it is now adayis; yf I durst tell:
But I woll leve at this tyme. Than Fawnus al so swell

Was aftir sent in haft, of seknes to be curyd.
So what for drede, and ellis, they wer both ensuryd 390
In presence of the Emperour; so Fawnus myght nat flee:

It was the Emperours wyll, it myght noon othir be.
So wythin a tyme Agea was forgete:
For Fawnus thought litill on that he hir behight.
For, as the 7 Sagis had afore declarid,
It cam all to purpos; for Fawnus litil carid
For eny thyng at all, save his wyf to plese,
That Rame was yclepid; for rest, nethir ese
Fawnus nevir had, but of her presence:
So was his hert on her yset, that he coud no defence, 400

Save evirmore be wyth hir, and stare on hir visage;
That the most part of Room held it for dotage;
And had much marvell of his variaunce.
But what is that Fortune cannat put in chance?

For ther n'as man on lyce on woman more bedotid,
Then Fawnus was in Rame, ne half so much ylotid.
Wyth that Rame had knowlech that Fawnus was ysmyt

Wyth the dart of love; yee moweryght wele it wyt,
That all that evir she coud cast or ythynck,
Was all ageyn Berynus, for many a sotill wrench 410
She thought, and wrought day by day, as meny we-men doon,

Tyll they have of their desire the full conclusioun.
For the more that Fawnus of Rame did made,
The more dangerous was Rame, and of chere fader;
And kept wele her purpose undir coviture:
She was the las to blame, it grew of nature.
But though that Rame wrought so; God forbede that alle

Wer of that condicioun. Yet touch no man the gall;
It is my plein counsell, but doith as othir doith;
Take your part as it comith, of roughe, and eke of smoothe. 420

Yit noritur, wit, and gentilnes, reson, and perfite
mynde,

Doth all these worthy women to worch ageyns kynde;
That thoughe they be agrevid they suffir, and endure,
And passith ovir, for the best, and folowith nothing nature.

But now to Rame's purpose, and what was hir desire
Shortly to conclude, to make debate and ire
Betwene the faðir and the sone, as it was likely tho;
What for his condicioun, and what for love also;
That Fawnus owt to his wyf, the rathir he must hir
leve,

And grant for to mend, yf ought hir did greve. 430
Berinus evir wrought, right as he did before,
And Rame made hym chere of love, ther myght no
woman more,

And gaff hym gold and clothing, evir as he did lese,
Of the best that he coud ought wher in town chese;
And speke full feir wyth hym, to make al thyng dede:
Yit wold she have yete his hert, wythout salt, or brede;

She

She hid so hir felony, and spak so in covert,
That Beryn myght nat spy it but lite of Ram's hert.
So shortly to pas ovir; it fill oppon a nyghte,
When Fawnus and his fresh wyf wer to bed ydight,
He toke hir in his armys, and made hir hertly chere,
Ther myght no man betir make to his fere;
And seyde, myn ertly joy, myne hertis full plesauce,
My wele, my woo, my paradise, my lyv'is sustenance
Why ne be ye mery? why be ye so dull?

Sith ye know I am your own, right as your hert woll.
Now tell on love, myn own hert, yf ye eylyth ought;
For and it be in my power, anon it shall be wrought.
Rame wyth that gan fighe, and wyth a wepeing
chere

Undid the bagg of trechery, and seide in this ma-
nere; 450

No mervell though myn hert be fore and full of dele,
For when I to yew weddit was, wrong went my whele:
But who may be, ageyns hap and aventure?
Therfor, as wele as I may, myne I mut endure:
Wyth many sharp wordis she set his hert on feir,
To purchase with hir practik that she did desire.
But hoolich all hir wordis I cannot wele reherse,
Ne write, ne endite, how she did perce

Through Fawny's hert, and his scull also:
For more petouse compleynt, of sorowe, and of woo,
Made nevir woman ne more petously,
Then Rame made to Fawnys; she smote full bitterly
Into the veyn, and through his hert blood;
She bloderit so, and wept, and was so high, on mode,
That unneth she myght speke but othir while among Wordis of discomfort, and hir hondis wrong;
For alas! and woo the tyme, that she weddit was,
Was evir more the frefreit, when she myght have spafe;
I am yweddit; ye, God woot best, in what maner
and how:

For yf it wer so fall, I had a child by you; 470
Lord! How shuld he lyve? how shuld he com away?
Sith Beryn is your first sone, and heir aftir your day.
But yf that he had grace to scoole for to goo,
To have som maner connyng, that he myght trust to:
For as it now stondith it were the best rede;
For, so God me help, I had levir he wer dede,
Than wer of such condicioun, or of such lore
As Beryn your sone is, it wer bett he wer unbore.
For he doith nat ellis, save at hazard pley,
And comyth home al nakid, ech othir dey. 480

For within this month, that I have wyth yew be,
Fiftene sithis, for verrey grete pite,
I have yclothid hym al new, when he was to tore:
For evirmore he seyde, the old were ylore.
Now, and he wer my sone, I had levir he were yfod;
For and he pley so long, half our lyvelode
Wold scarly suffise hymself oon,
And n're yee wold be grevid: I swere be feynt John,
He shuld aftir this dey be clothid no more for me;
But he wold kepe them bettir, and draw fro nycete.
Now gentill wyff, gramcy of your wise tale
I think wel the more, that I sey no falc:
For towchyng my grevaunce, that Beryn goith al na-
kid;

Treulich that grevaunce is somewhat asclakid.
Let hym aloon, I prey yew, and I woll con yew thank;
For in such losery he hath lost many a frank.
The devil hym spedde that rech, yf he be to tore;
And he use it hereaftir, as he hath doon to fore.
Beryn arose a morowe, and cried wondir fast,
And axid aftir clothis, but it was all in wast:
Ther was no man tendant for hym in all the hous;
The whele was ychaungit into anothir cours.
Fawnus herd his sone wele, how he began to cry;
And rose up anon, and to hym did high;
And had forgete nothyng, that Rame had yseyde.
For he boillid so his hert, he was nat well apayde;

He went into the chambir, ther his sone ley;
And set hym down in a chair, and thus he gan to sey;
My gentil sone Beryn, now feir I woll ye teche;
Rew oppon thy self, and be thyne own leche. 510
Manhode is ycom now, myne own dere sone,
It is tyme thow be aweynyd of thyn old wone;
And thow art 20 wynters, and naught hast of doctryne;

Yit woldist thow draw to perfite, the worship wold
be thyne,

To noritur, and goodship, and al honest thing,
Ther myght com to myn hert no more glad tyding.
Leve now al thy foly, and thy rebawdry,
As tablis, and mervellis, and the hazardry;
And draw The to the company of honest men and good,

Els leve thow me as wele as Criste died on the rode,
And for al menkynd his Ghost pas lete,
Thow shalt for me hereaftir stond on thyn own fete;
For I woll no longir suffir this aray,
To clothe The al new eche othir dey.

Yf thow wolt draw The to wit, and rebawdry withdraw,

Of such good, as God have sent, yn part shalt thow have.

And yf thow wolt nat, my sone, do as I The tell;
Of me shalt thow naught have, trust me right well.
Wenyft thow wyth thy dise-pleying hold myn honoure,
Aftir my deth dey? then Beryn gan to loure, 530
And seide, is this a sermon? or a prechément?

Ye were nat wont herto, how is this ywent?
Sendith for some clothing, that I wer ago;
My fellowis lokith aftir me, I woot well they do so;
I woll nat leve my feleship, ne my rekelagis,
Ne my dise-pleying, for all your heretages:
Doith your best wyth them by your lyf day;
For when they fall to me, I wol do as I may.

Benedicite, faðir, who hath enformyd you?
And set you into ire? to make me chere rowe? 540
But I know wele inough whens this counsaill cam;
Trewlich of your own wyfe, that evil dame:
Com oppon hir body that fals putaigne,
For trewlich, faðir, yee dote on hir, and so al men
seyne.

*Alas! that evir a man shuld, that is of high counsaile,
Set all his wysdom on his wyv's taile!*

Yee lovith hir so much, she hath benome your wyt;
And I may curs the tyme, that evir ye wer yknyt:
For now, I am in certen, I have a stepmoðir:
They been shrewis, som ther been, but few othir. 550
Vel fikil flaptail, such oon as she ys,
For all my pleying at dise, yit do yee more amys;
Yee have ylost your name, your worship, and your feith;

So dote ye on hir, and levith all she sayith.
Fawnus, wyth the same word, gaff the chayir a but,
And lepe out of the chambir, as who seyde cur:
And swore, in verrey woodnes, be God omnipotent,
That Beryn of his wordis shuld fore repent.
Beryn set nought ther'of, with a proude hert
Answerd his faðir, and axid a new shert. 560

He gropid al about to have found oon,
As he was wont tofore, but ther was noon.
Then toke he such willokis as he fond ther,
And beheld hymself what man he wer:
For when he was arayde, then gan he first be wrothe:
For his womb lokid out, and his rigg both:
He stert aftir his faðir, and he began to cry,
For seth myn aray; for the villany

Ys as wele yours, as it is myne.
Fawnus let him clatir, and cry wel and fyne, 570
And passid forth still, and spak nat a word.

Then Beryn gan to think, it was nat al bord

That

That his faðir seyde, when he wyth hym was;
 And gan to think all about; and therwyth seid, alás!
 Now know I wele forsoth, that my moðir is dede:
 For tho gan he to glow first a fory mann'ys hede.
 Now kepe thy cut, Beryn; for thou shalt have a fit,
 Somwhat of the world to lern betir wit:
 For and thou wist sikerly what ys for to com,
 Thou woldist wissh aftir thy deth full oft and ylome:
 For ther n'ys beryng half so fove wyth staff, nehir swerd,
As man to be bete with his own yerd.
 The pyry is yblowe, hop; Beryn, hop,
 That ripe wol herastir, and on thyn hede drop.
 Thou tokist noon hede, whils it shoon hoot;
 Ther'for wynter The nyghith asay by thy cote.
 Beryn for shame to town durst he nat go;
 He toke his way to Churchward, his frend was made his fod.
 For angir, sorowe, and shame, and hevynes that he had,
 Unneth he might speke, but stode half as mad. 590
 O alas! qð Beryn, what wyt had I?
 That coud nat, tofore this dey, know sikerly.
 That my moðir dede was; but now I know to fore:
 And drede more, that eche dey hereastir more and more
 I shall know, and fele, that my moðir is dede.
 Alas! I smote the messangere, and toke of hir noon
 hede.
 Alas! I am right pore alas! that I am nakid:
 Alas! I slept to fast, tyl sorowe now hath me wakid:
 Alas! I hungir fore; alas! for dole and peyn!
 For eche man me seith hath me in disdeyn: 600
 This was all his mirth, to the churchward,
 That of his moðir Agea he toke so litill reward.
 When Beryn was within the chirch, then gan he wers
 fray;
 As sone as he saw the tomb where his moðir lay,
 His colour gan to chaunge into a dedely hew:
 Alas! gentil moðir, so kynd you wer, and trew,
 It is no mervell, for thy deth though I fore smert.
 But therewythal the sorowe so fervent smote his hert,
 That sodenly he fil down stan dede in swowe;
 That he had part of sorowe, methinkith that myght I
 avowe. 610
 Beryn lay so long, or he myght awake,
 For al his fyve wittis had clene hym forsake.
 Wel myght he by hymself, when refon ycom were,
 Undirstond that fortune had a sharp spere,
 And eke grete power, among high and lowe,
 Som to avaunce, and som to ovirthrowe.
 So at last, when Beryn a litill wakid were,
 He trampelid fast with his fete, and al to tare his ere,
 And his visage both, right as a woodman,
 With many a bitir tere, that from his eyen ran; 620
 And sighid many a fore sigh, and had much hevynes;
 And evirmore he cursid his grete unkyndnes
 To foreyit his moðir, whils she was alyve;
 And lenyd to hir tombe upon his tore sclyve;
 And wisshid a thousand sithis, he had ybe hir by:
 And beheld hir tombe with a petouse eye.
 Now, glorious God, qð Beryn, that al thing madist
 of nought,
 Heaven and erth, man, and beste; sith I am myf-
 wrought,
 Of yewe I axe mercy, socour, and help, and grace,
 For my mysdede, and foly, unthryffe, and trespafe. 630
 Set my sorowe and peyn somwhat in mesure
 Fro dispeir and myscheff, as I may endure.
 Lord of all Lordis, though fortune be my foo,
 Yit is thy myght above, to turn hym to and fro.
 First my moðirs lyfe fortune hath me berevid,
 And sith my faðirs love, and nakid also me levid.
 What may he do more? yis, take away my lyfe.
 But for that wer myn ese, and end of al stryfe,

Ther'for he doith me lyve, for my wers, I sey,
 That I shuld evirmore lyve, and nevir for to dey. 640
 Now leve I Beryn with his moðir, tyl I com aye,
 And wol return me to Rame; that of hir sorilte
 Bethoughte hir al aboute, when Beryn was agoon,
 That it shuld be wittid hir; wher'for she anoon
 In this wise seyde to Fawnus; Sir, what have ye do?
 Althoughe I speke a mery word, to suffir your sone go
 Nakid into the town? it was nat my counsail.
 What wol be seyde ther'of? sikir without faile,
 For I am his stepmoðir, that I am cause of alle
 The violence, the wrath, the angir, and the gall, 650
 That is betwene yew both, it wol be wit me:
 Wher'for I prey you hertly, doith hym com hom aye.
 Nay by trowith, qð Fawnus, for me comyth he nat
 yit;
 Sithe he of my wordis so litil prife set;
 As litil shall I charge his estate also.
 Sorowe have that rechith, though he nakid go:
 For every man knowith, that he is nat wise;
 Wher'for may be supposid, his pleying at dise
 Is cause of his aray, and nothyng yee, my wyff.
 Yes iwis, qð Rame, the tale woll be ryff 660
 Of me, and of noon othir, I know right wel asyne:
 Wher'for I prey you, gentil sir, and for love myn,
 That he wer yfet hom, and that in grete hast;
 And let asay oft ageyn with feirnes hym to chaste:
 And send Beryn clothis, and a new shert:
 And made al wele in eche side, and kept close her hert.
 Now sith it is your wyll, qð Fawnus, tho anoon
 That Beryn shall home com; for your sake aloon
 I woll be the message to put your hert in ese:
 And eis, so God me help, wer it nat yew to plesse, 670
 The gras shuld grow on pament, or I hym home
 bryng.
 Yet nethiries, forth he went, wyth too or thre, tiding
 From o strete to anothir, enqueryng to and fro
 Aftir Beryn, in every plase wher he was wont to go;
 Seching eviry halk, howris too or thre,
 With hazardours, and othir such, ther as he was wont
 to be;
 And fond hym nat ther; but to Chirch went echone,
 And at dorr they stode a while, and herd Beryn made his mone.
 They herd all his compleynt, that petouse was to here.
 Fawnus into the Chirch pryvely ch gan pire; 680
 But al so sone as he beheld wher Agea lay,
 His teris ran down be his chekis, and thus he gan
 to sey;
 A! Agea, myn old love, and my new also!
 Alas! that evir our hertis shuld depart atoo!
 For in your graciouse dayis, of hert'is trobilnes
 I had nevir knowleche, but of all gladnes.
 Remembryng in his hert, and evir gan renewe
 The goodnes betwene them both, and hir hert trewe;
 And drew hym ner to Beryn, with an hevy mode.
 But as sone as Beryn knew, and ondirstode 690
 That it was his faðir, he wold no longir abide;
 But anoon he voidit by the toðir side:
 And Fawnus hym encountrid, and seyde; we have
 The fought
 Through the town, my gentil sone, and ther'for void
 The nought,
 Though I seyde a word or two, as me thought, for the best
 For thyne erudicioune, to draw The onto lyfe honest;
 Thou shuldist nat so fervently have take it to thyn hert.
 But sith I know my wordis doith The so fore smert,
 Shall no more hereastir; and eche dey our diete
 Shall be mery and solase, and this shall be forgete. 700
 For wele I woot, for thy moðir that thou art to tofe;
 Also thou hast grete sorowe, but onys nedith and no
 more;

And ther'for, sone, on my blessing, to put sorowe a-
wey;

Drawe The nowe heraftir to honest myrth and pley.
Lo ther is clothing for yewe, and yeur hors ydight
Wyth harneys all freshe new; and if yeelift be knyght,
I shall yit or eve that bergeyn undirtake,
That the Emperour for my love, a knyght shall you make:

And what that evir ye nede, anoon it shall be bought.
For whils that I have eny thing, ye shall lak naught. 710
Graunt mercy, qð Beryn, with an hevy chere;
Of yeur worshipfull profir that ye have proferid me
here:

But ordir of knyghthode to take is nat my liking;
And sith yeur will is for to do somewhat my plesing;
Ye have a wyfe ye love wele, and so tendirlich,
That, and she have childrin, I know right sikerlich
All that she can devyse, both be nyght and dey,
Shall be to make her childryn heirs of that she may:
And eke sowe sedis of infelicite;

Wher'of wold growe devysioune betwene yewe and me.
For yf ye spend on me yeur good, and thus riallich
Levith wele, in certen yeur wyfe wold sikerlich
Eche dey for angir her tuskis whet,
And to smyte with her tunge, yeur hert in wrath
to set

Toward me from dey to dey, but ye wold aply
Somwhat to hir purpose, and aftir hir yew guy;
She wold wex so ovirtwart and of so lither tach,
And evir lour undir her hood, a redy for to snache;
She wold be shortying of yeur lyfe, and that desire I naught.

Wher'for to plesse all about, my purpose and my thought 730

Is for to be a marchaunte, and leve myne heritage,
And relese it for evir, for shippis fyve of stage
Full of marchaundise, the best of all this londe.

And yf ye wol so, faðir, quyk let make the bonde.
Fawnus was right well apayd, that ilk word outstert,
But yit he seyde to Beryn; I mervell in myn hert
Wher haddist thou this counsaile, to leve thyne honour,
And lyve in grete aventure, and in grete labour.

And rid so forth talkyng, a soft esy pase,
Homward to his plase, ther that Rame was. 740

And as sone as Fawnus was ylight adown;
And highid fast to his wyfe, and with hir gan to rown;
And told hir all the purpose, and made Fawnus chere;
She did hym nat half so much, the tyme she was his fere.

She hullid hym, and mollid hym, and toke hym about
the nekk,

And went low for the kite, and made many a bekk;
And seyde sir by yeur spech now right well I here,
That yf ye list, ye mowe do thing that I most desire;
And that is this yeur heritage, there yeu best likid,
That ye myght gyve, and evir among the brussh awey she pikid 750

From hir clothis here and there, and sighid ther-
withall:

Fawnus, of his gentilnes, by hir myddil smale
Hertlich hir bracyd, and seyde; I woll nat leve,
I suy yew my trowith, that onys or it be eve
That I shall do my devoir without feintise,
For to plesse your hert fullich in all wyse.

Graunt mercy, myn own soverene, qð Rame, tho
mekely;

And made protestatioune, that she shuld sikerly,
All the dayis of hir lyfe, be to hym as hende.

As evir woman was to man; as ferforth as hir mynd
And wit hir wold serve, and made grete othe.

Fawnus bood no longir, but forth therwith he goith.
A! precious God in heven, kyng of majeste!

So plentivouse this world is of iniquite,
Why is to yfuffrid? that trowith is brought adown

Wyth trechery, and falsbede, in feld, and eke in town?

But now to Fawnus, and his entent. When he his sone met,

He toke hym soft by the hond, his tung he gan to whet

Sotilly to engyne him; first he gan to preche,
Leve thy foly, my dere sone, and do as I The teche;
Sith thou hast wit, and reson, and art of mann's age;
What nedith The be marchaunt? and shall have heritage.

For and thy good wer ylost, the sorowe wold be myne,
To tell the soth right, nigh peregall to thyne.

And yf that I were dede, whils thou wer oute,
Lond, and rent, and all my good, have thou no doute,
It wold be plukkid from The, thy part wold be left:
And also ferthermore, I make oon beheest,

That I trowe my moblis wol nat suffise
To charge fyve shippis ful of marchandise. 780

But yf I leyde in mortgage my lond, and eke my rent,
And that I leve be nat thy wyll, ne thyn entent:

Yit nethirles, yf thy hert be so inly set
For to be a marchaunt, for nothing woll I let,

That I n'yl do thy plesauce, as ferforth as I mey,
To go ryght nygh myn own estate, but levir I had nay.

Their wordis, ne their dedis, ne matters them be-twene,

I wol nat tary now ther'on my perchemen to spene:
But fynallich to the end of their accordement;

Fawnus had so goon about, yturned, and ywent, 790
That he had brought his sone tofore the Emperour,

To relese his heritage, and al his honour,
That he shuld have aftir his dey, for shippis fyve, and full

Yled of marchaundise, of lynnyn, and of wool,
And of othir thingis, that wer yusid tho.

Engrosid was the covenaut betwene them to,
Yn presence of the Emperour, in opyn and no rown,

Tofore the gretist Cenators, and eldest of the town.
So when the relese selid was with a syde bonde;

They wer yleyd both in a meen honde, 800
Into the tyme that Beryn fullich sesid were

In the fyve shippis, that I yew told ere.
But who was glad but Fawnus? and to his wyff went,

And seyde; now, my hert is swete, all thyn hole entent
Ys uttirlich perfourmyd; us lakkith now no more,

But marchaundise and shippis, as I told tofore.
That shall not fail, qð Rame, and began to daunce:

And aftirward they speken of the purveaunce.
Alas! this fals world so ful of trechery!

In whom shuld the sone have trust and feith skirly, 810
If his faðir faylid hym? whether myght he go

For to fynd a skir frend, that he myght trust to?
So when these 5 shippis wer rayid and dight;

Fawnus and his sone to the Emperour ful right
They went, and many a grete man for the same case,

To see both in possessioun, as their covenante was.
Beryn first was sesid in the shippis fyve;

And Fawnus had the relese, and bare it to his wyff:
And eche held them payde, and Rame best of all;

For she had conquerd thing, that causid most hir
gall. 820

Now leve I Fawnys and his wyff: and of the gover-
naunce

Of Beryn I wol speke, and also of his chaunce.
When lodismen, and maryneris, in al thing redy was;

This Beryn into Alisaunder, yf God wold send hym
grace,

That wynde hym wold serve, he wold: so on a day,
The wynd was good: and they seyld on their way

Too dayis fullich, and a nyght therwythal,
And had weðir at wyll; tyll at last gan fall

Such a myst among them, that no man myght se othir;
That wele was hym that had ther the blessing of his

moðir. 830

For thre dayis incessantly the derknes among them was,
That no shipp myght se othir; wherfor, full oft alas!
They seyde, and to the high God they made their preyere,

That he wold of his grace them govern and stere;
So that their lyvis myght ysavide be;
For they were cleen in dispeyr, because they myght
nat se

The loder, wherby these shippmen ther cours toke echone.

So at last, the ferth dey, making thus hirmone,
The dey gan clere; and then such wynd arose,
That blew their shippis, elswere then was their first purpose. 840

The tempest was so huge, and so strong also,
That wele was hym that coude bynde or ondo
Any rope within the shipp, that longit to the craft;
Every man shewid his connyng, to fore the shipp, and baftit.

The wynd a wook the see to braft, it blew so gresly
fore,

That Beryn and all his company, of synnys las and more

Eche man round about shroff hymself to othir;
And put in Godd's gowernaunce lyf, shipp, and stro-
thir.

For ther was shippis meyne, for owght they coud hale,
That myght abate of the shipp the thiknes of a scale:
The weðir was so fervent of wynd, and eke of thundir,
That every shipp from othir was blowe of sight a-sondir;

And durid so al day and nyght; tyll on the morowe,
I trow it was no questioune wher they had joy or so-
rowe.

So aftirward, as God wold, the wynd was somewhat soft:

Beryne clepid a maryner, and bad hym sty on loft,
And weyte aftir our four shippis aftir us doith dryve;
For it is but grace of God, yf they be alyve.

A maryner anoon wyth that, right as Beryn bad,
Styed into the topcastell, and brought hym tydings glad.
Sir, he seith, beth mery; your shippis comith echone
Saff and sound, sailing, as ye shul se anoon;
And eke sir ferthermore, lond also I sigh:

Let draw our cors estward, thys tyde woll bryng us ny.
Blessed be God, qð Beryn, then wer our shippis com;
We have no nede to dout werr, ne molestatioune;
For there n'ys wythin our shippis no thyng of spolia-
tioune,

But al trew marchaundise; wherfor for Lodisman,
Stere onys into the costis, as well as thou can;
When our shippis be ycom, that we mowe pas in fere,
Lace on a bonnet or tweyn, that we mowe faile
nere.

And when they wer the costis nygh, was noon of them alle

That wist what lond it was. Then Beryn gan to calle

Out of every ship anoon a maryner or tweyne,
For to take counsell; and thus he gan to seyne;
The fronntis of this ilk town been wondir feir wyth-
all;

Methinkith it is the best rede, what that evir befall,

That I my self aloon walk into the towne,
And here, and se, both her and there, upward and downe,

And enquire fullich of their gowernaunce. 880

What sey ye, Sirs? woll ye sent to this ordonaunce?
All they accordit well therto and held it for the best;
For thus yf it be profitabill, we mowe abide and
rest,

And yf it be othirwise, the rathir shall we go;
For aftir that The spedde, we woll work and do.

But nowe mowe ye her right, a wondir thing;
In all the world wyde, so fals of their lyvyng
Was no pepill ondir sone, ne none so disseyvabill,
As was the pepill of this town, ne more unstabill;
And had a curfed usage of sotill ymaginacioune, 890
That yf so wer the shippis of any straunge nacioune
Were com into the port; anoon they wold them hide
Within their own howsis, and no man go, ne ryde,
In no strete of alle the town; ascaunce that they wer
lewde,

And coud no skill of marchandise, a skill it was a shrewde;

As ye shull here aftir, of their wrong and falskede:
But yit it fill, as worthy was, oppon their own hede,
Beryn arayd hym freschly, as to a marchand longith.
And set hym on a palfrey wel be sey and hongit;
And a page rennyng by his hors fete: 900
He rode endlong the town, but no man coud he meet.

The dorrys wer yclosid in both too sidis;
Wherof he had mervell; yet ferthermore he ridis;
And waytid on his right hond a Mancipil's plase,
All fresch and new, and thiðir gan he pase:
The gatis wer wyde up, and thiðir gan he go;

For throughout the long town he fond so no mo.
Therin dwellid a Burgeyse the most sclicer man
Of all the town throughout, and what so he wan
With trechery and gile, as doith som freris, 910
Right so must he part with his comperis.

Beryn light down on his hors, and inward gan he dres,

And fond the good man of the house pleying at ches
With his neyghbour, as trewe as he, that dwellid hym fast by.

But as sone as this burgeyse on Beryn cast his eye,
Sodenly he stert up and put the ches hym fro;
And toke Beryn by the hond, and seyde these wordis
tho;

Benedicite! what manere wynd hath ybrought you
here?

Now wold to God I had wherof, or coud make yew
chere!

But ye shull lowe my good wyll, and take such as ther is;

And of your gentil paciens suffir that is amys.

For well he wist by his aray, and by his countenaunce,
That of the shippis, that wer ycom, he had som go-
vernaunce:

Wherfor he made hym chere, semeyng amyabill,
Icolerid all with cautelis, and wondir disseyvabill:
He bracyd hym by the myddil, and preyde hym sit a-down;

And lowly with much worshipp dresid his cosshon.
Lord God! seyde this burgeyse, I thank this ilk dey,
That I shuld see yew hole and found here in my con-
tray;

And yf ye list to tell the cause of yewr comyng, 930
And yf ye have nede to any manere thing,
And it be in my power, and thoughe I shuld it sech
It shuld go right wonder streyte, I sey yew sikerlich,

But yee it had in haste, therwith yew to plesse;
For now I see yew in my house, my hert is in grete ese.

The toðir burgeyse rose hym up, for to make rouse,
And axid of his felaw, that Lord was of the house,
Whens is this worshipfull man? with wordis hend
and low,

For it semith by the manere, that ye hym shuld knowe,
And have sey hym tofore this tyme I have sene, qð
the toðir, 940

Ye ywis an 100 sithis, and right as to my broðir,
I wold do hym plesaunce, in al that evir I can;
For trewlich in his contray he is a worshipful man.

For

For soth, Sir, and for your love, a thousand in this town
 Wold do hym worship, and be right feyne and boun
 To plesse hym, and avail to have thonk of you.
 I woot wele, God them yeld, so have they oft er now.
 And arose up therewithall, and with his felaw spak
 Of such manere mater, that faylid nevyr of lakk.
 So when their counsell was ydo; this burgeyse preyd
 his fere 950
 To sit a down be Beryn, and do hym sport and chere:
 And in the while, I wol se to his hors;
 For every gentil hert, afore his own cors,
 Desirith that his riding best be servid and ydight,
 Rathir than hymself. Wherfor wyth all my myght.
 I woll have an eye therto; and sich parte wyyn,
 Wich tonne or pipe is best, and most fyne.
 Beryn was all abashid of his soden chere;
 But nethirles the burgeyse sat hym somewhat nere,
 And preyd hym, of his gentilnes, his name for to tell,
 His contrey, and his lynnage; and he answer'd Snell,
 Berinus I am ynamid, and in Rome ybore,
 And have fyve shippis of myn own, las and more,
 Full of marchaundise, ligging tofore the town,
 But much mervaille have I, the good man is so boun
 To serve me, and plesse, and how it might be.
 Sir, seyde the burgeyse, no mervelle it is to me:
 For many a tyme, and oft, I cannot sey how lome;
 He hath be in your marchis; and as I trow, in Room
 Also he was ybore, yf I ne ly shall. 970
 Yf it be so, qð Beryn, no mervelle it is at all,
 Thoughe he me have ysey; and eke his gentill chere
 Previth it all opynly: but be hym that bought me
 dere,
 I have ther'of no knowlech, as I am now avysid.
 With that cam in the good man, with countenance
 disgilid,
 And had enquiryd of the child, that with Beryn cam,
 Fro gynnyng to the endyng, and told his maltris
 name,
 And of Agea his moðir, and all thing as it was:
 Wher-through he was ful perfite, to answer to every cas.
 So entryng into the hall the Burgeys spak anon, 980
 A! my gentill Beryn, alas! that under stonne
 Myne own hert Agea, thy moðir, leff and dere!
 Now God assoyl hir soule: for nevyr bettir chere
 Had I of frend woman, ne nevyr half so good.
Benedicite! a marchaunt comyng ovir flood.
 Who brought yew in this purpos? and beth your faðir's heir.
 Now by my trew conscience, ryght nygh in dispeyr
 I wax for your sake; for now frendlesse
 Ye mowe welesey that ye been; but yit for nethirles
 Yee mut endure fortune, and hevynes put away; 990
 Ther is noon othir wisdom. Also your shippis gey,
 That been ycom in savete, ought to amend your mode;
 The wich, when we have dyned, I swere for by the Rood,
 We wol se them trewly, within and eke without,
 And have wyne wyth us, and drynk al about.
 They set, and wissh, and fed them, and had wherof
 plente;
 The burgeyse was a stuffid man, ther lakkid noon
 deynte.
 So when they had ydined, the cloth was up ytake;
 A chese ther was ybrought forth: but tho gan so-
 rowe to wake.
 The ches was all of ivory, the meyne fressh and new,
 I pulsshid, and ypikid, of white, asure, and blew.
 Beryn beheld the cheker, it semed passyng feir;
 Sir, qð the burgeys, ye shul fynd her a payr,
 That woll mate yew trewly, in las than half a myle.

And was yseyd of forlite, Beryn to begile.
 Now in soth, qð Beryn, it myght wel hap nay,
 And n'er I must my shippis se, els I wold assay.
 What nedith that, qð the burgeyse? trewlich I wol
 nat glose;
 They been nat yit ysetelid, ne fixid in the wofe:
 For I have sent thries, sith ye hithir cam, 1010
 To wait oppon their governaunce. Wherfor let set o game,
 And I shall be the first that shall yew atast.
 The meyne wer yset up, and gon to pley fast:
 Beryn wan the first, the second, and the third;
 And at fourth game, in the ches amyd,
 The burgeyse was ymatid: but that lust him wele;
 And all was doon to bryng hym yn, as ye shul her snel.
 Sir, then, seyde Beryn, ye woot well how it is;
 Me list no more to pley; for yee know this;
 Wher is noon comparisoun, of what thing so it be,
 Lust and liking fallith ther; as it semeth me,
Ne myrth is nat commendabill, that ay is by o fide,
But it rebound to the tothir; wherfor tyme is to ryde.
 And as many thonkis, as I can or may,
 Of my sport, and chere, and also of your pley.
 Nay iwys, gentill Beryn, I woot ye wol nat go;
 For noritur wol it nat, for to part so,
 And eke my condicioun; but I ley somthing,
 Is no more to pley, then who so shoke a ryng
 Ther no man is wythyn the ryngyng to answer;
 To shete a fethirles bolt, almost as good me were.
 But and ye wold this next game som maner wager
 legg;
 And let the trowith, on both sidis, be morgage and yplegg,
 That whofo be ymatid, graunt and assent
 To do the toðirs bidding; and whofo do repent
 Drynk all the watir, that salt is of the See.
 Beryn belevid that he coud pley betir than he;
 And sodenly assentid, with hond in hond assurid;
 Men that stode besides, ycappid, and yhurid,
 Wist wele that Beryn shuld have the wers mes; 1040
 For the burgeyse was the best pleyer at ches
 Of all the wyde marchis, or many a myle about.
 But that ne wyft Beryn of, ne cast ther'of no doute:
 He set the meyne efft ageyn, and toke betir hede
 Then he did tofore, and so he had nede.
 The burgeyse toke avysement long on every draught;
 So wyth an hour or too, Beryn he had ycaught
 Somwhat oppon the hipp, that Beryn had the wers.
 And albeit his mynd and wyll was for to curs,
 Yit must he dure his fortune, when he was so fer ygo.
For who is that that fortune may alway undo?
 And namelich stout even in eche side
 Of pro and contra; but God help, down woll he glide.
 But now a word of philosophy, that fallith to my mynd.
Who take hede of the begynnyng, what fal shall of the end,
He leyth a bussh tofore the gap, ther fortune wold in ryde;
 But comynlich yowith forgetith that throughout the world.
 Right so be Beryn I may wele sey, that confaillis in rakid
 Likly to lese his marchaundise, and go hymself al
 nakid.
 Beryn studied in the ches, although it nought availid:
 The burgeyse in the mene while, with othir men con-
 faillid,
 To fech the sergauntis in the town, for thing he had ado.
 So when they com were, they walkid to and fro,
 Up and down in the hall, as skaunce they knew
 nought;
 And yit of all the purpose, wit, and mynd, and thought,
 Of the untrew burgeyse, by his messengeris

They wer ful enformyd. Wherfor with eye and eris,
They lay await full doggidly, Beryn to areft;
For therfor they wer aftir sent, and was their charge
and heft
Lord how shuld o fely lomb among wolvis weld, 1070
And scape unyharmyd? it hath been seyn feld.
Kepe thy cut now, Beryn, for thow art in the case.
The hall was full of pepill, the serjauntis shewid
their mafe:
Beryn kast up his hede, and was ful fore amayid;
For then he was in certen the burgeyse had hym betrayde.
Draw on, seyde the burgeyse; Beryn, ye have the
wers:
And every man to othir the covenaut gan reherse.
The burgeys, whils that Beryn was in hevy thought,
The next draught aftir, he toke a rook for nought.
Beryn swat for angir, and was in hevy plight; 1080
And drede full fore in hert; for wele he wist al quyt
He shuld nat escape, and was in high distrefs;
And pryvelich in his hert, that evir he saw the ches
He cursid the day and tyme; but what awaylid that?
For wele he wist then, that he shuld be mate:
Hogan to chaunge his colour, both pale, and wan.
The burgeyse seith; comyth nere, ye shul se this man
How he shull be matid, with what man me list:
He droughe and seyde, chek mate. The serjauntis
wer full prest,
And sefid Beryn by the scleve, and seyde, Sirs, what think ye for to do? 1090
Q^d Beryn to the serjauntis, that ye me hondith so?
Or what have I offendit? or what have I seide?
Trewlich, q^d the serjauntis, it vaylith nat to breyde;
Wyth us ye must a while, wher ye wol or no,
Tofore the steward of this town aryse, and trus,
and go:
And ther it shall be openyd, how wisely thow hast
wrought:
This is the end of out tale, make it nevir so tought.
Sirs, farith feir, ye have no nede to hale.
Pas forth, q^d the serjauntis, we wol nat her thy tale.
Yis, Sirs, of your curtesy, I prey yew of o word;
Although my gentill hooft hath playd with me in borde,
And ywon a wager, ye have naught to doon;
That is betwene hym and me, ye have nothyng to doon.
The hooft made an hidouse cry, in gesolreut the haut,
And fet his hond in kenebowe, he lakkid nevir a faute;
Wenyth thow, seid he to Beryn, for to scorne me?
What evir thow speke, or stroute, certis it woll nat be;
Of me shalt thow have no wrong; pas forth a betir
pafe;
In presence of our steward I woll tell my case.
Why, hooft, sey yee this in ernest, or in game? 1110
Ye know my contray, and my mo^odir, my lynnage,
and my name;
And thus ye have yseyd me X sith on this dey.
Ye what though I seyde so? I know wele it is nay:
Ther lyth no more ther'to. But anothir tyme
Leve me so much the les, when thow comyst by me.
For all that evir I seyde was to bryng The in care;
And now I have my purpose, I woll nothyng The spare.
Thus janglyng to ech othir, endenting every pafe,
They entrid both into the hall, ther the steward was:
Evandir was his name, that sotill was, and so fell,
He must be well avysid tofore hym shuld tell.
Anothir burgeyse wyth hym was, provost of the cete,
That Hanybald was yclepid, but of sotilte
He passid many anothir, as ye shul here sone.
Berynus hooft gan to tell al thyng as it was doon,

Fro gynnyn to the endyng, the wordis wyth the
dede;
And how they made their covenaut, and waget how they leyde.
Now, Beryn, q^d the steward, thow hast yherd this tale;
How and in what manere thow art ybrought in bale.
Thow must do his byddyng, thow maist yn no wyse
flee,
Or drynk all the watir, that salt is in the See:
Of these too thingis, thow must chese the toon;
Now be well avysid, and sey thy will anon.
To do yee both law, I may no betir sey,
For thow shalt have no wrong, as ferforth as I mey;
Chese The self right as The list, and wit thow nothing me,
Though thow chese the wers, and let the betir be.
Beryn stode astonyd, and no mervail was,
And preyde the steward, of a dey to answeere to the case:
For I might lightlich in som word be ycaught, 1140
And eke it is right herd to chese of to, that beth right naught.
But and it wer your likyng to graunt me day tyl to morowe,
I wold answer, through Godd's help. Then must thow fynd a borowe,
Seyde the steward to Beryn, and yit it is of grace.
Now herith me, q^d Hanybald, I prey a litil spafe:
He hath 5 shippis ondir the town, lyggyng on the strond,
The wich been sufficient, ysefid in our hond,
By me, that am your provost to execute the law.
He must assent; q^d Evander, let us onys here his law.
I graunt wele, q^d Beryn, sith it may be noon othir.
Then Hanybald arose hym up, to sese both ship and strothir;
And toke Beryn wyth hym; so talkyng on the wey,
Beryn, q^d Hanybald, I suy The be my fey,
That thow art much ybound to me this ilk dey;
So is thy ple amendit by me; and eke of such a wey
I am avysid in thy cause, yf thow wolt do by rede,
That lite or nought by my counsaill ought The to drede.
Yee know wele, to morowe the dey of ple is set,
That ye mut nedis answeere; or els wythout lett
I must yeld them your shippis, I may in no wyse
blyn; 1160
So have I undirtake. But the merchaundise wythin
Is nat in my charge, ye knowe as wele as I,
To make therof no livery: wherfor now wysely
Worch, and do aftir rede; let all your merchaundise
Be voidit of your shippis; and at hiest prise
I wol have it every dele in covenaut; yf ye list,
To se myne house here onys tofore, I hold it for the best;
Wher ye shul se of divers londis, housis to or thre
Full of merchaundise, that through this grete cete
Is no such in preve, I may right well avowe. 1170
So when ye have all seyn, and I have your also;
Let som bargin be ymade betwene us both too.
Graunt mercy sir, q^d Beryn, your profir is feir and
good:
Feyn wold I do ther'aftir, yf I ondirstood
I myght, wythout blame of breking of areft.
Yis, q^d Hanybald, at my perell me trust.
So to Hanybald's house togi^odir both they rode;
And fond, as Hanybald had yseyd, an houe houe,
long, and brode,
Full of merchaundise, as rich as it may be,
Passyng all the marchantis that dwellid in that cete. 1180
Thus

Thus when all was shewid; they dronk, and toke
 their leve,
 To se Beryn's shippis in hast they gon to meve:
 And when that Hanybald was avysid what charge
 the shippis bere,
 He gan to speke, in his wyse ascaunce, he rought
 nere
 Whethir he bargeynyd or no, and seyde thus; Beryn, frend,
 Your marchaundise is feir and good, now let us make an end,
 If yee list, I can no more, yee knowith how it is.
 Com of short let tuk them yn, methinkith I sey nat
 mys,
 And then your meyne, and ye, and I to my house
 shall we go,
 And of the marchaundise I saw, I wol nat part
 therfro: 1190
 Chese of the best of that ye find there,
 Throughout the long house, ther shall no man yeu
 dere;
 And therwith shall your shippis be fillid all fyve;
 I can sey no betir, yf ye list to dryve
 This bargeyn, to the end, counsellith with your men:
 I may nat long tary, I must nedis hen.
 Beryn clepid his meyne, counsell for to take;
 But his first mocione was of the woo, and wrake,
 And all the tribulacioun, for pleying at ches,
 That he had every dcle, his shame, and his dures, 1200
 Fro poynt to poynt, and how it stode, he told how it
 was;
 And then he axid counsaill, what best was in the case;
 To chaunge with the burgeyse, or els for to leve:
 Eche man seyde his avise; but al that they did meve,
 It wer to long a tale for to tell it here.
 But fynally at end, they cordit al in fere,
 That the chaunge shuld stond; for as the case was fall,
 They held it clerely for the best; and went forth
 wythall,
 The next wey that they couth, to Hanybald's plafe.
 But now shull ye here the most sotill fallace, 1210
 That evir man wrough till othir, and highest trechery, Wich Hanybald had wrought hymself to this company;
 Go in, qð Hanybald, and chese, as thy covenaut is.
 In goon these Romeyns ech oon, and fond amys;
 For there was nothing, that eny man might se,
 Saff the wall, and tyle stonys, and tymbir made of tre.
 For Hanybald had do void it, of all thing that was
 there;
 Whils he was at shippis his men away it bere.
 When Beryn saw the house ler, that ful was ther'to-
 fore
 Of riche marchaundise; alas! thought he I am lore,
 I am in this world, and wittith well, his hert
 Was nat al in likeing, and outward gan he stert,
 Like half a woodman, and bete both his lippis,
 And gan to hast fast towards his own shippis,
 To kepe his good within, wyth al that evir he myght,
 That it were nat dischargit, as hym thought verrey
 right.
 But al for naught was his hast; for 300 men,
 As fast as they myght, they bere the good then;
 Through ordenaunce of Hannybald, that pryvelich tofore.
 Had purposid, and ycast, shuld be out ybore. 1230
 Beryn made a swyff pafe, ther myght no man hym ler;
 But Hanybald was ware inough, and with Beryn met,
 All for nought; Beryn, thou knowist well and fyne,
 The shippis ben areistid, and the good is myne.
 What woldest thou do ther? thou hast ther nowght
 to do,
 I wol hold thy covenaut, and thou myne also.

For yit saw I nevir man, that was of thy manere;
 Sometime thou wolt avaunte, and some tyme arere;
 Now thou wolt, and now thou n'olt; wher shul men
 The fynd?
 Now sey oon, and sith anothir; so variant of mynd 1240
 Saw I nevir tofore this dey man, so variabill:
 Sith I The fynd in such plyte; our bargaen for to sta-
 bill,
 We woll tofore the steward, ther we both shull have right.
 Nay forsoth, qð Beryn. Yis treulich The tite, Qð Hanybald, wher thou wolt or no; and so I The charge,
 As Provost; know, that yf me list, my warant is so large,
 And thou make eny diffence, to bynym thy lyffe.
 Take thyn hors, it gaynyth nat for to make stryffe.
 So wyth sorowfull hert Beryn toke his hors;
 And softly seyde to his men, of me, qð he, no fors; 1250
 But wend to your shippis; I wol com when I may.
 Ye seth well everichone, I may no bet away.
 Now here by this fame tale, both fre and bond
 Mow fele in their wittis, and eke ondirstonde,
 That liill vailith wysdom, or els governaunce;
*Ther fortune evir werrith, and eke hap, and chaunce.
Or what availith bounte, bewte, or riches,
Frendship, or sotile, or els hardines,
Gold, good, or catell, wyt, or by lynage,
Lond, or lordis service, or els high peerage? 1260
What may all this avayle, ther fortune is a foo?
I wis right liill, or nevir a dele: full oft it fallith so.
 So shortly to pas ovir; they fill to such an end,
 That Beryn shuld have day ageyn a morowe, and so
 to wend
 He set hym in ful purpose to his shippis ward:
 But yit or he cam ther, he fond the passage hard.
 For how he was begiled, throughout all the towne
 Ther and ther a coupill, gan to speke and to roun;e;
 And every man his purpose was to have parte,
 With falsnes, and with sotiltees; they coud noon othir
 art. 1270
 Beryn rode forth in his wey, his page ran hym by,
 Full fore adred in hert, and cast about his eye
 Up and down, even long the strete, and for angir swet;
 And er he had riden a stone's cast, a blynd man with him met;
 And spak no word, but sesid hym fast by the lap;
 And cried out, and harowe; and nere hym gan to stap.
 All for nought, qð this blynd, what wenyst thou for to skape?
 Beryn had thought to prik forth, and thought it had be jape.
 The blynd man cast away his staff, and set on both his hondis;
 Nay thou shalt nat void, qð he, for all thy rich londis,
 Tyll I of The have reson, lawe, and eke righte;
 For treulich, I may wit it The, that I have lost my sight.
 So for ought that Beryn coud othir speke, or prey,
 He myght in no wyse pas, ful fore he gan to may.
 And namelich for the pepill throug hym so about,
 And eche man gan hym hond; and seyde, without doute
 Ye must nedis stond, and rest, and bide the lawe;
 Be ye nevir so grete a man. So wold I, wondir fawe,
 Qð Beryn, yf yee had cause; but I know noon.
 No thou shalt know or thou go, thou hast nat al y-
 doon, 1290
 The blynd man seyde to Beryn; tell on then, qð he.
 Here is no place to plete, the blynd man seyde age;
 Also we have no juge here of autorite:
 But Evandir the steward shall deme both The and me;
 When I my tale have told, and thou hast made an-swere;

By

By that tyme men shull know how thow canst The clere.
 Now, soveren God, I thank The of this ilk dey :
 Then I may preve The be my lyve, of word, and eke of fay
 Fals, and eke untrewe of covenaut, thow hast y-makid.
 But litill is thy charge now, though that I go nakid,
 That sometyme wer partinere, and rekenydst nevyr yit,
 But thou shalt here, or we depart, ther'of a litill witt.
 For aftir comyn feyng, evir atte ende
 The trowith wold be previd, how so men evir trend.
 Thus they talkid to eche othir, tyl they com into the palse,
 And wer yentrid in the hall, ther the steward was.
 The bynd man first gan to spake, fir steward, for Godd's sake
 Herith me a litill while; for her I have ytake
 He that hath do me wrong, most of man of mold;
 Be my help, as law wold, for hym that Judas sold. 1310
 Ye know wele that oft tyme I have to yew ypleynid,
 How I was betrayed, and how I was ypeynid,
 And how a man some tyme and I our yen did chaunge:
 This is the same persone, though that he make it straunge.
 I toke them hym but for a tyme, and wenyd trewly
 Myne to have yhad ageyn; and so both he and I
 Were ensurid uttirlich, and was our both will;
 But for myne the bettir were wrongfullich and ille
 He hath them kept hi'dirto, wyth much sorowe and pyne
 To me, as ye wele knowith; because I have nat myne,
 I may nat se with his; wher'for me is ful woo;
 And evirmore ye seyde, that ye myght nothing do,
 Without presence of the man that wrought me this un-
 quert:
 Now sith he is tofore you now, let hym nat astert.
 For many tyme and oft, yee behete me,
 And he myght be take, he shuld do me gre.
 Sith ye of hym be sefid, howevir so yee tave,
 Let hym nevyr pas, tyl I myn yen have.
 Beryn, qð Evandir, herist thow nat thy selve
 How sotilly he pletith, and ware by eche halve? 1330
 Beryn stode all muet, and no word he spake.
 And that was tho his grace; ful sone he had be take,
 And he had mysseyd onys, or els yseyd nay:
 For then he had been negatyff, and undo for ay.
 For they were grete Sevilious, and usid probat law;
 Where evirmore affirmatyf shuld preve his own saw.
 Wher'for they wer so querclouse, of all myght com in
 mynd,
 Though it wer nevyr in dede ydo; such matere they wold fynd
 To benym a man his good, through som manir gile.
 For the bynd man wist right wele, he shuld have lost his whyle, 1340
 To make his pleynt on Beryn, and suyde oppon his good,
 For shippis, and eke marchaundise, in a balaunce stode;
 Ther'for he made his challenge his yen for to have:
 Or els he shuld for them fyne, yf he wold them have,
 And ligg for them in hostage, tyl the synaunce cam:
 This was all the sotilte of the bynd man.
 Beryn stode all muet, and no word he spak.
 Beryn, qð Evander, lest thow be ytake
 In defaute of answer, thou myghtist be condempnyd,
 Be right wele avysid, sith thou art examenyd. 1350
 Sir, seyde Beryn, it wold litill availe
 To answer thus aloon, without good counsaill:
 And also ferthermore, full litill I shuld be levid,
 Whatevyr I answerd, thus stonyd, and reprevid;
 And eke my wit doith faille, and no wondir is:
 Wher'for I wold prey yew, of yewr gentilnes,
 To graunt me dey tyll to morowe I might be avysid

To answer forth, wyth othir that on me been surmysid.
 Deperdeux, qð the steward, I graunt wel it be so.
 Beryn toke his leve, and hopid to pas and go: 1360
 But as sone as Beryn was on his hors ryding,
 He met a woman, and a child, wyth sad chere comyng,
 That toke hym by the reyn, and held hym wondir fast;
 And seid, sir, voidith nat, yit vailith nat to haste:
 Ye mow in no wyse scape, ye must nedis abyde;
 For though ye list to know me nat, yit lien by your side
 I have ful many a tyme, I can nat tell yew lome.
 Come tofore the steward, ther shall ye here your dome,
 Of thing that I shall put on yew, and no word for
 to ly:
 To leve me thus aloon it is your villany. 1370
 Alas! the day, and tyme that evir I was your make:
 Much have I endurid, this too yere, for your sake.
 But now it shall be know who is in the wronge.
 Beryn was all abashid, the pepill so thik thronge
 About hym in eche side; for ought that he couth peyn:
 He must to the steward of fyne fors ageyn.
 Now shull ye here how sotillich this woman gan hir
 tale,
 In presence of the steward; with colour wan, and pale,
 Petoufly she gan to tell; and seid, sir to yew
 Full oft I have compleynyde, in what manere and
 how 1380
 My child's faðir left me, by my self aloon,
 Wythout help, or comforte, as grete as I myght goon,
 Wyth my son here and his, that shame it is to tell
 The penury that I have yhad, that afors sell
 I must nedis myne aray, wher me list or lothe,
 Or els I must have beggit, for to fynd us both.
 For there was nevyr woman I leve, as I ges;
 For lak of hede of lyvelode, that lyvid in more distres,
 Then I my self for oft tyme, for lak of mete and drink:
 And yit I trow no creature was feyner for to swinke 1390
 My lyff to sustene: but as I mut nede,
 Above all othir thingis, to his child take hede,
 That wondir is and mervaille that I am alyve;
 For the sokyng of his, right as it were a knyve
 It ran into my hert, so low I was of mode
 That well I woot in certen, without percell of my blode
 His child I have ynorisshid, and that is by me seen;
 For my rede colour is turnid into grene.
 And he that cause is of all, here he stondith by me;
 To pay for the fosteryng methinkith it is tyme. 1400
 And sith he is my husbond, and hath on me no rowith,
 Let hym make amendis in saving of his trowith.
 And yf he to any word onys can say nay;
 Lo! here my gage, al redy to preve all that I sey.
 The Steward toke the gage, and spak in soft wyse;
 Of this petouse compleynt a mann's hert may grife;
 For I know in percell, hir tale is nat all lese;
 For many a tyme and oft, this woman that here is,
 Hath ybe tofore me, and pleyndid of hir greffe;
 But wythout a party hir cause myght nat preffe. 1410
 Now thou art here present, that she plenyth on;
 Make thy defence now, Beryn, as wele as thow con,
 Beryn stode all muet and no word he spak.
 Beryn, qð the steward, doist thow slepe, or wake?
 Sey onys oon or othir; is it soth or nay,
 As she hath declarid? tell on saunce delay.
 Lord God! qð Beryn, what shuld it me availe,
 Among so many wise, without right good counsaill,
 To tell eny tale? full litil as I ges.
 Wher'for I wold prey you, of your gentilnes, 1420
 Graunt me day tyl to morowe to answer forth with othir.
 I graunt wele, qð the steward, but for faðir and moðir:

Thow

Thow getist no lenger tyme, pleynty I The tell.
Beryn toke his leve, his hert gan to swell
For pure verrey anguysch; and no mervail was.
And who is that that n'old, and he wer in such case;
For al his trist and hope in eny worldlich thing
Was cleen from hym passid, save sorowe and myf-lykyng.

For bouy, good, and catell, and lyff, he set at nought:
So was his hert ywoundit, for angir, and for thought.
Beryn passid softly, and to his hors gan go:
And when he was without the gatis, he lokid to and fro,

And coud noon othir countenance; but to his page
he feyd,

Preciouse God in heven! how falsly am I betrayd?
I trow no man alyve stont in wers plight.
And all is for my synne, and for my yong delite;
And pryncipally, above all thyng, for grete unkyndnes
That I did to my moðir: for litil hede iwis
I toke of hir, this know I wele, whils she was alyve:

Therfor al this turment is sent to me so ryve. 1440
For ther was never woman kynder to hir child,
Then she was; and ther ageyns never thing so wyld,
Ne so evil thewid, as I was my self:

Therfor sorowe and happs environ me by eche helve;
That I n'ote whiðir ryde, nethir up ne down,
Ther been so many devillis dwellyng in this town;
And so ful of gile, and trechery also,

That well I woot in certeyn, they woll me ondo.
Now wold to God in hevyn, what is my best rede?
He toke his hors to his page, and thus to hym he layd; 1450

Lede my hors to shipward, and take it to some man;
And I woll go on foot, as pryvely as I can;
And asay, yf I may, in eny manere wise,
Escape unarrested more in such manner wise.

The child toke his maistir's hors, and laft hym there
aloon,

Walking forth on foot, making oft his moon:
And in his most musing, I can nat sey how lome,
He wosshid, nakid as he was bore, he had be in Room.

And no mervail was it, as the case stode:
For he drad more to lese his eyen, than he did his shippis, or his good. 1460

Now yee that listith to dwell and here of aventure,
How petously dame Fortune, Beryn to inure,
Turnyth hir whele about in the wers side;
With hap of sorowe, and anguysch, she gynyth for to ride.

Beryn passid toward the strond, ther his shippis were;
But yee now ondisfond, his hert was ful of fere:
Yet nethirles he sat hym down softly on a stall,
Semyrte for sorowe; and lenyd to the wall,
For turment that he had, so wery he was and feynt;
And to God above thus he made his pleynt; 1470
Glorious God in heven! that al thing madist of nought;
Why sufferist thou these cursid men to stroy me for nought?

And knowest well myn innocent, that I have no gilt
Of al that they pursu me, or on me is pilt:
And in the meen whils that Beryn thus gan pleyne,
A cachepoll stode besidis, his name was Machaign,
And herd all the wordis; and knew also tofore
How Beryn was turmented, both with las and more.
It was ysprong through the town, so was he full en-
sensid,

How he hym would engyne, as he had propensid; 1480
And had araid hym fortillich, as man of contempla-
cioune,

In a mantell wyth the list, with fals dissimulacioune,
And a staff in his honde, as thoughe he febill were;
And drow hym toward Beryn, and seid in this ma-
nere;

The high God of heven, that al thing made of nought,
Bles yew, gentill sir, for many an hevvy thought
Me thinkith that ye have, and no wondir is:

But good sir dismay yew nat, but levith yewr hevines,
And yf ye list to tell me somwhat of yeur distres,
I hope to God Almighty in party it redres 1490

Through my pore counsaill, and so I have many oon;
For I have pete on yew, be God and by Seint Jön:

And eke pryvy hevines doith eche man apeir,
Sodenly, or he be ware, and fall in dispeir;
And who be in that plage, that man is incurabill;
For consequent comyth aftir sekene abominabill:
And therfor, sir, diskeverith yewe, and be nothing
adrad.

Graunt mercy, sir, qð Beryn, ye seme trew and sad;
But o thing lyith in myn hert, I n'ote to whom to trust;
For tho that dynded me to dey ordeyned me to arest;
A! sir, be yew that man? of yew I have yherd.

Gentill sir doutith nat, ne be nothing aferd
Of me; for I shall counsell yew as well as I can:

For trewlich in the cete dwellith many a fals man,
And usyn litil els but falshode, wrong and wyle;
And how they might straungers with trechery begile;
But ye shul do right wisely somwhat be my counsaill;
Speke with the steward; that may you most avail:
For ther is a comyn byword, yf ye it herd havith;

Wele setith he his peny, that the pound savith. 1510

The steward is a covetouse man, that long hath disfid
A knyff I have in kepeing, wherwith his hert I wirid;
Shall be yew to help, in covenante that yee
Shall give me fyve mark, yeur treu frend to be.

The knyff is feir, I tell yew; yit never tofore this day,
Myght the steward have it for aught he coud prey:
The wich ye shuld gyve hym, the betir for to spede,
And behote hym 20*l.* to help yew in yeur nede;
And yf he grauntith; trustith wele, ye stond in good plight:

For betir is, then lese all, the las the more quyt. 1520
And I woll go wyth yew straight to his plase,
And knele down, and speke first, to amend yewr case;
And sey yee be my cosin; the betir shul ye spede:
And when that I have all ytold; the knyff to hym yee bede.

Beryn thankid hym hertlich, and on hym gan trust;
With hond in hond ensurid, and all for the best;
Beryn thought noon othir, al that it othir was.
Machaign hym comfortid, talkyng of their case,
And passid forth stilly toward the steward blyve,
Beryn and Machaign; but Beryn bare the knyff; 1530
And trust much in his felawe to have som help.

But or they departid were, they had no cause to yelp
Of no maner comfort, as ye shull here anon;
For as sone as Machaign tofore the steward com,
He fill plat to the erth, a grevous pleynt and an huge
He made; and seyð sir steward, now be a trew juge
Ageyns this fals treytour, that stondith me besyde;
Let take of hym good hede, els he woll nat abide.

Now mercy God, steward, for yee have herd me yore
For my faðir Melan pleyne to you ful sore; 1540

Thar with 7 dromedarys, as I have told yew lome,
With marchandise chargit, went toward Rome;
And it is 7 yere ago, and a litill more,
Of hym, or of his gooddis, that I herd les or more.
And yit I have enquerid, as bysely as I couthe,
And met never man yit, that me coud tell with mowth

Any tyding of hym, onto this same day:
But now I know too much, alas! I may wel sey.
When Beryn herd these wordis, he kist down his hede;
Allas! he thought in hert, alas! what is my rede? 1550
And would fayn have voidit, and outward gan to stapp:

But Machaign arofe, and sefid by the lapp;

Nay thou shalt nat void, he seid; my tale is nat ydo:
For be trowith of my body, yf thou scapidist so,
I shuld nevir have mery whils I wer on lyve,
And set hond fast on Beryn's othir scleve;
And seid, good sir steward, my tale to the end
I prey ye wold here; for wend how men wend,
There may no man hele murðir, but it will out at last:
The same knyff my faðir bere, when he of contre
past,

Let ferch wele this felon, ther ye shul hym find;
I know the knyff wele inough, it is nat out of my
mynd:

The cotelere dwellith in this toun, that made the same knyff;

And for to preve the trowith, he shall be here as blyve.

Beryn swat for angir, his hert was full of fere;
He toke the knyff to the steward, or he ferchid wher.
The steward onto Beryn, my frend, lo! qð he,
And thou think The well about, this is foule plee;
I can know noon othir, but thou must or thou go
Yeld the body of Melan and his good also. 1570
Now be well avysid ageyn to morowe day;
Then shalt thou have thy jugement; ther is no more to say.

When Beryn fro the steward thus departid was,
And was without the gate, he lokid oppon the plase,
And cursid it wondir bitterly in a fervent ire,
And wisshid many tymes it had been a feir:
For I trowe that man of lyve was nevir wors betrayid
Then I am; and therwithall my hert is cleen dif-
mayid:

For here I have no frendship, but am all counselles;
And they been falssher then Judas, and eke mer-
cyless: 1580

A Lord God in hevyn, that my hert is woo;
And yit suyrly I mervel nat though that it be so;
For yit in all my lyve, sithe I ought undirfode,
Had I nevir wyl for to lern good:
Foly I hauntid it evir, ther myght no man me let;
And now he hath ypaid me, he is cleen out of my dett.

For whils I had tyme, wysdom I myght have lernyd;
But I drow me to folly and wold nat be governed;
But had al myne own wyll and of no man aferd;
For I was nevir chastid: but now myne own yerd
Betith me to fore, the strokis been to hard:
For these devillis of this town takith but litil reward
To sclee my body to have my good; the day is set to morowe:

Now wold to God I wer in grave; for it wer end of sorowe.

I was iwis to much a sole; for hate I had to Rame
I wold forsake myn heritage; therfor sorowe and shame

Is oppon me fall, and right wele deservid;
For I toke none maner hede, when my moðir stervid;
And disobeyid my faðir, and set hym at naught also;
What wondir is it than though that I have woo? 1600
Fortune and eke wisdom have werrid with me evir,
And I with them in all my lyf, for fortune was me
levir

Then eny wit or governaunce for them too I did hate;
And though I wold be at oon, now it is to late.
O myghtfull God in heven, wher was evir man
That wrought hymself more folly than I my self did than?

A cursid be the tyme that I out of Rome went;
That was my faðir's right heir, of lyvelode, and of rent,

And al the rial lordship that he hath in the town;
Had I had wit, and grace, and hold me low and
boun,

It wer my kynd now among my baronage, 1610

To hawk, and to hunt, and eke to pley, and rage,
With feir freshe ladies, and daunce when me list:

But now it is to late to speke of had I wist.
But I fare like the man that for to swele his flyes
He stert into the bern, and aftir stre he hies,
And goith about the wallis with a brennyng wafe;
Tyll it was at last that the leem and blafe

Entrid into the thynys, where the wheate was,
And kissid so the evefe, that brent was all the plase;
But first in the begynnyng, tyll feer smote in the rastris,
He toke no manere kepe, and thought of nothing aftir
What perell there myght fall: ne more did I ywis,
That wold forsake myn honour, for the unkyndnes
Of Rame, that was my stepmoðir, for yf I shall nat ly,

They beth soure: wherfor the more wisely
I shuld have wrought, had I had wit, and suffrid for a tyme,

And aftir com to purpose wel inowghe of myne;
But evil avengit he is deol, that for a litil mode,
And angir to his neybour, sellith away his good; 1630
And goith hymself a beggyng; aftir in breff tyme,
He mut be countid a lewd man in all manere ryme:
So have I wrought and wers; for I dout of my lyve,
How that it shal stond, for plukking of my scleve
The knyff that was me take, as ye have herd tofore:
And yit it grevith mine hert also much more
Of myn own pepill, that no difese aservid:
I wore wele aftir pleding, ryght nought wold be re-servyd

To sustene their lyvis, I trow ryght nought or lite,
And peraventur lightly stond in wors plight: 1640
Of me it is no fors, though I be thus arayed,
But it is dole and pete, that they shull be betrayid,
That hath nought aservid, but for my gilt aloon.
And when that Beryn in this wise had ymade his
mone;

A crepill he saw comyng with grete spede and haste,
Oppon a stilt ondir his kne bound wondir fast;
And a crouch undir his armys; with hondis al forskramyd:

Alas! qð this Beryn, shall I be more examenyd?
And gan to turn aside onto the see stronde:
And the cripill aftir, and wan oppon hym londe. 1650
Tho began Beryn to drede inwardlich fore,
And thought thus in his hert; shall I be comberid
more:

And it wer Godd's wyll my sorowe for to cese.
Methinkith I have inowghe: the cripill began to preche,

And had ytraught nere hond Beryn by the scleve.
Beryn turnyd, as an hare, and gan to ren blyve:
But the cripill knew betir the pathis, smale and grete;
Then Beryn; so tofore hym he was, and gan hym
mete.

When Beryn saw it vaylid naught to renne, ne to lepe;
What for dole and anguyssh, no word myght he speke; 1660

But stode still amafid, and starid fast about:
The cripill began to speke, sir, to drede or to dout:
Of me wold ye right light, and yeknew myne hert:
So where ye like well or ill, fro me shall ye nat part;
Tyl I have tretid with yew, and yee with me also,
Of all your soden happis, your myscheff, and your wo;

For by the tyme that I have knowlech of your case,
Yeurrennyng, and your trotting into an cly pas,
I shall turn or that we twyn, so ye aftir my stoke
Woll do, and as I rede yew; for yee wer a sole 1670
When ye cam first alonde, ye had met with me;
For I wold have ensensid yew all the iniquite
Of thes fals marchandis, that dwellen in this town;
And outid all your chaffare without gruch or goun:

For had ye dwellid within yeur shippis, and nat go them among;

Then had ye been undaungerid, and quyrt of all their wrong

On yew that been surmysid through fals suggestioun.
Beryn gan to sigh, unneth he might founne,
Saf o word or rweyn, and mercy was the first;
Preying with all his hert, that he myght have his rest, 1680

And be no more enpledit, but pas fro hym quyte.
Good sir, qð Beryn, doith me no more dispite;
And suffir me to pas, and have on me rourhe;
And I suyrr yew feithfully, have here my trowith,
To morowe when I have plectit, and eny thing be laft
Of ship or marchaundise, afore the ship or baft,
I woll shew yew all ifere, and opyn every cheft,
And put it in yewr grace, to do what ye lest;
And in the meen while that Beryn gan to clapp;
The crypill nyghid hym nere and nere, and hent hym
by the lap:

And as sone as Beryn knew that he was in honde;
He unlacyd his mantell, for drede of some command;
And pryvelich ovir his shuldris let hym down glide;
And had levir lese his mantell then abide.
The crypill all perceyvid, and hent hym by the sleve
Of his nethir surcote. Alas! now mut I strive,
Thought Beryn by hymself; now I am yhent,
There helpith naught save strengith; therewith the sleve to rent

Beryn gan, to scape he sparid for no cost.
Alas! thought this crypill, this man woll be lost; 1700
And be ondo for evir; but he counsell have:
Iwis, thoughe he be lewde, my contremen to save.
Yit will I my besines do, and peyn that I may;
Sith he is of Room, for that is my contray.
This crypill was an hundrit yere full of age;
With a long thik berd, and a trow visage
He had; and manly, and july was he;
And Geffrey was his name, yknow, in that contre.
Alas! thought this Geffrey, this man hath grete drede
Of me, that by my power wold help hym in his nede. 1710

Iwis, though he be nyce, untaught, and unwise,
I woll nat for his foly leve myne enpryse:
And lept aftir Beryn, and that in right good spede.
Beryn was so sore agast, he toke no maner hede
To look onys bakward, tyll he to the watir cam;
Then lokid he behynd, and saw sir Clekam
Commaund wondir fast, with staff and with his stilt;
Allas! thought Beryn, I now am yspilt;
For I may no ferthir, without I wold me droune
In'ote, wich were the betir, or go ageyn to toun. 1720
Geffrey was so nygh com, that Beryn myght nat fle:
Good sir, qð this Geffrey, why do yee void me?
For by heven quene, that bare Crist in hir barme,
But right as to my self, I woll yew no more harme.
Sittith down here by me oppon this see stronde;
And yf ye drede any thing, clepe yewr men to
londe;

And let them be here with us all our speche tyme:
For I woll nat feyn oon word, as makers doon to ryme,
But counsell yew as prudently as God woll send me
grace:

Take comfort to yw, and herk a litill spafe. 1730
And when that Beryn had yherd his tale to the end;
And how goodly as Geffrey spak, as he were his frende;

None obstant his drede, yet part of sapience
Stremyd into his hert, for his eloquence;
And seyde; God me counsaill for his high mercy;
For I have herd this same dey men as sotilly
Speke, and of yeur semblant, and in such manere,
And by hete me frendship outward by their chere,

But inward it was contrary their intellectuone;
Wherfor the blame is les, though I suspicioun. 1740
Have of yewr wordis, lest othir be yewr entent;
For I n'ote whom to trust, by God omnipotent:
Yit nethirles, yf your will is to com into the ship with
me,

I woll somwhat do by yeur rede, how so it evir be:
Then, qð Geffrey, if it be so that I in yewr powere Entir into your shippis, and yew help in yewr my-stere,

That yee ageyn yewr adversaryes shull have the betir
fyde,
And gyve yow such counsell to bate down their pride,
And that yee wynne in every pleynt, al so much or more

As they purpose to have of yew; yf they be down
ybores, 1750

And ye have amendis for their iniquite,
And I yew bring to this end, what shall my guerdon be?

In verrey soth, qð Beryn; yf I yew may trust,
I woll quyte yew trewly, I make yew behest:
In feith then, qð Geffray, I woll with yew wende.
What is yewr name, seid Beryn, though my frende?
Gefferey, he seid; but in these marchis I was nat bore;
But I have dwellid in this cete yeeris heretofore
Ful many, and turmented wers then wer yee;

And endurid for my trowith much adversite: 1760
For I wold in no wise suffir their falschedes;
For in all the world so corrupt of their dedis
Been noon men alyve, I myght ryght well avow;
For they set all their wittis in wrong, all that they mowe:

Wherfor full many a tyme, the grettist of them, and I,
Have stonden in altercacioun, for their trechery.

For I had in valew in trow marchaundise
A M. l. all have they take in such maner wise:
So ferforth to save my blode no longer myght I dryve
dure;

For drede of wors, thus thought I my self to disfi-
gure; 1770

And have among them 12 yere go right in this plight,
And evir have had in memory how I myght them
quyte:

And so I hope now, as sotill as they be,
With my wit engine them, and help yew and me.
My lymes been both hole and sound; me nedith stilt,
ne crouch.

He cast asyde them both, and lepe oppon an huche,
And adown ageynes; and walkid to and fro,
Up and down, within the ship; and shewid his hondis
tho,

Stretching forth his fingris, in sight and all about,
Without knot, or knor, or eny sign of goute; 1780
And dyght them efft ageyns right disfetirly,
Som to ride ech othir, and som aweward wry.

Geffrey was right myghty, and wele his age did bere;
For natur was more substantiall, when tho dayis wer,
Then now in our tyme; for all thing doith waste,
Saff vile and cursid lyving; that growith all to faste.
What shuld I tell more? but Geffrey sat hym down;
And Beryn hym besydis; the Romeyns gan to rown,
And marvelled much in Geffrey, of his disgifenes:
And Beryn had anothir thought, and spak of his di-
stres; 1790

Now Geffrey, seid this Beryn, and I durst trust in yewe,
That and ye knewe eny man that is alyve anowe,
That had of discrecioun so much influence,
To make my party good to morowe in my defence,
And delivir me of sorowe, as ye behote have;
I wold become his legeman, as God my soule save.
That wer to much, qð Gefferey, that woll I yew re-
lese;

But I desire of othir thing to have yewr promes;
That

That and I bryng yewr enmyes into such a traunce,
To make for yewr wrongis to you right high fe-
naunce; 1800

And so declare for you, that with you pas such dome;
That yee oppon your feith bryng me at Rome;
Yf God wol send yew weðir, and grace to repaſe.
Qð Beryn, but I grant yew I wer lewder then an aſſe.

But or I fullich truſt yew, holdith me excuſid;
I woll go counſell with my men, leſt they it reſuſid.
Beryn drew aſyde, and ſpak with his meyne;
And expreſſid every word, in what plight and degre
That he ſtoðe, from poynt to poynt, and of his falſ
areſtis:

His meyne were aſtonyd, and ſtarid forth as beſtis:
Spekith ſom word, qð Beryn, ſith I am betrayd:
Yee have yherd what Geffrey to me hath ſayd.
Theſe Romeyns ſtoðe alle ſtill; o word ne coud they meve;

And eke it paſſid their wittis. Then Beryn gan re-
leve,

And to Geffrey eſt ageyn; and mercy hym beſought.
Help me, Sir, qð Beryn, for his love that us bought,
Dying on the rood, and wept full tendirly;
For but ye help, qð Beryn, ther is no remedy:
For comfort nethir counſaill of my men have I noon:
Help me, as God yew help, and els I am undoon.
When Geffrey ſaw this Beryn ſo diſtract and wept;
Pite into eche veyn of his hert crept:

Allas! qð Geffrey, I might nat do a more ſynful
dede,

I leve by my trowith, then ſayl yew in this nede:
Faill me God in heven, yf that I yew faill;
That I ſhall do my beſines, my peyn, and my tra-
vaile,

To help yew be my power; I may no ferther goo.
Yis yee behete me more, ſeid Beryn, tho
That yee wold help me, at all that I ſhuld ſtond cler:
Beryn gan to wepe and make wers chere. 1830
Stillith yew, qð Geffrey; for how ſo evir ye tire,
More than my power ye ought nat deſire.
For thorough the grace of God ye ſhul be help wele;
I have ther of no dout: but trewlich I you tele,
That ye wold hold me covenante, and I woll yew
alſo,

To bryng me at Rome, when it is all ydo.
In ſigne of trowith of both ſidis of our acordment,
Eche of us kys othir of our comyn aſſent;
And all was do. And aſtirward Beryn commaundit wyne,

They dronk, and then Geffrey ſeid, Sir Beryne, 1840
Yee mut declare yeur maters to myne intelligence,
That I may the bet perſeyve all inconvenience,
Dout, pro, contra, and ambiguite,
Thorough your declaracioun, and enformyd be:
And with the help of our ſoveren Lord celeſtiale,
They ſhall be behynd, and we ſhall have the ball.
For now the tyme aprochith, for their curſidnes
To be ſomwhat rewardit, and cauſe of yewr diſtres
Hath my hert yſetlid, and fixid them a nye,
As trowith wold and reſon, for their trechery. 1850
For many a man, tofore this day, they have do out of daw,

Diſtroid, and turmentid, thorough their falſ law.
For they think litill ellis, and all their wyttis fyve,
Save to have a mann's good, and to benym his
lyve:

And hath a curſid cuſtom, all ageyns reſon,
That what man they enpeche, they have noon en-
cheſon,

Thoughe it be as falſ a thing as God hymſelf is trewe:

And it touche a ſtraunger, that is com of newe,
Atte fiſt mocione that he begynneth to meve,

Ther ſtondith up an hundrit hym to repreve. 1860
The lawes of the cete ſtont in probacy;
They uſen noon enqueſtis the wrongis for to try:
And yf thow haddiſt eny wrong, and woldiſt pleyñ
The,

And were as trewe a cauſe as eny myght be,
Thow ſhuldiſt nat find o man to bere The witnes;
Though every man in the town knew it, more or les;

So burriſh they togiðir, and holdith with eche o-
thir;

That as to counterplede them, though ye wer my brother,

I wold gyve yew no counſaill, ne their empechement
In no word to deny; for that wer combirment:
For then wer they in the affirmatyf, and wold preve
anoon:

And to yew that wer negatyff the law wold graunt
anoon:

So for to plede ageyn them it woll litill avail;
And yit to every mann's wit it ought be grete mer-
vaile:

For their lawes been ſo ſtreyt, and peynous ordi-
naunce,

Is ſtallid for their falſhede; for this is their ſynaunce,
To leſe their lyff for leting; and Hoſpe it may knowe
That Lord is riall of the town, and holdith them ſo
lowe:

Wherfor they have a cuſtom a ſhrewid for the nonys;
Yf eny of them ſeya thing, they cry all at onys, 1880
And ferm it for a ſoth, and it bere any charge;
Thus of the danger of Hoſpe they kepe them ever at large:

And therfor wiſdow weer, whoſo might eſchewe,
Nevir to dele with them; for wer it wrong, or
trewe,

It ſhuld litill avail ageyns their falſhedes:
For they been acurſid, and ſo been their dedes.
Wherfor we muſt, with all our wit ſenſibill,
Such answers us purvey, that they been inſolibill:
To morowe at our aparaunce, and ſhall be reſpon-
ſaill;

For of wele and ellis it is thy day ſynall. 1890
Now ſoveren Lord celeſtiale, with many ſorowful
fighis,

Seyd Beryn to Geffray, ymmemorat of lyes,
Graunt me grace to morowe; ſo that God be pleſid,
Make ſo myne anſwere; and I ſomwhat y-eſid
By The that art my counſaill, for othir help is noon,
Reherce me then, qð Geffrey, the cauſis of thy ſoon.
Fro poynt to poynt, al in fere, on The is ſurmyſid;
Wherthorough I myght to morowe the betir be a-viſid.

Now in ſoth, qð Beryn, thoughe I ſhuld dy,
I cannat tell the tenyth part of their trechery; 1900
What for ſorowe, and angir, that they to me have wrought;

So ſtond I clene desperat, but ye con help ought.
Deperdeux; ſeid Geffrey, and I The woll nat faill,
Sith I have enſurid The to be of thy counſaill;
And ſo much the more, that thou art nat wiſe,
And canſt nat me enform of no maner aſiſe.
Here therfore a while, and tend wel to my lore:

The Lord that dwellith in this town, whoſe name I told tofore,

Hoſpe eſt reherſid, is ſo inly wiſe,
That no man alyve can pas his deviſe; 1910
And is ſo grow in yeris, that lx yeer ago
He ſawe nat for age; and yit it ſtondith ſo,
That thorough his-wit, and wiſdom, and his gover-
naunce,

Who makith a fray ef; or ſtryvith aught or mel to much or praunce,

Within

Within the same cete, that he n'ys take anoon;
And hath his pennaunce forthwith, for pardon usith
he noon.

For ther n'ys pore ne riche, ne what state he be,
That he ny's undirfote for his inquite;
And it be previed on hym, ther shall no gold hym
quyte,

Right as the forfeite axith, moch or lite:
For geys his commaundment is noon so hardy quek,
So hard setith he his fote in every mann'ys nek:
For undir sky and sterris this day is noon alyve
That coud amend hym in o poynt, al thing to di-stryve.

The 7 sages of Rome, though al ageyn hym were,
The shuld be insufficient to make his answe:re:
For he can all langagis, Greck, Hebrew, and Latyne
Caldey, Frensch, and Lombard, yee know well fyne;
And all maner that men in bokis write;

In poyse, and philosophie, also he can endite. 1930
Cevile, and canoune, and al maner lawis;
Seneca, and Sydrak, and Salamon'ys Sawys;
And the 7 sciences, and eke law of armys,
Experimentis, and pompery, and all maner charmys;
As ye shul here aftir, er that I depart,
Of his imaginaciouns and of his fotill art.

For he is of age 300 yere and more:
Wherfor of all sciences he hath the more lore.

In Denmark he was gotten and ybore also;
And in Grece ynorished, tyl he coud speke and go:
Ther was he put to scole, and lernyd wondir fast;
For such was his grace that all othir he past.
But first in his begynnyng litil good he had;
But lernyd evir paillyngly, and was wise and sad;
Of stature and of feture ther was noon hym like,
Thorough the lond of Grece, though men wold hym seke.

A kyng ther was in tho yeris, that had noon heir male,

Saff a doughter, that he lovid as his own saal:
Ifope was his servaunt, and did hym such plesaunce,
That he made hym his heir, and did hym so avaunce,
To wed his doughter, and aftir hym to bere crowne;
Thorough prowes and his port so low he was and boun.

So as fortune wold, that was Ifope's frend,
This worthy kyng that same yere made his carnel
end.

That 27 yere is passid that Ifope thus hath reigned;
And yit was ther never for wrong on hym compleyned,
For no jugement that he gaff; yit som ageyn hym
wylid,

A grete part of his pepill, and wold have hym ex-
ilid:

But his grete wisdom, and his manfulnes,
His governaunce with his bounte, and his rightfulnes
Hath evir yit preserved hym unto this ilk day;
And woll whyle that he lyvith, for aught that men can say.

For who hath eny quarel or cause for to wonde,
Within this same cete, quiklich woll he fond,
And it be fotill matir, to Ifope for to fare,
Fro gynnyng to the end, his quarrell to declare.

And eve afore, as custum is, peple shal be on the mo-
rowe;

But who so ly, he scapith nat wythout shame or sorowe.

Beryn, thow must go thiðir, wher thyn enpechement

Shall be ymevid; and therfor pas nat thens, 1970
Tyll thou have herd them alle; and report them wele

To me, that am thy counsell, and repeer snele:
But so rial mancione, as Ifope dwellith in,

Ther is noon in the world, ne so queynt of gyn;
Wherfore be well avifid, how I enform The

Of the wondir wayis, and of the pryvyte,
That been wythyn his paleyse, that thou must pas by:

And when thou approachist, and art the castell nygh,
Blench fro the brode gate, and enter thou nat there;
For ther been men to keep it; yit have thou no
fere; 1980

Pas down on the right hond by the castell walle,
Tyll thou fynd a wyndow; and what so The by fall,
Entir ther, yf thou may, and be nothyng agast;
But walk forth in that entre: then shalt thou see in haste

A portcolyse The tofore; pas in boldly,
Tyll thou com to an hall, the feyrift undir sky.
The wallis been of marbill, yjoynid, and yclosid;
And the pilours of crystall, grete and wele proposid;
The keveryng of bove is of selondyn;
And the pament beneth of gold and asure fyne. 1990
But who so passith thorough this hall hath nede to ren
blyve;

Or els he myght be disware of his own lyve;
For ther wythin liith a stoon, that is so hote of kynd,
That what thing com for by, anoon it woll atend,
As bryght as eny kandell leem, and consume anoon:
And so wold the hall also, n'er coldnes of a stoon
That is yclepid Dionyse, that set is hym ageyn.
So and thou lepe lightly, thou shalt have no peyn;
For ethir ston in kynd proportioned they be
Of hete, and eke of coldnes, of oon equalite. 2000
Thow must pas thorough the hall; but tary nat I
rede;

For thou shult fynd a dur, up right afore thyn hede;
When thou art entrid ther, and the dore apast;
Whatso thou se ligg, or stond, be thou nat agast;
And yf thou drede eny thing, do no more saff blowe
But yit I rede The, beware that it be somewhat lowe:
Ther been to libardis, loos and untied,
If that thy blowing of that othir in eny thing be spied,
Anoon he rakith on The to sese The by thy pate;
For ther n'ys thing in erth that he so much doith hate, 2010

As breth of mann'ys mowith: wherfore refreyne The,
And blow but fair and soft; and when that nede be.
When thou art passid this hall, anoon then shalt thou
com

Into the fayrest garden that is in Christendom:
The wich thorough his clergy is made of such devise,
That a man shall ween he is in paradise,
At his first comyng in, for melody and song,
And othir glorious thingis, and delectabill among;
The wich Tholomeus, that somtyme paynym was,
That of astronomy knew ev'ry poynt and case, 2020
Did it so devise, thorough his high connyng,
That ther n'ys best in erth, ne bird that doith sing,
That he n'ys there in figur, in gold, and sylvir fyne,
And now, as they wer quyk, know the fotill engyne.

In mydward of this gardyn stant a feir tre,
Of all maner levis, that undir sky be,
Yforgit, and yfourmit, eche in his degre,
Of sylvir, and of gold fyne, that lusty been to see.
This gardeyn is evir grenè, and full of May flowris,
Of rede, white, and blew, and othir fresh colouris;
The wich been so redolent, and sentyn so about,
That he must be right lewde, therin shuld route.
These monstrefull thingis I devise to The;
Because thou shuldist nat of them abaschid be.

When that thou comyst there, so thou be strong in thought,

And do be my counsell, drede The right nought:
For ther beth viii tregetours that this gardyn kepith;
Four of them doith waak, whils the four slepith;
The wich been so perfite of nygramance,
And of the art of apparene, and of tragetrie, 2040
That they make semen as to a mann'ys sight
Abominabill wormys, that fore ought be a fright
The hertiest man on erth; but he warnyd were
Of the grisly fightis, that he shuld see there.

Among

Among all othir; there is a lyon white;
That, and he be a straungir, he rampith for to bite;
And hath tofore this tyme 500 men and mo
Devourid, and yete, that thereforth have ygo:
Yit shalt thou pas suyrly, so thou do as I tell.
The tre I told tofore, that round as eny bell 2050
Berith bow, and braunce, traylyng to the ground;
And thou touch oon of them, thou art fass and found;

The tre hath such vertu, there shall nothing The dere.
Loke that be the first, when thou comyst there.
Then shalt thou se an entre, by the ferther side;
Thoughe it be streyte tofore, inner large and wyde
It growith more and more, and as a dentour wryith;
Yit woll that wey The bryng there that I hope liith,
Into the feyrift chambir that evir man saw with eye.
When thou art there wythyn, govern The wisely:
For there shalt thou here al thyn enpechement,
Opynly declarid, in Ilop's present.
Report them wele, and kepe them in thy mynd;
And astir thy relacioun, we shall so turn and wend,
Thorough help of God above, such help for to make,
That they shall be acombrit, and we right well to scape.

Now in soth, qð Beryn, a manny's hert may grise
Of such wondir weyis; for al my marchandise
I had levir lese, then oppon me take
Such a wey to pas. Then, Sir, for your sake 2070
I woll my self, qð Geffrey; sith I am ensuryd
To help The with my power, thou shalt be amyrid,
As fertorth as I may; that I woll do my peyn
To bryng yow plefaunt tyding, and retourn ageyn,
Yit or the cok crow: and therfor let me se,
Whils I am out, how mery ye can be.
Geffrey toke his leve: but who was sory tho,
But Beryn, and his company? for when he was go,
Thei had no maner joy; but dout, and hevynes;
For of his repeyryng thei had no sikernes. 2080
So every man to othir made his compleynt;
And wisshid that of felony they had been atteynt:
And so them thought betir to end hevynes;
Then every day to lak brede atte first mes:
For when our good is go, what shall fal of us?
Evir to be their thrallis, and peraventure wers:
To lese our lyf astir, yf we displese them ought:
Astir Geffrey went, this was all their thought,
Throughout the nyght, tyl cokkis gan to sing:
But then encrefid anguishe; their hondis gan to wryng;
And cursid wynd and watir that them brought ther:
And wisshid many tymes that he had been in bere:
And were apassid, and entrid into dispeyr,
In as much as Geffrey did nat repeer:
Eche man seyde to othir, it myght nat be ynayid,
But Geffray had uttirlich falsly them betrayid,
Throughout all the long nyght:

.....
Tho went they to counsell, a litill tofore the day
And were all acordit for to sayl away: 2100
And so them thought betir, and leve their good ther;
Then abyde theroppon, and have more fere.
They made their takelyng redy, and wend the fail
acros,

For to save their lyvis, and set nat of their los:
So fore they wer adred to be in servitude;
And hopid God above wold send them som refute;
By som othir costis ther wynd them wold bryng:
And therwithall cam Geffrey on his stilt lepeing,
And cried wondir fast by the watir fyde;
When Beryn herd Geffrey; he bid his men abyde,
And to launch out a bote, and bryng Geffrey in;
For he may more avayl me now, then al my kyn;
And he be trew, and trusty, as myn hope is:
But yit therof had Beryn no full sikernes.
These Romeyns fet in Geffrey with an hevychere;

For they had levir fail forth, then put them in weer
Both lyve and goodis; and evill suspicioun
They had of this Geffrey: wherfore they gon rounne,
Talkyng to eche othir; this man woll us betray.
Geffrey wist well inowghe, he was nat to their pay;
And for verry angir he threw into the see 2120
Both stilt and eke his crouch, that made wer of tre;
And gan them to comfort, and seid in this manere;
Benedicite, Beryn; why make ye such chere?
For and yee wex hevychere; what shall yewr men do,
But take ensampill of yew? and have no cause to:
For yit or it be eve, yewr adversaries all
I shall make them spurn, and have, a fore fall:
And yee go quyte, and all yewr good; and have of theirs too:

And they to be right feign for to scape so,
Wythout more daungir, and yewr wyl be. 2130
For of the lawys het such is the equitye;
That who pursu othir, and his pleynt be wrong,
He shall make amendis, be he never so strong;
Right as shuld the t'oðir, yf he condempned were:
Right so shall the pleyntiff, right as I yew lere:
And that shall preve by them, have ye no doute,
Yit or it be eve, right low to yew to loute,
And submit them to yew, and put them in yewr
grace,

By that tyme I have ymade all my wanlase:
And in hope to spede well, let shape us for to dyne.
Geffrey axid watir, and sith brede, and wyne;
And seid it is holsom to breke dur fast betyme:
For the steward woll to the court at hour of pryme:
The sonne gan to shyne and shope a feir dey:
But for aught that Geffrey could do or sey,
These Romeyns spekyn fast, all the dynet while;
That Geffrey with his sotill wordis wold them begile.
So when they had ydyned, they rysen up echoone,
And drew them to counsell, what was best to doon:
Som seyde, the best rede that we do may, 2150
To throw Geffrey ovir the bord, and seyll forth our way:

But for drede of Beryn, som wold nat so:
Yit the more party assentid wele therto.
Geffrey, and Beryn, and worthy Romeyns tweyn,
Stood a part within the ship, to Geffrey gan to seyn;
Beryn beth avisid, your men beth in distaunce;
Sith ye been her soveren, put them in governaunce:
For methinkith they holdith contrary opynyoun;
And grace faylith comynlich wher is divisoun.
In the meen whyle that they gan thus to stryve; 2160
Hanybald was up, and ycom as blyve
To the brigg of the town, ther the shippis rood;
And herd much noyse, but litil while he bood:
For when he saw the saylis stond all acros;
Alas! qð this Hanybald, here growith a smert los
To me, that am provost; and have in charge and hest
All these fyve shippis undir myn arest;
And ran into the town, and made an hidouse cry,
And chargit all the cetezins to armys for to hy,
From o strete tyl anothir, and rerid up al the town;
And made the trompis blowe up, and the bellis soun;
And seyde that the Romeyns wer in poynt to pas:
Tyl ther wer a thousand, rathir mo then les,
Men y-armyd cleen, walkyng to the stonde
When Beryn them aspied; now Geffrey in thy honde
Stoht lyf and goodis: doth with us what The list;
For all our hope is on The, comfort, help, and trist.
For we must bide aventure, such as God woll shape;
For now I am in certen we mow in no wise scape.
Have no dout, qð Geffrey, beth mery, let me aloon:
Getith a peir sisours, shirith my berd anoon;
And astirwerd lete top my hede hastilych and blyve.
Som went to with scsours, som wyth a knyffe;
So what for sorowe, and hast, and for lewd tole,
Ther was no man alyve bet like to a sole

Then Geffrey was, by that tyme they had al ydo,
Hanybald clepid out Beryn, to mote hall for to go;
And stode upon the brigg, with an huge route
Geffrey was the first to Hanybald gan to loute,
And lokid out a foreship: God bles yew, Sir, qð he Wher art thou now, Beryn? com forth, behold
and se,

Her is an huge pepill prayd and ydight;
All these been my children, that been in armys bryght,
Yiftirdey I gat them: is nat mervail
That they been hñdir ycom, to be of our counsaill,
And to stond by us, and help us in our ple.
A! myne own childryn, bleffid mut ye be!

Qð Geffrey, with an high voise, and had a nyce vi-sage,

And gan to daunce for joy, in the fore stage.
Hanybald lok'd on Geffrey, as he wer amafid, 2200
And beheld his countenance, and how he was y-
rafid:

But evirmore he thought that he was a sole
Naturell of kynde, and had noon othir tool,
As semed by his wordis and his visage both:
And thought it had been foly to wex with hym wroth,
And gan to bord ageyn, and axid hym in game,
Sith thou art our faðir, who is then our dame?

And how, and in what plafe, were we begete?
Yiftirday, qð Geffrey, pleyng in the strete
At a gentil game, that clepid is the quek, 2210
A long peny halter was cast about my nek;
And yknet fast with a riding knot,
And cast ovr a perch, and hale along my throte.
Was that a game, qð Hanybald, for to hang thy selve?

So they seyde about me, a thousand eche by hymself.
How scapiddist thou, qð Hanybald, that thou wer
nat dede?

Therto can I answer without any rede;
I bare thre dife in myn own purs:
For I go nevir without fare, I betir or wers;
I kist them forth all thre, and too fill am'ys ase: 2220
But here now what fill astir, right a mervelouse case;
Ther cam a mowse lepe forth, and ete the third boon,
That puffid out her skyn, as grete as she myght goon;
And in this maner wise, of the mowse and me,
All ye be ycom my children, fair and fre:
And yit or it be eve, fall woll such a chaunce,
To stond in my power yew all to avaunce:
For and we plede well to day, we shull be riche i-nowghe.

Hanybald of his wordis hertlich loughe;
And so did all that herd hym, as they myght wele;
And had grete joy wyth hym for to tell.
For they knew hym noon othir but a sole of kynd;
And all this was his discrecioun, and that provid the
end.

Thus whils Geffrey japid, to make their hertis light,
Beryn and his company were rayid and ydight,
And londit them in botis, ferefull how to spede;
For all their thoughtis in balance stode, betwene hope and drede.

But yit they did their peyn to make lightfome chere,
As Geffrey them had enfourmed, of port and all ma-
nere

Of their governaunce, all the long day, 2240
Tyll their plee wer endit; so went they forth their
wey,

To the court with Hanybald: then Beryn gan to sey,
What nedith this, sir Hanybald, to make such aray?
Sith we been pefe-marchantis, and use no spoliacioun.
For soth sir, qð Hanybald, to me was made rela-
cioun

Yee wer in poynt to void; and yef yee had do so,
Yee had lost yewr lyvis without wordis mo.
Beryn held hym styll. Geffrey spak anoon;

No les wed then lyvis? Whi so good Sir Jon?
That wer somwhat to much, as it semeth me; 2250
But ye be ovrwise that dwell in this cete:

For ye have begonne a thing makith you right bold;
And yit or it be eve, as folis shull yee be hold.

And eke yee devyne for shipmanny's craft,
And wotith litil what longith to afore the ship and bafft;

And namelich in the dawning when shipmen first arise.

My good frend, qð Hanybald, in a scornynge wife,
Yee must onys enfourm me thorough yowr discre-
cioun:

But first yee must answer to a questioun?
Why make men crof-saill in myddis of the mast? 2260
For to talow the ship and fesch more blast.

Why goon the yemen to bote ankirs to hale?
For to make them redy to walk to the ale.

Why hale they up stonys by the crane lyne?
To make the tempest sese and the sonne shyne.

Why close they the port with the see bord?
For the mastir shul awake at first word.

Thow art a redy reve, qð Hanybald, in fay:
Yee sir trewly, for sothe is that yew sey.

Geffrey evir clappid, as doith a watir myll, 2270
And made Hanybald to laugh al his hert fyll.

Beryn, qð this Geffrey, retourn thy men ageyn;
What shull they do with The at court? no man on them pleyn.

Plede thy case thy selve, right as thou hast ywrought,
To bide with the shippis my purpose is and thought.

Nay forsoth, qð Hanybald, thou shalt abyde on lond;
Wee have no folis but The; and toke hym by the
hond;

For thou art wife in law to plede all the case.
That can I betir, qð Geffrey, then eny man in this plafe.

What seyest thou therto, Beryn? shall I tell thy tale?
Hanybald likid his wordis wele, and forward gan
hym hale.

Beryn made hym angry, and sighid wondir fore;
For Geffrey hym had enfourmid of every poynt tofore;
How he hym shuld govern all the long day.

Geffrey chafid hym ageyn; sey me ye or nay,
Mayst owe nat here speke some maner word;
Leve thy blab, lewd sole, me likith nat thy bord.

I have anothir thought, qð Beryn, wherof thou ca-
rist lite.

Clepeist thou me a sole, qð Geffrey? al that I may
The wite.

But first when we out of Rome faillid both in fere;
Tho I was thy felawe and thy partinere;

For tho the marchandise was more then half myne;
And sith that thou com hñdir thou takist all for thyne.

But yit or it be eve, I wol make oon behest;
But thou have my help, thy part shall be lest.

Thyn help, qð Beryn; lewde sole, thou art more
then masid:

Dres The to the shippis ward with thy crown yrafid;
For I myght nevir spare The bet, trus, and be agoo:

I woll go with The, qð Geffrey, wher thou wolt
or no;

And lern to plede law, to wyn both howse and lond.
So thou shalt, qð Hanybald, and led hym by the
hond;

And leyde his hond oppon his nek: but and he had y-
know

Whom he had led, in sikernes he had well levir in showe

Have walkid xl myle, and rathir then fail more:
For he wisshid that Geffrey had ybe unbore

Full oft tyme in that day, or the ple wer do;
And so did all that wrought Beryn sham and woo.

Now

Now yee that list abide and here of solite,
Mowe know how that Beryn sped in his ple;
And in what aray to the court he went; 2310
And how Hanybald led Geffrey, disware of his entent.

But yet he axid of Geffrey, what is thy name I pray?
Gylhochet, qð Geffrey, men clepid me yistirday.
And wher weer thow ybore? I note I make a vow;
Seyd Geffrey to this Hanybald, I axe that of yew:
For I can tell no more, but here I stond nowe.
Hanybald of his wordis hertlich lowghe,
And held hym for a passyng sole to serve eny Lord.
Thus they romyd janglyng into the court ward:
But or they com ther, the steward was yfet; 2320
And the grettist of the town a company ymet;
And gon to stryve fast, who shuld have the good
That com was with Beryn ovir the salt flood.
Som seyde oon and som seyde anothir;
Som wold have the shippis, the parell, and the ro-
thir;

Som his eyen, som his lyf wold have, and no les;
Or els he shuld for them fyne, or he did pas,
And in the mene, whils they wer in this afay,
Beryn and these Romeyns wer com, in good aray
As myght be made of woll, and of colour graynyd;
They toke a fyde bench that for them was ordeynyed.
When all was husht and still, Beryn arose anoon,
And stode in the myddis of the hall tofore them everi-
chone;

And seyde, sir steward, in me shall be no let:
I am ycom to answer, as my day is set;
Do me ryght and reson, I axe yew no more.
So shall I, qð the steward, for ther'to I am swore.
He shall have right, qð Geffrey, wher thow wolt
or no.

For and thow mys onys thy jugement ondo;
I wolt to the Emperour of Rome my cosyh; 2340
For of o cup he and I full oft have dronk the wyne;
And yit we shull herastir, as oft as we mete,
For he is long the gladder, when I send hym to grete.
This Geffrey stode upon a fourm, for he wold be sey
Above all othir the shuldris, and the cry;
And starid al about, with his lewd berd,
And was yhold a very sole of ech man hym herd.
The steward, and the officers, and the burgeyfis all,
Laughid at hym hertlich; the criour gan to call
The burgeyse, that had pleyd with Beryn at ches;
And he arose quiklich, and gan hym for to dres
Afore the steward at barr, as the maner is;
He gan to tell his tale wyth grete redines;
Here me, sir steward, this day is me set;
To have right and reson; I axe yew no bet,
Of Beryn, that here stondith; that with me yistirday
Made a certen covenaut, and at ches we did pley;
That whofo were ymatid of us both too,
Shuld do the toðir's bidding; and yf he wold nat so,
He must drink all the watir that salt wer in the Se: 2360
Thus I to hym surid, and he also to me.

To preve my tale trew, I am nat all aloon;
Up rose 10 burgeyfis quylich anoon;
And affermyd eviry word of his tale soth;
And made them all redy for to do their othe.
Evander the steward, Beryn, now qð he,
Thow most answere nede; it wolt noon othir be;
Take thy counsell to The: spede on, I have doon,
Beryn held hym styll: Geffrey spak anoon;
Now be my trowith, qð Geffrey, I marvell much of yew

To bid us go to counsell, and knowith me wife i-nowghe, 2370
And evir full avifid, in twynkelyng of an eye,
To make a short answer, but yf my mowith be dry.
Shuld we go to counsell for o word or tweyn?
Be my trowith we n'yll, let se mo that pleyn.

And but he be yanswer'd, and that right anoon;
I geve yew leve to rise and walk out everychoon,
And aspy redily yf ye fynd me there,
In the meen whils I wolt abyde here;

Nay, I tell trewly, I am wiser then ye ween: 2380
Forther n'ys noon of you woot redely what I meen.
Every man gan laughe all his hert fill,
Of Geffrey and his wordis; but Beryn held hym still
And was cleen astonyd; but yit ner the lattir;
He held it nat al foly that Geffrey did clattir;
But wisely hym governyd, as Geffrey hym taught;
For percell of his wisdom he had tofore smaught.

Sir steward, qð Beryn, I ondirstond wele
The tale of this burgeyse; now let anothir tell:
That I may take counsell, and answer all at onys. 2390
I graunt, qð the steward, then axing for the nonys;
Sith thow wolt be rewld by the fol's rede;
For he is right a wise man to help The in thy nede.
Up arose the accusours queyntlich anoon;
Hanybald was the first of them everichoon,
And gan to tell his tale with a proud chere;
Yistirday, soverens, when I was here;
Beryn and thes burgeyse gon to plede fast
For pleyng at ches; so ferforth at last,
Thorough vertu of myn office, that I had in charge
Beryn's fyve shippis, for to go at large,
And to be in answer her this same day:
So walkyng to the strondward we bargeynyed by the
wey,

That I shuld have the marchandise that Beryn with hym brought,

Wherof I am fefid, as ful sold and bought,
In covenante that I shuld his shippis fill ageyn
Of my marchandise; such as he tofore had feyn
In myn own plase, howtis to or thre,
Full of marchandise as they myght be:

And I am evir redy, whensoever he wolt, 2410
Let hym go, or sende, and charge his shippis full
Of such marchandise as he findith there:
For in such wordis we acordit were.

Up rose x burgeyfis, not tho that rose tofore;
But othir; and made them redy to have Iwore.
That every word of Hanybald; from the begynnyng
to the end,

Was soth and eke trewe; and with their mende
Full prest they wer to preve; and seyde they wer present

At covenaut making by Gðd omnipotent,
It shall nat nede, qð Geffrey, whils that I here stond:
For I wolt preve it my self with my right honde.
For I have been in four batellis heretofore,
And this shall be the fift; and therfor I am swore.
Beholdith, and seith, and turnyd hym about;
The steward and the burgeyse gamyd all about:
The Romeyns held them still and lawghid but a lite.
Wyth that cam the blynd man his tale to endite,
That God hym grant wynnyng right as he hath afervid.

Beryn and his company stood all astryvyd
Betwene hope and drede, right in high distres; 2430
For of wele or of woo they had no sikernes.
Beryn, qð this blynd, thonghe I may nat see,
Stond nere yit the barr; my comyng is for The;
That wrongfullich thow witholdist my both to eyen,
The wich I roke The for a tyme; and quylich to me
hijen,

And take them me ageyn, as our covenaut was.
Beryn, I take no reward of othir mennys case,
But onlich of myn oon; that stont me most an hond.
Now bleffid be God in heven, that brought The to this lond;

For sith our last parting, many bitir teris 2440
Have I lere for thy love, that som tyme partinetis
Of

Of wyunnyng and of lesing were yeris fele;
And evir I fond The trewe; tyl at the last thou didist
stele

Awey wyth my too eyen, that I toke to The,
To se the tregetours pley and their sotilte:
As yistirday, here in this same plase,
Tofore yew, sir steward, reherfid as it was.
Full trew is that byword, a man to servesabill
Ledith oft beyard from his own stabill.

Beryn, by The I meen, though thou make it straunge;
For thou knowist trewly that I made no chaunge
Of my good eyen, for thyn that badder were.
Therwith stode up burgeyse four, witnes to bere.
Beryn held hym styll, and Geffrey spak anoon;
Now of thy lewd compleynt, and thy masid moon,
By my trowith, qð Geffrey, I have grete mervail.
For though thou haddist eyen-sight, it shuld litill a-
vaile;

Thow shuldist nevir fare the bet, but the wors in fay;
For al thing may be still now for The in house and
way;

And yf thou haddist thyn eyen, thou woldist no coun-
sell hele; 2460

I know wele by thy finfamy, thy kynd wer to stele;
And eke it is thy profite, and thyn ese also,
To be blynd as thou art: for now wherfo thou go,
Thow hast thy lyvlode, whils thou art alyve;
And yf thou myghtist se, thou shuldist nevir thryve.
Al the house throughout, save Beryn and his feris,
Lawghid of Geffrey, that watir on their leris
Ran down from their eyen for his masid wit.
Wythat cam the woman, hir tung was nat sclyt,
Wyth 15 burgeyfis, and women also fele, 2470
Her quarel for to preve, and Beryn to apele,
With a feir knave child yloke wythin their armys;
And gan to tel hir tale of wrongis, and of armys,
And eke of unkyndnes, untrowith, and falshede,
That Beryn had ywrought to hir; that queyntlich from hir gede

Anoon oppon her wedding, when he his wyll had
doon,

And brought hir wyth chyld, and lete hir sit aloon Wythout help and comfort from that day; and nowith

He proferid me nat to kys onys with his mowith:
As yistirday, sir steward, afore yew eche word 2480
Was reherfid here, my pleynt is of record;
And this dey is me set for to have reson:
Let hym make amendis, or els tell encheson
Why hym ought nat fynd, as man ought his wyf.
These fiftene burgeyfis quylich al so blyve,
And as fele wymen as stode by hir ther,
Seyd that they were present when they weddit were;
And that every word that the woman seyde
Was trew, and eke Beryn had hir so betray'd.
Benedicite, qð Geffrey, Beryn hast thou a wyf?
Now have God, my trowith, the dayis of my lyf
I shall trust The the les, thou toldist me nat to fore
As wele of thy wedding, and of thy sone ybore.
Go to and kys them both, thy wyf and eke thyn
heir:

Be thou nat ashamyd, for they both be feyr.
This wedding was right privy, but I shall make it couthe:

Behold thy sone, it semith crope out of thy mowith;
And eke of thy condicioun both soft and some.
Now am I glad thyn heir shall with us to Rome;
And I shall teche hym, as I can, whils that he is young 2500

Every day by the strete to gaðir houndis dung;
Tyll it be abill of prentyse to craft of Taverner taury;
And aftir I shall teche hym for to cache a fly,
And to mend mytens, when they been to tore,
And aftir to cloute shoun, when he is elder more:

Yit for his parentyne, to pipe, as doith a mowfe,
I woll hym teche, and for to pike a snayl out of his howse,

And to berk, as doith an hound, and sey baw baw:
And turn round about, as a cat doith wyth a straw,
And to blete as doith a shepe, and ney as doith an hors, 2510

And to low as doith a cow: and as myn own corps
I woll cheristh hym every day, for his moðirs sake.
And gan to stappe ner the child, to have ytake,
As semed by his countenance, although he thought
nat so.

But moðir was evir ware, and blenchid to and fro,
And leyd hir hond betwene, and lokid somwhat
wroth:

And Geffrey in pur wrath beshrewid them all both.
For by my trowith, qð Geffrey, wel masid is thy pan:

For I woll teche thy sone the craftis that I can,
That he in tyme to come myght win his lyvlode.
To wex therfor angry thou art verry wood.

Of husbond, wyf, and sone, by the Trynyte,
I n'ote wich is the wisest of them all thre.

No sothly, qð the steward; it liith all in thy noll,
Both wit and wysdom, and previth by thy poll.

For all be that Geffrey wordit sotilly,
The steward and the burgeyfis held it for foly,
All that evir he seyde, and toke it for good game,
And had full litill knowleche he was Geffrey the lame. 2530

Beryn and his company stode still as stone,
Betwene hope and drede, disware how it shuld goon:
Saff Beryn trist in party that Geffrey wold hym help,
But yit into that hour he had no cause to yelp:
Wherfor they made much sorowe that dole was and pete.

Geffrey herd hym sigh fore; what devil is yew, qð he?
What nede yew be sory, whils I stond here?
Have I nat enfourmid yew how, and in what ma-
nere,

That I yew wold help, and bryng them in the snare?
Yf ye coud plede as well as I, full litill wold ye care.
Pluk up thy hert, qð Geffrey Beryn I speke to The;
Leve thy blab lewd, qð Beryn to hym age,
It doith no thing avail, that sorowe com on thy
hede;

It is nat worth a fly al that thou hast seyde.

Have we nat els now for to think oppon,
Saff here to jangill? Machyn rose anoon,
And went to the barr, and gan to tell his tale;

He was as fals as Judas, that set Criste at sale.
Sir steward, qð this Machyn, and the burgeyfis all Knowith wele how Melan with purpill, and with pall,

And othir marchandise, seven yere ago, 2550
Went toward Rome, and how that I also
Have enquired sith, as reson woll and kynde,
Sith he was my faðir, to know of his ende.
For yit sith his departing, tyl it was yistirday,
Met I nevir creature that me coud wissh or say
Reedynes of my faðir, dede othir alyve:
But blefid be God in heaven, in this thev'is sclyve
The knyff I gaff my faðir was yistirday yfound:
Sith I hym apele, let hym be fast ybound.

The knyf I know wel inowe; also the man stont here,
And dwellith in this town, and is a corelere,
That made the same knyf wyth his too hondis;
That wele I woot there is noon like to sech al cristen
londis:

For 3 preciose stonys been wythin the haft
Perfitlich ycouchit, and sotillich by craft
Endendit in the haft, and that right coriously;
A saphir, and a salidone, and a rich ruby.

The

The cotelere cam lepeing forth with a bold chere;
And seyde to the steward, that Machyn told now
here

Every word is trew; so beth the stonys set; 2570
I made the knyff my self, who myght know it bet;
And toke the knyff to Machyn, and he me pay'd wele
So is this felon guilty; there is no more to tell.

Up arose burgeyfis by 2 by 3 by 4
And seyde they wer present, the same tyme and hour,
When Machyn wept sore, and brought his faðir's
gownd,

And gaf hym the same knyff oppon the See strond.
Beth ther eny mo pleyntifs of record
Qð Geffrey to the steward? and he ageynward.
How semeth The, Gylhochet, beth ther nat inowghe?
Make thyn answer, Beryn, case that thow mowe:
For oon or othir thow must sey, although it nat a-vaille;

And but thow lese or thow go, methinkith grete mervail.

Beryn goith to counsell, and his company:
And Geffrey bode behinde to her more and fe,
And to shew the burgeyse somewhat of his hert;
And seyde, but I make the pleyntifs for to smert,
And alle that them meyntenith for aught that is y-
seyd,

I woll grant yew to kut the eris fro my hede.
My master is at counsell, but counsell hath he noon:
For but I hym help, he is cleen undoon.

But I woll help hym al that I can, and meyntene hym
also

By my power and connyng, so I am bound ther'to.
For I durst wage battell wyth yew, though yee be strong,

That my maister is in the trowith, and ye be in the wrong:

For and we have lawe, I ne hold yew but distroied
In yewr own falshe, so be yee now aspied.
Wherfor yit or eve I shal abate yewr pride;
That som of yew shal be right feyn to slynk away
and hide.

The burgeyses gon to lawgh, and scornyd hym
ther'to. 2600

Gylhochet, qð Evander, and thow cowdist so
Bryng it thus about, it were a redy wey.
He is a good fool, qð Hanybald, in fay,
To put hymself aloon in strengith, and eke in wit,
Ageyns all the burgeyfis that on this bench sit.
What clatir is this, qð Machyn, al day with a fole?
Tyme is now to worch with som othir tole.

For I am certeyn of their answer that they wol fail;
And lyf for lyf of my faðir, what may that avail?
Wherfor beth avisid, for I am in no doute, 2610

The goodis been sufficient to part al aboute:
So may every party pleyntif have his part.

That is refon, qð the blind, a trew man thow art;
And eke it were untrowith and eke grete syn,
But eche of us that pleyntith mayght somewhat wyn.

Hanybald bote his lippis, and herd them both wele;
Towching the marchandise o tale I shal yew tell,
And eke make a vow, and hold my behest,

That of the marchandise yewr part shal be lest:
For I have made a bargeyn, that may nat be undo,
I woll hold his covenant, and he shal myn also.

Up roos quylich the burgeyse Syrophanes;
Hanybald, qð he, the law goith by no lanys,
But hold ferth the streyt wey, even as doith a lyne:

For yistirday when Beryn with me did dyne,
I was the first person that put hym in arest:
And for he wold go large, thow haddist in charge
and hest

To sese both ship and goodis, til I were answerid;
Then must I first be servid, this knowith al men y-
lerid. 2630

The woman stode besidis, and cried wondir fast;
Ful soth is that byword, to pot who comyth last,
He worst is servid; and so it farith by me:

Yit nethirles, Sir Steward, I trust to yewr lentè,
That knowith best my cause and my trew entent;
I axe yew no more but rightful jugement.

Let me have part with othir, sith he my husbond is:
Good Sir beth avisid, I axe yew nat amys.

Thus they gon to stryve, and wer of high mode,
For to depart among them othir mennys good, 2640
Wher they tofore had nevir properte,

Ne nevir shuld thereafter by doom of equitye;
But they had othir cause then they had tho.

Beryn was at counsell, his hert was full woo,
And his meyny sory, distrakt, and al amayide;
For tho they levid noon othir, but Geffrey had be-trayide,

Because he was so long, they coud no maner rede;
But everich by hymself wisshid he had be dede.

O myghtful God, they seyde, I trow tofore this day,
Was nevir gretter treson, fere, ne affray, 2650
Ywrought onto mankind, then now is to us here;

And namelich by this Geffrey with his sotil chere.
So feithful he made it he wold us help echone,
And now we be ymyryd he letith us sit aloon.

Of Geffrey, qð Beryn, be as it be may:
We mut answer nede, ther is noon othir way;
And therfor let me know your wit, and your coun-
saile;

They wept, and wrong their hondis, and gan to waillie

The tyme that they wer bore, and shortly of the lyve
They wisshid that they wer; with that came Geffrey
blive, 2660

Passing them towards, and began to smyle.
Beryn axid Geffrey, wher he had be al the while?
Have mercy oppon us, and help us as thow hight.

I wol help yow right wele, through Graee of Godd's
might:

And I can tell yow tiding of their governaunce.
They stond in altercatioune and stryf in poynt to prauunce

To depart your goodis; and levith verrily
That it wer impossibill yew to remedy.

But their high pride and their presumpcioune 2670
Shal be, yit or eve, their confusioune;
And to make amendis ech man for his pleynt.

Let se therfor your good avise, how they might be ateynt.

The Romeyns stode still, as who had shor their hede.
In feith, qð Beryn, we can no maner rede,
But in God, and yew, we submit us all,

Body, lyf, and goodis, to stond or to fall;
And nevir for to travers o word that thow seyft:
Help us good Geffrey as wele as thou mayst. 2680

Deperdeux, qð Geffrey, and I woll do me peyn
To help yow as my connyng woll strech and ateyn.

The Romeyns went to barr, and Geffrey altofore
With a nice countenaunce, barefote, and to tore,
Pleying with a yerd, he bare in his honde;

And was evir wistlyng at every pafe comaunde.
The steward and the burgeyfis had game inowghe
Of Geffrey's nice comyng, and hertlich lowghe;

And eche man seyde, Gylhochet, com nere;
Thow art right welcome, for thow makist us chere.
The same welcom, qð Geffrey, that yee woll us,
Fall oppon yewr hedis, I prey to God, and wers.

They held hym for a verry fole, but he held them
wel more:
And so he made them in breff tyme, all though they wer nat shore.

Styntith now, qð Geffrey, and let make pese,
Of myrthis and of japis tyme is now to cese,
7 T And

And speke of othir mater that we have to doon:
For and we hew amys eny maner stone;
We know wele in certeyn what pardon we shul have:
The more is our nede us to defend and save.
My master hath be at counsell, and ful avisid is 2700
That I shall have the wordis, speke I wele or mys:
Wherfor, Sir steward, and ye burgeyfis all,
Sittith up right, and writith nat, for aventuris that may fall.

For and ye deme untrewly, or do us eny wrong,
Ye shull be refourmyd, be ye nevir so strong,
Of every poynt and injury, and that in grete haste;
For he is nat unknowe to us that may yow chaste.
Hold forth the right wey, and by no lide lanys.
And as towching the first pleyntif Syrophanes,
That pleyd with my master ystirday at ches, 2710
And made a certeyn covenante, who that had the wers

In the last game, al thoughe I wer nat there,
Shuld do the to³ir's bidding, whatsoevir it wer,
Or drynk all the watir that salt wer in the See;
Thus I trowe, Sir steward, ye woll record the ple:
And yf I have ymissid, in lettir, or in word,
The lawe wol I be rewliid astir yewr record:
For we be ful avisid in this wise to answere.
Evander the steward and al men that wer there
Had mervil much of Geffrey, that spak so redely,
Whose wordis tofore semyd al foly;
And wer astonyed cleen, and gan for to drede:
And ev'ry man tyl othir lenyd with his hede;
And seyde, he reported the tale right formally;
He was no sole in certen, but wise, ware, and scly;
For he hath but yjapid us, and scornid heretofore;
And we have hold hym a sole, but we be wel more.
Thus they stodied on Geffrey, and laughid tho right
naught.

When Geffrey had aspied they wer in such thought,
And their hertis trobelid, penyf, and anoyed; 2730
Hym lyst to dryve in bet the nayl, till they wer fully cloyid:

Soveren Sirs, he seyde, sith that it so is,
That in reporting of our ple ye fynd nothing amys,
As provith wele yowr scilence, eke ye withseyth nat
O word of our tale, but clene without spot;
Then to our answer I prey yow take hede;
For we wol sey al the trowith, right as it is in dede.
For this is soth and certen, it may nat be withseyd,
That Beryn that here stondith was thus ovirpleid
In the last game, when wagir was opon: 2740
But that was his sufferance, as ye shull here anon.
For in all this cete ther n'ys no maner man
Can pley betir at ches, then my mastir can;
Ne bet then I, though I it sey, can nat half so much:
Now how he lost it by his wyll, the cause I woll teche.
For ye wend and ween that ye had hym engnyed;
But ye shul fele in every veyn that ye be undirmined,
And ybrought at ground, and eke ovirmusid.
And agent the first that Beryn is acusid
Herith now ententyflich: When we wer on the See,
Such a tempest on us fill, that noon myght othir fe,
Of thundir, wynd, and lightenyng, and stormys ther
among;

Fiftene dayis during the tempest was so strong,
That eche man till othir began hym for to shryve;
And made their avowis, yf they myght have the lyve,
Som to se the sepulkir, and som to othir plase,
To sech holy seyntis for help and for grace;
Som to fast, and do pennaunce, and som do almyf-
dede:

Tyl at last, as God wold, a voise to us seyde,
In our most turment, and desperat of mynd, 2760
That yf we wold be savid, my maister must hym bynd
Be feith and eke be vow, when he cam to lond,
To drink al the salt watir within the See strond;

Without drinking eny sopo of the fresch watir:
And taught hym al the sotilte, how and in what ma-
nere

That he shuld wurch by engyne, and by a sotill charm,
To drink all the salt watir, and have hymself no harm;

But stop the fresh rivers by every cost side,
That they entir nat in the Se thorough the world wyde.
The voise we herd, but naught we saw; so wer our witts ravid: 2770

For this was end fynally, yf we lust be savid.
Wherfor my master Beryn, when he cam to this port,
To his avow and promys he made his first resort,
Or that he wold bergeyn eny marchandise.
And right doith these marchandis in the same wise;
That maken their avowis in saving of their lyv'is;
They completyn their pilgremagis or they se their wyvis.

So mowe ye ondirstond, that my master Beryn
Of fre will was ymatid, as he that was a pilgrym,
And myght nat perfourm by many thousand part 2780
His avow and his hest, wythout right sotil art,
Without help and strength of many mennys myght.
Sir steward, and sir burgeyse, if we shul have right,
Sirophanes must do cost and aventure,
To stop al the fresh ryvers into the See that entir.
For Beryn is redy in al thing hym to quyte,
So he be in defaute must pay for the wite.
Sith ye been wise al; what nede is much clatir?
Ther was no covenante them betwene to drink fresh watir.

When Sirophanes had yherd al Geffrey's tale; 2790
He stode al abaschid, with colour wan and pale,
And lokid oppon the steward with a rewful chere,
And on othir frendship and neyghbours he had there;
And preyde them of counsell the answere to reply.
These Romeyns, q³ the steward, been wondir scly,
And eke right ymmagytyf, and of sotil art;
That I am in grete dowte how yee shul depart
Without harm in oon side; our lawis, well thow wolt,

Is to pay damagis, and eke also the cost
Of every party plentyf that fallith in his pleynt, 2800
Let hym go quyt I counsell, yf it may so be queynt.
I merveil, q³ Sirophanes, of their sotilte;
But sith that it so stondith, and may noon othir be;
I do woll be counsell, and grauntid Beryn quyte.
But Geffrey thought anothir, and without respite
Sirs, he seyde, me wetith wele that ye wol dous right,
And so ye must nedis, and so ye have us highte;
And therefore, sir steward, ye occupy our plase;
And ye know wele what law wol in this case:

My mastir is redy to perfourm his avow. 2810
But natheless, q³ the steward, I cannat wete how
To stop all the fresh watir were possibilite.
Yis in soth, q³ Geffrey, who had of gold plente
As man coud wifh, and it myght well be do.
But that is nat our defaute, he hath no trefour to.
Let hym go to in haste, or find us suerte,
To make amendis to Beryn for his iniquite,
Wrong, and harm, and trespas, and undewe wexa-
cioune,

Lost of sale, and marchandise, disese, and tribula-
cioune,

That we have sustenyd thorough his iniquite. 2820

What vaylith it to tary us? for though ye sotil pry,
We shull have reson wher ye wol or no:

So woll we that ye knowe, what that we woll do;
In certen full avisid to lsope for to pase;

And declare every poynt, the more and eke the lase,
That of your opyn errors hath pleyn correctioun;

And ageyns his jugement is noon protectioun:

He is yewr lord riall, and soveren jugge, and lele;

That and ye work in eny poynt, to hym liith our apele.

So

So when the steward had yherd, and the burgeyfis alle,
How Geoffrey had ysteryd, that went so nighe the gall;
What for shame, and drede of more harm, and re-
preffe,

They made Sirophanes, weer hym looth or leffe,
To take Beryn gage, and plegg find also,
To byde the ward and jugement of that he had mysdo.
Now ferthermore, qð Geoffrey, sith that it so is,
That of the first pleyntyf we have sikernes;
Now to the marchant we must nedis answere,
That bergeyned with Beryn, al that his shippis bere,
In covaunte that he shuld his shippis fill ageyn
Of othir marchandise, that he tofore had seyn 2840
In Hanybald's plase, howsis to or thre,
Full of marchandise as they might be.
Let us pas thiðir, yf eny thing be there
At our lust and liking, as they acordit were.
I graunt wele, qð Hanybald, thow axist but righte.
Up arose these burgeyfis, thow axist but right;
The steward and his comperis entrid first the howse,
And saw nothing within, straw, ne leff, ne mowse,
Save tymbir, and the tyle stonys, and the wallis white.
I trow, qð the steward, the wynnyng woll be but lite
That Beryn woll now get in Hanybald's pleynte:
For I can se noon othir but they woll be ateynt:
And clepid them in echone, and went out hymselfe;
As sone as they were entrid, they saw no maner selve,
For foris of their hert; but astofore is seyde,
The howse was cleen yswept: then Geoffrey feir they preyde

To help yf he coud; let me aloon, qð he,
Yit shul they have the wers as sotill as they be.
Evander the steward, in the mene while,
Spak to the burgeyse, and began to smyle; 2860
Though Sirophanes be yhold thes Romeyns for to curs;

Yit I trow that Hanybald woll put hym to the wers:
For I am suyr and certeyn, within they shul nat fynd.
What sey ye be my pleynt, sirs, qð the blynd?
For I make a vow, I woll nevyr cese
Tyl Sirophanes have of Beryn a pleyne relese;
And to make hym quyte of his submissioun:
Els wol I have no pete of his contritioun;
But folow hym al so ferly as I can or may,
Tyll I have his eyen both to away. 2870
Now in feith, qð Machyn, and I wol have his lyffe.
For though he scape yew all, with me woll he nat
stryffe;

But be right feyn in hert all his good forsake,
For to scape wyth his lyf, and to me it take.
Bryn and his feleshyp wer within the house;
And speken of their answer, and made but litill rouse;
But evyr preyde Geoffrey, to help yf he coud ought.
I woll nat fail, qð Geoffrey, and was tofore bethought
Of too botirfliis, as white as eny snowe;
He lete them flee within the house, that astir on the wowe 2880

They clevid wondir fast, as their kynd woll,
Astir they had flew to rest anothir pull.
When Geoffrey saw the botirfliis cleaving on the wall,
The steward and the burgeyse in he gan call:
Lo! sirs, he sayd, whofo evyr repent,
We have chose marchandise most to our talent,
That we fynd herein. Behold, Sir Hanybal,
The yondir botirfliis that cleve on the wall;
Of such ye must fill our shippis al fyve.
Pluk up thy hert Beryn, for thow most nedis thryve:
For when we out of Rome in marchantfare went,
To purchase botirfliis was our most entent.
Yit woll I tell the cause especial and why:
There is a leche in Room, that hath ymade a cry
To make an oyntement to cure all tho ben blynde,
And al maner infirmytees, that growith in mankynde.

The day is short, the work is long: Sir Hanyball, ye mut hy.

When Hanybald herd this tale, he seyde pryvely
In counsell to the steward; in soth I have the wers:
For I am fikir by this pleynt that shall I litil purs. 2900
So me semeth, qð the steward, for in the world
rounde

So many botirfliis wold nat be founde
I trow o ship to charge. Wherfor me thinkith best,
Let hym have his good ageyn, and be in pefe and rest.
And yit is an aventure and thow scape so,
Thy covaunt to relese without more ado.
The burgeyfis everichone, that were of that cete,
Were anoyid fore, when they herd of this plee.
Geoffrey with his wisdom held them hard and streyte,
That they were acombrit in their own distreyte. 2910
When Hanybald with his frendis had spoke of this ma-
tere;

They drow them towards Beryn, and seide in this ma-
nere;
Oonly for botirfliis ye com fro your contrey;
And we you tell in sikirnes, and upon our fey,
That so many botirflyes we shul nevyr gete:
Wherefore we be avifid othirwise to trete;
That Hanybald shall relese his covaunt that is ma-
kid,
And delyver the good ageyn, that from you was ransakid;

And wexe you no more, but let you go in pefe.
Nay forsoth, qð Geoffrey, us nedith no relese: 2920
Ye shull hold our covaunt, and we shull yours also;
For we shull have reson, wher ye woll or no,
Whils Ilope is alyve, I am nothing aferd;
For I can wipe all this plee cleen from your berd,
And ye blench onys out of the high wey.
Thei proferid hym plegg and gage, without more de-
ley.

Now ferthirmore, qð Geoffrey, us ought to procede:
For to the blynd mann's poynt we must answer nede;
That, for to tell trowith, he lyvith all to long,
For his own sawte, and his own wrong, 2930
On Beryn he hath surmysid, as previth by his plee:
And that ye shull opynlich know wele and see.
For as I undirstode hym, he seyde that fele yeris
Beryn, that here stondith, and he, were pertynaris
Of wynnyng and of lesyng, as men it use and doith;
And that they chaugit eyen, and yit this is sothe:
But the cause of chaunging yit is to yow onknow:
Wherfore I woll declare it, both to high and lowe
In that same tyme that this burgeyse blynd,
And my master Beryn, as fast as feith might bynde,
Were marchaundis in comyn of al that they myght
wyn,

Saff of lyf, and lym, and of dedely syn;
Ther fill in tho marchis of al thing such a derth,
That joy, comfort, and solas, and al maner myrth
Was exilid cleen; saff oonly molestatioun,
That abood contenuell, and also dispiratioun.
So when that the pepill wer in most myscheffe;
God that is above, that al thing doith releve,
Sent them such plente of mony, fruyte, and corn,
Wich turnid al to joy their mournyng al to forny; 2950
Then gaf they them to mirth, revel, pley, and song;
And thankid God above, evyr more among
Of their relevacioun from woo into gladnes:
For astir four when swete is com, it is a plesant mes.
So in the meen while of this prosperite,
Ther cam such a pleyer into the same contre,
That nevyr thertofore was seyn such anothir;
That wele was the cature that born was of his moðir,
That myght se the mirthis of this jogeloure:
For of the world wide tho dayis he bare the floure.
For there n'as man ne woman in that regioun,
That set of hymself the store of a boton,

Yf

Yf he had not fey his myrthis and his game.
 So oppon a tyme, this pleyer did proclame
 That al manere of pepill his pleyis wold fe,
 Shuld com oppon a certen dey to the grete cete:
 Then among othir, my master here Beryn
 And this same blynd, that pledith now with hym,
 Made a certen covenant, that they wold fe
 The mervellis of this pleyer, and his sotilte: 2970
 So what for hete of somir, age, and febilnes,
 And eke also the long way, this blynd for werryne
 Fill flat adown to the erth, o fote ne myght he go;
 Wherfor my master Beryn in hert was full woo,
 And seyde, my frende, how now? mow ye no ferther pas?
 No, he seyde, by hym that first made mas:
 And yit I had levir, as God my soule save,
 Se thes wondir pleyis then all the good I have.
 I cannat els, qð Beryn, but yf it may nat be,
 But that ye and I mut retourn age, 2980
 Aftir ye be refrethid of your werynes;
 For to leve yew in this plite it wer no gentilnes.
 Then seyde this blynd, I am avisid bet:
 Beryn, ye shull wend thiðir without eny let;
 And have myn eyen with yew, that they the pley mow fe;
 And I woll have yours tyll ye come age.
 Thus was their covenant made, as I to yow report,
 For ese of this blynd, and most for his comfort.
 But wotith wele the whole science of all surgery
 Was unyd, or the chaunge was made of both eye, 2990
 With many sotill enchantours, and eke nygramancers,
 That sent were for the nonys, mastiris and scoleris;
 So when all was complete, my mastir went his wey
 With this mann's eyen, and saw all the pley;
 And hastily retourned into that plase age;
 And fond this blynd seching on hondis and on kne,
 Grasping all aboute to fynd that he had lore,
 Beryn his both eyen that he had tofore:
 But as sone as Beryn had pleyne knowleche
 That his eyen were ylost, unneth he myght areche
 O word, for pure anguysh that he toke sodenly,
 And from that day till now ne myght he nevir spy
 This man in no plase, ther law was ymevid;
 But now in his presence the soth is full yprevid;
 That he shall make amendis or he hens pas;
 Right as the lawe wol deme, ethir more or las.
 For my mastir's eyen were betir and more clere
 Then these that he hath now, to fe both fer and nere;
 So wold he have his own, that propir were of kynd:
 For he is evir redy, to take to the blynde 3010
 The eyen that he had of hym, as covenant was;
 So he woll do the same. Now, soverens, in this case
 Ye mut take hede for to deme right;
 For it wer no reson my mastir shuld lese his sight,
 For his trew hert and his gentilnes.
 Beryn, qð the blind, tho I woll The relese,
 My quarell, and my cause, and fall fro my pleynt.
 Thow mut nede, qð Geffrey, for thow art ateynt:
 So mut thow profir gage, and borowis fynd also,
 For to make amendis, as othir have ydo. 3020
 Sir steward do us law, sith we desire but right:
 As we been pese marchandis, us longith nat to fight;
 But pleyne us to the law, yf so we be agrevid.
 Anoon opon that Geffrey these wordis had ymevid,
 The blynd man fond borowis for all his maletalent,
 And were yentrid in the court to byde the jugement:
 For thoughe that he blynde were, yit had he good
 plente,
 And more wold have wonne through his iniquite.
 Now herith sirs, qð Geffrey, thre pleyntifs been assu-rid:
 And as anenst the ferth, this woman hath arerid 3030
 That pleyntith here on Beryn, and seyde she is his wyfe,
 And that she hath many a dey led a peynous lyfe,

And much sorow endurid his child to sustene,
 And al is soth and trew: now rightfullich to deme
 Whether of them both shall othir obey,
 And folowe will and lustis, sir steward, ye mut sey.
 And therewith Geffrey lokid aside on this woman;
 How she chaungit colours, pale, and eke wan:
 All for nought, qð Geffrey, for ye mut with us go;
 And endure with your husbond both wele and woo:
 And wold have take her by the hond; but she away
 did breyde,
 And with a grete sighing, these wordis she seyde;
 That ageyns Beryn she wold plede no more:
 But gagid with too borowis, as othir had do tofore.
 The steward sat as still, as who had shor his hede;
 And specially the pleyntifs were in much drede.
 Geffrey set his wordis in such maner wise,
 That wele they wist they myght nat scape in no wise,
 Without los of goodis, for damage, and for cost;
 For such wer their lawis, wher pleyntis wer ylost. 3050
 Geffrey had full perseyte of their encombirment;
 And eke he was in certen that the jugement
 Shuld pas with his mastir. Wherfor he anoon,
 Soveren sirs, he seyde, yit must we ferthir goon;
 And answer to this Machyn, that seith the knife is his
 That found was on Beryn, therof he seith nat amys.
 And for more prefe he seith in this manere
 That here stondith present the same cotelere
 That the knyfe made, and the precious stonys thre
 Within the haft been couchid, that in crystyanite, 3060
 Thoughe men wold of purpose make serch and seche,
 Men shuld nat fynd in al thing a knyfe that were it
 liche:
 And more opyn prefe than mann's own knowleche
 Men of law ne clerkis con nat tell ne teche.
 Now sith we be in this manere thus ferforth ago,
 Then were spedfull for to know, how Beryn cam first to
 To have possessioun of the knyfe, that Machyn seith is his:
 To yew unknowe I shall enfourm the trowith as it is.
 Now 7 yere and passid opon a tuyfday
 In the passoun-week, when men leven pley, 3070
 And use more devocioun, fastyng, and preyer,
 Then in othir tyme, or feson of the yere;
 This Beryn's faðir erlich wold arise,
 And barefote go to chirch to Godd's servise,
 And lay hymself aloof from his own wyfe,
 In reverence of the tyme, and mending of his lyfe.
 So on the same tuyfday, that I tofore nempt,
 This Beryn rose, and rayd hym, and to the chirch went,
 And mervelid in his hert his faðir was nat there:
 And homward went ageyn, with drede, and eke
 fere, 3080
 Into his faðir's chambir, sodenlich he rakid,
 And fond hym ligg standede, oppon the straw al nakid,
 And the clothis halid from the bed away.
 Out alas! qð Beryn, that evir I saw this dey!
 The meyne herd the noise, how Beryn cried alas!
 And cam into the chambir, al that therein was;
 But the dole, and the sorowe, and anguysh that was
 there,
 It vaylith nat at this tyme to declare it here;
 But Beryn had most of all, have ye no doute:
 And anoon they serchid the body al aboute, 3090
 And fond this same knyfe, the poynt right at his hert
 Of Beryn's faðir, whose teris gan outstert
 When he drowgh out the knyfe of his faðir's wound:
 Then standede I saw hym fall down to the ground,
 In sight of the most part that beth with hym now
 here;
 And they affermyd it for soth, as Geffrey did them
 lere:

And yit had I nevir suspeciou, from that day tyll
noweth,
Who ded that cursed dede; tyll Machyn with his moweth

Afore yew hath knowlechild that the knyfe is his:
So mut he nedis answer for his deth, ywis. 3100
When Machyn had yherd al Geffrey's tale,
He rose of bench sodenly, with colour wan, and pale,
And seyde unto Beryn; Sir ageyn The
I woll plete no more; for it wer gret pete
To combir yew with actions, that beth of nobill kynde.
Graunt mercy Sir qð Geffrey, but yit ye shull fynde
Borowis, or ye pas, amendis for to make
For our undewe Vexacioune, and gage also us take
In sign of submyssioune for your injury,
As law woll and reson; for we woll uttirly 3110
Procedè tyll we have jugement finall:
And therfor, Sir Steward, what that evir fall,
Delay us no longer, but gyve us jugement:
For tristith ye noon othir, but we be fullich bent
To Ilope for to wend, and in his high presence
Reherce al our ples, and have his sentence:
Then shull ye make fynys, and highlich be agrevid.
And as sone as the Steward herd thes wordis mevid,
Reson ryght and law, seyde the Steward tho,
Ye mut nedis have, wher I woll or no. 3120
And to preve my full wyll, or we ferther goon,
Quicklich he commaundit, and sparid nevir oon.
24 Burgeyfis in law best ylerid,
Reherfing them the ples, and how Geffrey answerid,
And on lyf, and lym, and forfetur of good,
And as they wold nat lese the ball within their hood
To draw a-part togiðir, and by their all assent
Spare no man on lyve to gyve trew jugement:
And when thes 24 Burgeyfis had yherd
The charge of the Steward; right fore they wer aferd
To lese ther own lyvis, but they demed trowith;
And eke of their neyours they had grete rowith.
For they perseyvid clerelich, in the plee throughout,
Their frendis had the wors side, therof they had no dout.
And yf we deme trewly, they woll be fore anoyid;
Yit it is betir then we be shamyd and distroyid.
And anoon they wer acordit, and seyde with Beryn,
And demed every pleyntif to make a grete fyne
With Beryn, and hym submyt hoolich to his grace,
Body, good, and catell, for wrong and their trespase; 3140
So ferforth, tyll at last it was so boutte ybore,
That Beryn had the doubill good, that he had tofore:
And wyth joy and myrth, wyth all his company,
He droughe hym to his shippis ward, wyth song, and melody.

The Steward and the Burgeyse from the Court bent,
Into their own placis; and evir as they went,
They talkid of the Romeyns, how sotill they wer,
To aray hym like a sole, that for them shuld answer.
What vaylith it, qð Hanybald, to angir or to curs?
And yit I am in certen, I shall fare the wers 3150
All the dayis of my lyfe, for this day's pleding;
And so shal al the Remnaunt; and their hondis wryng,
Both Syrophanes, and the blynd, the Woman, and Ma-
chyn,

And be bet avifid er they eftsonys pleyne;
And al othir personys wythyn this Cete
Mell the les wyth Romeyns, whils they here be:
For such anothir sole was nevir yit yborn;
For he did naught ellis but evir with us scorn,
Tyll he had us caught, even by the shyn,
With his sotill wittis, in our own grene. 3160
Now woll I retourn to Beryn ageyn:
That of his grete lukir in hert was right feyne;
And so was all his meyne, as them ought wele,
That they wer so delyverid from turment like to hell;
And graciully relevid out of ther grete myschef,
And yfet above in comfort and bouchef.

Now in soth, quoð Beryn, it may nat be denied,
N'ad Geffrey, and his witt be, we had be distroyid:
Ithankid be Almyghty God Omnipotent,
That for our Consolacioune Geffrey to us sent: 3170
And in protest opynly, here among yew alle,
Half my good, whils that I lyve, whatever me befall,
I graunt it here to Geffrey, to gyve, or to sell,
And nevir to part from me, yf it wer his wyl;
And fare as well as I, a morrow and eke on eve,
And nevir for man on lyve his company for to leve.
Graunt mercy Sir, quoð Geffrey, yewr profir is feir and grete;

But I desire no more, but as ye me behete,
To bryng me at Room, for this is Covenante.
It shall be do, [qð] Beryn, and all the Remnaunt. 3180
Deperdeux, qð Geffrey, therof we shull wele do:
He rayid hym othirwise; and without wordis mo,
They went to the dyner the hole company,
With pipis, and wyth trompis, and othir melody;
And in the myddis of their mete, gentil Women fyve,
Maidens fresch atirid, as myght be on lyve,
Com from the Duke Ilope, lord of that Regioun,
Everich wyth a present, and that of grete renown:
The first bare a cup of gold, and of asure fyne,
So corouse and so nobill, that I can nat devyne. 3190
The second brought a swerd yfethid, wyth seyntur
Ifretid all with perelis orient and pure.
The third had a Mantell, of lusty fresch colour;
The uttir part of purpill, yfurrid with pelour.
The ferth a cloth of gold, a worthy and a riche,
That nevir man tofore saw cloith it liche.
The fift bare a palme, that stode tofore the deyle,
In tokyn and sign of trowith and pefe:
For that was the custom through all the contray.
The message was the levir and more plesant to pay: 3200
The cup was uncoverid, the swerd was out ybrayid,
The mantell was unfold, the cloth along ylayid;
They knelid adown echone right tofore Beryn;
The first did the message, that taught was wel and fyne:
Ilope, the seyde, Sir Beryn, that is our Lord riall,
And gretith yew, and sendith yew thes presentis all;
And joy hath of yewr wisdom, and of yewr gover-
naunce;

And preyd you to com and have with hym plesaunce
To morowe, and se his palyse, and to sport you there,
Yee and all your company. Beryn made noon answere,
But sat styll, and beheld the Women, and the sondis;
And afirward avifely the swerd first he hondis;
And commaundit therewithall the Wymmen wassh
and sit,

And pryvelich chfargit Officers, that with al their wit
To serve them of the best, and make them hertly chere;
Resseyving al the presentis in worshipful manere.
I cannat wele exprefs the joy that they had:
But I suppose, tofore that day, that they wer nat so glad,
That they wer so afcapid fortune and myschefe;
And thonkid God above that al thing doith relese. 3220
For afir mysty cloudis ther comith a cler sonne;
So afir bale comyth bore, whofo byde conne.
The joy and nobley that they had, whils they wer at
mete,

It vaylith nat at this tyme therof long to trete.
But Geffrey sat with Beryn, as he had servid wele,
Their hedis they leyde togiðir, and begon to tell
In what maner the Wymen shuld be answered.
Geffrey evir avifid Beryn therof he leryd,
And of othir thingis, how he hym shuld govern:
Beryn faverid wele theron, and fast he gan to lern. 3230
When all wer up, the Wymmen cam to take their leve;
Beryn, as fat hym wele of blode, them toward gan releve,
And preyd them hertly hym to recommend Unto the worthy Lordship of Ilope; that you send
To me that am unworthy, save of his grete nobley;
And thank hym of his gyftis, as ye can best and sey.

To morow I woll be redy his hest to fulfill;
 With this I have save condit, I may com hym tyll,
 For me, and al my felshipp, saff to com and go;
 Trusting in his discrecioun, that thoughe I ax so, 3240
 He wol nat be displeid: for in my Contray
 It hath evir be the custom, and is into this day,
 That yf a Lord riall desirith for to see
 Eny maner persone, that is of las degre;
 Er he approche his presence, he wol have in his honde
 A saff condit enselid, or els som othir bonde,
 That he may com and pas without disturbaunce;
 Throughout all our Marchis it is the observaunce.
 Thes Wymmen toke their leve without wordis mo;
 Repeyring onto Ifope, and al as it was do 3250
 They reherfid redely, and faylid nevyr a word,
 To Ifope with his Baronage ther he sat at his borde,
 Talkyng fast of Romayns, and of their high prudence,
 That in so many daungers made so wise defence.
 But as sone as Ifope had pleylich yherd
 Of Beryn's governaunce, that first sesid the swerd,
 Afore al othir presentis; he demed in hys minde,
 That Beryn was ycom of som nobill kynde.
 The nyght was past, the morowe cam; Ifope had nat
 forgete:
 He chargit Baronstwelf with Beryn for to mete, 3260
 To cond hym saff, and his meyne; and al perfourmyd
 was.
 Thre dayis ther they sportid hym in myrth and solas;
 That throughe the wise instructioun of Geffrey, nyght
 and dey,
 Beryn plesid Ifope with wordis al to pay;
 And had hym so in port, and in governaunce,
 Of all honest myrthis, and witty daliaunce,
 That Ifope cast his chere to Beryn so groundly,
 That at last ther was no man with Ifope so pryvy:
 Resorting to his shippis, comyng to and fro,
 Thorough the wit of Geffrey, that eche day it fil so, 3270

That Ifope coude no wher chere, when Beryn was absent:

So Beryn must nedis eche day be aftir sent;
 And chefe he was of counsell, within the first yere;
 Thorough the wit of Geffrey, that eche dey did hym
 lere.

This Ifope had a doughtir, betwene hym and his wyfe,
 That was as feir a creature as myght bere lyfe,
 Wyse, and eke bountevouse, and benyng with all;
 That heir shuld be, aftir his dey, of his Lordshippis alle.
 So shortly to conclude, the Mariage was made
 Betwene hir and Beryn; many a man to glade, 3280
 Saff the Burgeyis of the Town, of falshede that were rote:

But they wer evir hold so low ondir fote;
 That they might nat regne, but at last sawe
 To leve their condicioun, and their fals lawe:
 Beryn and Geffrey made them so tame,
 That they amendit eche dey, and gat a betir name.
 Thus Geffrey made Beryn his enemyes to ovircom,
 And brought hym to worship thouroughe his wysdom.
 Now God us graunt grace to fynde such a frende,
 When we have nede: And thus I make an ende. 3290

CHAUCER's Wordes unto his own Scrivenere.

A Dam Scrivenere, yf ever it The befalle
 Boece or Troiles for to write new
 Under thy longe lockes thou maist have the scalles
 But after my makynge thou write more true
 So ofte adaye I mote thy werke renew
 It to correcte and eke to rubbe and scrape
 And al is thorow thy negligence and rape.

F I N I S.

A GLOS-

1

A GLOSSARY

Explaining the Obsolete and difficult Words

IN CHAUCER.

An Explanation of the Abbreviations used in the following GLOSSARY.

ABC.	C haucer's A. B. C.	Page 588	J. Upl.	Jacke Uplande	590
AF.	The Asseble of Foules	413	Kyn.	Sir Francis Kynaston's Version of Troilus and Creseide into Latin Rhyme, and his Notes thereupon. See Morter in the Glossary.
AL.	The Asseble of Ladies	433	La.	The Man of Lawe's Tale	49
An.	Of Quene Annelida and false Ar-cite	430	Lat.	Latin.
Ar.	The Legende of Ariadne of Athens	352	Leg.	Legendum , To be read.
AS.	Saxon or Anglo-Saxon.		Luc.	The Legende of Lucrece of Rome	350
Astr.	The Conclusions of the Astrolabie	439	LW.	The Legende of good Women	338
Bal.	Certaine Balades	549	Magd.	The Lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine	520
Bal. Lad.	A Ballade in commendacion of our Ladie	538	Men. Fr.	Menage de l'Origine de la langue Francoise .
BD.	La Belle Dame sans mercy	422	Men. It.	Menage delle Origini della Lingua Italiana .
Ber.	The Merchant's second Tale, or the History of Beryn	600	Mo.	The Division containing the Monke's, the Nonne's Priest's, the Manciple's and the Plowman's Tales p. 160. to 189
Bl. Kn.	The Complaint of the Blacke Knight	451	MR.	The Division which contains the Miller's and the Reve's Tales, and the Coke's Tale of an unthrifty Prentice p. 24 to 35
Blo.	Blount's Glossography.		MS. Ch.	Mr. Cholmondely's MS. See the Preface.
Blo. L. D.	Blount's Law-Dictionary.		MS. Sp.	A MS of Troilus and Creseide , in which is written Henrici Spelman . See the Preface.
Boeth.	The Boke of Boethius , De Consolacione Philosophia .	359	MV.	The Complaints of Mars and Venus	532
Ca. 1, 2.	Caxton's first and second Edition of Chaucer's Works.		No.	The Division which begins p. 115. and contains the Second Nonne's, the Chanon's Yeoman's, the Doctour of Phisike's, the Pardoner's, the Shipman's, the Priore's Tales, and the Rime of Sir Thopas ; ending	146
CB.	Cambro-Britan. or Welsh.		Pars.	The Parson's Tale	190
CCr.	The Complaint of Creseide	336	Ph.	The Legende of Philomela	354
Ch.	Chaucer's Tale of Melibeus	147	Phyl.	The Legende of Phyllis	356
Ch. Dr.	Chaucer's Dreame	572	Pi.	How Pyte is dede	421
Cl.	The Legende of Cleopatra	343	PP.	Piers Plowman's Visions.
CL.	The Court of Love	560	Prol.	The Prologue to the Canterbury Tales , together with the Knight's Tale, from p. 1. to 24
CM.	The Complaint of Mars	532	Pr. RL.	Prologue to the Remedy of Love	526
CMV.	The Complaint of Mars and Venus	530	PT.	The mery Adventure of the Pardoner and Tapstere, &c.	594
CN.	Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale	543	PW.	A Praise of Women	456
Com.	A Comment on the Plowman's Tale, printed in 1606.		Py. 1, 2.	Pynson's first and second Edition of Chaucer's Works.
Cr.	The Testament of Creseide	333	Ray's Coll.	Mr. Ray's Collection of English Words used in the Northern and Southern Countries. 2 Edit. 1691.
CV.	The Complaint of Venus	ib.	Rich.	Richeler's Dictionary.
Cup.	The Letter of Cupide .	534	RL.	The Remedie of Love	527
D.	Dutch.		RR.	The Romaunt of the Rose	190
Di.	The Legende of Dido Quene of Carthage	345	Sc.	Scogan unto the Lords and Gentlemen of the King's House.	546
Dr. Ch.	The Dreame of Chaucer	404	Scot.	Scotch.
f. forte,	Perhaps.		Sk.	Skinner's Etymologicon Lingua Anglicana .
Fa. L. 1.	The first Book of the House of Fame	458	Somn.	Somner's Saxon Dictionary.
Fa. L. 2.	The second Book	461	Sp.	Speght's Glossary to Chaucer's Works.
Fa. L. 3.	The third Book	465	Spelm.	Spelmanni Glossarium Archaologicum .
Fl.	The Floure of Courtesie	419	Sq.	The Division containing the Squier's and the Marchaunt's Tales p. 59 to 75
FL.	The Floure and the Lease	473	Test.	The Testament of Love	478
Forr.	Plaintife to Fortune	548	Th.	The Legende of Thisbe of Babylone	343
Fr. French:	But when it is followed by a Number, it stands for the Division beginning p. 86. and ending p. 114. Containing the Frere's, the Sompnour's, the Clerke of Oxenforde's , and the Frankelein's Tales.		Tr. L. 1.	The first Book of Troilus and Creseide	269
Fr. Gl.	Glossarium ad Scriptores Mediae & Infimae Latinitatis , Autore Carolo du Fresne , &c.		Tr. L. 2.	The second Book	277
Gam.	The Coke's Tale of Gamelyn	36	Tr. L. 3.	The third Book	291
Gl. Lob.	The Glossary to Lobineau's Histoire de Bretagne .		Tr. L. 4.	The fourth Book	305
Gl. V.	The Glossary to Douglas's Virgil . Edinb. 1710.		Tr. L. 5.	The fifth Book	318
Gr.	Greek.		V.	Vide , See. When it follows a Word, it refers to it in the Glossary.
H. 1, 2, 3, 4.	MSS. in the Earle of Oxford's and the Lord Harley's Libraries. See the Preface.		WB.	The Wife of Bath's Prologue and Tale	76
Hen.	A Balade to King Henry IV.	540
Hib.	Hibernic. Irish.
Hick.	Hicessii Thesaurus Linguarum Septentrionalium .
Hick. Somn.	Dr. Hickes's MS Additions to Somner's Saxon Dictionary in the Lord Harley's Library.
Hyp.	The Legende of Hypsipyle and Medea	348
Hyper.	The Legende of Hypermuestra	357
Ib.	Ibidem , in the same place.
It.	Italian.

A

GLOSSARY, &c.

A, Sometimes signifies In; as, Agame; in Game, or Jest. Tr. L. 3. 651. Sometimes, On or In; as, A Goddis half; On God's part, or be-half; A morrow; On the morrow, or In the morning. Tr. L. 5. 14. Anight; In the night. Arwo; In two. It is often put before Verbs in the Perfect Tense, as i and y are; as Ago, Gone; Aknowe, Known, &c. and sometimes in other Tenses; as Arede, Aslide, Ataft. It is put before Verbs instead of To, as Ado, Adine. It is sometimes prefixed to Nouns; as Avifoun, Avow, &c. And to Adverbs; as Anowe; Now; Anye; Nigh. Sometimes it stands for Have; as, awedded, &c. A per se; A by it self, An extraordinary and incomparable person, A Nonpareil. Cr. 78.

Abacke, Abak, Abake: Back, backwards, behind. Shede abake; Shed, spread or flowing down behind, or on the back. Cr. 222.

Akashed, Fr. 1347. [Or, Al bachsche, as in MS. Ch.] Cast down, ashamed; Astonished, amazed.

Abate, abatun, To overthrow, to cast down. p. 205, 4. To lessen. RR. 1061. Abated; Cast or thrust down. p. 193, 4; from the Fr. Abbate, Abbatu.

Abawid: Astonished, confounded. RR. 3646. Ashamed. Dr. Ch. 614.

Abedge, Abegge, Abigg: To abide; To suffer.

Aber: Abetting, assistance. Tr. L. 2. 357. where MS. Ch. reads Abestyng; but Ca. Counsayl.

Abide, Fr. 3076. To forbear, refrain.

Abie: To abide; To suffer for. It is used indifferently in a good and bad sense; as in RR. 5888. To find or receive benefit or advantage: But in MR. 1285. No. 715. &c. To suffer hurt, &c. And in this sense it comes from Buy, which is used in the same manner. See Aboughs.

Abiette: Cast away, removed, layd aside. RL. 345. Vile, mean, base. Boeth.

Abiu: Abideth. RR. 4977.

Abite: an Abode, Habitation. RR. 1914. Abideth. Tr. L. 1. 1092. where Ca. reads abydyth. Also Habit. CL. 1094. RR. 4914.

Abitt, Abitte: Abideth, dwelleth, stayeth. RR. 5012, 4989.

Able: Fit, proper. RR. 986. Fr. Habile. Also, To fit or qualify. Sc. 32. Abled: Enabled, qualified. p. 497, 4.

Ablyng: Enabling, qualifying, fitting. p. 364, 6. Lat. Aprans; and perhaps it should be there read apryng.

Ablyfions: Frequent washings used by Chymists. No. 877.

Abnormeth: Disfigureth, dilguisheth. Tr. L. 1. 328. From the Lat. Abnormis, Out of rule or order. But Ca. instead of it reads He bourneth.

Abode: Delay. Abodis: Delays. Tr. L. 3. 856.

Abote: Cast down, daunted. Ch. Dr. 1290. See Abate.

Abough, Aboughé, Aboughin: Bought; Suffered, paid dear for. See Abie.

Abounsin for Abouin, MR. 1040. About. Ms. Ch. has the whole Verse better, thus;
And about midnight wenten thei to rest.

Abraide. Awaked, Raised up. Out of her masidneß abraide, Fr. 2082. Awaked, raised out of her surprize; from the A. S. Abrebian, Anferre, eximere, ernere, liberare, Abproben, set free, delivered, and Metaph. Awaked. See Abreide.

Abrede (for so it should be read in one word, RR. 2563.) Abroad. It is also used as Braide, breyde, V. Out of his wit abrede; Run mad, or out of his senses. Cr. 45. See Abraide, Abreide, and Breide.

Abredge, Abregge: To abridge, shorten, lessen, abate. Tr. L. 3. 263. which is better read in MS. Sp.
But only to abregyn thy distress.

Abreide, Abreyd: To start up; To awake. Also Awaked, arose. See Breide.

Abfolute: Absolved, freed. Boeth.

Abufan: An Abuse. Tr. L. 4. 990.

Aby, Abyin, Abyith. See Abie, and Abedge.

Abytte: Abideth, continueth. Hen. 285. See Abitt.

Accesse: A Fever, an Ague. Bl. Kn. 136. Fr. Accès de fièvre is a Fit of an Ague. The Access of an Ague is the approaching or coming on of the Fit, and the Recess, when the Fit is over and leaves the Patient: In Lancashire they still call the Ague it self, The Access Blo.

Accidie: Sloth, Laziness, an Indisposition to Devotion. Accidia, Acidia, pro Acedia. Gr. Auidia, Vacuitas cura, vel Mororis abundantia.

Accord. See Acord.

Accordant: According, agreeing, agreeable to. Accordance: Accord, agreement. Boeth. Accordin: Agreed. LW. 168.

Accuse: To discover, betray. RR. 1591. Accusment: Accusation. Tr. L. 4. 556.

Achase: A contract, bargain; Buying. p. 362, 4. Achates: Purchases. Test. L. 2.

Achekid: Choaked. Ar. 123.

Accheve, Acheve: To accomplish. RR. 4600. To act. Ib. 5883. Acheved: Atchieved, obtained, attained. BD. 588. RR. 2049. Finished, ended. Fr. Achever, To finish, &c.

Acboke: To choak. Also, Surfeited.

Ackele, CL. 1076. (or as it is in Gower, L. 4. Akle) To cool.

Acloyeth: Cloyeth, surfeiteth. AF. 517.

Accie: To quiet, ease, relieve. RR. 3564, 3718. See Coye.
Acomber: To encumber; To lye down, to wallow. Prol. 510.
Acomberous, Acombrous: Cumbersome, troublesome. CV. 42.
Acombris, Ber. 2910. Acomered, Test. L. 3. Encombred, brought into great streights; Disturbed.
Acorde, Acordment: An agreement, bargain. Ber. 1837. Consent. She fell of his accorde; She consented. Fr. 2287.
Acquite: To discharge one's duty. Fr. 1957. See Aquite.
Acroke: Crooked, awry; Wrong. CL. 378.
Actis: Publick Acts; Histories, Chronicles. Mo. 1251.
Adassid: Dashed, put out of countenance. Fr. 2212.
Adawe: To awake. Tr. L. 3, 1126. Sq. 1932. In Spenser's Shepherd's Cal. it is used for Daunted.
Adele: Added, annexed. CL. 446.
Adewe: Adieu, farewell. Adewe bliff. Farewell happiness. p. 506, a.
Adherande: Adhering, cleaving together. Test.
Adine: To dine. Fr. Donner à diner; To entertain one at dinner. See A.
Admoneste: To admonish. See Amonestéd.
Adnull: To disannull, make void.
Ado, Adoe: An affair; To do. Nè're ado; Never to do. RR. 3036. Han ado; Have to do. Ib. 5080. There men shuld have ado; Where any difficulty should happen. See A.
Adon: Done, finished, at an end; Undone. Hyper. 32. Also, Adonis, the Favorite of Venus.
Adornemente: Ornament. Test. L. 2.
Adoune, Adowne: Down, downwards; Below. Mo. 1682. In Tr. L. 2, 199. MS. Sp. reads, adoune, instead of al down.
Adowne, Bl. Kn. 645. Adonis.
Adradd: Afraid, in great concern or trouble. RR. 1228.
Adriane for Ariadne, Ar. 261. Metri gratid.
Adue: Adieu, Farewell. Magd. 680.
Adventalle. See Aventaille.
Adversarie: Contrary. p. 204, a.
Adverte: To think, consider. Advertence: Consideration, thought, attention.
Advise, Advisement, are often printed for Avise, Avisement, V.
Advocacies: Law-Suits. Tr. L. 2, 1469.
Advoca's: Advocates, Patrons, Defenders. No. 1805.
Advourie: Adultery.
Afare: Affair, business. With so grete afare, Boeth. p. 370, a. Tanto strepitus; With so much noise. Perhaps it should be read, with so grete a fare; With so much ado. See Fare.
Affecte: Affection. Frende of affecte, and frende of chere; A truly affectionate or sincere friend, and one that is so only in countenance or appearance. RR. 5486. Affectis: Affections; Passions, desires, inclinations. Tr. L. 3, 1397.
Afede: To feed.
Aferde: Afraid. Tr. L. 2, 606. Where instead of Why that she ought aserde be, MS. Sp. hath Why she ought aserd to be; Which runs more smoothly.
Afere: In fear, afraid. RR. 4073.
Afered, Affered: Afraid. In No. 1798. it seems to signify Tormented with the Worm of Conscience mentioned before; Or the Poet might allude to the Custom of setting Fines and Amerciaments in Court-Leets by Afferers. See Bl. L. D. in Afferers; and Spelm. in Afferatores.
Affiance: Promise; Assurance, engagement. Hyper. 182. See Fr. Gl. in Affidare.
Affie: To promise, engage; To assure; To trust or put confidence in. RR. 3155.
Affirm: To confirm. Tb. 85. Fr. 1485. Fr. Affermir.
Affray: To affright, disturb; To assault; Alho, Fear. RR. 4397. Disturbance, danger, quarrel, fright.
Affrikah: An African. AF. 41. Scipio Africanus, the Roman General.
Afile: To file, polish. Well afile his tongue; Speak smoothly. Prol. 714. So in Gower. L. 1. Whan he hath his tonge afiled With soft speche; and Spencer, Fairy Queen. Cant. 1.
That old man of pleasing words had fore,
And well could file his tongue as smooth as Glas.

Afine, seems to be put for and fine in RR. 3690. and often in Ber. where sometimes we read, and fine, as in Verse, 570, 1233, &c. It may proceed from the Transcriber's mistaking e for a, which may easily happen, especially if the Copy be wore.
Aforced: Forced, ravished. p. 210, b.
Aforeyne: Afore; Overagainst. Tr. L. 2, 1188. aforneyst, Ca.
Aforne: Before. Aforne casse; Premeditated. Mo. 1332.
Afors: Of necessity. Ber. 1384.
Afoundit, PT. 631. f. leg. Afoundrit: Foundered.
Afraide, Afraied: Frighted. Perhaps in Dr. Ch. 296. it should be read, abraide [i. e. awaked] me out of my slepe. See Abraide.
Afraie. See Affray.
Afrete: Full freighted; Set full. St. in Fret. Perhaps it may signify Fretted, looking like Fret-work. RR. 3204. See Fret.
After kinrede: Remote Kindred or Relations. p. 153, b. Perhaps it should be read a fer kinrede. MS. Ch. has it, a fer.
Affyched: Affected. Test. L. 2.
Again, Againe: Against.
Against: Instead of. Mo. 2443, 2457.
Agast: To frighten, terrify. Tr. L. 2, 901. Afraid.
Agathrid: Gathered. Mo. 3265.
Agé, Ageynes, Ageyns: Against; Again.
Ageyne: Against.
Aghast: See Agast.
Agilir, Bal. 74. Perhaps it should be read a gilir, or A Gnilor, as in MR. 1213. or as it is often in PP. A Gylor, i. e. A deceiver.
Agili, Agilte: To offend; Offended. WB. 392. RR. 5833.
Ago. Sq. 1280. Agone. Tr. L. 4, 1180. Gone; Past.
Agramed: Grieved, displeased. Mo. 2283. See Grame.
Agre, Agree: To please, content; To be pleased. Fr.
Agreeer. Also, In good part, kindly. RR. 4349. Fr.
Agre. See Gre.
If harme agre me, whereto plaine I thenne? Tr. L. 1, 410.
If my Misfortune please me, to what purpose do I then complain? If this Reading of Chaucer be genuine, he seems to have read the passage differently from what it is in the Printed Editions of Petrarch, from whom this Song of Troilus is translated. The Passage is this,
S'a mia voglia ardo; ond' è'l pianto è'l lamento?
S'a mal mio grado; il lamentar che vale?
If I burn with my good will, whence this complaining and lamenting? If against my will what avails it to lament? Here is a plain opposition between a mia voglia, with my good will (or, as Chaucer translates it very significantly, at my own lust) and a mal mio grado, Against my will; which is quite lost in the present Reading. It is therefore probable that the place is corrupted, which may be thus restored;
And if that at mine owne lust I brenne,
From whence comith my wailing and my pleinte?
What that maugre me, whereto plaine I thenne?
This Conjecture is rendred probable by another Reading of this place which appears in the first Editions of this Poem by Caxton and Pynson;
If harme agre me——It will at first sight appear to any one ever so little conversant with MSS. considering the Ignorance of Transcribers and Similitude of Letters (particularly r and i, n and u;) how easily that maugre might be corrupted into harm agre. The last word agre coming in proceffe of time to be writ agre, the neglect or omission of the Dash introduced the present Reading. There is another Reading of Petrarch, which may favour that of Chaucer, If harme agre me——S'a mal mio grido——But the other seems preferable, as being more natural.
Agreabilite: Easiness of temper, Equanimity. Boeth.
Agredge, Agrede: To aggravate. p. 208, b: 210, b.
Agrese: Unkindly. Take it nat agrese; Take it not ill. Tr. L. 3, 864.
Agreve: To grieve. LW. 345. RR. 4629. To provoke, exasperate; Exacerbare. Boeth.
Agrimony: A Plant very useful in Obstructions of the Liver, Spleen, &c. and of a healing nature, being outwardly applied.
Agriſe: To affright; To fear, to be terrified. Mo. 2300, 2781,

2781, 2901. Tr. L. 2. 1435. To look horrible; Labor-scere. Boeth. AS. Agujan, Horrere. Agrofo: Was frightened, startled. Th. 125. Tr. L. 2. 930. Was grieved. Ph. 87.
Agrotid: Surfeited. Phyl. 61.
Agrucbe: To grudge. Agrucbed moche of this matere; Resented this matter very much. p. 148, a.
Aguiler: A needle-case. RR. 98. Fr. Aiguillier.
Aie: An Egg. Mo. 2802.
Aien: Again. Tr. L. 3. 720.
Ajust: To adjust, apply; Admovere. Boeth. p. 367, b.
Akeborns: Acorns. p. 364, b.
Akowne: Known. CL. 1199. To be akowne; To be conscious. I am akowne; I confels. Boeth.
Al, All, Alle: Although; Altogether, quite: CL. 252.
Al and some: One and all, every one. Al in one: All one, all the same. Ch. Dr. 670. The whole of the matter. Fr. 3160. Al newe: Anew. No. 2886. All ones:
All one. lb. 2212. Al affance.
PT. 361. In all: Wholly, altogether.
In alle wise: By all means. No. 2769. In Tr. L. 3. 334.
 instead of all thy daies, MS. Sp. and Ca. have at thy day;
 On the day appointed. See lb. 193, 194, 195, and 341.
 In No. 1509. MS. Ch. reads a lisher jape, instead of all the jape. Alle seems to be mistaken for atte, PT. 14.
 See Hope.
Alandes: Greyhounds. Prol. 2150.
Alargid: Bestowed. Ch. Dr. 156.
Albe, or Al be: Albeit, although.
Albification: A Term in Chymistry for whitening of Liquor or Metal. No. 826.
Alcaly, No. 831. is a Chymical Term used in opposition to Acid; And all substances that raise a Fermentation
 when mixt with Acids, are called Alkalions.
Alchamifer: A Chymist, Alchymist.
Alder, Aldir, Althir: Of all. At our alder cost; At our common expence. Prol. 801. Aldir prife; The praise of all. LW. 298. Althir last; Last of all. Bl. Kn. 504.
 Sometimes they are joynted to the following Superlative; as, Aldirlevisst; The dearest of all. Tr. L. 3. 240.
 In Tr. L. 3. 1271. instead of most alway, read (as it is in MS. Sp.) Althirmoost; Most of all.
Aldrian: A Star in the Neck of the Lyon. Sp. It is called Alderan.
Aledge, Alege: To diminish, lessen, abate, allay, alleviate; To ease, relieve. CN. 306. To exempt, excuse.
RR. 6626.
Allegeance, Alegement, Aleggement: Ease, relief; Ceasing; Diminution; Abatement; Release.
Alaide: Layd or Led, i. e. Brought about. CL. 1005.
 From the AS. Alæban, Ducere.
Aleis: Aloes. RR. 1377.
Alimbekis: Limbecks, Stills. No. 815.
Alessandre, Alisaander, Alisaundrie: Alexandria, a City of Egypt.
Alestake: A Maypole. Sp. f. A Sign-Post before an Ale-house. In No. 1835. it is called an Ale-house stake.
 See St.
Algate, Algates, Algatis: Always, every way; by all means. Algate by slight or apert violence; Whether by fraud or open force. Fr. 167. Although, nevertheless.
Algezir, Prol. 57. A City of Spain, supposed by some to be Gibraltar.
Alie, Alliance. See Allie, Alliance.
Alisaander: Alexander. See Alessandre.
Alise for a lite: A little. CL. 1043.
All, Alle: See Al.
Allective: Alluring, enticing. RL. 14.
Allegance, Allegiance: See Allegeance.
Aley: An Alley, a Walk. Fr. Allée.
Alight: To condescend. Fr. 1930.
Allie: To marry. No. 303. To make an Alliance. Also,
 Allied, having Friends or Allies. Mo. 555. Alliance:
 Friendship. RR. 4964. For our alliance; To be related to us. ABC. H.
Almagest: A Work of Astronomy written by Ptolemy. Sp.
Almandris: Almond-Trees. RR. 1363.
Almesse, Almessis, Almose, Almous: Almes.
Almesse: Almshouse.
Almight: Almighty. Hen. 362.
Almoigner: An Almoner.
Amath: The first Star in the Horns of Aries, whence the first Mansion of the Moon takes its Name. Sp.

Aloggis: Lodged. PT. 374.
Alonde: Upon land. Alonde for to sette; To land, to put to shore. Ar. 281.
Alonely: Only, solely. Boeth.
Alonge: On him alonge; Long of him, for his sake, on his account. Tr. L. 3. 784.
Alose: To praise, commend. Alofid, RR. 2354. Praised.
Alonib, Sq. 696. is interpreted To praise: It seems rather to be two words, Alon the (as it is in MS. Ch.) contracted in pronunciation to Rhime to Yowthe; of which many Instances occur in this Author; as By me, No.
1226. Ber. 1115, &c. (for By me) to answer to Tyme;
 and Tr. L. 2. 991. to Prime; To'ib (for To the) No. 684.
 rhymes to Sorb; Fro'y (for Fro you) Tr. L. 1. 5. to Joy.
 So in Gower. L. 3. Tome is put for To me;
To speke a goodly word tome
For all the gold that is in Rome.
 Or perhaps it may be read to me distinctly, and then
Rome must be pronounced Ro--mé, to answer it. See Sone. This Passage in Chaucer should be thus read;
considering thy yowthe,
So feelingly thou spekest, I allow The
As to my dome
 That is, Thou speakest so sensibly, that I allow thee, in my judgment, there is none, &c.
Alowe: To allow, approve; To make allowance for,
 excuse, pardon. For my writing me alowe, Mo. 3309.
 is the same with, Of my writing have me excused, lb. 3296.
 It also signifies Low, down. CL. 1201.
Alpes, RR. 658. Bulfinches. See Ray and Will. of Birds.
Als, Alfe, Alwa: And, also.
Also: As. Also fikir as; As sure as. Mo. 1278.
Alterate: Altered, changed. Cr. 227.
Altercation: Strife, contention, brawling, debate, dispute. RL. 132.
Althir: See Alder.
Altitude is often put for Latitude in Astr.
Alye: See Allie.
Amaid, Ch. Dr. 202. Amayide, Ber. 2645. Amazed, sur-prized.
Amalfrie, Amaistrien: To master, get the better of.
Amalgaming: A Chymical Term signifying the mixing of Quicksilver with some melted Metal. No. 792.
Amased: Dark, confused. See Amaid.
Amate: Daunted, confounded; Distressed. See Mate.
Amayide: See Amaid.
Ambolife, Embolife, Embolyfe: Oblique. p. 445, a. l. antep.
 And perhaps Embolite, p. 442, a. l. 25. should be so read; as most of the Old Editions have it in that place.
Amenda: To recover, cure. PW. 70.
Amendis: Amendments. In Mo. 3031. it may be read a- mendin; The common Editions having the Verse thus,
With strength to amend such be made,
i. e. Such must be made to mend, or reformed, by force.
Amense: To diminish. Fr. Amensifer, To mince, make small or thin.
Amercid: Fined. Amerciaments: Fines.
Amerous, Bal. Lad. 230. Amirous, RR. 2901. Amorous.
Ameved: Moved; Changed.
Amias: Perhaps for Amiens, A City of Picardy. RR. 3826.
Amiddes, Amiddis: In the middle, in the midst of.
Amiled: Enameled. RR. 1080.
Aminisbe: To diminish.
Amindes for Amendes. Dr. Ch. 526.
Amirous. See Amerous.
Amis: To miss, fail. Fr. 2852.
Amonested: Admonished. p. 201, b. But perhaps it should be read Amonessid, as in MS. Ch.
Among, RR. 2842. See Emong. Evre among; Oftentimes, every now and then. RR. 3771, 3881. Dr. Ch. 298.
Amonisbe: To admonish, advise. Amonition: Admonition.
Amorettes: Love-Stories. RR. 892, 4755.
Amorily: Amorously. CL. 1383.
Amorron: In the morning. Tr. L. 2. 405.
Amortised: Dead; Killed; Mortified.
Amoved: Moved. p. 364, a.
Aphibologies: Forms of speaking, wherein one Sentence hath contrary senses. Sp. Ambiguities. Tr. L. 4. 1406.
Anyrid:

Amyrid: Taken out of the mire, helped at a dead lift. Ber. 2072.

Amyr ase: Ambes Ace. Ber. 2220.

An: If, if so be. FL. 528. On. RR. 2270. Ber. 2438.

Anaie, No. 883. Read A! Nais: Ah! Nay.

Anane: Anon, presently, very soon.

Ancille: A handmaid. ABC. Lat. Ancilla.

Ancre: An Anchor. RR. 3780.

And for On. Fort. 74. It occurs often for If; but then it should perhaps have been An; as, Fr. 3025. No. 155, 279, 82c. p. 485, b. l. 29. FL. 528. PT. 614. But and; But if. No. 1267.

Anest: Against. PT. 442.

Angir: Anger; Anguish; Smart, pain. RR. 1926, 3185.

CB. Angerdd. Angirliche: Angrily. Mo. 2586. Raskly.

Anguis, p. 502, b. Anguisbous: Full of anguish and pain, or trouble. RR. 1755. Anxious.

Anguisb: Anxiety. p. 375, a. Narrowness of Fortune; Angustia. Boeth.

Anie: Nigh, near.

Anight: In the night-time. Hyp. 108.

Anker: An Anchor. Fort. 38.

Anlas, Prol. 359. or rather Anlace: Anelacins, Anelatus, Hanelacins; often mentioned in Mat. Paris. sometimes as synonymous with Sica, a short sword or dagger; and sometimes as a distinct weapon from it: It was worn hanging at a girdle. Wats in his Gloss. thinks it was something like the Irish Skein, or our Wood-Knife.

Annexid: Tied, bound to. RR. 4811.

Anney, Anoie, for Annoie: Uneasiness, concern, vexation, trouble; Harm. Also, To hurt, to damage, to be troublesome; To be vexed; Pigere. Boeth. Anoied of his own life; Weary of his life. p. 204, b. Fr. Ennuy, Ennuyer, Ennuyé.

Anoious: Hurtful, troublesome, difficult.

Annuellere: Secular, one that receives a yearly stipend. No. 1033.

Annunciate: Foretold. Mo. 127.

Anointen with worde: To flatter. RR. 1057.

Anowe: Now. Ber. 1792.

Anoynt: Anointed. Hen. 274.

Aniem: An Anthem. No. 3169.

Antilegius, Dr. Ch. 1064. Antilochus, the Son of Nestor and Eurydice, killed in the Trojan War.

Antiphonere: A Book of Antiphones, or Anthems sung alternately in Chords. No. 3028.

Anvelt: An Anvill. Dr. Ch. 1165.

Anye: See Anie.

Apaile: Payd, satisfied; Content. Tr. L. 5. 1248. Il apaide; Dissatisfied. Sq. 1081.

Apaire: To impair, hurt; To injure, abuse; To be hurt, to suffer, to fare worse. Tr. L. 2. 339.

Aparaille, Aparailin, Aparayle: To prepare, adorn. Aparailing: Preparation. Fr. Appareil, Preparation, provision, furniture.

Aparences: Appearances.

Apasfed, Apast: Passed, past.

Ape is used for a Fool. MR. 281. Put on his head an ape; Made a Fool of him, imposed upon him. No. 1510.

Aveche: To impeach, accuse. Bal. 277.

Apeide. See Apaide.

Apeire. See Apaire.

Apeise: To appease. BD. 393.

Apende: To appertain, belong. Mo. 2606.

Apere: To appear. See Apaire.

A per se. See A.

Apert: Open; Openly. Privy and apert; In private and in publick. WB. 1114. Apart. Al ne're he in al aperte, Tr. L. 3. 87. is better read in MS. Sp. All nere he Malapert, i. e. Although he were not malapert or over-forward. Apertly: Openly, plainly.

Apeted: An appetite. Test. p. 505, b.

Apetiith: Coveteth, desireth. Hyp. 215.

Apies: Opiates. Hyper. 109.

Aplace: In place, i. e. In esteem, honour, respect. Hen. 50.

Aplide: Applied. BD. 413.

Apocalipse, Apocalyps: The Revelation of St. John.

Apoinct: To appoint; To resolve, determine. Tr. L. 2. 691. Apoinctidin: Appointed. Ib. L. 3. 455.

Aposle, Aposin: To examine, to ask questions. No. 374. See Appose.

Apostata: An Apostate. Apostates: Apostates. I. Upl. Appaire. See Apaire.

Appallid: Grown pale, pined away, decayed.

Apparail, Apparelling. See Aparaille.

Apparaunce, Apparence: Appearance.

Apparelmens: Ornaments. Boeth.

Apparene, Ber. 2040. f. for Apparence; i. e. Shewing Appearances or Sights by Juggling, &c.

Appaire. See Apaire.

Apperceiving: Perceiving.

Appert. See Apert.

Appertinaunt, Appertinent: Appertaining, belonging.

Appointid: Resolved. Appointid him in one; Fixed upon one. Sq. 1111.

Appose, Apposin: To oppose or object against. Fr. 333. See Appose.

Apprise for Emprise: An Enterprize, a Trial.

Approped, Appropried: Appropriated.

Approve: To prove. CL. 96. Approvis: Informers. Fr. 79.

Apprentise: An Apprentice; A novice. RR. 687.

Apresse: In a presse or crowd, together. Fort. 52.

Apriſe, as Appriſe. In BD. 577. it should perhaps be read a preſe. I have made a preſe; I have given proof.

Appoir: To appropriate. RL. 284.

Aptes, p. 519, a. A Contraction of Aptitudes, says St. It seems rather to be a Corruption of Apetites, which follows a few lines after.

Aqueintable: Easy to be acquainted with, easy of access, affable, complaisant. RR. 2213. It is expressed by Gode of aqueintance, Ib. 3892.

Aqueinte: To acquaint, to make acquaintance with. Dr. Ch. 532. Acquainted. RR. 3080, 5200.

Aquilone: Aquilo, the North Wind.

Aquite: To acquit, quit; To requite, recompense. RR. 6742.

Ar, Are. Test.

Arace: To tear, pluck off, pull down, draw out by force; Abriperre. Boeth. Fr. Arracher.

Araied: Drest. Fr. 2076. Furnished. Ib. 2743. See Aray.

Araised: Raised. Ch. Dr. 1136.

Aray, Araye: To prepare. Fr. 1982. To set in order. Ib. 2001. Preparation. Ib. 1305. Clothing, raiment, habit. WB. 927. Case, condition. Ib. 902. Mo. 509. Order. Fr. 1292. Pomp, shew, splendor. Ib. 1966. Baggage. No. 578. See Aray.

Arbitre, Arbitree, Arbitrement: Choice, free-will. Boeth. See Ib. p. 398, a. l. 7.

Arblast, PT. 241. A Sling, a warlike Engine to cast or shoot stones or darts withall. See Men. Fr. in Arblast. Arblastirs: Engineers, such as use Arblasts. RR. 4196.

Archangel, RR. 915. The Herb so called, a dead nettle.

Archidiacon: An Archdeacon. Ch. Dr. 2136. Fr. Archidiacon.

Arche, Bal. Lad. 127. An Ark, in allusion to Noah's Ark.

Archibishop: An Archbishop. Fr. 239.

Archidekin: An Archdeacon. In Fr. 54. read Archidekenis. H. 1. hath Erchedekens; all the old Edd. Archedekynis or Archedekinis.

Archivius (or, as in MS. Ch. Archer wryis) Fr. 2228. seems by being opposed to Feble wryis, to mean Strong, lusty Termagants, Virago's. See WB. 225, &c.

Ardaunt: Ardent, hot. Boeth.

Areche: To speak; from the AS. Apeccan, Aſſequi; Narrare. Unneth might he areche O word; He could scarce get out or speak one word. Ber. 3000.

A red, PT. 152. for Ared, Gueſſed; from Arede. See Rede.

Aredy, for Al redy, or Ready. PT. 659.

Average: Arrear. Prol. 604.

Arere: Backward; Behind; After. Fr. Arriere. I ſet arere; I poſtpone, ſet light by. Cr. 355. Arere ſopor; After Supper. PT. 365.

Arevid: Reared, raised. Ber. 3030.

Arefoneh: Reasoneth, diſcourſeth, talketh with; Anſwereth. RR. 6220.

Areſt, Areſte: To ſtop; To ſeize upon. Fr. Arreſter. Alſo a Seizure; Reſpite, delay; Confinement; A Charge, engagement; A Judicial Sentence or Decree. Fr. Arreſt. To ben areſt, LW. 397. To forbear, or refrain from doing a thing beneath him. Fr. S'arreſter.

Areit;

Arett: To impute unto, accuse, charge one with; To account. Aret, Arettid: Imputed.

Areyse: To raise. p. 201, a.

Argoil: Clay. Sk. Potter's earth. No. 834. Clay used by Chymists for Luting or closing their Vessels, to prevent the Evaporation of their Contents.

Argumentid: Argued, reasoned. Tr. L. 1. 378. But Ca. reads it, Thus argued he in his begynnynge.

Arid: Plowed. Fa. L. 1. 485.

Ariete: Aries, one of the twelve Signs of the Zodiack. Tr. L. 5. 1189.

Arist: Arose.

Ariete: Tr. L. 4. 1592. for Ariete, V.

Arivale: Arrival. Bl. Kn. 485.

Arived: Driven to land. Boeth. Also, Riven, split asunder. Evill arived mate thei be; A Curse, May they be split asunder. RR. 1068. See Rive.

Ark: An arch, compass. Ark diurnal; The arch which the Sun makes in it's daily course. Bl. Kn. 591.

Armelesse: Without an arm. Mo. 317.

Armen: An Armenian.

Armgrete: Very great or large; f. As thick as a man's arm. Prol. 2147.

Armine: Ermine, A furr. AL. 527.

Armipotent: Powerful or mighty in Arms. Prol. 1984.

Armitage: A Hermitage. Ch. Dr. 930.

Armonie: Harmony. RR. 4247.

Armorike Britaine. Fr. 2275. Basse-Bretagne in France, anciently called Britannia Armorica; called Britaine. Ib. 2538.

Armures: Arms; Armour.

Arne: Are. Vide Hick. Gr. AS. p. 35.

Arou: To assemble together. La. 541.

Arowe: In a rowe, successively, one after another. WB. 1254. RR. 7606. An arrow. Ib. 963.

Arowme: Roaming, wandering. Fa. L. 2. 32. See Romin.

Arpies: Harpies, Furies, RL. 81.

Arraie, Array: Furniture. Sp. See Aray.

Arreste. See Arest.

Arrete, Arrette. See Arett.

Arismetrike: Arithmetick. Fr. 958.

Arist: Erst, before, formerly.

Arte, Artin: To force, constrain. Tr. L. 1. 389. CL. 46. the word is so used in Lidgate's Life of St. Edmund. MS. Harl. Fol. 59. where the Saint is introduced speaking to Hinguar,

*It passeth thy myht and pompos violence
In cristes feith to arte my conscience.*

That is, It passeth your power, &c. to force my Conscience in any thing relating to the Christian Faith.

Aryn: Brazen. PT. 569. from the AS. Ape, Brass, copper.

Ascape: Escape. RR. 6515.

Ascaunce, Ascauncis: Askew, aside, sideways; In a side view.

Ascendant, is that part of the Heavens which ascends above the Horizon in the East. See Horscope.

Aslakid for Aslakid, Ber. 494. See Aslake.

Aservid: Deserved. Ber. 1637.

Asbate: Buying, dealing. Prol. 573. Acate, MS. Ch. from the Fr. Achat, Acheter; whence Catour, Caterer, Fr. Acheteur, A buyer, anciently written Acatour. Gl. Lob.

Ashin: Ashes. Tr. L. 2. 539.

Askape: Escape. p. 201, a.

Askauncis. See Ascaunce.

Askeis for Askin: To ask. Mo. 2883. Or perhaps for ake us. So Com.

Askid: Required. BD. 356.

Askis: Ashes. Mo. 2883.

Aslake: To slacken, abate. Aslakid was his mode; His anger was appealed. Prol. 1762.

Aslide: To slide; To depart, pass away. Fr. 2548.

Aslope: Awry, cross; Wrong; Sloping with a byass, not going directly to the mark. RR. 4464. Contrary to expectation.

Asondry: Asunder.

Asortid: Befotted. BD. 682.

Asperance: Hope. CL. 1033. Fr. Esperance.

Aspie, Aspien, Aspyin: To espy, see; to find out by diligent search and enquiry. No. 3010.

Aspis: Asps, or Aspin-trees. Hyper. 87. A sort of Poplar.

Aspre: Rough, sharp, harsh; Angry, ill-natured. Aspreness; Roughness, &c.

Asquare, PT. 596, 643. On the square, clear; On his guard, at a distance.

Assaie: To try, tempt; Trial, experience; Endeavour. Assaies, Assays: Essays, trials.

Assant: An assault. RR. 7338.

Ass, Mo. 686. This was printed by mistake out of MS. Ch. it being only intended as a different reading. All the old Editions, and some MSS. give the common reading, which is this;

Thy fice fortune hath turned into an ace.

Assencion: Ascension, ascending. Assendid: Ascended.

Assent: Consent; Combination; Judgment; Sentence.

Assentaunt: Consenting.

Asseth: Assent. Sp. RR. 5600. f. To answer; from the AS. Ayedian, Affirmare.

Assiege: A Siege. Tr. L. 1. 465.

Assine, Assyne: To assign, appoint.

Assize, Assize: Order, size. Sk. Place, site, situation. RR. 1238. Mo. 2783. Assised: Sure. Sp. Confirmed. Boeth. Settled. Hen. 236.

Assoile, Assoilin, Assoyle: To absolve; To answer, resolve. Assailing: Absolution.

Assomoned: Summoned. CL. 170.

Assure: To confirm, establish; To confide in. Tr. L. 1. 681. Assurance. An. 334. Assuren, Assurid: Assured.

Assured: Azure, sky-colour'd.

Astare. See Asterre.

Astate: Estate.

Aitance. See Al.

Asterlagour, or (as in MS. Ch.) Asterlabore: An Astro-labe. MR. 101.

Astert, Asterte: To escape; To let go, or pass; To leap, To shun; Also, Escaped. In Prol. 1707. it should be two words, At a stert; At a start, on a sudden.

Astined, Astoned: Astonished, in a consternation.

Astrangled: Strangled.

Astrolabe: A Mathematical Instrument, serving to take the height of the Sun or Stars. See Harri's Lex. Techn.

Astrolagiens: Astrologers.

Astryvd betwene hope and fere: Distracted between hope and fear. Ber. 2429.

Asure. See Assured.

Asware: Aware. PT. 586.

Asweved: Amazed, confounded, as in a dream. Fa. L. 2. 41. See Sweven.

Aswich, Aswiche: Presently; Greatly, exceedingly. AS. Spide.

Aswoun, Aswound: In a swoon. Sq. 494.

Atamed. See Attamed.

Ataste: To taste. Tef. L. 3.

Atcheve: To achieve, obtain. Tr. L. 4. 79. MS. Sp. reads the Verse thus;

The toon is shent, and all your lust shall cheve;

That is, All your desire shall succeed. See Acheve.

At day; At break of day. No. 2747.

Atemper: Moderate, modest. Atemper sylneß, Boeth. Modesta taciturnitas.

Atenes: At once, altogether. MR. 966.

Ateynt: Attainted; Cast in Law. Ber. 2673, 2852, 3018. See Attainte, Atteinte.

Atinkin me: Seem to me; as Metbinks, Metbought.

The whiche right fore wouldin atinkin me,

Tr. L. 5. 878. Which I should be very sorry to think; Or, Which would be very disagreeable to me; Perhaps from the AS. Dangcian or Dancian, Gratificari.

At this halfe. See Halfe.

Atbre: Asunder; Into three parts. Prol. 2935.

Atbroied: Strangled, choaked. p. 496, a.

Atire, Tr. L. 1. 181. for Attire, V.

A one, Atoon: Being at one, agreed. Also, Tone. CCr. 125.

Atones, as Atenes.

Attaine: To effect. Fr. 2320. Attained is printed wrong for Attamed, Ch. Dr. 596.

Attaint: Afflicted, indisposed, disordered; from the Fr. Attaint. See Atcynt.

Attamed, Attamel: Set on broach. Sp. In Mo. 931. (where H. 1. reads it tamed) it seems to signify Begun; from the Fr. Entamer, which also signifies To cut, to have the first cut. Also, To disparage. Ch. Dr. 1128. It is printed wrong attained. Ib. 596.

Atte: A', and sometimes At the; as, Attetfull, MR. 1197. Atte the full, MS. Ch.

Atteinte: Attained; Perceived, understood. Boeth. See Aeynt, Aainte.

Attemper: To moderate. See Atemper.

Attemperate: Moderate, temperate. p. 209, b.

Attemperance: Temperance. Pars. p. 207, a. AL. 508.

Attempre: Tempered. See Atemper. In Ch. p. 147, b. some read Attempre wepyng, instead of A temperate wepyng.

Attemprid: Temperate; Calm. Ch. Dr. 1100.

Attendaunce: Attention. BD. 650.

Attentive: Diligent, ready to attend, observant. Sq. 804.

Atterly, p. 201. b. Grievous, heinous, terrible. AS. Atrephic from Atrep, Poison.

Attire: Clothing, dress. Simple of attire. Tr. L. 1. 181. Dressed plain; Simplex munditijs. Hor. But the plainness of Creside's Dress being described before, the reading of MS. Sp. seems better; Simple of Berynge, i. e. Of an easy carriage, or behaviour, which is expressed by Simple of Port, in Gower, L. 4. f. 69, b. c. 1.

Atwain, Atwinn, Atwinne: In two; Asunder. Went atwinne; Parted from one another. No. 1191. See Twinne.

Awene: Between.

Awinn. See A wain, and Twinne.

Awite: To twit, upbraid, reproach. Bal. 1068.

Awixte: Betwixt.

Atwo, A:oo: In two, asunder. Read atwo, p. 208, b. 1. 43.

Ayyrd: Dressed. AL. 81.

Availle: To descend. Sk. To fall down. Tr. L. 3. 627. (Caule. Ca.) To sink. p. 394, b. To bring down. Also, Profit, advantage. CL. 1253. Value. Of esyer availle; Of less value. Ib. 116.

Availen. See Availle.

Availin: To unveil, uncover. MR. 14.

Avale: To fend or let down. RR. 1803. See Avail.

Avaricious: Covetous.

Avauance: Advancement, power, Mo. 2155. Profit. Prol. 246. To advance, prefer. Tr. L. 5. 1434.

Avauant: To brag or boast; Improved. RR. 4790. Forward. Ib. 3958. Before. No. 2808. Also, Vaunting, bragging, boasting.

Avauantage: To profit. Experience Avauantageh him; Is usefull, profitable to him. Prol. RL. 95.

Avauanter, Avauantiir, Avauantour: A vain boaster, a Braggadocio. Tr. L. 3. 309, 310. But perhaps it should be two words, A vauntour.

Authour: An Author.

Audience: Hearing.

Avenaunte: Agreeable, beautiful, comely, decent. RR. 1263. Fr. Avenant.

Aventaile, Tr. L. 5. 1557. The forepart of the Armour. Sk. A Surcoat worn over the Armour. Kyn. Ventail is used by Spenser for that part of the Helmet which is lifted up. See the Glossary to his Works.

Aventurous: Adventurous, bold.

Aventure: Adventure; Chance, accident; Fortune.

Aventurous. See Happes.

Aver: Riches, bribery. Sk. Goods, chattels, possessions.

Averel: The Month April. I should chuse to read Averel or Apparaile (as MS. Sp. hath it for Aprilis, Tr. L. 1. 156.) in the first Verse of the Prologues; thus, Whanne Averel, or,

Whanne Apparaile had with his shouris fote
The drought of March ypercid to the rote.

Aught: Ought, from Owe. Tr. L. 3. 1801. Any thing. For ught; Notwithstanding all. Aught-where; Any where. Hyp. 173.

Augrim seems to be a Corruption of Algorithm; by which is meant the Sum of the Principal Rules of Numeral Computation or Common Arithmetick. Augrim Stones, MR. 102. Pebbles to cast accounts. Sp. Nombrs of Augrim; Arithmetical Numbers, p. 440, b.

Avise: To consider. FL. 187. To observe. Tr. L. 2. 276.

Also, Advice, opinion; Deliberation, thought. In Prol. 1987. it should be two words, A vise, or as MS. Ch. a veze, i. e. A voice or noise. Avise of words; Deliberate in speaking. Hyp. 154. Avised: Lookt after, taken care of. p. 153, a. Avisee: Well advised, considerate. Fl. 215. Aviseement, Aviseeneß: Counsel, consideration, deliberation. Aviseend, Avising: Considering. Aviseib, or Avise you: Consider, be advised. Full avised: Well considered, well advised. Tr. L. 2. 605.

Avision: A vision. Avisionns: Visions. Tr. L. 5. 374.

Aulter: An Altar.

Aumere: A border; Fringe. RR. 2271.

Aumener, RR. 2087. A store-houle, a store-room, or more generally any place to lay up things in; as, a Cupboard, &c. In Lat. Almarium, corruptly for Armarium; In some places it is called Aumbry, or Aumery. Ray's Coll. PP. useth Almarie in the same sense, Past. 14.

Avarice hath almaries and iron-bounden cofers.

Auncetirs: Ancestors. Prol. 143. Aunciire: Ancestry. WB. 1156. Fr. Ancêtres.

Auntriß: Ventureth, runneth a risk. MR. 1097.

Avold, p. 480, b. for Void, V.

Avontir: An Adulterer. Avouterers: Adulterers.

Avow: A vow, a promise; To vow; To profess; To espouse a cause. Hen. 243. Avowable form; An allowed form or manner, that may be avowed, or publicly owned, as being lawful. RL. 262.

Avowries: Religious Professions. J. Upl. p. 593, a.

Austrine, Cr. 154. Perhaps it should be read, with a sterne [or, austere] loke and chere. Asterne is used by Douglas, for Austere.

Autentike: Authentick, of good authority.

Auriate: Golden; Gilt.

Aurore: Aurora, the dawn, or the morning.

Auer, p. 208, b. An Author; Also, An altar, in old Fr. Aulier. Gl. Lob.

Autremite, Mo. 486. Another attire. Sk.

Awate: To wait, expect; To watch, observe. Also, Lying in wait; Observation, watching; Caution, circumsppection. Tr. L. 3. 458. Delay. Ib. 580. Observation. Bl. Kn. 409. Have her in awate; Have a watchful eye upon her. Mo. 750. Sittith in awate; Sitteth, or lieth in waite. Fr. 393. Instead of, without awate, Tr. L. 3. 580. Ca. hath, without naying, i. e. naying, saying nay. Awating on; Observing. Fr. 788. Awatith for Awatith.

Awaiwarde: Aside. Mo. 1839. Awaiwarde I me drowe; I withdrew aside. BD. 89.

Award: To determine, give judgment.

Awaytour: One that lieth in waite. Boeth. See Awate.

Awedded: Have wedded. p. 485, a.

Aweynyd: Weaned. Ber. 512.

Awbaped, Awbapid: Astonished, amazed, daunted. Tr. L. 1. 316. Awbapid and amate; In great confusion and distress. Bl. Kn. 169.

Awreke, Awrekin: To revenge. Also, Revenged. AS. pprecan, apprecan, Uleisci.

Axed, Axid, Axit: Asked. Axist: Askest. Axith: Askesth.

Axen, Axes, Axeße, Axis: A Feaver. See Accesse.

Ay: An Egg. Gam. 1207. Ever, always. Ay in one: Continually. No. 3089.

Aye: Again. Ber. 641. It should have been printed, Ayé.

Ayel, Prol. 2478. Always, ever. Sk. Sp. Saturn there speaks to Venus;

I am thine ayel, redy at thy will.

Perhaps Ayel may there signify Ancestor, Progenitor, Fr. Aycul. MS. Ch. hath it thus;

I am thyin redy all at thy will.

H. 1. & al. thyn all [or al] redy. From these Readings compared together, we may guess at another, which perhaps is the right;

I am thyn ay, al redy at thy will.

Ayen, Ayenist, Ayenße: Against; Intead of. Mo. 2444, &c.

Ayenward: Back. Tr. L. 3. 751. p. 441, b. On the other side. BD. 18.

Bachelrie:

B.

- Bachelrie: A company of young men or Batchelors. Fr. 1300.
Backhalfe: The back-side, the back-part.
Backir more: More backwards. BD. 85.
Baft, Ber. 1687. Abast or Aft; A Sea-Term, signifying those parts which are towards the Stern of the Ship. AS.
Be-æftan, bæftan, Behind, after.
Bagge: To swell; To disdain. Sk. Baggish foule and lo-kish faire, Dr. Ch. 624. She swells with pride and disdain, though she looks fair. Sk. Baggingly, RR. 292. Haughtily, disdainfully. Sk.
Baighid: Baited. Mo. 2588.
Baillie: A Governour; The Office or Jurisdiction of a Bailly or Governour; Government, management, care. RR. 4217, 4302, 7574. See Men. Fr. in Bailif.
Baine. See Bane.
Baiten: To feed; To bait. Tr. L. 1. 192. Baited: Taken by a bait. RR. 1612.
Balais of entaile, AL. 536. Precious stones engraved. Sp. Balay is a Bastard Ruby, so called from the place whence it is brought, said by some to be Balassia, a Kingdom on the Continent higher up than Pegu and Bengal; by others, the City Balasam. See Men. Fr. in Balay, and Men. It. in Balascio.
Balaunce: Doubt, suspense. To put in balaunce; To hazard, to put to an uncertainty; To waver, to entertain any doubt. Fr. Mettre en balance. Lay in balaunce; Lay a wager on my Master's side. No. 622.
Bale: Harm, misfortune; Trouble, sorrow. Balefull: Hurtfull, miserable, wofull. Balis: Troubles, &c.
Balies. See Balais, &c.
Balk: Mr. Ray in his Coll. says, that Balk is the same with Scamnum in Lat. i. e. a piece of Land which is either casually overslipped and not turned up in plowing, or industriously left untouched by the Plow for a Boundary between Lands, or some other use. Whence it is that Com. says, that the meaning of In Goddis worde tilleth (as he reads it according to some Editions) many a balke, is, They break up the limits and bounds that God hath set in his word to keep them in. Mo. 2428.
Balkes, MR. 518. Ph. 26. Poles layd over a Stable or other Building for the Roof. The Balk or Bawk; The Summer-Beam or Dormant. Ray's Coll.
Ball: Ball within ther hode; The Ball which their Hood covers. i. e. The head. Ber. 3126. Her that tournish as a balle, i. e. Fortune. Sc. 227.
Ballid: Bald. Prol. 2520.
Balfaffe, PT. 153. A Quarter-Staff, a great Staff like a Pole or Beam. Ray's Coll.
Bande. See Bende.
Bandon: Secta, Sodalitium. Sk. It may secondarily signify a Band, Company or Retinue, RR. 1163. though primarily it signifies a Banner. Du Fresne gives several instances, where the old Fr. Poets use the word for Arbitrium, Will, pleasure; as à votre, à son bandon, At your, at his pleasure, which sense suits very well here; and thence it may signify, Custody, possession. p. 496, b. But a bandon, in RR. 3242. should be read abandon, in one word; and to give his gode in abandon is the same with Dare in abandonum, i. e. To deposit one's Goods or Estate as a Pledge to be forfeited in case of Non-performance of Promise or Agreement. Fr. Gl. in Abandonum. See also Men. Fr. in Abandonner, and Men. It. in Abbandonare. The Fr. Phrases, Mettre tout à l'abandon, To put all things in disorder; Laisser tout à l'abandon, To leave all at random, To forsake or neglect, may serve to give some light to this Passage.
Bane: Mischief, prejudice, destruction. AS. Bana.
Banir: A Banner. An. 30.
Baraine, Barain: Barren; Void, destitute.
Barbe: A mask, a vizard. Sk. Sp. It seems to be a Dress wore by Widdows, perhaps some Wimple or Muffler wrapt about the Chin. Tr. L. 2. 110. where Ca. hath Wympyl instead of Barbe.
Barbican: A Fortrefs, a Watch-Tower.

Bargaret, FL. 348. Tripudium pastoritium; A Dance used by Shepherds from the Fr. Berger, a Shepherd. Sk. It seems to signify a Song in praise of the Daizy, which in Fr. is Marguerite, or as it is called, Ib. 350. Margarete, to which the word may allude. The Burden of the Song seems to have been, Si douce est la margarete; So sweet is the Daizy.

Barkfate: A Tanner's Vat for Bark. Bal. 901.

Barme: The bosome, the lap. Sq. 651. AS. Bapme:

Hence Barm-cloth: An Apron.

Baronage: Barons; Nobility. La. 240.

Barr, in the North signifies the Gate of a City, as Botham Bar, &c. in York. Ray's Coll. Have the barr, al. Heve of barr, Prol. 552. Heave the Bar, or Lint the door off the hinges. According to H. 1. this Verse should be thus read;

Ther nas no dore that he nolde heve off barre.

There is an Expression not unlike this (but corrupted) in Lidgate's Life of St. Edmund, where speaking of Thieves breaking in to rob the Shrine; he says,

Oon with a leuour to leffe the doore on barre.

f. One with a Leaver lift the door off the Bar.

Barring. See Paling.

Rasse, CL. 797. A kiss. Fr. Baiser. Lat. Basium. The Poet seems here to have in his eye a Dittick in the First Elegy of Maximianus, commonly ascribed to Corn. Gallus;

*Flammea dilexi, modicumq; tumentia labra,
Qua mihi gustanti balia plena darent.*

Baselardis: Daggers. Mo. 2858.

Batailed: Embattled. RR. 4162.

Batailous: Ready for battle or fighting. RL. 327.

Bath: Both. MR. 1083. Bashe, Mo. 1382. seems to be corrupted from Baske.

Battelled: Indented like Battlements. Mo. 973.

Baude: Bold, brave. RR. 5674.

Bauderie: Pimping. Tr. L. 3. 398.

Baudrick: Furniture. Sp. Sk. A Girdle, a Belt: Hence Spenser calls the Zodiack, The Bauldrick of the heavens.

Baudrie, or (as it is in the common Editions) Brandrie: Embroidery. See Sk. in Bawdry.

Bandy: Filthy, nasty, slovenly. No. 646.

Bawfin buttokid, Bal. 897. Having large brawny buttocks. Sk. Frontem albam in Virgil's Description of Priamus's horse, is by Douglas translated, Bawland face. See Gl. V. Spenser in Mother Hubbard's Tale has — Stare on him with big looks bawenwide; That is, (as the Glossary explains it) Extended as with wonder.

Bay window; f. A Bow-window. CL. 1058.

Bayard: A horse. No. 1434. Perhaps it properly signifies a Bay horse. See Men. Fr. in Bay.

Be; A Bee; By; Been. But he that weddid be, Fr. 2349. perhaps should be read, But that he weddid be, or as H. 1. But he had wedded be; Unless he be, or had been married. Let the sompnour be; Let the sompner alone, Do not mind him.

Beau semblant, Fr. Fair appearance. CL. 1085.

Beau fre, Fr. Fair Sir, or Good Sir. RR. 6053.

Bebledde: Bloody, stained with blood. Prol. 2004.

Beblotte: To blot, stain. Tr. L. 2. 1027.

Becke: To becken. No. 1910. Beckende: Beckened. AL. 438. Beckid, Tr. L. 2. 1260. Ca. Bekened: Beckened.

Beclappe: To bind; To entrapp. No. 9.

Bedde: Bad, commanded. Mo. 3159.

Bede: To bid; To offer. Sq. 1300. To ask; To pray. Bede up our bills; Present our Petitions. ABC. O. Bedis: Beads; Prayers. Her bedis bede; Said her prayers. RR. 7374.

Bedeweth: Wetteth. Boeth.

Bedolvin: Dug in; Buried.

Bedore: To cause to doat; To bewitch; To enamour; Hyp. 180.

Bedradde: Dreaded.

Bedreince: Drenched, wetted. CL. 577. Drowned.

Been, Tr. L. 2. 193. Beis, AF. 353. Bees.

Befall, Fr. 1289. Become, be fitting.

Befill: Befell, happened; Came. Sq. 1650. It is often used impersonally without It.

Beforn: Before.

Beggore:

Beggare: A Beggar. CG. 67.
Begiled: Cast into Goal, imprisoned. No. 1788.
Beginnyng: A Principle. Boeth.
Begon, Begonne: Begun; Gone. It often signifies the State or Condition of a person or thing; as Well begon, WB. 606. In good humour, or plight; Fortunate. Wo begon; Overwhelmed with sorrow. Worse begon; In a worse condition. Tr. L. 5. 1327. With gold begon; Adorned with gold. RR. 943. See Faring.
Behated: Hated, odious. Boeth.
Behest: A promise. Sq. 718. Also, A command.
Behangid: Hanged, hung. RL. 207.
Behet: Promised. AL. 436.
Behete, Behote: To promise.
Behewe: Coloured. With gold behewe; Gilt. Fa. L. 3. 216.
Behight: To promise; Promised. Also, Called, named.
Behongit: Hung. Ber. 100.
Behove: Behoof, use, advantage. RR. 1090, 7584. Behovely, Behovily: Usefull. Behovid nedis; Must needs. Ib. 1479.
Bejapid: Tricked, deceived, imposed upon. No. 1406. Laughed at, made a jest of. Tr. L. 1. 532. See Jape.
Beie: To buy.
Bein: Be, are.
Bekid me about, Cr. 36. Warmed me. Kyn. Bekis, warms, Gl. V.
Beknewe: Made known.
Beknome, Beknowin: To acknowledge, confesa. p. 211. a. 376. a.
Belamy: Good Friend. No. 183.
Belchir, Belle chere: Good cheer, pleasant countenance. AL. 322. For belle chere; To make good cheer withal. No. 2917.
Beleve. See Bileve.
Beleved: Left. Gam. 172.
Belive. See Blive.
Belle, Fr. the Fem. of Bel, Beau: Fair. Tr. L. 2. 288.
Bellchose: Pretty thing. Pro padendo muliebri usurpatur. Sk.
Belle Isande: Well, or prettily said. Fa. L. 3. 707. See Sk.
Bellis clink: The Tinkling of Bells. Mo. 1980.
Bellish: Belloweth, roareth. Fa. L. 3. 713.
Belous: Bellows.
Belmary, Prol. 57. Taken to be that Country in Barbary, called by Vassens, Benamarin. Sp. See Sk.
Bemis: Beams; Trumpets. RR. 7605. from the AS.
Bema, a Trumpet.
Ben: Be, been.
Benched: Made up with Seats or Benches. LW. 204.
Bend, Bende: A Band, a knot, a fillet; Any thing that biudeth. RR. 1079.
Bendes: Bonds; Burdens. Mo. 2477.
Bending, p. 198, a. See Paling.
Bene: A Bean; Be, been.
Benes: Bones. MR. 965.
Benchede: Bread made of Beans.
Benigne, Beningne, Benynge: Kind, meek, gentle, courteous, favourable, gracious. Benignely: Kindly, &c.
Benignity: Kindness, favour.
Benimme: To take away. Benimmeth us the coulpe; Taketh the blame from us. Paris. AS. Benyman, Eri-pere, &c.
Benison, Fr. A blessing. Sq. 881.
Benomen, Benommen: Taken away. RR. 1509. Benom-meth, Taketh away; Intercepteth. p. 203, b. See Benimme.
Bent, Prol. 1983. A Precipice; perhaps from the Fr. Pente, The Bending or Declivity of a Hill. The CB. Pant signifies a Valley, or Low place between two Risings.
Browis bent; Arched Eyebrows. RR. 1217.
Benymyth: Depriveth, taketh away. p. 201, a. 203, b.
Benynge. See Benigne.
Beoce: Boethius, the Author of the Treatise De Consolatione Philosophiae.
Bequath, Bequethe: Bequeathed.
Bequeste: Whatever is bequeathed, a Legacy. Gam. 128.
Ber: To bear. PT. 614.
Berained: Rained upon, wet with rain. Tr. L. 4. 1172.
Berd, Berde: The beard. In the berde, Tr. L. 4. 41. Full in the face. Make his berd, Ber. 436. Fr. Faire la barbe à quelqu'un; To impose upon, or abuse one. Berdis ymade, Fa. L. 2. 181, 183. Imposed upon.

Bere: A Bier. No. 3189. Tr. L. 2. 1638. A bear. Ib. L. 4. 1453. To bear or carry; To accuse. Boeth. Also, Bore or carried. RR. 7372. A Pillow-bear. Dr. Ch. 254. Instead of Bere the belle, Ib. L. 2. 1498. MS. Sp. and Ca. read — if that thou comest Bere the wete to morrow, &c.
Berefe: To deprive, bereave.
Bering, Beryng: Behaviour.
Berin: To bear; To behave. Berin on, or in honde, WB. 326, 232. To bear in hand, to make believe. Also, Bore, did bear. That berin life, WB. 997. Living, having life.
Beris: Bears. Mo. 375.
Berne: Barm, yest. No. 835.
Berne: A barn. MR. 150. Also, To bear, or carry. RR. 5617.
Berft: Burst. Ber. 270.
Besante: A piece of Gold so called, because first coined at Byantium, now Constantinople. Sk. Besant night, RR. 1106. The Weight of a Besant. See Blo. in Byzantine.
Bescorned: Scoffed at, mocked, despised. Paris.
Bescratchin: To scratch. RR. 323.
Besegit: Belieged.
Beseie, Besey, Beseyn: To behold. Also, To be seen. Well beseie; Well-looking. RR. 821. Richily beseie; Rich to behold. In Tr. L. 1. 167. instead of, Full well beseyn, &c. Ca. hath, Full well arayed both meft and left.
Beseke: To beseech.
Besene: Well besene; Of a good appearance, well looking. See Beseie.
Beset: Spent, laid out, placed, disposed of. Fr. 688. Also, To place, lay out, &c. Bal. Lad. 148. Lithirly besett his while; Ill spent his time. MR. 191. Beset his wite; Set his wits at work. Beset his wordis and his werke; Ordered his words and actions well. Tr. L. 3. 472. So well her beset, Tr. L. 3. 1558. Disposed of her so well. Ill besete; Ill ordered. Mo. 2980.
Besey, Beseyn. See Beseie.
Besfet: Shut up. RR. 4488. Tr. L. 3. 603.
Beshrewe, WB. 844, 845. I beshrewe me, I beshrew thy face; A Form of Execration; Malum me fascinum corripit. Sk. See Shrewe. Beshrewed: Ill-natured, wicked, false; Accursed. RR. 7394.
Beshyne: To shine upon. Ber. 381.
Beside: By; By the side of. WB. 15. Near, hard by. Fr. 2126.
Besien: To trouble, to disturb. Boeth. L. 1. To busy one's self.
Besly: Officiously. Fr. 2597.
Besines, WB. 933. Officiousness; Care, endeavour. To don her besines; To take the utmost care. Fr. 1612.
Besmiteth: Smuteth; Murdereth. Test.
Besmottid: Smutted, bedaubed. Pro. 76.
Best: A beast; A living creature. Lat. Animal, p. 365, a.
Bestis: Beasts. Tr. L. 3. 621. But I should preter the reading in MS. Sp. To us best is the cause ywye, i. e. It is best for us that the cause be hid.
Bestad, Bestade, Bestede: Beset, surrounded; Oppressed, distressed. In nede bestad, RR. 5796. Oppressed with need. Hard bestad, Gm. 1338. Hard put to it. Foule bestad, or bestede, Mo. 2343. In a bad condition.
Bestiallicke: Beastly. Test.
Bestly: Belonging to a living creature. p. 493, a.
Beswink: To labour.
Besy: Busie; Careful; Officious. Besy cure; Officious, very great care. Tr. L. 3. 1044.
Bet, Bette: Better.
Betake: To give up, deliver. MR. 642. To commit to. Fr. 1190.
Betaught: Recommended. RR. 4438.
Bete, Betin: To make. Sk. To prepare, make ready; from the AS. Bætan. Bete nets, MR. 819. Make, or mend nets. Bete fire; To make a fire. Prol. 2255. No. 529. To amend, restore, repair; To heal, or cure. RR. 4441. from the AS. Bætan, To abate. Tr. L. 1. 666. Also, Boor. Sk.
Beteche: To recommend. No. 3428.
Beter: A market beter at the full, MR. 828. f. One that fought in full, or open Market.
Beith: Both. Also, Be, are.

Betide:

Betide: To happen. What so betide; Let what will happen, or, as it is in Tr. L. 5. 796. Happin what happin may. Also, Happened. No. 3268. Beihde, Tr. L. 2. 55. Happened. Also, Succeeded. Fa. L. 2. 172.
Betrappid: Intrapped, taken in a trap. Cop. 252.
Betrassid, Betrahsid, Betraffid: Deceived, betrayed. Br. wafu, Dougl. Virg.
Beverage, Ber. 359. Drink; Any liquor that may be drunk. Fr. Brewage; anciently writ Beutraige. Gl. Lob.
Bewepe: To bewail, weep, lament. Tr. L. 1. 763. Bewepi: Mist with tears. Magd. 553.
Bewet: Wetted.
Bewond: Imposed upon; Puzzled, embarrassed; from the AS. Bepynban, Involunt, implicare, intricare.
Bewraien, Bewraint, Bewray: To discover. ProL. 2233. Bewraynge, or Bewrayinge: Discovering. p. 150.
Bewreke: To revenge; Revenged. WB. 809.
Bewrie, Bewrien: To bewray, betray. RR. 3879. To hide, conceal. Tr. L. 2. 337.
Bewte: Beauty.
By, Bege: To buy. No. 648, 1315.
Byete: Begotten. Tr. L. 1. 978.
Bialacoi, RR. 2984, &c. Kind reception, or, as it is lb. 5856. Fair Wellcoming; from the Fr. Bn accueil.
Bibbid: Sucked up, drank.
Bible: A Book. No. 878.
Bisbe: A bitch. Mo. 2829.
Bid: It most frequently signifies To pray or intreat. I bidde God, that I never mote have joie, Tr. L. 3. 877. In MS. Sp. I pray to God y never, &c. Biddish for them, Tr. L. 1. 30. Pray for them. Bad mercy, lb. 111. Beg'd mercy. Bidde I God; I pray to God. Tr. L. 5. 1007. See Bede.
Bide, Tr. L. 2. 118. To abide, to dwell; or it may be To bid, as in MS. Sp. and the sense will then be, It became me better to bid [i. e. to say my prayers] in a Cave and read the Legends of Saints. Bide a sound; Stay for a time. Tr. L. 1. 1068. Bide thine adventures; Wait or stand your chance. Tr. L. 2. 1519.
Biddin, Tr. L. 3. 1411. for Diddin; or Deer, as in MS. Sp. Did.
Bidden for Biden: Tarryed, abode.
Biforme: Before.
Bigge: To build up. Mo. 2415. From the AS. Byrgan.
Bigine, RR. 7368. Bigini, lb. 6861. Fr. Beguines; A sort of Religious persons of both sexes; See Men, Fr. and Fr. Gl. in Beguine, and Beghine.
Bigon, Bigone. See Begon.
Bidess: Promises. Tr. L. 5. 1430. Also, Commands.
Bibone: To promise. Bibering the hope of wellfulnes [i. wellfulnesse] Under pretence of happiness. p. 373, b.
Biker: A bickering, quarrel. Hyper. 100.
Bill, Bill, Byl: A Petition. AL. 610, 603, &c. Any writing or Instrument. ABC. H. Sq. 1487. Tr. L. 2. 1130.
Bilde: To build. Bal. Lad. 111. The ground of life into [i. in so] bilde, i. e. to build on. Bildir: A builder. The Bildir oke; The Oak fit for building. AP. 176.
Bilve: Faith, belief; Also, To believe. No. 270.
Bilis: Biles, boils. Cr. 395.
Bimene: To bemoan. RR. 2667.
Bineth, Binethen: Beneath, below. AS. Beneoð, beneoðan.
Binned, p. 376, a. Taken away. See Bennine.
Bind him: Bound himself. CMV. 47.
Birast: Bereaved, deprived.
Birde, Mo. 2917. signifies a Mistress or Wench.
Birch, Birill: A Beril. Bl. Kn. 37. Bal. Lad. 51.
Bismare: Abuse, scandal. MR. 857. From the AS. Byrmanian; To scoff at, to disgrace. Byrmon, Reproach. Also, Libels, Lampoons.
Bispreint: Besprinkled.
Bit: Bad or commanded. MS. Ch. reads Bit instead of Did, ProL. 187. which is printed wrong for Bid. Py. 1. reads byderb.
Bitande: Biting; Sharp.
Bitange: Recommended. RR. 4438. Committed. Gam. 666. See Gl. V. in Betanbit.
Bitte: To smart. ProL. 633. To provoke. Biting point; A sharp cutting point. lb. 2548. Desire so biseth me, Tr. L. 3. 1488. so freyneth me. MS. Sp.

Bitrens: Plaited or twitted about. Tr. L. 3. 1237. Encompassed, surrounded. lb. L. 4. 870.
Bitresbid. See Betrassid.
Bitirfull: Bitter; Sorrowful. Magd. 43.
Bimene, Bimixin: Between, betwixt.
Bimopin: Weeping, all in tears. Tr. L. 4. 916.
Blackburied, No. 1920. Gon a blackbured; In nigras et in-auspicias domus missus, Sk. Which answers to the Description of Hell in Pars. p. 193, a.
Blake: Black. In Tr. L. 2. 1320. instead of, Lake on all these blake (where the Substantive is wanting) MS. Sp. has it, Lake on this Lres blake, i. e. black Letters.
Blakid: Blackened.
Blade: Kind; Flattering. RL. 23.
Blandise: To soothe, flatter. Pars. Blandishing: Flattering. Boeth. L. 1.
Blankmanger, ProL. 389. A kind of white meat or curd. Fr. Blanchmanger. Rich.
Blaze: To Blazon Arms. PT. 150.
Blasows: Such as blaze forth ones praise. Test.
Blanche fevre, Tr. L. 1. 917. In Fr. Fivre blanche signifies a white Fever. The Poet means Paleness, the Green-sickness, &c.
Ble, Magd. 391. Sight, look; Colour, hue; Favour. Sk. Sp. Gl. V. AS. Bleo, Color.
Blee, is by Sk. supposed to come from the AS. Bled, Fr. Bled, blé, Corn; and so he makes Boughton under Blee, No. 467. (or, which I take to be the same, Bob under the blee, Mo. 1579, 1580.) to be Boughton near the Corn; Whereas Bleane (anciently written Blene; and easily corrupted to Blee by omitting the Dash for n) is a Forreft in Kent, which gives name to the adjacent Town; which is at this day called Boughton under the Bleane, and is in the Road to Canterbury.
Bleine: A blain, a bile. RR. 553.
Bleint, MR. 645. Blent, Tr. L. 3. 1352. Looked. Gl. V. in Blent.
Blend: To mix, mingle; To blind, or deceive. Tr. L. 2. 1496. Mo. 2792.
Blent: Ceased; Blinded. Sq. 1630. Also, Deceived, disappointed. Tr. L. 5. 1194. See Bleint.
Blere: To dim, darken, cloud the eyes. Blérid is myne eye; My sight is grown dim. No. 751. RR. 3912.
Blefs: Bliss, happiness. Dr. Ch. 1030. RR. 3643.
Bleve, Blevin: To abide, tarry. Tr. L. 4. 1357. from the D. Blyhen, Kilian.
Blife. See Blive.
Blia, Blinne: To desist, cease, give over. No. 1192. From the AS. Blinnan, Cessare. CB. Blino; To be weary.
Blinkis amorous: Amorous winks or looks, ogling. Cr. 226.
Blif, Fr. 1572. To blefs. Also, Happiness, joy. Blisfull; Happy, blessed, joyfull.
Blisb: Merry, pleasant. Blisbness: Joy, mirth. Cr. 4. Alacritas, Boeth. I renne blisbe, LW. 60. or perhaps it should be I renne belife, or blife, for blive, i. e. I run presently: For blisbe cannot rhyme to Life which ends the foregoing Verse.
Blive, Blyve, Belive: Quickly, immediately; Briskly. Tr. L. 4. 1355. Belive; Anon, by and by, or Towards night, Ray's Coll. who supposes it to be a Contraction of By the Eve; it being frequent in the North to mollify the into le. Bihue, Confestim, protinus. Hick. Gr. AS. p. 225. Extemplé is translated Belife by Dougl. Virg. p. 163. f. ab AS. Be lip, With life, vigorously.
Bluber: To blubber. Test.
Bladeris, perhaps for Bluberis: Blubbered. Ber. 464.
Blome, Bloome: Blooms, blossoms. Test. L. 3. Blontic: Blooming, blossoming, lb.
Blondrin, No. 691. To toil, bluster. Sp. f. To blunder. lb. 1435.
Blont: Dull; Heavy; Cowardly. p. 204, a.
Blofme: Blossom. Bal. Lad. 47. Blofme: Blossoms. LW. 143.
Blowin up and down: Blown about; Talked of. ProL. 2243.
Blynched, PT. 669. f. Flinched: Kept off; or perhaps, Blynched: Looked askint.
Blyfyng: Blazing, flaming. Ber. 561.
Blyve. See Blive.
Bob under the blee. See Ble.

Boche, p. 376, b. Possum of [l. or] boche; An Impostume or Botch, i. e. An Ulcer.

Bochour: A Butcher. Mo. 2524.

Bode: Bid, commanded. It is also put for Abode, the Preter Tense of Abide, WB. 1030. Ne bode I never, &c. I could not abide, or bear to go from thence. RR. 791. Abode, continued. Tr. L. 5. 29. Also, An Omen, a foreboding, a sign, or token. AF. 343. Delay. An. 120. See Abode. In Bal. Lad. 45. it is misprinted for Blode; to which mistake, the Editor was led by its being printed Bood in former Editions, particularly that of 1561, out of which this Edition was prepared for the Press.

Bodekins, Mo. 727, 732. MR. 853. Bodkins; Poniards, daggers.

Bodin: Commanded, charged, bid or bade.

Boifous: Halting, from the Fr. Boienx; Rude, plain, ignorant. Mo. 1788. p. 478, a. Homely and hard. Ib. 2992. It seems to be sometimes the same with Boistrous; Blustering, noisy. See p. 479, b. l. 17. It may come from the Sco. Boist: To boast, threaten, frighten. Gl. V. As boifous as bere at baie; As fierce, boisterous as a Bear at bay. Mo. 2079. See Gl. V. in Buifous. Boifously: Roughly, rudely, &c. Boifousneß: Rudeness; Ignorance. Ch. Dr. 64.

Bokeler: A buckler. Pro. 112.

Boket: A bucket. Pro. 1535.

Bokill: A buckle. Bokiling, Pro. 2505. Bückling on.

Bolas: Bullace or Bullia, a sort of wild Plum. RR. 1377.

Bols: A Bull. Tr. L. 2. 55. Bolis: Bulls. CMV. 86.

Bole Armeny: Bole Armeniack, Armenian Earth used in Medicine. No. 811.

Boll, balle: A bowl; A bottle. The throte boll, MR. 1165. The Protuberance in the Throat, commonly called Pomum Adami.

Bollin, Bala: Swoln. Bl. Kn. 101.

Bolne: To swell; To boyl up. Bol, Kilian. Tumidus,urgidus, &c.

Bolt: An arrow. Upright as a bolt; As straight as an arrow. MR. 156.

Bone: A Boon, request, petition. AS. Bene. Bad a bone; Made a request. Sq. 1134. I bidé the a bone; I ask a favour of thee. Tr. L. 1. 1028.

Bonis: Bones. Bonis two, No. 2172. A pair of Dice.

Bood: Abode, stay'd, tarried. Ber. 762.

Boon: A bone.

Borace, Pro. 632. "Borax, a white or greenish Substance like Salt-Petre, wherewith Goldsmiths use to solder Gold and Silver; some say it is the Gum of a Tree, which is very unlikely; Others affirm it to be made of old Lees of Oyl, by Art and drying in the Sun, brought to be white; Others, a Mineral. Blo. But others more truly say, that it is an Alkalious Salt made from the Stone called Tingal, brought from the East-Indies; It is a strong Hysterick Medicine, and is much used in soldering.

Bord, Bordis: A board, a table; Boards, tables; The Bord begun, Pro. 52. Begun the Board; Sat at the upper end of the Table; This Knight, says Sp. "being often among the Knights of the Dutch Order, called Ordo Teutonius, in Prussia, he was for his worthiness placed by them at the Table, before any of what Nation soever. If any desire to know the Profession of these Knights called Teutonici, it was thus; They having their dwelling at Jerusalem were bound to entertain Pilgrims, and at occasions to serve in War against the Saracens; They were apparelled in white, and upon their uppermost garment did wear a black Cross; And for that this Order was first begun by a rich Almaine, none were received into the same, save only Gentlemen of the Dutch Nation. After Jerusalem was last taken by the Saracens, Anno 1184. these Knights retired to Ptolemaida; and that being taken, into Germany their own Country; And when as there also the People of Prussia used incursions upon their confines, they went unto Frederick the Second then Emperor, An. 1220. who granted them leave to make wars upon them, and to turn the spoil to the maintenance of their Order. After this Conquest of Prussia, these Knights grew rich, and built there many Temples and places of Residence for Bishops, who also were enjoined to wear the "Habit of the Order. Chancer will have his Knight of such fame that he was both known and honoured of this Order.

Bordclothes: Table-cloths. Test.

Borde: A jest. Also, To jest. No. 2294. See Bourde.

Bordels: Brothels, Bawdy-houses. Parf. Bordell women: Lewd women, common strumpets. p. 210, b. Bordel, Kilian. Lupanar.

Bordillers: Those that keep or haunt Brothels. RR. 7084.

Bordure, Fr. A hemme or border. Boeth. L. 1. The edge or extremity of a thing.

Borell: Ignorant, rude, unlearned. Fr. 2262. Plain, Boorish, clownish. Borell folk, Fr. 610. Borel men, Mo. 67. Laymen. Borel signifies a sort of courle cloth. Gl. Lob. It seems to be a Diminutive of Boor. Kilian. Bort, Agricola, ruricola; from Boutmen, To plow. See Gl. V. in Burell.

Borill, WB. 356. perhaps should be read Parrill, i. e. Apparel, fine clothes, as the word is used, Ib. 561.

Borow, Borrowe: A pledge, a pawn. Tr. L. 2. 963. Bail, surety. And I your borrow, Tr. L. 2. 134. And I will be bound for you. I am under a borrow, Gam. 1576. I am under Bail. Have here my faith to borrow; I pawn my faith. Fr. 2790. Venus to borrow, Tr. L. 2. 1523. St. John to borrow, Sq. 616. Venus, St. John, assisting or speeding; or perhaps St. John to borrow may be a Form of Protection then used, i. e. St. John be my surety. Also, To Bail one. Gam. 953. Borowes: Sureties; Pledges. RR. 7309.

Borne, for Borrow, in the MSS. generally written Borne; as Sorne, morne, &c. for Sorrow, morrow, &c.

Bosard, Bosardes: A buzzard, Buzzards. Mo. 3267. RR. 4033.

Bofance: Boasting, bragging. WB. 569.

Bofe: Boasting. Mo. 213. Pride; Vain glory.

Bote: But. La. 210. He na's bot dede; He was, or would be certainly dead. A form of Speech frequently used in Chancer to denote the greater certainty of a thing.

Bote: Help; Ease, remedy; Recompence, amends, satisfaction. To do bote on her bale, Tr. L. 4. 739. To ease her of her misfortune. To findin bote for wo, Ib. 1259. To find a remedy for misery. Bote of his bale, No. 1502. Ease of his misery. Also, Benefit, advantage, profit. Also, A boat. Test.

Botelesse. See Botileß.

Bote off: Bit off. Boeth.

Botber (to Ca. reads it in Tr. L. 4. 168.) Of both. Two botber love; The love of you both.

Botbom, Mo. 1216. Bottom. Also the same with Botthum, RR. 3050.

Botbum: A bud. RR. 1721, &c. It is the same that is before called a Kaopp, i. e. A Rose-bud. Ib. 1675, 1685, 1691.

Botileß, Botelesse: Bootles, fruitless; Without remedy. Tr. L. 1. 783.

Botill: A bottle. Fr. 667.

Botirflis: Butterflies. Ber. 2879.

Botromleß, Tr. L. 5. 1430. MS. Botmeles: Groundless; perhaps for Boteles bibestis, i. e. Fruitless, insignificant promises.

Boton: A button. Ber. 2962.

Boucheff, Ber. 43. seems to signify Good, it being there opposed to Myscheff; and Ib. 3166. synonymous to Comfort: Perhaps it should be read Boucheff.

Bove, Ber. 1989. Above. In Ch. Dr. 745. Cupid is called the great lord of bove. It may be put for bove, metri causa. See Ib. 754.

Bonffo: A Note of Belching. Fr. 670.

Bougerons: Buggerers, Sodomites. RR. 7072.

Boughte, Boughtin: Bought. Boughtin thei is derre, Tr. L. 1. 136. They bought it dear, or payd dear for it.

Boughton under blee. See Blee.

Boulis it to the bren, Mo. 1355. To examine to the bottom of any thing, to sift it thorowly: A Metaphor taken from the sifting of Meal, till the fine flower and the bran are separated.

Boun: Good, Ready. CCr. 184. Ber. 965. From the Fr. Bon. Also, Bound. CL. 1151. See Gl. V.

Bounche: A bunch; A bundle. CCr. 28.

Bounte, Bountie, Bounny: Goodness. Fr. Bonité. It is often used in Boeth. for Probity, Lat. Probitas. So Bounteous sometimes signifies Good. No. 1624.

Bounteous, for Bounteous, Ber. 3277. See Bounte.

Bourde:

- Bourde: A jelt; A trick. Gam. 1694. from the Fr. Bourde, A lye, sham. See Men. Fr. in Bourde, and Men. It. in Burlare.
- Bourdon, Burdoun: The Drone of a Bag-pipe; Hence the Burden of a Song. MR. 1057. The Miller's Wife in snoring bore the Burdon to her husband. It also signifies A staff. RR. 3401, 4092. A burden. Id. 4092. See Men. Fr. in Bourdon.
- Bowre: A house, a habitation, a chamber. MR. 259. from the AS. Bup, bupe, A chamber, a parlour, a bower. Belg. Buer, A cottage, a shed. See Sk. in Bower.
- Bouffons, Cr. 166. Sturdy, stiff, strong. See Boiffons.
- Bowse: About. Bowse ybore; Brought about. Ber. 3141.
- Bowe: A dogge for the bowe, Sq. 1520. Perhaps a Dog that attended a Sportfman with a Bow and Arrowe, as we call that a Gun-dog which follows one that carries a Gun.
- Bowke: Bulke; The body; The belly; The stomach. AS. Buce, Venter, &c.
- Downe: Bound, obliged. Ber. 945. It may be the same as Boun, V.
- Boys, p. 214, b. Boethius de Consolatione Philosophie.
- Boysfly, for Boisfly: Rudely; Roughly. PT. 104.
- Bracer: Armour for the Arms. Pro. 111. The Fr. Brasart signifies the same; from Bras, an Arm.
- Bracyd: Clasp'd, embraced. PT. 25. Ber. 926.
- Braide: Arose, awak'd, MR. 1177. Took off. La. 838. Braide out of his mist, Mo. 563. Run out of his senses. Also, To pull out, to draw. AS. Bpæban, Abpæban, Aufære; Exerere. Also, A start. RR. 1336.
- Braied, Di. 241. for Braide. Made many a braide; Started often in her sleep.
- Brakitt, MR. 153. Bragget. CB. Braged. A sweet Drink made of Honey, Spices, &c. used in Wales, and in Cheshire, Lancashire, &c.
- Branchiles: A little branch, a twig. Bal. Lad. 44.
- Brandz, Cr. 180, 190. may signify a Sword, which, it is said Id. 188. Mars had in his hand: It is so used by Douglas in his Virgil. See Hick. Gr. Fr. p. 93. in Brando.
- Brasse: To burst; Did burst.
- Bratte, No. 902. A mantle; A rag. It is used in Lincolnshire for a course Apron. Sk. See Soms. in Bpatt. CB. Bratt, Lacina, panniculus.
- Brandrie, Pro. 2500. Embroidery; Graven work. Sp.
- Bravie: The Prize or Reward of Victory in Games or Sports of Activity. Lat. Bravium. Gr. Βραβιον.
- Braun, Brawn: A sinew. Bravniis: Sinews; The brawny parts of the Body, as the Calves of the Legs, the Thighs, part of the Arms, &c.
- Braying, Mo. 2106. Sounding. Com.
- Brecke, Brige, Brigge, Brike: A breach, a rupture.
- Brede: Breadth. Tr. L. 5. 1656. In brede, Id. L. 1. 531. Abroad. To breed, engender. Id. L. 3. 1552. Also Bread.
- Breff, Ber. 139. Breve, RR. 2350. Brief, short. Fr. Bref, item. Breve.
- Breide. See Braide.
- Breme: Fiercely. Sp. Fierce. Pro. 1701. f. ab AS. Bpyme, Solennis, clarus, notabilis. See Men. It. in Bramare.
- Bren, Brende, Brennin: To burn. Brennande, Brennende: Burning. Test.
- Bren, Brenne: Brant.
- Brenningly: Warmly; In a hot, burning manner.
- Brent, Brende: Burnt; Also Burnished. RR. 1109.
- Brere: A bryar. Breris: Bryars. RR. 1836.
- Brefte: To burst.
- Bretfull: Quite full, brim full, top full. Pro. 689.
- Bretherne, No. 1030. Brethren.
- Breve. See Breff.
- Breyde: To run away. Ber. 1093, 3041. See Braide.
- Brid, Tr. L. 3. 10. Bride, CN. 260. Bridde: A bird. Briddis: Birds.
- Bridale: A Wedding.
- Brige, Brigge. See Brecke.
- Brigg, Brigge: A bridge.
- Bright for Brighneß, Tr. L. 2. 864.
- Brike. See Brecke.
- Brimme: Sharp, fierce, violent. RR. 1836. Tr. L. 4. 184. See Breme.
- Bringis: Bringest. Fa. L. 3. 818.
- Brinne: To burn. WB. 52.
- Britaine, Fr. 2538, &c. See Amorike.
- Brocages, RR. 6971. Broker's, Factor's or any Agent's Business, or Profit; Pimping.
- Broch: A Gold Pyramid. Sk. A Jewell set with precious Stones, perhaps of a Pyramidal form. It was worn sometimes on the Arm. Pro. 160. and sometimes on the Collar. Tr. L. 5. 1660.
- Brode: Abroad. Bride ikend, Mo. 2470. Known all abroad. Com.
- Brodin: Broader. Also, Brother.
- Broholve, MR. 1178. for Bromholme: A Priory in Norfolk. See Men. Ang. To. I. p. 632. To. II. p. 909.
- Broidit: Braided, twitted, twined; Tyed up. Pro. 1051.
- Broke, Brokin. See Brouk.
- Broking: Throbbing; Quavering. MR. 269. Singing with a broken, hoarse voice, called Craking. Sq. 1367. See Crakid and Crakil.
- Brokin-harm, Sq. 941. Perhaps it should be read in two words, So mochil brokin harm [sc. they conuin, Id. 941] i. e. They can brook, or bear so much harm, or inconvenience, when they list. MS. Ch. hath it So mochill harm thei can, &c. They can do so much harm.
- Bronde, Ph. 25. A brand, a torch. Brandis, Pro. 2340. Torches, firebrands.
- Broß, Broßin, Brusßin: Broke, tore. Pro. 2693. Burst asunder. Tr. L. 2. 976.
- Brotherhed: Brotherhood; Friendship like that of Brothers. No. 2550.
- Broißil: Brittle; Fickle; Frail. Sq. 795.
- Broißneß: Brittleness; Inconstancy, fickleness. Sq. 795, 1759.
- Brondrid: Embroidered; Adorned. Mo. 495.
- Brouke, Brokin, Broke: To brook, to bear; To enjoy; To use. So brookin I mine eye, myne bede, my chynne; As I hope to preserve, or enjoy the use of my eye, my head, my chin. As evir mote I branke my tressis, Sq. 1826. Or myr ceris, as in MS. Ch. which may be the true reading, if Jangleris be right in the preceding Verse, and not rather Jangleressis, the feminine of Jangleris, which will answer to tressis. Well brookin thet ther service, LW. 194. They brook, bear, or perform their service well. Right wel broke ye your new, AL. 259. Your new habit becomes you very well.
- Brusßin. See Broß.
- Brusßneß, Cr. 86. See Broißneß.
- Buggys, Mo. 1051. Bugbears.
- Bugle, Bugle-horn, Fr. 2809. A black horn. Sp. A little horn. Sk. qu. Bucula cornu.
- Buie: To buy. Buie it full dere; Pay dear for it. RR. 6094. See Abie.
- Bukis horn: A buck's horn. Blow the bukis horn; Do any trifling business; Go a whittling. MR. 279.
- Bumpish: Maketh a humming noise. WB. 972.
- Burdoun. See Bourdon.
- Burel, AL. 455. Fine Glass; A precious Stone. Sp. A Beryl.
- Burgyn: To bud, to shoot, or sprout out. PT. 691. Fr. Bourgeonner.
- Burly: Large. Cr. 180.
- Burnel the asse, Mo. 1427. Nigellus Wireker a Monk and Precentor of Canterbury wrote a Latin Poem, Intituled, Speculum Sinistorum, Dedicated to William Longchamp, Bishop of Ely, and Lord Chancellor; wherein, under the Fable of an Ass (which he calls Burnellus) that desired a longer Tail, is represented the Folly of such as are not content with their own condition. There is introduced a Tale of a Cock, who having his leg broke by a Priest's Son (called Gundulfus) watched an opportunity to be revenged; which at length presented it self on this occasion: A day was appointed for Gundulfus's being admitted into holy Orders at a place remote from his Father's Habitation; He therefore orders the Servants to call him at first Cock-crowing, which the Cock over hearing did not crow at all that Morning. So Gundulfus over-slept himself, and was thereby disappointed of his Ordination; the Office being quite finished before he came to the place.
- Burnesse seems to have been a rich Stuff worn by Persons of Quality, which was therefore forbid to be used by Monks. Monachi Camisijis lineis vel Burnettis non utantur.

sur. Matth. Par. See Wats. Gl. and Man. Fr. in Brunette.
Burnyd: Burnished, polished. Prol. 1985. Gold burnid;
Shining like burnished gold. Bl. Kn. 34.

Bush for Push, PT. 156.

Buse: Sollicitous. p. 370 b. See Besy.

Buske, RR. 54. A bush. Buskie, lb. 102. Bushes.

Buskid, Cr. 255. Adorned, decked, dressed. Gl. V.

But, But and, But if, But that if: Except. Tr. L. 2. 1561.
which should be read from MS. Sp. thus;

But God and Pandare wist none what it ment.

Also, Without; Unless. AS. Bute, Butan. Sometimes it signifies Quite, utterly. In cre but lost: I were utterly undone. No. 2693. I n am but dead, Tr. L. 4. 1498.
He n as bot [or but] dede. La. 210. 1, He were quite dead.
Which am but lorne, Fr. 2583. Who am utterly undone.
Not but for Only. I speke it not but stedfastly, Not proudely, No. 485. Not but enough, lb. 612. Enough and to spare.

Buxionen, Buxioning, Buxions, for Burjanen, Burjonning, Burjons: To Bud, Budding, Buds. Test. L. 2. and L. 3. The x and r, are very often so like in the MSS. and old printed books, that they might be easily mistaken one for the other. Fr. Bourgeon, a Bud. See Burgeyn.

Buxome, Buxum: Obedient, pliant, dutifull, meek; Amiable. Buxomeneß: Obedience, humility, submission. Sc.
233. RR. 4419.

Buxumly: Obediently, humbly, dutifully.

By: To buy. RR. 7159. Also, Be, are. PT. 446.

Bychscope: A Bishop. p. 210. b.

Byd: See Bid.

Byforme: Before.

Byete: To promise.

Byl, Byllis: See Bil.

Byleve, Bylevin: To stay, to abide, to tarry. Tr. L. 5. 478.
See Blevé.

Byme for By me. See Alowb.

Bynemme, Bynonne, Bynym, Ber. 1247. To bereave, to take away. Boeth. See Benimme.

Byraft: Bereaved, taken away. Prol. 1363.

Bysegid: Besieged, surrounded. Boeth.

C.

Cas, Cace, Cas: Case; Fortune. Percaas: By chance.
Ar. 82. Also, a Quiver.

Cach: To catch. Cach a clont, PT. 554. seems to be the same as our Phrase, To catch a Tartar.

Caitife, Caitiffe: A Captive, a Slave; from whence it comes to signify any person in miserable circumstances. Fr.

Cheif, Mean, despicable, &c. from the Lat. Captivus.
Caitifnesse: Slavery; Misery. Test. L. 1.

Caitifned, p. 479, b. Sk. thinks it is corrupted from the Lat. Catenatus, Chained, tyed up.

Cakeling: Cackling. AF. 562.

Calcination: Calcination is the Solution of a mixt Body into powder by Fire or any corroding things, as Mercury, Aqua fortis, &c. No. 825.

Calculid: Calculated. Fr. 2840. Calculing: Calculation, computation.

Cale: Cold. A cale: A cold, very cold; as in Gower, L. 8.

Her bert is bot as eny fyre,
And other while it is a cale.

In Mo. 2011. it seems to signify Miserable in general, or as Com. Much pinched with misery, cold and hunger. The very Expression is in Gower, L. 8. where speaking of a young Prince escaped alone out of a Shipwreck, he says,

—He was so fore a cale,
That he wist of himself no bote.

Caleweis, RR. 7093. Calvert. Sk. Calure, as Salmon or other red fish. Sp.

Calidone, No. 2121, f. Chalcedonia in Asia Minor.

Caler: A lewd Woman, a Drab; perhaps so called from the Fr. Calote, which was a sort of Head-dress wore by Country-girls.

Camale: A Camel. Fr. 2229.

Cameline: Camler. RR. 7367.

Camrin: Came. No. 150.

Camise, Camised: Flat-nosed. MR. 826, 866. Fr. Camus.

Can: Knoweth, understandeth. Prol. 1900. W. B. 231.
It is also used for Can. CL. 224. In Tr. L. 3. 56. Ca.
reads Gan, V.

Canel-bone: The Channel-bone of the Throat. Dr. Ch. 943.

Canell: Cinnamon. RR. 1370. Fr. Canelle.

Cankedort: A wofull case. Sk. Sp. Perhaps A doubtful case.
Tr. L. 2. 1752. Kankerort, Ma. Sp. Ca. and Py.

Canat: Cannot. AF. 538.

Cannon, ne no Fenne, No. 2408. Avicenne's Canon Medicine is divided into Fens, i. e. Sections.

Cannys: Cans, pots. PT. 566.

Canill: A cantle, a piece, a part. Prol. 3010.

Cap. To set one's Cap; To outwit one, to make a fool of one. Prol. 588.

Cape: To trudge, caper, or dance up and down after one. Tr. L. 3. 559. Perhaps it should be read Gape, as in MS. Sp. Py. and other Editions.

Capell, Capill, Caple: A horse. Lat. Caballus.

Capitain: A Captain, a General. Fr. Capitaine.

Captife: A Captive, a Prisoner. Tr. L. 3. 383.

Caraine: Carrion, a dead body. Mo. 649.

Carbocle, No. 3376. for Carbuncle: A Carbuncle.

Cardiacle, Cardiakill: A Pain about the Heart, a Heart-aking; which is expressed in another place by Dost myne bert to yerne. Gr. Kardialgia, Cordis dolor, Passio Car-diaca.

Care: Pain, disorder, indisposition. Tr. L. 1. 661.

Carrees: Characters, marks.

Carfe: Cut off; from Carve. Carvid so and bore; Did so cut and bite. Mo. 626.

Caricke, Carike: A large Ship of burden. Fr. 424. f. from the It. Carica, Burden, &c. See Men. li. in Cargare.

Carke: To care. Mo. 2190.

Carle: A Boor, a Clown, a Country-fellow. Prol. 347.
from the AS. Geoppe, Agricola.

Carmis: Carmelite Fryars. RR. 7462.

Caroll: A Dance; A Song beginning and ending alike.
We call a Christmass Carol, A Song usually sung at that Festival. See Sk. Carolling: Singing a Carol. Cr. 32.
Dancing. No. 1366.

Carpe: To jest. Prol. 476. To desire. Test. It is frequently used in PP. for To speak or talk in general.

Carrein: Carrion. Prol. 2015.

Cart: A Chariot. Cartir: A Charioteer. Prol. 2024.

Cas, Casé. See Cas.

Cassidony, A L. 478. A Stone growing in Aethiopia, which shineth like fire. Sp. A Caribaginian Stone. Sk.

Cast, Caste: To think, contrive, foresee. Also, Contriv-vance, deliberation, design; An act or deed. Casting: Vomit. RR. 7240. Castin all she grail in the fire;
Mar the whole affair. Tr. L. 3. 712. Castidin: Cast or did cast. Ar. 49. Castis: Projects, contrivances.
Prol. 2470.

Casteloigne: Catalonia in Spain. Fa. L. 3. 158.

Casuell: Casual, accidental. Tr. L. 4. 419.

Casapnce, Mo. 1082. A sort of Spurge.

Catchende: Catching. p. 491, b.

Catife, Catives. See Caitife.

Catours: Caterers. Prol. 570. Instead of all Catours, MS.
Ch. reads a Catoure; but H. 1. achators. See Albase.

Caterwauling. WB. 354.

Cattell-catching: Using all means to procure wealth.
Mo. 2796.

Caucir: A cause, one that causeth. CL. 847.

Caught: Took, taken. A pite caught, Fr. 2286. Caught-rough, lb. 3074. Took pity. Caught ayen ber countenance, lb. 2131. Recovered her countenance.

Cavillationne: Cavil, cavilling. Fr. 872.

Cautelle, Cautell: Caution, wariness. Cautelis: Cautions.
Cecily, No. 130. St. Cecilia. By The life of sainte Cecile, LW. 426. is meant The second Nonne's Tale.
p. 114, &c.

Ceife: To seize. RR. 7258.

Celebrable, Celebrate: Illustrious, famous, celebrated.
Boeth. p. 395, b. But p. 379, b. l. 49. instead of celebrate, as it was in the former Editions, it is celebrité (for so it should have been printed; not cele-brien.)

- briten*) in this Edition, that is, Famouſneſs, Lat. Celebritas.
- Celerere*, Mo. 48. Celerarius, or the Cellarer was one of the chief Officers in the Monasterys, who had the care of all Provisions, and seems to answer to the Butler in our Coll-ges. Sometimes it signifies only a Butler. See Wats. Gloſs. in Celerarius and Obedientia.
- Cenſing*, MR. 233. Burning of Incense: A Practice still used by the Roman Catholicks in their Churches on certain Festivals. It is called Smoking the Tempil, in Prol. 2283.
- Centure*: The Center of a Circle. Aſtr.
- Cereſiſh*: Encompaſſeth. RR. 1619.
- Cerle*: A circle. Boeth.
- Cerial*, Prol. 2292. Belonging to a ſort of Oak called Cerrus, deſcribed by Pliny, in his Nat. Hiſt. L. 16. cap. 5, 6.
- Certain*, Certaine, Certeyne: Certainly. It is often uſed for a certain Sum or Quantity, and the like.
- Certente*: Certainty.
- Certes*, Certis: Certainly, ſurely. Fr. Certes.
- Cervelle*, Fr. The Brain. Prol. 1378. MS. Ch. inſtead of it, reads felle, and H. 1. celle.
- Ceruſe*: White Lead, often uſed by Chirurgeons in Ointments and Plaifters; It is with Painters a principal white colour, and is much uſed by Women in painting their faces; Hence Martial, Ceruſſa ſaſtimet Sabella ſolem. Blo.
- Ceſe*: To ſeize. AF. 481. To that he be ceſid; Until he be ſeized, or taken. CM. 87.
- Ceſon*: Season. p. 364, b.
- Ceſſe*, Ceſſin: To ceaſe, deſiſt. Ceſſe cauſe, ceſſiſh malady; When the cauſe ceaſeth, the diſtemper ceaſeth. Tr. L. 2. 483. Ceſſid, Ceſt: Ceaſed.
- Cete*, Cite, Cirle, Cyte: A city.
- Chace*: To drive away, chaſe, purſue. Fr. Chaffer. Alſo, a Term at Tennis-playing. Hen. 295.
- Chufare*, Chaffare: Trading; Wares, Merchandize. La. 139. To trade. Ib. 140.
- Chaffren*: To cheapen, buy. Chaffrin churchis; Make Simoniackal Contracts for Advowſions, or Preſentations to Livings or Preferments. Mo. 2086.
- Chamberere*: A Chamber-maid. Fr. 1839. A Chamberlain. Ib. 1998.
- Champartie*, Prol. 1951. It is a Law-Term, ſignifying a Maintenance of a Perſon in his Suit, upon condition to have part of the Lands or Goods in diſpute, when recovered, from the Fr. Champ, A field, and Parti, Divided; becauſe the Land, or Field, in queſtion is commonly divided between the Champartior, who maintains the Suit, and the Perſon in whole name and right he ſues. Blo. L. D.
- Chanons*, Canons, Mo. 3002. The place ſeems to be corrupted. I find Chanons ne Chartons in PP's. Credo, i. e. Nei-ther Canons nor Carthuſians. If we ſuppoſe our Author wrote Chanons, Chartons, the later might eaſily be corrupted to Chanons, and afterwards turned to Canons, to make ſome difference, as if it were intended to mean Canons Regular and Secular.
- Chantepleure*: One that ſings and weeps (Fr. Chante et pleure) in the ſame moment. It ſeems to be the Burden of a Song. An. 323.
- Chantid*: Enchanted, bewitched. WB. 575.
- Chapmanbode*, Chapmanbode: The Profeſſion or Buſineſs of a Merchant or Tradeſman, &c.
- Char*, Chare: A Chariot.
- Charge*: Hurt, damage. Sp. A burden or load; Weight. No charge is what ſo theſe clerks ysaine; Whatſoever theſe Clerks, or Scholars, ſay is of no weight with me. Cup. 218. Of that no charge; No matter for that. No. 770. To weigh or incline. Fa. L. 2. 237. To behave. Chargiſh not ſo ſay; Is not neceſſary to be related. Tr. L. 3. 1582. But Ca. hath it, nedyſh not. Charge in RR. 4366. ſhould perhaps be change. Chargeous: Troubleſome. p. 152, a.
- Charmereſſes*: Women uſing Charms. Fa. L. 3. 171.
- Chafe*: Chole. Hen. 31, 33. Alſo, as Chace, V.
- Chall*, Ber. 326. Chaffie, RR. 6993. To chaſtiſe, puniſh; To reprove.
- Chafelains*: The Governor of a Caſtle. Caſtellanus; Præfectus Caſtri, Domini vices ibidem agens. Spelm. In RR. 3740. it ſignifies properly ſuch a Governor's Lady, or in general, any Lady of Quality under the Degree of a Counteſs.
- Chauſinges*: Heats, motions. p. 208, a.
- Chauſcellere*: A Woman-Chancellor. AL. 507.
- Chauſcellere*: One that ſings-clear; A cock.
- Chauſtements*: Inchantments. p. 489, a.
- Chauſterie*, (Fr. Chanterie) "A Chappel (commonly annexed to ſome Parochial or Cathedral Church) or dowed with Lands or other yearly Revenues, for the maintenance of one or more Priests, daily to ſay Maſs for the Souls of the Donors, or ſuch others as they did appoint; Of theſe Chanteries, there were ſeven within S. Paul's Church, London. Blo. Chauſters: Singers; Priests officiating in Chauntries.
- Checke-mate*: A Term at Cheſs, when the King cannot be moved without being taken. Shall no huſbonde ſaine unto me checke-mate; No huſband ſhall check or controul me. Tr. L. 2. 754.
- Checkere*: A Cheſs-board. Dr. Ch. 660.
- Cheefetain*: A Commander in chief.
- Cheerte*, Cherte, Chierie: Charity, love, affection; Fondneſs.
- Cheſſis fat*, RR. 7091. Calves fat, or Chevins fat, i. e. The fat of a Muller. Sk.
- Cheine*: A Chain laid croſs a ſtreet. Tr. L. 2. 618.
- Chek*: An unlucky trick. Ber. 182. Fr. Echec.
- Chekelaoun*: A Huſſ of Checker-work made of Cloth of Gold. Sp. A Huſſ like Motley. Sk.
- Cheker*: The Sign of the Chequer-Inn. PT. 14.
- Chelaundre*, RR. 81. A Goldfinch, a ſort of Lark. Sk.
- Chepe*: Cheapſide in London. Prol. 756. MR. 1269. Alſo, To buy, cheapen. WB. 268. Cheapneſs of Proviſions. Fa. L. 3. 885.
- Cherche*, Chirche, Chyrch: A Church.
- Chere*: Cheer, countenance; Shew, appearance. Tr. L. 1. 312. Behaviour; Geſture. It alſo ſignifies a Feaſt or Entertainment. He maketh feſt and chere; He lives well, or ſplendidly. No. 2835.
- Chereliche*, Mo. 2990. In ſome MSS. and printed Fdd. it is Churlike, as well in this as the following Verſe; and in Com. it is explained thus; Uſe rude [plain] and coarſe meat and apparel.
- Cherice*: To cheriſh, to comfort. Cherifance, Cherifh: Cherifhing, comfort, any thing comfortable. Wel cheriſhed: Well-bred. AL. 135.
- Churle*, Churlis. See Churle.
- Chefe*: To chuſe. Ches: Chole. Hyp. 88.
- Cheft*: Chaſed, purſued. Tr. L. 5. 1367.
- Cheſte*: A coffin. Fr. 1059. Sirife and cheſte, p. 201, a. & Chaſtiſement, reproof, brawling, debate.
- Cheſten*: A cheſnut-tree. Prol. 2924. Cheſtains: Cheſnuts. RR. 1375. Fr. Châtaigne.
- Cheve*: To thrive, proſper. No. 1246.
- Cheveſaile*: A Gorget. Sk. A necklace. RR. 1082.
- Cheveſaunce*, Cheviſaunce: Merchandiſing; Advantage or Profit in Trade. Prol. 284. Alſo, An Agreement or Compoſition; Payment of money according to agreement. No. 2837, 2899. It is uſed in an ill ſenſe. Bal. 53. & Cheating, an unlawful bargain. In Mo. 1627. it ſeems to be taken for an Action or Achievement.
- Chewice*: To redeem, to effect. Sk. Sp. Perhaps it ſhould be Cherice, CM. 136.
- Chiche*, Fr. A covetous, niggardly fellow. RR. 5588.
- Chicheface*: A meager, hungry, greedy Starveling. Fr. 2209. It ſeems to ſignify a Hobgoblin or Bugbear, ſuch as Nurſes frighten Children withall. See Sk. in Chicheface.
- Chidreſſe*: A ſcold. RR. 4266.
- Chike*: A chick or chicken. RR. 541.
- Childyng*: Conceiving. Bal. Lad. 132.
- Chimbe*: The Rim of a Cooper's veſſel on the outſide of the Head, or Bottom. The end of the Staves from the Groove outwards are called the Chimes. MR. 787.
- Chinche*, RR. 5998. for Chiche, V. So Chincherie for Chiche: Covetouſneſs, Kingineſs. Pars. Chinchy for Chiche or Chiche, V. Chinchy grede: A greedy, covetous perſon. RR. 6002.
- Chirch*: A Church. Chirchbanis: Churchyards. p. 206, b.
- Chirking*, Prol. 2006. Fa. L. 3. 853. Any diſagreeable noiſe; properly the Jarring or Craſhing of a door upon the hinges. There is no doer which may chark, ſays Gower in his Deſcr. of the Houſe of Slepe, Conf. Am. L. 4. f. 79. The ſeld chirking agriſeth of cold, Boeth. p. 364,

- p. 364, b. Siridens campus inhorruit. It is here applied to the Wind.
- Chirish: Chirpeth. Fr. 540.
- Chise: Chideth; Scolded. No. 942.
- Chivalrie: Knighthood; Skill in Arms; Valour, courage; Valiant Exploits, Feats of Arms.
- Chivalrons: Valiant, stout, warlike; Famous for Acts of Chivalry. Tr. L. 5. 802.
- Chivaunche, CMV. 144. for Chivauché: Chivalry; Riding in State.
- Chiver, Chivir: To shiver, shake. Bl. Kn. 231. RR. 1732.
- Chokeling: Chuckling, quavering in the throat. PT. 413.
- Chorle. See Churle. Chorlich. See Charliche.
- Christen, Christin: A Christian. Christenmesse, Christinmesse: Christmas. Christendom: Christianity, the Christian Religion.
- Churle: A country clown; A slave or vassal. p. 205, b. AS. Leopl. Rufous, colonus.
- Charliche: Plain, homely. Mo. 2991. Clownish, rude, simple. See Chereliche.
- Churlish: Like a Churl, rude, unbecoming a Gentleman. Fr. 3077.
- Chynys, Ber. 1619. f. Chinks.
- Ciergis: Wax-Tapers; Lamps. RR. 6248.
- Cipion: Scipio, a famous Roman General. RR. 10. Macrobius wrote a large Comment on Tully's Scipionis. See Mo. 1238, 1239.
- Cipris: Venus, Queen of Cyprus. Fa. L. 2. 10.
- Cite: A City.
- Citrin: Yellow. Sp. Lemon or Citron-colour. Lat. G-trinus.
- Citrimacion, No. 837. Perfect Digestion; the Colour proving the Philosopher's Stone. Sk. Sp. Turning to a Citrine colour by Chymistry.
- Citryn. See Citryn. Instead of citryn, Prol. 2169. MS. Ch. hath certeyn.
- Clambe, Clambin: Climbed. Fa. L. 2. 1061.
- Clapers: Rabbit-holes or Burrows. RR. 1405. Fr. Clapier.
- Clappe, Clappen: To chatter, prate. Test. Who mochill clappish, gabbish oft; He that talketh much, lieth often. Cup. 142. Aye clappish as a mille; Maketh a continual noise like the Clapper of a Mill. Fr. 2233. Clapping: Noisy talking. Ib. 2020.
- Clappir: A Clapper; The Cover of a Cup, with which Beggars used to make a noise by shaking it. Gr. 343, 387. CCR. 63, 76.
- Clapied: Claped; A Transposition of Letters very common in Chaucer.
- Clarie, Clarre, Clarrie: Hippocras-Wine made with Spices, &c. Vinum clarificatum; sen à clare colore, quia per manicam Hippocratis transcolatur. Sk.
- Clatterdin, or (as MS. Ch.) Claterda: Clattered. Prol. 2425.
- Claw, WB. 940. Claw us on the gall; Make us angry by saying disagreeable things. Claw'd him on the bak; Coar'd by clapping him on the back. MR. 1218.
- Cled: Clad, dressed. Tr. L. 3. 1527.
- Clemeth: Claimeth.
- Clenesse: Purity; Holiness. Fr. 619, 646.
- Clepe: To call, to name. Clepid: Called, named.
- Clepih, Sq. 1955. Klyppih, MS. Ch. Clippeth, embracing. See Clippe.
- Clere: Clear. For Bemis clere, Tr. L. 5. 9. read Bemis clene (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to grene and Quene, Ib. 11, 12. But the mistake hath run through all the Editions which I have seen.
- Clerge, Ber. 252. Clergy, Ib. 2015. Learning; Skill. Clergial: Learned. No. 773. Clergion: A young Clerk or Scholar. Ib. 3011.
- Clerke: A Scholar; A person in holy Orders.
- Clevit: Cliffs, rocks. Hyp. 103.
- Clift, Fr. 881. The Cleft of the Fundament.
- Cliket: A key. Sq. 1562. An Instrument of Iron to lift up a Latch. Sp.
- Clip: To cut hair. MR. 218. It is put for Clepe: To call. Bal. 65.
- Clippe, Clippen: To embrace. Tr. L. 3. 1350. Clipping: Embracing. Magd. 163. RL. 130. AS. Clýppan, Ampleti.
- Clips, Clipes: An Eclipse. Test. Clipsy: Eclipsed. RR. 5349.
- Cloistre: An Inclosure. In the cloistre of thy blissfull fadis; In thy blessed womb. No. 43.
- Clombe, Clomben, Clombin: Climbed, mounted, ascended.
- Cloos: Close. RR. 6104.
- Close: Any place inclosed, as a Yard. Mo. 1475. Also, To include, comprehend. RR. 40.
- Clostr: An Inclosure. RR. 4069.
- Clostr: Inclosed. Bal. Lad. 36.
- Clolefe: A Burdock leaf, a leaf of the great Clot-bur. No. 588.
- Clobleffe: Without clothes, naked. p. 196, a.
- Closterid: Clotted.
- Clove gelofer, No. 3271. A Plant commonly called Clove-Gilli-flower, Caryophyllus hortensis. Perhaps Clove, Gilofre in RR. 1368. should be read Clove-gilofre. See Gilofre.
- Clove. See Clove gelofer, and Gilofre.
- Clubid: Having a club-head. Mo. 10.
- Clum, MR. 530. A Note of Silence.
- Coaction: Constraint, compulsion. Test.
- Coarted: Forced, compelled. p. 486, b. Coarter in Old Fr. is to Restrain. Palsgrave's Eclaircissement de la Langue Francoise. And Lidgate useth Coarten in that sense, in the Life of St. Edmund;
- He coude the reynes coarten and restreynne.*
- Cockis bones, Mo. 339. An Oath used in Chaucer's time, and since by King Hen. VIII.
- Cod, No. 2050. O flinkin [i. flinking] cod. By Cod is here meant the Belly; from the AS. Codde, which signifies any Bag; Whence it is that in the North they call a Pillow, a Cod; A Pin-cushion, a Pin-cod. Ray's Coll. p. 16.
- Coffer: A chest. Prol. 300. A coffin. AF. 177. The Elm-tree is so called, because Chests or Coffins were usually made of it.
- Cofrin: To put into a Coffer or chest; To hoard up. Mo. 2047.
- Cogge: A cock-boat. Hyp. 114. It is called a Cogge in some parts of the North. See Spelm. in Cogones.
- Cognifance. See Comifance.
- Coigne: To coin.
- Coilons: Stones, Testicles. No. 2480. Fr. Coillons.
- Coines: Quinces. RR. 1373. Fr. Coïn or Coing, a Quince.
- Coint, Ch. Dr. 1824. for Queins: Odd, strange.
- Cokewold, Cokold: A Cuckold. See a pleasant Etymology of it, RL. 290, &c.
- Cokeny: The Fr. Coguin, from which this word seems to be derived, signifies a Rogue, a Knave, a lazy Beggar, a slothfull fellow: And it is probable that Citizens are called Cokenys, because they generally lead a less active life than Country people do. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 231. in marg. It seems to be used in a different sense in PP. Psal. 6. — I have no salt bacon, Ne no cokeny — colopes for to make. Perhaps it signifies there a sort of a made Dish of meat, from Coguin; unless the meaning be this; Nor am I a Cokeny to make collops, &c. I am not nice to make or desire dainty Dishes or Kickshaws.
- Col, Col foxe, Mo. 1330. A blackish fox, as if it were Colefox. Sk. Coll is a Dog's name. Ib. 1498. It seems to be a sort of a Nick-name. Fa. L. 3. 187.
- Cold, Tr. L. 3. 801. Bal. Lad. 151. Cole, Colln: To cool, to grow cold.
- Colerale: Colourable, pretended. Pr. RL. 55.
- Colere: A collar. Tr. L. 5. 1659.
- Coll. See Col.
- Collaris: Collars. FL. 215.
- Collation: A conference. Fr. 1355. A deduction, an inference. Also, A comparison. Boeth.
- Colling: Embracing about the neck. Overius collings; Wanton embraces. p. 506, b.
- Coloure, Mo. 1043. Choler.
- Colours: Rhetorical Figures. Fr. 1046, 2269, 2272.
- Columbe: A dove. Bal. Lad. 79. Lat. Columba.
- Columbine: Belonging to a dove. Eyin columbine; Dove's eyes. Sq. 1658.
- Columpne: A column, a pillar. Bal. Lad. 125.
- Colyn swerde, PT. 621. f. A sword made at Cologne in Germany.
- Combriment, Combraunce: An incumbrance; trouble. Ber. 1870.
- Cembre: To cumber, to trouble, I cembre world, MS. Sp. the world. Tr. L. 4. 279.
- Combrist:

Combus: Burnt. No. 832. But in Tr. L. 3. 718. it is a Term in Astronomy: When a Planet is not above 8 Degrees and 30 Minutes distant from the Sun, it is said to be Combus, or in Combustion; but MS. Sp. reads it Combrid, i. e. Encombred, in distrefs.

Comeliche: Commonly. Ber. 253.

Committee: Joined, put together; Committed. p. 209, b.

Commance: Community. Sk. Tholding commance; Having all things in common. RR. 5209. Perhaps it should be communance; and that would compleat the Verse, which wants a Syllable.

Commend: Coming. Ber. 1717.

Common: To come. Also, Common. Comen. shinges, p. 362, a. Commonwealth. Lat. Republica.

Commend: Coming, proceeding. Test. L. 3.

Commendidin: Recommended. Tr. L. 3. 17. Com-mended. lb. 218.

Commendment: A recommendation. Test.

Commensal: A boarder. Test. One that eats at the same Table. p. 484, a.

Commevid: Moved. Tr. L. 5. 1597.

Commun: Common. RR. 6237.

Communalte: The Commonalty, the Commons. Mo. 2594.

Commised: Committed. p. 211, b.

Communing: Communicating, receiving the Communion.

Commoue: To move, excite.

Communablie: Commonly. RR. 7189, i.

Communalities: Communities. Test.

Commune: Common, vulgar, general.

Commyns: The Common people, the Mob. Prol. 2511.

Comparison: To compare. Boeth.

Compas, No. 45. Trine compas; The Trinity. See Trine.

Compasment: Contrivance. Hyp. 49.

Compensable, Compinable: Sociable; Fit for company, or conversation; A company-keeper.

Compendously for Compendiously, RR. 2953. Briefly.

Compere: A fellow, an equal; A partner, confort; A companion, a comrade. Prol. 672. See Blo. in Compeer.

Compiler: A compiler.

Compinable. See Compensable.

Complyn: It signifies properly that Evensong which compleated the whole Service of the Day; but it is taken for any Chorus, or Confort of Musick, MR. 1063. See p. 197, a.

Compownd; Compounded. Hyper. 24. Fa. L. 2. 521. Com-posed. p. 439, a.

Compromis for Compromis: A Compromise, which in Law signifies a mutual Promise of Partys at difference to refer their Controversies to one or more Arbitrators. Blo. L. D. In Bal. 444. it signifies simply, a Promise.

Compte: To account. RR. 5026. Comptid: Accounted. CCR. 192.

Comynly: Commonly.

Con: To understand, learn, know; To be able, can. RR. 7126. It is used for Can, V.

Concurbiu, No. 815. It is a glass, earthen or copper Vessel, in shape resembing a Gourd [Lat. Cucurbita] which with the Head is most commonly used in Distillations, or Rectifications; and is usually called a Body, and sometimes a Subliming Vessel.

Cond: To conduct. Ber. 3261.

Condis: Conduits. RR. 1414.

Condit: Conduct. Serve, or seff condit; A Passport. Ber. 3238, 3246.

Conditte: To conduct, guide, govern; To behave. BD. 536.

Confecture: A composition of Medicines. No. 2380.

Confedrid: Confederate; Joyned in a confederacy or combination.

Confirme, p. 158, b. I confirme; I am resolved.

Confuse: Confounded. Tr. L. 4. 356.

Conjir: To conjure; To bewitch. PT. 339.

Conjecte: To conjecture, guess; To project, contrive.

Conjecting: Conjecture, guessing. Conjectemens: Contrivances, Projects. p. 493, a.

Conisance: Knowledge. RR. 5465. It signifies also a Waterman's or other Servant's Badge: Hence it is taken for any Badge or Mark of Distinction. Fr. Con-noissance.

Conjumper: To jumble or joyn together. p. 478, a. Perhaps it should be read conne jumpere in two words, i. e.

Be able to Jumble, or perhaps to Jabber.

Conjure The, Tr. L. 3. 193. I adjure thee: Or it may be read, as in MS. Sp. and Ca. I ajorne the And the, lb. 194. i. e. I appoint a day for your meeting; from the Fr. Ajourner.

Conne: To be able, RR. 5589. Conith, Connith: Can. Mo. 3269. Conne thanks; Acknowledge an obligation, Take it as a favour. Tr. L. 3. 1466. Conne mangre; Owe ill will. RR. 4559. See Mangre.

Conning: Art, skill, knowledge, experience. Connyngly; Witley. So connyngly: With so much affectation of art. Bal. 860.

Conserve: To preserve, save, No. 398. Conservatife: Proper to preserve. Fa. L. 2. 339. Conservatrice: A preserver, fem. She who preserveth. Bal. Lad. 117.

Conistorie: It is commonly used for a Council-house of Ecclesiastical persons, or the Place of Justice in the Court Christian; Also a Session or Assembly of Prelates. Blo. L. D.

Conste: A conceit. Also, To conceive, or express one's meaning. Ch. Dr. 1238. Con conste; Began to declare, or Declared, expressed. See Con.

Constablerie: The Apartment of the Constable or Governor of a Castle, The Keeper. RR. 4218.

Constert: Construction, interpretation. Ber. 68.

Constrain. See Constrained.

Constreine: To torment, vex, make uneasy. Fr. 2366. To hinder; To restrain. Bal. 24. To torture. Mo. 1175. To confine to proper offices; Coercere, Boeth. p. 364, b. Constrainance: Constraint, force. RR. 7438. Constreint: Torment. Tr. L. 4. 741.

Conteke: Contention, strife, discord. Prol. 2004.

Contrade: Contrary. No. 4. Fr. Contraire.

Contrariantes: Things contrary to, contradicting, contradictory.

Contrarious: Contrary; Different. WB. 698. Froward, perverse. lb. 780. Averse to. Di. 435.

Contrariouste, Contrariouste: Contrariety, opposition. Test.

Contrary: An adversary. Prol. 1861. To contradict. Also, Contradiction.

Contrayned for Constrained, Boeth. See Constrained.

Controve: To invent, feign, devise. RR. 4249, 7547. Fr. Contraver.

Contubernial, p. 205, b. Equal. The Lat. Contubernalis signifies a Comrade, a Companion, &c.

Continue: To continue. RR. 4354.

Convail: To recover. RL. 277. See Sk.

Convert: To change one's mind. Tr. L. 2. 903; L. 4. 1412. Convertible, Tough and experience are not convert, i. e. Are not convertible Terms, It cannot be said of the same person that he is both young and experienced. Pr. RL. 111.

Cape: "A large outward Vestment [used by Ecclesiastical persons] covering the Shoulders and the whole Body like a Cloak; Of this kind I take to be those rich "Copes still preserv'd and made use of by the Epistler "and Gospeller in the Cathedral Church of Durham. App. to the AS. Homily published by Mr. Elish. p. 38. See Fr. Gl. in Capa.

Cappe: The End of a thing. Prol. 556. The tip of the nose; The top of any thing; Cacumen, Boeth. p. 369, b.

Corage: The mind, thought; Courage, Spirit; Temper; Affection. Fr. 1729. Will, pleasure. Filled had his corage; Had obtained his will, gained his pleasure, Strength; Robur, Boeth. p. 360, b. Coragious: Minded, resolved. RR. 4416.

Corare, p. 493, a. l. antep. seems to be mistaken for Corage; but it is corare in all the Editions which I have seen.

Corbettis, Fa. L. 3. 214. Stones wherein Images stand. Sk.

Coree. See Corse.

Cordemane, No. 3241. Cordovan, Fine Spanish Leather, so called from Corduba in Spain where it was dressed. Blo.

Cordiacle. See Cardiacle.

Cordileres, RR. 7461. Cordeliers, Grey Fryers of the Order of St. Francis; so called because they wear about their middle a Rope, or Cord full of twilted knots. Blo.

Cordis: Accorded, agreed. Cords, Cordish: Agreeeth, Tr. L. 2. 1043.

Cornwails,

Cornemalle, RR. 4250. Cornwall.

Corniculare for Corniculere, No. 380. There were under the Roman Empire both Civil and Military Cornicularij. The former is meant in this place; concerning whose Office, as well as the Reason of the Name, Civilians and Criticks differ in their opinions. The most probable is, that the Cornicularius was the Officer who registred and published the Acts, Orders or Decrees of the Præfectus Prætorio; and this Cassiodorus seems to imply, Var. L. II. 36. Præfuit [Cornicularius] iuribus [al. curibus] Secretarij. Vide Calv. Lex Jurid. & Pitiset Lex. Antiq. All the Editions which I have perus'd have instead of it, Councilere or Councillere: But H. 1. reads it, Cronculere, and MS. Ch. Cronculere; nor is it to be doubted but Mr. Urry had more express Authority for restoring Corniculere, of which the other is but a Corruption, introduced by the ignorance of the Transcribers, who not understanding the meaning of the word, substituted another in it's place, as Councillere, by changing rn into un, and u into e. The Reading of the MSS. abovementioned retains more of the true one, only o, r, are transposed to make Cronculere, q. d. A Chronieler, a Register of Publick Acts. In the Not. Dign. Imp. Rom. the Cornicularius is frequently mentioned, and is generally the Second Established Officer in the Offices of the Chief Governours of Provinces.

Cornumse, Fr. L. 3. 128. A Bag-pipe. Fr. Cornumse.

Corny ale: Strong, nappy ale. No. 1829, 1970.

Coron, Carown: A crown. ProL. 2291. A garland. No. 232.

The crown of the head; The shaved crown of a Monk. Gam. 1036.

Coronse: Curious. Ber. 3190.

Corrige: To correct. p. 395, a. Corriged: Corrected. p. 390, a.

Corruptable: Corruptible.

Corrupts: To corrupt. ProL. 2748. To sink. Ph. 10.

Cors, Corse: A Corps, or dead body. Also, A body. No. 1819, 3413. To curse. Tr. L. 3. 1707. A Course in Navigation. Ber. 864.

Cosinage: The relation of Cousins. It is used for any kindred. No. 2544. p. 493, a.

Cosbon: A cushion. Ber. 927.

Costage: Cost, charges. WB. 249. Fr. 2147.

Costei: To coast along, to pass by the side of. Bl. Kn. 36. Fr. Costoyer.

Costlewe: Costly, chargeable.

Cote: A cott or cottage. Fr. 1428. Also, A coat.

Cote-armours, Cote-armures: Coats of Arms. ProL. 1018, 2502.

Cotelere: A cutler. Ber. 2561.

Coshe for Coush: Could; Understood. RR. 749.

Cotidien: A Quotidian Ague. RR. 2401.

Conche, Couchen, Couchin: To submit; To lay on. No. 1173. RR. 6903. Combid: Set, as Jewels are. ProL. 2163. Layd. AF. 216.

Cond, Tr. L. 1. 661. or rather Coush (as in MS. Sp.) Knoweth; Knew, understood; Can; Could. Ib. 666: L. 2. 1178.

Coviten: To covet. RR. 6173.

Covenable, Covinable: Convenient, usefull, proper. p. 205, a. Suitable, agreeable. Covenably: Suitably, &c. Competenter, Boeth. p. 394, a.

Cover for Recover, p. 449, a. l. 5.

Coverchiefes, ProL. 455. or (as MS. Ch.) Kerchevis: A woman's Head-clothes. Ar. 317. A Head-dress. Fr. Coverchief; whence by Contraction, Kerchief.

Coverts: Covered; Close, reserved, secret. RR. 6149. BD. 177.

Covertours, Covertures: Coverings. Mo. 2045. Robes.

Covetise: Covetousness.

Coughin: Caught, took up. Lac. 175.

Covine: Fraud, cheat. ProL. 606. Intragues. RR. 3799. Any wicked combinations. Boeth. L. 1. It is properly a deceitful Compact or Agreement between two or more persons to prejudice another. Bl. L. D.

Covircle: A Cover or Lid. Fr. Covercle.

Covirtly: Privately, secretly. RR. 6111.

Covitise, as Covetise.

Conipe: A fault; Guilt. p. 196, a. Culpable: Culpable, blameable; Guilty. Pars. Boeth.

Comp: To account. Tr. L. 5. 363.

Counsaile, Counseile: Counsel, advice; A secret. No. 2337.

In counseile be it seide, i. e. As a secret, in confidence, not to be told again. Fr. 2248.

Countenance: See Comtinance.

Counterfaitours: Deceivers, dissemblers, Hypocrites.

Counterfete. See Counterfete.

Counterplete: To contradict; To reply.

Counterpoise, Counterpeise: To counterpoize: A Counterpoise, a weight put in the contrary Scale. Tr. L. 3. 1413. See Counterpeise.

Counterwaye: To watch against. p. 211, b.

Comtinance, Countenance: A pretence. No. 1285. Make countenance; Make a sign. p. 148, b.

Counterpeise. See Counterpoise. In Fr. L. 3. 660. Py. reads,
To counterpeise ease and traueyle,

That is, To counter-balance ease and labour: The other Reading is scarce intelligible; though it has obtained in all the Editions published since, that have come to my hands.

Counterpleated: Counterpleaded. Sk. Contradicted, See Counterplee in Bl. L. D.

Countour: An Accountant; An Auditor of Accounts. Mo. 2742. RR. 6812. One that counts well. Dr. Ch. 435. A Counter, or Counting-house. Ib. 436. Fr. Contoir.

Counterfreie: To counterfete; To imitate. No. 1961. Mo. 1436. To pretend.

Counteretale: A Counter-tally, One part of a Tally answering to, or tallying with the other: And thence it is in Fr. 2210. applied to the Echo's exactly answering to what is spoke.

Consegorge, Fr. A Cut-throat; A dangerous place by reason of Assassins, Robbers, &c.

Coure: To crouch, cringe, bow. Mo. 2147. Courid: Crouched, squatted down. RR. 465. See Sk.

Cowfin: A fine, deceitfull or cunning heart, says Sk. from the Fr. Cœur fin: But it can scarce bear that sense in Bal. 325. O cowfin figure, which perhaps should be read Corsin, or corvin figure, that is, A carved figure, As compleat as a Statue.

Cowse, Tr. L. 2. 970. Ca. and Py. read the Verse thus;

And spreden out theyr colours kyndly by rowe;

which gives a very easy and natural sense, viz. Flowers, which being closed up through the coldness of the night by drooping upon their stalks, recover themselves against the Sun-shine, and spread their colours naturally in their order. Colours seems to be corrupted to Cowrs, by the negligence of the Copyers.

Cowtepy, ProL. 292. A short upper garment, which did not reach to the feet. Sk.

Courtman: A Courtier. Sq. 1008.

Coush: Known; Famous. ProL. 15. AS. Lu8, Notms. Also, Can; Could; Knoweth; Knew. See Cond.

Covercheffe. See Coverchiefes.

Coye: Quiet. Coyen, Tr. L. 2. 801. Koy, MS. Sp. Coy, Ca. To coax, soothe, appease, keep quiet. Fr. Coy, Calm, quiet.

Craftie: Skillfull. No. 1311.

Crakid: Cracked, boasted. MR. 893. Crakish: Maketh a hoarse quavering in the throat. See Crakil.

Crakil: To crackle, to make a cracking noise. In CN. 119. it signifies a disagreeable quavering in singing, as Crakish is used in Sq. 1367.

Crallis: Engraven. Sp. Sk. Harneis quaintly crallit; Furniture curiously embroidered.

Crampishish: Gnaweth. Sp. A word made from the sound of the cranching of the teeth in chewing. Sk. Perhaps Crampish signifies To cramp or bend violently. An. 170. and from thence is translated to signify the effect produced in the heart by Anguish of Mind in Lidgate, Fl. 49. There is a parallel Passage in the same Author's Life of St. Edmund;

Constreint of rygour made hem sore swerte,
Which as they thought craumpyshed al here berie.

And perhaps at mine berie in Fl. 49. should be read at mine berie, as here at here berie.

Crased: Cracked. No. 955. Fr. Ecrafer, To crack.

Creance: Faith, belief; Trust, credit; Confidence. Fr. Creance. Also, To buy upon credit or trust, or rather To settle Accounts. No. 2797, 2874.

Creause, No. 2811. as Creance.

Crede: Cread. Mo. 3906. It signifies a Treatise bearing that that Title;

*And of Ereris I have before
Told in a making of a Credo.*

There is nothing extant under Chaucer's name that bears the Title of a Credo. But there is a Poem, Intituled Piers Plowman's Credo, which is a Satyr against the Fryars; whether that be the Credo here meant, or Jack Upland (as some think) or some other Piece on that Subject, I will not pretend to determine: If the Author of this Tale means the first, it follows that either that Credo was written by Chaucer, or that the Plowman's Tale is not his. It is wanting in some MSS. as MS. Ch. and H. 1. and in them (as in the printed Editions that want this Tale) the Parson's Prologue, which immediately follows the Manciple's Tale, begins to this effect;

*By that the Manciple had his Tale endid,
The Sunne fro the South side is descendid, &c.*

Crenclid: Crinkled; Full of windings and turnings. Ar. 127.

Crepil: A cripple. Tr. L. 4. 1458.

Crepusculis: The Twilight. p. 144, b. Lat. Crepusculum.

Crevasse, Fr. A crevis or chink. Fa. L. 3. 996.

Griande: Crying. RR. 3138.

Grips for Crisp or Crisped: Curled. Fa. L. 3. 296.

Crispe. See Grips.

Croce, Croice, Crois, Croise: A cross.

Croisery, Mo. 2385. Those for whom Christ suffered on the Cross. Sp. and Com. Christians, called in the next Verse, Christis Christen creturis. l. creatouris to rhyme to honouris and labouris in the following Verses; Creature being in MSS. often writ creature. The It. Croceria signifies a Company of Soldiers belonging to a Crusade. Here it may signify the Company or Society of Christian people: And perhaps this place should be read,

— Croiserie
Of Christis Christen creatouris.

Croke: To bend; To grow crooked. Test. In crokeing of the moon; When the moon was crooked or horned, as it is upon the Increase and Decrease of it. PT. 398.

Crockettes: Locks of hair. Sk. f. Croffes. Thei kembe their crockettes with cristal; They adorn their Crucifixes with Chrystal. Mo. 2246. But Com. explains it, They combe their locks with cristal combes.

Crokid: Crooked. Crokidly: Crookedly. An. 172.

Cromes, Crommes: Crumbs.

Crommid: Crammed. Fa. L. 3. 1039.

Crone: An old woman. La. 433. See Sk. Old ewes are called Crones in some parts of England. See Ray's Coll.

Cronique: A Chronicle, Annals, History. Hen. 338.

Crop, Crophe: The top. Croppis: The tops of trees, or twigs. RR. 1396. Prol. 7. Crophe and rote; Top and bottom. This Phrase generally expresses the Perfection of a thing; as, The crophe and rote of beaute, Tr. L. 2. 348. The crophe and rote of gile, Cup. 17. The perfection of beauty — guile. I know crop and rote; I know it thoroughly, perfectly.

Crope, Cropin: Crept. Fr. 3168. Test.

Croffet, Croffolet, Croffilet: A crucible. Fr. Crenset.

Crouch: To cross, to make the sign of the Cross. Sq. 1223.

Croude: To play on a Crowd, or any Musical Instrument. Also, To sing to make any melody.

Croule: Curled.

Croupe: The crupper. Fr. 295.

Crowis feet: Crow's feet. Tr. L. 2. 404. By this are meant the Wrinkles under the Eyes which are the effect of Age, and resemble the impressions of Crow's feet. Instead of growin, in that Verse, MS. Sp. hath be wox, i. e. be grown.

Cruk, MR. 1050. A crock, an earthen pot or cruse. AS. Epocca. CB. Gochan. Vide Baxteri Gloss. in voce Bascanda.

Crull: Curled. MR. 206.

Cry, Ber. 2345. The sholdris and the cry; f. The head and shoulders. Perhaps Cry may be writ for Creyn, Fr. Crane. Lat. Cranium, The skull; the e and the Dash for n being omitted by the Transcriber, as well as that over sey, at the end of the foregoing Verse.

Cryaunce: Faith, belief. ABC. H. See Crenuance.

Cryden: Cried. Crydiflow: Cryest thou.

Culle: To pick and chuse; To distinguish. In Mo. 2207. perhaps it is put for quell, V. as cullish for quellish, lb. 2533, 3244. Com. explains Culle [al. culleth] all her adversaries; Pluck out and drive away all that are against them.

Culpons: Strikes, heaps, small parts. Sp. In Prol. 68f. the Pardoner's hair is said to lie by culpons, i. e. here and there one. The Italians say Colpo colpo, Now and then.

Culver: A dove, a pigeon. Ph. 92. AS. Eulpepe.

Cum: To come. Gr. 361. Came. Test. L. 3.

Cunning, as Conning.

Cupp, Fr. 2488. Withoutin cupp dranke he all his penaunce; He swallowed down his grief by wholesale; A form of Speech taken from Sots who drink out of the Pot, without making use of a cup.

Curation: Cure; A remedy. Tr. L. 1. 792.

Cure: Care. Take no cure; Take no care. WB. 138. I do no cure; I care not. LW. 152. Busy cure; Officious, diligent care. Magd. 207. Endeavour. Tr. L. 1. 370. A good office. RR. 6752. Also, A cover. Bl. Kn. 53. To cover. Cr. 10.

Curfew-time: The time for covering the fire. MR. 537. William the Conqueror, in the First year of his Reign, commanded that in every Town and Village a Bell should be rung every night at Eight of the Clock, and that all persons should then put out their fire and candle, and go to bed; the ringing of which Bell was called Curfew, Fr. Couvre-feu, i. e. Cover-fire.

Curious: Carefull. RR. 6578. Curious besineffe; Business which requires great care and application. No. 2733.

Curriden: Courted, curried favour. Test.

Currows: Couriers, messengers. Fa. L. 3. 1038.

Curfiness: Wickedness, execrable villany.

Curteise, Curteys, Curtise: Courteous, affable. Prol. 99.

Curry-favel: Flattery. PT. 362. The Author of the Art of English Poetrie, printed 1589. calls the Figure Paradiastole, Curry favel, which is (as he explains it) "when we make the best of a bad thing, or turn a signification to the more plausible sense; as to call an unthrifty, a liberal Gentleman: the foolish-hardy, valiant or courageous: the niggard, thrifty: a great riot or outrage, a youthfull prank, and such like terms; moderating and abating the force of the matter by craft, and for a pleasing purpose."

Curysye: Curiosity.

Cusky, PT. 423. The words [to slepe] which follow it, seem to have been at first a Gloss in the margin for explaining the CB. Cusky or Cysgu, To sleep.

Customable: Customary, accustomed, used. BD. 551. Acquainted with the world, or custom in such cases.

Customance: Custom. Mo. 537. But instead of a customance, Py. 1. hath accustomance, in one word.

Customere, RR. 4936. as Customable.

Cush for Couth, V.

Cypride, AF. 276. Venus Queen of Cyprus. In the former Editions it was Cupide; which is wrong, as is plain from what goes before and what follows, lb. 279.

Cyte: A city.

Cytezins: Citizens. Boeth.

D.

Daffe: A Dastard, a coward. MR. 1100. In Ray's Coll. To Daffe is To daunt; and Dafi is Stupid, blockish, daunted.

Daggies: Latchets [or Slips] cut out of leather. Sp. Sk. It also signifies the Skirts of a Fleece that are cut off. Dagging: Cutting into small slips, flits or pieces. p. 198, a. Dagged: Cut into daggies. lb. All to flittered, as it is expressed in RR. 840. To Dagge sometimes signifies To daggle.

Dagon: A piece, a remnant. Fr. 487. from Dagge. It seems to have an affinity with the CB. Dogn, A certain quantity, or proportion.

Dais: Day. It is put for the Day or Time of one's death;

- death; as, His father's daie; His father's decease. Mo. 298. After his daie; After his death. Fr. 3001. And sometimes for An appointed time. To graunt him daies of [f. for] the remenaunt; To grant him certain Terms for the payment of the remainder. Ib. 3129. See No. 1062.
- Daine: To vouchsafe.
- Dainous, as Deignous.
- Daintie: Dainty, delicate, nice. Fr. 1295.
- Dainy: Daintiness; Respect, esteem, value. Told no dainy of ther love; Regarded, or valued not their love. WB. 208. See Deinte.
- Dalse: Dug up, tilled; from Delve, To dig.
- Dalliance: Dalliance; Conversation; Pleasant, humorous conversation. Magd. 533.
- Damascene: Damascus, or the Country about it. Feld of Damascene is put for Paradise. Mo. 119. So Lidgate in the Fall of Princes, &c. L. i. Ch. i. useth Damascene the felde.
- Dame: Mother. A maid to dame; A virgin to his mother. Mo. 3291. Damis tongue; Mother's tongue. Tess.
- Dammageous: Hurtfull, prejudicial. p. 198, b.
- Dampne: To condemn. Damnid, Dampnid: Condemned.
- Dan: An old Appellation for Master, put before Proper Names; as, Dan John, Dan Arcite, &c. and answers to the Spanish Don. It comes from the Fr. Dame, which was anciently used indifferently for Men and Women.
- Dare: To stare. Sk. To be in pain. See Ray's Coll.
- Dareyn, Darreigne, Darreyn: To attempt; To dare; To reclaim; To challenge; To set in array, to prepare for fight. See Sk. and Spelm. in Adramire.
- Darn: Dare.
- Dasid: Amazed. Mo. 3256. Dazzled, blinded.
- Dasin: To twinkle; To grow dim-sighted. Mo. 1608.
- Dases: Evidences, Writings. Old dases; Antient History, Antiquity. Mo. 2007.
- Dauugere, Dauugir: Coyness, shyness, scruple, difficulty; Frugality, parsimony. RR. 1147. Power, reach. Ib. 1470. Wib dauuger; Sparingly. Dauugers: Nice, coy, shy; Niggardly, sparing; Difficult, scrupulous.
- Dauut: To conquer. Paris.
- Daway: Do away, i. e. Take away, or Away with it.
- Daw: Day; Time. By eldir daw; In antient time, In former days. Mo. 2583. Also, To dawn. MR. 1141. Dawis: Days.
- Dawning: The dawn, or break of day. Ar. 300.
- Daurat: Golden, gilt. Bl. Kn. 598.
- Debate: To fight, contend. Also, Strife, contention; Uneasiness. BD. 698.
- Debonaire: Gentle, meek, affable, courteous, mild; Mis., Boeth. Debonairly: Humbly, meekly, &c. Debonairte: Kindness, meekness, &c. Clemency.
- Decerneth: Discerneth.
- Decopid: Peaked. Sk. Pinked, cut in figures, as of the Windows of St. Paul's. MR. 210. From the Fr. Decouper, To cut.
- Decorate, p. 376, b. Decoratus, A man's name.
- Ded: Did. Ber. 3098.
- Dede: Dead; Did; An Act, or Deed. Also, Death. CN. 131.
- Dedely: Deadly; Devoted to death. Fr. 2586.
- Deden: Did.
- Dedliche: Deadly, mortal.
- Deed, as Dede.
- Dees. See Deis and Des.
- Defaite: To decay, to alter in one's countenance; Also, Lean, wasted, thin in the face. Fr. Defait.
- Defaitid, as Defaite.
- Defame: Infamy, an ill name. Fr. 1750. Mo. 573. BD. 705.
- Defaute: Defect, want; Default, fault. Fr. Defaut. In his defaute; Through his fault. BD. 270.
- Defence: Prohibition; Hindrance. Your defence; Whatsoever you forbid. Tr. L. 3. 138. Fr. Defense.
- Defende: To forbid. Fr. Defendre. Also, to preserve, keep. RR. 5800. Defendid: Forbad, forbidden.
- Defame, as Defame.
- Deficate, f. for Deificate, Cr. 288. Deified, made Gods; Divine.
- Definishe: To define.
- Definitive: Final; Positive, determined.
- Defoiled: Defiled. Bal. 1073. Foiled, cast down, trampled upon. p. 193, a. From the Fr. Fowler, To tread under feet.
- Deformate: Deformed. Cr. 349.
- Defoule: To defile, pollute. Defoulid: Defiled.
- Degre: Stairs. RR. 485. Footsteps. p. 386, b.
- Deid, Deide: Dyed. Tr. L. 1. 56. Dy'd or coloured. Boeth.
- Deidin: To dye; Dyed. Fr. 637.
- Deigneliche, as Digneliche. In Tr. L. 2. 1024. Ca. reads clerkly (i. e. Learnedly) instead of digneliche.
- Deignous: Disdainfull; Angry, coy.
- Deine: To dye. Di. 256. Also, To vouchsafe.
- Deinons, as Deignous.
- Deinte, Deiny: A rarity, what seldom happens. Tr. L. 2. 164. Pleasure, desire. Also, Desirable, pleasant. Fr. 2133. See Dainy.
- Deis: A Throne; A seat. Sq. 79. It properly signifies a Canopy, or Cloth of State. Fr. Dais.
- Deite: Deity; Divine Power or Dominion. Fr. 2593.
- Deins: Deacons.
- Del, Dele, Dell, Domle, Dyll: A part, share, portion. Every dell, or dyl, AL. 227. Every whit, every part. Nevir a dele; Nothing at all, Not a jot. No. 2186. Not a dele; Not in the least. RR. 6897. No more a dele; No more at all. Ib. 7041. Also, To share, divide, distribute. Dele, Ber. 451. for Dole, V.
- Delectable: Delightfull, pleasant.
- Delectation: Delight. Magd. 306.
- Delibered: Deliberated, considered; Thought.
- Deliberen: To deliberate, to consider. Tr. L. 4. 169. But MS. Sp. hath Dyoyfin, which signifies the same thing.
- Delicacie: Pleasure. Mo. 505.
- Delices: Delights, pleasures. No. 3.
- Delie: Small, thin, slender. Right delie threde; Very fine thread; Tenuissimis filis, Boeth.
- Delitable, as Delectable.
- Delites, Ber. 123. should be Delice, V.
- Delitous, as Delectable.
- Deliver: Nimble, active. RR. 831. Deliverliche, Deliverly: Nimble, quickly. Deluernes: Agility of body, activity.
- Dell. See Dil.
- Delve: To dig. See Dike.
- Deluwe: Deluge. p. 207, b.
- Delyver. See Diliver.
- Demain, Demaine, Demoine: To govern, to rule. Also, Government, dominion, empire, power.
- Demaunde: A question. Bl. Kn. 566. Also, A petition, a request; Desire. Fr. Demande.
- Deme, Demen, Demin: To judge, determine; To condemn. Mo. 2585.
- Demening: Demeanor, behaviour. Magd. 226.
- Demontake: One possessed with a Devil.
- Dent: Dint, a stroke, a blow; An impression, a mark. Dent of lovis dart; The stroke, or wound of love's dart. CL. 836. Also, Din, noise. A thonder dent, MR. 699. Dente of thonder, Fa. L. 2. 26. A clap of thunder. AS. Dyn.
- Dentour: An Indenture, any thing indented. As a dentour wygeth; Windeth like an Indenture. Ber. 2057.
- Denude: To untie a knot; To extricate, or disengage; from the Fr. Denouer. RL. 140. seems to be corrupted: The difficulty arises from the word ridde, which is synonymous to denude. There is certainly a mistake in the Verse following of Flastirris for Flastiriffe, A flattering woman; the Poet alluding to Prov. II. 16, 17.
- Denwere: Doubt. See Sk.
- Deol, as Dole.
- Depaint: Painted; Bedaubed. No. 2478.
- Depardour, as Parde, V.
- Depart, Departin: To depart; To part, separate, divide, share, distribute; To take part. Also, To be separated. p. 207, b.
- Depe: Deep. Depir: Deeper. Depliche: Deeply.
- Depeinted, as Depaint.
- Depe loupe, Bal. Lad. 92. Transparent, giving thorow light. Sp. Sk. thinks it should be read Develoupe, from the Fr. Developpé, Unfolded, &c. as if it meant, Discovered, manifest. Though this is far from giving satisfaction, I shall forbear offering any Conjectures grounded upon the supposed Corruption of the place (which (which hath passed through all the Editions I have perused) having no MS. to consult upon it. Loupe, in Fr. signifies, A magnifying Glasse.

Depir, Depliche. See Depe.

Deprave, Depravin: To defame, to slander.

Dequace: To dash. Sp. To quash, overcome. See Sk. in Quash. Perhaps it may come from the Lat. Decussare, or Decutere.

Dercked: Darkened. Boeth.

Dere: To hurt. Mo. 113. Dear. He maie not holde his treasure dere; He should not think his money ill layd out, or the Treasure of friendship bought too dear. RR. 1180.

Dearer. Tr. L. 1. 174. which Ca. reads thus;
Nas neuer seen thyng to be preyed derre.

Dereworth: Dear, precious. Dere norisby digned, Bal. Lad. 39. perhaps should be read Dereworth digned, i. e. Esteemed most precious and valuable.

Derk: Dark. Fr. 2390.

Derne: Secret; Earnest, careful; Cruel, severe.

Derre: Dear; Dearer. See Dere.

Des: A Canopy of State. Fr. Dais. See Deis.

Desceivance: Deceit, deceiving; Mistake. Boeth.

Descrie, Describe: To describe.

Deserne: To discern, Tr. L. 4. 390.

Desiderye Desire. Bal. 382.

Desine for Define, Tr. L. 4. 390. MS. Sp. and Ca. Dyffine: To determine, conclude.

Desire: Desirable. Bal. Lad. 229.

Deslave: Lecherous, lascivious. See Sk.

Desolase: Ruined, undone. No. 2114.

Despight, Despue: An Affront, injury, spite, contempt. See Dispite.

Despotten, f. leg. Bespotten: To bespot, stain, defile; Communiaculant. Boeth. p. 376, b.

Destinable: Fatal, ordered by Fate; Fatalis. Boeth.

Destrer: A War-horse. No. 3418. Fr. Destrier. See Sk. and Sp. Some think it first signified, a Led Horse from the Lat. Dextra, The right hand. Gl. Lab.

Destrie: To destroy. Mo. 3084.

Determinission: Determination; Distinction. p. 505, b.

Detellese: Free from debt. Prol. 584.

Deviant: Deviating, wandering, out of the way.

Devide: To divide, to part; To depart. Mo. 304.

Devineresse: A Witch, a Prophetess.

Devir: Endeavour; Duty. Fr. Devoir.

Devise: To direct, to order; To declare, tell, rehearse; To describe. Also, Will or pleasure. RR. 1326, 1974.

Devised: Divided. Hen. 235.

Devoide: Void. Also, To remove, put away. See Voide.

Devoir, as Devir.

Devorse for Divorce, Magd. 284.

Devour for Devour, p. 205, b. Dener, MS. Ch.

Devysionne: Division; Discord. Ber. 720.

Deme: Due. Dwte: Duty.

Dey, Mo. 959. A Dairy-woman. Sk.

Dye: To dye. Dryde: Dyed. Drydist: Didst dye.

Deynonse, MR. 833. Denyys, Dionysius, A man's name; or perhaps it may signify Proud, haughty, as Denom, V.

Diaper. "Diapering is a Term in Drawing, when you lightly trace or run over with a pen, in Damask-branches or such like, your other work when you have quite done. It chiefly serveth to counterfeit Cloth of Gold, Silver, Damask brancht, Velvet, Chamlet, &c. with what branch, or in what fashion you list. Peacham's Comp. Gent. p. 345. Diaprid: Diversified with flourishes, or sundry figures varied. Prol. 2160. RR. 934.

Diche: A Ditch. Also, To dig, to fortify with a ditch. Th. 3. Dichid: Inclosed with a ditch.

Did, for Bid, Prol. 187. See Bir.

Dide, Didim: Did; Dyed.

Died: Perfumed. RR. 1705.

Diete, perhaps for Deite: Deity. RR. 5646.

Dietes for Dietes: Dittys, Songs. See Dise.

Diffame: To defame, to slander, to disgrace, to reproach. Of ther mishap he diffame; Upbraid them with their misfortune. RR. 5500.

Diffence: Defence; Resistance. Ber. 1247.

Difynished: Defined. Boeth.

Digestible: Easy of digestion. Prol. 439.

Digestives: Medicines to help digestion. Mo. 1076.

Dight: To deck, adorn; To dress; To prepare. In Tr. L. 5. 37. instead of dight, read dress (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to weichidnesse and redresse. See Dress. It also signifies Decked, dressed, &c. He him dight, Mo. 553. He betook himself.

Digne: Worthy; Gentle; Disdainful, coy. Prol. 519.

Dirty, nasty, MR. 856. qu. Dingy, from Dung, AS.

Dincg. It is also put for Deigne: To vouchsafe. Tr. L. 3. 139. Digneliche, Dignely: Worthily; Properly.

Dike: To dig, to cast up a ditch. Dike and delve, Prol. 538. f. Dig with mattock and spade. See Ray's Coll. in Dig.

Dilatation: Enlargement. La. 233.

Delectable, as Delectable.

Diminacion (or as MS. Sp. Tr. L. 3. 1341. Diminacion) Abatement.

Dine, RR. 6500. Dinir, Tr. L. 2. 1489. Dinner. See Adine.

Ding: To beat, to knock or thrust down, drive, squeeze, oppress.

Dint, Tr. L. 5. 1504. See Dent.

Diourne denarie, Bal. Lad. 66. Daily pay or wages.

Dirige, Magd. 641. A Psalm or Hymn sung at Funerals; whence Dirge signifies any mournful Song.

Disable: Unable. Bal. 572.

Disacordant: Disagreeing.

Disavaunce: To distress; To stop, or hinder the progress of. Tr. L. 2. 511. To cast down.

Disaventure: Misfortune, mischance. Tr. L. 4. 297.

Disblame: To excuse, or clear one from blame. Disblame with me; Blame not me. Tr. L. 2. 17.

Disceite, Disceipte: Deceit, falsehood.

Disceivable: Deceitful, treacherous. RR. 4836.

Disceidid: Alighted. Fr. 2798. Descended; Condescended. p. 149, 4.

Disconsoun: Dissention, discord.

Disconsories: Stills used for Distillation per destensum, that is, when the matter to be distilled is placed under the fire, whereby the Spirits are precipitated and forced downwards. No. 817.

Disention: Dissention, discord. Sc. 199.

Discepcion: Deception, deceit, dissimulation. CCr. 197.

Discever for Dissever: To distinguish; To consume, dissipate. No. 896. To separate, or depart. Magd. 707.

Disceveraunce: Separation. Tr. L. 3. 1430.

Disceving: Deceit. RR. 1590.

Dischance yewe not, P. T. 471. perhaps for Discharge yewe not; Give not over your charge.

Dischevele: Dishevelled, having ones hair hanging loose. Prol. 686. Fr. Dechevelé.

Disclaunder: To slander, to reproach. Mo. 2273, 3203.

Disclaundre: Slander, scandal. Tr. L. 4. 564.

Discomfite: Disconsolate, comfortless. BD. 35. RR. 4067.

Discomfiture: A defeat, or overthrow in battle. Prol. 1010. Sorrow. An. 328.

Discomfortin: To discourage.

Discordable, Discordant: Disagreeing, different; Contrary.

Discorden: To disagree, differ. Boeth.

Discoverte: Open, bare, naked, uncovered. p. 204, 4.

Discovered. BD. 405. Fr. Déconvert.

Disconeryn: To discover; To explain.

Discrivin: To describe, Tr. L. 5. 1313. MS. Sp. bath Disconeryn instead of it.

Disceinons: Disdainfull, haughty. RR. 7412.

Disencefe: To diminish, to fail. Boeth. Diminution. Bl. Kn. 203.

Disceidid: Descended. Tr. L. 5. 1479.

Disese: Uneasiness, trouble, hurt. Mo. 3190. Misfortune, affliction; To disturb, incommode, make uneasy. Also, To disseize, dispossess, deprive. RR. 2076.

Disesely: Uneasy, troubled; Indisposed.

Disfetirly: Deformedly; In disguise. Dight him effe agens right disfetirly, Ber. 1781. He presently placed his fingers again in a deformed manner by distorting them, as in the following Verse.

Disgisenesse: Disguise. Ber. 1789.

Disguish in queintice: To dress neatly. RR. 2250.

Disheritie, Prol. 2928. (Disherited, MS. Ch.) Disheritid, Di. 140. Disinherited; Dispossessed, deprived.

Disjoints,

Disjointe, Disjoyn: A hard case, danger. Sk. Stont in Suche disjointe, No. 2919. qu. in malo articulo constitutus. Sk. In what disjoint he more sondin; In what danger he must be. Hyp. 264. In Lidgate's Story of Thebes, Part II. 32. it plainly signifies Difference or Discord. The Poet there describes the inveterate Quarrel of the two Sons of Oedipus about the Crown, in this manner;

*So bote brent of hatred and envie
Of bothe two through pompons surquedie,
That neither wolde pleinie in o poyncte
Ocher forbere, they stode in such disjointe,
Like as they had of birth bene foreins.*

Diskenynge hym, PT. 20. Withdrawing or keeping out of the notice of others; Concealing or hiding himself.

Discoverith yewe: Discover yourself. Ber. 1497.

Diskynning the peyntur, PT. 151. It should be Diskynning, i. e. Discovering, or explaining the Painting.

Disobeyant: Disobedient. AF. 429.

Disordinaunce: Disorder, confusion. Fa. L. 1. 27.

Dispairid: Despairing, in despair. Tr. L. 1. 42.

Disparage: Disparagement. Fr. 1929.

Dispartin: To divide, to share, to distribute.

Dispairid, Mo. 873. as Dispairid.

Dispence, Dispens: Expence. Prol. 443. WB. 1263.

Dispend: To spend, consume. Fr. 2144. To divide. p. 153, b. Dispendours: Spend-thrifts.

Disperance: Despair. Tr. L. 2. 530. which in MS. Sp. is thus read; — But from derke desperance, That, &c.

Dispice for Dispise: To despise.

Dispie: Spight, revenge. Prol. 949. Aversion, hatred; Contempt, disdain. See Despie. Dispitions, Prol. 518.

Spightfull, severe, having no pity or compassion. Dispitously: Spightfully, angrily; Without pity. Fr. 1565.

Displeasance: Displeasure. RR. 3436.

Dispoilin: To undress. Fr. 1404. To spoil, rob. RR. 5066.

Dispone: To dispose.

Disport: Sport, diversion, pleasure. Prol. 137. To take one's pleasure; To make sport, to divert. Tr. L. 2. 1673. But this and the following Verses are thus read in Ca.

*And hym with al hyr hert she gan disport
As she best cowde of sorow hym to comfort.*

See Ib. L. 3. 1139, 1140.

Disposition: Disposal. Prol. 2366.

Dispraise: To undervalue, to despise. Dispraising: Contempt.

Dispravin, Cup. 265. as Deprave.

Dispyit, as Despyght, and Dispite.

Disruly: Irregularly, in a disorderly manner. RR. 4900.

Disseie: Deceit, treachery. Bal. 936.

Disseiving: Deceiving. Boeth.

Dissever: To separate. Dissevered from holie church; Excommunicated. Mo. 3172.

Dissevin: To deceive. CL. 1038.

Disseyuabill: Deceitfull. Ber. 925.

Dissimulate: Dissembling. Gr. 225.

Dissemble: To dissemble, feign.

Disfoluteoun: Dissoluteness, debauchery, lewdness. Mo. 4898.

Dissonid: Dissonant, disagreeing. RR. 4248.

Distaine: To stain, defile. Tr. L. 2. 840. Magd. 165.

Distauunce: Difference, discord. Mo. 3106. Sc. 162.

Distemper: To discompose. Distemper you not; Be patient. Fr. 931. Distemper not your heart; Do not discompose your mind. p. 151, b. Distemperaunce: Intemperance. p. 387, b.

Disteynid: Stained, defiled. PT. 341.

Distinct: To distinguish. RR. 6199.

Distingued: Distinguished. Boeth.

Dispointe, Tr. L. 3. 497. for Disjointe, V.

Distourbe, Distourbin; To disturb, interrupt; To disappoint, hinder, prevent. Tr. L. 4. 1103.

Distourblid: Disturbed. RR. 1713.

Distrain: To constrain. p. 191, b. To distress, to torment; To catch, take hold fast; To obtain. p. 151, b. To take away by force. Mo. 1738. Distraigned: Tormented, afflicted, &c. Bl. Kn. 134.

Distrakt, Ber. 2645. Distrakht, Magd. 149. Distracted. Distreine, as Distrain.

Distreyte: Distress, extremity. In Ber. 2910. perhaps it should be read in their own disseite, i. e. In that deceit, or snare which they treacherously designed for others: Or else Distreyte may signify a District, Liberty or Jurisdiction, as the Fr. Descrete is used, Lob. To. II. col. 446. O toutes jurisdictions e desretes; With all Jurisdictions and Districts, or Liberties.

Distrie, Mo. 3165. as Destrie.

Distroubeleth: Disturbeth, hindereth. Distroublid: Disturbed. Dr. Ch. 524. See Distourbe.

Distryue, f. for Discryue: To describe. Ber. 1924.

Disturblesh, as Distroubeleth.

Disturne: To turn away, to avert. Tr. L. 3. 719. Fr. Detourner.

Disware: Not aware. Ber. 2311. Unwary, careless. Disware of his lyve; Regardless of his life. Ib. 1992.

Dite: Ditly Cretensis, who wrote of the Trojan War. Also, a Tract or Treatise either in Prose or Verse, but most commonly the latter. Also, To write or endite. RR. 6786. Ditces: Dittys, Songs. p. 359, a.

Ditte, as Dite.

Diversif: Diversifieth; Varieth. Tr. L. 3. 1758.

Divine: To imagine. Mo. 1381. Also, Divinity. RR. 6488. See Ib. 6553.

Divinistre: A Divine. Prol. 2813.

Division, Divisoun: Distinction, difference. Fort. 33. p. 152, a. Mart's divisoun; That part of the Painting wherein the Misfortunes of War were represented. Prol. 2026.

Do: Done. Also, To cause a thing to be done. I will do you so much; I will order matters so; that, &c. p. 149, b. Do inough; To satisfy, p. 207, a. Doande: Doing. RR. 2708.

Dobil: Double. Ber. 153.

Docers, Ber. 101. f. corrupted from Diores. Dacia in It. signifies a Leaden Pipe to convey water from the top of a house.

Doe: Done. The world is doe; The world is at an end. Bal. 931. See Do.

Doin: To do.

Dole: Sorrow; Moan, lamentation, mourning. RR. 2956. To grieve. It dolith me; It grieves me. No. 1114. Fr. Duil, Mourning, from the Lat. Doleo, To grieve. Also, A share or part. Wibounin halvin dole; Without dividing. Ib. 2364.

Dolour: Sorrow, grief, pain. RR. 5016.

Dolvin: Dug; Buried. RR. 4070.

Doly, Cr. 1. Dolefull, melancholy, from Dole, V.

Dombe: Dumb.

Dome: Judgment; Opinion. As to my dome; In my opinion. Sq. 697. A Judicial Sentence. Domis day; The Day of Judgment. Mo. 2271. What evill the dome, &c. No. 2913. See The dome. Dimis: Judgments. Dimisman: A Judge. Mo. 526. p. 201, b.

Domus for Domis, Ber. 35. See Dome.

Don, Dne: To do; Done. Also, Of a dun colour. AF. 334. Done honours; To do honours. In former Editions it was printed, done honours or honoris, by mistaking the Abbreviation of honours or honoris.

Donet, p. 504, b. signifies a Grammar (as the CB. Dynod, likewise does) from Alius Donatus, who wrote several Tracts in Grammar and Criticism.

Donnow, WB. 218. Dunnow, a Priory in Essex, where there was a Custom, That any person who had been married a year and a day, upon taking an Oath before the Prior and Convent, That he had not repented of it in that time, was intitled to a Gammon or Flitch of Bacon; which being delivered to him he was conducted out of the Town with great solemnity. See Weaver's Fun. Mon. and Mon. Angl. To. II. p. 78.

Donne: To do; Done. Also, Of a dun colour. Tr. L. 2. 908.

Dio, Dion: To do; Done.

Dormant: Standing or lying always ready, never removed. His table dormant, i. e. Always covered. Prol. 355.

Dorr: A door. PT. 135.

Dortour: A Dormitory; A common Sleeping-room in Monasteries, &c.

Doseperis,

Dofeperis, Dofiperis, Fr. Les Douze Pairs; The Twelve Peers of France. The French Antiquarys and Historians are not agreed as to their Original: Some carry it up as high as Charlemagne. Such as would be more particularly informed concerning them may consult Valefij Nos. Gal. p. 280, b. Hist. de France par le Pere Daniel. To. I. col. 1355. Mezeray. To. II. p. 2, 3, 9, 84. L'Etat de France, Ed. 1718. To. II. p. 126, &c. Fr. Gl. in Pares Francia. In Ber. 44. 51. some Legendary Governors of Rome are so called in allusion to those of France.

Big looking like a doughty Donzerepere.

Spenser's Fairy Q. L. 3. Canto 10. St. 31.

Doffer, Fa. L. 3. 850. A Doffer or Dorfer [Lat. Dorsarium] is a Cratch, or Basket, carried on the back; from the Fr. Dos, Lat. Dorsum, The back.

Dotaunce: Fear; Reverence, respect. Ber. 6. Perhaps from the It. Dottanza, Fear. See Men. It. in Dotta.

Doth: Do you. WB. 1248.

Doubt, RR. 1089. See Dout.

Doughti: Valiant, brave; Generous; Proud. See Sk.

Doughtrin: Daughters. Ar. 78.

Doule, Mo. 3202. for Dole, V.

Dout: Fear, Jeopardy. RR. 4513. Also, To fear; It.

Dottare. See Men. It. in Dotta.

Dotaunce: Doubt. Tr. L. 4. 963.

Doute, as Dout.

Doutleß, Doutlees: Doubtleß.

Doutous: Doubtfull. Tr. L. 4. 992.

Doutremere (Fr. D'outre mer) Brought from beyond Sea.

Dr. Ch. 253.

Dowiat, Dowait, i. e. Do away; as we say, Away, away. Tr. L. 2. 893.

Dowaire, Fr. Donaire: A dowry. Fr. 1869.

Drad, Dradde: Dreaded, feared; Afraid; To be afraid. Mo. 3027. Dreadfull, terrible. RR. 4200. unless it should be there read, brade.

Drasse-fak: A Sack full of draff. MR. 1098.

Drastie, No. 3427. Tedious, irksome, troublesome. Sk.

Drame: A dream. AF. 31.

Drat: Dreadeth. Tr. L. 3. 329. Dredyth, Ca.

Dred, Drede, Dreed: Dread, fear; Reverence, respect. p. 151, a. Also, Doubt. No dred; No doubt. With- outin dred; Without doubt. Instead of, But he have love of the people and dred, p. 151, a. l. 36. read, But he have more love of the people than dred. Dredfull: Timorous. Pro. 1481. Fr. 2863. Dutifull, submissive. LW. 404. Also, Doubtfull. Tr. L. 2. 426. Dredleß, Dredileß: Doubtleß. Tr. L. 1. 1035. Dredidin: Dreaded.

Dreetbed, Mo. 1002. for Dretched: Disturbed; Oppressed. See Dretche. This Reading is confirmed by MS. Ch. which hath it Dretched. It was Drenched in former Editions.

Dreint: Drowned. MR. 412. Fr. 817, 2932.

Drenche: To be drowned. MR. 413. Sq. 1718.

Dreue, Dreuy: Sad, sorrowful. Tr. L. 1. 13. Dreuebed, Dreueß: Sorrow, sadness. RR. 4728. AS. Dreuyman, Tristitia afficere.

Dreshfold, MR. 375. (or rather Dreshfold, as in Fr. 1318.) A threshold.

Dress, Dreße, Dreßin: To prepare. Tr. L. 2. 71. To order or put in order, direct. Sc. 107. To address, apply. Fr. 2028. To distribute. Gam. 71. See Dight.

Dretche: To delay, to tarry. Tr. L. 2. 1264: L. 4. 1446. To vex, to trouble, oppress. Tr. L. 2. 1471. AS. Dneccan, Molestare, &c.

Drey: Dry.

Drie, Drien: To endure, suffer. RR. 4390. AS. Abpe-ogan, Pati.

Drife: To drive. RR. 1874.

Drinkileß: Drinkleß, without drink. Tr. L. 2. 718.

Dronkelewe: Drunk, a drunkard. Fr. 779.

Dronkin: Drunk. Fr. 634.

Drough: Drew. Hyp. 92. Tr. L. 5. 1557.

Droune: Draw; Traherent, Boeth. p. 361, a. Drawn.

Drovy: Muddy. p. 207, a.

Drowe, Drowbe: Drew. PT. 477.

Drurie, Drury: Sobriety, modesty. Sp. RR. 844, 5064.

Druerie, Gower. f. 78, a.

Dryin, as Drie, V.

Dryve dure, Ber. 1769. Perhaps it should be read Dry or dure. See Drie and Dure.

Dubbe, p. 205, b. When he [a knight] is new dubbed, i. e. made. Dubban to pissepe, Equitem cingere. Chron. Sax. ad Ann. MLXXXV. Islandicè Dubbadi riddare, Eques cataphractus. Hick. Somn.

Duere: Duty.

Dul, Dullin: To grow dull. RR. 4792. To stupify; Hebe- tare. Boeth. It dullish me; It makes me mad. No. 1193. Dullin of the rudineß, Tr. L. 4. 1489. Dullyn al [f. 1. a] the rudeneß, MS. Sp. Be mad at the rude- nels. Sk. Perhaps, Be angry at, or ashamed of the fil- ly behaviour of the Trojans, in comparison of the more polite Greeks.

Dulcarnon, Tr. L. 3. 933, 935. This word hath puzzled the Readers and Interpreters of Chaucer; I shall give the several opinions about it in the words of the Au- thors. "Dulcarnon (says Sp.) is a Proposition in Eu- clid. Lib. 1. Theor. 33. Prop. 47. which was found out by Pythagoras after a whole years study, and much beating of his brain: In thankfulness whereof he sacrificed an Ox to the Gods; which Sacrifice he called Dulcarnon. Alexander Neckam, an antient Writer, in his Book, De naturis rerum, compoundeth this word of Dulia, and Caro, and will have Dulcar- non to be quasi Sacrificium carnis. Chaucer aptly ap- plyeth it to Cresseide in this place; shewing that she was as much amazed how to answer Trilussa, as Py- thagoras was wearied to bring his desire to effect. Which opinion of Sp. is rejected by Sk. in Dulcarnon; Dominus Speight egregie hallucinatur dum exponit celebre illud Pythagoræ Theorema, quod postquam summo cum la- bore tandem excogitasset, præ gaudio Eugenia exclamavit, & Hecatombam sacrificavit; ex contextu enim patet non felix aliquod inventum, sed è contra hominem ad dilemma & incitas redactum, consilij inopem, ampèrila signare, cre- do vel ab AS. Dole, nostro Dull, Hebes, obusus, fatuus, vel à Belg. Dul, Dol, Insanus, furiosus, & AS. Lep- pan, geceppan, Belg. Kæren, Tent. Rehen, Vere- tere, q. d. I am at the point or ready to run mad or distracted, I am at my wits end, quod etiam à Poetâ ipso subiungitur. Mr. Selden in his Preface to Drayton's Polyolbion, having occasionally mentioned Chaucer, proceeds to explain this word. "I cannot but digresse (says he) to admonition of abuse which this learned allusion in his Trilussa, by ignorance hath endured; "I am till God, &c.

"It's not Neckam or any one else that can make me entertain the least thought of the signification of "Dulcarnon to be Pythagoras his Sacrifice after his Geo- metrical Theorem, in finding the Squares of an Or- thogonal Triangle's sides, or that it is a word of La- tine deduction; but indeed by easier pronunciation it was made of D'hul Karnayn, i. e. Two horned: which the Mahometan Arabians use for a Root in Calculation, meaning Alexander, as that great Di- scator of Knowledge Joseph Scaliger (with some An- cients) will; but by warranted opinion of my learn- ed friend Mr. Lydyat. in his Emendatio Temporum, it began in Seleucus Nicanor XII years after Alexan- der's death; The name was applyed, either because after the time that Alexander had perswaded himself to be Jupiter Hammon's Sonne, whose Statue was with Ram's horns, both his owne and his Successors Coines were stampd with horned Images; or else in respect of his II Pillars erected in the East as a Nihil ultra of his Conquest, and some say because he had in Power the Easterne and Westerne World, signified in the Two Hornes. But howsoever, it well fits the Passage, either as if he had personated Cresseide at the entrance of Two wayes, not knowing which to take; in like sense as that of Prodicus his Hercules, Pytha- goras his Y, or the Logicians Dilemma expresse; or else, which is the truth of his conceit, that she was at a Nonplus, as the interpretation in his next Staffe makes plaine. How many of Chaucer's Readers ne- ver so much as suspect this his short Essay of Know- ledge, transcending the common Rode? and by his Treatise of the Astrolabe (which, I dare swear, was chiefly learned out of Messabalah) it is plaine he was "much acquainted with the Mathematiques, and amongst their Authors had it.

Dure: To endure, to last.
Durense, Ch. Dr. 1199. Sk. judges from the Context, that it signifies a sort of Apple, and seems to have an affinity with the Fr. Duracines, The Peaches, Plums, Cherries, &c. whose pulp cleaves fast unto their Stones; Also such as are of a hard or firm pulp, and thereby long-lasting. Duraines signifies the same. Coigrave.
Dures, Duresse: Hardship, uneasiness, hurt; Severity, cruelty, hard-heartedness; Confinement, imprisonment; Constraint.
Duris: Endures, lasts.
Duskid his eyin twey: Both his eyes grew dim. Prol. 2808.
Dute: Duty.
Dwale, MR. 1053. Night-shade; Solanum somniferum; It is given inwardly to cause sleep.
Dwelle: To stay or tarry. Tr. L. 3. 931.
Dwinid: Wasted, consumed, pined away. RR. 360. AS. Dpinan, Tabescere, evanescere; whence Dwinde, Dyl. See Del.
Dyrkid: Darkened. p. 375, a.
Dyte, Bl. Kn. 668. See Dite.

E.

Ebraike, Ebrak, Ebrake: Hebrew. Ebrak Pepil; The Jews.
Ecclesiast: A Clergyman; A Preacher. Prol. 710. Also, The Book of Ecclesiastes, or Ecclesiasticus. Mo. 1344.
Eche: Every, each. Eche a dele; Every whit. Tr. L. 3. 695. Also, To eke, add, contribute. Fa. L. 3. 975. To encrease. Tr. L. 1. 706. To stretch out. Echid: Added, &c.
Eclypasteyre: A Fictitious Name for the Successor of Sleep. Dr. Ch. 167. See Sk.
Edippe: Oedipus King of Thebes. Tr. L. 4. 300.
Eene, Eien, Ein, Eyen, Eyin: Eyes.
Eflatid: Puffed up. CCr. 133.
Effunde: To pour forth. CN. 305.
Eft: Again; After. Efsone, Efsomes, Efsonis: Again; Presently.
Eftirs, Eftirs: Ways, walks; Entries, galleries; Walls, hedges. Sk. See Eftirs.
Egall, Fr. Egal, Even, equal; Equitable. Pr. RL. 94.
Egallity: Equality.
Eger, Egir, Egre: Sharp, eager; Angry. Woundid egre, RR. 5475. Sorely wounded.
Egg: Edge. PT. 587.
Eggette: Egging, promoting, setting forward; Means, procurement. La. 843.
Eglatere, Eglentere: Eglentine, Sweet-bryar, or Dog-bryar.
Egre. See Eger.
Egremony. See Agrimony.
Equal: Equal. Boeth. See Egal.
Eien. See Eene.
Eiger, Eigre: Eager, sharp; Fierce, cruel. Fr. 1693. p. 191, b.
Eigh, Eighe, RR. 1779. An Eye; Ah! Hey! Tr. L. 2. 87.
Eigre. See Eiger.
Eilith, Eylith: Aileth.
Ein. See Eene.
Eire. See Eyre.
Eisel, RR. 217. Vinegar. Sk. See Blo.
Eith, Ethe: Easy. RR. 3955. Ready, willing; Gentle, meek, soft. AS. Ea8. Whence Unnethe, Unnethe, Unnethe: Hardly, scarce, with difficulty.
Either, for Othir: Or. RR. 5490.
Eke: Also; To add. See Eche.
Eld, Elde: Old age. In Tr. L. 4. 1369. instead of Is holdin olde and ful of covitise, MS. Sp. has, Is old, and Eld is full, &c. Eldefather: Grandfather. Boeth. Elde fathers: Ancestors. p. 493, a.
Eld, Elden, Eldin: To grow old. Boeth. To make old. RR. 395. Eldith: Maketh old. lb. 391, 392.

Elenge, Elyng: Strange, odd. Elyng fare; Odd manner or behaviour. Ber. 235. Elengeneß: Strangeness, oddness. RR. 7406. From the Fr. Eloigner, To remove, estrange, &c.
Elis: Eels. RR. 7089.
Elle: An Bell. Bal. 240.
Elle, Ellis, Elis: Else, otherwise. Elliswhere: Elsewhere. AS. Elley, Alias, alioqui.
Elquene: Queen of Elves, or Fairies. WB. 860.
Els, PT. 153. Also. See Ellis.
Elib: Old age. WB. 1215.
Elvisb: Wicked, hellish; Morose, surly. Mo. 3212. Chymistry is in the Chanon's Yeoman's Tale often called Elvisb, i. e. Fantastick, in opposition to Real. No. 772, 863.
Elynge. See Elenge.
Embassade, Embassadrie: An Embassy. La. 234.
Embellishid: Embellished, adorned. Luc. 58.
Embolde: To embolden, or make bold. CL. 1147.
Embolite, Embolysse. See Ambolise.
Embroudid: Embroidered; Variously coloured. LW. 112.
Eme: An Uncle, the mother's brother. Tr. L. 2. 162. It is still used in the Northern parts, as Lancashire. AS. Came, Uncle.
Emeraudis: Emeralds. FL. 144.
Emeron, AF. 611. A Merlin, a sort of Hawk. Fr. Emerrillon.
Emforth: According to. Emforth my wit, Tr. L. 2. 243. According to the best of my understanding. With my ful wyt, Ca. Astir my myght, MS. Sp. See Sk. AS. Em in composition signifies Equal, from Emne, or Epen. In Prol. 2236. it is written in MS. Ch. Evenforth; whence Enforth, Ar. 247.
Emiddis, Fa. L. 2. 206. as Amiddis.
Emisphere: The Hemisphere. Emispheres: Hemispheres.
Emong, Emongis: Amongst. It is frequently used Adverbially, and signifies Commonly; Sometimes, now and then; Interea. Also, In common, or together with others. RR. 690. Likewise, also.
Empaire, Empairin: To impair. Empairement: Impairing, hurt, damage. RL. 135.
Emplaiter: To paint, set forth with advantage.
Empoison: To poison. Empoisonner: A poysoner; Empoisonning: Poysoning.
Empress: To imprint, make an impression. Sq. 1094. To press into. No. 1092. Empression: Impression. Sq. 1494.
Emprise, LW. 185. An Empress, a Princess. Also, An enterprize, an undertaking. It. Impresa. Of feble emprise; Faint-hearted, mean-spirited. Mo. 2900. Also, Favour. RR. 2008. Design. lb. 2147, 2186.
Empte: To empty, to make empty. No. 762.
Enbibing: Proper to imbibe. No. 835.
Enbolned, Bal. 894. Swelled. Sk.
Enboset, Dr. Ch. 354. Embost; A Term in Hunting, when a Deer is so hard chased that he foams at the mouth, and hangs out the tongue. Blo.
Enbossid, Di. 275. Embossed or Raised work in Embroidery.
Embrase: To embrace. In Mo. 1737. it seems to signify To attempt, undertake. Fr. Embrasser.
Enbraudin: To embroider. Ph. 125.
Enbraudid: Embroidered. AL. 85.
Enbrondid, Di. 274. as Embrondid.
Enbusment: Ambush, lying in wait. p. 152, b.
Encence: To burn or offer Incense. No. 406, 424.
Encens: Incense. Tr. L. 5. 1465.
Enchace: To chase, or drive away. BD. 418.
Enchafeth, Boeth. p. 363, b. and p. 364, b. should be read Enchafeth, i. e. Burneth, heateth. Scirius alias *ur*at segetes; Cancris sydus inastuat. And Enchafed, p. 364, b. 1. 10, 11. should be read Enchafed. Lat. Incanduit. See Enchaufen.
Enchaufen: To warm. Fr. Echauffer. Enchaufing: Chafing, heating. Pars.
Encheinen: To be chained, joyned or knit together. p. 497, a.
Encheson, Tr. L. 1. 349. Cause; Occasion. Encheson, Acheson or Acheison were the old Fr. words for Occasion, still preserved in our Law-Books. Get encheson, RR.

RR. 2504. Take an occasion or opportunity.
Encline: To bowe. Mo. 14. Enclined: Bowed. FL. 344.
Enclose th' enter [l. entre.] To shut up the entrance.
Test. L. 3.
Encombrment, Ber. 3051. Encombrance, BD. 284. Incumbrance, disturbance, hindrance; Trouble, distress; Inconvenience.
Encombrid: Wearied; Troubled, disturbed. RR. 1389, 7629. Encombrish, Ib. 6675. Troubleth, is troubled from 10.
Encorporing: Incorporating. No. 836.
Encounterwaite, p. 152, b. It is otherwise read thus; Encounterwaite, ambushmentes; Be prepared against treachery, &c. See Awaite and Counterwaite.
Endelong, Endlong: End-ways; Long-ways. Pro. 1993. Headlong; Along; Down, downwards. Hyp. 131. Fr. 2538. From top to bottom, from end to end. Fa. L. 3. 368.
Endenting every pafe, Ber. 1118. Indenting every step, i. e. Reeling.
Endetid: Indebted, in debt.
Endileß: Endless, infinite.
Endite: To indite, to dictate. Boeth. p. 359, a.
Endlong. See Endelong.
Endomagen: To endamage, to hurt.
Endoute: To doubt, to fear. RR. 1664. See Doute.
Endreyte, PT. 404. A place; A Bit, or Cut of a Joint or Dish of Meat. Fr. Endroit.
Endry: To endure. CL. 727. See Drie.
Enee: Aeneas. La. 64.
Enceidos: Virgil's Aeneis. Mo. 1474. Called Enceidos by Douglas.
Enewed, Cr. 110. Renewed. Sk. Or rather, Annoyed, troubled, afflicted, vexed. Fr. Ennuyé.
Enfame: Infamy. p. 485, b.
Enfamined: Famished. Phyl. 36.
Enfaunce: Infancy, youth, RR. 5006.
Enfeste: Infested. CL. 217.
Enfeffid: Possessed, put in possession. BD. 366.
Enfireth: Sets on fire. Bal. 550.
Enforce: To endeavour; from the Fr. S'efforcer, To strive, endeavour, or S'ensorcir, To gather strength. Enforce my might, Pro. 2236. Use all my endeavour: But it may be read there, as it is in MS. Ch. Evenforbe my myght thy trewe servaunt bee. See Emforth. Ne enforce I me, Tr. L. 4. 1016. I do not trouble my self. Enforce The, WB. 340. Strengthen thy self. But MS. Ch. reads it Enforce mee, i. e. Urge upon me, press me.
Enforme: To inform, instruct; To form after.
Enforth. See Emforth.
Enfortunid is so: Gave it that unfortunate quality. CM. 106.
Engendrin: To engender, to beget. Engendrure: Generation, procreation; Offspring, issue. p. 201, a. WB. 134.
Engin, Engine: Wit; Contrivance. Lat. Ingenium.
Engined: Racked, put upon the Torture. So it is read in former Editions in Mo. 1175. But in this, Constreyned, as in MS. Ch. in which the foregoing Verse ends with peynede.
Engluing: Gluing; Joining close, fastening together; Stopping close. No. 787.
Engrevith: Grieveth; Displeaseth. RR. 3444.
Engryed: Outwitted. Ber. 2746. See Engined.
Enhabite: To inhabit; To accustom ones self; To keep company with. RR. 6555. Habituated, accustomed; Settled; from the Fr. Habitué, To use, accustom, &c.
Enhaunfin: To enhance, advance. Enhaunfid: Advanced. Sq. 890.
Enlaced: Covered over with snares or traps; Complicated. p. 396, a. Implicite, Entangled; from the Fr. Enlacer.
Enlangoured: Languid, faint. RR. 7399.
Enlaseith: Entrapeth. Boeth. See Enlaced.
Enleven: Eleven. Mo. 3316. MS. Enslupan, anlupan.
Enlumined: Illuminated; Enlightened. Fr. 1063.
Enmoised, p. 483, a. Comforted, encouraged; f. from the Lat. Animosus.
Ennoying: Annoying, hurtfull. Boeth. See Anoie, &c.
Enpaire: To be impaired, or damaged. CN. 170. from the Fr. Empirer. To make worse, to grow worse, to decay. Enpaired, p. 148, b. Aggravated; Made the matter worse.
Enpeche: To impeach, to accuse.

Enpight: Pitched; Settled. p. 481, a. See Pight.
Enpried: Pitied; Concerned; Compassionate. p. 495, b. Delighted. Sk.
Enplede: To implead, to sue at Law. Mo. 2674.
Enprintid: Imprinted. CC. 92.
Enprise, RR. 2636. See Emprise.
Enprison: To imprison. Enprisonment: Imprisonment.
Enquest: Enquiry. RR. 6977. It is in Law especially taken for Inquisition by a Jury.
Enquirance: Enquiry. Magd. 96.
Ensampler: A sampler, an example, a pattern. Boeth.
Enselid: Sealed up. But this enselid, Tr. L. 5. 151. But this is enselid, MS. Sp. This is Sealed up, not to be spoken of till another time.
Ensensid yeme, Ber. 1672. Informed you, apprised you. To Insense is a word in common use for To make one sensible of, To acquaint, &c.
Ensise: Quality, kind, order, stamp. Sp. Sk. f. Encise, from Incidere.
Ensplrid: Blown or breathed. Pro. 6.
Ensue: To assure. No. 2549.
Entaile: To carve; Carving, Sculpture. RR. 162, Entailed: Carved. Ib. 140. from the It. Intagliare, To carve, &c. and Intagli, Stones finely cut, &c. Also, Stature. Of good entaile, RR. 3711; seems to be the same with the Fr. Expression, De belle taille, Proper, handsome.
Entalemen: To create a desire, to move, excite, affect; Afficiant, Boeth. p. 400, a.
Entalentid corage, Cup. 339. A mind full of sincere affection. See Talent.
Entame, A B C. K. 7. See Attamed.
Entayle, Ch. Dr. 11. as Entaile.
Entendaunce: Attendance. CL. 353. Attention, regard; Sc. 174.
Entende: To intend; To attend, to mind, to take pains about a thing, Fa. L. 2. 475. To hearken. Sq. 709. To tend. RR. 5309. To expect. Tr. L. 4. 1649. MS. Sp. Attende. Fr. Attendre.
Entendement: Intention, intent; Attention; Thought, understanding.
Entendidin: Intended.
Entent, Ententing: Mind, intent; Attention.
Ententive, Ententive: Attentive; Earnest, diligent; Intentional. Ententive desire, p. 206, a. A desire with diligence to perform. Ententive besineß, p. 152, a. Utmost endeavour. Ententiveleche, Tr. L. 1. 333. Attentively, diligently.
Enter. See Enclose, &c.
Enterchanges: Vicissitudes; Courses, turns; Vices, Boeth. p. 363, b.
Enterchaungidin: Exchanged. Tr. L. 3. 1374. which in MS. Sp. is thus; And plying enterchaungeably ber thinges, i. e. alternately, mutually.
Enterdited: Interdicted, forbidden.
Entere: Entire, sincere. Fl. 163.
Enterlacing: Intricate, full of windings and turnings. Fr. Entrelasser, To twist one within another.
Entermedlid, RR. 906. Intermixed. See Meddle.
Entermett, RR. 2966. See Entremete.
Enterminid: Undermined. Magd. 109.
Enterpartin: To divide, to share, to bear a part with one. Tr. L. 1. 593.
Enterynge: Interment, burial. Ber. 314.
Entesche: To affect; To stain. Fr. Entacher. Also spotted: In Boeth. Afficio is frequently translated by Entesche, which is used indifferently in a good or bad sense, as the Lat. word is. When it is taken in an ill sense, the Translator generally adds another Verb to determine the signification of it; as, p. 389, a. Entesched and defouled. In Tr. L. 2. 832. Best entesched signifies Best disposed. In MS. Sp. it is Tatchid.
Entre: An Entry, entrance; A gate; A door. Tr. L. 2. 77. Fr. Entrée.
Entrechangen, Entrechangun: To change, to make an exchange. Boeth.
Entrecommunit: To converse, or correspond, to have communication or commerce with one another. Tr. L. 4. 1554. Entrecommunge: Intercourse, correspondence. Boeth.
Entremees, RR. 6831. Entremes, AF. 665. Intermeßes; Dainty dishes or plates. Fr. Entremets.
Entremete,

Entremete, Entremeile: To intermeddle. Tr. L. 1. 1027. where instead of

Why, entremete of that thou hast to done, which is scarce capable of any sence, it may be read from MS. Sp.

Why entremeteth of that thou hast noght to done,
i. e. Why dost thou meddle with that thou hast nothing to do with. Verse 1019, is likewise better in the same MS.

Let me alone, it shall be for the best,
not for thy best, as in this and the common Editions.
Entremetten: To intermix, to join together. Test. p.
484. b.

Entresse, Fort. 71. Bal. 864. Interest, concern, business.
So Interesse is used by Lidgate in the Life of St. Edmund;

Pride in his persone had noon Interesse.

Entresse and Entresse are taken in the same sence in others of his Works.

Entrete: To treat, or discourse of. Entretedin: Talked of.
Entrike: To trick, deceive. RR. 1642. AF. 403. or perhaps, To embarrass engage; from the Fr. Intriguer.

Entune: To tune, to sing. Also, Singing, Melody, Musick, Poetry. Bal. Lad. 160. Entunes: Songs, Tunes.
Dr. Ch. 309. Entunid: Tuned; Sung. Prol. 123.

Envelopid: Veiled; Wrapt up; Involved. No. 2460.

Enveneme: To poyson; To destroy. RR. 7472.

Envermalled: Painted with Vermilion; Of a Vermilion colour. Bal. Lad. 45.

Environ, Environn: Round about. CL. 1031. Fr. Environ,
About. Environing: Compass, Circumference; Am-bitus, Boeth.

Envoy. See L'envoy.

Enured. See Ure.

Envye: To strive, contend. Dr. Ch. 406. It alludes to the Fr. Expression, A' l'envi, Certatim.

Envyte: Enmity. Bl. Kn. 258.

Epistilis: Epistles.

Equipolencies: Equivalents. RR. 7126. Equipolent: Equivalent, equal in power, value, &c.

Equivocas: Equivocal, or double meaning. p. 519, a.

Er, Ere: Ever; Before. Er in one; Always, continually. Ere mo, No. 3063. Ever, or still the more.

Erace, Tr. L. 3. 1017. for Arace, V.

Eraund: An errand. Dr. Ch. 134.

Erberis, Mo. 1080. Arbours.

Erborowe, RR. 7495. See Herberowe.

Ere: An Ear. Also, To plow. p. 378. A large felde to ere, Prol. 888. Large matter for discourse. In Ber. 618.
it seems to mean here, i. e. hair. See Er.

Eris: Ears.

Erke, RR. 4867. Weary; Loathing: Hence Irkesome. Sk.

Erlich: Early.

Ernefull: Sorrowful. Earnestfull, or rather Ernefuller mannere, as MS. Sp. and Ca. The most earnest manner.
Tr. L. 2. 1727.

Ernes: Affection, fondness, earnest desire. RR. 4838. Serious promise. Sk.

Eros: Cupid; Love. It is used for the Distemper of Love.
Prol. 1376. Gr. "Eros."

Erratick sterris: Wandring stars, the Planets. Tr. L. 5.
1811.

Erre, Hen. 185. Out of erre; Out of the way. Sk.

Erse: Arse. Fr. 426.

Erst: Before; some time ago; Earnest. At erst, Fr. 2006.
At first sight. Now at erst, No. 275. Now the first time, or first of all. Then at erst, p. 388, b. Then and not before.

Erthelesse: Without soil or earth. Tr. L. 4. 770.

Ertly: Earthly. Ber. 443.

Erve Iue, Mo. 1081. The generality of the former Editions have the Verse thus; Of herbe yve growing in our [Ca. your] yerde that [H. i. ther] mery is; and Edd.
1602, and 1687, Of yve growing, &c. So that Erve may be corrupted from Herbe, which the Poet perhaps added to signify Ground-Ivy. This Edition by mistake presents the reading of MS. Ch. which was not intended to be introduced into the Text, but to be printed as another Reading, which may in some measure hint to us the true one. Perhaps herbe yve, erve yve may have been originally vervyn.

Eschaufe: To warm, to heat; To desire earnestly. Boeth.
Eschaufed: Heated, hot; Angry. Fr. Eschauf, To warm.

Eschaunge: Exchange. Tr. L. 4. 146.

Escheatour: Escheator, An Officer appointed to take care of Lands, &c. that Escheat, or casually fall to the Crown.

Eschevith, for Eschevith, CN. 114.

Escrie: A Writing. Fr. Escriu.

Ese: Ease; Pleasure. Mo. 1402. It is your ese; It is easy for you, It is at your pleasure, or choice.

Efiliche: Easily. Tr. L. 1. 317. Softly. Alcaily, Ca.

Especes. See Speces.

Esperance, Fr. Hope.

Esperus, Bl. Kn. 613. Hesperus, the Evening-star.

Espeiale, Esple: A Spy. Fr. 59. Spying; Observation.

Espeide: Espied, found out. Hyp. 55.

Esprituell: Spiritual. RR. 650. Ingeniously contrived;
Witty. Fr. Sprituell. Esprituell: Spiritual Persons, or Things. p. 206, a.

Esplote, Bal. Lad. 191. Accomplishment, perfection. Sk.
See Expleiten.

Espoire, Esperie: Hope. Fr. Espoir.

Estate: State, condition; Honour, dignity. During his estate; In the time of his Magistracy, or Administration. Fr. 754. Estatly: Splendid, pompous. Estatly boneste; Honorable Pomp, or State. Mo. 737.

Estaites: Precepts, established Rules; Instituta, Boeth.
p. 366, a.

Estris: Lodgings, apartments. Prol. 1973. MR. 1187.
Ber. 105. From the Fr. Hostellerie may come Hostrie, Ofrie, Estrie.

Estyr: Easier. Of estyr availle; Of less value. CL. 116.

Eterne: Eternal; Durable. Also, Eternity. Tr. L. 4.
978. MS. Ch. reads yourre eternal, Prol. 1308.

Ethe, Tr. L. 5. 850. See Eithe.

Ethimologise: To give the Etymology, or derivation of a word. RL. 301.

Evangele, Evangely, Evangile: The Gospel. RR. 5453.
Hen. 217. In Mo. 2037. it is put for Evangelist; for it follows, lb. 2038. He liketh, &c. Evangelis:
Gospels. La. 667.

Evenaunte, Ber. 105. as Avenaunte.

Ever for Never, p. 446, b. 1. 24.

Everich: Each; which is a Contraction of it.

Everichone, Everychone: Every one.

Everidel, Everidele. See Del.

Evese: The Eves of a house. Ber. 1620.

Evill, Tr. L. 5. 1624. On [not No] evill ye ne take;
Take it not in ill part, or amiss.

Evin: The evening. Also, Fellow, Equall. Evin-christen; A fellow-christian. AS. Epen or eyn, Aqualis, &c.

Evindistant: Equidistant. p. 441; b.

Evinliche: Evenly; Equally.

Evir: Ever. Evir in one; Always. Fr. 1697. No. 2535.
Continally; Altogether.

Evirmore: Evermore.

Evirmo: Evermore. It should be read Evir mo, RR.
1787. Ever the more. So Evirmore should be Evir more, lb. 2472.

Evr in one, as Evir in one. See Evir.

EWage: Hue, colour. Bal. Lad. 92, 93. Perhaps it may signify the Water of a Precious Stone, from the Anglo-Normannic word Ewe, Fr. Eau, Water.

Exaltate: Exalted; Ascended.

Executour: An executioner. Fr. 746.

Executrice: An executrix.

Exerceth: Exerciseth. Boeth.

Exercitacionn: Exercise.

Exilin: To banish. Bl. Kn. 509.

Exiltre: An axle-tree.

Existence: Reality. RR. 5549.

Exiten: To excite, stir up. Exitors: Promoters, encouragers.

Exorcisaciouns: Exorcisms, Prayers or Charms superstitiously used against the power of the Devil. Fa. L. 2.
174.

Expans yeres, Fr. 2831. Lidgate hath the same Expression in the Story of Thebes, Part I. where he describes the Astrologers calculating the Fate of that City;

In

*In tables correct, devoid of all error
Justly sought, and founde out of bothe two
The yerres collecte, and expanie also.*

Expectaunt: Expecting. RR. 4571.

Expleiten: To accomplish, perform. RR. 6174. Hence Exploit, A signal action. See Men. Fr. in Exploits mi-litaires.

Expone: To expound, explain. Cr. 369.

Expressid, Tr. L. 3. 1035. [Repressid, MS. Sp. and Ca.]
Retrained. See lb. 1040.

Expulse: Expulsion. Cr. 119. A repulse.

Extende: Extent. In extende; In the utmost extent.
Mo. 2599. In value.

Extremitees: Extreame. RR. 6526.

Eye: An egg. No. 827. Mo. 858. Ay, ever; Yea. Sq.
1819. Ah!

Eyen, Eyin: Eyes. Prol. 201.

Eygre. See Eiger.

Eylith: Aileth.

Eyre: The air. CL. 143. Also, An heir.

Eyrthe: Airy, aerial, belonging to, or living in the Air.
Eyrthe bestis; Animals living in the Air, or rather,
The Constellations which are called by the Names of Animals, and so figured in Maps of the Heavens.

F.

Fable: Discourse. RR. 1439. Vain, empty, flattering, talk. lb. 6603. Lying. Hyper. 203. Fabling: Fawning, flattering. lb. 5544.

Faconde: Speech; Elocution; Eloquence. AF. 558. Eloquent. Cr. 268.

Facyon, Facyoun, Fassion: Fashion.

Faic. See Fay.

Faierb for Faib, AF. 24.

Faile: To deceive; To lye. Also, Failure.

Fain, Faine: To feign, dissemble. Fr. 243. RR. 3089.
To disguise. lb. 6342. Pained, Fainid, Faint: Feigned, disguised, pretended. lb. 5563. Fain: Glad, desirous.

No. 2559. Fainir: More glad; Gladlier. Bal. 1025.

Faire: Happiness, good fortune. Faire more you befall;
May you have good luck, in opposition to Foule more the befall, Mo. 16, 17. Ill fortune, or mischance attend thee.

Faith: Credit. Make faith; To give one credit, To pass one's word. Faithid: Having faith, believing. Strengið faithid ben; Have the strongest faith, are best established in the Faith.

Faisours: Deceivers, Impostors; Vagabond cheats. In
Tr. L. 1. 927. instead of Louirs, MS. Sp. hath Faytours,
i. e. Dissemblers.

Fal, as Fall.

Falding: A kind of coarse cloth. Sk. Prol. 393. in MS.
Ch. runs thus;

In a gowne of falding unto the knee;

Which makes the Verse compleat without pronoun-cing the Final ð in gowne. In MR. 104. instead of Folding rede, MS. Ch. hath Falding rede, i. e. A red Falding.

Fale: Failure, fault.

Fall: Fallen; Cast down; Humble. RR. 881.

Fallace, Fallas: A Fallacy; Treachery, perfidiousness, deceit. Ber. 1210. p. 506, b.

Falfe, Falfin: To deceive, to be false to.

Falset: Falshood. Falsetes: Falsties.

Fame: To defame. PW. 83. Falsly famed; Falsly accused, slandered. Mo. 2281.

Famulers: Menial, or domestick Servants. Test. L. 2. Lat.
Famulares.

Fande: Found. RR. 2707.

Fantase, Fr. Fancy.

Face: To paint the face, or use beautifying Compositions. RR. 2285. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr.
Fard, Fucus.

Fardils: Burdens. RR. 5683.

Fare: To go; Gone. Fr. 1917, 3100. Also, Condition; Welfare; Way or manner; Behaviour. The fare of me; How I do. Tr. L. 5. 1365. Made fare; Made a great stir, or ado. MR. 891. See Asare. Leave thy nice fare; Leave off thy simple behaviour. Tr. L. 4. 532.
Strauunge fare; A behaviour like that of strangers to one another. No. 2771. For fare, Gam. 147. should be read forfare, in one word.

Farforth. See Ferforth.

Faring, as Begon, V. Beste faring; Best accomplished, or qualified.

Farne: Fared. See Fare.

Fashe: A bundle. A fashe of flaines; A sheaf of arrows.
Cr. 168.

Fassoun, Fassion: Fashion. Cr. 225. RR. 708.

Faste by: Near, hard by. RR. 2494.

Faster: Stronger. Boeth. p. 365, a. Firmior.

Fast-fretes. See Frete.

Faibe, Fa. L. 3. 1050. It is raib, or rathe in all the Editions I have seen before 1602.

Father kin. See Kin.

Favours: Favourable. RR. 2902.

Faw: Fain, glad, chearfull, joyfull. WB. 210. He des-rib faw; He much desireth, he would fain. Tr. L. 4.
887.

Fay: Faith, truth. Par fay, Par ma faye; By my faith.
In fay; In faith. No. 655.

Faytours. See Faisours.

Fe: Fee; Money. Mo. 2277. So it should be read in
RR. 6044. (not Se) where it seems to signify Land of Inheritance, in opposition to Moeble, Moveables, in the following Verse.

Feblesse: Weakness. Tr. L. 2. 863. Fr. Fortlesse.

Fed: Brought up, educated. Fr. 1427.

Federasy: A confederacy; A bargain.

Fendly, as Fendly.

Feir: Fire. Ber. 1621. Also, A companion. See Fere.

Feffe, Feffe: To infeoffe, to settle an Estate upon one, to put one into possession. Tr. L. 5. 1688. CL. 932.

Feine: To feign. Bl. Kn. 512.

Feintise, Fr. Feigning, hypocrisy, dissimulation. BD.
387.

Feir, Feire: Fair. Also, Fire. PT. 78. Feire fell; Fair skin. Gam. 152. Feire is omitted in H. 1. See Fell.

Fel, Felle: Many, manifold. Felle colours, Boeth. p.
465, b. Multiformes fucos. AS. Felai, Multii, plures.

Fel, Felenous, Fell, Felon, Felonous, Feloun: Villainous, wicked; Cruel, fierce.

Felaship, Felaship: Fellowship, company, society.

Felaw: A fellow, or companion.

Felaship, as Felaship. Felashipeth: Joyns in fellowship,
or company. Boeth.

Felde: Fallen; A field. In felde and town; In Town and Country. RR. 6234. The felde of shewe, &c.
Mo. 800, 801. The Blazon of a Coat of Arms; In a Field Argent, an Eagle Sable, caught with a Lime-twig, Gules.

Feldefare: A Feldfare, called Frosty, AF. 364. because they come in hard weather. In RR. 5510. Tr. L. 3.
863. (where MS. Sp. reads Feld y fare, i. e. f. The Field is gone, or the Battle is lost) it seems to be the Beginning or Burden of some known Song in Chaucer's time.

Feldin: Fell. RR. 911.

Feldis: Fields.

Fele, Felen, Fellm: To feel; To know, perceive; To smell.
RR. 8844, 3012. To relish. Fr. 2273. Fele, CCr. 117.

Feeling, fense, perception; Knowledge.

Felenous. See Fel.

Felaship, as Felaship.

Fell, Felle: The skin flay'd off. Lat. Pellis. AS. Felle.

Fell and bonis; Skin and bones. Tr. L. 1. 91. Ca. hath fell instead of soule, Tr. L. 3. 592. Also, Many, &c.

See Fele, &c.

Fellie: Cruelly. RR. 3251. Madly. Boeth.

Felon, Felonous, Feloun. See Fel, Felenous, &c. Felony:

Cruelty. RR. 165.

Felashippeth: Keepeth company with, followeth; Comitatnr, p. 389, a.

Felship, PT. 370. as Felaship.

Feltrid, Cr. 163. Entangled. See Llari.

Femetere: The herb Fumitory.

8 D

Femine:

Femine: Female. Fa. L. 3. 275. which should be read thus;

A Feminine creature.

Feminie, Prol. 868. seems to signify The country of the Amazons. The Reign of Feminie; The Kingdom of Women; Regnum femineum.

Feminine: The form, or shape of a woman. La. 361.

Feminite: Womanhood, the sex, state, dignity, weakness, or any Quality or Property of a woman. Gr. 80. Fl. 148.

Fenaunce, Finaunce, Fynaunce: An end; A fine, a forfeiture: Hence Finance, or Finances signifies a Prince's Treasury, or Exchequer, and is sometimes used for Treasure, or Wealth. To make fenaunce for your wrongs; To pay a Fine, or make reparation for the injuries done to you. Ber. 1800. See Men. Fr. and Fr. Gl.

Fende: An enemy, a fiend. The Devil is so called καὶ ἑχλὸν. Fendly: Devilish, hellish, wicked; Ugly; Hostile, hurtfull, dangerous. Fr. 2414.

Fenne, No. 2408. See Cannon.

Feoble: Feeble. Boeth.

Feoffid: Infeoffed. Sq. 1214. See Feffe.

Fer: Far.

Ferd, Ferde, Ferdin: Fared, sped; Went; from Fare, V. Also, Afraid; Frightened. No. 945. Tr. L. 2. 124.

Ferdeth: Is afraid. p. 498, b. Fear. p. 481, a. For ferde; For fear. Sq. 547.

Ferdfull: Fearfull. p. 498, b.

Ferdness: Fear, dread; Awe, reverence. p. 481, a.

Fere: Fear; Fire. RR. 5086. In Tr. L. 1. 229. it should be read Fere (as in MS. Sp.) to rhyme to stere, in the preceding Verse. It is put for Ferre, i. e. Far. p. 364, a. l. 32. and for Fare, i. e. Behaviour. Tr. L. 1. 13. A companion. AS. Grepapa. In fere, ifere, yfere; Together, in company. Playing fere; A play-fellow, a companion in sports. So Lidgate in the Story of Thebes, Part I.

*This Edipus among his playing feres
Was in porte passing full of pride.*

Amongst other Instances of Corruption in the Secular Clergy, that of Pluralities is thus described in the Plowman's Tale; That besides many Cures and Prebends, they had A Parsonage to ben a playing fere, Mo. 2663. i. e. (as it is explained in Com.) "They have their Parsonages for sport, not as a charge; or else, their Parsonages are bestowed upon them, that they may be idle companions in Hawking and Hunting, and as jesters to make their Patrons merry."

Ferforth, Ferforth, Ferforthly: Far, far forth; For as much as. Instead of As faithfully, &c. Tr. L. 3. 101. it is better in MS. Sp.

As ferforthly as I have had konning;

i. e. As far as I had any knowledge, To the utmost of my understanding.

Feris: Companions. See Fere.

Ferk: Fear. Gam. 515. MS. Ch. and H. 1. instead of it have Serke: A sort of Coat. See Fr. Gl. in Sargia. Men. Fr. in Serge. Men. It. in Sargia.

Ferne: Firm; To affirm. Ber. 1881. A farm; To farm or let. They takin to ferne their somponours; They farm out the Office of Sumner. Mo. 2265.

Fermerere: An Overseer, or Curator of an Infirmary. Fr. 595.

Fermour: A farmer. LW. 378.

Ferne yere, Tr. L. 5. 1176. February. Sk. Fferneyere, MS. Sp. perhaps corrupted from the Fr. Fevrier, February.

Ferre: Far.

Fers: Fierce. Fers, Dr. Ch. 654, &c. Fersis, Ib. 723. Chess-men; from Fere, A companion.

Ferthing: A farthing, a thin scale. Sp. The AS. Feopðling is the Fourth part of any Quantity or Number; and from thence it is taken to signify any small part: So the Mites, cast into the Treasury by the poor Widow in the Gospel, are called Feopðlingar. No ferthing of grece; f. Not the least spot of grease. Prol. 134.

Ferthir: Further; More.

Fesaunce, Fesaunt: A Pheasant.

Fest: A fest. No. 2320. Also, A feast; Mirth. Fr. 2130.

Festivally: Jocosely; Wittily. Boeth.

Festliok: Merry, gay. Sq. 301.

Fete: Feet. Also, as Fetis.

Fetely: Handsomely; Dextrously. See Fetis.

Fetirs: Features. RR. 2813.

Fetis, Fetise: Handsome, neat, decent.

Fetours, Ber. 162. as Fetirs.

Fette: Fetched.

Fettes: Fats or Vats. Sackes fettes, Mo. 2411. Sacks and Fettes, that is, Fattes, Dry-fattes, and other such Vessels. Com.

Feverire: February. Fr. Fevrier.

Fey: Faith; Credit. Ne to the [l. shy] word there n'is no fey certain; There is credit to be given to what thou sayest. Phyl. 126.

Fjaunce: Affiance, confidence; Dependance. RR. 5481.

Fiers: Fierce.

Fifty: Fifty. Ch. Dr. 422.

Fil, Fill: Fell; Befell. Prol. 1671. Fell, or Did fall. RR. 5813. Became. Phyl. 81. Also, Cruel. Prol. 1561. See Fel.

Fillin, RR. 6648. Fell.

Filth, RR. 7532. Foul play. See Fylth.

Finaunce, Magd. 497. See Fenaunce.

Finch, Prol. 654. To pull a finch: A Proverbial Expression, signifying To fleece a Man.

Findish, La. 752. (MS. Ch. Feendly) Findliche. See Fendly.

Fine: An end. Gam. 1093. To cease, to make an end. WB. 788. RR. 5356. Neuir gan so fine, Tr. L. 3. 1460. Never stop. Fr. Fin, Finir; from the Lat. Finis.

Fire leven, WB. 276. (Fyeris leven, MS. Ch.) Lightning. See Sk. in Fyre levin.

Fisnamy, Ber. 2461. Physiognomy. It is falsely printed Finsnamy.

Fitbell: A fiddle. Prol. 298.

Fittingist: Most fitting, fittest. AF. 551.

Fivith: Fifth. Fa. L. 3. 613.

Fixe, Tr. L. 1. 298. Fixed. See Fyxe.

Flaie: Flew. CN. 213.

Flaines, Cr. 168. Arrows. Dougl. uses Flane, Flaine for Arrow, and Flanes, Flanys for Arrows. AS. Fla, Sagitta, whence Flo, an Arrow. Pl. Flone, Arrows. The AS. Flane signifies a Lance, Spear, or some such Weapon. Sonn.

Flambe (Flaume, MS. Sp.) Flame. Flambe funeral; The Funeral flame, or fire wherein the body was to be burnt. Tr. L. 5. 302. Also, To flame, shine; To cause to shine. Bal. Lad. 55.

Flash. See Fash.

Flawe: Yellow. CL. 782. from the Lat. Flavus.

Flebring: Calumny, slander. Test. p. 500, b. See Sk.

Fleckid: Spotted, speckled.

Fleen: To fly from, to avoid. Also, Fleas. Mo. 1594.

Flees, Fleise, Flese: A Fleece.

Fleeten: To flow, to pass away; To abound. Willeken, Kilian. Fluere, fluitare, labi, abundare. See Flore.

Fleme, Flemin, Mo. 1759. To banish, put to flight, rout, drive away. AS. Flyma. Profugus, Flyman, In exilium mittere. Flemed, Fleimid, No. 58. Banished, &c.

Flemere: One that drives away, or puts to flight. La. 461. the same with Banishir, Cr. 199. Instead of Flemin, Tr. L. 2. 852. Ca. hath Efcbene.

Flene: To flee. RR. 4595. Fouly fleme, Di. 382. [nbt foul yfene] Fly away basely.

Flefbly, RR. 2506. Lovely, dear; Dearly, affectionately. p. 193, b.

Flei, RR. 2372. See Flit.

Flet, Flete: To swim, to float, to wave up and down. Tr. L. 3. 1227. Floated. Flete this creature, La. 464. (or Flette this creature, as in MS. Ch.) Floated, was driven to and fro. AS. Fleotan.

Fleting, Fletyng: Floating, flowing down, swimming, abounding. See Fleeten and Flet.

Flicker: To flutter. Tr. L. 4. 1221. Toufe wanton dalliances. p. 208, a: 496, b.

Flid: To fly from, avoid. Boeth.

Flight, Flite: To strive, contend. AS. Flitan, Contendere, rixari. In Mo. 3289. instead of Fight or flight, others read Fight or flight.

Flit: To fly away. RR. 5359. See Flete and Fleeten. To

To move. RR. 1812. To turn aside. p. 308, a. Lat. Deflecto.
Fliee. See Flight.
Flittering, p. 380, b. as Fleeting, V.
Flo, Flone, Bl. Kn. 469. See Flaines.
Flockmele: All together, all in a flock, or body. Fr. 1116.
AS. Flocc-malum, Gregatim.
Floitis: Flutes.
Floraie: Flora, The Goddess of Flowers. Gr. 20.
Flora: A floor. AL. 64.
Florain, No. 2286. A Gold Coin, in several Countries of different Values, first coined in Florence, with the stamp of a Flower-de-Luce, from whence it has its Denomination. Edw. III. A.D. 1344. alter'd it from a lower value, to 6*s.* and 8*d.* which Sir Hen. Spelman thinks to be the same with the George Noble. It was in France about 2*s.* Sterl. and in Languedoc, and the Parts adjacent 18*d.* Sterl. See Spelm. Men. Fr. in Florin, Men. It. in Florino, and Fr. Gl.
Florouns, Florounis: A Border of Flower-work. Fr. Fleuron.
Flotten, p. 383, b. as Flete.
Floure: To flourish. Flourid: Flourished. Flouring: Flourishing.
Flourelesse: Without flowers. Dr. Ch. 1860.
Flourettes, RR. 891. Fine Flower-work, embroidery. Fr. Fleurettes. It. Fioretti.
Floytinge: Fluting, Whistling. Prol. 91.
Flytte, as Flit.
Foiles: Leaves. Bal. Lad. 38. Fr. Feuilles.
Foin, Foinin: To make a pass. Prol. 1656. To fight.
Foin, Fomen, Fune, Foomen: Foes, enemies.
Fole: A fool; foolish. Folie: Folly; Rashness, unadvisedness; Temeritas, Boeth. Folily, Follilie: Foolishly, rashly.
Folelarge: Foolishly liberal, extravagant, prodigal. p. 156, b. 207, a.
Folien: To fail, to be mistaken. Boeth. p. 375, a. Labantur. f. leg. failen.
Follue: to follow.
Foly: Folly; Foolish, Any lite foly countenance, RR. 4299. Any little foolish appearance.
Fomen. See Foin.
Fond: To find. Magd. 31. Found. La. 577. To endeavour, to try. No. 3395. Tr. L. 3. 11. Fonding, Gam. 293. A trial. AS. Fandian, Tentare.
Fone, CGr. 128. f. Feign. See Foin.
Fong: To take, to receive. Mo. 2907. AS. Fengan.
Fonne: Fond; A fool. MR. 981. To fondle, to be fond of. CL. 458.
Fontstone: A Font for Baptizing.
Footmantill: A womans Riding-coat, coming down to the feet. Prol. 474.
For, in Composition sometimes enhanceth the Signification of the Simple word, and sometimes turns it to an ill sense. It is also put in Composition for Fore: It is put for Far in Ch. Dr. 676.
Forbere: To bear up, to support. RR. 4751.
Forbit: Forbiddeth. Test. L. 3.
Forbode: A Prohibition. Goddie forbode; That which God hath forbidden. Mo. 3245.
Forbodin: Forbidden. RR. 6616.
Forbrake: Broke off; Disturbed.
Forebrusid, Mo. 639. See Forebrusid.
Force. I do (or yeve) no force; I care not, Value not, make no account of, Regard not. WB. 1234. RR. 4602. Of force, Cr. 202: Of necessity. Thereof no force, No. 673. No matter for that. Doth no force; Taketh no care, or pains. p. 204, b. Do no force of their own governance; Take no care of their own conduct, lb. Thei yeve no force; They do not mind. RR. 4826.
Forcir: A coffer, or chest. BD. 65. A strong box. It. Forziere.
Fordid: Undid; Murdered. Phyl. 164. from Fordoe: Fordoan, Fordon: To undo, to destroy; Undone, lost, destroyed. Fr. 3116. Broke. Mo. 2771.
Fordrive: Driven away by force. RR. 3782.
Fordwined: Wasted away. RR. 366. See Dwined.
Fore (the Preter Tense of Fare) Gone. Take out of londe thou be not fore, RR. 2710. See thou go not out of the Country. Also, For. Mo. 2669, 3113. In Composition it signifies Before.

Forebrusid: Sorely bruised. Perhaps it should be read Sote brusid.
Forefare: Faring ill, soillorn. RR. 5388. To decay, to go to ruine. Gam. 147.
Foreine, Ar. 78. A Jakes. See Sk. A stranger.
Foreward. See Forward.
Foreweter: One that foreknows. Boeth. Forewote: Foreknew. Mo. 2363.
Forgete: Forgotten. BD. 64.
Forgid: Forged; Coined. MR. 148.
Forgifte: Pardon, forgiveness. Luc. 174.
Forgive: Forgiven.
Forgoe, Forgone: To lose, to forfeit; Lost.
Forgrowin: Overgrown. FL. 45.
Forieten: To forget. p. 365, a.
Forjud: Prejudged, condemned unheard. Bl. Kn. 275.
Forkerue: To carve, to cut.
Forlaste: Left off. No. 1597.
Forlaine, Cr. 140. Destitute, left alone. Gl. V.
Forlete: To lose; To leave off, give over; To forsake, to neglect; Lingere, Boeth. p. 363, b. To lay down; Deponere, p. 377, b.
Forleven: To leave, to depart. Also, To degenerate. p. 378, a.
Forleyen: To mistake; Errare, Boeth. p. 375, a.
Forlish: Forceth, ravisheth. Hen. 108. AS. Fopliggish, To commit adultery, or fornication.
Forlore, Forlost: Lost, undone, forlorn.
Forloyne, Dr. Ch. 386. A Term in Hunting, when the Dogs are called off from a wrong scent, or game.
Forlyved, for Forleved: Degenerate. p. 378, b. See Forleven.
Formell: The Female of an eagle, or hawk. It is used for the Female of any fowl, AF. 371.
Formelliche: Formally.
Former, Fourmer: Maker, Creator.
Formous: Beautiful, fair. Bal. 605. Lat. Formosus.
Forne: Before.
Fornesather, Fornasathir: A Forefather, an Ancestor.
Forpined: Pined away, waited. Prol. 205.
Forlake, p. 362, a. Forsaken, p. 368, a. To deny; Inficari. AS. Fop-recgan.
Forshapin: Transformed. Tr. L. 2. 66.
Forshronke: Dried, or shrunk up. FL. 358.
Forfinge, Mo. 2847. To sing, or say Mass. See lb. 2928.
Forflewethed and forslugged: Slothful and sluggish. p. 204, a.
Forflothbin: To neglect. Mo. 1211. To lose through sloth.
Forfongin: Tired with singing. RR. 664.
Forstraughtin, No. 2613. Distracted, confounded. Sk.
Forfwonk and forfwat: Overlaboured and besweated. Mo. 1954.
Forie: Strong. Bal. 910. Fr. Fort; from the Lat. Fortis.
Fortenid cresse, RR. 4879. Sk. supposes it may come from the AS. Fop-teonan, fop-cynan, To kindle, and Grease for Increase; i. e. Lust once kindled daily increases more and more: But he suspects the place may be corrupted, which is very probable.
Fortheby as thei go, Phyl. 146. As they pass by.
Forthereth: Furthereth, forwardeth, promoteth, prospereth. Tr. L. 2. 1368. where MS. Sp. hath the whole Verse better, thus;

It is one of the thinges that furthreth most;

i. e. A proper place to discover one's love is one of the things most likely to procure success.

Forthi, Forthy: Therefore. Not forthy, p. 147, a. Notwithstanding.

Forthinke: To repent; To think with regret, or vexation; To be grieved, troubled, or concerned at; To disoblige, to create trouble, or concern. Tr. L. 2. 1414.

Forthirir: A promoter. CL. 1033.

Forthirith, Bl. Kn. 385. See Forthereth.

Forthonght, RR. 1671. Vexed, disturbed, &c. See Forthinke.

Forthren, Forthrin: To further, to promote, to encourage. Tr. L. 5. 1706: Forthring: Promoting. AF. 384.

Forthright: Directly, straightway. FL. 439.

Fortresse: A Fortresse. RR. 3942.

Fortroden: Trod down. Boeth.

Fortuis: Accidental. Boeth.

Fortune:

Fortune: To happen, to chance. Bal. 262. To give good or bad success. Prol. 2379. Fortuned: It happened. RL. 165.
Fortunele: Accidental. Boeth.
Fortunous, in Boeth. perhaps should be read Fortuitous. Lat.
Fortuitus, Casual, accidental.
Forwarded: Tired with wandering. RR. 3336. Perhaps it should be read Forwerie for wandred, i. e. Very weary with wandering; and so in Bal. Lad. 60. it may be read, To werie for wandred, which is a common way of speaking in this Author.
Forward: A Contract, a Covenant, a Condition, Agreement. AS. Foppojs. First and forward; First and foremost. Boeth.
Formelkid: Full of whelks. RR. 361.
Forwepi: All wet with tears. Ch. Dr. 1833.
Forwerid, RR. 2564. Forwerid, Ib. 235. Wore out.
Forwerie, RR. 3336. Very weary. See Forwarded.
Forete: To foreknow. Forweting: Foreknowledge. Mo. 1358.
Forwoundid, RR. 1830. Dangerously wounded.
Forwrappid: Close wrapped up. No. 2234.
Foryelde: To reward. LW. 457. To repay.
Foryete, Foryetfulness, &c. To forget, Forgetfulness, &c.
Foryit: To forget. Ber. 623.
Foste: Foes, enemies. BD. 212.
Foster, Fostere: A Forrester, a woodman: RR. 6329.
Fostering: Feeding, nourishment, food. Fr. 581.
Fostrid: Nourished. All doth waxe and fostrid be; [Time] causeth all things to grow, and be nourished. RR. 389.
Fotebys: La. 439. Fote-bote, RR. 3827. Forthwith, immediately.
Fother, Prol. 532. "It is properly a Load in Carriage by Land, a Tonne by water, namely 2000 Weight, that is, 2240 Pound, every Hundred weight 112 Pound. It may seem beyond all likelihood of truth, That the Temple of Mars, cost of gold largely a fother, Prol. 1910. But we must understand that he speaks of tale, not of weight; as if he should have said, it cost full 2000, or 2240 Pound of Money. Com. It is rather to be understood indefinitely of an Immense Sum.
Foudre, Fr. A Thunder-bolt, or Lightning. Fa. L. 2. 27.
Foule hem befalle: Ill may they speed, Evil befall them. See the Plowman's Tale.
Fouleth for Followeth, Boeth. p. 389, a. l. 18. Comitatur.
Foulliche: Foully. Teff.
Fonlis: Fowls, birds.
Found, Tr. L. 3. 981. for Fayned or Foned, i. e. Feigned. See Fone.
Founde, An. 244. f. To try. See Fond.
Founded, Tr. L. 2. 535. Sounded, Ca. & al.
Foundemaunt, Foundement: A Foundation. Fr. Fondement.
Foundrid: Stumbled. Prol. 2689.
Fournice: A furnace. No. 825.
Fourthirings: Successes. Fa. L. 2. 128.
Forterie: Forty. RR. 5733.
Foxerie: The cunning of a Fox. RR. 6795.
Fra, Fram: From.
Fraelite, Fragilite: Frailty, weakness.
Frain, Fraine: To ask, to enquire. Tr. L. 5. 126. AS. Fpman, fpægnian.
Frainith, Tr. L. 1. 32. (MS. Sp. freynith) seems to be mistaken for fainith, feynith, i. e. feigns. So feyneth he, Ca.
Franchise: Freedom, liberty; Generosity, frankness. Sq. 1503. Fr. 3078. RR. 1211.
Frankelene: A free man, a free tenant, a Freeholder, a Country-Gentleman. Prol. 333.
Franks: French Coins of different values.
Frape, Tr. L. 3. 411. A company, a rabble. Sp. f. Stamp, from the Fr. Frape.
Franchise, as Franchise.
Fray and fear, Ber. 281. To fright and scare.
Frey: Free.
Fredom: Frankness, a Gentleman-like behaviour. Mo. 1703.
Fregius, Dr. Ch. 1070. Dares Phrygius, who wrote the History of the Trojan War.
Freilte, WB. 92. See Fraelite.
Frele: Frail, weak. RL. 427. Frel witted; Of a weak mind. p. 516, b.

Fremde, Sq. 449. Fremid, Tr. L. 2. 248. Strange, foreign. AS. Fpemb, A stranger, or foreigner. Let be to me your fremid manir speche, Tr. L. 2. 248. Do not talk to me as a stranger would. In Tr. L. 3. 530. instead of fremid, Ca. reads wyld. Sometimes frened and frend are used in the same sense, from the AS. Fpæns, So frened a caos, Di. 121. is the same as in the preceding Verse is meant by, so new a chance. From all foiknesse ihel ben yfrende, i. e. Estranged from all truth. Mo. 2566. In other Editions it is Frend, frende.
Frendfulliche: Friendly. Tr. L. 1. 691. Frendlyist, Frendlyst: Most friendly, or sociable. Tr. L. 2. 204. Best friend. Bl. Kn. 468.
Frendnesse: Strangeness. p. 480, a. See Fremde.
Frenesse: Liberty, freeness, frankness.
Frenetike: Frantick. Tr. L. 5. 206.
Frened. See Fremed.
Frenith: Asketh, enquireth. No. 3109. See Fraine.
Frenseye: A frenzy. Tr. L. 1. 728.
Frere: A Fryer. Freris: Fryers. RR. 7463.
Fresed, Fresid: Freezed, froze.
Freshe: To refresh. RR. 1513. But it seems to be mistaken for Frenshe, or French, p. 194, a. l. 63.
Fret: Filled, fraught. Bal. 269. See Lombis. Also, Fret-work. LW. 225, 228.
Fret, Frete, Freten, Fretin, Frette: To eat, devour. Fretting: Devouring. Prol. 2021. AS. Fpctan, Lurcari, vorare. We still use it of Moth's fretting. Faß fretus, Mo. 2091. Eat hastily.
Frent, Frente, Fruict, Fruit: Fruit; Issue. Fr. 2011.
Fremell, Fremill: Freewill.
Frezid. See Fresed.
Frise: Worth all the golde in Rome and Frise, RR. 1093. f. Friselant, p. 413. Verse 23.
Fritth, Fryth, La. 124. A wood. Sk. and Sown. But Blo. from Coke upon Littleton, explains it, a Plain between woods.
Fro: From. Drive fro drede, Drive away fear; Pelle timorem, p. 365, b.
Frote: To rub. Tr. L. 3. 1121. Frotith: Rubbeth. MR. 639.
Frounce: A plait; A wrinkle; Ruga, p. 360, b.
Frouncid: Wrinkled. Cr. 155. Frounciles: Smooth, without wrinkles. RR. 860. Fr. Froncer, To gather, to plait.
Froward: Averse. RR. 4940.
Froy: From you. Tr. L. 1. 5. See Alounb.
Fruictfull, Fruictuous: Fruitfull; Usefull; Thrifty. Mo. 3383.
Fruict, Fruit, as Frent.
Ful, Full: Very. Ful bold; Very bold. Full done, for Fully done; Fulfilled, finished; Perfecerit, p. 389, a. l. 63.
Fuldrive: Fully driven. This bargain is fuldrive, Fr. 2786. Made up, finished.
Fulk, Fa. L. 1. 73. A hollow place. Sp. Sk. thinks it should be Sulk, Lat. Sulcus, A furrow, a trench, a ditch.
Fumis: Smoak; Fumes. Fumofie, Sq. 378. No. 2083. Being affected with Fumes arising from the Stomach to the Head after Excess of Drinking.
Fundement: Foundation.
Furneis: A furnace. Fr. Fondement.
Furrid hode: A Hood lined with Furr. Mo. 2236.
Furtherin. See Forthrin.
Fusible: That may be melted. No. 877.
Fuyre: Fury.
Fyl: Fell.
Fylth: Vileness; baseness. p. 381. Lat. Vilitas; from whence the word seems to be derived.
Fynance, Ber. 1876. See Penance.
Fyne. See Fine.
Fynt: Findeth; Found. Fynt his horse awy; Finds his horse was gone.
Fyns: Fines. Ber. 3117.
Fyxe: Fixt, fixed.

G.

Gabb, Gabbe: To tatle, prate. MR. 402. To lye. p. 370, b. It sometimes signifies To speak or talk. RR. 6700.

Gacides Chiron, Fa. L. 3. 116. Perhaps it should be read Eacides Chiron. Chiron was a great Musician as well as Physician, and was Master to Achilles, Grandson to Æacus, thence called Æacides.

Gades: The City of Cadix in Spain. p. 478, b.

Gadling, Gadling: An idle fellow that gads and saunters up and down. RR. 938. Gam. 203.

Gafe, Gaffe: Gave.

Gage, Fr. A pledge, a pawn, Bail, or surety. Bh. 1404. Also, To give bail. Ib. 3044.

Gailir: A Jaylor. Ar. 103.

Gaincome: Return. Cr. 55.

Gain for Again: Against; Touching. RR. 6555. There gaine; Against that.

Gaire, Mo. 1080. The Dogberry-tree. See Sonn. in Tracte theop. Ray says, Gatteridge-tree is Cornus femina or Prickwood; and yet Gatteridge-berry are the fruit of Euonymus Theophrasti, i. e. Spindle-tree or Bouse-berry.

Galaxie, AF. 56. Fa. L. 2. 428. The Milky-way, which is a broad white Tract encompassing the whole Heavens, consisting of an innumerable quantity of Fixed Stars, different in Situation and Magnitude, from the confused mixture of whose light it's white colour is supposed to proceed. It is called Varlyng-street, Fa. L. 2. 431. which was a Roman way extending from the East part of Britain to the West.

Gale, WB. 822. CL. 1357. To yawl, bawl, or laugh aloud; To shout. Sk.

Galfride, Fa. L. 3. 382. See Gaulfride.

Galianis: The Works of Galen. No. 1820.

Galiard: Gay. Fr. Gaillard, Brisk, merry; pleasant, chearfull.

Galingale, Prot. 383. Long-rooted Cyperus; Cyperus odoratus.

Gallice, Galleia, a Province of Spain. Prot. 468.

Gallie: Bitter, as gall. RL. 347.

Galoche: A kind of wooden shoe worn by Country-people in France. See Meth. Fr. In Spenser it is called Gallage. It is taken for a shoe in general. Sq. 574.

Galp: To yawn; To belch.

Game: Sport, mirth; Pleasure; A jest, a pleasant story, or tale. Fr. 11, 15. In Tr. L. 4. 529. instead of it, MS. Sp. reads Grime, V.

Gan, Gannin: Began. It is often used as a Sign of the Preter Tense, both with and without the Participle To, as Gan proceed; Proceeded. Gannin flew; Pled. Tr. L. 2. 194.

Gange: To go. G. 381. MS. Dangan.

Gastion, Mo. 1342. Dr. Ch. 1121. Sp. says, That he "betrayed the Army of the Christians under Charles" main, to the Saracens, and was therefore torn in pieces with four Horses. But Hofman thinks that the French call a Traitor Gastion from Wenilo, Archbishop of Sens, who betrayed Charles the Bold his Benefactor, by calling in Lewis King of Germany, and receiving him into that City. See Hofm. in Wenilo.

Gap-toothed, WB. 603. Sk. reads it Ga-toothed, i. e. Having a Goat's teeth, perhaps to signify her Wantonness; Others think, that it signifies Having gaps in her teeth, as growing at a distance from one another; and this might also perhaps be taken as a Sign of Lechery, which is signified by her having a Coitus tooth, Ib. 602. and the print of dams Venus fete, Ib. 604.

Gardbrece, Ch. Dr. 1584. The same with Gracer, V.

Garisoun: To garrison; To defend. RR. 3249.

Garnere: Properly, A Granary. It also signifies any Store-room, or place to lay up Money or other goods. RR. 1148, 6810.

Garnison, Fr. Garnisoun: A Garrison, a Guard. RR. 4204.

Garment: A garment. Madg. 354.

Garumne: The River Garonne in France. Lat. Garumna.

Galt, as Agalt. Gastneft: Terror; Gastliness. Boeth.

Gastoyne, PT. 280. Perhaps it may signify a Void or Wall place. Lat. Barb. Gastina, Fr. Gastine. See Fr. Gl. in Vastum.

Gate: A way. Any gate; Any manner, in any wise. RR. 5230. How gate, or Howgates; How, after what manner. MR. 129, 134. Went her gate; Went her ways. RR. 3332. Also, Got, begot. Hyper. 12.

Gathren: To gather. Gathrid: Gathered. Boeth.

Gatte: Got. RR. 2692.

Gaude, No. 1903. Tr. L. 2. 351. A trifle. Also, Trifling, jelling. Gaudes: Ridiculous tricks, freaks.

Gaudid, Prot. 159. Made gay, or gawdy; Garnished, adorned.

Gaulfride, Mo. 1462. Galsfridus de Vinsalvi, or Jeffrey Vinesalf, who wrote a Poem upon the Death of K. Richard the First, who was slain in France before the Castle of Chaluz near Limoges, on a Friday, to which Chaucer alludes, particularly, Ib. 1457. O Venus, &c. and Ib. 1466. The Friday, &c.

O Veneris lachrymosa dies! O sidus amarum!

Gauve, Gauvin: To hare.

Gawain, Gawein, Sq. 115. "This Gawyn was Sister's Son to Arthur the Great, King of the Britains, a Man famous in War, and in all manner of Civility; as in the Acts of the Britains we may read. In the year 1082. in a Province of Wales, called Rose, was his Sepulchre found; and his Body, affirmed by many to have been of the length of fourteen foot. Sp.

Gawrin, as Gauve.

Gaylere: A Jaylor.

Geant, AF. 344. A Jay. Sk. But here it must mean some other Bird, perhaps a Bittern; for the Jay is mentioned, Ib. 346.

Gear: Habit, clothes. FL. 26. See Gere.

Gede for Yede, Ber. 2475. Went.

Geftr: Gifts.

Gelofte. See Clove gelofte.

Gende, Gent: Gentle, genteel, seemly; fine. Gent faconde; Flowing eloquence. AF. 558.

Generalte: Generality. In generalte; In general, generally, for the generality. Cap. 402.

Genillon, No. 2702. Mo. 806. See Gastion.

Gent. See Gende.

Genterie, LW. 390. as Gentillese.

Gentile: Relations, kindred. Fr. 1510.

Gentill: Gentle, noble; Civil, Gentleman-like. Gentillese: Gentility, frankness, generosity; Civility. Gentilly: Civilly, in a genteel, courteous manner.

Gentilnesse, as Gentillese.

Gentles, WB. 1209. Gentlemen; Nobles.

Geomancie: Divination by points, or circles made on the Earth, or by opening the Earth, Bla.

Gerd, Gerdin: To strike, to smite; To pierce; To stab. See Gl. V.

Gere: Any Instrument or Furniture whatsoever; Apparel, dress, habit; Accoutrement. Prot. 354, 2182. In his gere dress, Tr. L. 2. 635. is better read in MS. Sp. In his gere hym dress.

Gerevous: Guardians, or Governors: Whence Reve signifies a Gentleman's Bailif. Prot. 589. Portreve; a Bailif, or chief Officer of a Port-town; Sheriff, i. e. Shire-pretree; Church-gereve; A Churchwarden. Fr. 43. AS. trepepa, Comes, praefectus. See Sonn.

Gergon: A jargon, chattering. Sq. 1364.

Gerie, Geriful: Changeable, inconstant. Prot. 1538, 1540.

f. a gyando. It sometimes signifies Cruel. Sk.

Gerr: Struck. Gam. 598. Where MS. Ch. hath it, Smoot

him on the nek. See Gerd.

Gesolrent the hant, Ber. 1104. G solrent in ale; A Note in the Gamut, or Scale of Music.

Gesse: To guess. To entertain as a guest. Com. explains

Mo. 2109, 2110. thus; "If thou wilt like of their sentence and stand to it, they will entertain thee as a guest in their brave halles; or else they will hear and end thy matter without any great enquiry, privately in their houses. Gessing: Meaning; Opinion.

Gest, Geste: A guest. Also, History, a story. Tr. L. 2. 83.

Where instead of hem redin the gest, the Sense and Numbers are easier in MS. Sp. rede hem all the gest, i. e. Story.

8 B Gestu:

Giftis: Acts, Stories, Histories; Noble Actions, or Exploits. Also, Guests. Fr. 2037. Mo. 2471.
Get: Jette. Mo. 974. Also, Got, begotten. PW. 162.
Gette: Gotten. BD. 67.
Geib: Goeth. Ar. 260.
Gathering: Gathering. Mo. 2673.
Gettin: Begotten. Hyp. 35.
Geve: Given. Fr. 457.
Geyn: Gain. Her ne gate no geyne; She got nothing, She was never the better. An. 207.
Geyns for Ageyns, Ber. 1921. Against.
Ghest: A guest. Ghestis: Guests. Fr. 1368, 1369.
Ghost: A Spirit; The Soul, the mind. See Goste.
Gide, Gie: To guide, to direct. See Guy.
Gierfull, as Gerie, Gerisfull.
Gigges, Mo. 2699. Harlots, Strumpets; Giglers. Fa. L. 3. 852. Fr. Gigue, a Romp. Gigging: Sounding. Sp. Perhaps from the Fr. Gigue, It. Giga, a sort of Musical Instrument.
Giglolike: Like a Strumpet. Cr. 83. It seems to come from Gigge. See Gigges.
Gildy: Gilt, golden. Dr. Ch. 838.
Gilefull: Deceitful, perfidious, treacherous.
Giler, Gilir: A deceiver. Giling: Deceiving. Gilid: Deceived. See Agilir.
Gilofre: A Gilly-flower. RR. 1368. Fr. Giroflée. See Glove geloser.
Gilowr, as Gilar.
Gilt, Gilte: Gilded; Gold-colour, yellow. LW. 230. Also, Guilt; A fault. As in my gilt; Through my fault. Fr. 2303. Wubontin gilt; Without remedy. lb. 2585. Mo. 1488. Giltif: Guilty. Gam. 1626.
Gin: A snare, or trap. Also, A trick, or contrivance; Fa. L. 3. 913. Gins: Gins, engines. Mo. 2591. Bonds, fetters. Com.
Gingiber: Ginger. RR. 1369.
Ginis. See Gin.
Ginnin: To begin. Tr. L. 5. 657. Ginning: Beginning. RR. 4332. Tr. L. 1. 378. See Argumentid. Ginnish: Beginneth. Ginnish gone; He goeth immediately. MR. 956. Here Ginnish seems to be used as Gan, V.
Gipe, RR. 7214. A Coat full of plaits. Sk. Fr. Jupe, An upper coat. See Men. Fr. in Juppe.
Gipon, Gippon: A short doublet, or light coat. Prol. 75. A Diminutive of Gipe, as the Fr. Jupon is of Jupe. See Gipe.
Gipsire: A pouch, or purse; A bag. Prol. 359. Fr. Gipsiere.
Gir del fide: The Waist, the middle. RR. 826. The place where the Girdle is wore; from the AS. Grypl, Cingulum, and Stede, Locus, ut St. Locus cinguli.
Girdin. See Gerd.
Gires: Fits. Prol. 1533. See Gyre.
Girt. See Gerd, Gert and Grit.
Gisarme, RR. 5978. A military weapon, supposed by some to be a Pike with two points, or a Staff with two pikes within it, which with a Thrust forward came forth, and thought by Spelm. to be the same which in Spanish is called Bisarma, or Visarma; but in the Statute of Winton, he thinks it signifies a Bill, in Lat. Bipennis, a Battle-ax, a Hand-ax with two edges. See Fr. Gl. in Gisarma.
Gift: Guise, manner, custom, usage. In gifts. [MS. Sp. In wife] of curtesy; Under a pretence of courtesy. Tr. L. 5. 64. Fashion of dres, or armour. Prol. 2127. which is better in MS. Ch.
There ne is nowe no newe gyze, that the nas olde;
That is, There is no new manner of Arming now, that was not old, and used at that time.
Gisfene: A glazard, called a Gbizzen in Lincolnshire. In p. 385, b. it is put for the Layer, Lat. Jecur, jechnoris, from whence perhaps it is derived.
Gift: A guest, a stranger. PT. 461. Giftis: Strangers. lb. 550.
Gue: A woman's gown. MR. 846. WB. 559.
Glad: Content. Glad pover; Poverty with contentment. WB. 1183. Gladly: Commonly, Sk. f. Properly, p. 151, b. 202, a. 208, b. Hyper. 205.
Glade, Gladin: To make glad, to comfort. Fr. 2514.
Gladir: A comforter, cherisher, one that causeth joy, or gladness. Prol. 2224. Also, More glad.

Gladly. See Glad.
Glaifing: The glazing of a window. Dr. Ch. 327.
Glafe, Tr. L. 5. 469. as Glofe.
Gle, Glee: Mirth, rejoicing; Melody, Musick. Tr. L. 12. 1036. Fa. L. 3. 119.
Glede: A burning, or live cole. Prol. 1994. AS. Glede, Pruna. Gledis: Coles; Embers. Tr. L. 2. 538. Also, Kites. Mo. 3267.
Glede of an eye: The white of an egg. No. 827. Fr. Glaire.
Glent: Glanced. Tr. L. 4. 1223.
Gleve: A spear. Sp. It properly signifies a Sword. Fr. Glaive, a Cutlance. CL. 545.
Glitterande, Glitterande: Glittering, shining. The Termination—and or—ande is frequently used for—ing, in the Old Poets; From the not observing of which arose that mistake in the Editions of Spenser's Fairy Q. L. 1. Cant. to 7. St. 29.
His glitter and armour shind far away;
whereas it should be read,
His glitter and armour shined far away.
Glombe, RR. 4356. To look gloomy; To frown. Sp.
Glofe, Glofin: To deceive, flatter, lye; To interpret. It is generally used in an ill sense for To put a fair interpretation with an intention to deceive. Mo. 3095. Also, A Comment, or Interpretation. Fr. 528. For al the glofe that thei coune; How fair soever a Glof they may put upon it. lb. 2782. Glofir, Glofowr: A deceiver, a flatterer.
Glotenis, Glotenie: Gluttony. Glotens: Gluttons. RR. 4307.
Glaucous: Gluttonous, ravenous. Glaucous bonde: A greedy hand; Aviað mann, Boeth. p. 364, b.
Glondin: Glowed, shone. Prol. 2134. Glomedon, MS. Ch. which makes the Verse compleat without pronouncing the final e in betwixte.
Glytrin: To glitter, to shine. Prol. 979.
Gnarr [or Knarre; H. 1.] is a hard knot in a tree, or a stubb; whence a thick chubby fellow is called a Gnarr, Prol. 551. which MS. Ch. reads thus;
He was thick shouldered, and a short gnarr;
which is a more natural Description of a thick, short, well-set fellow than it is in the common Editions.
Gnarris: Stubbied.
Gnasse: Gnashed with the teeth. Pr. RL. 123.
Gnerring: Snarling. p. 202, a.
Gnoffe: An old Cuff; A Miser. MR. 80.
Go: Goss; Fr. 514.
Gobbs, Gobur: A piece. Prol. 698.
Goddace, Goddess: A Goddess, Cr. 135. 218.
Goddie: Gode; Of God.
Gode: Good. Sometimes it is used by way of Intreaty; as we say, Good now! AL. 346, 689. Also, God. Godie: Goods; Gods. Gode-gissing: A good opinion, a good name; Bona eximias, Boeth. p. 363, b. Godeless: Without Money, or Goods. No. 2798. But it is better read in MS. Ch. and H. 1.
But golders for to be is a no game.
Godelist: Goodliest, handiomest. AL. 384.
Godelich, Godely: Goodly; Kind, courteous, civil, obliging; Gentleman-like, honorable; Honorably, &c. A man may godely, p. 157, a. (so it should be read) i. e. may do it in a goodly manner, as p. 148, a.
Godelibede, Godelyhede: Goodness; Civility. RR. 4604. Comeliness, beauty. Tr. L. 3. 1736.
Godehes, Goodness. At godehesse; To good purpose. RR. 1453.
Godelse: Goods. RR. 5634. It were better to read it Godes.
Godfib: A Gossip, a Godfather, or Godmother, any Spiritual Relation. Parr. AS. Syb. Relation, Kindred, or Alliance.
Goffish: Foolish, silly. Tr. L. 3. 585. from the Fr. Goffe, a Dunce, an awkward fellow, and perhaps Rude, ill-natured. See Men. Fr.
Gold-bewin: Of a golden hue, or colour.
Goldsmithry: Goldsmith's work.
Goles: The gullet, or throat. RR. 7096.
Golierdeis, Prol. 562. Ravenously-mouthed. Sp. But it signifies

- signifies rather a Buffoon, in Fr. Gouliard. See Men. Fr. and Fr. Gl. in Goliardus.
- Gomme*: Gum. LW. 121.
- Gon, Gonin, Gonnin*: Began; To go or proceed; Ago, agone, since. It is sometimes put for Gan, Mo. 1837. Bl. Kn. 32.
- Gon, Gonne*: A gun. RR. 4176. Fa. L. 3. 553. Also, Begun. Pro. 2662. which may be read, folks beganne, as in MS. Ch.
- Gonde*: Gone. PT. 574.
- Gonfanon*: RR. 1201. Gonfanon, Ib. 2018. Gonfanon, The chief Banner, or Standard. See Men. Fr. and Men. It. and Fr. Gl. in Gonfanon.
- Gong*: A house of ease, a Jakes. Mo. 2092. p. 208, b. AS. Gong, Latrina.
- Gonne, Gonnin*. See Gon.
- Goodlefe*, Mo. 6. Goodwoman, or as they say in some places, Goody. See Left.
- Goodship*: Goodness. Ber. 515.
- Gore*, MR. 129. No. 3298. A plait or fold. Sp. An arbour. Sk.
- Gorget*: The throat. Mo. 1450. Fr. Gorge.
- Gose*: Goes, goeth. Ch. Dr. 1286. Also, A goose.
- Gospellere*: An Evangelist. RR. 6887.
- Gossomere*: The white and cobweb-like Exhalations that fly abroad in hot Sunny weather. Blo. Sk. says that in a Book called The French Gardener, it signifies the Down of the Sow-Thistle, which is driven to and fro by the wind.
- Gost*: A ghost, a spirit; The mind. Gostis: Ghosts, &c.
- Goib*: Goeth; Go, in the Imperative Mood.
- Governance, Govirnanee*: Government, management, conduct, cart. In Tr. L. 2, 1442. Ca. reads Juste-nance.
- Governayle*: Government, management, conduct. p. 265, a. Also, A pilot, a guide, a governor. Mo. 3018. Fr. Gouvernail, The Rudder, or Helm of a Ship, the Steerage.
- Gourde*: A leathern bottle. Mo. 1659. So called either from the form of it; or (as Sk. says) because abroad they use Gourds for Bottles.
- Grace*: Favour. Fr. 2545. God giveth [i. e. gives] for grace; A Curse. No. 686. Save, saving your grace; With your leave, or favour. p. 149, a. For the grace of gode; For the sake of good. p. 382, a. By grace of position; For argument-sake. p. 399, a. In RR. 444. it seems to signify Gracefulness or Comeliness, particularly of the Countenance. Makin lene their grace; Make themselves look thin through an Hypocritical fasting, referring to Math. VI. 16. Graces, Fr. Thanks.
- Gracions*: Gracefull, well-favoured. Fr. 1633. Fr. Gracieux.
- Graith*. See Greib.
- Graine*: Grief, sorrow, vexation, anger, madness; Trouble, affliction. Tr. L. 1, 373. AS. Epam, Furor.
- Grammercy*, as Grantemercy.
- Grane*: A grain. Tr. L. 3. 1028.
- Grantmercy*. See Grantemercy.
- Grapinel*: A Grapling-Iron. Cl. 61. A Diminutive of the Fr. Grapin.
- Gratch*: To behave. Sk. Gan her gratche as a bigine; Dressed herself as a Beguine. RR. 7368. Gratche is perhaps the same with Graibe, if not mistaken for it. See Greib.
- Grave, Gravin*: To bury, to engrave, to carve, to cut. Tr. L. 2. 47. To make an impression. Cmp. 280. Buried. Fr. 2522.
- Grange*: A Grange, a Granary, Barn, or large Farm belonging to a Religious House, where there are Stables for Horses, Stalls for Oxen and other Cattle. Fr.
- Grange*, A barn.
- Grantemercy*: Great thanks. Fr. Grandmerci; I thank you heartily.
- Gre, Gree, Fr. Gré*. Will, accord, satisfaction, pleasure. Ber. 1326. Take at gre, or agre, RR. 1969, 4349. Take in gre, Ib. 42. Receive in gre, Fr. 2172. Accept in gre, Tr. L. 2. 529. To take kindly, or in good part. Make gre; To oblige one, to do a good turn. Mo. 2274. Also, Degree, Gre superlative; The Superlative Degree. Sq. 891. In no manir gre; Not in the least degree. RR. 5743. Greable: Agreeable; Satisfactory. La. 768.
- Gredé*: To cry, to weep. CN. 135. It. Gridare.
- Greet*: To rejoyce.
- Grefe*: Grief. Take it not in grefe; Take it not ill.
- Grein de Parù*, RR. 1369. Sk. thinks it to be contracted from Grains of Paradise; The Seed of a Plant brought from Guinea.
- Greined, Greynyd*: Made, sprung up or produced from a grain. Sk. Of colour greynyd; Dyed in grain. Ber. 2330.
- Greib*: To remove, to bring. Sk. To fit, prepare or make ready. Mo. 619. To contrive. That I had greib-ed death to all gode menne, Boeth. p. 363, a. Si bonis omnibus necem frueretur diceretur.
- Grene*: Green. Grene of conscience; Of a tender conscience; Tender-hearted. No. 100. See Pro. 142—150. Hew full oft in grene; A pale complexion. Tr. L. 2. 6. As grene as gall, Mo. 2102. The moisture in the Gall of living creatures is green; it should seem that he means the Gold was enameled with Green. Com. Grene, Ber. 3160. is put for Gryn, or Grin (as in RL. 237.) which is the same with Gin, A snare.
- Grenehede*: Rawsness, rashness of youth, or simply, youth. La. 164.
- Greynth*, PT. 686. Ate or look green.
- Gret, Grette*: Greeted, saluted. Bel. Lad. 100.
- Grete*: To cry. RR. 4116. See Grede. Great, course. Sq. 938. Also, as Gret.
- Grestin*: Smote. See Gerd and Grit.
- Grieve*: To grieve, to offend, to hurt, to annoy; Grief, grievance. Also, A grove. Groves: Groves, bushes. RR. 3019. CN. 64. Grevid: Aggrieved; Angry.
- Greynyd*. See Greined.
- Grill*, RR. 73. Cold. Sp. f. as Grifly. See Grifs.
- Grin*: A snare. See Grene.
- Grint*: Grindeth. WB. 389. Grindd: Ground; Gnashed. Fr. 897.
- Gribe*: To be afraid. Ber. 2067. Grifly: Frightfull, dreadful. See Agribe.
- Grit for Girt*: Smote, struck, stabbed. Through grit, Pro. 1012. [gert, MS. Ch.] Through gyt, Bl. Kn. 292. Thrust, or pierced through. See Gird.
- Grub*: An agreement. Mo. 2187. AS. Epam, Peace.
- Groche*: To grudge or grutch, to murmur. Mo. 3104.
- Grose, Grosing, Gronse, Gronse, Gruf, Gruffs*: Groveling, flat on the ground. Now downward grouse, and now upright; Sometimes flat on thy face, and sometimes with thy face upward. RR. 2561.
- Groin*: The snout of a swine. p. 192, b. To grumble. RR. 7099. Fr. Grogner. Also, Grunting, grumbling. Tr. L. 1, 350. Fr. Grogne, A powting woman.
- Gromin*: To groan. Tr. L. 3. 207.
- Grope, Gropin*: To search, feel, examine. Fr. 550.
- Grobed*: Grubbed up.
- Grouse, Gronse*. See Grose.
- Grown*, Ben. 1674. Grumbling. See Groin.
- Groundid*: Ground, from Grind. No. 796.
- Growning*, PT. 651. Growling, snarling. See Groin, Grown.
- Gruf, Gruffe*. See Grose.
- Grusill*: A gristle. PT. 577.
- Grys, Grece, Greece*: A valuable Furr of a Beast called by the French Vair. Pro. 194. See Fr. Gl. in Griseum. It also signifies Grey. Fr. Gris. In PP. Ne neither gose ne grys, it signifies Partridges, says Sk. perhaps from the colour; but probably it there signifies Pig, as Grifis is used by Dougl. An. VII. for Pigs.
- Gubernatise*: Governing.
- Gude*: Good.
- Guerdon*, Fr. A reward, recompence; Return of a favour or obligation. Also, To reward, to recompence, to requite. For all guerdons, p. 148, b. A form of Intreaty; Of all loves. Guerdoning: Rewarding, &c. Guerdonless: Without reward. Bl. Kn. 400.
- Guisse*, as Gise.
- Gurtheles*: Girdles. Pro. 370.
- Guy*: To guide, rule, govern; To direct, to order. Guerdone, as Guerdon.
- Gyderesse*: She that guides, a woman-guide. Boeth.
- Gyf*, as Guy.

Gynne,

Gynne, as Gin.

Gyre, Pro. 1374. A trance, a dump, a fit. Sk. Perhaps from the Lat. Gyro, To turn round, it may signify Dizziness, or Swimming of the head.

Gyrt. See Grit.

H.

H Abandon: To abandon, to forsake. BD. 763.

Habergeon, Haburgeon, Fr. Haubergeon, a Dim. of Hanberg, or Haubert, a Coat of Mail; A little Coat of Mail, or only Sleeves and Gorget of Mail. Bl. No. 3366, 3368.

Habilite: Ability, capacity; Address. CL. 1044. Fr. Habilié.

Habitacles: Habitations; Apartments. Fa. L. 3. 104.

Habiten: To dwell, inhabit. RR. 660.

Habound: To abound; Abounding.

Habundaunt: Abounding with. Fr. 1089.

Haburgeon. See Habergeon.

Hace: Hath. Also, Hoarse; Harsh. Cr. 338. Here and hacc; Hoarse and harsh. CG. 33. AS. Hare, Rancus.

Hackenaie: RR. 1137. Fr. Haquenee, a Pad; but here it signifies a very ordinary Horse (such as we now call a Hackney) in opposition to a Horse of price, lb. 1134.

Hadnest, perhaps for Badnest, p. 514, a. 1. 42.

Hae: A hedge. RR. 3007, 2971, 3175. Fr. Hays. AS. Hæg. Sepes, septum, any Fence or Enclosure.

Hails: Bliss, happiness. No. 2168. In Sanctis, Sk. Sedibus, being understood; In the Holy Habitations, or Habitations of the Saints.

Hailfin: To salute; To embrace. See Halfe, I hailfin The, No. 3154. I conjure the, Ca. 2. Py. haloufe, Ca. 1. halfe, H. 1. halfe, hayfe, al. baile, Ed. 1591.

Haine: Hatred. Test. Fr. Haine.

Haire: A hair-cloth. RR. 438.

Haketon: A Jacket without sleeves. Sp. No. 3365.

Halfe: A side; a part. AS. Dealp. A this halfe [l. this halfe] God. 31. On this side God. p. 489, b.

Halfindele, Halfindole. See Halwe.

Halif wode. See Hazil wode.

Halke: A corner. Fr. 2675. No. 322. AS. Deale, A nook.

Hallomes: Saints. Pro. 14. AS. Dalig, Sanctus.

Halowe: Hollow. Ar. 308. No. 1286.

Halowid: Hollow'd to, called upon. PT. 21.

Halpe: Helped, eased. RR. 1911. Mo. 158. RL. 72.

Halfe: The neck. Sq. 1911. Also, To embrace, to take one about the neck. CL. 1290. Halving: Embracing. RL. 216. AS. Dalp.

Halow it to the best: By the Context it should be, I will pray that it turn to the best. PT. 107.

Halt, Halte: Holdeth; Observeth. Dr. Ch. 621. Held, or kept. La. 722. Tr. L. 2. 37. Held, accounted. Also, To halt as a Cripple. Dr. Ch. 622.

Halwe, Halwindole, Halfindole, Halfindole: Half. In some halve: In some part, in some degree. Test. Widdrowin them to halves: Drew themselves out into two Parties, some for one side, and some for the other. Gam. 258.

Hameled, Tr. L. 2. 964. Cut off, abated. Ca. hath liffed (i. e. lessened, abated) instead of hameled. It seems to come from Hamelari, To maim, or lame by cutting the hams, or houghs.

Hamers: Hammers. Dr. Ch. 1164.

Han: Have.

Hanselins: A kind of Breeches. Pars. p. 198, a. f. leg. Hanselins, Breeches or slops.

Hamen: To haunt, use, exercise. Boeth.

Hap, Happe: Fortune, chance. Happes: Chances. Happes aventurous, p. 365, a. I suspect it was originally writ to the folie of these happes, (without aventurous) and that aventures was afterwards put in the margin as a Gloss to explain happes, which being in time introduced into the Text, was changed to aventurous; or else it may have been writ happes or aventures, there being very frequent Instances in Chancer's Translation of Boeth. of two Synonymous words being put to render the sense of one in the Latin, where one is either obscure, or does not fully answer the force of the Latin word: Besides Aventurous bears a different sense in this Author. See Aventurous. Hape is put for Hap, or Happe, RR. 3284. Happious: Accidental, happening by chance. p. 490, b.

Harbere: An about. FL. 465.

Harberowe. See Herberowe.

Hardeth: Hardeneth. p. 514, a.

Hardied: Emboldened, encouraged. Test.

Hardily: Bravely, boldly; Verily. Pro. 156. RR. 4.

Hardiment, Hardineß: Courage, boldness.

Hardly, Dr. Ch. 1043. Bal. 828. for Hardily, V.

Hardy: Bold, brave, courageous.

Harlot, p. 202, b. It is used indifferently of loose persons of either sex, as Ribalde, V. Pro. 649. Mo. 2273. King of harlots is the same with Rex Ribaldorum, who had the charge of punishing those disorderly people about the King's Court. See an Account at large of his Office in Fr. Gl. in Ribald. The Office of Master of the Revels seems to have some Affinity with it.

Harlotreis: Bawdry. Pro. 503.

Harnis, Harnis: Harness, Furniture, Armour. Harnis The, RR. 2648. Dress thee.

Harnis, for Hernis: Corners. Mo. 2429.

Harpor: A Harper. Tr. L. 2. 1030.

Harrow: An Interjection. Haro is a form of Exclamation anciently used in Normandy to call for Help, or to raise the Hue and Cry. See Hick. Gr. Fr. p. 96, a.

Harrome: To lay waste, destroy, ravage, plunder. MR. 404. Fr. 843. AS. Denyan, Vastare.

Haryid: Carried out by force, hurried out. Pro. 2728.

Hazardours. See Hazardours.

Hastiness: Rashness. p. 150, a.

Hastily, Hastly: Soon. Fr. 462. Presently, immediately, without delay. lb. 1170.

Hastow: Halt thou. WB. 903.

Hate, Haite, RR. 38. Be or is called, or named. Also, Hot. RR. 2318.

Havan: A haven. Test.

Hanberk, Fr. Hauberg, Haubert, a Coat of Mail. See Habergeon.

Have, for Behave, p. 488, b. 1. 28. Have the barre. See Bar.

Haven, Havin: To have.

Hauncin: To enhance, promote. Bl. Kn. 431. Fr. Haussier; To lift up. Haunsing: Elevation. p. 449, b.

Haunt: Custom, a habit, skill gained by frequent practice. Pro. 449. Hauntidin: Haunted. See Hanten.

Havoir, RR. 4720. The same with Aver, V.

Hauelin, Hauin (Fr. Hantain) Haughty, proud. RR. 3739. Loud. No. 1844. High-flying. Dr. 195. Hauelny: Haughtily. RR. 5820.

Hawbak, Hawbeck, Hawberk, as Hanberk.

Hawe: Coloured. Cr. 257. A Hawthorn-berry. WB. 659. p. 487, b. A Yard, a hedge. No. 2373. See Hais.

Hay. See Hais.

Hayne. See Haine.

Hazardours: Gamesters, particularly Hazard-players.

Hazardrie: Gaming, playing at Hazard. Mo. 2106.

Hazil wode, Tr. L. 5. 1174. Hazil wode, lb. L. 3. 892.

Hazle trees. Te hazlewoods seems to have been a common form of Exclamation; and Te halif wode, Tr. L. 5. 505. should probably be read, Te hazil wode, or as in MS. Sp. Te hazil wode thought [quod, Ca.] this Paddere.

He, is sometimes put before Proper Names, as the Pronoun Se in Saxon; as, He Tityus, Tr. L. 1. 787. He Mofis, Sq. 270. He Epicurus, p. 375, a. So Him, RR. 6781. Bl. Kn. 269. and Her, V.

Heclid, Cr. 244. Wrapped. Sk. See Gl. V. in Hekkyl.

Hed, Hede: Heed, care, attention. Also, The head.

Hedde: Hid, covered. LW. 208.

Hedin of him the name, Gam. 431. This, as it is printed, is not intelligible; MS. Ch. gives us the true Reading, thus; Heede of him the name, i. e. They took particular notice of him, observed him close, and wondered how such a Stripling durst venture himself against an experienced Champion. The same Expression is used in this sense in a Poem in MS. Ch. Entitled Progne & Phi-

Philomene, the Story of which is taken out of Gower, L. 5. Noo man in Court noon heede of hym name; i. e. No man at Court took any manner of notice of him.
Heed: Head. On his heed; Upon peril of losing his head, Upon pain of death. Prol. 1346.

Heerde: A Shepherd.

Heere and hounne: Hare and Hound. Sp. and Sk. Tr. L. 4. 210. Perhaps it may have been a Proverbial Expression signifying One and all. Ca. has it thus, al they sayde and fowne.

Heeres: Hairs. Prol. 557.

Heeste: A command.

Hegge, RR. 481. A hedge. Haggis: Hedges.

Heighe: To hatten. Test.

Height, RR. 2984. for Hight, V.

Heine, for Hine, V. This cursed beine; This cursed slave. No. 1340.

Heire: Hair, MR. 868. A Hair-cloth. No. 143.

Heisugge, AF. 612. Cunna, a little bird in whose nest the Cuckow layeth her Eggs, and when they be hatched and grown to some bigness, they eat the bird that bred them. Sp.

Held: Hold. WB. 272.

Hele: To hide, to cover, to conceal. RR. 6882. WB. 950. AS. Delan. Heled, Hyled, Mo. 1170. Hid, covered.

Hele: Health; Prosperity, welfare. Also, A heel. Helis: Heels. RR. 7488.

Heleesse, Tr. L. 5. 1592. Void of Hele, V.

Helise, Fr. 852. Elisha, the Prophet.

Helise the feld: The Elysian Fields. CL. 119.

Helmid: Wearing a helmet. Tr. L. 2. 593. But Ca. hath it Helmid with stele; Crowned with Steel, the AS. Delm, signifying a Crown, as well as a Head-piece.

Helowis, WB. 677. Heloise, the Concubine, and afterwards the Wife, of Abelard. See their Story at large in Bayle's Dict. Lob. Hist. of Bretagne, &c.

Hen, Henne, Hennis, Hens, Hense: Hence.

Hend, WB. 6218. Hende, MR. 278, &c. (or rather, as MS. Ch. hath it throughout that Tale) Hendy: Gentle; Neat, handsome. RR. 285, 3345.

Heng, Tr. L. 2. 689, as Hing.

Hent, Hentin: To get, to take, to catch. Fr. 236. Caught lifted up, took, taken. AS. Dentan, To pursue, to catch, &c.

Henters: Huntsmen: Pursuers. Boeth.

Hepe: A company, a troop. Halt to hepe, Tr. L. 3. 1770. Holds together.

Her, Here: To hear. Also Hajr. It is used very often in the MSS. for Their, from the AS. Diopa, Of them. It seems to be retained (though not designedly) in this Edition, in Fr. 2380. and Tr. L. 4. 1141. Mr. Urry having in other places changed it into Their or Ther. It is put before Proper Names, as He. CL. 234.

Herande: To proclaim, to set forth, or celebrate the praise or fame of one, which is the part of a Herald. Fr. Herant.

Herandes: Heralds, MR. 276. Feats of activity, or furious parts in a play. Sp. From Heros, a Heroe, or from Herald.

Herbegere, RR. 7585. Herbiger, AL. 268. A Chamberlain, one that takes care of Lodgings. Herbegours: Chamberlains. RR. 5000.

Herber, Herbere, Herbir: An arbour. Tr. L. 2. 1705. An Inn, or place of Entertainment; A Lodging. Also, A place, station. Fr. 2581.

Herbergeon. See Habergeon.

Herberone, Herbir: To harbour, to lodge, to entertain. RR. 6145. Herberid, Herbrid, Herbroden: Harbour, &c.

Herbigage, Herborie, Herbrough, Herbrow, Herbrue: An Inn, a Lodging.

Herd, Herde: A herdsman, a shepherd. Also Heard; Hard. Prol. 229. RR. 3279.

Herdegromes: Herdsmen. Fa. L. 3. 135.

Herdus, RR. 1233. Hurds, Tow, the course part of Hemp or Flax when dressed. Also, for Hierdis, Mo. 2279. See Hierde.

Here, Gam. 1039. This place is certainly corrupted. MS. Ch. reads it thus;

*And doith him noon harm,
But leye upon the bodyis,
And breke both leg and arm.*

But H. 1. thus;

— and do hem no harmes;
But breke both her leggis and fiken her armes.

By this it appears that the true Reading is her armes, and that this was unskillfully brought into the Text out of the margin; where it was put to explain her, or here. See Her.

Herenus, Pi. 92. Instead of thou Herenus Quene, it is, Te vertuose quene. in a MS. in the Harl. Library.

Herie. See Hery.

Herin: Made of hair. Herin clout; A piece of Hair-cloth. No. 2252.

Heris: Hairs.

Herne: A valley; A corner. Fr. 2675. Hernis, No. 679. Corners. AS. Dyn. Angulus.

Hernia: A Rupture.

Heron: Hereupon. Fa. L. 3. 45.

Heronere: Di. 195. That kind of Hawk which flies at Hetous; or else it may signify a Heron. Instead of Heroner, Tr. L. 4. 413. Ca. hath Heron.

Heronseus, Sq. 88. f. Young Herons, Fr. Heronneaux, or Heronceaux. The common Heron is called Heronseus. MS. Ch. hath Gurlewis instead of Heronseus.

Heranward: Hereupon, upon this condition. Dr. Ch. 248.

Hert, Herte: Did hurt. Dr. Ch. 883. The Heart. Instead of all mine herte, read all by herte, RR. 4800. A Hart. Hertly: Hearty, sincere. RR. 5433. Hertleß: Heartless, discouraged.

Herto: Hereunto. Te were not want herto; You were not used to this. Ber. 532. Likewise, also.

Hery: To praise, to honour. AS. Dejnan. Heries: Praised, honoured. Herying: Honour. No. 2967. Praising, honouring. Ib. 3187.

Hesperus: The Evening-star.

Heste: A command. No. 2157, 2163. The Third Commandment, Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain, &c. is called the seconde heste, or Commandment. AS. Dæye. It seems to be put for Beheste, RR. 4475, 4477.

Het: Heated, warmed. AF. 145.

Hite: To promise. Dr. Ch. 1226. Was called. Rb. 200. See Hate.

Hethin: A Heathen, an Infidel; Mockery. Sp. MS. Ch. and H. 1. read Hethynge, MR. 1092. The same Expression is used by Dougl. En. 4.

Sal y thus makkii, and to bethyng drive, &c. Lat. Irrisa.

Heithneß: Paganism, The Heathen world. Prol. 49.

Heved, Fa. L. 2. 42. Was every vertue in me heved. f. for bevid, i. e. every Faculty in me was sunk. See H-vjeth.

Hevenishe: Celestial. p. 442, b.

Heviesh: Sinks down, maketh heavy. Boeth.

Hevin: To rise, to mount; To heave, to lift up. Di. 271. Thoreon was to bevin and to done, Tr. L. 2. 1289. There was great difficulty, qn. heaving and working. Also, Heaven.

Hevineß: Severity, or an Inclination to be severe, p. 158, a.

Hewe: Colour; Pretence: Hewis: Colours. Tr. L. 2. 21. AS. Dipe, Color. To hew to his, p. 489, a. To hew above the hedde, CL. 158. were Proverbial Expressions, spoken of persons attempting things above their power, or condition; which may be further explained by a passage in Lidgate's Life of St. Fremonde, MS. Harl.

*Or who can write the tryamples glorious
Of his martirs in noumbre not a few?
And I am ferful above myn hed to hewe,
Lyst froward chippis of presumpcioun
Sholde blynde myn eyen in their fallyng down.*

Hewe of Lincoln, No. 3193. This Hugh was a child of Eight years old, crucified by the Jews at Lincoln, A. D. 1255. for which Eighteen of them were hanged. See Leland's Itin. Vol. VIII. p. 82.

Hevid: Coloured. Hwid bright; Of a clear complexion. RR. 1030.

Hewin: Hackt and hewed. Tr. L. 2. 638.
Hemmonde, Cr. 186. Newly made, shining. Sp. and Sk.
 A helmet. Gl. V.
Hexameton, Mo. 91. An Hexameter Verse, consisting of six feet.
Hext: Highest. Ch. Dr. 345.
Hidin: To hide. Also, Hastened. Gam. 1103. where MS. Ch. reads it Heyden; but H. 1. better, Hyeden.
Hidous: Ugly, deformed. RR. 1354.
Hie: To hasten. In hie; In hatt. Cr. 361. AS. Drgan, Festinare. An hie, RR. 4021. for In hie. Also, High.
Hier: Hire.
Hierde: A herdsman, a shepherd. AS. Diepō, hypo, Pastor. Hence Hierdes, Tr. L. 3. 620. comes to signify Guides, or Governours; and Christ is called our Hierde, No. 203.
Hierdes: A shepherdess. Tr. L. 1. 654. But instead of an hierdes, Ca. reads and a pryncesse.
Hiere: Her.
High is sometimes put for Height.
Highed: Hastened. PT. 533. See Hie.
Higheft, for Height, p. 450, a. 1. 55, 58.
High, Highie, Highin: Named, called; Was called; Promised. AS. Datan, Vocatus, from Datan, To say, to bid. High is also sometimes put for Height.
Hijen, for Hie: Hasten. Ber. 2435.
Hildeth: Yieldeth; Beltotheth. p. 491, a.
Him, Tr. L. 2. 800. for Hemy, MS. Sp. or Them, Ca. See He.
Hindereft: Hindmost. Prol. 624.
Hine: A hind, a servant, particularly in Husbandry. Prol. 605. A clown.
Hing, Hinge: Hung.
Hip, Hipe: A bramble-berry.
Hir, Hire: Her.
Historial: Historical, in opposition to Fabulous. No. 1670.
Hie: Is called. Fa. L. 2. 434. See Hate and High.
Hithe, No. 1316. for Hie The, i. e. Hasten thee. See Instances of this nature in Alowh.
Ho! An Interjection used for stopping, or causing to desert, or leave off. Tr. L. 2. 1083. Withouin ho [al. ho] seems to be synonymous to endelesse; Without stopping, or leaving off. See ib. L. 3. 190: L. 4. 1242. A Proclamation, or Oyes. CL. 270.
Hokerly: Peevishly, frowardly. Parr. p. 201, b.
Hokir: Ill nature, frowardness, peevishness. MR. 857.
Hold, Holdin: Beholden, obliged. Tr. L. 3. 1263. Hyp. 80. Held, accounted. RR. 1008. Holdin in bonde, Tr. L. 5. 1614. To keep in suspense. Holdin, Tr. L. 9. 1760. should be read Holt [i. e. Holdeth] in. Holdyn yn, MS. Sp. and Ca.
Holdir: A supporter. Tr. L. 2. 644.
Hole: Whole; Wholly. Mo. 2152.
Holily, Holly, Holy: Wholly.
Hollow, Holour: A whoremonger, an adulterer, a fornicator.
Holowes, for Halowes: Saints. Holowes twelve; Twelve Apostles. Dr. Ch. 831.
Holowness, Tr. L. 5. 1808. It is better in MS. Sp. the hynesse of the seventh sphere; i. e. The height, &c.
Holfaines, Cr. 168. Hailstones; or the word may be divided, Hole stanes, i. e. Whole stones. Sk.
Holt, Halie: Holdeth; Held, accounted. No. 942. Also, A grove, a forest. Prol. 6. AS. Holt. Holies, Holies: Woods, forests. Tr. L. 3. 352.
Homeide, Homicide: A Murderer, an Assassin.
Homely, Homlich: Domestick. Homely foe; A domestick enemy. Also, Plain, without disguise. Homely sothe; Plain truth. Tr. L. 2. 1559.
Hond: A hand. Withouin bonde, Tr. L. 3. 188. Out of hand, presently. Honden: Hands. See Hent.
Hondis: Hands. Also, Takeith. Ber. 3212. Hondubrede; A hand's breadth. MR. 703.
Honeste: Honourable. No. 3070. Honestie: Decency. Mo. 737. p. 198, a.
Hong: To hang. No. 2306. Hanged, hung.
Hongir: Hunger. RR. 6734.
Hongit: Hanged, hung. A palfrey well hongit; A horse well accoutred. Ber. 899.
Hont, or Hunt: A huntsman. Dr. Ch. 389.

Honyswetnesse, p. 367, b. 1. 22. for honey of swetnesse. Lat. Melle dulcedinis.
Hoole; Whole. Hoolich: Wholly. Ber. 457.
Hope, PT. 14. Alle [i. Atte] cheke of the hope; f. At the Chequer-Inn in the Hope, in Canterbury, where the Pilgrims lodged. Hope signifies a Dingle, or little valley, and is retained in Kent, and other parts of England, in the names of Places: But as I find no such place as the Hope in or about Canterbury, I suspect it should be read Hoibe, there being (as I am informed) a place called the Hooibe not far from that City; and the mistake might easily arise from the likeness of the Saxon þ [for th] and p, in the MSS.
Hoppen and bonten with beve and hale: Hopp and hoot with heaving and haling. Mo. 2812. Leaping, and shouting, haling and pulling. Com.
Hoppoferis, Prol. 2019. Pilots. Sp. But MS. Ch. hath it, the ships upon the steris, i. e. There I saw the Ships and their whole-Crew burnt as they steered, or sailed along; which must be a much more terrible Image, than barely the Pilots being burnt, and consequently a very proper Ornament to the Temple of Mars.
Hore: Hoary, grey-headed. Sq. 916. Lakkis bore, Fr. 918. Grey hairs. Also, A whore. Sq. 1895.
Horologe, Horologe: A clock, a dial.
Horisons, p. 519, b. for Orisons: Prayers. Fr. Oraison, A prayer.
Horoscope (Horoscopum, p. 444, a.) is in Astrology sometimes put for a Figure of the Twelve Houses (as the Signs of the Zodiack are called) erected to tell Fortunes; and sometimes for the Degree of the Ascendant, or the Star ascending above the Horizon, at the time the Question is put, any thing enquired for, or a Native born: But most properly it signifies the first House, or Ascendant, and is that part of the Zodiack which is rising at the time of the Scheme.
Horow: Mean, base; Slanderous. Horow tongis; Scandalous tongues. CM. 52. Beafly, filthy, nasty. Mo. 3037.
Horriblete: Horribleness, a horrible thing. RR. 7285. AS. Dorig, Sordidus, squalidus, mucidus.
Horse: Hoarse. Dr. Ch. 347.
Hospitaliers, Hospitellers, RR. 6693. Hospitalarij, Knights Templars, or Knights of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.
Hofelrie, Hoferie, Hofrie: An Inn. Hofery, Prol. 23. should be Hofelry. Fr. Hofelerie.
Hofiliments, Hofiliments: Furniture, Utensils, Household goods, Suppellectilis, Boeth. p. 370, a.
Hofilere: An host, an Inn-keeper; An hostler.
Hofresse of vertue: The hostess of Vertue, One that always entertains Vertue within her breast. Cap. 461.
Hore, Horin: To promise. See Hete. Also, Be named, or called; Hot; To be heated.
Hove: Lifted up. p. 359, b. Also, To hover. Tr. L. 3. 1433. Hovid: Hovered about, loytered. Tr. L. 5. 33.
Houfe, MR. 803. Set his boufe; Be quit with him. MS. Ch. and H. 1. Set his boune, al. boun, a word often used in PP. for Gown: Perhaps it may be a Proverbial Expression, as sett their cap, Prol. 588. though not exactly of the same signification. See Shoufe.
Houge: Huge. Mo. 3049. Ber. 1178.
Hound is used for a Dog in general. Cerberus the hound of hell, p. 395, b. AS. Dunbe, A dog.
Houndfish: The Dog-fish. Sq. 1341.
Houfel: The Eucharist, or Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. AS. Durel.
Houfelin, Houfel: To be ben. boufled; To receive the Holy Communion.
Houfholding: House keeping. RR. 1132.
How: A cap, or hood. To make an bow above a call, Tr. L. 3. 775. seems to have been a Proverbial Expression signifying To entertain two Lovers at the same time, &c. To wear a Cap and a Cowl together.
Howgates. See Gate.
Howpede: Hooped, hollowed. Mo. 1515.
Howfo: Howsoever.
Hue. See Hewe.
Huisht: Hush, silent. Also, Hush! A Note of Silence.
Hul by hul, PT. 455. f. Cheek to cheek. Hallid and mol-lid him, Ber. 745. f. Kissed and fondled him.
Hulferé,

Hulfere, Bl. Kn. 129. Holly, which in some places is still called Hulver. Sk.
Hulfrid, RR. 6146. Hidden, retired; from the AS. Deolſtra, Spehuncce, antra, recessus, latibula.
Humbleſſe, Humbleſſe: Humility; Condeſcention.
Humbling: A humming noiſe. Fa. L. 2. 531.
Humile: Humble. Humilly: Humbly. LW. 156.
Hure: Hire.
Hurtelen, Hurtlin: To skirmiſh. Sk. To thruſt; run againſt, daſh againſt; To provoke; Inceſſere, Boeth. p. 366, a.
Huſſ, for Huſſi: Huſh! A Note of Silence. Boeth.
Hye: To haſten. Alſo, Haſt. In Tr. L. 4. 1199. inſtead of low or hie, MS. Sp. reads it, now in bye, i. e. Follow her ſpirit juſt now, without any heſitation or delay, and dye with her immediately.
Hygh blyve: Make the utmoſt haſt, or come preſently. Boeth. 276.
Hyghin: High. Fa. L. 3. 1062.
Hyd: Haſtened away. RR. 3855.
Hylde, p. 367, a. Funders; To pour. See Hildeth.
Hylled. See Hile.
Hylle: Highly. Fl. 185. It may not be improper to take notice in this place of a miſtake in printing this and the following Verſes, which ſhould be read thus;
I am to blynde ſo hylle to diſcerne
Of her godines to make deſcription.
Hynge: Hung.
Hynſt: Huſh! Peace! A Note of Silence. PT. 536.

I.

I And I are indifferently prefixed to Verbs in the Preter Tenſe, and ſometimes in other Tenſes. See I.
Jacke of Dovyrr, MR. 1239. Jack-a-dover, i. e. A Fowl, or Joint of Meat done over again; as it is explained, ib. 1240.
Jack Strawe, Mo. 1509. One of the Ringleaders of a Rebellion of the common People of Kent in the Reign of Richard the Second, in which the Flemmings or Dutch Strangers were great Sufferers.
Jacobins, RR. 6338. The Fryers of St. Dominick's Order are ſo called in France, becauſe their Monastery in Paris (formerly an Hoſpital) is dedicated to St. James, and is ſeated in the Street called Rue S. Jacques. Blo.
Jamboux, No. 3380. Boots, Armour for the Legs. Sp. From the Fr. Jambe, A leg.
Jane, No. 3244. Halſpence of Janna, or Galy Halſpence. Sp. A Coin of Genoa. Sk. It ſeems to have been of very little value. Fr. 2020.
Jangle, Janglin: To prate, to talk much; To make an empty noiſe. Jangle, Fr. 143. Prating, babbling. See Pars. p. 197, b. 203, a.
Jangler, Janglereſſe, fem. A great talker. Janglers: Praters, idle talkers. Sq. 1822. But perhaps it ſhould be read there, Janglereſſis. See Bronke.
Jangling. See p. 197, b. 1. 54.
Jape, Fr. 697. A jeſt. "A word (ſays Sp.) by abuſe grown odious, and therefore by a certain curious Gentlewoman ſcraped out in her Chancer, whereupon "her ſerving man writeth thus;
My Miſtreſſe cannot be content
To take a Jeſt as Chaucer ment;
But uſing ſtill a Woman's faſhion,
Allows it in the laſt Tranſlation:
She cannot with a Word diſpenſe,
Altho' I know ſhe loves the ſenſe;
For ſuch an uſe the World hath got,
That Words are Sins, but Deeds are not.
Jape, Japis: To jeſt, to joke, to make ſport; To deceive, to impoſe upon. Prol. 173. To make a jeſt of; to laugh at. Tr. L. 1. 509.
Japer: A common jeſter, a buffoon; A cheat.
Japerie: It is deſcribed in Pars. p. 203, a.

Japes, Japis: Jeſts, fooleries.
Jape-worſhy: Ridiculous. p. 398, a.
Jbarrid: Fortified with barrs. RR. 485.
Jbathid: Bathed.
Jbe: Be, are; Been.
Jbete: Beaten. Tr. L. 2. 940. Jbette, Di. 197. Set forth. Sk. Stamped. Sp. See Bete.
Jblowe in brede, Tr. L. 1. 5310. Blown, or noiſed a-broad.
Jbore: Born.
Jch, Jche: I, my ſelf. CL. 204.
Jeled: Cloathed, clad. RR. 472.
Jclapid: Called, named. Tr. L. 4. 504.
Jcoignid: Coined. No. 2286.
Jtolerid al with cautelis, Ber. 925. All coloured with cautions, i. e. Making ſpecious pretences.
Jcomen: Come. Tr. L. 3. 1674. But it is rather to be read there, as in MS. Sp. Thai comyn.
Jcond, for Jkend: Known. Dr. Ch. 666.
Jcoruin: Cut.
Jconghi: Caught. Tr. L. 1. 535, 558. Jcoughi, Ca.
Jdampnid: Damned; Condemned. Mo. 3173.
Jdartid: Shot with an arrow, or dart. Tr. L. 4. 240.
Jdel, Jdle: Vain. In idle, or idel, Fr. 2413. p. 201, b. In idilneß, RR. 3323. In vain. AS. On y6el.
Jdo, Jdoe, Tr. L. 2. 789. Jdoen, RR. 1063. To do, to cauſe; Done. Alſo, Undone, ſpoiled.
Jdolafter: An Idolater. Sq. 1816.
Jdrawe: Drawn, extracted. No. 1461.
Jdre: The Serpent Hydra. Boeth.
Jemme: A Gem, a Jewel. No. 1737; 3118.
Jopardie, Tr. L. 5. 1547. MS. Sp. and the old Editions read it Parodye, V.
Jopardin: To put in jeopardy, to hazard. Tr. L. 4. 1566.
Jopardiſe: Jeopardy, danger. Ch. Dr. 666. Jopardouſlie: With jeopardy or danger. RL. 263.
Jeromie: St. Jerome. No. 2151.
Jetis: Jeſts. Alſo, Hiſtories. Tr. L. 5. 1510. Famous actions. Fa. L. 3. 428. See Geſte.
Jenſe: Juice. p. 515, b.
Jewerie: A place where Jews were permitted to inhabit, as the Old Jury in London.
Jeniſe, Prol. 1741. A reward by revenge. Alſo a Gibbet. Sp. From the AS. Gepite, Pena, multa, ſupplacium. Sk. But the Author of the Engl. Expoſitor rather takes it to be the ſame that often occurs in Bruton by the name of Jeniſe, where it ſignifies Judgment, Examination, or Tryal by, or before one having Jurisdiction, and to be corrupted of the Lat. Judicium.
Jfare. See Fare.
Jfellowſhipped: Joined in company or fellowſhip; Accompanied. Boeth.
Jfere, or In fere: In company, together. See Fere.
Jfete: Effect. RR. 4476.
Jflitte: Paſſing, ſcattering. Boeth. See Flit.
Jgloſed: Flattered. See Gloſe.
Jgrave: Dug. LW. 204.
Jgurde, Mo. 3266. To fly round, or in a circle. qu. gy-rando volare.
Jheried: Praiſed; Honoured. See Hry.
Jholpe: Helped, aſſiſted. RR. 5505.
Jkende: Known. Mo. 2470.
Jknert: Knitt, bound. Tr. L. 3. 1740.
Jknowe: Known.
Jlad (ſo it ſhould be read, Prol. 532.) Led, carried; Lay'd. But Com. explains it; He had loaden many a load of dung. See Fother.
Jlaſt: Left.
Jliche, PT. 11. The ſame.
Jlicke, Jlike: Like; Alike.
Jlion: Troy. Lat. Ilium. Mo. 1471. When it is joyned with Troye, as in Dr. Ch. 1248. it ſignifies the City, and Troye, the Country of Troy. Hofman.
Jlike, as Jliche.
Jlogid: Lodged.
Jlorn: Left. Tr. L. 4. 1250. See Lorn.
Jmaginatif: Suſpicious, jealous. Fr. 2640. Thoughtfull. Alſo, Imagination, opinion. Lidg. Life of St. Edmund. Proper, or belonging to the Imagination. p. 400, a.
Jmaſkid: Masked, wrapt up, covered. Tr. L. 3. 1740.
Jminte,

- Imeinte, Imente* (so it should be read, Bl. Kn. 458.) Mingled, mixt.
- Imeni*: Meant. Fa. L. 3. 652.
- Imoved*: Moved. Boeth.
- Imperciable*: Impenetrable. Test.
- Imperie*: Rule, government. Boeth.
- Impes*: Shoots, young twigs, or branches. Mo. 68.
- Impetren*: To obtain; To intreat.
- Impid*: Grafted, set.
- Importable*: Impossible; Intolerable. Mo. 627. Fr. 2165. RR. 6902.
- Importune*: Troublesome. RR. 5632. Importunate. Fr. Importun.
- Impossible*: An impossibility. Tr. L. 3. 525.
- In for On*; Tr. L. 3. 968. So H. 2. Ca. and Py. read it.
- Incombrous*: Cumbersome, troublesome. Fa. L. 2. 354.
- Incubus*, WB. 880. A Spirit supposed to have carnal knowledge of Women; The Night-mare.
- Inde*: India; Indian. Inde and Perf. RR. 67. Indian and Persian. Inde, Ynde is used by Lidg. for Azure, or blew; as, His standard of colour ynde, i. e. Azure. Life of St. Edmund. As a sceptre—The hier part of gold and stonis ynde. Ib. So the Saphire Inde. Fall of Princes, L. 1. Ch. 20.
- Indigne*: Unfit, unworthy. Fr. 1389.
- Indulgence*: Forgiveness.
- Inecbed*: Put in.
- Inferes*, p. 492, a. 1. 35. Perhaps it should be read Inseers. See Inseer.
- Inflate*: Blown; Puffed up; swelled. CCr. 48.
- Infortune*: Misfortune, mischance. Infortunid: Unfortunate. Tr. L. 4. 744.
- Inbauncing*: Advancing.
- Inhilde*, Tr. L. 3. 44. To infuse, to inspire. Sk.
- Iniquitaunce*: Unequality. Sq. 1304.
- Injure*, Fr. An injury. Tr. L. 3. 1020.
- Inly*: Inwardly. Fr. 84. Thorowly. RR. 397. Perfectly.
- Inne*: In. Mo. 115. A house, a habitation; A Colledge; A lodging. No. 2950. Mo. 2917.
- Innereft, Inrest*: Inmost, innermost. Boeth.
- Innocence*: Ignorance. So Ca. reads it in Tr. L. 2. 1048.
- Innocent*: Ignorant. Ib. 1723.
- Innominate*: Not fit to be named. p. 489, b.
- Inobedience*: Disobedience.
- Inome*, Tr. L. 1. 242. Inomen, Mo. 2971. Taken. See Nome, &c.
- Inough*: Enough. To do inough: To satisfy. p. 207, a.
- Input*: Put upon, imposed. p. 493, a.
- Inrest*, p. 478, a. See Innereft.
- Inseer*: One that has a good insight into matters. Test. L. 3.
- Infelid*: Sealed up. Ch. Dr. 1014.
- Inset*: Set in; Natural; Instus, Boeth. p. 367, b.
- Insolibill*: Unanswerable. Ber. 1888.
- Intelligence*: The Understanding. Boeth.
- Intennate Fenipre*, Bal. 310. Sweet-smelling Juniper; In suaves halius intennata. Sk.
- Intere*: Intire, sincere. Bal. 220.
- Intermete*: To intermeddle, to interpose. WB. 834.
- Interminable*: Unbounded, infinite. Boeth.
- Intier*, Magd. 568. as Intere.
- Intill*: Into. CCr. 83.
- Intresse*. See Entresse. With her intresse, CL. 811. By her own labour; unless it should be read herin tresse, or here in tresse, i. e. hair dress'd up in tresses.
- Foronde*, No. 607. Pleasant. Lat. Jucundus.
- Jogelours*: Juglers. RR. 764.
- Joigne*, RR. 2355. To enjoyn. Joignid: Joined. Ma. 519.
- Jolly*, Tr. L. 3. 1612. In all the MSS. and Old Editions which I have seen, it is Jnly faire. See Jnly.
- Joleining*: Jolly, joyfull. p. 480, b. Perhaps it signifies joining; so that the sense may be this: Though we are at a distance, yet the joining of our wordes, i. e. your being acquainted with my complaints, would administer some relief: Or if we read it solein, the sense may be this; Methinks that by such Melancholy expressions as these my uneasiness begins to abate.
- Jombre*: To joyn, to jumble. Sp. Tr. L. 2. 1037.
- Jonglerie*, Tr. L. 5. 755. (or as MS. Sp. Jangelrie) as Jangling, V.
- Jordanis*, No. 1819. Double Urinals. Sk.
- Jossa*, MR. 993. Turn. Sp. An Interjection, commonly used in catching a Horse.
- Jouis*: Jupiter. Tr. L. 3. 15.
- Journe*: A Day's work. RR. 579. Fr. Journée.
- Joufies*: Juffs and Turnaments. Ch. Dr. 1987.
- Jowels*: Jewells. RR. 5420.
- Jowes*: The Jaws. Boeth.
- Joyeux*, Fr. Pleasant, joyfull.
- Joynaunt*: Joyning.
- Iperlid*: Set with Pearls. Mo. 2098.
- Iplight*: Pawned, pledged; Plighted. Tr. L. 3. 783. But Ca. hath it better, Ye plight; You plighted.
- Iplied*: Plaited, folded. Boeth.
- Iprocas*, Sq. 1323. Hippocras, a Wine made with Spices; so called, because it is strained through a woollen Cloth, called Hippocrates's Sleeve.
- Iraft, Irest*: Bereaved, taken away. Hyp. 205.
- Irakid*: Racked up. Mo. 257.
- Ire*: Wrath, anger. Fr. 857.
- Irest*. See Iraft.
- Iren*: Iron. WB. 906.
- Ironne*: Run, or did run.
- Irons*: Passionate, angry. Fr. 750, 752, 753, 779, &c. Irons corage; An angry, hasty temper. Bal. 521.
- Irrecuperable*: Irrecoverable. Test. L. 2.
- Isande*. See Belle isande.
- Ise*: Ice. Cr. 168. Also, See. Tr. L. 2. 354, 1253. But Ca. and al. read the latter Verse thus;
And sayd nece, lo who comyth here now ride, i. e. riding.
- Iset*, Tr. L. 3. 1494. Set. Ca. hath it, Sbet.
- Ishape, Ishaped, Ishapen*: Shaped, formed; Ordained; Prepared. See Shape.
- Ishene*: Bright, shining.
- Ishoned*, perhaps for Ishoned, or Ishoned: Shewed. Test. p. 503, a. 1. 60.
- Ishore*: Shorn, shaved. Tr. L. 4. 996.
- Ishove*, for Ishowe, or Ishown: Set forth, shewed. Tb. 25.
- Isope*, PT. 292. Hyssop. Also, Æsop.
- Istept in age*, Mo. 934. Advanced or stricken in years; or, as Spenser hath it, Shot in years.
- Istocked*: Put in the Stocks, confined. p. 480, a.
- Istond*: Stand; Stood. Tr. L. 5. 1611.
- Iswonke*: Laboured. See Swink.
- Itaile*: Italy.
- Ibende*, AF. 47. Well ibende; Having good qualities. See Tbwe.
- Ithrowe*: Thrown. Tr. L. 4. 482.
- Itinerarie*: A Guide to Travellers. Bal. Lad. 64.
- Iressid*: Having her hair dressed in locks, or tresses. Tr. L. 5. 810.
- Jubb*: A jug, or bottle. No. 2578.
- Judge*, p. 209, a. 1. 3, 4. should be juge, as in MS. Ch. H. 1. and al. From Jugum, a Yoke.
- Judicium*: The Book of Judges. Mo. 158. A common way of naming any Book, or the Author of it, as Æneados, Metamorphoseos, for the Æneis of Virgil, and the Metamorphosis of Ovid.
- Juge*: A Judge.
- Julian*, Prol. 341. "Mandivil's MS. (says Mr. Urry) has this Note upon the place: Simon Leprosus who her-
"browd our Lord, and was baptized of him, was then
"cleped Julian the good Herberow, and was made Bi"shop of Bethphage; In the same place M. Magdelyn
"had her sins forgiven her, and there she wissh [i. e.
"washed] his feet with the tressis of her eyen, and dry-
"ed them with the tressis of her heed, i. e. head.
- July*: Jolly, gay. Ber. 1707.
- Jult, Justen*. See Turney.
- Justice*: A Judge; An Officer of Justice. No. 508.
- Justinian eke that made lawes*, &c. RR. 6615, &c. In the Eleventh Book of the Code, De Mendicantibus validis, It is enacted, That if any shall beg, having no cause either by need or maim, the same shall be examined and searched; and whoso shall find him to counterfeit, and proveth the same, Dominium ejus consequetur; and and faith Barol. he shall be punished Ad arbitrium Judicis. Sp.

Justis, aray, Prol. 1934. Justs, and Preparation for them, or (as MS. Ch.) Lust and aray; Gallantry, and Dress; a proper Ornament for the Temple of Peace.
Juvenute: Youth. Sc. 11. Lat. Juventus, Juventutis.
Jwimplid: Muffled up, covered with a Wimple; Veiled. Th. 92.
Jwis: Verily, certainly, indeed, truly: But very often it is a meer Expletive. See elvis.
Jwon, Jwonne: Won, gained. To lond jwonne; Gained the land; got to shore. Phyl. 34.
Jwrie: Hid, covered. Tr. L. 3. 1457. But there it should be read Jwryen, (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to eyen and spien in the following Verses. See Wrie.
Jwrikin: Wrapt about. RR. 169.
Jwroke: Revenged. Tr. L. 5. 589. See Wreke.
Jyen, Jyme: Eyes. Boeth.
Jyeve: Given. Tr. L. 3. 1617.

K

Kalendar: A Directory. LW. 542.
Kalendes: Properly the First day of a Month; but is thence taken to signify the Beginning of any thing. He thought it like the Kalendes of eschaunge, Tr. L. 5. 1633. He looked upon it as the beginning of a change.
Kalendes of hope, Tr. L. 2. 7. The first prospect of hope.
Kasfe: Carved. Prol. 100.
Karoll, &c. See Carroll, &c.
Kars. See Kers.
Kele: To cool. CL. 775. PT. 470.
Kembre: To adorn. Mo. 2246.
Kembis, Cr. 222. Kempid, Prol. 2136. Combed; Adorned. Kempe: Dressed up; Compisse, p. 364, b.
Ken: To learn, to know; To teach, to make known.
Kende: Known. CCR. 169. Taught, made known.
Kene: Keen, sharp.
Kenebowe, Ber. 1105. In kenebowe; A kembo.
Kenelm, Mo. 1225. Kenelm, King of Mercia, was at the age of seven years slain by the procurement of his ambitious Sister Quendrida: The place of his Burial was (as it is pretended) miraculously discovered; and he afterwards obtained the Title of a Saint, and Martyr. See the Legenda Aurea.
Kepe: Care, heed.
Kepe, Kepin: To keep, to take care, or heed.
Kerchef, WB. 1018. A woman's Head-dress. See Coverchiefs.
Kernils: Battlements. RR. 4195. from the old Fr. Kannel. (Lat. Barb. Quernellus) now Genzan, a Battlement, or rather the Opening in the Battlements. See Men. Fr. in Quernellus.
Kers, Karse: Water-crests. Set not a kers; Valued not a straw. MR. 648. Vailish not a karse, Ber. 239. Is not worth a rush. See p. 485, b: 499, a.
Kerve: To carve, to cut; To tear. Kersish: Cutteth, &c. Ph. 107. Kerfi: Carved, &c.
Kesse: To kiss. RR. 2610. Fr. 2078.
Kest, Kestin: Cast. Gam. 486. No. 1782. Killed. Sq. 370.
Keiche: To catch, lay hold of. Tr. L. 3. 1381.
Kevere: To recover. Tr. L. 1. 918. Keverynge: Covering. Ber. 1989.
Keynard, WB. 235. A Micher, a Hedge-creeper. Sp. The Fr. Cagnard (from whence this seems to be taken) signifies a Sordid, beggarly, slothfull, idle fellow. See Men. Fr. in Cagnard.
Kichell, Fr. 483. A little cake; from the AS. Licel, A morsel. It was called a Goddis kichell; because God-fathers and Godmothers used commonly to give one of them to their Godchildren, when they asked blessing. Sp.
Kid, Kidde: Made known, discovered. RR. 2172. Perceived; Shewed. Tr. L. 1. 208. RR. 3132.

Kime, Mo. 2635. The jely kime; The silly fellow, perhaps from the AS. Emma. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 105, 106.
Kimeling, or Kemeling, MR. 449. A brewing vessel. St. Kimmel, or Kemlin, is used in the North for a Powdering-tub. Ray's Coll.
Kin: Kindred, AS. Eyn. By my father kin, Mo. 43. Sq. 1031. No. 850. An Oath or Protestation; By my Father's Kindred, or Offspring. See Mo. 1083.
Kinde, Kynde: Nature. Lawe of kinde, Tr. L. 1. 238. The Law of Nature. Kindly, Kyndely: Natural. Every kindly thing; Every thing in its own nature. Aforne his kinde, RR. 3128. Before its natural time of maturity.
Kinde, for Kende, Mo. 2422. Taught.
Kinrede: Kindred. Instead of after kinrede, p. 153, b. l. 29. read a fer [MS. Ch. a fer] kinrede, i. e. remote kindred, in opposition to nie sibbe, i. e. near relations. Ib. l. 30.
Kinrest: Quiet rest; kindly rest. St.
Kirkid, RR. 3137. Turned upwards. Sp. See St.
Kirtle: A Kirtle, a woman's gown. MR. 213. AS. Eynzel.
Kist: Gatt. Ber. 1549.
Kiibe: To shew, to make known, to discover. La. 637. Fa. L. 2. 20. To give occasion. Ne kiibe her jelousie, Fr. 2294. Nor create, or give her occasion of jealousy.
Kiibid gentilnesse, No. 1075. Shewed civility. To own, acknowledge. An. 231. Allo, A shew, an appearance. The the kiibe be fair to eye, Fr. 2189. Though it appear fair to the eye. MS. Ch. hath kynde there instead of kiibe; but that reading does not make so good and clear a sense as the other.
Kiibid, as Kid, V. Kiibid: Discovereth. LW. 504.
Kitt a loff: Cut a loaf. PT. 393.
Knap: A nap, or sleep. RR. 4005.
Knarrie: Full of hard knobs; stubby. Prol. 1979. See Gnarre.
Knave: A boy, a servant. WB. 1190. Knave child; A male child. La. 723. 735. Fr. 1464. 1466. A boie knave; A young fellow, or lad. RR. 3849. AS. Enapa, Puer. CB. Cnap, Dim. Cneppyn. A boy.
Knawe, Mo. 2580. To takin hem whom list not knawe; To take, or apprehend them whom they list not to approve or like of, and they condemn their doctrine for heresie. Com.
Knaweth: Gnoweth, biteth. p. 413. 10.
Knedde: Knit. RR. 4811.
Kneen, Kneen, Ch. Dr. 294. Kneis, Tr. L. 3. 1598.
Kneys, Gam. 1397. Knees.
Knet: To knit; Knit, bound. RR. 2092. Neatness. St. But it may very well be taken there for Knit, and then the Verses will run thus,
Thine herre to me now will I shet,
For all thy joyfull loke, and knet
Ibinde undir this little keie, &c.
That is, For all thy joyfull look, I will now shut up, and fast bind to my self thine heart under this little key.
Knight: A soldier, a warrior. Judas Maccabaeus is called God's knight, p. 157, a.
Knit: Joynd; Agreed. Fr. 2786.
Knoppit, RR. 7212. Tyed, laced. Sp.
Knoppis: Rose buds. RR. 1675, 1683. From the AS. Enapa, A button: So the French call a Bud, Bouton.
Knor for Knar: A hard knob. Ber. 1780.
Knoue: A knee, or kneek. Tr. L. 2. 1202.
Knouhit: Knew. Ber. 93.
Knowlech: Knowledge. FT. 256. To acknowledge. Ber. 3099.
Knowledging: Knowing; Knowledge.
Kon, Konne, Konnin: Can; Can do; Understand.
Konning: Cunning; knowledge, understanding. Fa. L. 3. 966.
Koude, Koube, as Conde, or Conte, V. When that he godes koude, Gam. 96. When he knows, or is able to manage an Estate. Spenser has Could his good, for Distributed his bounty. Fairy Q. L. 1. In such Expressions as these the Principal Verb is understood.
Kut: To cut. Ber. 2589.

Kykin, MR. 733. To look. Kykid: Looked. MR. 337. But MS. Ch. reads it loked.
Kyn: Kind, manner. Kyn affray, La. 1138. Some kind of fear. See Kin.
Kynde, Kyndely. See Kinde.
Kynrest, p. 415, a. See Kinrest.
Kyrbiib, CM. 1451. See Kiibe.

L

L Laas, Laca, Lache, Lees, Lese: A trap, a snare. ProL. 1819. RR. 2790, 5093. Fr. Laqs, from the Lat. Laqueus, A knot, a bond; A lace.
Laboure: Endeavour. No. 2971.
Labourous: Laborious; Industrious. Sc. 69.
Lace: To ensnare, confine. See Laas. Laced: Bound up. Test. Taken in a snare, entrapped. RR. 3198.
Lacert, ProL. 2755. A Sinew. Sp. Lacertus signifies the Brawn or Sinew of the Arm.
Lach, Lache, Fr. Lazy, slothfull. To lack, or want. Test. L. 2. Also, To take, catch, snatch; To lay bold of. AS. Laccan, Comprehendere, rapere. Hick. Somn.
Lachesse, Fr. Laziness; Dilatoriness, or Procrastination proceeding from laziness, or sloth. See Gone, L. 4.
Lache, Lackin: To disgrace, to blame, to detract from, to disparage or lessen ones character. RR. 284.
Lad: Led, did lead. Ch: hath lad, Tr. L. 3. 59. for ledde. Had lad of dong many a fother, ProL. 532. That is (as the Com. explains it) He had loaden many a load of dung. MS. Ch. reads it, That had lad dong on feld many a fother, i. e. That had laid many a fother of dung on his field. Lad her only by bred, RR. 216. Sk: thinks it means, She [Avarice] lived only by bread: But Mr. Urry by adding life makes the Verse compleat, and the sense easy; That lad her life only by bred.
Lady often signifies Mistress, Fr. 2584.
Laste, Lastin, No. 904. LW. 168. Left.
Late, Lage: Law; A profession. Tr. L. 1. 341, 1002. La. 377.
Laine: To lay. RR. 184.
Lainers: To lay. 2506. Thongs, straps of leather. Fr. Lainiere, A strap.
Laisir. See Leisir.
Laise, RL. 186. Sk: thinks it comes from Laisure, or Alli-cere, To spice: But perhaps it may be a contraction of Laywaite.
Lak: Disgrace, dispraise, blame, a fault, a dishonourable action. Sq. 1716.
Lake: Fine Cloth and Lawn. Sk. No. 3363. Bal. Lad. 70. Also a purple colour used by Painters.
L'amant, L'umant: The Lover. RR. 4615. &c. Fr. L'amant.
Lambin: Lambs. RR. 7063.
Lang & Long. Cr. 379.
Langour: To languish; Languishing, faintness. Languoring, Langorous: Languishing, pining. Languurith: Languisheth. Sq. 1383.
Lanys: Lanes. The law goth by no lanys: The Course of the Law is plain and direct, not through By-ways, or Lanes. Ber. 2623.
Lapidaire: A Lapidary, a Jeweller; a Stone-cutter: But in Fa. L. 3. 262. it signifies a Catalogue of Precious Stones, or a Treatise on that subject, under the Title of The Lapidaire.
Lappe: A skirt, or lappet of a garment. No. 12. Tr. L. 3. 59, 743.
Larder, seems to signify a Slaughter-house, Test. p. 506, b. l. 13.
Large: Liberal, bountiful; Prodigious, extravagant, expensive. No. 2937. Also Liberty, freedom. Alto large, ProL. 1285. or Atte thy large, as MS. Ch. At thy liberty. See Ab, 1294. Fl. 15. Large of tonge, Tr. L. 5. 804. A free, easy, copious speaker; Cui larga fandi copia.
Largesse: A large quantity. Magd. 137.
Largesse: Generosity, liberality, bounty: Also, a Fee given to Chirurgeons and Physicians, &c. p. 152, a.
Larson: Robbery, theft. Mo. 2263. Fr. Larcin.
Las, Lasse: Less. More and las, RR. 3045. Greater and lesser.
Lash, PT. 34. Teris that she out lash, f. Let fall, or shed. See p. 48, a. l. 12.
Latche, RR. 1624. See Laas.
Later. See Lattir.
Latered: Lystered, delayed: Belated. p. 204, b.
Lath, MR. 980. A barn: It is still used in Lincolnshire. Sk.
Laton, Latoun: Copper. Sp. Latten: A mixt kind of metal. ProL. 701. No. 1864. f. A box, or case made of Latten.
Latie: Led; Instructed, brought up. Unrightly late; Led out of the right way. Mo. 2397.
Lattir: Later. Ner the lattir, Ber. 2384. Neuer the later, p. 492, a. Nevertheless.
Laude: Praise. Laudes, Laudis: Praises. Also, Morning Prayers, or Service. MR. 547.
Laven: To lave, to drain. Boeth.
Lavendir: A landress. LW. 358.
Laverock, RR. 662. A sort of Bird; a Lark. Sk.
Laughande: Laughing, smiling. Test.
Launcelot du Lake, Mo. 1327. One of the Knights of King Arthur's Round Table.
Laund: A Plain between Woods. ProL. 1693. A Lawn.
Laureate: Crowned with Laurel. Mo. 7214.
Lawer, ProL. 2177. Lawere, RR. 1313. Lawriole, Bal. Lad. 73. Lawytre, FL. 109. A Laurel-tree.
Lawe: Low. RR. 5046.
Lawghid: Laughed. Ber. 2426.
Laxative: Loosens; A Purging Medicine. ProL. 2758. Mo. 1058.
Lay: Lave. See Lain.
Laysour: Leisure. Ch. Dr. 2025.
Lazarous, CCr. 115. Lazere, ProL. 242. A Leper. Leprous persons were called Lazars, because their House, or Church, at Jerusalem was dedicated to St. Lazarus.
Léande, Lende, Lemde, Lemid: Ignorant, rude, unlearned. The AS. Læpde-man, signifies a Layman; the Laity being generally unlearned in comparison of the Clergy.
Leames: Loyalty; Truth. Fr. Loyamé.
Lech: To heal, to cure. Ch. Dr. 852.
Lech, Leche: A Physician, a Chirurgeon. Fr. 628. Leche-craft, Lechis craft: The profession, or skill of a Physician, or Chirurgeon. ProL. 2747.
Lecherous: Tending to lechery. No. 2065.
Lechours: Lecherous persons, whoremongers.
Leetorne, CL. 1383. A Reading-desk. Lat. Lectrinum; from whence the Fr. Laurin.
Lecturaries: Eleutheraries. ProL. 428.
Ledders: Scales; Divisions on a Scale. p. 441, a.
Leddin, Leden: Language, Dialect, Speech; from the AS. Læben, leben, Latin. See Gl. V. in Leide.
Lede, Ledd: Lead; Led away. Also, People; Servants, Tenants, Vassals. Gam. 121, 142. AS. Leobe. Gens. populus.
Ledge: To alledge. CL. 1065. Ledged: Alledged, Test. p. 489, a.
Leem, Leme: A flame, light, a blaze. Ber. 1618. AS. Leoma, Light.
Les, Lese, as Laas. In o. les, p. 197, b. f. In one string. Lies. Withouthin les, RR. 3900. Truly, without lying. Also, Lois.
Lese: To leave, forsake. No. 298. Dear, loving, pleasing, grateful. Al be hym lothe or lese, ProL. 1839. Whether he likes it or not. It is me lese, Tr. L. 5, 1737. It is a pleasure to me, I am glad of it. I n'am not lese to gabbe; I do not love to prate. MR. 402. Also, Love, affection. For lese me loth, No. 264. Hyp. 264. Neither for love nor hatred. Also, a Mistress. RR. 847. Lefist: Dearest. Sq. 1004. In RR. 103. read love is instead of lese is.
Lefely, Lefull: Lawfull.
Liff: A leaf. Ber. 2849. See Lese, Leve.
Laged: Lodged. Test. p. 493, a. Resident. Sk.
Legen: To lay; To alledge. p. 487, b.
Legge: To alledge, to lay. MR. 829.
Leggin: To lessen, to abate, to ease. RR. 5016. See Alledge.
Leggyng: A lodging. To void pye his own leggyng, Ch.

Ch. Dr. 814. To turn pay out of his habitation, or lodging.
Legistes: Lawyers. Test.
Leis: To lay. Tr. L. 3. 72. Leide: Lay down. Id. L. 2. 1548.
Leisar, Leisr, Lezar: Leisure.
Leite, Thunder leite: Lightning. The wate of thunder leite; Andentis via fulminis, p. 361, b.
Lake: A leak. Woll not fer by him a lake, RR. 5374. Preise not at a lake, Id. 4830. Will not value him of a leak, Cara not a draw for him. See Kers.
Lele: True, faithfull, honest; from the Fr. Loyal, Faithfull. Lele labour: Lawfull occupation, honest business. Mo. 2695.
Levan, Levman: It signifies indifferently either a Gallant or a Mistress. MR. 1132. Mo. 2823. Hick, Gr. AS. p. 146.
Leme. See Leem.
Leap: Leap. Prof. 289. Leve, Lenie, (AS. Leannap) To lend. No. 1047, 1058. To lean, bow, submit, p. 154, b. To grant; Ar. 198, 201, unless it should be read trae, i. e. let, or suffer. Instead of lene, Tr. L. 4. 325. MS. Sp. reads leve.
Lenge: Long. Lenger, Langir: Longer.
Lepte: Lenity, mildness. Ber. 2634.
Levey, Fr. A Message: Sending. Also the Conclusion of a Sonnet, or Ballad, serving oftentimes as a Dedication, Recapitulation, or Application of the whole. Mr. Prior's Address to the Earl (now Duke) of Dorset, at the end of his Conversations, is of this kind. See p. 100, 429, &c.
Leonine courage: The Spirit, or Courage of a Lion, Mo. 671.
Leos, No. 113, 116. People. Gr. AS.
Lepande: Leaping, jumping. RR. 1928.
Lepe, No. 2079, 2086. A Town in Spain.
Leperloge: A Lodge, or Hospital, for Lepers. CCr. 27.
Leprous: Leprous. Magd. 175.
Ler, Ber. 1219. Leer, void, empty; as we say a Leer horse, for a Spare horse. AS. Lelep.
Lere: To learn, to know; To teach. Lered, Letrid: Learned; Taught.
Leri: The skin. No. 3352. Gr. 155. Complexion, colour. Sp. But Sk. thinks it rather signifies the Symmetry of the lineaments of the face, from the Fr. L'air du visage, The Air of the Face: But when it signifies Face, it rather comes from the Cimbr. Myle, a Cheek, or the AS. Meape; A cheek, jaw, the chin; The countenance, the face; whence we say, to Leer, to Lowr: And in Ber. 2467. Leris seems to signify Cheeks. See Gibson's Notes on Polemon-Media, in Lyte.
Les: Eels. Ber. 1115. But in No. 46. it should be lees, (as in H. 1. and Id.) to rhyme to pres, Id. 44. Withoutin les; Without ceasing; Id. Out of reles, MS. Ch. Without delay. See Leas.
Lese: To loose; Loft. Di. 22. To lie; A lie; Lying; Falshood; treachery; False. RR. 8. Withoutin lese, RR. 5728. Doubtless. See Lees. Lustie lese, Tr. L. 2. 752. is the same with Louis lace, RR. 5093. See Leas.
Lesynge: Lying; A mistake. Lefingour: A lyer, a flatterer. See Lofengeour.
Lefir, Lefire: Leisure.
Lesse: Left. p. 413. Verse 17. Lesser, smaller. More and lesse; Greater and smaller.
Lessid: Eased, relieved. Pro. 2438. Fr. 2726. See Lisse.
Left, Lefter: To lift, to like, to please, or to be pleased; Pleased. Pro. 789. Will, pleasure, desire, fancy. Tr. L. 2. 787. Fr. L. 1. 287. See Left. Also, Left. Tr. L. 2. 1330.
Left, p. 484, b. Lefted: Lasted.
Let, Letr, Lette, Lettin: To hinder, to stop; To omit, neglect; To delay, put off. Mo. 1199. Let be, Fr. 25.
Letin be, WB. 242. Let alone. Hindered. Tr. L. 3. 718. Delayed. Fr. 1419. Also, Delay, hindrance. Tr. L. 3. 700. Leadeth. RR. 6111. To cause; Caused. Luc. 185, 187.
Let: To leave. Pro. 1325. Till he his life gan let, No. 417. Till he dyed. To leave off, give over, forsake. La. 932. To dismiss, put away. Fr. 1765. Also Letbe, the River of Oblivion. Fr. L. 1. 71.
Leigame: A hinderer of pleasure, or diversion. Every pie and every leigame, Tr. L. 3. 528. Every chattering Tale, and hinderer of mirth. See p. 483, a. l. 68, &c.

Leithy: Soft. Test. See Liub.
Letrows: Hindereis. Test. See Lev, &c.
Letrow: Lithuania. Pro. 54.
Lettrature, Lettrure, Mo. 410. RR. 8751. Literature, Learning.
Lettrid: Learned. RR. 7691.
Letmaris: An Electuary. No. 1821.
Leud: Unlearned; Ignorant; Foolish. Fr. 3018. See Leande. Leudily, Leudlye: Unlearnedly; Ignorantly.
Leudinesse: Ignorance; Folly.
Leve: Dear; Loving; Love; desire, inclination. MS. 59.
Love, Levin: To believe. Sq. 1722. Tr. L. 1. 689. may be thus read from MS. Sp.
Mistrowin al, or elis al to leve;
 To distrust all, or believe all. Levin on m mortal, Mo. 2390. Believe no mortal. To Live; To Love. He loves more than he may do, RR. 3519. He loves more than he ought. To grant, permit. God leve him werken; God grant he may work. Tr. L. 3. 566. See Leve. Levid, RR. 4535. Believed.
Leuylisse: Without leave. Ch. Dr. 74.
Levisell, Levisell, MR. 953. Leffel (umbraculum) A bush, or hovel. Sp. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr. Lais, Vepres, virgula, the Termination all being added. But Lais signifies also a Stander-tree; of which Leffel or Levisell may be a Diminutive, signifying a young Stander. In Pars. p. 198, a. it plainly signifies a Bush.
Levir, Levre: Dearer; Rather.
Levde. See Leande.
Lay: To lay. See Lie.
Leyden, as Leden.
Leyis, Pro. 58. Sp. takes it to be Levisia on the Continent, not far from Rhodes: But Sk. supposes it may be Libysa, a City of Bithynia.
Leyser. See Lefire.
Liard, Fr. 299. Nimble. Sp. Perhaps the same with Liart: Gentle; Pliant; Smooth. Sk. In Dougl. Virg. it signifies Grey-haired, white. Albas crines, En. VI. Liart hars. Incarnag; mema, Id. VII. Liart berde. Carnities inculta, Id. VI. Liart felerit tails, i. e. Locks entangled for want of combing; an Expression like that in Cr. 162, 163. His liart lockis late felerid unfaire; His white locks lay filthily entangled, felted, or twilted together.
Libart: A leopard. Pro. 2188. Libartes: Leopards. Mo. 375.
Libel repudy, Cr. 74. Libel of departition, p. 508, b. A Bill of Divorce; Libellus repudij.
Licande: Agreeable; Well-liking. Sq. 1294. MS. Ch. reads the place thus;
 — Venus hant him with her brande;
 As that she baar dawnsyng in her hande.
Licentiate, Pro. 220. One that hath a Licence in any Faculty. RR. 7693, 7694. Or one that is licensed to admit others to any Degree, or Order.
Lich: Like. Liche even, Fr. L. 1. 10. All alike. See Like.
Liche-wake, Pro. 2960. A Custom anciently used, and still practised in some places, of Watching the Dead every night till they are buried; from the AS. Lice, A Body, or Corpse: It is called Vigile, Tr. L. 5. 305. Vygyles, Ca. and Wake-places by Lidg. in the story of Thebes, Part. III. from the Games and Exercises therein used, as Wrestling, &c. there described.
Liches, for Leches, p. 483, b. See Leche.
Licorous, WB. 466. Likorous, Lycorous: Dainty, gluttonous; Lecherous; Luxurious; Curious; Vile; wicked. Lycorous shew, p. 376, b. Scurra nequissimus. AS. Liccepa, Gulosus, belluo; Affeniator. Licorousnesse: Lechery, wantonness; Luxury. Pars. Licorously: Deliciously, &c.
Licour: Liqueur, moisture. Pro. 3.
Lide, Mo. 752. Lydia in Asia Minor.
Lie, Gaw. 320. Thy lande that lyth lie; or as, MS. Ch. that lygh lie; Thy land that lieth uncultivated. Untilled grounds are called Lays in Scotland; and we say

- to let Lands Ley, i. e. lye fallow, a year or two; and Lay-land is land that lieth untilled. See Somn, in Ley, and Gl. V. in Leyt.
- Liege, Liegeman*: A subject, one that owes allegiance to his Liege, or lawfull Lord. RR. 4647. Liege: Subjects. Fr. 1097.
- Lies*: Lees. Fa. L. 3. 1040.
- Liebh*, RR. 4143. Layeth.
- Lifelich, Lively*: Lively. Lively hewed; Of a lively complexion. Dr. Ch.
- Life*: Left. p. 441. A life halfe; On the left side. RR. 163.
- Lige, Mo.* 1944. Ligge, Ligge: To lye down. Ligging: Lying.
- Light*: To alleviate, to make light, or easy. Tr. L. 3. 1088. Her loking gan she light, Tr. L. 1. 293. She lo ked pleasantly. Alighted. La. 787. It is put for lite, i. e. little, in Mo. 1047. Also, Easy. Lightly: Easily; Probably.
- Lighnesse*: Light. AF. 263.
- Ligne, Chr. Dr.* 1517. Ligne: Lineage, descent; A line. Defending by ligne, Tr. L. 5. 1480. Descended lineally, or in a direct line.
- Lignes*, p. 493, b. Liketh, yieldeth. Sp. Pleasure. Sk.
- Like*: Alike. Like ruin, RR. 6144. In all places, or things alike.
- Likely*: Like. A likely thing him till, RR. 4852. A thing like himself, or his own likeness, Ib. 4845.
- Likorous, Likorousnesse*. See Licorous, Licorousnesse.
- Likin*: To please, to be agreeable to. Tr. L. 1. 432. f. leg.
- Liking*, Fr. 1536. Agreeable, as in RR. 868. And perhaps in Tr. L. 1. 309. it should be so read instead of loking: Ca. reads it, lykyng.
- Likir*: More like. Tr. L. 3. 1030.
- Limaile* (Fr. Limaile) Filings of Iron, Steel, or any other Metal. No. 874. Silver limaile, Ib. 1183. Silver-dust, or Shaving of Silver, Ib. 1260.
- Lime his feathers*: Stick his feathers together, as with bird-lime. Tr. L. 1. 354.
- Limere, Lymere*, Dr. Ch. 362, 365. A Lymere, Leviner or Leamer (so called from the Leam, or Line, wherewith he is led) is a middle sized Hound between a Harier and a Greyhound both for kind, and frame of body, being active, light and nimble. Holme's Acad. of Armory. See Cains De Canibus. fol. 3, b.
- Limetod*: A Lime-twig. Mo. 801.
- Limes, Limis, Limmis*: Limbs. CL. 228. AS. Lima, Membrum.
- Limid*: Polished. Fa. L. 3. 34.
- Limit*, p. 158, b. To appoint, to set a day.
- Limitation*, WB. 877. A certain Precinct, allowed to a Limitour, V.
- Limitour*, Prol. 209. A Fryer that had a particular Grant, or License for begging, or exercising other Functions within certain Limits, or Bounds; as the Limitour of Holdernesse, Fr. 455, 456, &c. See p. 590, b. Paragr. II. Why hire you to ferme, &c. It will give more light to the meaning of the word if the whole Paragraph be read as it is in Mr. Rawlinson's MS.
- Whi sette ye at the Kyngis londe to ferme to your Lymyours*, as ye weren lordis of al menes goodis and ye woll not suffre o frere to begge in anothers lymytacioun unpunished.
- Limmis*. See Limes.
- Linage*: Family. RR. 258.
- Linde*: A Teil-tree, or Lime-tree. Fr. 2226. Lindis: Teil-trees, Lime-trees. RR. 1385.
- Lipsid*: Lipped. Prol. 266.
- Lis*: To ease, to comfort. Ber. 216. See Lisse.
- Lisse*: To ease. Bal. 954. To be eased. RR. 3758. To cease; To be lessened. RR. 4128. Ease. Tr. L. 5. 550. Instead of blisse read lisse, or lysse, as Ca. Respite. Fr. 2794. Abatement. Also, A list, or border; Lipit, end. Sp.
- Lis*: Will, pleasure. RR. 1957.
- Life*, Tr. L. 4. 394. should be read lyef, i. e. doff lie down. So MS. Sp. Ca. and al.
- Liftis*: Lifts, a place for Combatants, or Wrestlers, &c. to fight or exercise in. Prol. 63, 1864. Fr. Lice.
- Litage*: Lithargy: White Lead, "The foam that riseth from Lead when tried: It is cold of operation, and used by Chirurgions in Ointments and Plasters, be-
- ing of a gentle, drying, cleansing, and binding nature. Blo. See Ceruse.
- Lite*: Little, small.
- Lith*, RR. 5909. Lyeth. Thereby lithe a tale; Thereby hangs a tale. AL. 21. In Tr. L. 4. 228. instead of Lithe, i. e. Lyeth, Ca. hath Ryght for Also, Gentle, tractable; Smooth, plain; Soft. Fa. L. 119. RR. 3762. To lessen, to ease. Tr. L. 4. 754. Also, A joint, a limb, a nerve. Mo. 990. AS. Lith. Lenis, &c. Ar- 145, &c.
- Lither, Lihir*, Ber. 727. Naughtly, wicked; Froward, unacceptable. AS. Lyðne, Nequam, ingratus. Lithirly: ill, wickedly, &c. Lithirly beset his while; Spent his time ill. MR. 191.
- Lithin*, Gam. 1. To hearken, attend, listen. AS. Lithan, Applicare, conferre.
- Lithir, Lithirly*. See Lither.
- Lithy*: Humble, quiet, mild. Sk. See Lith. It seems to be the same with Lither. CN. 14. and perhaps should be so read.
- Litynge*, Fa. L. 3. 133. Very small or little. AS. Lit- ling.
- Litrage*: A Lethargy. Boeth.
- Little*, Tr. L. 4. 834. Into litle; Within a little, almost.
- Littrature*, No. 86. Literature, learning, scholarship.
- Livande*: Living. Ch. Dr. 1628.
- Live, Lyve*: Life. On live, or lyve; Alive. RR. 5294.
- Livelisht*, CL. 782. f. as Lifelich.
- Livelod, Livelode*: A livelyhood.
- Livery* (Fr. Livree) Livery. It properly signifies Wages, Salary, or Fee allowed to Officers, whether in money, or necessaries in kind. Gam. 1018. Payth him gode livery; Pay them good wages, spoken ironically for, Beat them soundly.
- Living*, for Levin: To believe. Mo. 2835.
- Livis body*: A living body, or person. Fa. L. 2. 555. Livis creature; A living creature. Fr. 1924.
- Loc*: Loose. Fa. L. 3. 196. p. 393, a.
- Lodemanage*, Bal. 250. Lodemenage, Prol. 405. The Skill, or Art of Navigation. It seems to be the AS. Lad-man, A Guide, and perhaps a Pilot, with a French Termination. In Gen. XXXIII. 15. Esau presseth Jacob to take him guides of his people that knew the way. Io bibbe þe þu nyme þe Ladmenn, &c. Lottman, Kilian. is a Pilot from Lmt, Lead, because he useth a Plummet for sounding. See Mynshew.
- Loder*, Ber. 837. for Lodesterre, V.
- Lodesmen*, Hyp. 121. Lodismen, Ber. 823. Pilots; qu. Guides, or Leaders. The Lodestone is so called from the AS. Lædan, To lead, or guide; qu. a Leading-stone, Somn. in Lædan. See Lodemenage.
- Lodesterre*: The North-star, by which Sailors steer their Course. Prol. 2061. and thence it is taken to signify any sure Guide, or Director. Tr. L. 5. 232. where instead of Lodesterre it is Lodis terre in MS. Sp. as it is, Ib. 1391.
- Loft*: High, from Lifr. On loft; On high. La. 278.
- Loge*: A lodge, a lodging, habitation. Lepir loge; A Lodge, or Hospital for Lepers. CCR. 27. A hen-roost. Mo. 966.
- Loggit*, as Alogit.
- Loigne*: A line. RR. 7100.
- Lollers*, Mo. 2013. Lollards. A name of Infamy bestowed on the Followers of Wicklif; supposed by some to be so called from one Walter Lolhard, the Author of a Sect in Germany and the Low Countries, in the Thirteenth Century: Others think they had the name from Lolium, as being Tares among the Lord's Wheat; to which Chaucer alludes. Sq. 12, 15, 21. Sk. from a certain Tower called Lollard, where they were imprisoned; but probably the Tower was so called from them. In later times the word hath been used to signify all Opposers of, or Dissenters from, the Established Religion.
- Lombardes*, No. 2875. Bankers, so called from the Lombards of Italy, who were notorious Usurers, and as such are joyned with Jews in PP. Pass. 5.
- I lerned amonge Lumberdes and Jewes a lesson*
To wey penyces with a peyres, and pare the knyff;
And lene is for lone of arefe, &c.

Lambis,

Lombis: Lambs. Bal. 267, &c.

Of lombis, as in sofbaßneß,
Tho Clerkis makin mencions;
Ther kind is fret with doubleneß.

Though Clerks, or Scholars, represent Women to be like Lambs for their truth and sincerity, yet they are all fraught, or filled, with doubleneß or falshood.

Lome: Often. Ber. 968. How oft. Ib. 1367. AS. Gre-lome.

Londe: Land. Londes, Landis: Lands.

Londenoy: A Londoner, one born in London. p. 488, b.

Londe-sillers: Husbandmen. Boeth. Test.

Londlefe, qu. Landleß: Having no Lands. Mo. 2013.

Lone: A loan, a thing lent; Lending. God be thankid of his lone, Fr. 597. There seems to be a corruption both in this verse and the next, of love into lone, and above into alone, which might easily happen, u and n, b and l, being very like in the old MSS. Those two Verses may be easily understood if thus read;

*Thei may now (God be thankid of his love)
Makin ther Jubile, and walke above;*

That is, They may now (God be thanked for his Love) walk above, in Heaven, and keep their Jubilee there. In Ca. 1. they are so read with a very little variation, viz. Maken her Jubilee, and walkyn al above. But all the subsequent Editions read lone and alone.

Long, RR. 3377. Of long passid; A long time ago.

Longe; To belong. Longith: Belongeth. Tr. L. 2. 1346. RR. 2197.

Longias, Magd. 176. or Longem, is said to be the Name of the Soldier who pierced our Saviour's side with a Spere, and being blind was restored to his sight by wiping his eyes with his hands which were bloody. See Nicodemus's Gospel.

Loos. See Lose.

Lop, Lope, Loppe: A spider. p. 440, a: 442, a. Sk. charges the Interpreter of Chaucer with a mistake in explaining Loppe, a Spider, whereas it signifies a Flea: But it can scarce bear that sense in p. 440, a. It seems rather to be a mistake of the Transcribers in writing Loppe for Coppe; Atter-coppa in AS. being a Spider, which is still called Attercop in the North, and in CB. Cop or Coppyn. See Ray's Coll. p. 123, 129.

Lordlingis, Lordingis, Lordlingis: Sirs, Masters; A Dim. of Lords. Lord sometimes signifies no more than Master, as No. 2820. Ray says, that Loert (which seems to be a corruption of Lord) is used in the Peak of Derbyshire for Gaffer, Lady, Gammer. See GL V. in Lord.

Lordship: Power, authority.

Lore: Direction; Rule. Tr. L. 1. 646. Learning. La. 4. Advice. Tr. L. 1. 755. Doctrine. Pro. 529. Knowledge. Fr. 1808. Also, for Lorne, Mo. 2671.

Lorell: A devourer. Sp. Sk. thinks it to be a Dim. of Lurco, a Glutton. WB. 273. Mo. 2314. A loose, vile, or lewd fellow. Every lovell; Perditissimum quicunq; Boeth. p. 363, b.

Lorne: Lost, undone. Sq. 649. Fr. 2092, 2583.

Lose, Loos, RR. 1161. Praise; Fame; Reputation. Lat.

Lous. Also, Lok. Tr. L. 4. 27. Loses: Praise. Fa. L. 3. 598.

Lofell: A crafty fellow. Sp. A liar, a hypocrite, a cheat, a counterfeit. Mo. 3206. From the AS. Leas-Mendax, falsus.

Lofengery, Lofengrie: A liar, a flatterer. Lofengier in old Fr. is a Deceiver. See Men Fr. in Lofengir; and Men. Ib. in Lofinga.

Lofengry, Lofengrie, Mo. 2575; Lofery, Ber. 193. Lying; Flattery; Deceit, a cheat.

Lofengis, Lofynges: Lies; Flattery. Fa. L. 3. 227. Also Scutcheons of Arms, born by Ladies in a Lozenge. Lofingis and fochans, RR. 893. Coats of Arms of Ladies, and Gentlemen.

Lofid: Loosed, set at liberty. RR. 4511.

Loß, for Loß, Ber. 2819.

Loichy, RR. 6339. A Companion, or Love. Sp. See Sk. We find Lemmans and Lottchies joyned together in PP. Paß. 3. as being synonymous.

— And priestes maineineth
To have lemmanis and lottchies all her lyne dayes
And bring forth barnes agayne forbidden lawes.

Loth: Unwilling; Hatefull, odious, loathsome. Be him loth or dere, Tr. L. 2. 808. Whether it pleases him, or not. Lothe unto Christ; Hated by Christ. Hen. 250. Lothir: More odious, &c. As to me, nls lezir non ne lothir, LW. 191. I neither love, nor hate the one more than the other.

Lothely: Loathsome. WB. 1100.

Lothir. See Loth.

Love dayis: Meetings for pleasure and diversion. Pro. 260. Fa. L. 2. 187. Love-dair, p. 481. b. Signifies Peacemaking, reconciliation.

Lovefome: Lovely. Tr. L. 5. 465.

Lough, No. 1990. Loughe, Ber. 2317. Laughed.

Louvis: Lovers. Hyper. 4.

Louke, MR. 1307. A fellow-receiver. Sp. A Receiver to a thief; An Overseer, or Examiner of Accounts. Sk. Perhaps it may signify a Setter to a thief, one that looks out, and gives notice of booty.

Loupe, Bal. Lad. 92, 93. See Depe loupe.

Lour, Loure, Ber. 728. RR. 7099. To lower, to look askint, to look sower, sullen or crabbed.

Loure: To submit; To kneel. RR. 7336. To honour; To stoop, bow, cringe. RR. 1554, 4384. To lurk or hide one's self. No. 197. See Ib. 322, &c.

Loueden: Bowed, made obeysance, &c.

Low: Law. Ch. Dr. 324.

Lowe: To praise. RR. 4732. Ber. 920. To allow, approve.

Lowlyhed: Lowliness, humility. Bl. Kn. 315.

Loyalte: Truth, sincerity. AL. 98.

Luce, Pro. 54. Livonia, Liesland. Sk. Also, A Pike, or Jack. Pro. 352. RR. 7089.

Lucerne: A lamp, a candle. CIV. 303.

Lucina: Juno, or Diana; The Moon. Fr. 2591.

Luse: Love. Pro. 2787.

Lukir: Lucre, gain. Ber. 3162.

Lure: A Device used by Falconers for bringing their Hawks to fist: Whence the Expression Bring to lure, Reclaim to the lure. To make a hawk familiar, to bring him to fist; and thence it is used for To bring a person to one's purpose, &c.

Lushburgh: Base Coins imported from foreign parts, and dispersed here in the time of Edward III. so called (as Sk. thinks) from Luxenburgh, where they were first coined. No lushburgh payis ye, Mo. 74. You make true payment, not in counterfeit coin; Vos solutanem prestatis non fictam. Spelm.

Lust: Will, pleasure, desire; To be pleased. Lust to sey, No. 282. Was pleased, or list, to say. Lusty: Gay, pleasant; Earnest; Earnestly. Lustie lese, Tr. L. 2. 752. The snare, or bond, of love or pleasure. See Lees.

Lustibede, Hyp. 163. Lustibed, Lustineß, Tr. L. 3. 177. Lusty.

Luxury: Lechery, lust.

Lycorous. See Licorous.

Lyfellebe: Lively. Test.

Lygeance: Allegiance. Bl. Kn. 552.

Lyurge: Lycurgus, the famous Spartan law-giver.

Lymere. See Limer.

Lymme: A limb. Dr. Ch. 499. Lymys: Limbs. Ber. 1621.

Lynd. See Linde. Under the mode lynd, Gam. 1339. perhaps may signify no more than, In the wood, under the trees, in general, as the Expression, Under the lynd, seems to be used in Doug. Virg. p. 220, 40.

Lyne: Line. Lyne right; In a right line. p. 446, b.

Lynne: To loyter, to tarry. Gam. 1105.

Lyffe: To lessen. Boeth. See Liffe.

Lye: Little. Fr. 971.

Lyve. See Lve.

Lyvere: Livery; Apparel. Pro. 365. See Livery.

Lyvery: Delivery. Ber. 1163.

Lyvinge: Living. Her daies lyving; All the days of her life.

Lyvode, Ber. 2464. See Livode.

Mace

M.

- Mace, Prol. 2126. A Batoon; A club, a staff.
Match, for make, PT. 83. A mate, a match, an equal; To match, to be even with. Ib. 340.
Machabe, Mo. 604. The Apocryphal Books of the Machabees; particularly the first six Chapters of the First Book, wherein are described the Actions and Death of Antiochus Epiphanes.
Mad: To be mad. RR. 1072.
Maise, Maïsaie, Fr. Ma foy, Sur ma foy: Faith, upon or by my Faith. Tr. L. 3. 52.
Magician: A Magician. Fr. 2797.
Magike nature, Prol. 418. "He meaneth (says Sp.) this Physician was skilfull in Astrology, and could make his election of fortunate hours, wherein to minister his potions to his Patient; and likewise that he was practised in Magick Natural, as in making of Sigils, or Characters stamped on metal in their due times fitted to that Sign that governed that part of the body wherein the Malady was; as the stamp of Aries for the disease in the Head, and of Leo, for the Reins, &c. Hereof he speaketh, Fa. L. 3. 178, &c.
Magre, as Maugre.
Mahound: Mahomet. La. 225. Perhaps mistaken by the Transcribers for Mahomid, as it is often written in the MSS.
Maïsaie, RR. 7580. See Maise.
Maile: A Coat of Mail. Fr. 2217.
Mainte: Mixed, mingled. Bl. Kn. 230.
Maineine, Maineiners, Maineynours. See Champartie.
Maintenanc: Countenance, looks, carriage. Dr. Ch. 834. Fr. Mainien. See Champartie.
Maisondene (Fr. Maison-Dieu) A Hospital for sick persons. RR. 5619.
Maisterie, Maistry, Maistre, Maistrice: A Mystery: A masterly action; Magistracie; Magistratum, p. 362, a. Command; Authority, Mo. 3057. Government, power. Ib. 525, 2741. Bacchus had of her mouth no maisterie; No. 1573. She was not given to wine. Imperiousness. Fr. 2315, 2311. Masterly workmanship, RR. 842.
Maistrifull, Magisterial, imperious, domineering. Tr. L. 2. 756.
Maistr Street: The principal Street. Prol. 2904. Fr. 3506.
Maistris: Mistress. LW. 88.
Maistrise: Curious, masterly workmanship. RR. 4172.
Make: A match, a mate, a fellow, a companion, a consort; A husband, or wife. WB. 84. LW. 158. In Prol. 2558. it signifies the Person engaged with in fight. But MS. Ch. reads that passage thus;
*And yif that so befall, that the Chevetayn
 Bee take on either side, or ellis slayn, &c.*
Make: To compose, make Verses. LW. 69, 74. 364.
Makings, Ib. 413. Compositions in Poetry. A Maker seems to have been the common Appellation for a Poet in Q. Elizabeth's time; wherein (says Sir Philip Sidney) "I know not whether by lucke or wisdom we Englishmen have met with the Greeks. Defence of Poetic. p. 494.
Make one's Verde: To impose upon, or deceive one. WB. 365. Faire la barbe, is a Fr. Phrase for To abuse, affront, &c.
Makeleß: Matchless. Tr. L. 1. 172.
Makid: Makidin: Made. MS. Sp. Madyn al the walls, Tr. L. 4. 121. Built the walls.
Makin his fort, Tr. L. 4. 1404. Ca. has it, Marryng his fort, and berying, &c. which is intelligible. Others read Ma-kyng.
Malapert. See Apert.
Male: A Mail, a packet. No. 2438. To unbooke a male; To open one's budget. MR. 7. No. 2499.
Malebouche: A foul mouth, an evil tongue. Fl. 84. BD. 741.
Male talent, RR. 273, 330, 3438. Ill will, evil intent;

- Displeasure; Indignation. Gl. Lob. See Talent.
Malgre, as Maugre.
Malifise: Evil doing; Maleficium, Boeth.
Malison, Fr. A curse. No. 1266. Contracted from Mal-ediction, as Benison from Benediction.
Malt: Melted. Tr. L. 1. 583.
Malvesie: Malmesie wine. No. 2578.
Malure: A misfortune, a mischance. Ch. Dr. 599. Fr. Malheur.
Man, RR. 6055, 6059. A Vassal, a Homager.
Manace, Manacing, Manassinge: Threatning. RR. 4007, 4051. Boeth.
Manere: Carriage, behaviour. Prol. 140.
Mangerie, Fr. Eating, feasting. Gam. 681, 858, 919. See Gl. Lob. in Manducarium.
Mangonell: A Warlike Engine to batter walls withall. RR. 6279. See Gl. Lob. in Mangoneaux.
Manhede: Manhood, courage.
Manie, Fr. Madness. Prol. 1376. Gr. Mania.
Mannishe: Wicked. La. 783. from the AS. Man, Sec-lus. Also, Proper to man or mankind, humane. To done shene is mannish, p. 152, a. Humannus est peccare.
Masculine, manly. Tr. L. 1. 284. Fl. 149.
Manor: A Mansion, a habitation. Dr. Ch. 1004.
Manra: Manner.
Manstere: Meek. Tr. L. 4. 194.
Manlet, Prol. 2160. Dim. of Manile. MS. Ch. has it,
A Manell upon his shoultris hanging.
Marchandrie: Merchandize. Mo. 2740.
Marcia Catoun, Fl. 198. Marcia the daughter of Cato. So Hectoris Andromache. Virg.
Marcian: Martial, warlike. WB. 610.
Mare: More; Greater. RR. 2215. Less and mare; Great and small, High and low.
Mareis: Marshes, fens. Boeth. Fr. Maraie. Also, Marrows. p. 383, a.
Margarie: A Pearl. p. 472, b. A Daisy. Fr. Marguerite. Bal. Lad. 119. comp. with 124.
Margelaine, AL. 56. Marjerom. Fr. Marjolaine.
Margerets: Dailies. AL. 57. See Margarie.
Marie, as Mary.
Mario: Mares.
Marishe: Marthy, moorish.
Mark of Adam, WB. 696. All the Offspring of Adam, that are born after his Image, or, All that have Adam's Mark, or Image stamped upon them. See Merke.
Mark [or Markin] heter. One that makes quartels in Markets. MR. 828. Mo. 2811. See Beter.
Marrid: Mar'd; Undone. Magd. 112.
Marris: A marth. WB. 670. See Mareis.
Mart, Marte: Mars, the God of War. It is often put for War. Prol. 2023. MS. Ch. reads the place thus;
*Nought was forgotten by the infortune of Mart
 The carter overryden by his cart,*
i. e. In the Temple of Mars was not forgot to be described the Charioteer run over by his own Chariot through the mischance of War. This sense is very proper and easy; but as it is printed the first Verse is scarce intelligible. Instead of for the love of Mart, Tr. L. 2. 988. Ca. and Py. read it, for love and charite, and departed be, instead of departe, Ib. 990.
Martire, Fr. Martyrdom; Torment. RR. 2547. Martirid; Martyred. Test.
Martydom: Any pain, or suffering. Prol. 1452.
Martyrsh: Tormenteth. Prol. 1564.
Mary, Marie: Marrow. No. 2058. Marie-dome: Marrow-bones. Prol. 382.
Mase: A whim, a fancy. Mo. 1208; Tr. L. 4. 468.
Masal: Amazed, astonished, confounded, confused.
Masidness: Amazement, confusion, astonishment, surprise. Fr. 2082.
Masin: To doat, rave. Sq. 1919. To be in confusion.
Masseday, Massedayn: Holy-days, wherein Mas is celebrated with more than ordinary Solemnity. Sz.
Masterte: for me astert: Escaped me, came from me un-awares. Tr. L. 1. 1051.
Mastirship, as Maistrice.
Mastling, Mo. 2127. Shining. Sp. Glittering. Com.
Mastrie, as Maistrice.
Mate: Pined, consumed; Daunted, abashed, dejected, fati-

- fatigued. ProL. 957. RR. 1739. BD. 35. From the old Lat. Marius. See Men. Fr. in Eche, and Gl. V. In Tr. L. 4. 342. MS. Sp. hath mad instead of mat.
- Maire*, Hyp. 215. Muiro, Tr. L. 4. 818. Matter.
- Maugre*, Malgre, Fr. Ill will; Disgrace. Cup. 376. Thou canst me grete maugre, RR. 4399. Thou takest it unkindly of me. Should I conne him maugre, ib. 4559. Should I take it ill of him. These Expressions are purely Fr. Savoir bon, ou mauvaigres. In spite of. Maugre her bed; In spite of her head, In spite of her teeth. Malgre her; With an ill will, as it were in spite of himself. RR. 2386, 5933.
- Mavis*, Mauise: A Thrush, or Song-thrush. CCr. 24. RR. 619, 665. Also, A bushel. ib. 5590.
- Maumet*, Maumet (a Contraction of Mahomet). A false God; An Idol. Pars. Maumetrie: Mahometanism. La. 227. Idolatry. Pars. p. 205. 4.
- Maunderment*: A command, an order, a commission.
- Mawe*: The belly, the stomach. No. 3328.
- May*, often signifies Cau, May do. A man may godlye [i. godly] i. e. may do it. To may, Ber. 1224. To be amayed, or amazed.
- Maydinhode*: Maidenhead, Virginity. ProL. 2331.
- Mazeline*: A Mazer. Sp. That is, a wooden cup made of Maple. Sk. No. 3357.
- Mealide*: Meal-time, Dinner-time. Tr. L. 2. 1556.
- Meanliche*: Moderate; Mild. Booth. p. 365, b. l. 2. Lenibius is there rendered light and meanliche: The Translator doubting whether it was lenibus or levibus, made use of two words to express both senses.
- Meddell*, Medell, Medle: To mix, mingle. Booth. Medeling, RR. 898. A mixture. Medled, Medlid: Mixed, mingled; from the Fr. Meler.
- Mediacion*: Means. p. 439. 4.
- Medley core*: A coat of mixt Stuff. ProL. 380.
- Meed*, Mede: A reward. AS. Med, mebe. Gad do you mede; God reward you. AL. 293. It is often put for Wealth in general in PP. Also, A meadow. ProL. 89.
- Medis*: Meadows. Tr. L. 4. 770.
- Mees*, Cup. 334. Meadows. Sp. contracted from Meades, says Sk. Rather a Messuge, or Messuges, in old Fr. Mees, and now called Mees places in some parts.
- Meine*, Meinie, Meinye: A Company, a Retinue; All that live together in a House. Tr. L. 1. 127. from the AS. Menigeo, Melindio, or the old Fr. Mesnie, a Family.
- Meim*: Mingled. RR. 2296.
- Meith*: Mead. ProL. 2281.
- Meke*: Meek, humble, submissive. Also, To be meek, to submit; To humble. Ar. 313. Became meek, pliable. RR. 3584. Mekin and soplin; To grow meek and supple. RR. 2244.
- Melancolius*: Melancholy. Fr. L. 1. 304.
- Melis*: Meals. Dr. Ch. 612.
- Mell*: To meddle. Mo. 2797. Fr. Meler. Also, A mill. MR. 815.
- Memoure*: Memory. Cr. 50.
- Menace*, Fr. Threatning. ProL. 2005.
- Menasub*: Threateneth. Fr. 1152.
- Mende*, Ber. 2417. f. Men.
- Mendement*: Amendment. PT. 46.
- Mendicants*: Beggars; Begging Fryers.
- Mendicence*, Mendicite, Mendicence: Beggings; Beggery, poverty.
- Mene*: Moderate. Mene differaunce; Moderate distance. CL. 783.
- Menge*: To mix. Mengid: Mixt. CCr. 32.
- Meninge*, Tr. L. 1. 285, 289. Should be Mening, i. e. Moving, motion: It is meuing, or meuyng in all the MSS. and old Editions that I have seen; nor is it less, if it be read otherwise.
- Menis*: Means. Fr. 220. Substance.
- Menivere*, RR. 221. Miniver, a fine white Fox.
- Menuse*: To diminish. See Amenuse.
- Menye*, as Meine.
- Merciabile*: Mercifull, compassionate. RR. 1864. Fr. 2582.
- Merciement*: Amerciements, penalties, fines. Pars.
- Meritorie*: Meritorious.
- Meritote*, MR. 662. A Sport used by children, by swinging themselves in Bell-ropes, or such like, till they be giddy. Sp. Some Annotators on the place, correct it, on her to dote; but produce no Authority for it. It is in other Copies, verytote, virittote, brittote.
- Merke*: A mark, an image. Fr. 2426. Also, Dark. RR. 5339. Merknesse: Darknes. From the Dari. Sp. Mirk and Murk are still used in some parts of the North for Dark.
- Merkenrike*, Mo. 1227. The Kingdom of Mercia. AS. Myrcna-ricce.
- Merle*, CCr. 24. Mercula avis; A Black-bird.
- Merlion*, AF. 339. A merlin, a sort of Hawk. See Emulan.
- Merthe*: Mirth. Mo. 1285.
- Mervayle*: Marvel, wonder. Fr. Merveille.
- Mery*: Pleasant. Mo. 1186.
- Mes*, RR. 2462. At gode mes; In good humour.
- Mese*, Ch. Dr. 2116. Mais, which used to be celebrated at Nuptials. Sk.
- Mesell*: A Leper. Pars. It seems to be used in PP. for common Beggars, such persons often pretending to be afflicted with Sores and Ulcers.
- Messagerie*, AF. 228. Diligence in doing a Message. Sk. The business of a Messenger. Also, A pump, a bawd.
- Messangere*: A messenger. Ch. Dr. 123. Messangers; Messengers. Tr. L. 2. 936. In the MSS. it is generally (if not always) Messenger; &c.
- Messe*: Mais. Fr. 464.
- Mest*, Meste: Molt; Greatest.
- Mesurable*: Moderate. ProL. 437.
- Mesure*: Moderation. No. 1563. Mo. 2447.
- Mes*, Mes, Mein: Foodreams; Dreamed. WB. 577.
- Metamorphoseos*, Metamorphose, CL. 1266. Ovid's Metamorphosis.
- Mets*: To measure. Asfr. Also, Meet; Meat. During the metis space; During the Entertainment. La. 1015. See Mes.
- Mesborde*: A table. Test. L. 2.
- Mesly*: Meet; Comely, of a proper size. RR. 822. AL. 79.
- Merritiens*: Poets. GL. 30.
- Mette*: Dreamed. Tr. L. 1. 363. Also, Measure. By mette or by mesure, p. 206, b. By mesure seems to be added as a Gloss to explain By mette.
- Mevable*: Moveable; Unconstant. RR. 4736.
- Mebles*, as Mooble.
- Mevie*, Mevie: To move.
- Mewards*: Towards me. Test.
- Mewe*, Sq. 663. Tr. L. 3. 1790. "A kind of Cage where Hawks are wingbred, or kept, when they Mue, or change their Feathers: Whence those great Stables belonging to Wolpbal took denomination; that place having been anciently full of Mews, where the King's Hawks were kept. Blo. in Mews. From hence it is taken to signify a Cage in general, or any sort of confinement. RR. 4778. Also, Secret. in mewe, Tr. L. 1. 10382. In secret. Tr. L. 3. 603. Should be read thus; Ther be bestet, fith midnigh, was in mewe. Ca. and Pj. read it thus; Ther be shet was fith mydnight in a mewe.
- Mewer*, as Muer, V. In mewe; As a dumb person. CL. 1498.
- Meyn*, as Meine.
- Mfold*: A thousand fold. Tr. L. 3. 1546.
- Miche*: A covetous, sordid fellow. Sk. It seems to signify rather a lazy, loitering Vagabond, or Truant. RR. 6541.
- Middill*: The middlemost.
- Midwib*: The middle.
- Mihlmesse*: Michaelmas. Pars. 97.
- Miche*: Strength. Mikuy: Strong. RR. 6573.
- Mikil*, Mikil: See Mochill.
- Mildrop*: Droppings of the nose. Cr. 158.
- Minim*, Minim: To undermine; To make a Lodgment by digging; To lodge. Tr. L. 2. 677.
- Ming*: To mix. CCr. 197. Mingid: Mixed. Cr. 236.
- Minishe*: To diminish.
- Ministers*: Magistrates. Mo. 1158.
- Minoreffe*, RR. 149. It may be the fem. of Minir, An underminer. But Sp. will have the right reading to be Mouereffe, A stirrer of debate; for so it is (says he) in

- in the French Verses in the oldest written Copies, Sembla bien estre monereste.
- Minour: A digger, a miner. ProL. 2467.
- Minstralcie: Musick. ProL. 2199. Mo. 1690. Minstrallis: Musicians.
- Mintings: Minding; Endeavouring. Mintyng to gone, p. 360, a. Tendit ire.
- Mirror: A looking-glass. Fr. Miroir.
- Mirthelesse: Sad, void of mirth. AF. 592.
- Miribid: Cheered, comforted, made merry. p. 494, a.
- Mis, An. 282. Misse, Tr. L. 4. 1267. Amis. In Composition it betokens Error, or mistake.
- Misacomptid: Misreckoned, counted wrong. Tr. L. 5. 1184.
- Misaventure: Mischance, misfortune.
- Misavise: To act unadvisedly. When they be misavise; When they do not rightly consider, or are not well advised. VB. 239.
- Misbeleve: To distrust. Misbelevid: Distrustfull. Tr. L. 3. 840.
- Misbeide: A mishap, a mischance.
- Misbodin, ProL. 911. To wrong. Sp. It seems to signify To misinform, from Mis, and the AS. Boba, bobe, Nuncium, nuncium. MS. Ch. reads instead of it, Mysdo: Done amiss, wronged.
- Misborne: Misbehaved. p. 159, b.
- Mischefe: To chuse amiss. Sc. 188.
- Mischief: Misfortune. RR. 6731. At mischief, lb. 4552. In the time of distress.
- Misclepyng: Naming amiss.
- Miscorden: To disagree. Test.
- Miscovering: Unlawfull desire, coveting that which one ought not. RR. 196.
- Misdeparte: To distribute, or divide amiss. La. 107.
- Misericorde, Misericordies, Boeth. Pity, mercy, compassion.
- Misese: Uneasiness, trouble. Misese: Uneasy. p. 483, b.
- Misfill: Fell amiss, miscarried.
- Misforgave him, Tr. L. 4. 1426. Misgave, failed him.
- Misgo: Gone amiss, or astray. Mo. 2697.
- Misgovernance: Mismanagement, misbehaviour, ill conduct. No. 2501.
- Mishap: To disappoint. RR. 5543. To miscarry, to be disappointed. Tho it mishap one, PW. 87. Though one miscarry.
- Mistaken: To misbehave. Tr. L. 4. 48.
- Mistivd man: A man of evil life. Tr. L. 4. 330. Mistivng man, MS. Sp.
- Miswacer, Miswetre. See Misse-metre.
- Mispleasure: Displeasure, discord, disagreeableness. p. 482, b.
- Misquesmes: To displease. Mo. 2587. See Quem.
- Missaie, Missile: To say amiss, to speak evil of. RR. 1260. To contradict; To hinder. p. 514, a. Missayere: An evil speaker, a slanderer. RR. 2231.
- Misse: Misbecame. RR. 1194.
- Misse, as Mis. Misse manere: A wrong manner. Mo. 3137.
- Misse-entechanged: Wrong changed. RR. 6581. Vice versa mutatus, p. 391, b.
- Misseie. See Missaie.
- Misweryng: Evil meaning, mistaken, p. 506, b.
- Misse-metre, Tr. L. 5. 1795. To destroy the Metre or Numbers in Poetry by incorrect Writing, or wrong Reading: But Chaucer having particularly mentioned the fault of Miswriting in the foregoing Verse, it is rather to be supposed he means there that of Reading amiss, which generally happens, for defaute of songe, L. c. for want of a perfect understanding of his language. He owns in Fa. L. 3. 9, &c. that he chose sometimes to leave a Verse too short by a Syllable, where he had a greater regard to the sense than the Metre: But whether he be to be imitated in this, as some, who have writ in his style, have affected to do, is not my business to determine. It seems plain from this Passage, as well as his words to Adam Scrivener at the end of the Book, and his care about Pointing, RR. 2157, 2161. that he was not so loose in his Metre, as some may imagine; for by collating any part of his works with MSS. or old Editions, it will appear, that Verses, which in one Copy or Edition are defective, may out of others be made compleat; and that very often without the use of i or y prefix to Verbs, the distinct pronunciation of the final is or é, or useless Expletives.
- Mistake: To take amiss, to be offended. RR. 1540.
- Mister, Mistere, Mistr: A Mystery. Fr. 2898. A profession, or trade. ProL. 615. RR. 6332. Fr. Mestier. Hence it is used in general for any Sort, kind, or condition. ProL. 1342. Mister men, lb. 1712. Mo. 2696. Mister folk, CL. 227. Kind of men. As mister was, RR. 1426. f. According to the quality of the ground, or of what it produced. Also, Business, occasion, need, necessity. lb. 2787, 5614, 6078, 6519, 6581. In mister, Sq. 970. Upon occasion. In Tr. L. 3. 859. instead of more nede is, Ca. hath, more myster is, which is the same.
- Misterte for Ministry, p. 208, b. 1. 68. In some Copies it is read, As by the mistery of her dignity.
- Mistidngs, p. 378, b. 1. 53. perhaps for Mistledngs. Lat. Devia.
- Mistibed: A Mystery. CM. 71.
- Mistily: Darkly, obscurely. No. 1415.
- Mistr. See Mister.
- Mistrust: Mistrust. No. 1883.
- Mistrustid, or (as MS. Sp.) Mistronid: Distrusted. Tr. L. 2. 433.
- Misturnid: Turned upside down. Mistournish you; Turns you aside. Boeth.
- Mistwae: The wrong way. RR. 4766.
- Miswene: Gone amiss, or astray. RR. 7280.
- Miswoman: A lewd woman. RL. 15.
- Miswrite, Tr. L. 5. 1794. To copy wrong, so as to prejudice the Sense or Metre in Poetry. See Misse-metre.
- Mitches, RR. 5585. Mites, the smallest pieces of money; Manchets. Sp.
- Mitigative: Tending to mitigate, or allay, sc. the fervency of love. Pr. RL. 20.
- Mittaine: A mitten, a glove. No. 1886, 1887.
- Mixins: Dunghills. RR. 6496. AS. Mixen.
- Mo: More. In Tr. L. 5. 1508. Mo has been printed in some Editions, and has escaped in this, for Wo.
- Moble: Moveable Goods. Ber. 779. See Moble.
- Moch, Mochill, Mokel, Mokil, Muchel, Muchil: Much; Great; Many; Very. Moch shew; Very wicked, a great villain. Gam. FI. Mochefold: Manifold. Test. p. 488, a.
- Mokeren: To mucker or hoard up. Boeth. See Muckre.
- Mode: Mind; Courage, spirit; Mood, manner. Also, Passion, anger; Measure, moderation. AS. Mod, mobe. Also, Time, or measure in singing; Modus, p. 366, a.
- Moder, p. 441. The Matrix, or principal Plate of the Astrolabe into which the other parts are fixed.
- Modifie: To moderate, to qualify. G. 299.
- Moble: Moveables; Personal estate; Household-stuff. Fr. Menble.
- Moidil at ther paris, PT. 139. Sprinkled water upon all their heads; from the Fr. Moiller. To wet.
- Moison, RR. 1677. Ripeness. St. From the Fr. Moisson, Harvest, a crop.
- Moistle, Mo. 1637. Moistie ale; Strong ale.
- Moistir: Moisture. CR. 318.
- Mokel, Mokil: Stature; Size. Dr. Ch. 454, 861. See Moch.
- Mold: The ground, the earth. AS. Molbe. Most of man of mold, Ber. 1309. f. leg. Most of man on mold; The most of any man upon the earth. Tgravin undir molde; Buried under ground. Gam. 1783.
- Molestie: Anxiety, trouble. Boeth. p. 380, a.
- Molles, Mo. 3268. Kittrells. Sp. Keitrells, or Kastrells, a kind of Hawk. St.
- Mollock: Earth, or dung. Sp. From Muck (as St. thinks) produced into Mollock.
- Molse: Melted. Tr. L. 5. 10. Fa. L. 2. 414.
- Momblijnesse, AL. 61. Talk. Sp. from Mamble. Sk.
- Mon: A man. CN. 85. Also, May; Might; Must.
- Monche, Tr. L. 1. 915. To eat, devour; from the Fr. Manger.
- Mone, ProL. 425. A Globe, either Celestial or Terrestrial; A Map; from the Fr. Monde, The World. See St. Also, The Moon. Wintir mone, Tr. L. 1. 525. The Winter-season. Also, Moan, complaint.

Mored:

Moned: Bemoaned; Lamentable.
Moneſte, RR. 3579. Moniſhe, CGr. 196. To admoniſh, to adviſe.
Moniours: Mint-men, Coiners. RR. 6811. Fr. Monnoyeurs.
Monſtre: A ſample, or pattern. Dr. Ch. 912. Fr. Monſtre.
 Alſo, To ſhew, to expreſs. No. 1321. Fr. Monſtrer.
Monſtreſull: Monſtrous. Ber. 2033.
Morcills: Morſels. RR. 6179.
More: Greater. AS. Maſpe. More and leſſ, Fr. 1961, 2600. Great and ſmall; Greater and leſſer.
Mormall, Prol. 388. A canker. Sp. A gangreen. Sk.
Morne: The morning. To morne, [f. leg. morne] Ch. Dr. 948. To morrow.
Morowe, Morownynge: The morning. CMV. 26. WB. 875. The dawning of the day. Mo. 1416.
Morter, Tr. L. 4. 1245. A Lamp. Sp. Sk. "This word doth plainly intimate our Author Jeffrey Chaucer to have been an Eſquire of the Body in Ordinary to the King, whoſe office it is, after he has charged, and ſet the Watch of the Guard, to carry in the Morter, and ſet it by the King's bed-side; for he takes from the Cupboard a Silver Baſon, and therein pours a little water, and then ſets a round cake of Virgin-wax in the middle of the Baſon; in the middle of which cake is a wick of Bumbast, which being lighted, burns as a Match-light all night at the King's bed-side. It has as I conceive, the name of Morter from the likenes it has, when near conſumed, to a Morter wherein you bray Spices; for the flame melting firſt the middle of the Wax cake which is neareſt to it, the wax by degrees, like the ſand in an hour-glaſs, runs evenly from all ſides to the middle to ſupply the wick. This Royal Ceremony Chaucer wittily fancies to be in Creſeide's Bed-chamber, calling this kind of Match-light by the Name of Morter, which very few Courtiers beſides the Eſquires of the Body (who only are admitted, after all Night is ſerved, to come into the King's bed-chamber) do underſtand what is meant by it. Kyn.
Mortiſie, No. 1147, 1452. Quickſilver is mortiſied when it is diſſolved in an Acid Menſtrum: And ſpirits are ſaid to be mortiſied when they are mixt with ſuch things as deſtroy their Strength, and hinder their Operation.
Mortreis, Prol. 386. Meat made of boiled hens, crummed bread, yolk of eggs, and ſaffron, all boiled together. Sp. So called, becauſe the Ingredients are all pound-ed together in a Mortar. Sk.
Morne: Morrow, the morning.
Moſill: The muzzle, the mouth, or ſnout of a beaſt. Prol. 2153.
Moſt: Greateſt. Prol. 2200.
Moſt, Moſtin: Muſt. Tr. L. 5. 1507.
Mote: Muſt. Mote nede, Tr. L. 3. 1293. Mote nedes, or medis, Dr. Ch. 42. Muſt needs, or Needs muſt. May. The ſalſir ſoule mote him beſalle; May evil befall the ſalſer of the mote. Mo. 2024, &c. Alſo, A mote, an Atom. It ne might not a mote ſuffice, Tr. L. 3. 1609. It would not ſignify ſo much as the leaſt triſle in the world. In Gam. 737. it is perhaps put for Mode: Paſſion, anger.
Mote-hall: A Hall where Courts of Judicature are kept. Gam. 1421.
Motiſe: A motive; Advice. Sq. 1007. Encouragement. Caught a grete motiſe of this wunneſ; Was much encouraged by the Information of this witneſs to enquire, &c. La. 629. Fr. Motiſ.
Motin, as Mote.
Mouble, Tr. L. 5. 300. as Moible.
Mouche, Mo. 2887. To devour, to eat all up. Sk. See Monche.
Moucis herte: The courage of a mouſe. Tr. L. 3. 737.
Moud: Mood, temper. PT. 502. See Mode.
Mought: May; Might. La. 398.
Moughibes, p. 147, b. Moughis, WB. 560. Moths.
Monle, Mo. 3205. To moulder wax; To grow mouldy.
Mouled, Mould: Mouldered; Mouldy. p. 492, b.
Moultiplying, No. 1412. See Multiplie and Multiplia-cion.
Moun: May. Teſt.
Mountaunce, Mountenaunce, No. 2381. RR. 1562. Quantity; Value, amount. Prol. 1572. Space. Tr. L. 2.

1707. In old Fr. Montance. In Tr. L. 3. 1738. inſtead of mountenaunce of a gnat, which is ſcarce intelligible, MS. Sp. and al. read, mountenaunce of a knot, which makes the ſenſe eaſy, i. e. Could not unbind ſo much as one knot of Creſeide's net.

Mourdaunt, RR. 1094. The tongue of a buckle. Sk.

Mourningly: Mourntully. Magd. 212.

Mow, Mowe, Mowin: May; Can. To mowin done; To be able to make. Tr. L. 2. 1594. Mowin him gie; Be able to govern, or behave himſelf. RL. 340. Thou ſhalt not mowe ſuffer, i. e. be obliged to ſuffer. p. 154, b.

Mowe: The mouth. Mowis: Mouths. Makiſh him the mowe, Tr. L. 4. 7. Makes mouths at him.

Mowish: The mouth. PT. 481. Ber. 3098.

Mowlin, La. 32. as Moule.

Mowynge: Being able. Boeth. See Mow.

Much: Great; Many. No. 694. Much or lie; Great or ſmall. Prol. 496.

Muchel, Muchill. See Muchell, Mochill.

Mucker: To hoard up; Coacervare, p. 369, b. See Muckre. Muckerers: Covetous perſons, niggards.

Muckre: To hoard up. Tr. L. 3. 1381. From the AS. Quæg, A heap, whence Muk: Riches. Ber. 112.

Mue, Tr. L. 3. 1790. as Mew. Alſo, To change. Tr. L. 2. 1258. Fr. Muër.

Muet, Fr. Mute, dumb, ſilent. Tr. L. 5. 194. Ber. 1331.

Muk. See Muckre.

Mullocke: Rubbiſh. No. 959. See Mollocke.

Multiplicacion: The Art of multiplying Gold and Silver. No. 870.

Multiplie: To underſtand Arithmetick; To multiply Gold and Silver by Chymitry. No. 690, 752.

Murched: Made glad. p. 479, a.

Murde: A dull, heavy, lazy fellow. RR. 3256, 4034. A lingerer, that amuſes himſelf with triſles.

Muſe, RR. 1592. To amuſe ones ſelf; To meditate. Alſo, to ſtop, to delay.

Mut, for Mote: May. PT. 57.

Mydmerowe: The middle of the morning. PT. 13.

Myere: Mire. PT. 304.

Myneche: Threatneth. Teſt.

Myronre, as Mirror.

Myſgloſid: Miſinterpreted. Teſt. L. 2.

Myſſetake: Miſtaken. Dr. Ch. 525.

Myſwandringe: Uncertain, wavering. Boeth.

N.

NA: No. Na ſorce; No matter for that. MR. 1068.

Nad, Ber. 3168. A Contraction of Ne had; Had not. It is generally in the MSS. written Ne had, though to be often pronounced Nad: The ſame is to be obſerved of the like words, Nam, Nor, &c.

Naied: Denied. Naieth: Denieth, reſuſeth. Boeth.

Nakid: Made naked or bare, ſtrip; Deprived. Cap. 353.

Nakers, Prol. 2513. (Crotalum) Cimbals. Sp. Brazen horns. Sk. Military Inſtruments of Muſick. Fr. Nacquaires. Gl. Lob.

Nale: An Ale-houſe. Sp. qu. Inn-ale, an Inn for Ale. Sk. Mo. 2810. Fr. 85.

Nalle: A nail. Sc. 229. Nalis: Nails. WB. 769.

Nam, for Ne am: Am not. WB. 148. See Nad.

Name: Took. No. 1318. from Nim.

Namiliche, Namily: Namely, particularly, chiefly, eſpecially.

Nane: No one, none.

Nappith: Noddeth, ſleepeth.

Napron: An apron. PT. 33.

Nar: Narrowly. Nar' ariſe, for narue ariſe; or narue ariſe (as MS. Ch.) Are well adviſed, have well conſidered. Sq. 1504.

Narcoikes and Apies, Hyper. 109. The ſame with Narcotiſe and Opie, Prol. 1474. Narcoticks and Opiates, ſtupifying Medicines cauſing ſleep.

Nart, for Ne art: Art not. See Nad.

Narwe: Narrow. Mo. 935.

N'at, for Ne was: Was not. See N'ad.

N'at, for Ne wat: Knew not. Also, Not. Nat and Not are often printed for Naught, or Nought.

Natall: Belonging to ones birth. By natall Jovis fest, Tr. L. 3. 150. By the feast of natal Jupiter; who may be so called, for being invoked by Men on their Birth-day, as Juno by Women, who is therefore called Natalis Juno. Tibull.

Nath, for Ne hath: Hath not. See N'ad.

Nathleß: Nevertheless.

Nation, WB. 1068. seems to signify Kindred, Family, as Gens in Latin.

Naught, Nought: Not. No. 280.

Ne: Nor; Not; Never. Ne were; Were not, were it not.

Nebule: A cloud. Bal. Lad. 53.

Necce: A neece.

Necessaire: Necessary. Tr. L. 4. 1021.

Nede, Neede: Need, necessity; Business, affair. RR. 6174. For nede; Upon occasion. Ib. 1123. Must defend her nede; Must needs defend her. Mo. 3024. Nedis: Business, affairs, occasions. Nedis mote; Must needs. Must it be nedis; It must needs be. Test. L. 3. Nedis cost, Prol. 1479. Of necessity. Sp. Sk. If we read cast, instead of cost, the sense will be natural and easy:

—fast by was the day
That nedis cast he mote himself in bide;

i. e. It was near day, that he must needs cast, or contrive, how and where to hide himself

Nedefully, Nedely, Nedily: Necessarily, of necessity. WB. 968.

Nedirs: Adders, snakes, serpents. CL. 120. Instead of Adders, MS. Ch. hath Neddre, Sq. 1302. AS. Næððne, CB. Neidr, A snake.

Neigh, Neighin: To approach, to draw near. Test. RL. 148.

Neithyr nothir: Neither the one nor the other. LIV. 192.

Nelde: A needle. Mo. 2720.

Nemen, Nemene, Nempne, Neven: To name, to tell

Nempnid, Nempt: Named.

Nene: Noon.

Ner: Near. Ner bonde; Near hand, almost. PT. 474.

Nere: Near, nearer. Tr. L. 1. 449, 450. Nighest nere; The nearer you approach. RR. 2572. Never. Nere the nere, or (as MS. Ch.) Nevere the nere; Never the nearer. No. 742. In the oldest MSS. it is written nevere, and not nere, for Never, though often to be pronounced as one Syllable.

N'ere, for Ne were: Were not; were it not for. No. 1383.

Nerfe: A nerve, or sinew. Tr. L. 2. 642.

Nerthe: A Neat-heard; A shepherd. p. 156, 4.

Neshe: Nice, tender. CL. 1092. Nash is used in the same sense in some parts of England.

Nest: Next. Cr. 109.

Nete: Neat, black cattle, kine. Prol. 599.

Neitheleß, Neithirles, Ber. 672. Nevertheless, however.

Netherest: Nethermost, lowest. Boeth.

Nettle in, Dock out, Tr. L. 4. 461. p. 482, a. or, as we say now, In Dock, out Nettle, spoken of unconstant and fickle persons, chiefly in love.

Neven, Nevin: To name; Named. Tr. L. 1. 877.

Neverthelater, or Never the later: Never the less. Boeth. Test.

Neuene: A nephew. Hyp. 73. A grandson. Hyper. 98.

Newe: Now; Lately. No. 208. Anew, afresh. Of neme; Lately. But it befall of neme, Fr. 1959. or (as in MS. Ch.) But it be fallen neme; Unless it has otherwise happened lately. Neme and neme; Now and then. Tr. L. 3. 116. For the neme, Mo. 2866. al. of the neme, sc. fashion. Also, To renew. Tr. L. 3. 306. Newed: Grew fresh and new. Dr. Ch. 906.

Newsangell: Desirous of novelty. Mo. 1770. Newsangleneße: Love of novelty and change; Inconstancy. An. 142.

Newlyche: Newly.

Nexite: The last foregoing. Fa. L. 3. 685.

Nice: Foolish, simple, silly, ignorant; Rude. Fr. Niais. Nice fare; Silly actions, trifling. Leude and nice, No. 658, 946. Ignorant and foolish. Also, a neece. Ib. 2608.

Nicete, Nicite: Folly; Coyness; Simplicity. In Tr. L. 2. 1286. instead of nicete, Ca. reads nyce shame, i. e. Foolish bashfulness. Ib. 1500.

Nigardie: Niggardliness, stinginess. No. 2680.

Nigges: Niggards. Mo. 2697.

Nigh, Nighin: To approach. Tr. L. 2. 1555.

Nightertale, Prol. 97. By night. Sp. The night time.

Nightspell: A Prayer against the Night-mare. Sp. A Charm against Thieves. Gl. to Spenser's Sheph. Cal.

Nigon: A sordid, niggardly fellow.

N'ill, for Ne will: Will not. N'ilt, for Ne wilt: Wilt not.

Nim: To take. AS. Niman.

Ninthe: Ninth. Tr. L. 5. 1103.

Nis: Is not, for Ne is, as it is written in the old MSS. but to be pronounced either as one Syllable or two, as the Verse requires.

Nise, as Nice.

N'ist, for Ne wist: Knew not. Nistest, for Ne wistest; Kuowest not. Boeth.

Niirtale, CL. 999. as Nightertale.

Nixte: Next, nearest.

Noblay, Nobley, Nobles, Nobleß, Nobli, Nobly: Nobility; Pomp, splendour; Honour; Renown. Of great nobley; Very famous for their Enterprizes; Felix, Boeth.

Nockid: Notched. RR. 942.

Noie: Harm, hurt, trouble. RR. 3772. Noien: To annoy, to hurt. RR. 4416. Noisfull, Noions, RR. 2449. Hurtfull, noysome, troublesome. p. 148, b. See Annoy, Annoius.

Noisen: To make a noise, to boast. p. 378, b.

Nold, Nolde, for Ne wolde: Would not.

Noll: The noddle. Ber. 2524.

Nom, Nome, Nomen, Nomin, Nommen: Took; taken; from Nim, V.

Nombir, Nombre: Number.

Nompere: An umpire, an arbitrator. p. 481, b.

Non: None; No; Not. No. 627. Fr. Non. Non unright; No injustice, nothing wrong or amiss. Tr. L. 2. 453.

Noncertaine: An uncertainty. Test. L. 3.

Nonne: A Nun.

Non-obstant: Notwithstanding. Ber. 1733. Lat. Non obstante.

Non power, No power: Impotence, want of power. p. 498, b.

Noon: None; No. See Non.

Nore: Comfort, nourishing. Sp. In MR. 618. MS. Ch. hath it, thyin oore, H. 1. and al. thyin ore. See Ore.

Norice, Noris, or Nourice, Fr. A nurse; A foster-father; A cherisher, a nourisher. Cr. 171, 199. Also, for Norie, V.

Norie: A foster-child, a pupil; from the Fr. Nourri, Nourished, brought up.

Noriture: Breeding, education, nursing or bringing up.

Northrin: Northern. Cr. 17.

Nortirly, for Nortilry, MR. 859. or (as MS. Ch.) Nortory; Nursing, or bringing up.

Norture, as Norture.

N'oste, for Ne woste: Knowest not.

N'ot, N'ote, for Ne wot, Ne wote: Know not. Tr. L. 2. 35. But the whole Verse may be better read as in MS. Sp.

I note, me semish hit no wondir thing.

Notabilie: A remark, an observation, a notable thing.

Note, MR. 960. Business. Kilian. PM. AS. Not, note. By note, Tr. L. 4. 583. By St. Neote. Sk.

Notefull: Notable, remarkable.

Nother, Nothir: Nor, neither.

Notis: Nuts. RR. 1377.

Notte bede: A round head, with the hair cut short. Prol. 109.

Novelrie, Novellerie, Novilrie: Novelty.

Nought: Not; Nor; Nothing.

Noughtie, f. Naughty. Mo. 3037. Nasty. Com.

Nourice, for Nourie or Norie: A pupil; Alumnus, Boeth. See Norice.

Nouth, Prol. 464. Tr. L. 1. 986. Nouth, Ber. 3097. Nouth, Ib. 2478. Now.

Nowe and now: Now and then. Sq. 450.

Nowiber: Nor, neither.

Nowell:

Nowell: Christmases. Fr. Noel.
Noyances: Nuisances, troubles. Paris.
Noye, as Noie.
Noyance: A nuisance. Ch. Dr. 255.
Nuncupation: Naming. Test.
Nicite. See Nicete.
Nie: Nigh, near. Magd. 89.
Niffes, Fr. 496. Trifles; Trifling news. O cité de nêffes, is explained by Furet. Pitiful and despicable city.
Nyghiriale, CL. 1356. as Nyghiriale.
Nygromance, Ber. 2039. Nygromancy, PT. 339. for Necromancy: Divination by calling up Dead mens Ghosts.
Nys, as Nis.

O.

O Often signifies One. It is sometimes put for u in the beginning of a word, especially in PT. and Ber. as Oppon, Onknown, Onto, &c. for Upon, Unknown, Unto, &c.
Obay, No. 1615. should be Abaye, or (as MS. Ch. and ah) Abeye: Abide; To suffer for. See Abie.
Obediencer: Obedient, subject. Test. L. 3. Bound upon the obedience due to a Superiour.
Obeisance: Obedience. Tr. L. 3. 479. Fr. Obeissance. MS. Sp. reads it, Observance.
Obeisin: To obey; To make obeisance. CL. 738.
Obeising, Obeissing: Obedience; Obeying. RR. 3380. Obedient, humble. Di. 341.
Obombrid: Overshadowed. Bal. Lad. 102.
Observances: Observations. Fr. 2845.
Observe: To countenance, overlook. No. 3140.
Obstant. See Non-obstant.
Occasion: Opportunity. Words of occasion; Words of reproach used upon occasion. RL. 279.
Occian: The Ocean.
Occident: The West.
Occiser: A slayer, a murderer. La. 306. MS. Ch. reads it, Os a tazir. H.1. O Atazir. al. Occiser. al. occisifer.
Occupier: A possessor, an owner, a proprietor, p. 496, b.
Ocy, Ocy, CN. 124, 127, 135. The Nightingale's Note, alluding to the Lat. Occidere, To kill, to perish.
Oersbraw: Overthrown, overwhelmed. Ch. Dr. 1151.
Offendid: Hurt. Prol. 2396.
Offensoun: Offence. That never yet ne felt offensoun Of rasour ne of shere; That was never shaved, nor cut. Prol. 2418.
Offertorie: An Anthem sung in the time of Offering. Prol. 712. See Fr. Gl.
Offrende: Offerings. Mo. 2430. Fr. Offrands.
Offrin: To offer.
Ofier: Oftener.
Ofisthes: Oftentimes.
Oilvete, for Olive, Magd. 319.
Olibane, RL. 214. Olibanum, Frankincense.
Olifantes: Elephants. Boeth.
Oliueres, Oliueris: Olive-trees, RR. 1314, 1381. Fr. Olivier, an olive-tree.
Omer: The Poet Homer. Tr. L. 1. 46. Fa. L. 3. 376.
On: One. Prol. 2336.
Onbide: To abide, to continue. Test. L. 3.
Onde, RR. 148. Breath. Allo, Fury. Sp.
Ondo: Undone. PT. 341.
One: Alone. WB. 66. I mine one, Ch. Dr. 1019. I my self. One and one, Ch. Dr. 1785. One by one.
Onched, Onhed: Unity. Test.
Onerous: Burthensom, chargeable. RR. 5633. Fr. Oneroux.
Ones, Onis, Onys: Once.
Onid: Made one, united. Fr. 704. Oning: Uniting.
Onily: Only.
Oo, Oon, One. Were at oon: Were united, agreed. We ben at oon, RR. 5817. We are agreed. Thei fel as one, Tr. L. 3. 566. They agreed. Evir in oon; Continually. Prol. 1773. MS. Ch. reads it, Thei wepen everische one. Also, A Proclamation, an O Yes. Prol. 2535.

Osse: An host.
Opie: Opium. Prol. 1474.
Opinable: Ambiguous, disputable, apt to create different opinions. RL. 62.
Opinbede, WB. 645. Bareheaded.
Opposite: Opposite.
Oppress: To ravish. Fr. 2939, 2960, 2965. To suppress. Tr. L. 5. 398. where Ca. hath it, forgette ourre oppresse, i. e. forget the grief which oppresseth us. Oppression: A Rape, ravishment. Lus. 189.
Or: Before, ere; Or death, Fr. 1540. Before death; or (as MS. Ch.) till death. Instead of Or, Before, is generally printed Er in this Edition. Also, Over.
Oratory, Prol. 1907. Oratore, Cr. 120. Orature, Ib. 8. A Temple, a private Chappel, or any place wholly dedicated to Divine Worship, particularly to Prayer.
Ordain: To order, dispose. RR. 7069.
Ordal, Tr. L. 3. 1048. Ordeal, a kind of Purgation used in the Saxon times, and continued to the time of Henry the Third, of which there were Two sorts; one by Fire which Emma, the Mother of Edward the Confessor underwent, by passing over hot burning Culvers of Iron bare-foot; the other by Water. Concerning the methods used in both, see Kilian. in Maister-py-deel, and Spelm. and Somn. where the Forms are described at large. As to the Etymology of the Word, see Hick. Diff. Epist. p. 149.
Orde, Cl. 66. A point. Sp. Beginning. Orde and end, Mo. 746. Beginning and ending. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 70, 115.
Orderly: Orderly, in good order. Boeth.
Ordered, Orderit, [not Ordent, as it is printed, Ch. Dr. 1096.] Ordred: Ordained, in Holy orders.
Orders four, Prol. 210. The four Orders of Fryers, which were these, 1. Fryers Minors, or Gray Fryers, Franciscans. 2. Fryers Preachers, or Black Fryers, Dominicans. 3. Fryers Carmelites, or White Fryers. 4. Fryers Augustines. Sp.
Ordinable: Capable of being ordered. Test. L. 2.
Ordinance: Order, disposition, direction; Provision. Fr. 2449. Aray in ordinance, Ib. 1082. Set in order.
Ordour, for Ordure (as in MS. Ch.) p. 209. a. l. pen.
Ore, Gam. 277, 461. By Christie ore. MS. Ch. reads Goddie ore, Ib. 316, 637. It seems to have been a common Oath, By Ch—s or G—s Gore, or Nore, V.
Orewell, Prol. 279. A Sea-port in Essex. Sk.
Orfrays, RR. 562, 869. "(Anrifrisum) Frized cloth of Gold, made and used in England, both before and since the Conquest, worn both by the Clergy, and the Kings themselves, as may appear out of Math. Paris, where he speaks of the Ornaments sent by the Abbots of England to the Pope; and also by a Record in the Tower, where the King commands the Templars to deliver such Jewels, Garments and Ornaments as they had of his in keeping, among which he names "Dalmaticum velatum de Orefreis, that is, a Damask Garment guarded with Orfraies. Sp. Of old the Jackets or Coat Armors of the King's Guard were also termed Orfraie, because they were covered with Goldsmith's work. Blo.
Orfret, [not or fret] Cr. 163. Overspread. See Pret.
Orient: The East.
Origines upon the Mandelaine, LW. 428. The Lamentation of Mary Magdalen, taken out of Origen. See the Title of that Poem. p. 520.
Orison, Orisoun: A prayer. Fr. Oraison.
Orisont: The Horizon.
Orloge, as Horologe.
Orphelyn: An orphan. Boeth. Fr. Orphelin.
Orpiment: A soft yellow kind of Arsenick, like Brimstone, found very deep in the earth, commonly taken for Ratsbane. Blo. There are several Medicines Chymically prepared out of it.
Orwhelid: Overwhelmed, overcast. Cr. 401.
Ostrye: A lodging. Mo. 1110. See Estris.
Osker, Oshir, Ousher, Oushir: Or; Either; Other. Oshir-gate: Otherwise. RR. 2158.
Otherwised, p. 491, a. f. Falling out contrary to expectation.
Onche: A kind of Collar of Gold, or such like ornament, which Women did wear about their Necks: It is mentioned An. 24. H. 8. c. 13. and it is sometimes used used for a Bos of Button of Gold. Blo. Also, A wedge of gold. Sp. Sometimes it is taken for a Socket, wherein precious Stones are set.

Over, Ovir : Upper, uppermost. In Composition it denotes Excess. Ovirmoche ; Too much. Ovirmerily ; Too merrily. CL. 384, 406.

Overcome. See Ouircome.

Overisk, Prol. 292. Uppermost. MS. Ch. reads it, His over courtsey, i. e. His upper coat.

Overkerueth : Divideth, cutteth. Astr.

Overleide : f. Imposed upon. Mo. 23. MS. Ch. Overlad, which Lidg. uses for Overpowered. Fall of Princes. L. 2. Ch. 7. al. Overledde, Led away, abused. See Ovirlede.

Overlein : Lay'd over, covered. Test. L. 3.

Overlippe : The upper lip. Prol. 133.

Overlowe : Too low. Boeth.

Overte : Open. Fa. L. 2. 210. Fr. Ouvvert, fem. Ouvverte.

Overthinketh, p. 481, a. l. pen. f. Forthinketh : Grieveth. See Forthinke.

Overtthrowing, f. leg. Overtthrowin, p. 364, b. l. 51. Headlong ; Praceps.

Overthwart : Cross-ways, across. Prol. 1993. Over against. Tr. L. 3. 686. Squinting. Dr. Ch. 863. Upside down. Test. L. 3.

Overtimeliche : Unseasonable ; Importunus, p. 359, a.

Oughe : Oh ! A Note of Admiration ; Papa, p. 359, a.

Ought : Owed. Cl. 10. It behoves. No. 14. Any. Ought where : Any where.

Ovir. See Over.

Ovircome : Come or passed over. Tr. L. 4. 1069. Covered over. Magd. 129.

Ovirgo, RR. 3784. Ovirgone, Tr. L. 1. 847. To go or pass over, to pass away ; To overcome, to overpower. RR. 6821.

Ovirlede : To overload, oppress. Hyper. 194.

Ovirlive : To outlive. WB. 1260.

Ovirsprade, Tr. L. 2. 769. Ovirsprat, Ib. 767. Over-spread.

Ovirthwart, as Overtthwart.

Ounding : Waving. See Paling.

Oures, Bl. Kn. 422. It should be lesingoures, in one word.

Outcast : Vile, mean, base ; Abjectus, Boeth.

Outforthe : Outwardly. Test.

Outin : Out. Prol. 454. It is out, or out, in all the MSS. and Editions which I have consulted : Some read it, out of alle charite ; others, all out of charite.

Outrage : Hurt ; Affront ; Excess ; Luxury. Also, Outragious, excessive, extravagant. Bal. 555.

Outraie, Outrayen : To grow outrageous, to rave. Fr. 1663. Fr. Ourer. Also, To degenerate, p. 378, a. To overcome. Lidg.

Outrede : To give better advice. Prol. 2451.

Outren : To out-run. Prol. 2451.

Outfranght : Stretched out. RR. 1515.

Out-take : Except. RR. 948.

Outmategyng : Wandring, straying. p. 488, a.

Outmaile : An outcast, the refuse, off-scourings. Cr. 129. See Outweal. See Gl. V. in Wale.

Outwongen : Wrung or squeezed out. Test. L. 3.

Owande : Owing. p. 492, a.

Owe, Mo. 2485. Owin, Fl. 23. Ought ; To own.

Oweh, RL. 5. Owehe, p. 501, a. Ought.

Owber : Any where. Prol. 655.

Owndid, Tr. L. 4. 736. A Corruption in transcribing for Undaunt or Undee, Waving, flowing. Kyn. See Owndie. MS. Sp. hath it, her ornyd beere, i. e. her hair which was adorned, or dressed.

Owndie, Fa. L. 3. 296. Waving ; from the Fr. Ondoyer, To wave to and fro, or Ondé, Waving.

Owthr. See Other.

Oxenford, Oxenforth : Oxford. The Clerk of Oxenford : The Oxford-Scholar.

Oyse, Fa. L. 3. 838. Sk. will have it to be the River Isis, by Oxford, which was commonly called Ouse : But there are other Rivers of that name, particularly the Oyse in Picardy, which falls into the Seine, not many leagues from Paris.

P.

Paa : To pass ; A pace or step. Tr. L. 3. 282. Instead of gone or paas, Ca. hath, go a paas ; Sir a step, which is better. Paas two ; The space of two paces. CMV. 121.

Pace : To pass, go, proceed : To surpass.

Paie : Content, satisfaction. RR. 5938. Also, To content, satisfy. Ib. 3599. Paie : Contented, satisfied. Ch. Dr. 426.

Paine : Endeavour. Fr. 2276. Fr. Peine. Also, To endeavour.

Paine de maine, No. 3234. Whitebread. Sp. See Sk.

Painems, as Paynims.

Paire : Damage, hurt. RR. 6103. To impair.

Palasins, RR. 6862. Ladies palasins ; Ladies of Honour attending a Court. Perhaps it should be read Palatines.

Palastre, Bal. Lad. 69. Put in palastre : Brought to a combat, or dispute ; from the Lat. Palestra, The place where Games or Exercises were performed.

Palasby, Prol. 65. It seems (says Sk.) to be some Country in Asia, perhaps Palestine ; Palatibia in Anatolia. Sp.

Palays, as Paleis.

Pale, Fa. L. 3. 750. A spangle. Sk. A Robe of State. Sp. See Pall.

Paleis : A Palace. Also, a Fortification, a fortified place ; Vallum, Boeth.

Palethe : Maketh pale. Boeth. L. 2.

Paleys, as Paleis.

Paling, p. 198, a. seems to be an ornament used upon Clothes, as Lace, &c. layd on lengthwise, as Barring, that layd on cross-ways, and Ounding, that layd on waving. They are all Terms used in Heraldry in the like sense.

Pall, Mo. 2046. A Robe belonging properly to Archbishops, and must be had new for every Archbishop from Rome, at a dear rate. By their superstitious order it should be made of the Wool of those two Lambs, which being on St. Agne's day offered upon the High Altar in St. Peter's Church, are after the hallowing of them committed to the Subdeacons of that Church, and kept by them in a pasture appointed. The whole Garment is not made of that Wool, but only that Lift, or Plate of it, which falls down before and behind, and compasses the Neck about. Com. It is described more at large in Fr. Gl. in Pallium.

Palladion : The Image of Pallas at Troy. Tr. L. 1. 161.

Palleis : A Palace.

Pallid : Grown pale with age. No. 2610.

Palmerie, Mo. 361. Palmyra, a City of Syria, on the borders of Arabia Deserta, supposed by some to be Tadmor in the Wilderness, built by King Solomon. It is famous for having been the Seat of the Empire of Zenobia.

Palmer, Prol. 13. Pilgrims that visited holy places ; so called from a Staff or Boughs of Palm they were wont to carry, especially such as had visited the Holy places at Jerusalem. Fr. Gl. " A Pilgrim and a Palmer differed thus ; a Pilgrim had some dwelling place, a Palmer had none ; the Pilgrim travelled to some certain place, the Palmer to all, and not to any one in particular ; the Pilgrim must go at his own charge, the Palmer must profess wilfull poverty ; the Pilgrim might give over his profession, the Palmer must be constant. Blo.

Palomown : Palamon. Bl. Kn. 369.

Palse : The Pally. Test.

Pampired : Pamper'd up. CL. 177.

Pan : The Crown of the head. Mo. 64.

Panier, Panir, RL. 226. A sort of net. Fr. Pantier.

Paniers, RR. 1621. Nets. Panier : A Pitfall. Sp.

Panymes, as Paynims.

Papelarde, Fr. A Hypocrite, a false Zealot. RR. 7233.

Papelardie : Hypocrisy, dissimulation. Ib. 415, 6796.

Papere : Pepper. No. 783.

Par : For. Par company ; For company. MR. 731. By. Par caas ; By chance.

Parablis : Parables ; The Proverbs of Solomon. RR. 6530.

Parage : Birth, parentage. WB. 250. It properly signifies

- fies High birth; whence Disparage, To lessen one's birth, &c. But it is used indifferently; for Lidgate hath Low parage, as well as High parage. Fall of Princes, L. 1. C. 13. L. 2. C. 16. See Gl. V.
- Paraments*: Ornaments, rich furniture; Robes of State. Di. 181. Fr. Paraments.
- Paramour*: A Lover; A Gallant, or Mistress.
- Paraventure*, Peraunter, Dr. Ch. 556. Perhaps, peradventure. Where it is printed paradventure, peradventure, peravinture, it is generally to be read peraventure, as it is commonly written in the MSS.
- Par caas*: See Par and Caas.
- Parca* suffrin thre, Tr. L. 5. 3. The three Sisters, called Parca, Fates or Destinies.
- Parchemine*, Fr. Parchment; Paper. Boeth.
- Parcell*: A parcel, a part; In part, partly.
- Parde* (Fr. Par Dieu) By God. It is most commonly used (as other Oaths generally are) as merely Expletive. MS. Sp. hath By God, instead of it in Tr. L. 2. 183, and they are indifferently used in other places in different Copies and MSS.
- Pardieux*, Tr. L. 2. 759. By the Gods: But it is Parde in MS. Sp. and Ca. hath pardieux, lb. 1319.
- Pardonere*: One that sells Pardons, or Indulgences.
- Pardurable*: Everlasting. See Perdurable.
- Parel*, Ber. 2325. The Furniture, or Rigging of Ships. Fr. Apparax.
- Parentele*: Kindred. p. 209, a.
- Parentyne*: Parentage; Good birth. Ber. 109.
- Parfaic*, Parfay, Parfei: By my faith. RR. 6228.
- Paril*: Peril, danger. CMAP. 108.
- Parishens*, (so it should be read in Prol. 484. according to the general current of the MSS) Parishioners. It often occurs in PP. Some printed Editions read it as it is in this.
- Parlirs*: Parlours. AL. 162.
- Parodye*: So it is in Tr. L. 5. 1547. in MS. Sp. and the old Editions instead of jeopardie. It is Parady in Lidg. Fall of Princes. L. 1. C. 4.
- Till their Parady say to them checkmate.
- It seems to mean Fate, Destiny.
- Parrill*: Apparel. WB. 561.
- Partable*; Partaking; A partaker, an accomplice.
- Parten*, Parin: To partake, to share. LW. 465.
- Participant*: Partaking. Cr. 289.
- Partie*, Fr. A part. Test. L. 2. See Party.
- Partineris*: Partners. Ber. 2441.
- Partise*: Parts. In some partise: In some part, degree, or measure. BD. 746.
- Partivere*, RR. 4796. Sk. takes it to be a Corruption of Parcere, Fr. Par coeur, By heart, which is confirmed by the next Verse, Mine herte, &c. and lb. 4800. Thas all by herte, &c. which is wrong printed, all mine herte.
- Partles*: Without a share; Void of; Expers, p. 388, b.
- Party*: A part; Partly; side, course. p. 153, a. In partie, RR. 5338. In part. Fr. En parti.
- Parva*, Fr. Contracted from Paradis. Παράδεισος, Τόπος ἐν ᾧ μενομένη. Hesych. Locus porticibus & deambulatoriis circumdatus; A Portico, or Court, before a Church. Fr. Gl. in Paradisus. The place before the Church of Notre dame at Paris, called Parvis, RR. 7158. was anciently called Paradis. Men. Fr. in Parvis. Spalm. says in Parva, &c. that our Lawyers used formerly to walk in such a place to meet their Clients, and not for Law-Exercises, as Blo. and others write; being perhaps led into that mistake by that passage, Prol. 312. and others, considering the Context more than the Sense of the word Pervise, explain it a Barr.
- Passid*: Surpassed, excelled. Prol. 450. A passing man; An extraordinary person. No. 625.
- Pattre*, RR. 6794. Patrin, lb. 7195. To pray, to say a Paier noster.
- Pavade*: A dagger. MR. 852.
- Pawmis*: The palms of the hands. Tr. L. 3. 1120.
- Paufacion*: A pause; Rest. Bal. Lad. 61.
- Pax*, p. 197, b. It was an ancient Custom at the celebration of Mass, that when the Priest pronounced these words, Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum, i. e. The peace of the Lord be always with you, both Clergy and People kissed one another, which was called Osculum Pacis, The Kiss of Peace: But now that Custom being abrogated, the Deacons, or Subdeacons, at the pronouncing of those words, present to the Clergy and People standing, a certain Image to be kissed, which is called the Pax. See Fr. Gl. in Osculum Pacis.
- Pay*: Satisfaction, content. RR. 1721. AL. 255. PT. 582. See Apay.
- Paynims*: Pagans, Heathens.
- Payssaunce*: Pausing, or stopping. Ch. Dr. 1673.
- Paytrell*: The Breastplate of a Horse-Furniture. No. 575. Fr. Poitral, from the Lat. Pectorale.
- Pece*, Pees: Peace.
- Pecis*: Pieces.
- Petre*, as Perre.
- Peice*, Peisen, Peysen: To poize, to weigh. Fr. Peser.
- Peire*: To impair, disparage; from the Lat. Pejorare. Yet [L. 7i, i. e. It] peirish not your worship nor your fame; It is no disparagement to your honour, nor reputation, BD. 228.
- Peitrell*, as Paytrell.
- Pell*, Fa. L. 3. 220. A Houfe, a cell. Sp. and Sk. f. A Palace.
- Pellis*: A pellet, a bullet, a ball. Fa. L. 3. 553.
- Pelour*, Ber. 3194. Pelure, Test. L. 2. Furr.
- Penaunce*: Penance; Repentance.
- Pendaunts*: Robes hanging down. Mo. 2879.
- Pende*, Mo. 2590. To pen or shut up. Com. f. Hang up; as Pent, lb. 2897. Hang down. Fr. Pendre.
- Pene*, CCr. 17. A pin. The countre of Pene; The Country of the Peni, or the Carthaginians. p. 375, b.
- Penible*: Painfull; Full of aches and pains. Fr. 582.
- Penitencer*, p. 211, b. It seems there to signify in general, A Confessor, a Priest that enjoyes Penance; but it signifies properly a Dignitary in Cathedral Churches, who has power to absolve in Cases reserved to the Bishop.
- Penitens*: Penance. p. 206, b.
- Pennir*: A pen, a pencil. Sq. 1395.
- Pens*: Pence; Money.
- Pensell*, RR. 6280. A Dim. of Penon, A Pendant.
- Pensfihede*: Pensiveness, thoughtfulness. Bl. Kn. 102.
- Pensis*, AL. 62. The Paunsie, a Plant; Viola tricolor. Fr. Pensée.
- Pent*: See Pende.
- Peplishe appetite*, Tr. L. 4. 1677. A vulgar, or mean, taste or desire.
- Peraventure*, Tr. L. 1. 669. The Verse is better read in MS. Sp. thus;
- And yet peraventure can I redin the.
- See Paraventure.
- Peraunter*. See Paraventure.
- Percase*, as Par caas. See Par.
- Perce*: To pierce. Percedde, Percid: Pierced.
- Perce*: Persia. Perciens: Persians. Mo. 362.
- Percel*: A part, a parcel; Partly, in part. Bl. Kn. 225.
- Percever*: To persevere, continue.
- Perchemen*, Ber. 788. for Prechement, V.
- Perchemene*, Perchemine: Parchment.
- Perde*, Fa. L. 2. 332. as Parde.
- Perdurable*: Very durable, perpetual; Everlasting, eternal; Disturnus, perpetuus, Boeth. Perdurabilite: A long duration; Immortality.
- Pere*: A Peer; A match, a fellow, an equal. Sq. 697. To appear. CL. 55. Perelesse: Matchless. Bl. Kn. 347.
- Peregal*: Equal. Tr. L. 5. 840.
- Peregrine*: Strange. Sq. 448.
- Perfetiobe*: Perfectly. Boeth.
- Perfite*: Perfect.
- Perie*, Prol. 2928. Perrie, MS. Ch. Precious Stones; Jewells. Fr. Pierres.
- Perienet*: A young Pear-tree. Sk.
- Permegal*: An equal. Mo. 2070.
- Permutacion*: A change. Adagd. 60.
- Pernaso*: Mount Parnassus.
- Perpetualtie*: Perpetuity; Perpetual duration. Test.
- Perre*, Perrey: Precious Stones. In gold and perrey wright, Di. 276. Covered with Gold and Jewels; unless it should be rather read perrerie, instead of perrey wright. See Perie.
- Persaunt*: Piercing. RR. 2809. Fr. Persant.
- Perse*, Prol. 441. Sky-colour. Sp. Fr. Pers, Blewish-gray. See Fr. Gl. in Persue.
- Persele*, as Percel.

- Perfeyte*: Perceived. Ber. 3051.
Perfomer, p. 492, b. A Parson; one possessed of Ecclesiastical preferment, Personā, personar. Lat. Barb.
Perte, p. 511, a: 516, b. f. Corrupted for pure, or perfite.
Pertelote: A fictitious name of a Hen in the Tale of the Nonne's Priest. See Gl. V.
Pertinacie: Stiffness, stubbornness, obstinacy. Test. L. 2.
Perturb, Perturbin: To disturb, to trouble, to vex. Perturbing: Disturbing, vexation.
Pervinke: A periwinkle. RR. 903.
Pervise, Prol. 312. See Parvis.
Pery: A pear-tree.
Peje: Peace. RR. 4703. Also, To appease.
Pesen: Pitch. Cl. 69.
Pesible: Peaceable, calm, easy, quiet. RR. 7413. Fr. Paissible.
Pete: Pity. Ber. 1492.
Petous: Pitifull, miserable, wretched. Petously. See Pitously: So MS. Sp. hath it, Tr. L. 4. 1248.
Peynus: Pains. Peynous: Painfull. Peynous ordinance; Orders enforced with great penalties. Ber. 1875.
Phane: A fane, or vane, a weathercock.
Phonessis, Fa. L. 3. 171. for Pythonesse; from the Lat. Pythoniassa, A woman possessed with a Python, or prophesying spirit.
Phi, RR. 5739. The Poet plays upon the first syllable of Phisicke, and Phisicien, both beginning with Phi, a Note of Abhorrence; and from thence pleasantly infers the folly of trusting in them.
Pie: A map-pye; A prating, tattling gossip. Tr. L. 3. 528. Fa. L. 2. 195.
Piement, as Piment.
Pierre, as Perre.
Piggesnye: A word of fondness, as my duck, my honey. RR. 257. From the AS. Piga, Puellula, A little maid. Sk.
Pight: Struck; Peaked; Picked. Sq. 438. Pitched his habitation, dwelt. No. 2979. Threw. Pight him on the pomell of his bede, Prol. 2691. Pitched, or threw him on the crown of his head. Undir pight; Supported, bore or born up. He dronk, and well his girdle undir pight; He stuffed himself with Liquor so, as to fill up his girdle. La. 790.
Pik, Pike: To pitch, or rather To pitch upon; To pick out. Tr. L. 4. 1274. But MS. Ch. instead of pik reads steke, i. e. stick. Also, To peep. Tr. L. 3. 60. To pick; To take away by stealth. Phyl. 74.
Pikis: Prickles, sharp points, or pikes. Pikis on ther shone, Mo. 2870. Shoes with long sharp Toes turning upwards, peaked like Scates; which in another place are called Pikid shoes.
Pilche, Bal. 166. A Furr gown. AS. Pylce. See Gl. V.
Pilere: A pillar. Dr. Ch. 739.
Pilgrim. See Palmer.
Pilid: Peeled; Made bald. A pilid [al. pelid] berde; A thin beard. Prol. 629. Fr. Peler, To make bald.
Pill: To pillage, to plunder. Fr. 98. Di. 337. Fr. Piller.
Pillid skull: A bald pate. MR. 1198. See Pilid.
Pillir: A Pillar; Fit for making Pillars or Columns of. AF. 177. Pilliris: Pillars. Bal. 601.
Pillours, Mo. 2046. A Pillor is one of the Ensigns, or Marks, which is usually carried before Cardinals, to signify, that they forsooth are Pillars of the Church. Com. It rather signifies Furred robes, as Pelour and Pelure, V.
Pillours: Pillagers, plunderers. Prol. 1009. See Pill.
Piment, MR. 270. RR. 602. A Drink made of wine, honey, and spices. See Boeth. p. 371, a. Thet ne could not medell the yeste of Bacchus to the clere bonie, that is to saine, they could make ne piement or clarre; i. e. They could not mix wine with clarified honey, and therefore could not make Piement, or clarified wine.
Pinaunt: A starveling, that pines away for hunger. Mo. 46. But it should rather be there read penaunt (as MS. Ch. H. 1. Ca. and Py.) One that doth penance.
Pinchin, Prol. 328. To jeer, or banter. Fr. Pincer.
Pinde, Mo. 2421. Tormented, plagued, afflicted, put to pain; Pined away, starved.
Pine, Mo. 1174. Pinin, RR. 3511. To put to pain, to torment, to put to the torture. Pine: Pain.
Pipe with an yvelese, p. 516, a. A Proverbial Expression of the same signification as Blow the bukis borne, MR. 297. See Bukis borne. Lilg. expresses the same by Blome in an borne, and pipe in a rede. Story of Thebes, Part. II.
Pirate: Perry. CG. 30.
Pire: To peer about.
Pirrie, Mo. 2099. See Perie.
Piscine, Bal. Lad. 127. A pond, a fish-pool. See Probatisse.
Pistill, Pistle, Fr. 2175. An epistle. Rownid a pistill; Whispered a secret. WB. 1021.
Pitance, Pitence, Fr. Pitance, A Monk's Mels, Commons, or Allowance for a Meal.
Pith: Vigour. WB. 475.
Pitously: Pitifully.
Plages, p. 440, b. Plagus: Climates, Regions. Lat. Plaga. Plagus of the North, La. 544. The Regions of the North; if not rather to be read (as in MS. Ch.) The people of the north.
Plaie, as Play.
Plaine: To explain, declare. Tr. L. 5. 1229. To complain. Also, Perfect; Full. Tr. L. 5. 1817. Pleyme, MS. Sp. Fr. Plein, Full. In No. 2567. it is put for Playing, V.
Plainliche: Plainly. Tr. L. 2. 272.
Plaintis: Complaints.
Plaisted: Pleated, folded. Many plaisted: Manifest. Test. p. 488, b.
Plat, Fr. Flat, plain. He goth forth plat, Mo. 1952. He goes forth directly, without any stay, or stop. Rather cause of plat than edge, Tr. L. 4. 927. Rather cause of ease than grief. Sp. It is flat in MS. Sp. and Ca.
Platis: Plates of Armour. Prol. 2123.
Play, Playe, Playin: To take ones pleasure; To divert one's self. Playe a pilgrimage, No. 2741, 2742. [pleye, MS. Ch. H. 1. Ca. 1, 2. and Py. 1. f. ply] Go on pilgrimage. Playing, RR. 598. Diversion, pleasure; Jesting, a jest. In playe, Fr. 2051. In jest.
Ple: A Plea, a dispute, debate. AF. 485. Plees: Pleas, Pleadings, Law Suits, Tryals at Law. AF. 101.
Pleasant: Pleasing. p. 157, b.
Pleide: Played.
Pleinte: Complaint.
Plenere: Full, perfect, compleat. Hyp. 240. Fr. Plenière, fem.
Plentivous, Plentuous: Plenteous, plentiful. Ber. 764. Boeth.
Plesance: Pleasure; Pleasantness.
Plesing, p. 206, b. l. 33. The place is scarce intelligible as it is printed. MS. Ch. reads it thus — chirche. And playnly and generally, &c.
Plete: To implead, to sue at Law. Tr. L. 2. 1468. Ber. 3104.
Pley, as Play.
Pleyne, Pleyin: To complain.
Plight, (from Pluck) Plucked. RR. 1745. Tr. L. 2. 1120. Pulled. La. 15.
Plight my troth: Plighted my troth. Tr. L. 4. 1610.
Plie: To plait, to fold up. To some and plie; To seal and fold. Tr. L. 2. 1204. See Some.
Plies: Plaits, foldings. Test.
Pliid: Turned in her mind, or thoughts. Tr. L. 2. 697.
Plumtuous, p. 360, b. for Plentuous, V. Lat. Fertilis.
Plungi: Rainy, bringing or causing rain; Imbrajer, p. 374, b.
Point, Pointe: To appoint. Bal. 518. A point. In good pointe; In good case, or condition. Prol. 200. At the point to brest, Tr. L. 4. 1638. In point for to brest, RR. 3186. Ready to burst. See Magd. 189. And here a point, No. 1501. Here I conclude, make a full stop. That cannot set his pointle double; That hath not two strings to his bow. BD. 524.
Pointell, Pointell: A Pencil, a writing pen; Stylus, Boeth. p. 359.
Pointen: To prick with a point. RR. 1058.
Point devise, RR. 1215. The utmost exactness. Fr. A points devisez; i. e. Secundum puncta multo cum studio designata. Sk.
Poise mater: Poetical Compositions. p. 359, a.
Polive: A pully. Sq. 204.
Poll: The head. Ber. 2525.

Pomelles of gold : Balls of gold. AL. 479.
Pomelly grey, Prol. 618. Pomily grise : Dapple-grey. Fr.
Gris pommelé.
Pomill : The pommel of a saddle, the hilt of a sword;
 Any ball or round thing; The head, or top of the head. Prol. 2691.
Pomperry, Ber. 1934. f. Pompous appearance, or plausible pretension.
Popelere : A poplar-tree.
Popelot : A puppet, or young wench. Sk.
Popere, MR. 823. A bodkin. Sp. and Sk.
Popet : A puppet. No. 3210.
Poppingay : A parrot. Sq. 1840. See Sk. on Poppinjay.
Popped : Dressed up like a puppet. Ne popped here, RR.
 1019. Ne hair over-nicely dressed. See Sk.
Poraille, Porayle : Poor, mean people. Prol. 247.
Porismes (so it should be read, p. 381, b. l. 46. as well as l. 61.) Corollaries, Theorems deduced from Propositions demonstrated before. Gr. Πορίσματα.
Portatife : Portable. Afr.
Porte : Carriage, behaviour. Meke of port : Affable, complaisant. Prol. 69. Stout of port ; Haughty, disdainfull. RR. 4015.
Porthes : Parts. Boeth.
Porthose, No. 2643. A kind of Service-Book, called Por-trets by Spenser, Portoos by Blo. who says it was an ancient name for a Breviary. Sommer in his Rom.
Ports and Forts, p. 6. mentions a Legacy left to Rich-borough Chappel of one Portuys printed, with a Mas- book, &c. See Fr. Gl. in Portiforium.
Portraie, Prol. 96. Portrey : To paint, to draw a picture.
Portraitour ; A painter of Portraits.
Portrayed, for Portrayed, RR. 140. See Portraie.
Portrid : Portrayed. Mo. 2077.
Posse, Mo. 1639. A Rheum, or humour, which falls into the nose, stopping the nostrils, and hindering the voice.
Blo. The same with Catarre. Also, To suppose. Tr.
L. 3. 572.
Poshid, RR. 4625. Possid, Ib. 4479. Pushed, thrust, tof-sed. Fr. Pouffer, To push.
Possid, as Poshid.
Posse : Power. Perhaps contracted from the Lat. Potes-
tas. Is full of grete posse, RR. 2095. Hath an extraordinary vertue in it. See Ib. 6484, 6533, 6957, 7679.
Potsume : An impostume. p. 376, b. See Boche.
Potent : A crutch. RR. 368, 7417. Fr. Potence.
Potestate, Fr. 753. The chief Magistrate, or Judge of a Place. It. Podestà, from the Lat. Potestas, which is used in the same sense, Juv. Sat. X.
*An Fidenarum Gabiorumq; esse potestas
 Et de mensurâ jus dicere—*
Potbequeres, Potiquares : Apothecaries.
Pouder marchants, Prol. 383. Powders (says Sp.) whereof Gingerbread is made. Sk. disapproves this Explication, but gives none of his own.
Poudre, Fr. Dust, powder. Fa. L. 2. 28.
Pouer, Pouir : Poor. Poverly : Poorly.
Pouert, Poverie : Poverty. Also, Poor. Fr. 1262. if not rather to be read (as in MS. Ch.) Povre, there and Ib.
 1925. Glad poverie ; Poverty with content. See a noble Description of it in Lidg. Fall of Princes. L. 1.
C. 1.
Poulce : The pulse. Tr. L. 3. 1120.
Pouls windows, MR. 210. The Windows of St. Paul's Church, London. See Decapld.
Pounced : Cut, punched. See Gl. V.
Pouped : Made a popping, or hooping noise with a horn.
Mo. 1514.
Powde : Poured. RR. 1148.
Poure : To pore upon. RR. 1640. Tr. L. 2. 1708.
Pourse : A purse.
Poursue : To pursue.
Powdiring : Embroidery, or rather Ermine-spots. AL.
 530.
Poyse : Poetry. Ber. 1930.
Praise : To praise, value.
Praktike : Practice, customs, usage. WB. 187.
Preasin on : To preis forward. Tr. L. 5. 1011.
Prece, Sc. 222. Praise; A preis, a croud. Put in prece, prece or prese ; To set ones self forward ; To endeavour, attempt, undertake. AF. 602.

Precelling : Pre-eminence, advantage. Pr. RL. 31.
Preceen, perhaps for Perceen : To pierce, penetrate. Boeth.
L. 2.
Prechement, Fr. Preaching, a Sermon. Ber. 531.
Precious : Precise, over-nice. WB. 148. Fr. Precieux.
Predestine : Predestination. Tr. L. 4. 966.
Predication : Preaching, a Sermon.
Prees, Preise, Ch. Dr. 267. A preis, a crowd. See Prece!
Prese : A proof.
Presest : The chief Magistrate of a Place.
Preide : Prayed, entreated.
Preise. See Praise and Prece. Is not so preise ; Is of no value. RR. 4476.
Prentise : An apprentice. No. 2808. These three Verses,
No. 2807, 2808, and 2809. are thus in MS. Ch.
*Three morwen com, and thee Marchaunty ridyht
 To Flandris wardes, his prentys wel him gidyht
 Untill he come to Bruggis meryly.*
In RR. 687. A prentise, should be read aprentise in one word, i. e. Apprentices, novices, learners. Were not aprentise ; Were not to learn.
Prentishode : Apprenticeship.
Prese, Tr. L. 4. 1473. To praise. Also, A preis, a crowd ; Price, value, esteem ; To preis. Prese to bond,
RR. 4194. To come near. See Prece.
Presence, for Prescience, Tell. L. 3.
Present : Presence. In present ; Just then. RR. 1191. In Isopis present ; In the presence of Isope. Ber. 2062.
Presentarie : Present ; Presentarius, p. 403, b.
Presin : To preis, to crowd.
Prest : Ready. Tr. L. 2. 785. Fr. Prest.
Preterit, Preteritte : Past. RR. 5011. Preteristes : Times past. p. 402, &
Preve : To prove ; Proof. Tr. L. 1. 470 : L. 3. 1004. Preveth, for Repreveth, p. 154, a. l. 68.
Price, for Prise, Phyl. 141. Premium, p. 390, a.
Prick : A point. p. 372, b. A sting. p. 337, b. Fa. L. 2.
 399. To afflict, torment. Fr. 2059. To ride hard. RR.
 2314. Pricking : Hard riding. Prol. 191.
Prie : To pray, to entreat. Fr. Priet.
Prikasoure, Prol. 189. A hard rider. Sk.
Prikid : Rode hard.
Prill and poincten, RR. 1058. Gore and strike. q. d. Prickle and poincen. Sk.
Prime, Tr. L. 2. 1095. "Our Ancestors (says Kyn.) divided
 "their morning Devotions into two spaces, 1st. From Six
 "to Nine in the morning, which was called Spatium
 "Orationum primarum: 2. From Nine to Twelve, which "was called Spatium Orationum Novarum. And hence we "have our word Noon. Prime large, Sq. 380. Late in the morning, towards nine a clock. At prime temps, RR.
 3373. The first time, at first. Of Ver the prime, Tr.
L. 1. 157. The beginning, or perfection, of the spring.
At prime face, Tr. L. 3. 921. p. 485, b. At first view, at first sight. Prime temps, RR. 4747. Spring. Fr.
Primemps.
Princes : A Princess. Bal. 589.
Printishode : Apprenticeship. MR. 1292.
Pris, Prise : Praise. Tr. L. 2. 181, 376.
Prise : Price ; Value, esteem. In prise upborn, Tr. L. 1.
 376. (for so it should be read ; In pryct up born, Ca.)
Valued, esteemed.
Prisonment : Imprisonment. Test.
Prived : Proved. Test.
Privy and apert, WB. 1114. In publick and private. Al-vy man, Fr. 1548. A Confident, a person employed in secret affairs.
Probacy : Proof by witnesses. Ber. 1861. It is called Probat Law, Ib. 1335.
Probatise piscine, Bal. Lad. 127. or rather Probatike piscine,
 i. e. The Sheep's pool, or pond ; which Blo. says was a Pond at Jerusalem, where those Sheep were washed, that were by the Law to be sacrificed, otherwise called,
 the Pool of Bethesda. The Poet here plainly alludes to John V. 2. where instead of ἐν τῇ πρὸς βοῦν κολυμβήθρᾳ
 a Pool in the Sheep-market, or at the Sheep-gate, [See Neb. III. 1. and XII. 39.] some Copies read πρὸς βοῦν κολυμβήθρᾳ ; and so the Vulg. Lat. translates it, Est autem Jerosolymis Probatica piscina ; There is at Jerusa- lem a Sheep-pond.

Probat

Probat law. See Probac.

Processe: A harangue, a long discourse. Bl. Kn. 127.

Procurator, Mo. 2673. A Proctor, or Farmer, employed by the Clergy to gather in their Tithes and other Duties. Com.

Profession, RR. 4910. The solemn and entire Dedication which a religious person makes of himself by a Triple Vow of Obedience, Chastity and Poverty.

Probeme: A Proem, or Preface. Fr. 1073.

Proineth, Pruneth: A Term in Falconry; They say, a Hawk pruneth, or proineth, when she picketh her self. In Sq. 1527. it is applied to a person that is very nice in dressing.

Prolle: To look out; properly in order to pilfer. No. 1433.

Promesse, Fr. A promise. BD. 39.

Propine: To drink to one; To give one drink. Bal. Lad. 52.

Propinquit: Kindred, relation, alliance. Test.

Proposid: Designed. Ber. 1988.

Prosses: Process, proceeding. BD. 848.

Provable: Probable; To be proved, capable of being proved. RR. 5414.

Prove: Proof. Phyl. 1.

Provende, RR. 6931. It is properly a Prebend: But it seems here to signify any Preferment, or Provision, in general.

Provendre: A Prebendary. p. 492, b.

Proverbe, Tr. L. 3. 294. To speak in Proverbs; To deliver as a Proverb. But Ca. reads the Verse thus;

Have wryte or thys, as yit men teche us yonge.

Provostry: The Office or Dignity of a Provost; Præfectura, p. 377, a.

Prowe: Honour; Profit, benefit, advantage. No. 1814. Mo. 1065. RR. 5806. Tr. L. 1. 334.

Prowesse: Valour; Goodness, vertue, honesty, integrity; Probitas. p. 389, a.

Pruce; Prussia. Pro. 53. Also, A Prussian.

Pruise: Prussia. Dr. Ch. 1025.

Psalter: The Psalter, or Psalms of David. p. 507, a.

Pucell: A virgin, or maid. Bal. Lad. 54. Fr. Pucelle.

Puella and Rubens, Pro. 2047. "The names of two figures in Geomancy, representing two Constellations in Heaven: Puella signifieth Mars Retrograde, and "Rubens, Mars Direct. Sp.

Fulchritude: Beauty. CL. 613.

Pullaile: Fowl, poultry. RR. 7094.

Pullid hen, Pro. 177. He gave not of the text a pullid hen; A Proverbial expression signifying, He valued it not a straw, a pin, &c.

Punice: To punish. RR. 7187.

Puppe: The Pope. Hen. 383.

Pur: Pure. PT. 500. Purid: Purified. Bal. Lad. 81.

Purchase, Purchase, Purchase: To procure, obtain, attain; To gain or engage one; To provide. Tr. L. 2. 1125. comp. with lb. 1160. Also, Buying, paying dear for.

Purfil, AL. 87, 524. Purfile: A guard, border, or fringe about a garment. Fr. Purfile. Purfilid: Fringed. Pro. 193.

Purpose: A discourse. Fr. Propos. Instead of the purpose, Tr. L. 2. 897. Ca. hath that purpose, which is the true Reading.

Purple: Purple.

Purprise: An enclosure. RR. 3987. Fr. Pourpris. The whole compass of a place.

Purtrings: Paintings, Drawing, Pourtraitures.

Purture: Paintings, Drawings. Pro. 1970. In former Editions it is Purgatory.

Purwayid, Purveyed. Pre-ordained. Tr. L. 4. 1009. Provided.

Purvie, Tr. L. 2. 504. Purveigh, p. 482, b. To provide, prepare.

Purveable: Carefull, provident. Boeth. p. 375, b.

Purveance, Purveighaunce, Purveyance: Providence, foresight; Provision.

Purveid, WB. 591. Purveighed, Boeth. Provided.

Purvyde, Bl. Kn. 497. See Purwayid.

Pusell, as Pucell.

Putaigne: A whore. Ber. 543. Fr. Putain. It should rather be read Putage, Whoring. See Fr. Gl. in Putagium.

Putours: Whoremongers.

Putre, Mo. 2227. Patrie, p. 208, b. Whoredom.

Putrocks, Mo. 3268. Bitterns, Kites. Sk.

Pyes. See Pie.

Pynande: Painfull. Test.

Byne, as Pine.

Pyrid soft and powrid, PT. 149. Peer'd, looked hard and pored.

Pry: A pear-tree. Ber. 583.

Pythoneß: A witch. Fr. 246. See Phetoneßis.

Q.

Quad, Quade: Bad. Kilian. Quæd. Sothe play; quade play, MR. 1249. A true jest is a bad jest, or, as we say, No jest like a true jest. Quad yere, No. 2946. MS. Ch. hath it;

God yeve this Monk a thousand last of quad yere.

A Curse; f. May this Monk have very many unhappy years.

Quainte: Strange, odd; Neat, nice. See Queint, &c.

Quaire, Bl. Kn. 675. A quire paper; A little book, or Pamphlet.

Quakk, MR. 1044. The inarticulate sound which one makes at any hard labour. See Gl. V. in Quaikk.

Qualme, Pro. 2016. Grief. Sp. a Fit. AS Epealme. Mors, exitium. Not of qualme ystowe; Not dead of any sickness, or of a natural death, but slain.

Quappe: To shake, quake. Sp. Sk. To pant, to tremble. Th. 160. Tr. L. 3. 57. Ca. reads it whappe. See Whaped. It will be water quappe a day or two, Luc. 88. Yet the water will continue in motion, and beat against the shoar, for a day or two after the storm is over.

Quarelis, RR. 1823. Short, thick square darts shot out of Cross-bows. Fr. Carreaux; In old Fr. Quadrills. It. Quadrilli. See Fr. Gl. in Quadrilli.

Quein: A Quean, a whore. RR. 7082. Sonn. in Quena. See Quene.

Queint, Quainte: Quenched, put out. Mo. 1980. I madin of that lefe full queint, RR. 3079. I made very much of that leaf, put a great value upon it. Also, Delicate, neat, dainty, nice, Mo. 2953. Queins aray; A neat dress. RR. 2251. Strange, odd. Queins a sweven: A strange, odd dream.

Queintice, Queintise, RR. 2250. Neatness; Strangeness; oddness. Covetise chaungen with queintise, Mo. 2567. Colour their covetousness with devices, making it seem other than it is. Com. Serpentine queintises; Cunning, crafty, subtle devices. p. 487, a.

Queintlie: Strangely, oddly; Curiously.

Quek, Ber. 2210. A sort of Game.

Quel, Quell: To destroy, to kill; To overcome. AS. Tpellan.

Queme, Quemen: To please, Pr. RL. 69. AS. Epeman.

Quene, Quein: A Queen. Also, A quean. See Quein.

Queintise, as Queintise.

Quently, as Queintlie.

Quere, Cr. 40. as Quaire.

Querelouse: Querulous, full of complaints. Ber. 1337.

Querne: A hand-mill. Fa. L. 3. 708. AS. Epeopn.

Querrow: A stone-digger, one that works in a quarry. RR. 4149.

Quest: An Inquest, a Jury. Gam. 1558. Quest-mongers: Jury-men, or perhaps Packers of Juries. p. 206. Fa. L. 3. 648. Achevid all their questes: Obtained all they desired.

Quesh: To bequeath. RR. 6999.

Quiske: Alive. That quicke wol selle her by her life, RR. 5056. That will in her life-time sell her self alive. Also, To quicken; To save alive. No. 492.

Quiente, as Queint.

Quike: Quick, alive, living. Bal. 462.

Quinible, MR. 224. A Treble. Sp. See Sk.

Quisshen,

Quishin, Ib. l. 3. 966. Quishen, Tr. L. 2. 1229. A Cuthion.
Quistron, RR. 886. A beggar; One that goes about begging alms for himself or others, under pretence of preaching, or selling Indulgences. See Fr. Gl. in Questioarii.
Quite: To pay, requite, repay. Quite her cost, Mo. 488. To bear her ordinary expenses; To acquit, deliver. Also, Quit, free. Gan al quite: Are acquitted. No. 459.
Quiste: Requited. RR. 3146. Quiste him: Acquitted, behaved himself. Ib. 3069.
Quoth, Quoth: Quoth, said.

R.

Ra, MR. 978. Rae, RR. 7098. A roc.
Rabiate: Enraged, mad. Magd. 232.
Race, for Arace, V. Fr. 1592, 2124. Mo. 3205.
Racine, Fr. A root. RR. 4881.
Rad, Radd: Read, or Did read. WB. 721. Advised, AF. 579.
Radevore, Ph. 126. Tapestry, Loom-work. Sp. Ras in Fr. signifies any Stuff, as Ras de Chalons, Ras de Gennes. Rau de Vore, or Vaur, may be a Stuff made at such a place; or else it may be Ras velore, for Velours ras, Shorn Velvet.
Rae. See Raa.
Raft (from Reve, V.) Deprived, took away. Rafte her selfe her life; Killed her self. Luc. 176.
Rage: To play the rogue. MR. 850.
Ragerie: Roguery, wanton tricks, playing the rogue.
Ragounces, RR. 1117. A kind of precious Stone. Sp.
Raie: Array, order. CCr. 26.
Railed, Magd. 181. Reiled, Ib. 119. Flowed. See Reilith.
Raine, as Reigne.
Raines: The City Rennes in Britany. Cloth of Raines; Cloth made in that City. Dr. Ch. 255.
Raison, Raisoun: Reason. Fr. Raison.
Rakestele: The handle of a rake. WB. 949. See Siele.
Raket, p. 482, a. I have not plaid raket; I have not been unconstant.
Rakid: Ragged. A balfaff and els a rakid end; A Quarter-staff with a ragged end. PT. 153.
Rakil, Rakle: Rash, hasty. Tr. L. 1. 1068; L. 3. 420. Instead of rakil, Ca. hath recheles, V. To be rash. Tr. L. 4. 1648. But MS. Sp. reads it, No rakill nyl y be.
Ramage, p. 482. b. Ramagious, RL. 324. Wild, RR. 5384. See Sk. Also, The singing, chirping, or warbling of small birds. Fr. Ramage.
Rammish: Rank.
Ranke, CCr. 33. for Rauke: Hoarse; from the Lat. Raucus.
Ranson: A ransom. Prol. 1178. Fr. Rangin.
Rape: Haste. Also, Hasty. Gam. 202. Quickly. RR. 6516.
Rapily: Quickly, hastily. Gam. 839.
Rase, CL. 868. for Race, V.
Raskail, Tr. L. 5. 1852. The Rabble, the Mob. Fr. Rascaille, Trash, idle stuff.
Rate: To chide. MR. 355.
Ratb: Soon, early. Tr. L. 5. 937. Ratbir: Quicker, sooner. RR. 4514. Also, Former, first. Boeth. Ratbir speche, Tr. L. 3. 1343. Former discourse. Ratbir: Spoonst. Bl. Kn. 428. AS. Ratb. Cit.
Ravenish: Black as a raven. Sp. Sk.
Raveshing: Rapid. p. 363, b.
Ranght: Reached, stretched. Prol. 136. Tr. L. 2. 447. from Reach. Also, Went. Sp.
Ravine, Raviness, Ravyn: Rapine; Greediness, covetousness. Foulis of ravine; Birds of prey. AF. 323. Ravines.
Rapine, pillage; Rapina, p. 362, a.
Ravinour: A robber.
Ravishable: Greedy, ravenous. RR. 7066.
Ravishing, as Raveshing.
Ravish, Gam. 222. for Revish, as in MS. Ch. See Reve.
Ransom: To put one to ransom, to set a price for one's ransom. Mo. 2595.

Raunsoude, Mo. 2605. Put to ransom.
Ravysing, as Raveshing.
Rayid: Arraied, adorned. Dr. Ch. 252. See Aray.
Rayish, MR. 1201. for Arayish. [See Aray.] But MS. Ch. reads it, Greythede [H. 1. greithen, al. greyden] hem; i.e. made them ready to go. [See Greithe.] Others read, And dressed hem.
Raylid: Railed in. Ber. 291. See Railed.
Rebek: Rebecca. Sq. 1220. Also, An old woman, an old Trot. Sp. Fr. 309.
Rechase: To beat, or drive back. Dr. Ch. 379. Fr. Rechasser.
Reche, Recke: To care for, to value, to regard, esteem, make account of. AS. Reccan. Rechelesse, Rechilese: Rash, negligent, careless; Without pity. Rechelesnesse: Carelessness, heedlessness. Prol. 204.
Recomfort: To comfort again, to restore comfort to one. Tr. L. 2. 1672. MS. Sp. reads the Verse thus;
And him with all her wyt to comfort;
But Ca. hath this and the following Verses much better, thus;
And hym with al her hert she gan disport
As she best cowde, of sorrow hym to comfort.
Recommunde: To recommend. No. 555.
Records: Witness, testimony. Dr. Ch. 934. To remember. p. 384, a.
Recomr, p. 483, b. as Reccure.
Recreance, Magd. 425. Recreandise, RR. 2107. Distrust; Falshood, treason; Infidelity. ib. 4038.
Recreant, RR. 4099. One that betrays his Trust; An Infidel; Faint hearted, cowardly. p. 204, a. See Gl. V. in Recreant.
Recuperable: To be recovered, recoverable. Bal. 1116.
Reccure: A remedy, a cure. Cr. 335. Recovery. Bl. Kn. 682. To recover. Returid: Recovered. RR. 4920. Bl. Kn. 652.
Redde: Advised. Tr. L. 5. 737. It is printed for Rede, Ib. L. 2. 1698. Mo. 575. where MS. Ch. hath, he coube no bettir rede.
Reddour: Violence. Fort. 13. No force of thy reddour; I care not for thy violence. From the Fr. Rouder, Stiffness, &c. See Gl. V.
Rede: Advice, counsel; To advise. Redish me love, Tr. L. 2. 413. or rather (as MS. Sp.) Ret me to love; Advise me to love. To explain, interpret. Dr. Ch. 279. To guess; To read. Also, A reed. Tr. L. 2. 1387.
Redemir: Redeemer. Magd. 384.
Redolence: A sweet smell; Perfume. RL. 213.
Redonnable, Redoubted: Feared; Honoured, revered. Boeth. Fr. Redonnable.
Redoute: To reverence. RR. 2023. To fear. Fr. Redouter.
Redoutinge of Mars, Prol. 2052. For the honour of Mars. H. 1. and MS. Ch. read it, In recordyng of Mars, and of his glory, i.e. In memory, &c.
Redresse, Redressin: To recover, reform, amend, correct. RR. 3423. Tr. L. 2. 969.
Reed, as Rede.
Refect: Recovered, refreshed. Boeth.
Referre: To return, requite. p. 361, b.
Refiguring: Recollecting. Tr. L. 5. 472.
Refraine, Tr. L. 2. 1571. The Burden of a Song. Fr. Refrain. Refraining: Upholding a Song. RR. 749.
Refreide, Tr. L. 2. 1343. To retrain. Sp. To cool, slacken, lessen, relent. Fr. Refroidir.
Refrete, p. 508, b. l. 19. f. the same with Refrain, if not corrupted from it.
Refroidin: To cool. Tr. L. 5. 507. See Refreide.
Refte: Taken away, bereaved; from Reve, V. Also, A chink, or crevice. RR. 2661. From Rive, V.
Refuce, BD. 755. Refuite, Fr. RR. 3840. Refuse, Cr. 94. Bal. Lad. 222. Refuge, help.
Regalie, Fl. 121. Royalty, sovereignty, government, power.
Regals: The Regalia; Sovereignty. Ar. 243.
Regarde: A view. Fr. Regard. Pleasant regarde, AL. 170. A pleasant, or beautifull prospect, which answers to the Fr. Beauvoir, and the It. Belvedere.
Regnaife: Fit for reigning. Test. Capable of government.
Regrate: Regret, sorrow. Cr. 397. Esteem or courtesy. Sh. 8 L

- I make regrade; I shall take it as a favour. Bal. 374.*
 From the Lat. Barb. Regratiare. Gl. Lob.
Reguerdoned: Rewarded. Boeth.
Rebete, RR. 6509. Seems to be synonymous to Comfort:
 But Rebeting, Tr. L. 3. 350. seems to have a very different signification, if that be the true Reading. Some MSS. and most of the printed Editions read richeffe instead of it.
Reigne, Prol. 868. A Realm, or Kingdom; Power, rule, government, authority. To govern, to reign, &c. Also, A Queen. Fr. Reine.
Reilid. See Railed.
Reilish: Rowleth; Vagatur, p. 365, a.
Rein, RR. 1822. Yet arrows rein, f. run through me: Some will have it to be a Corruption of Reigne; Arrows prevail over me. See Sk.
Reine: Power, government. Ch. Dr. 677. Bl. Kn. 511.
Reins, RR. 3826. f. Rennes in Britany.
Rejoie: To rejoice. Tr. L. 5. 395.
Reise: To raise.
Reisins: Grapes. RR. 3689. Fr. Raisins.
Reve, CL. 192. as Reve.
Reke, Rekin: To smok. Hyper. 51. Also, as Reche.
Rekelagis: Raking ways, revellings.
Rekes: Ricks. p. 479, a.
Rekilneß: Rashness. See Rakil, &c.
Rekk, Gam. 1744. as Reche.
Relayes, Dr. Ch. 362. (Fr. Relais) Fresh hounds; The places where such hounds are kept. Releyes and lymers; Standers at advantage with darts to kill deer. Sp.
Relese, p. 479, a. as Remissails. AS. Lapa.
Reles: A release, a discharge. Haddin no reles; Were not spared. Bal. 601.
Releve: Relief. Bal. 598.
Releved up again: Rose up again. Magd. 197.
Relevid: Relieved, delivered.
Religiousite: The Religious. CL. 686.
Relike: A relick. RR. 2673.
Remed, Cr. 33. Remede: A remedy; To remedy, to cure. CCr. 57.
Remes: Realms, kingdoms. Mo. 1251.
Remeved, Remewed: Removed. RR. 7432. See Salved.
Remissails, p. 476, a. Remnants, remainders, leavings.
Remorde, Remordin: To check, to cause remorse. Tr. L. 4. 1491. To grieve, vex, torment; Remordet, Boeth. p. 393, b.
Remuable: Changeable, unconstant. Tr. L. 4. 1682. Able to move. Boeth. L. 2.
Ren, Renne: To run. Rennir: A runner.
Renably: Readily. Fr. 245.
Rending, Boeth. p. 359. Rent, torn. f. l. Rendyn; Lacera.
Renegate: A runagate, an Apostate from the Christian Faith, a Renegado.
Reney, Renie: To deny, renounce, abjure. Fr. Renier.
Rengis, Prol. 2596. Renkie, CCr. 26. Ranks.
Reniant, as Renegate: One that renounces, &c. See Reney.
Renogates: Renegado's. See Renegate.
Renome, Bal. Lad. 226. Renomic, WB. 1159. Renown, a good name. Fr. Renommée.
Renovelauncis: Renewings. Fa. L. 2. 185.
Renovels, CMV. 18. Renovellen, p. 212, a. To renew. Fr. Renouveler.
Renowned: Renowned. Bal. 588. Fr. Renommé.
Reny, as Reney.
Repairs: Resort. Also, Return; To return.
Repase: To repass, to return. Ber. 1803.
Repe and renne, No. 1443. Rape and rend, scrape together by any means, by raping and rending, by hook or by crook.
Repent: Repentance. CL. 667.
Repentaunt: Repenting, penitent. Prol. 228.
Replete: Full.
Report: To refer. Pr. RL. 108. Fr. Rapporter.
Repreß: To restrain. Hyper. 30. Repression: Restraint. Tr. L. 3. 1040.
Reprove: Reproof. Tr. L. 2. 419. Scandal, reproach. No. 2111.
Reprovable: To be reproved, scandalous.
Reputy. See Libel repudy.
Repugn: To resist, contradict. Repugnance: Repugnancy, contradiction.
- Requirable*: Desirable; Expetibilis, Boeth. p. 371, a.
Rere, as Arere. Also, To rear up, to raise. Rere a war; To raise a war, to make war. Ch. Dr. 468.
Res, Gam. 1085. Rese, PT. 498, 548. Rage, a mad prank. In Tr. L. 4. 350: instead of in a rage, it is in a rees, in MS. Sp. Ca. and al.
Rescous, Prol. 2645. Rescue; Defence. In the rescous of our laie, RR. 6749. In the defence of our Law, or Faith. Deliverance. Tr. L. 1. 479.
Rescowed: Rescued, saved. Boeth.
Rese, Ber. 178. To rise; To rage.
Resemblable: Like, resembling one another. RR. 985.
Reson: Account. Who can lay any reson; Who can make any account. Magd. 363.
Resonabliche: Reasonably.
Resonn: Reason.
Resowne: To resound. Fl. 167.
Resonsaile: An answer. Cr. 127.
Resporie: Respect, regard, consideration. Tr. L. 4. 856. Perhaps from the Fr. Rapport.
Rest, Tr. L. 1. 945. or rather, Rist (as in MS. Sp. and Ca.) Ariseth, or springeth.
Restis: Rest, quiet. Tr. L. 2. 1722.
Resynge, Cup. 415. perhaps for Racing. See Race. Resing ibat; Taking that away, except that.
Retche, as Reche.
Reichelesse, as Rechelesse.
Reie: A net; Reie, p. 440, a.
Reithorie: Rhetorick, eloquence, oratory. Cr. 240.
Retour, Cr. 51. Retowre: Return. Also, An Orator. Bal. 394. Lat. Rhetor.
Reve: A Bayliff, or Steward. See Geroves.
Reve, Revin: To bereave, take away. By force reve, MR. 903, or rather, By force berieve, as in MS. Ch. To take away by force. Also, To force. Tess.
Revelous: Addicted to pleasure, or revelling.
Revelrie: Revelling; Pleasure. RR. 720.
Reverse: To overturn. RR. 5468. Fr. Renverser. Also, Contrary. Fr. Revers.
Revert: To bring back. RR. 7284.
Revestin: To cloath again. Tr. L. 3. 354. Fr. Revestir.
Revuill, Ph. 28. Revilry: Revelling.
Row: A row, order. Al by row, WB. 506. or (as in MS. Ch.) Alle on row; All in a row. On a row; In a row. Fa. L. 3. 602.
Rew, Rewin: To have compassion, to pity.
Rewakin: To wake again. Tr. L. 3. 1124.
Rewarde: Regard. RR. 3254. LW. 375.
Reyls, Fa. L. 3. 146. A kind of Songs, such as Roundels. Sp. and Sk. See Gl. V. in Ray.
Reyne: Rain.
Rheibor: An Orator. See Retour.
Rial, Riall: Royal. Rially: Royally. Riake: Royalty; Pomp.
Ribarnings: Ribbands, or Laces, lay'd on Robes. RR. 1077.
Ribande, RR. 5673. Idle persons attending Courts and Camps were formerly called Ribalds, or Ribandes; who being the meanest, and commonly the most profligate, of mortals, the word came to signify in general, Lewd persons, Ruffians, Pimps, Bawds, Whores, &c. See Fr. Gl. in Ribaldi. See Harlot.
Ribibe, Fr. 113. An old bawd. Sp. Perhaps from Ribande, V.
Ribible, MR. 223. A fiddle, or gittern. Sp.
Rice, MR. 216. or Rife: Small twigs, sprigs or rods; from the Cimbr. Ryffs, which signifies the same: "Hinc Ryffar, apud Islandos, loca virgultis obsita, & Ryffs, Virgultis confita domus, casula. A Rice-dike apud Septentrionales Anglos est Sepes ex caesis ramis & virgis texta. Gibson in Polemo-Medin. See Gl. V. in Rifs.
Richesse, Richesse: Riches; Richness, valuableness. RR. 1116.
Richi: Right.
Riddleed, RR. 1235. Riddilid, Ib. 1243. Plaited.
Riding knot: A running knot. Ber. 2212.
Rife, Sq. 752. To pierce, thrust, stab; To split, to force asunder. See Rive.
Rife: A small chink. RL. 381.
Rigg: The back. PT. 594. AS. Þpicg.
Riggin bone: The back-bone.
- Rightwise*:

Rightrise: Righteous. Rightrised: Judged aright; Justified, approved. p. 488, a. Rightriseß: Righteousness.

Rimplid, for Rumpled, RR. 4495. Withered, dried up; Wrinkled.

Rin: To run. Cr. 158.

Ringin: To ring. Ringin trampis; The trumpets found. Prol. 2602.

Rining: Running. Test. p. 481, a. l. 46. unless it should be read reyning (as in some Editions) i. e. Raining, dropping.—Μέλιτος γλυκίων εἶεν αὐδῆ. Hom.

Rife, RR. 1015. Beauty. Sk. See Rice.

Rishe: A rush. Tr. L. 3. 1167. As rishe right; As upright, or strait, as a rush. RR. 1701.

Rist: Rose. Tr. L. 2. 812.

Ritt: Rode, did ride. Luc. 97.

Rivage, Fr. The Sea-shore; The bank of a river; The water-side. Toke a rivage; Took a voyage by Sea. Fa. L. 1. 223.

Rive, RR. 5393, 5718. Riven, No. 2346. To thrust, stab, pierce; To split, rend. Also, Split, rent, &c.

Rived, Ripid: Rent, &c. Magd. 140.

Riveling: Wrinkled. RR. 7214.

Roche, Fr. A rock. Fa. L. 3. 26. Rochis: Rocks. Fa. L. 2. 527.

Rode, Roode tree, Roode beam: The Holy Cross.

Rody: Ruddy.

Rodylese: Pale. Ber. 219. See Rudde, &c.

Rofe, Rofte (from Rive, or Ryve, V.) Struck, stabbed, &c. Cl. 82. Di. 426. Fa. L. 1. 373. Bl. Kn. 373.

Roggeth: Rocketh, joggeth, shaketh. Hyper. 147.

Royaliche: Royally.

Roignous, RR. 6190. Ruinous. Sk. Fr. Roigneux, Scabby. See Roin.

Roill, WB. 653. To wander, to ramble, qu. Rowl about.

Roin: A scabb; Scurf, mange. RR. 553. Fr. Rogne. Roinous, Ib. 988. Scabby. See Roignous.

Rokette, RR. 1240, 1242. Rotchette, Ib. 4754: A Linnen Garment. Sp. "Rocket, a Frock, loose Gaberdine, or "Gown of Canvas worn by a Labourer over the rest "of his clothes; Also a Prelate's Rochet. Blo. Fr. Roquet, a short Coat, or Cloak, formerly wore. See Fr. Gl. in Roccos, &c.

Roking: Rocking, trembling, quaking. RR. 1906.

Romaunce myne Auctour, Bal. 538. Romance de la Rose, Ib. 556. The Author of The Romant of the Rose.

Romaunt: A Romance.

Romin, Tr. L. 2. 516. To roam, rove, wander; To walk. Fr. 2389.

Romir: Wider, larger, having more room. MR. 1037.

Rondils, LW. 423. Roundelay, A shepherd's Dance; Sometimes used for a Song which ends as it begins. Fr. Rondeau. Blo.

Rone: Rained. Tr. L. 3. 678. MS. Sp. reads it, And sub it rone, instead of, And fens it rained, Ib. 641. Also, The City Roan in Normandy. RR. 1674.

Ronge, Rongin: Rung.

Ronges: The rounds, or steps, of a ladder. MR. 517. Round long pieces of wood are called Rungs in the North of England. Gibson in Polemo-Medin. See Gl. V. in Rounges.

Rood: Rode, did ride. Ber. 2162. See Rode.

Roos: Arose. In Tr. L. 2. 611. MS. Sp. hath, In the felde roos a skirmish, instead of, In field arose, &c.

Ropen: Reaped. LW. 74.

Ros algar, No. 835. Flowers of Antimony.

Rosen, Rosin, Rosy. Bl. Kn. 657.

Rosere, Rosir, RR. 1651. A Rose-tree. See Ib. 3072, 3073. Instead of Rosir, should be read Rosirs, Ib. 4188.

Rose red, Rosing redde; Red as a Rose. Cr. 49.

Rotchette. See Rokette.

Rote: The root. Tr. L. 2. A musical Instrument used in Wales, says Sp. which perhaps he mistook for Crota, a Crowd. On a rote, Prol. 236. f. By rote. Roted: Rotted.

Roth, Bl. Kn. 581. Routh: Pity.

Rother, Rothir: The rudder, or helm of a Ship.

Rotid: Rooted. Mo. 2721.

Roting: Rotten. Cr. 49.

Rough [from Reche] Cared, valued, regarded. RR. 1873. Dr. Ch. 244.

Rough [from Rue] Had pity, or compassion upon. Tr.

L. 1. 497. But it may there also signify Cared, valued, minded.

Rouk, Roukin: To lye, to snore. Prol. 1310. Instead of roukin, Tr. L. 5. 409. MS. Sp. and al. read joukyn: It is said of a Hawk, he Jouketh, when he sleepeth.

Roume: Room. Ar. 114. Roume space, for Round space, Altir.

Roun, as Rowne.

Rounceval, Prol. 672. A Town in Spain at the foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, where "Rowland, nephew to "Charlemain, was slain in a Battle against the Saracens. "The place to this day is called Rowland's Vallie, and "was in times past a great Pilgrimage; there being a "Chappel built over the Tomb, and dedicated to our "Lady, called commonly, but corruptly, Our Lady of "Renceval. Peacham's Compl. Gent. Ch. 10.

Rouncey: Prol. 392. A little Poney, or Tit. Lat. Barb. Runcinus. See Fr. Gl.

Roundell: A Song beginning and ending with the same sentence. See Rondils.

Roundil: Any round thing, as a Ring, a Circle, &c. Fa. L. 2. 283, 290. A Ball or such like round substance in Blazon. Blo.

Roufe, Ber. 936. f. A cunning trick, a wile. Fr. Ruse. Ruze, Reouze, or Ruse, are used in the North for To extoll or commend highly. Ray's Coll. See Gl. V. in Ruse.

Rouffy: Rusty. Cr. 187.

Rou: A company. Rouits: Companies. Tr. L. 2. 620.

Route: To snore. MR. 539, 1058. Dr. Ch. 170. To make a roing noise. Fa. L. 2. 530.

Routhe, as Ruthe.

Routhelesse: Unmerciful, having no pity. Tr. L. 2. 346.

Routhelesse: Sorrowfully; Pitifully, compassionately.

Row, No. 882. Rowe, Tr. L. 1. 206. Rough. Also, A line. Fa. L. 1. 448. So we say, The Christ-croß-row.

Rowe, PT. 284. f. the same with Rowne, V.

Rowis, Bl. Kn. 598. Streaks. Sp. Perhaps, Rays. See Rowe.

Rowish, Ber. 3132. for Routh: Pity.

Rowne: To whisper. AS. Runnian. Rowneft ow for Rowneft thou? Whispereft thou? WB. 241.

Rowte, Prol. 624. as Rout.

Rubens. See Puella.

Rucking, or (as in MS. Ch.) Rowkyng: Lying, lurking. Mo. 1341. See Rouke.

Rudde, Rude, MR. 209. Colour, complexion; Ruddiness of complexion, a blush. AS. Rubu. Cimbr. Rode, Rubor; whence Ruddy.

Ruddocke: Robin-red-breast. AF. 349.

Rue: To pity, to have compassion upon; To suffer for. Tr. L. 2. 789. To be sorry for, to repent. Tr. L. 5. 1070. MS. Sp. hath the place thus;

And that to late is me now to repente,
To this y will be trewe in myn entente.

Ruel bone, No. 3383. f. Diversly coloured, from the Fr. Riolé. Sp. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr. Rouelle, Rotula, The whirl-bone; but this sense will hardly suit here. It is otherwise read remell, renel.

Ruth for Ruthe, p. 487, b.

Rusfull: Sorrowful.

Ruth: Have compassion. Fr. 252b. from Rue.

Ruse: To praise. Cr. 157. See Roufe.

Ruthe: Pity, compassion. Ruthless: Merciless.

Ryff: Rife, frequent, common. Ber. 660.

Rymedin, Fr. 2257. Rhimed, or made Verses.

Ryve, Gam. 1553. Ber. 1440. as Ryff.

Ryve, Luc. 114. as Rive.

S.

SA: So. MR. 932.

Saaf, Saafing: Safe; Saving, except.

Saal: The Soul. Ber. 1948.

Sabel: Sable. Bal. 955.

Sack

Sackes fettes, Mo. 2411. Perhaps Sacks and Fattes, that is Dry Fattes and other such Vessels. Com. But St. supposes it may be Feat sacks, i. e. Neat sacks, or else Fat sacks, i. e. Sacks well filled, and stuffed with money.

Sackid freres, RR. 7462. Fryers wearing a coarse upper garment, called Saccus. See Fr. Gl.

Sacre, Fr. A coronation; A consecration; The solemnization of Matrimony. Ch. Dr. 2135.

Sacremēt: An oath. p. 486, b.

Sacrifice: To sacrifice. Fr. Sacrifier.

Sad, Sadde: Sober, serious, modest, grave, reserved. No. 898. Sad of demene: Of a reserved behaviour. CL. 734.

Sad of chere, or, Of chere sade, Ber. 414. Of a grave countenance. Solid, studdy, stedfast. Booth. It is sometimes used in an ill sense; as CCr. 151. Unsettled, unconstant; unless it should be read there, Unsad, which is used in that sense, Fr. 2016. Sadly: Gravely, soberly, &c. Sadness: Sobriety, gravity, modesty. Sq. 1107. Fr. 1482. Solidity; Soliditas, p. 386, b.

Saff: Save. Ber. 1948. See Saaf.

Saie: Saw. Tr. L. 3. 993.

Saile, for Sale, Mo. 2817. Set a sale; Set to sale.

Sailin: To assail, to assault. RR. 7338.

Saine: Seen. RR. 7445. To say. Also, the River Seine in France. Fr. 2778.

Saint John to borow. See Borow.

Salad: A sort of Head-piece. Ch. Dr. 1554. Fr. Salade.

Saladis: Sallads. FL. 412.

Sale, Mo. 2084. Som one thei sustein with sale; Some other that are able to bribe them they uphold in their lewdness. Com.

Salen, Salne: To salute.

Salidome, Ber. 2567. A kind of precious Stone: Perhaps corrupted from Cassidome. See Cassidony.

Salne, see Salen..

Salved, RR. 7431. for salued, or salened; and so removed, in the following Verse should be, remened, or remew-ed.

Saluingis: Salutations, greetings. Tr. L. 2. 1568.

Samette, RR. 836. Samite, Ib. 873. Tr. L. 1. 109. Sattin. See Sk.

Samin: The same.

Sance, Sans, Sauns: Without. Fr. Sans.

Sandall, Pro. 442. A thin stuff like Cypress. Sp. in Sendall. A fine silk stuff. See Fr. Gl. in Cendalun.

Sande, Hen. 84. as Sonde; and perhaps it should be read on honde in the foregoing Verse.

Sang: Song. MR. 1062.

Sanguin: Of a blood-colour; Red. Pro. 441.

Sare: Sore. Cr. 5.

Sarlunisse, RR. 1188. A kind of Silk like Saucenet. Sp. See Sk.

Sarmoning: Preaching; Talking. Pro. 3093.

Sarpleris, or (as in some Copies) Sarplefis: Satchels, packs, or fardels; Sarcinas, p. 361, b.

Sat. See Sit.

Sataly, Pro. 58. A City in Anatolia, called sometime Atalla. Sp.

Saturnad, Bal. 895. Swart, black. Sp. Yellow, or rather of a Lead-colour. Sk.

Save, Pro. 2716. The herb Sage. Lat. Salvia. See Saff.

Saved: Cured, healed. p. 212, b.

Savely: Safely. Mo. 1323.

Saverid: Savoured, relished, approved, Ber. 3230.

Sause I ne vouche, RR. 2002. I do not vouchsafe.

Sausleme, Pro. 627. Red-faced. See Sk. in Sausleme. f. Fr. Enflammé, All on fire. Sausleme, H. 1.

Saugb, Saugbe: Saw. Pro. 1757.

Saughte, Gam. 299. Sawghte, MS. Ch.

Savige: The herb Sage. PT. 292.

Savir: To savour, to tast, relish. WB. 171. To season. No. 1859.

Savite: Safety. RR. 6869.

Saul: The Soul. MR. 979.

Savorous: Savory, sweet. RR. 84.

Savouring: The Talt. p. 193, b.

Sautie: Assaults. Bl. Kn. 419.

Sautrie: A Psaltery or Shalm, a Musical Instrument like a Harp. Pro. 298. See Blo. and Fr. Gl.

Same: An old saying; A Proverb. Saves: Sayings; Precepts.

Say, Sq. 1452. Saye, WB. 645. Sawa,

Scall: Scabbiness; A scalled head. Scallid: Scabby, scurfy; Scalded. Pro. 630.

Scantilone: A scantling, a measure. RR. 7114. Fr. Eschantillon, A pattern.

Scape: To escape.

Scaplerie: A scapulary, a Garment worn by Fryers, covering the head and shoulders. p. 590, b.

Scarce: Sparing, niggardly. RR. 2329. Scarfly: Sparingly. Pro. 585.

Scarmishe, Tr. L. 2. 934. Scarmishinge, At. 25. A skirmish, a fight.

Scathe: Mischief, damage, harm, hurt. Pro. 448. RR. 6649. AS. Sceaðian, Noene, &c. Scathesse: Without harm or hurt, safe. RR. 1550. Scathliche: Hurtful. Hyp. 5.

Schall in the MSS. for Shall.

Scho: A shoe. Pro. 255. It is very often writ in MS. Ch. for she. AS. Geo.

Schole, Tr. L. 1. 635. MS. Sp. reads it, to the schole is: Is an Instruction or Example to thee. The old Poets frequently use it in that sense.

Scholeie, Pro. 304. To be educated. Schoolelay, An Exhibition. Sp. It may be two distinct words, Schole aye; and MS. Ch. has the two lines thus;

And besily gan for the sowles pray,
For the sowles that hym to skole found ay, i. e.

He prayed heartily and diligently for the Souls of them that maintained him at School, or were the Founders of the School or College, where he had his Education.

Selaunder, Sclaundir: Slander.

Sclaw: Slain. Ber. 64.

Sclae: To slay. Ber. 1593.

Sclendre: Slender.

Sclepe, Schope, PT. 454. To sleep.

Sclipper: Slippery; Treacherous. Ber. 908.

Sely: Sly, cunning. Ber. 2725.

Selyt: Slit. Ber. 2469.

Selyve: A sleeve. Ber. 624.

Scachons: Scutcheons of Arms. FL. 216. Fr. Ecuison, a Coat of Arms.

Scribble: Fit to write upon. RL. 106.

Scripe: A scrip of paper, any writing. Tr. L. 2. 1130.

Script, Ca. and al. Fr. Escript, now written Ecrit, a Writing.

Scripture: Writing. Pro. 2046. Booth.

Scrite: A scrip, a writing. Sq. 1213. See Script.

Scryven-like: Like a subtle Scrivener. Tr. L. 2. 1026. Some read it scryveinisse, which Kyn. renders Padantic, like a Pedant.

Scylid: Hid, covered, withdrawn. Scylid under care: Hid under cover. Cr. 19. AS. Scylan, To withdraw.

Se: A seat. Mo. 263, 2053. Tr. L. 4. 1023. Also, To see. Mo. 163. To look upon. Tr. L. 3. 130. God you se, Fr. 905. No. 2232. A Form of Salutation; God save you, have a gracious regard to you. So in Tr. L. 2. 85. God you save and se, and God hir se, Gower, L. 4. f. 78. p. 2, b. in the same sense. In RR. 6044. instead of se read fe, V.

Se of the day: The Daisie. Bal. 686.

Sech, Seche, Sechin: To seek, look out. Sechers: Seekers. Test.

Seche: Cause, occasion. No. 950. AS. Saca.

Secondly, Tr. L. 2. 1741. Ca. and al. Sikerly, V.

Secre: Secret. Tr. L. 3. 287. Secretour, for secret tour, i. e. tower; Arce abbat, Booth, p. 389. b. l. 33.

Seculer, Seculere, Mo. 2658. "The Popish Clergy are either "Regular, which live by Profession, severed from the "ordinary course of the World, after a certain Rule "appointed by their Founder; or Secular, which live "without any such restraint, in saeculo, in the world, "as other men commonly do, the difference of calling "excepted. Com.

Seculeres, Sq. 767. Seculer folke, RR. 6150. Laymen; or Secular, in opposition to Regular, who may be meant by Religious, Ib. 6149, 6152.

Sedin: To produce seed. RR. 4344.

Sedis: Seeds. Mo. 1995.

Sedumall: The herb Valerian, or Setwall. MR. 99. AS. Sydepale.

See: The Sea. The grete see, Pro. 59. Mar Maggiore, The

The Euxine Sea. Sp. Seas. Also, Seats. Fa. L. 3. 120. See Se.

Sege, Prol. 939. Assège, MS. Ch. A siege.

Segge: To say, speak. Tr. L. 4. 194. The whole Verse is in MS. Sp. thus;

O Kyng Priam qd they lo thus seyn we.

Sele: To say. Tr. L. 1. 575.

Seien: Saw. Tr. L. 5. 816.

Seigh: Saw. AF. 117.

Seignorie: Sovereignty, power. RR. 3213.

Sein, Seine: Seen. RR. 2181. To see. Ib. 7468. To say. Ib. 2195.

Seinde: Singed. Mo. 959.

Seint: A girdle. Prol. 331. Fr. Ceinte.

Seintewarie: A sanctuary.

Sejour: Sojourn, stay. Fr. Sejour.

Seiþow: Sayest thou. Prol. 1127.

Seit: Said. Ber. 2142.

Seke: To seek. Prol. 17. Sick. Ib. 18. Sekenes: Sicknes. Ber. 130.

Seld, Selde, Selden, Seldin: Seldom.

Seler: A cellar. In p. 367, a. l. 37. it should perhaps be read, felle or fille; Limen, A door-fill, or threshold.

Seleris: Cellars.

Selie, as Sely. Selineß: Happiness. Tr. L. 3. 815.

Selis: Seals. Tr. L. 3. 1468.

Sell: A cell. Ch. Dr. 2064.

Selve: Self, the same.

Sely: Silly, simple. MR. 992. Plain, honest, harmless. WB. 370. Happy.

Semblable, Fr. Like.

Semblance, Semblance, Semblaunt: Outward shew, appearance, pretence. Fr. Semblant. Fair semblant: Fair shew, Disimulation. RR. passim.

Semeliche, Semely, Semily: Seemly, decent, comely.

Semelyhede: Seemliness, comeliness. RR. 777.

Semilineß, Fl. 206. for Semelineß, as Semelyhede.

Semiram: Semiramis Queen of Assyria.

Semis: Seams.

Semifoune: A soft, gentle noise. MR. 588.

Semyboufy: Half-drunk. PT. 705.

Semy cope, Prol. 264. A short Cloak. Sp. But MS. Ch. hath it, His semely cope. See Cope.

Semyryse, Ber. 1468. Half-killed. See Rose and Rive.

Sene: To see; Seen. Fairir into sene, Phyl. 32. Fairer to look upon.

Sengel: Single. Mo. 946.

Sengin: To singe. WB. 349. Sengid: Singed.

Sens: Since.

Sent: To assent, agree. Ber. 881. Also, for Seint: A girdle. CL. 817.

Sentence: Discourse; Knowledge; Opinion; sense, meaning, intention.

Sentiment, Fr. Sense, feeling; Mind, opinion, thought; Inclination, passion.

Sentyn: To scent, to smell, to perfume. Ber. 2031.

Sepulture: A sepulchre, a grave. Tr. L. 4. 327. In WB. 498. MS. Ch. hath Sepulkre instead of it.

Sere: Dry, withered. RR. 4749. p. 516, a. AS. Seapan. To dry.

Serial, FL. 209. as Carrial.

Serid potis, No. 829. Pots scared up, close shut. In former Editions it was Sered pokettes, and therefore explained by Sk. Loculi serati, vel clausi; and in MS. Ch. it is fyred pokettes: But the present Reading bears an easy and obvious sense.

Serie: Series, proceeding. Prol. 3069.

Serkill celestyne: The Celestial circle, i. e. The Heavens. Ber. 355.

Serment, Fr. An oath. p. 487, b.

Sermon: To talk, to say. Sermoning, as Sarmoning.

Serpentine: Belonging to a serpent, venomous, winding, cunning, crafty. p. 487, a.

Servage, Fr. 1176, 1512. Servise, Ib. 1144. Slavery, servitude.

Servand: A servant. Ch. Dr. 1627.

Servisable: Officious, obliging, complaisant. Prol. 99.

Servise. See Servage.

Servitour: A servant.

Sesid: Posselt, seized. Ber. 1327.

Seft: Seeth. Test. L. 3.

Set, fete: Sat. FL. 436.

Seib, Seibe: Seeth. Tr. L. 2. 1254. Since. Ib. L. 4. 1101. Also, Seethed, boiled.

Seirone: Bright of hue; for a Citron colour is the brightest and livelyest of any other, says Sk. Fl. 195. See Citrin.

Sett his cap, Prol. 588. Impose upon, or deceive him.

Sette, Settin: To put. Sette case: Put the case, suppose. To regard, to value. Tr. L. 3. 902. where MS. Sp. reads it, I wolde sette his sorrow at a myte. I sette not an haw, WB. 659. or rather (as in MS. Ch.) I sette it not an haw; I valued it not an haw, I cared not a rush for it.

Settlinge, p. 515, a. Settele, p. 518, b. A young plant.

Seviliouns: Civilians. Ber. 1335.

Sevith, for Sewith: Followeth. Bal. 120. See Sewe.

Sewe: To sow; Sown. Mo. 1995.

Sewe, Sewin: To follow, to pursue; To prosecute. AL. 117. To sue. Ib. 332. Fr. Suivre, sequi.

Sewe and surgery, PT. 290. f. Salve and chirurgery.

Sewes: Broths, soups. Sq. 87. Fr. Jus, Gravy.

Seye: To say. Prol. 1869. Seen. WB. 552.

Seyll: To fail. Ber. 2151.

Seyne: To say.

Seyng: Seeing. Tr. L. 4. 363. Seeming. Boeth. L. 1.

Seynour: A belt, a girdle. Ber. 3191. Fr. Ceinture.

Shadde ovir: Overshadowed. Dr. Ch. 426.

Shadowy: Sorry, slight; Umbratilis, p. 377, a.

Shakill: A shackle. Ber. 332.

Shalmies, Fa. L. 3. 128. See Saurie.

Shalons, MR. 1032. Blankets. Chalonnis, MS. Ch. perhaps so called from Chalons, where they were made.

Shape: To form; To prepare; To order, direct, dispose; To move, excite; To contrive, design, intend.

Shapetich, Prol. 374. Schapely, MS. Ch. Shapely, Tr. L. 4. 1452. Likely. Sk.

Shaw: A shade, a tuft of trees. Sp. and Sk. A Wood, forest, grove. See Gl. V.

Shede, Mo. 2215. But he is so get, from it shall shede; But he that so gets his goods shall soon lose them; shall shede, that is, shall fall away from them. Com. The place seems to be corrupted. Shede abak. See Abak.

Sheff of arrowes: A sheaf, or bundle of arrows. Prol. 104.

Shefeld, MR. 824. Sheffield in Yorkshire, still famous for Cutlery-ware. See Thwidd.

Sheld: A shield; To defend. God sheld: God shield, or defend us. Sheldis: Shields; French Crowns (Fr. Écus, from Scutum) so called from the Impression of a Shield upon them. Prol. 280. But MS. Ch. reads the whole Verse thus;

Well couth he in his eschaungis beye and selle.

Shell, for Shall, Ber. 142.

Shend, Shendin: To trouble, spoil, mar, ruin, corrupt; To shame, confound, expose; To blame.

Shene: Shining, bright; Fair, beautiful. When the sunne shene, Tr. L. 4. 1432. or (as it is better read in MS. Sp.) When the sun is shene; When the sun shines.

Shent: Spoiled, &c. from Shend, V.

Shepe, Shepis: Sheep.

Shopy: Sheepish, silly, simple. p. 486, b.

Shore: To cut with shears, or other Instruments. CL. 62.

Shorn, shaved, clipped. RR. 6196. To reap. Ib. 4335.

Shert: A shirt.

Shet, Shete, Shette: Shut.

Shete: To shoot. MR. 820. To shete a featherles bolt, Ber. 1031. To shoot an unfeathered arrow, i. e. To labour in vain. A sheet. Tr. L. 3. 1058.

Sheweth, for Sheweth, p. 367, b. l. 1.

Shewe, for Sewe: To follow. Mo. 3178.

Shift: To divide, distribute. WB. 104. To change, vary. AS. Scyptan.

Shild, as Sheld. Shildes, No. 2860. as Sheldis.

Skill, Cr. 20. f. leg. Shrill. Schill is used for Shrill in Dongl. See Gl. V.

Shimring: Glimmering. MR. 1189. AS. Scýma, Splendor.

Shinande: Shining. Test.

Shipins: Sheep-pens. WB. 871.

Shipman: A tailor, a seaman.

Shire, Gam. 1414. The meeting of a Shire; The Assizes. AS. Scip. gemot.
Shiregereve: A Sheriff. See Gerewe.
Shit, Shitte: Shut. Shutting: Shutting up. RR. 1598.
Shode, Prol. 2009. Head, bush of hair. Sp. Shod, having shoes on. Fa. L. 1. 98. Shode and bare: Shod and bare-footed. RR. 7463.
Shofe: To shove, push, drive; Pushed. RR. 534. Drove. Phyl. 19. Shofth, for Shofth: Shoveth, &c. Fr. 882.
Sbonde: Shame; Harm, misfortune. Fa. L. 1. 88. See Shende.
Shone, Shoone: Shoes. Gam. 423.
Shonne: To shun, avoid.
Shop, Shope, Shoped: Shaped; Prepared, &c. See Shape.
Shore: A cleft, a cranny. RR. 2260. From the AS. Scynan, To divide.
Shot: Shut. MR. 250.
Shotir: A shooter. The Ewe is called Shotir, AF. 180. because it is proper for making Bows. Shottis: Arrows, darts, any thing that is shot. Tr. L. 2. 58.
Shoufe, MR. 804. MS. Ch. and H. 1. Showne. By comparing these with other Copies I guess the true Reading of the two Verses to be this;
Though I answer and somedell sette his bowne;
For lesfull it is with force, force off to shoun,
for shouven, To shove off, oppose, or resist. See Houfe.
Shoure, Shoures. See Stoures.
Shoue: A shoe. Mo. 2401.
Shreudneffe: Wickedness, &c. Tr. L. 2. 858. See Shrend.
Shren, Shrene: A villain, &c. Scurra, p. 376, b. See Shrend. Shren his face; Beshrew him, a curse light on him.
Shrend: Impious, vile, wicked; Impius, nequam, Boeth. Ill-natured. Shrendes: Wicked folk. Shrendes and Felons are used as synonymous in Boeth. p. 364, a. Iniqui, scelesti.
Shrift: Confession. No. 288. Shrift-father: A Father Confessor. RR. 6423.
Shright: Shrieked. Sq. 442.
Shrive, Shriven: To confess one's self.
Shroff: Confess. Ber. 847.
Shronde: To cover, hide. Bl. Kn. 148.
Sibbe: Kindred, alliance, relation. AS. Sybbe.
Sice fortune is tourmid to an ace; so the common Editions read Mo. 687. The greatest fortune is changed to the lowest or meanest; A Metaphor taken from Dice, when in the lowest of the highest cast expected, there comes up the lowest. See Affe.
Sie: To see; Saw. Fr. 2396. PL. 194. PW. 136. To fall off. Tr. L. 5. 182. perhaps from the Fr. Sier; To fall after; unless it should be read Stie, from the AS. Stigan, Descendere.
Sigh: Saw. RR. 818. To see. Ber. 863.
Sight: Sighed. Tr. L. 4. 714.
Sightfull, p. 519, b. Visible.
Signe: To assign, appoint. CL. 642.
Signifer: The Ecliptick, or Zodiack, so called from the Twelve Signs. Tr. L. 5. 1020.
Significance: Signification, intimation. Tr. L. 5. 1446.
Sike: Sick. For sike, WB. 394. For being sick. Sikeliche: Sick, sickly. Tr. L. 2. 1528.
Sike, Siklin: To seek; To sigh.
Siker: Firm, sure, certain, safe. Sikerneß: Security, certainty, assurance, firmness: But instead of Sikerneß, Tr. L. 3. 833. MS. Sp. hath Selineß: Happiness.
Sikerde: Made sure, assured of. Ar. 243.
Sikes: Sighs.
Sikir, Sikre, as Siker. Sikirneß, as Sikerneß. In Tr. L. 2. 843. Ca. and al. read Secretneße.
Sikith: Maketh sick. CN. 19.
Sikkir, as Siker.
Sild: Seldom. p. 902, b.
Silfin: Self.
Silineße, Tr. L. 3. 827. for Selineß, V.
Simble, Prol. 119. It is simple in all the MSS. and printed Editions of any Authority that I have seen.
Similacion: Diffimulation, hypocrisy. RR. 782.
Similineße, Fl. 206. for Semelineß: Decency in behaviour.
Similitude: The like effect, the same sense. No. 442.
Simply: Simply, modestly. RR. 3861.

Simple of attire, Tr. L. 1. 181. Drest in a plain attire, or habit. But MS. Sp. hath it, Simple of beryinge; Of a modest, easy behaviour, which seems to be the better Reading, her simple attire being described before, ib. 170.
Simpleße: Simplicity, plainness, downright honesty. RR. 954.
Sin: Since. La. 815.
Singid snout, Mo. 1959. A singed nose, i. e. a tann'd face.
Singuler: Single; One.
Sipher in Augrim: A Cypher in Arithmetick. See Augrim.
Siris: Sirs.
Sise, see Sice.
Sisouris: Jurymen. Gam. 1247. See Skene in Affiores.
Sisterne: Sisters. The Parca, or Goddesses of Destiny, are so called. Bl. Kn. 489.
Sit: To become, suit, agree with: It sit not me, No. 2671. It does not become me. It sat me well bettir, Tr. L. 2. 117. It would become me better. It sat me fore, Tr. L. 3. 241. It grieved me much. It were an unsittende thing. It were unbecoming. Gower, f. 151. p. 1.
Sith: Time. Sithis: Times. Ofte sithis: Often times. AS. Sirð, Sirðon, Vice, Vices.
Sithe, Siben, Sithin, Sithnes: Since; Afterwards. Gam. 1039.
Sithes: Scythes. p. 479, a.
Sithin. See Sithe.
Sistande: Sitting; Fitting, becoming. RR. 2263.
Sitte: Set. RR. 1398. See Sit.
Sixe, No. 800. should be fixe, i. e. Fixed, opposed in Chymistry to Volatile.
Scaffaw, RR. 4176. An Engine of War. Sp. Perhaps what is in Lat: called Testudo, a Scaffold or Fence made of boards, covered with raw hides, under which the Besiegers of Towns approached the Walls. Fr. Echaffaw.
Skall: A scab, scabbiness. Mo. 2222. Sk. thinks it signifies Scalp.
Skere, Mo. 2927. To scowr, to make clean. Cam.
Skill: Reason. Tr. L. 2. 365; L. 3. 647. LW. 385. Skilles: Reasons. p. 159, b. Skilfull: Reasonable. Tr. L. 2. 392; L. 3. 288, 940.
Skinke: To fill or pour out drink. Sq. 1238. AS. Scencan.
Sklander: Slender. Prol. 589.
Sklere, Skleren: To cover. p. 506, b. It was smeren in the former Editions in Mo. 2647.
Skore, p. 203, b. 1. 29. So MS. Ch. Others have Sconre; but most of the Editions have either sconre or beat.
Skorclish, p. 372, a. 1. 29. for scorchish: Scorcheth. Lat. Torret.
Skippe: A scrip, a wallet, a fatchel. RR. 7405.
Skriviner: A scrivener, a writer, or transcriber of Books. Bl. Kn. 196. p. 626, b.
Slaen: To slay, to kill. Tr. L. 1. 824. Slaeth: Slayeth. Tr. L. 5. 1342.
Slain, RR. 7316. for Flain: Flead.
Slake: Slack, slow, Prol. 2903: To slacken; To quench; To appeale; To desist, forbear. PW. 98.
Slannis, RR. 7092. for Flannis: Custards. Sk. Fr. Flans.
Slawe: Slain.
Slea, Sleen: To slay, to kill.
Sleer, Prol. 2007. Sleer, Hyp. 2. A slayer, a murderer.
Sledes: Sledges, carriages; Vehicles; Vehiculus. p. 386, b.
Slethe, Slethe: Slayeth.
Sleke, as Slake.
Slen, Slene: To slay. La. 960, 965.
Slepe: Sleep; To sleep; Slept; Sleepy, causing sleep. Prol. 1389.
Slepin: To sleep.
Slet, Di. 295. Slete, RR. 2651. Sleet, a mixture of rain and snow.
Slethe. See Slethe.
Sleveless, p. 500, a. Lifeless. Sk. f. Idle.
Slider, Cl. 69. Slidir: Slippery.
Sliding of corage: Easily perswaded, or moved to comp passion. Tr. L. 5. 825.
Slie: Wife; Cunning.
Slightly, for Slightly, or (as in MS. Sp.) Slily: Slyly, wisely, prudently. Tr. L. 2. 462. Wyfely, Ca. . In RR. 3156. it should be slighly.
Slippir:

Slippir : Slippery. BD. 264.
Slitbir : Slippery. Prok. 1266.
Slivere : A small slice or piece. Tr. L. 3. 1015. MS. Sp. reads it lyvere, which is much the same.
Slo : To slay. RR. 1953.
Slogardie : Sloth, sluggishness. Sc. 76.
Slombringas : Slumblings. Tr. L. 5. 246.
Slonge : Slung. Tr. L. 2. 941. Ca. and ad. read it, with syngis and stones.
Sloppe : A sort of breeches. p. 198, a.
Slottish : Sluttish, slovenly. No. 647.
Slough : Slew.
Slowe : Slain. Also, A slough. RR. 4751.
Sme : Slew. An. 56.
Slaggardie, as Slogardie.
Sly : Slideth. No. 703.
Smalisse : Pretty small or slender. RR. 826.
Small : Fine. p. 198, a.
Smaragde : An Emerald. Lat. Smaragdus.
Smarrh, Gam. 373. f. Smart. H. 1. reads it, Imertly [smartlye, MS. Sp.] and skete.
Smaught : Taisted; Perceived. Ber. 2387. From Smack.
Smere, Smeren : To besmear, anoint. Mo. 2222.
Smerande : Smarting. Test.
Smerin : To smart. Smerin that : Smart, or suffer for that. RR. 7107.
Smokleß : Stark naked, without a smock.
Smoterlich, MR. 855. Snout-fair, or painted. Sp. Perhaps of a fallow complexion, or freckled, from Smüt; or Fair, clear. Sc. Smout. See Gl. V.
Smythieth : Forgeth, as a smith. MR. 653.
Snache : To snatch, or snap. PT. 651.
Snele, Ber. 1972. Snel, Snell, Ib. 961, 1017. Presently, immediately. AS. Snel, Swift, nimble, &c.
Snefe : To sneeze. PT. 42.
Snewid : Snowed. It snewid, &c. Prok. 347. That is, Meat and drink were as plentiful in his house, as Snow in Winter. This Metaphorical Expression of Abundance by Snow is used by Gower, fol. 135. p. 2, a.
He was with yestis all besnewid.
Snibb, Prok. 525. Snybbe : To snubb; chide, reprove, rebuke.
Snyffuh : Snuffleth. PT. 39.
Sobirliche, Sobirly : Soberly, gravely. Instead of Sobirly, Tr. L. 4. 178. Ca. hath, so breuely, i. e. so briefly.
Soc : The AS. Soc, signifies Power, Authority or Licence to administer Justice; and execute Laws; Also, The Precinct wherein such Power is exercised. It is sometimes used for Duties and Services due from Tenants to their Landlord, as Mowing, Carriages, Grinding at his Mill, &c. whence Toll taken for Grinding is called Soc, Mo. 2315. And Custom to a Mill is called Sokin, MR. 879.
Socour, Socours : Succour, help. Fr. Secours.
Sodainliche : Suddenly.
Sodenly, Sq. 1578. See Sorelly.
Soficiente : Sufficient. p. 206, at
Soget : Subject. CL. 93.
Soigne : Care, diligence. RR. 3882. Fr. soin, or soign.
Soile, for Affoile : To absolve. Mo. 2926.
Sojour, Sojourne : Stay, abide, residence. RR. 4282, 5149.
Thalt sojour; Sojourneth, Ib. 4979. Sojournant : A sojourner. Mo. 2712. Fr. Sejour, Stay, &c. Sejourner, To sojourn.
Sokid : Sucked. Fr. 1480.
Sokin. See Soc.
Soking of his—Ber. 1394. Chyld seems to be wanting here, which being added will make the sense plain; The sucking of his child.
Sokingly : Leisurely, gently. p. 156, a.
Solace, Solas : Comfort, delight, mirth, spott, diversion.
Sole : Alone. RR. 2395. Solitary. AF. 505.
Soleine : Solitary. Ch. Dr. 982. Alone. AL. 607, 614.
Sullen. RR. 3897. Solein [not sole in] purpose; A selfish purpose. p. 508, a. 1. 13.
Solempne : Solemn, majestick, grave. Solempnely : Gravely.
Solere : A solar, an upper floor.
Solere Hall, MR. 881. H. 1. MS. Ch. and all the printed Editions that I have seen before Mr. Spegh's in 1602. read it Soler, or Solere. Tho' he retained Solere in the Text of the Edition 1598. yet in his Notes he directs it to be read Scholar's Hall, that is (says he) "The University-Hall, founded by the Chancellor and Masters of the University, Anno. 1326. but since united to the Foundation of the Lady Elisabeth de Burgo, Countess of Clare, and called Clare-Hall. If Scholar's or Scholler's Hall be the true reading; perhaps it may mean a College Founded by Edward the Third, by the name of Aula Sclorum Regis, now part of Trinity College. See Rymer's Fœd. Vol. VII. p. 239. Pro Sclorum Aula Regis Ordinationes. Cum Dominus Edwardus, bone memorie, nuper Rex Angliæ, Avus noster ordinasset quoddam Collegium in Universitate Cantabrigiæ, in quodam manso, quod Aulam Sclorum Regis vocari fecit, perpetuis temporibus duraturum; Nos volentes, &c.

Syng, p. 504, b. 1. 61. f. Corrupted from Feling : Sense. Somar, Bal. 190. Somir, LW. 142. Somme, RR. 1430. The Summer.

Somdele : Somewhat. Prok. 448. In some measure or degree. See Dile.

Somir. See Somar.

Somme, Fr. A sum, A burden. With his tenthé somme. Tr. L. 2. 1249. Perhaps it may signify Horsemen, or Servants on horseback. The Fr. Somme signifies a Burden or Load, whence Sompter-horse, Fr. Sommier; and perhaps this place should be read, with his tenne sommes ifere. MS. Sp. reads it his X Somme, and Kyn. renders it Denis stipatus servis; but Ca. hath it, wyth his people in feere. Sommis : Sums.

Sompne, Fr. 313. To summon; whence Sompnour : An Apparitor, an inferior Officer that summons Delinquents to appear in Ecclesiastical Courts.

Son, Sone, Sonne : A son; The Sun. Sonne ybrent : Sunburnt.

Sond, Sonde : Sand. Ch. Dr. 2018. A message. Tr. L. 3. 493. A present, or whatever may be sent. Of Goddis sonde, No. 2727. Of God's sending, of what God has sent. Sondis, Ber. 3211. Presents.

Sondid, or (as in MS. Sp.) Sandyd : Sanded, gravelled. Tr. L. 2. 822.

Sondin : To send.

Sone : Soon. Come hitbir lovis sone, Prok. 674. This doth not seem to be the true Reading; for Sone is not a proper Rhime to Rome. H. 1. MS. Ch. and all the old Editions read it, Come hitbir love to me, and in some of them, to me, is written rome, and may be pronounced as one Syllable, to rhyme to Rome; or else Rome may be divided into two Syllables Ro-me, to answer to to me, which will make the numbers compleat in both Verses. See Alouth. Come hitbir Love [or Loves] to me, might be the beginning of a Song well known in Chaucer's time. See Son, &c.

Soneneß, AL. 61. Noise; from the Lat. Sonus. Sp. Some Editions read it soneneß.

Songedeß : Didst sing. Test.

Sonir : Sooner.

Sonken : Sunk. RR. 5113.

Sonne. See Sm.

Sonnisse : Sunniss, yellow. Sonnisse of bette, Tt. L. 4. 736. Bright yellow.

Soorb, as Soib.

Sope : To sup. PT. 217. Soper, Ib. 286. Sopor : A supper. A rere sopor, Ib. 365. A second supper. So Lidg. describes the Luxury of Sardanapalus in The Fall of Princes, L. 2. C. 14.

*Cherisbynge surfetes, wasche, and glotony—
 Founde rere suppers and fetherbeddes soft,
 Drynke late, and chaunge his wines oft.*

Sopheme; RR. 7471. A Sophism, a Fallacy; Sophistry.

Sophisms : Sophisms, Subtleties. Sq. 574.

Sople : Supple, flexible; Complying. Cr. 138.

Sorde, Cr. 211. Sortel-colour. See Gl. V. in Sore.

Sorie : Sorrowfull.

Sorowdest, for Sorowdest : Didst lament or bewail. Boeth.

Sorne : Sorrow. Prok. 2824.

Sort, Tr. L. 2. 1754. Sorte, Pars. Fortunt, lot.

Sorrid : Allotted. Tr. L. 5. 1826.

Sore : Sweet. Prok. 1. Soot. Test. L. 2. p. 506, B.

Sorelly [so it should be read Sq. 1578. as in MS. Ch. and ad. not solely] Subtly, cunningly.

Soth,

Soth, Sothe: Truth; True. AS. 808. Sothir: Truer.
Sotherne: Southern. Mo. 3352. MS. Ch. reads it Sowtherne.
 It seems there to signify Plain, honest, simple, &c. See
Gl. V. in Sodroun.

Sothfast: True. AS. 808. Sothfastneffe: Truth.

Sothneß: Truth. See Soth.

Sothfaw: Veracity. RR. 6125.

Sorill: Subtle, cunning, crafty.

Sotille: Subtilty, a sleight. WB. 576.

Sottid: Befotted, stupid, dull. Test.

Souble, Mo. 1998. f. Supple; Tractable. In the Edition
 1602. and al. it is Saukle, Poor, wretched. Sp. Poor and thin. Com. See Sk. in Soukle.

Soudon, Sowdan: A Sultan, or Mahometan Sovereign
 Prince. The true Reading of La. 422. (as it is in H. 1.
MS. Ch. and the oldest Editions) is thus;

O fodeyn wo, that ever art successour, &c.

i. e. O fuddainWo, or Misfortune, that ever succeedest worldly happiness, &c.

Soudonneß: A Sultan's Consort, or Saltana. La. 359.

Soveraine notabilite, Mo. 1324. A very remarkable observation, or occurrence. Soverainly: Above all, especially. ib. 1477.

Soverainneß: Sovereignty, Government. Test.

Sowir: Sowr. Magd. 486.

Souke: To suck; To spend, consume. MR. 1308. Souk-
ing: Sucking. Test. p. 484, a.

Soule, Ber. 257. Alone. See Sole.

Souled blyffe: The bliss of the Soul, or spiritual happiness.
p. 507, a.

Sounde: To make sound or whole, to heal. An. 245. To grow found. Bl. Kn. 293.

Sonne, as foun.

Sonnitrefß, Bal. 846. Hair shining as the Sun. Sp. It should be Sonnitrefse (n and n being often confounded by the Transcribers) and perhaps it should be read in two words, Sunny trefse, i. e. Sunnith tresses. See Sonnish.

Soupe, Soupin: To sup.

Soupir: A supper.

Souple: Supple, pliant.

Sourde, p. 198, b. To proceed, to spring. Fr. Soudre; whence

Sours: Source, spring. Fr. Source.

Sours, Fr. 674. Fa. L. 2. 36, 43. Soar is a Term in Falconry, when the Hawk soars or flies aloft, termed also Towering; and Source is when he takes the Game in flight. Holme's Academy of Armory.

Souter: A cobbler. MR. 796. Lat. Sutor.

Southly, Ch. Dr. 1324. CL. 140. seems to signify Softly.

Some, Tr. L. 2. 1201, 1203. To seal; from the Fr. Seau, or Sean, A seal.

Sowirs: Sores, male fallow deer four years old. Dr. Ch.
 429.

Sown: Sound, noise. Tr. L. 5. 580. To sound; To signify;
 To tend to; To sound well or ill in a moral sense.
Sownid into bad, Tr. L. 4. 1675. Savoured of evil. Sownish into honeste; Is agreeable to good manners. Also, To swoon away. Prol. 915.

Spannishing, RR. 3633. Full breadth. Sp. A span broad. Sk.

Spar, Sparre: A wooden bar or bolt of a door. Prol.
 992.

Sparande: Sparing, niggardly. RR. 5363.

Sparrid: Barred, bolted; Locked. RR. 3320.

Sparthe: A double Ax; Bipennis. See Fr. Gl. in Sparth.

Species: Sorts, kinds; Parts. p. 191, a. Lat. Species.

Spede: Speed; Success; To dispatch. Spedefull: Successfull, effectual.

Spell, No. 3398. A history, a tale; Discourse. AS. Spel.

Spence: Any place where Provision is laid up, as a Lat-der, a Buttery, a Cellar. Also, Expences.

Spene: To spend, consume.

Sperde, BD. 66. Spered, RR. 2099. Eockt up.

Spere: A spear; A Sphere. Fr. 2839. A long pole or staff.
Lat. Contin. AS. Speape, Surna, a Flake, &c. Speris:

Spears; Spheres. Fr. 2836. AF. 59, 61.

Sperhauke: A Sparrow-hawk.

Speris: Asketh, enquireth. Cr. 272. See Gl. V.

Sperkel and, p. 481, b. should be sperkeland: Dispersed, wandering, strayed.

Sperm: Seed. Mo. 121. It was so in the former Editions;

but in this it is changed to streme, from MS. Ch. which doth not alter the sense.

Sperrid, as Sperde.

Spete: To spit.

Spetouse: Spightfull. PT. 635.

Spette: Speedeth, fareth. Gam. 1599.

Spicid conscience, Prol. 528. A double conscience. The meaning is, He did not distinguish upon Conscience, and divide it into many Species, or sorts; but had only one honest, plain one. A sweet spicid conscience, WB.
 435. A sweet sort of conscience. f. Good humour.

Spill: To dye, perish. MR. 170. To destroy. Fr. 1533.

Spilte: Destroyed, lost. Test.

Spire, p. 515, a. A sprout or twig. Gam. 997. See Sperre.
An oaken spire; An oaken cudgel; perhaps from the Lat. Sparus.

Spired, No. 3311. f. Blowed. In the former Editions which have this Passage, it is Spied.

Spitous: Spightfull, envious. RR. 979. Spitouslich, PT.
 520. Spitously, WB. 223. Spitefully, &c. Severely:

Spitil house: An Hospital. Cr. 391.

Splate, Bl. Kn. 33. To display, to set forth; To dress. Sk.

Spone, Prol. 2608. Some read it spou, others spoon, or spoun:
f. Thrust, driven, pushed; from the It. Spingere, To thrust, &c. See Gl. V. in Spang.

Sponis: Spoons.

Sponne: Spun. Tr. L. 3. 735.

Spontanie: Spontaneous, voluntary. p. 511, b.

Spore: A spur. Prol. 2605. Sporis: Spurs. ib. 1706.

Sporne: To spurn at, to stumble upon. Tr. L. 2. 797.

Sponsale: Marriage. Fr. Espousailles, the Marriage-vow.
RL. 251.

Sprant, Sprend, Spreynid, Sprint: Sprinkled. They seem to come from an old word sprene, for Sprinkle; from whence comes spreuth, Gam. 997. Sprinkleth.

Spray: A sprig, a small bough, or twig.

Sprend, Spreuth, Spreynid, Sprint. See Sprant.

Springoldis, RR. 4191. Warlike engines. Sk.

Sprti, for Spirit, Ar. 184.

Spronge: Sprung. Test.

Spryngill: An Instrument to sprinkle Holy Water with:
all. PT. 138. Lat. Aspergillum.

Sprnid: Spurned, stumbled upon. MR. 1172.

Spwing, for Sprewing, p. 192, a. L. 58. Spuing.

Squaimus, MR. 229. Squeamish. Adjectives in om, are often written with us, in the MSS. So dangerous in the next Verse is danngernus in MS. Ch.

Squames: Scales of Fish.

Squires: Squares. p. 441, a.

Squirish: Ushereth, attendeth, waiteth upon as a Gentleman-usher. WB. 305.

Stabill, Stable: To confirm, establish. Ber. 1242. Hen.
 145.

Stablie: Firmly. Boeth.

Stabishment: Establishment. p. 508, a.

Stace: The Poet Stacius. See State.

Stacke: Stuck. RR. 458.

Stad, Stadde: Placed, stated; Encumbered, oppressed;
 Befet. See Befadde.

Stady: The Stadium; A Course, a place for running;
p. 388, b.

Staker: To stagger, to be anxious. Hyper. 127.

Stalkes: The steps of a ladder. MR. 517.

Stallid, Ber. 1876. Perhaps for Stablid (by an easy mistake in the Transcribers of b for l) Established, ordained.

Stalworthe: Brave; stout. Gam. 403. See Gl. V. in Stalwart.

Stamen, Stamin: Hemp, or course cloth made of it.

Stanch, Staunch: To stop; To satisfy.

Stan dede: Stone-dead. Ber. 3082.

Stant, MR. 815. Stante, Ph. 18. Standeth.

Stapid, Stappid: Stepped, trod. PT. 585.

Stark: Strong; Stiff. Sq. 974. AS. Stapc. Kilian.
Sterke.

Starf, Starfe: Dyed; from Sterve, V.

Starlinges: Sterling Money.

Startling, for Sparkling, Di. 279.

State of Thebis: The Poet Stacius, who wrote of the Wars of Thebes. Prol. 2296. al. Stace.

Statelich: Stately, stiff, proud. Prol. 140;

Staunche,

Staunch, as Stanch. Covetise that may not be stancheth, Boeth. p. 367, a. Insatiable covetousness.

Stede: A place. Gam. 841. A steed, a horse. Stedis: Steeds.

Stedshyp: Steadiness, firmness, assurance. p. 484, a.

Steerileß: Without steerage. La. 440.

Steire: The rudder, or helm of a ship, the steerage.

Stele, Cup. 50. A handle. AS. Stele, Kilian. Stelt, Capulus, manubrium. Also Steel; To steal.

Stellise: To transform into a star, or to call a star or Constellation after ones name. LW. 525. Fa. L. 2. 78. See lb. 91.

Stent: A hint, a stop, or stay. At one stent, BD. 769. In the same case or condition, equally regarded.

Stent, Stentin: To stay; To stop, desist, cease, give over.

Stentis, perhaps for Statutes, CL. 1009. See Stent.

Stere: To stir; To steer: Also, A rudder, Phyl. 23. A steer, or young bullock. Stering: Stirring. Fa. L. 1. 478. Sterse, as Starf.

Stersman: A steersman. Fa. L. 1. 436.

Sterne: To lay down; from the Lat. Sternere. Sk. Perhaps it is put for Steren: To stir up. p. 488, a. Also, Sharp, cruel, fierce. Mo. 1993. Sterneliche, Sternily: Fiercely, &c.

Sterre: A star. Sterris: Stars.

Stert, Sterte: To escape; Escaped. Tr. L. 4. 93. See Asterte.

Sterling: Suddainly, or unexpected. Luc. 62.

Sterve: To dye, to perish. AS. Steopran, To kill.

Sterven, Mori. Kilian.

Steven, Sevin: A voice, sound. AS. Stefn. An appointment. Set a stevin: To appoint a time. MR. 1275. Was set a steven: A time was appointed. CMV. 52. At unset stevin: Unexpected. Pro. 1526. So Lidgate in the Fall of Princes, L. 2. C. 21. and L. 3. Pro. useth, At unset honre; At a time when it is not expected.

Stewe: A little closet. Tr. L. 3. 602, 699. A small pond for fish. Pro. 351.

Stey: To stay; Also, To mount, ascend. p. 480, a. AS. Stigan.

Steyrs: Stairs. p. 480, a. See Stey.

Stighed: Ascended. Hen. 177. See Stey.

Sille. See Sirete.

Sille: Quiet. Let it be stille, Fr. 2240. Let it alone. Stillneß: Quietness; Silence. Boeth.

Stint. See Stent.

Stith, Pro. 2028. An anvil. Sp. See Sk. in Stithy.

Stives: Stews, where lewd women prostitute themselves. Fr. 68.

Stobill: Stubble. MR. 1243.

Stockid in prison: Imprisoned. Tr. L. 3. 381.

Stokis: The Stocks. PT. 490.

Stole: An Ecclesiastical Vestment worn by Priests and Deacons when they officiated. Sq. 1219. See Fr. Gl. Stolis: Stools. WB. 288. Stole, Ber. 1669. seems to be mistaken for Scole, or Schole, V.

Stongin: Stung.

Stonied: Astonished, confounded. Boeth.

Stont: Standeth. No. 2622. Stood.

Stopin in age, Sq. 1030. Stept or advanced in years; as in Mo. 934. Isstept in age.

Store. I told of it no store; I made no account of it. WB. 203. Mo. 1269. See Tell.

Storfall: Historical, in opposition to Fabulous. CL. 123.

Storke, the wreker of advouerie. "This bird (says Sp.) breedeth in the Chimney-tops of houses, and, as it is written of him, if the man, or the wife commit adultery, he presently forsaketh the place; and as Aristotle saith, If his female play false, he will, if he can, kill her, or else utterly forsake her. Therefore Chaucer called him the wreker [i. e. revenger] of adultery."

Stot, Pro. 618. A young horse. Sp. See Samp. in Stot-hopp.

Stote, Fr. 366. A fitch-hew, or pole-cat.

Stound, Stounde: A while, a little space, a moment. AS. Stund, Momentum, spatium, hora. Kilian. Stond.

In a stound, Mo. 1994. In stound, RR. 1733. MR. 884. All on a sudden. At diverse stounds, WB. 286.

At different times. Vicissitude or change, turn, hap. She ne maie stanche my stound ill, RR. 4472. She can not stop or help my misfortune. A smarting pain, a fitch. CCr. 122. See Gl. V. Astonishment, sorrow. Sk. Stoundemele: Various, changeable. RR. 3784. By turns. lb. 2304. AS. Stundomælum, Sensum, &c.

Stoundes, Stoundis: Moments; Seasons. Tr. L. 3. 1758.

Courses of the Seasons; Vices, p. 364, b. Stormie stoundis, CCr. 126. Stormy seasons, i. e. Anxious, disturbing thoughts. By stoundis; By turns. Boeth.

Stoure: A fight, an assault, a quarrel, a skirmish, an engagement. Stiff in stoure; Valiant in battle. RR. 1270. Perhaps stoures, lb. 4658. should be stoures; and stoure, Tr. L. 4. 47. might be stoure. H. 2. reads it, last oure.

Stradu: To constrain, force, compel. Mo. 1364.

Strake, Dr. Ch. 1312. f. Stretch, or straggle.

Straight, Straghten: Stretched out. Pro. 2918. Spread. RR. 1021.

Straunge, Tr. L. 2. 411. for Strangers; or it may be read straunge folk, as in MS. Sp.

Streight: Stretched. p. 507, a.

Stremes of the sonne: Rays of the Sun. p. 441, a.

Stremidin: Streamed, flowed. Tr. L. 4. 247. The Verse is otherwise read in MS. Sp.

His cyin—

So wepyn that thei semyn wellis twey.

Strene: Kindred, stock, race, descent. RR. 4859.

Strengift faithid: Having the strongest faith. Tr. L. 1. 1008.

Strengih is put for the Vertue of Fortitude, p. 507, b.

Strepe: To strip. RR. 6818.

Sirete. By stile and eke by strete, No. 2210. Over every stile and in every street, i. e. Every where, in town and country. In the same sense are used, Over stile and stone, By dale and eke by downe, in the Rhyme of Sir Thopas.

Strife: Endeavour. Bl. Kn. 357.

Strikes: Streaks; Stroaks; Lines. Astr.

Sripe: Race, kindred. CL. 16. f. for Siirpe, from the Lat. Siirps.

Strive, for Strife, Ch. Dr. 1191.

Stro: A straw. CCr. 28.

Strode: He was a learned Poet of Merton College in Oxford, in the time of Edw. III. See Leland in Chaucer's Life.

Stronde: A strand, a shore. Ar. 304. Water-side. Ber. 1146. It is put for Country in general, Pro. 13.

Strondword: Towards the strand or shore. Ber. 2403.

Strotbir, Ber. 848, 1151. seems to be the same with Rothbir; The rudder, or steerage of a ship. See lb. 2325.

Strought: Strawed; Lying flat on the ground. Boeth.

Stroundes: Strands. Boeth. p. 395, b.

Strout: To strut. Ber. 1107.

Stroy: To destroy. Ber. 1472.

Student: Studious, thoughtfull. p. 514, b.

Stuffed man, Ber. 997. A man well stuffed, well fed, one that eat plentifully.

Stulie: Foolish, silly. p. 494, a.

Sturt and strive with true tillers, Mo. 2808. They are able and wont to scuffle and contend with luttly strong Plowmen. Com.

Sry, Ber. 856, 860. See Srey.

Stylneß, as Silneß.

Suasion of swetnes Rhetorian: Perswasion of Oratorical sweetness. Boeth.

Subfumigations, Fa. L. 3. 174. A Ceremony used by Sorcerers to drive away evil spirits by burning Incense: Or, Smoaking of Corn, Cattle, &c. by way of Charm; a Practice still used by superstitious people on certain days.

Subget: Subject. Mo. 3152.

Sublimatories: Subliming pots, Vessels used by Chymists in Sublimation, whereby the more subtile parts of a mixt body are separated from the rest, and carried to the top of the Vessel, in the form of a very fine Powder; such Powders are called Flowers, as Flower of Sulphur, Benjamin, &c.

Submit: Subject. BD. 234.

Suckiny: A white Attire like a Rotchet. Sp. A Frock. RR. 1222. See Sk. in Surkney.

Sued: Followed. Mo. 1452.

Sufferant, Dr. Ch. 1010. See Suffraunt.

Sufficiantly, RR. 6743. should be Suffsauntly, V.

Suffirable: Patient, passive. WB. 442. Suffrid: Suffered. Suffsaunce:

Suffisaunce: Sufficiency, contentment. Prol. 492. Ability. CV. 17.

Suffisaunt: Sufficient; Able. Phyl. 131. Fr. Suffisant. Suffisauntly: Sufficiently.

Suffile: To bear; To be sufficiently able. p. 198, b.

Suffraunce: Patience. Mo. 2443.

Suffraunt: Suffering, patient.

Sugre: Sugar. Also, Sweet; Gratefull, pleasing. Sugrid: Sweetened, made sweet. Tr. L. 2. 384.

Sum: Some.

Superfyce: The Superficies, surface, or outside. Boeth.

Superne: Above; Supream. Bal. 367.

Supplien: To beseech, intreat; Supplicare, p. 379, a.

Supportation: Support. BD. 838.

Suppoale: Supplication. p. 511, a.

Supprised, p. 158, a. Surprised; Suddenly and strongly affected, taken, smitten. In Tr. L. 3. 1190. MS. Sp. has it uprised, i. e. raised up, elevated with his good fortune.

Supprize: To suppress. Fl. 232.

Surcote: A gown with a hood of the same. Sp. An upper coat. FL. 141. called the Overist courtyn, Prol. 292.

Surement: Security, assurance. Fr. 3088. or Severte (as in MS. Ch.) Security.

Surenels: Security, safety. Pr. RL. 126.

Suretie: Certainty, assurance. WB. 903.

Surid: Assured. Ber. 2361.

Surmonning: Surmounting, surpassing. CL. 356.

Surplus: The remainder, overplus. RR. 3676.

Surquedrie, Surquidri: Ambition; Presumption; An over-weening conceit of one's own knowledge.

Surrey, Surrie, La. 174, 178. Syrta in Asia. Former Editions read Surrie, Sq. 30. instead of Ruffy, as it is in this. MS. Ch. hath it, werryngge on Tartarie.

Sursumure, Fr. 2656. Fl. 75. A fore festered inwardly, and whole without. Sp. qu. Sursum sanatum. Sk.

Surveyaunce: Surveying, overseeing.

Suspect: Suspicious, suspected. Fr. 1570.

Suspeccionne: Suspicion. WB. 306.

Suspen: Suspended, interdicted. Mo. 2223.

Suspiris: Sighs. CN. 305.

Sustaan, for Sustance, AL. 741.

Sustene: To sustain. Prol. 195. But MS. Ch. reads there Festine, al. Fasten. Also, To stand. An. 178.

Susterne: Sisters.

Sustir: A sister. Tr. L. 2. 69: Sustrin: Sisters. Tr. L. 3. 734. Fasall sustin: The Fates or Destinies, Parca.

Sute: Series, order, rank. Bl. Kn. 83. Fr. Suite.

Suyr: To assure, to ensure. Ber. 754.

Swa: So. MR. 922.

Swagid: Affwaged, appeased. Bal. 523.

Swale: Swelled. No. 3069.

Swappe: To strike; To cut off, or, as we say, whip off. No. 377. To fall down suddenly. Fr. 2120. To throw or fling down violently. Tr. L. 4. 244.

Swart: Black, swarthy. Ch. Dr. 1862. Swartishe: Swarthy. Fa. L. 3. 557.

Swat: Sweated. Ber. 1080.

Sweigh: Force. Sp. A rumbling noise. AS. Speg, A violent crash; Turbo, p. 363, b.

Sweight, Tr. L. 2. 1383. Sk. derives it from the AS. Speg, Sound, and quotes this place for it: But it seems here to be rather a Corruption of Weigh. See Gl. V. in Swecht. MS. Sp. hath it thus;

The grete swerf doth hit than fall at onys.

See Gl. V. in Swarf.

Swele: To dye. Ber. 1615. f. leg. Swelte: To kill, suffocate. AS. Speltan.

Swell, Ber. 388. should perhaps be snell, V.

Swent, Bal. 903. Former Editions have it iswent or iswent.

Swere: The neck. PT. 361. AS. Speop.

Swerne: To swear. RR. 4834.

Swert, Bal. 903. Swarthinels. See Swart.

Sweet: Sweated. Magd. 126. Also, Sweet.

Sweete: Sweated.

Swetynge, PT. 36. Sweet-heart, Darling.

Sweven: A dream. AS. Spepen. Hence perhaps Asweved, Fa. L. 2. 41. for Aswevened: Being as it were in a dream.

Swevenes: Dreams. Tr. L. 5. 358.

Swilk: Such. MR. 1062.

Swinke: To work, to labour. Also, Labour, pains. Prol. 188. Swinker: A hard labourer. Ik. 533.

Swire, as Swere.

Swithe: Swiftly, quickly, presently, immediately. AS. Spide.

Swolowe: The swallow, the throat. Di. 179.

Swonne, Swoun: A swoon, a trance; To swoon.

Swough: Sound, noise. AF. 248. Fa. L. 2. 523. See Sweigh. A swoon, a trance. Tr. L. 4. 1211. Law. 137.

Swoun. See Swonne.

Swowe: A swoon, a trance. Dr. Ch. 2151.

Swyff: Swift. Ber. 1231.

Syghfull: Visible. p. 478, b.

Syn: Since.

Synglerly: Singularly, particularly, singly. p. 380, a.

T.

Tas: A heap. Prol. 1007. Fr. Tas.

Tabarde, Mo. 1949. Taberd, Prol. 20. "A Jacket or sleeveless coat, worn in times past by Noblemen in the Wars, but now, only by Heralds, and is called their Coat of Arms in Service. It was the Sign of an Inn in Southwark by London, within the which was the Lodging of the Abbot of Hyde by Winchester. This was the Hofilrie, where Chaucer and the other Pilgrims met together, and with Henry Bailie their Host accorded about the manner of their Journey to Canterbury: And whereas through time it had been much decayed, it is now by Mr. J. Preston, with the Abbot's House thereto adjoining, newly repaired, and with convenient rooms much encreased, for the receipt of many guests. It is now the Sign of the Talbot. Sp. It still bears the same Sign of the Talbot, and has on the Sign-Post this Inscription; This is the Inn where Sir Jeffrey Chaucer and the nine and twenty Pilgrims lodged in their Journey to Canterbury, Anno 1363. "A Tabbard (says Verstegan) is a short gown, that reached no farther than the mid-leg; it remaineth for the name of a Gown in Germany and the Netherlands. From the wearing of this Tabbard or Tabbard, some of those on the Foundation at Queen's College in Oxford are called Tabbardarii. Stow in his Survey. L. 4. C. 1. says it was a Jacket or sleeveless coat, whole before, open on both sides, with a square collar, winged at the shoulders. See Fr. Gl. in Tabardum, and Dr. Davies's Welsh Dict. in Tabar.

Tabouren: To make a drumming noise, as of a Tabour. LW. 354.

Tach, PT. 84. Ber. 347, 727. CN. 192. Techre, Bal. 237. Craft. Sp. Pranks, tricks; from the Fr. Tache, A spot; or Tacher, To endeavour, to attempt; which comes from the Lat. Tactare, a Frequentative of the Verb Tangere, To touch: So we say a Touch of Ink, for a Stain or Spot of Ink. See Sk. Perhaps it may signify Attack, attempt.

Tailagiers, RR. 6811. Receivers, or Collectors of Tolls, or any publick Taxes or Impositions. See Talages.

Tails, Prol. 572. Took by tale; Took upon account, or upon trust. See Tale.

Take for Taken, Prol. 1868. Ber. 1326. Again him take; To oppose him. RR. 3529.

Takerde, PT. 190. f. Taberd. See Tabarde.

Takil: Tackle. RR. 1727. Shooting tackle, as Arrows, &c. as we say, Fishing tackle. Dr. Davies explains the CB. Taccl, by Sagitta, An arrow.

Talages: Taxes, Impositions. p. 201, a. Fr. Tailages.

Talcuisse: Talkative. RL. 334.

Tale: To talk, to tell a tale. Ch. Dr. 103. Speech, discourse; Oratio, p. 364, a. A reckoning, account. Li. till tale he therof told, Mo. 1233. He made little account of it; did not mind it. Taling: Talking, telling of tales. No. 2942.

Talent: Desire, inclination. See p. 152, a. l. 13, 17. Affection. Tr. L. 3. 145. Set his talent, RR. 1716. Set his mind.

Tall,

Tall, for Tell, RR. 1356.
Tane: Taken. Ch. Dr. 888.
Tapes: Tapestry. AL. 499.
Tapinage, RR. 7363. Secresie, silyness. Sp. Perhaps from the Fr. Tapir, To squat down. Fr. En tapinois, Secretly, cunningly.
Tapis: Tapes, strings. MR. 133.
Tapiser: A Tapestry-maker. Proh. 363. Fr. Tapissier.
Tapistère: A tapster. Proh. 241.
Tapite: To hang with Tapestry. Dr. Ch. 260.
Tare: Tore. Magd. 150. See To.
Targe: A target. Proh. 473.
Tars: The City Tarsus in Glicia. Proh. 2162.
Tartarium, FL. 212. Du Fresne in his Gl. says there was a sort of fine Cloth imported from, or manufactured in Tartary, called Tartarin; but Sk. thinks it was called Tartaron, 4. H. 8. Cap. 6. from the City Tortona in the Milaneze, where that sort of fine Silk was made.
T'assay: To assay. Tr. L. 5. 783.
Tassid: Fringed. MR. 143. It is better in MS. Ch. Tasseled with grene silke; Having green silk tassels.
Tast: To feel. No. 514. Fr. Taster, tater.
Tatarmagges: Ragges, jagges. Sp. Tatter'd rags. RR. 7211.
Tatche: Craft. Sk. From the AS. Tacan, To teach. See Tach.
Tave, Ber. 1327. To rage; a word used in Lincolnshire. Ray's Coll.
Tavernere: One that haunts Taverns, a common drunkard. No. 2223.
Taur and Mars therein, WB. 613. "Taurus being properly Venus's Houle, under the which this woman was born, Mars then ruling in the same prognostic, cateth great Incontinency. Sp.
Tayllagys, p. 205, b. as Talages.
Teche: To teach. WB. 642. See Tach, and Tache.
Teene, as Tene.
Teine: Little. No. 1246, &c. A little piece. Tiny is still used for Little. See Tene.
Tel, for Til, i. e. Untill. Dr. Ch. 1106.
Tell: To reckon, account, make account. Tell no store, Mo. 1269. Make no account.
Temperance: Temper, moderation. Fr. 2331.
Tempestuous: Tempestuous, troublesome. Tr. L. 2. 5.
Temps, Fr. Time.
Tenance: To enhance, advance or help. Also, Tenants. Mo. 2963. which is thus read in some Copies,
Her poore tenance fully they flite;
 "That is. They fleete, take off the cream of their poor tenants, i. e. they lick the fat from their tenants' beards, taking away the best of their Estate. Cam.
Tend: To attend. Ber. 1907. Tendant: Attending. ib. 501.
Tene, Teine, An. 180. Sorrow, grief, affliction, trouble; Injury, slander; Anger, provocation. Magd. 5. AS. Teon; and Teen is Angry. Ray's Coll. Also, to afflict, to grieve. p. 405, a: 481, a. Nene fruit filled with winter sene, RR. 4750. perhaps foiled; i. e. hurt with the injury of winter-weather. Nighis tene, Fl. 116. The injury of the night. Tenefull: Sad, sorrowfull, &c.
Tennith: Tenth. Tr. L. 5. 642.
Tent: Intent. PT. 126.
Tenistly: Diligently. Fr. 1364. See Enamistly.
Tenyth: Tenth. Ber. 1900.
Tercell, Tercellet, Sq. 522. The Male of all large Hawks is called the Tassil, or Tercoll.
Tere: To tear. It medish not this matere oft to tene, Tr. L. 3. 1649. It is needless often to repeat, or rip up this matter. Ca. and al. read it tere, i. e. Rir up.
Terins: A kind of Birds. RR. 665. Sk. conjectures that it signifies Teals. Kilian. Calingh. Terin is a sort of Gull; but in this place it seems to signify some singing bird.
Term of his live: For the term of his life, all his life time. No. 1500.
Termagaunt, No. 3318. qu. Termagnus, Thrice great, or Great in the Superlative degree. Bl. God.
Termine, Termyn: To determine, conclude, resolve.
Terrestre: Earthly. p. 500, b. But in Tr. L. in Read of His paradise terrestre, &c. MS. Sp. hath, His paradis, his joye, &c.
Tery: All in tears. Tr. L. 4. 821.

Teferis, Proh. 2501. Helmeta. Sp. Tefer seems rather to signify, the Head-stall of a Bridle. Fr. Testière.
Testife, MR. 896. Wild-brained. Sp. Testy. But in Tr. L. 5. 802. MS. Sp. has, Hard and trusty, instead of Hardy and testife.
Testis, No. 8319. Certain Devices to try gold and silver. Sp.
Teuch: A fashion. Sk. A trick, a stain, frowardness. Sp.
Teiches: Frowardness. Tr. L. 3. 937. qu. Teichineß. Sk. Stains. RR. 6517. See Tach.
Tewell, Fa. L. 3. 559. A chimney. Sp. from the Fr. Tuyau, A pipe. Sk.
Tewnes: The City of Tunis in Africa. Dr. Ch. 310. The place should be read thus;
So merie à soun, so swete entunis,
That certis for the town of Tunis
I n'oldi, &c.
Textuelo: Well versed in the Text of Holy Scripture. Mo. 1894.
Thacke: Thatch. Housis of thacke; Thatched houses. Ch. Dr. 1771.
Thakid, Fr. 295. Thakkid, MR. 196. Thumped, thwacked, beat.
Thank: Service, kindness, obligation. In thank: Kindly. RR. 2741. Thankes, Thankis: Acts, enterprizes, labour, reward. Sp. Ther, his thankes; With their, his good will. p. 213, a: 383, a. Thankis held, WB. 272. Make account of his services or thanks. Thankbeeld: Thank-worthy. Sp. Thankings: Obligations, services.
There: There. Dr. Ch. 256.
Thassige, Tr. L. 1. 465. for The assige, or Siege.
The: To thrive, to prosper. AS. Dean. So mote I the; So may I thrive, As I hope to thrive; or, as it is in Tr. L. 2. 120, 125. As evir thrive I, As evir mote I thrive. Wherever The is in this Edition printed with a Capital T, it stands for Thee; though there be no such distinction in the MSS. but thee is often written for the, and the for thee. The: They. Ber. 1726. See The dome.
Theche, Sq. 1907. Theiche, No. 2465. Plain, smooth. Sp.
The dome, No. 2913. (so it should be read in one word) Thriving, success. See The. That place is obscure as it is printed; Py. 1. hath a (.) after What. The two Verses will be intelligible, if read thus;
He take me certaine golde, that mote I wele
What—Evill thedome on his monkis snoute,
 That is, He brought me some gold, I know very well how much—A P—on his Monk's snout. This Curse seems to be spoke aside.
Thefely: Like a thief. Lut. 162.
Theff: A thief. PT. 599.
Thei: They. In p. 205, b. l. 6. it has no Antecedent; but MS. Ch. and al. have it men ben, &c.
Theiche. See Theche.
Thenne, WB. 1141. Thenair: Thence.
Theorike: Theory, speculation.
Ther: There; but most commonly, Their.
There: Their. Sq. 363. and sometimes, Where; and Thereas, for Whereas. There as, for There, i. e. Where. MR. 543. and No. 1639. but it should rather be read as one word, thereas. There gain, for There against, i. e. Concerning, or touching that matter. RR. 6555.
Thereout: Without. No. 1157. Cr. 38.
Therfro: From thence, or from them. RR. 4941.
Therinne: Therein. RR. 6260.
Therro: Thereunto; Likewise, besides, also.
Thevis: Thieves. Mo. 2750.
Thewis, Fa. L. 3. 744. Thewis, Sq. 1058. Hyper. 16. Qualifications, qualities, manners. AS. Deap, Mo., modus, instrumentum.
Thike: Thick. MR. 214.
Thilke: A contraction of The ilke: That, the same.
Thinke: Seem. Tr. L. 1. 406. So Methinks, Methought; It seemeth, seemed to me.
Thirle: To pierce through, to stab. An. 212. AS. Pipilian. Whence our Drill.
Tbo: Those. Also, Then, at that time. AS. Da. Although.
Thoforth: Thenceforth, thenceforward.
Thole: To suffer. Fr. 282. AS. Dolian.
Tholomew, Beq. 2019. Ptolemy the Astronomer.

Thomba

Thombe of gold, Prol. 565. f. A ring of gold upon his thumb. See Sk.

Thonderinge: Thundering. Tr. L. 2. 233. In MS. Sp. Ca. and al. it is, that maketh the thundur to ring. The true reading of the Verse seems to be this;

And Jupiter, that maketh the thonder ring.

Thonke: Favour. Tr. L. 3. 1214. See Thank.

Thonkis helde: Bestow labour, or liking. Sp. See Thank.

Thore, RR. 1853. It seems to be a contraction of The yore: Before; or a Corruption of yore, the y, and the AS. þ, for th, being written much alike in the MSS. Or else it may be put for there, metri causa.

Thorpe, AS. A village. Thorpis: Villages. WB. 871.

Thorrake, p. 204, b. A heap. Sp. Thoruk is commonly written for through in Lord Harley's MS. of Lidgate's Life of St. Edmund; and perhaps in this place it may signify a Thorow-fare.

Thongbry: Thoughtfull. Test.

Thrages, p. 494, b. Busy matters. Sp.

Thralle, p. 413, b. Verse 20. for Thrall, V.

Thrall: A slave, a servant. Thrallin: To enthrall, to enslave. Tr. L. 2. 773.

Thraſt: Thrust, crowded. No. 1774.

Thre: Three.

Threke: To thrust. Prol. 2614. But in this Edition it is threſte, and brefte for breke, Ib. 2613. to answer it; and so it is in MS. Ch. See Trice.

Thremote, Dr. Ch. 376. The blast of a horn. Sp. Mot (says Blo. is a Note, which a Huntsman winds on his Horn; and perhaps Thremote may be such a Note thrice repeated.

Threpe: To blame, rebuke. AS. Ðneapian. To affirm. Sp. To aver, urge, alledge. Gl. V. To call, or name. No. 847.

Thresten: To thirst; or perhaps to Thrust, or prefs forwards. Test. p. 482. a. l. 22.

Threte: To threaten. Th. 49.

Thridde: Third. Tr. L. 2. 56.

Thrie: Three, or Thrice. Everich thrie, Ch. Dr. 1780. Every three of them, or rather Every one thrice. As I have told you thrie, Tr. L. 2. 1285. thrice, i. e. often. But in MS. Sp. it is, As I told you try; Try as I told you.

Thrift: Prudence; discretion. No. 760. Thrifty: Prudent, discreet; Civil. Instead of In thrifty wife, Tr. L. 1. 275. MS. Sp. hath In busy wife; Earnestly. Thriftyly: Civilly. Tr. L. 3. 212. Ca. reads it, Honestly. Fr. Honnêtement.

Thrilled: Thrust through. RR. 7636. See Thirle.

Thringe: To thrust. RR. 7419. To throng, to croud. Tr. L. 4. 66. AS. Ðpingan, Premere: Whence our Throng.

Thringing: Thronging. RR. 656.

Thriste: Thrust; Did thrust. Tr. L. 3. 1580.

Thristid: Thirsted.

Throff: Throve, did thrive. Ber. 157.

Throng: Thrust. Sq. 1871. See Thringe.

Thropis: Villages. AF. 350. See Thorpe.

Throſillcock: A thrush. No. 3278.

Throtycorue, Prol. 2015. should be read throt ycorue, i. e. throat cut.

Through-girt: Pierced through, stabbed. Tr. L. 4. 627. See Gerd and Grit.

Throwe: Thrown. Ar. 75. Also, A cast, a stroke, a blow. Chancer uses it as the French do their Coup (of the same signification) for A short space, a little while. La. 954. Tr. L. 2. 687. In this throw, RR. 1771. In this time. Fr. A ce coup. Thromis: Pangs, violent fits. Tr. L. 5. 206, 1200. AS. Ðnopian, To suffer.

Thrugb: Through.

Thrust, for Thurst: Thirst. p. 483, b. l. 39. Thrusting: Thirsting. Thrustes: Thirst. Test. L. 3. Thrusty: Thirsty. Magd. 708.

Thrye, Thrys, Thrys: Thrice. Prol. 63.

Thwidd, MR. 824. In MS. Ch. and the former Editions it is Thweetell, Thwyell, or Thwittell: A whittle. AS. Ðpitel, Culcellus, a little knife. See Sheild.

Thwitten, RR. 933. f. Twisted. See Twithe. Twytten: Carved out. Sp. See Sk.

Thybir: Thither. AL. 166.

Tidde: Happened, befell. Tr. L. 1. 908. MS. Sp. hath the whole Verse thus;

The ſhold never beyd ſo fair a grace.

Ca. hath it in other words of the same sense;

That thou ſould neuer have had ſo, &c.

Tidife, LW. 154. Sq. 668. A kind of bird, perhaps that which we call a Titmouse. Sk.

Tiffelers attired in trecherie, Mo. 2135. Triflers given to treachery, and false dealing. Com.

Tikilneß: Nicety, delicacy, difficulty. Sc. 221.

Til, Till, Gam. 94. Cr. 1. Unto, to. Him till, RR. 4594. To him. There till, Ib. 3482. Thither. A likely thing him till, Ib. 4852. A thing like himself. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 65.

Tillages, as Tayllaiges.

Tiltbe: To till. p. 156, a. Tillage.

Timbeſters, RR. 767. Players on sounding Instruments. Sp. Perhaps from Timbrells. Sk.

Timbres, RR. 770. Fr. Timbre is a small Bell. Also, the Crest of a Helmet.

Tinging, Cr. 144. perhaps for *Ring*ing, or Tinkling.

Tirin: To tear. Tr. L. 1. 788.

Tifing, for Enticcing, PW. 103.

Tiffue: A lace or tape. Tr. L. 2. 639. Taffel, Ca. and al.

Tue: Betideth, happeneth. Tr. L. 1. 334. Tis trenlich The tite, Ber. 1244. Perhaps for Thie, &c. by an easy mistake of þ [t] for p. This happens to thee.

Tuben: To pay tithes. Mo. 3149.

Tuiring, Tr. L. 2. 1744. Persuading, courting. Sk. f. Tittering. But MS. Sp. hath it, In tarrying, purſuyte, &c.

Tittleleß: Without a Title. Tittleleſſe tyrant: An usurping Tyrant, that hath not a just Title.

To: A toe. This. To yere; This year. Tr. L. 3. 242. To day, for, This day. Untill. CM. 112. It is very often seemingly an Expletive before a Verb, or Participle; but it is often expressive of extraordinary violence in the action, especially when joyned with all; as, All to tare, All to rent, All to broken: Torn, rent, broken all to pieces. To draw, Mo. 3167. Drawn to pieces. To dashed with ſwerdis, Tr. L. 2. 640. or rather (as MS. Sp. hath it) To dashed was with, &c. Was dashed to pieces. Sometimes it is omitted before Verbs in the Infinitive Mood, as Daring do, Tr. L. 5. 387. Daring to do.

Toſore, Toſorne: Before, formerly. Ber. 2721. AS. To-ropan. In Boeth. p. 373, a. l. 55. it should be read to foren, i. e. foreign; Lat. per remotas populos.

Togithers: Together.

Tokining: Token. RR. 2439. Signification, intimation.

Told, Mo. 512. See Tell. Told of it [so it should be read] no ſore, — no dainty, WB. 203, 208. Made no account of it.

Tole, Clout, toy. Sp. A tool. Ber. 2607. Lowd. tole, Ib. 2184. A bad instrument, or tool. Toll. Mo. 2315. If it be read, as in other Editions, Take ſuch curſed ſocbe a tole, it must mean, Betake, or commit such a tool as the key of Heaven to so curſed a wretch. Com.

Tumbleſteres: Tumblers. No. 1991.

Tomblynge: Tumbling; Unconſtant. Boeth.

Tomblyſtere: A Tumbler, a woman-dancer, or Stage-play: cr. p. 493, a.

Tomedis: To boot, into the bargain. See Mede. In Tr. L. 2. 1201. it is the medis, in MS. Sp. and al. f. In the mean time.

Ten, Tone, Toon: A contraction of The one, or That one.

Tone: Toes, Mo. 975. Claws. Fa. L. 3. 938.

Tonne: A Tun weight. Prol. 1996.

Too: Two.

Toom, PT. 153. as Ton.

Toes: Toes.

Torcencious, p. 486, b. Torcious, p. 493, a. Using extortion. Sp. Extortioners.

Tornis: A turn, or sleight in wrestling. Gam. 472, 479, 484.

Torretes, Prol. 2154. Rings, or the fastening of dogs collars. Sp. From the Fr. Toweret, Annulus accipitris. Sk.

Torris: A Turret. Gam. 648.

Tort, Fr. Wrong; Extortion. Sq.

Tor-

Tortuous, La. 303. "Tortuous the Signs are, which are called Oblique ascenduntia, that is, all from Capricorn to Cancer: So he calleth the Ascendent, unfortunate; because it is one of those Signs, and had at the same time the Lord of that Sign in his fall, which is in the Sign contrary to his exaltation. Sp.

Toteth: Looketh. Sp. Who toteth on hem, thei ben unall, Mo. 2014. Who looks on them, shall see they are low, weak, and poor. Com. Thei toteth on her summe totall, Ib. 2359. Their large gifts is the thing that is looked after. Com. Perhaps the word signifieth, To cast up, or ballance an Account, from Tot. the Sum total. Tooting, Prying, peeping, searching narrowly. Gloss. to Spenser's Sheph. Cal.

Toth, for To The. See Alomth.

Totoler: A prater. Sp. A tatling busy-body. LW. 353.

Totty, MR. 1145. Dizzy. Sp. qu. Tottering. Sk.

Tough, Ber. 1097. Tough; Tight. In Tr. L. 5. 101. it should be tough (or tow, as in MS. Sp.) to rhyme to inough, Ib. 99.

Toure: A tower. Ar. 75. Fr. Tour.

Tournais: Tournaments. Ch. Dr. 1987. See Turney.

Tourner: A turret. RR. 4164.

Tout: The backside, the tail, the breech. MR. 746.

Towel, Fr. 884. The tail. Sp.

Trace: To walk, to pass. Also, A track, a path, a foot-step; A step. RL. 58. A company, or train. LW. 285. To dance with her a trace; f. To dance a turn with her. BD. 190.

Tracs: Traces, or Geers for Draught-horses or other working Beasts. Prol. 2141.

Tragetors, Fr. 2699. Tragetour, Fa. L. 3. 187. See Tregetoris. Tragetrie, Ber. 2040. See Tregetry.

Traie, Traine, Mo. 2563. Traish, Tr. L. 4. 438. To betray. Fr. Trahir. Traied: Betrayed. Phyl. 93.

Trail: An harbour. BD. 184, 695. Fr. Traille.

Traise: The Traces of horses. Tr. L. 1. 222. Fr. Traits.

Traisonne: Treason; Treachery. Test.

Traiterie, Trakork, Traitourie, An. 187. Falseness, treachery.

Tramifene, Prol. 62. A City in Barbary, in the Province sometime called Mauritania Tingitana, or Casariensis, as hath Mela; Arcthan. Sp. Ferrario Tenissa, seu Timici. Sk.

Transmewin, Tr. L. 4. 467. or (as in MS. Sp.) Transmewin: To transform. Transmuid: Changed. Ib. L. 4. 830.

Transposed: Turned, changed. p. 590, a.

Transvers, p. 482. a. f. Traverse, from the Fr. Traverser, To cross, to thwart.

Trapures: Trappings, Horse-furniture, Prol. 2501.

Traibid, RR. 3231. for Betrashid: Betrayed, deceived.

Traval: To labour, to take pains. Mo. 2366. Fr. Travail.

Trave: A Trevice to shoe unruly horses in. MR. 174.

Travell: Labour, fatigue, trouble. Fr. Travail.

Travers: A curtain. Sq. 1332.

Tray, Mo. 2561: as Traie.

Tre: A tree.

Trecheur, RR. 6308. Treacherous, perfidious; A treacherous person, a Traitor. Ib. 7168.

Treclis, RR. 932. See Tretes.

Tredehouse, Mo. 1566. A cock.

Treget, RR. 6310, 6820. Tregette, Ib. 6267. Tregetry, Ib. 6374. Tregetry, Ib. 6382. Imposture, tricking, cheating. Tregetoris, Fr. 2697. Tregetours, RR. 7588. Juglers, Impostors, Cheats. Lat. Barb. Tricator, Deceptor. Fr. Tricheur, Trigaud.

Tremour: A trembling. Tr. L. 5. 255.

Trenchant: Sharp, cutting. Fr. Trenchant.

Trend, Ber. 1304. Perhaps it should be wend; it being easy to mistake to in the MSS. for tt, especially if the last stroke of the to be faint. See Ib. 1558. where perhaps should be read, wend how [so] men wend.

Trentall: A Service performed for the dead the Thirtieth day after their decease. Sk. Or rather, a service of Thirty Masses performed for the dead, which sometimes began the next day after the person's decease, and was repeated on the Anniversary: It also signifies the Obventions, or Allowances to the Priests for performing those Services. See Fr. Gl. in Tricenarium, &c.

Trepeget, RR. 6279. A military Engine for casting stones, and battering Walls. Fr. Treppe, or Trebuchet. See Fr. Gl. in Trebuchetum.

Tretable: Tractable, mild, gentle, easy to be entreated. LW. 411. Mildly, gently. Magd. 665.

Trete: To treat; A Treaty, a contract.

Tretes, Prol. 151. Treife, RR. 1016, 1216. Treclis: Streight. Sp. Streightned, pinched up. Sk. It seems rather to signify Well-shaped or Well-proportioned, and is generally spoken of the face, or some part of it, as the Nose; and perhaps comes from the Fr. Trait, a Feature, or lineament of the face. It is also applied to other things made in just proportion, as to Love's Bow, RR. 932.

Treteffe: A Tract or Treatise. CL. 28.

Tretis, Tretise: A Treaty. Tr. L. 4. 64, 670. See Tretes.

Trew: True. Trewlich: Truly.

Treys: Trees. Prol. 1979.

Triacle: Treacle. It is used in general for a Medicine, Remedy, or Cure. La. 480. To every harm triacle; A salve for every sore.

Tribucion: Retribution, reward. Test.

Trice: To thrust. Mo. 550. AS. Epican.

Trie, No. 3363. f. Tried, or refined.

Trill: To turn; To thrust. Sq. 336. See Thirle.

Trine compas, No. 45. Trinite compas, MS. Ch. The Trinity.

Trist: To trust. Tr. L. 2. 247. Also, Trust, charge; A Mark, Meta. Sp. and Sk. Instead of Triste, Tr. L. 2. 1534. MS. Sp. hath Tristre, Also, Sad. Tristesse, Fr. Sorrow, sadness.

Trobelid: Troubled. Ber. 2730.

Trompis: Trumpets. Prol. 2513.

Trone: A throne. Prol. 2531. Troned: Inthroned. Test.

Trounable, Troublie, Troublous: Troublesome, boisterous; Troubled; Turbidus, p. 388, b.

Troublnesse: Trouble. Ber. 685.

Trow, Trome, Trown: To believe, to trust. AS. Tupian.

Thou shalt irowe all by me, Tr. L. 2. 956. Ca. and al. read, Thou shalt trust in me.

Trowanding, Trowandise: Truanting, loitering, strolling, wandering about. RR. 3954.

Trowes, f. for Thromes: Pains; Fits. PT. 38. See Throme.

Trowith: Troth, truth. PT. 602. Also, Believeth, trusteth.

Truanding, RR. 6721. Truandise, as Trowanding.

Trucassit: Sincerest, truest, most constant. Bal. Lad. 78.

Trust, RR. 4722. for Thrust: Thirst, as Ib. 5713.

Tull, MR. 1026. To lure, allure, Sp. See Sk. This Pro- verb is expressed in other words in Gower, f. 109, a.

Full oft he failerh of his game

Thas will with ydell bonde reclayne

His hawke—

Where ydell bonde, is the same with empty hand here.

Tulsur-like, Cx. 194. Tile-kill-like. Sp. Of a red tile-colour. See Sk.

Turkis, CL. 80. Turquois, a sort of Precious stones.

Turmentise: Torment. Mo. 542.

Turney: To practise the exercise of Juffs and Turnaments. See Gl. Neubrig. published by Mr. Hearne, p. 501, 502. and his Preface, p. 46, &c.

Turvis: Turfs. Sq. 1753.

Twile: Defence, protection. Also, a Guardian, a Patron. Bal. Lad. 57.

Twa: Two. Cr. 301.

Twene, for Twaine: Both. Tr. L. 2. 1715. It were better to read it Twaine, or Tweyne (as Ca.) and Helaine, or Helleyne, in the foregoing Verse.

Twey and twey: Two and two. Prol. 900.

Tweyne: To twine, twist, spin. p. 486, a.

Tahite, for Thwite: To twist. Fa. L. 3. 848.

Twifold: Double. Sq. 1876.

Twight: Plucked, pulled. Tr. L. 4. 572, 1185. from Twich.

Twin, Twinn: To depart. Tr. L. 3. 1717. To separate. Ib. L. 4. 476.

Twine, Tr. L. 5. 7. as Tweyne.

Twinkin: To wink, or twinkle with the eyes.

Twilight: Twi-light. RL. 170.

Twireth, p. 375, b. Singeth. Sp. Whispermeth. Lat. Snurrat.

Twist: A twig, a small bough of a tree. Sq. 462. To pinch, to put to pain; Twitched, pressed, squeezed. Ib. 1521. Struck, moved, agitated with violence. Fa. L. 2. 267.
Twyes: Twice. PT. 411.
Twynt, PT. 433. Had not a twynt; f. Had not a jot.

V.

Vailable: Available, usefull, profitable. Hem. 142.
Vailed: Aailed. Test.
Valais: A valley. BD. 24.
Valance: Value. p. 496, b.
Valence, AF. 272. Valencia, a Province of Spain.
Valerie and Theophrast, WB. 672. "Some will have us read Valerie and his Paraphrast: This Valerie wrote a Book De non ducenda uxore, with a Paraphrase upon it, which I have seen (says Sp.) in the Study of Mr. Allen of Oxford, a man of as rare learning, as he is stored with rare books. His name was Gualternus Maape Archdeacon of Oxford, in the days of King Henry the Second, but changed his name, because he would not have the Author known, and termed it Valerius ad Rufinum: But yet there was one called Valerius, who wrote a book of the same argument, printed among St. Jerome's Works; and likewise one called Theophrastus Eresius, who among other things did write a book, wherein he reasoneth, Whether it be convenient for a wise man to marry. Johannes Sarisburiensis in his Policraticon has translated some things in this book out of Greek and Latin, as may appear, Lib. 8. cap. 11. De molestiis et oneribus Conjugiorum; out of which Chapter Chaucer hath taken much for this Argument, as may be seen in the Merchants Tale, but more in the Wife of Bath's Prologue, where between 30 and 40 Verses are translated from thence: And if the whole Work at this day were by some sufficient Scholar translated, it would deserve as much commendation as many Books, which learned men, not without great applause, have heretofore translated. Sp.
Valing his cappe: Uncovering himself, putting off his cap. Gr. 272.
Van, Mo. 1619. See Wine ape.
Variunt: Varying, unconstant, unsettled.
Varien: To vary, differ. It ne male nought varien: That should not alter the case. Tr. L. 2. 1621.
Vassalage: Servitude, subjection; Service due from the Vassal to the Lord. Prol. 3056. which is thus read in some Copies;
For alle foryetin is than his vasselage.
Vavassour, Vavesour, or Valvassour, Prol. 362. One that is in Dignity next a Baron. Blo. Concerning the Dignity of a Vavassor, and the Etymology of the word, See Fr. Gl. and Spelm.
Vauntour: A boaster, a Braggadocio. Tr. L. 2. 724.
Vecche, RR. 4286, 4495. An abusive name for an old woman, An old Trot, an old Hag. It. Vecchia, An old woman.
Vees: Voice, speech: Rape of vees, Gam. 202. A hasty speaker. It is rees in H. 1. and MS. Ch. See Res, &c.
Veigne, RR. 447. Veine: Vain.
Veine blode: Bleeding by opening a vein. Prol. 2749.
Veined, perhaps for Veived, or Weived: Put away, cast off. p. 480, a. l. 48. p. 499, b. l. 25. Disappointed. See Weive.
Vel, Ber. 551. f. for Well, i. e. Very.
Vendable: To be sold, set to sale. RR. 5804.
Venemus: Venomous.
Venery: Hunting. Prol. 166. Fr. Venerie.
Venge: To revenge. p. 152, a. Fr. Vanger. Vengeable: Revengfull. Mo. 2745. Vengience: Vengeance, revenge. RR. 6430.
Ventm: Venom, poison. Prol. 2753.
Vente: The forepart. AL. 526. Fr. Avant, Before.
Ventonfinge: Cupping. Prol. 2749. Fr. Ventoufer, To cup.

Ver, Lat. The Spring. Tr. L. 1. 157.
Verament: In tuth, truly. No. 3222. Fr. Vrayment. It. Veramente. Mo. 3154. Should be thus read; So is he therein verament, i. e. truly in the Eucharist.
Verdite: A verdict, opinion. AF. 503.
Verger, Vergere, Vergir: A garden. RR. 3610, 3831. Fr. Verger, An orchard.
Verilayes, Fr. 2494. A rustick song or dance. Sk. Fr. Virelaie, A roundelay, Countrey-ballad, or Free-mans song. Blo.
Veritrate, Fr. 318. In some Copies it is verry [al. very] trate, in others virirate: A very trot. Sk. An old trot.
Vermaile, RR. 3645. Vermelet, CL. 142. Of a vermilion colour.
Vernage, No. 2597. A sweet wine; so called (says Sk.) because the best of the sort is brought from Verona.
Vernicle, Prol. 687. A Cloth, or Napkin, wherein is represented the figure of Christ's Face; from Saint Veronica, whose Handkerchief is supposed to have the impression of Christ's Face upon it. Sk. Misson, in his Description of the Chappel of the Holy Handkerchief (Le Saint Snaire) at Turin, gives this account of it; "It is a pretended Veil, or Handkerchief, which was presented (says that Tradition) to our Saviour, as he was carrying the Cross (according to St. John) by a Maid named Veronica. They pretend, that Jesus Christ wiped his Face with it, and gave it back to her who had presented him with it; and that the Face of J. C. remained imprinted upon it with some colour: "This is the Holy Handkerchief, Sudarium. And as for Veronica the Devout Virgin, 'tis a pretty diverting stroke of ignorance: With these words, Vera Jeon, that is to say, a true image or representation (viz. of the Face of J. Christ) those curious Doctors have made Veronica; and afterwards they took a fancy, that Veronica was the name of a woman, of the pretended young woman supposed by themselves to have presented her handkerchief to our Saviour. This Sudarium was carried from Chamberry in the year 1532. the Chappel where it was at Chamberry having been accidentally burnt. There are five or six more at Rome and other places. See Reiskius de Imaginibus Christi, and Bede de Locis sanctis. Misson's New Voyages to Italy. London, 1714. Vol. II. Part 2. p. 388.
Vernishid his bede: Varnished his head, i. e. got drunk. MR. 1041.
Verray, Very: True. WB. 1204. Truly. Fa. L. 2. 571.
Verre, Fr. Glafs. Tr. L. 2. 867.
Versifour: A Poet. p. 156, a.
Vertewe: Vertue.
Vertue: Valour; Virtus, p. 157, a.
Vertuleffe: Without vertue, of no use. Tr. L. 2. 344.
Vesselage, RR. 5871. See Vassalage.
Vessel: Plate. Mo. 418, 3070. Fr. Vaisselle.
Vestments: Cloaths.
Veved, Gam. 170. f. for Reved.
Vlage: A voyage, a journey; Travels. Prol. 77.
Vicary: A Vicar. Mo. 3332.
Vice: The Nuel or Spindle of a winding stair-case. Ch. Dr. 1310. Fr. Escalier à vis, A winding stair-case.
Viendid, Prol. 344. Furnished with provisions, or victuals. Fr. Viande, Provisions, &c.
Vigile, Tr. L. 5. 305. The Ceremony of watching a dead Body till it was burned or buried. See Liche-wake.
Vigillia, or Vigils, Prol. 379. "It was the manner in times past upon Festival Evens, called Vigilia, for Parishioners to meet in their Church-houses, and there to have a drinking fit for the time: Here they used to end many quarrels between neighbour and neighbour; hither came the wives in comely manner, and they which were of the better sort had their mantles carried with them, as well for shew, as to keep them from cold at the table. These mantles also many did use in the Church at Morrow-masses, and other times. Sp. Vigils may be taken here for the Nocturnal Office used in the Church, to which the Citizens wives resorted in great state.
Villany, Villony, Vilony: A base, rude, dishonourable, or wicked word or action, such as none but a mean fellow, a Villain, would be guilty of; Disgrace. Ph. 106.
Foul contagion, or infection. p. 376, b.
Vinarie envermailed, Bal. Lad. 45. A vineyard made red. Sp.

- Sp. Of a purple, or vermillion colour.
Vinolent: Given to wine; Drunk. WB. 467. Full of wine.
Fr. 667. Smelling of wine. Sp.
Visage, Fr. The face. Visage it, Sq. 1791. Face it out.
Vise: A voice. Test. It is also put for Avisé, Tr. L. 3. 1390. But Ca. and al. read it dewyse, V. MS. Sp. Wyse.
 See Wise. By thine own vise, i. e. avise; Of thine own accord. p. 481, 4.
Vite: A vine. Bal. Lad. 113. Lat. Vitis.
Viteile: Victual. MR. 460. Viteilis: Victuals. ib. 443.
Umple, AL. 471. Fine Lawn. Sp.
Unaracid: Not plucked or pulled asunder; Inconvulsa, p. 386, a. See Arace.
Unaservid: Deserved not. PT. 56.
Unberde: Unbarred, unbolted; Enlarged, set at liberty. CGr. 7.
Unbetide: Not to happen. p. 402, b.
Unbide: To abide. p. 515, b: 516, b.
Unbodie: To leave the body. Tr. L. 5. 1549. p. 480, b.
Unbokle: To unbuckle, to open. See Male.
Unbrace: To unfold. Magd. 211.
Unbrennid, Unbrent: Unburnt. Fa. L. 1. 173.
Unbroidin, or (as in MS. Sp.) Unbreydid, Tr. L. 4. 818.
 Unbraided, not tyed up, not twitted.
Uncircumscrip: Not circumscribed, infinite. Tr. L. 5. 1864.
Uncis: Ounces.
Unclofid: Not enclosed, open. RR. 3921. Untyed. ib. 4698.
Uncommitted: Not committed to one's care. Office uncommitted oft anyoeth; Proffered service thinks. AF. 518.
Unconninge, Uncunninge: Ignorance. Also, Ignorant, unskillfull. See Conning.
Uncovenable: Inconvenient, unseasonable, troublesome; Importunus, Boeth.
Uncouple, Mo. 528. To let loose, or To be let loose, as hounds. In the Edition 1602. and al. it is Encomple: To couple, joyn together.
Uncouth: Unknown, strange. Sq. 304. Unusual, uncommon, disagreeable. Boeth.
Uncunninge, as Uncunninge.
Undaungerid: Not endangered, out of danger. Ber. 1676.
Undefended: Not forbidden. Hen. 224. See Defende.
Undepartable: Inseparable, not to be divided. p. 388, b.
Undergrowe: Undergrown, of a low stature. Profr. 156.
Undern, Fr. 1290, 2002. The Afternoon, the Evening. It is still used in that sense in some parts of England, and may be so understood in Chaucer. Mr. Somner says it signifies the Forenoon, the Third hour of the day, or Nine of the Clock with us; as it certainly does in the Saxon passages he quotes in Undern: To which Dr. Hickes adds another which is very expressive. Undern is ðager þriðde tîð. Cod. MS. Can. et Const. Eccl. in Rubrica de Officiis. Cap. 28. Hick. Somn.
Underneme, AS. Undern-niman, To undertake, to receive. p. 591, a. l. 28. The sense of that Paragraph appears clearer from the Reading of it in Mr. Rawlinson's MS. which is thus; Frere, where fynde ye bi goddis lawe that preeftis schulden prisoun her britheren and so distroie hem? siþ the gōspel techiþ to undernyme hem in charite and so to wyne hem; and if he wold not be wonne bi you ne bi the chirche, goddis lawe and seint Austins rule techiþ us to putte hym from thee as an heþem man: This is not to prisoun hem.
Undernome: Took, received; Perceived. No. 254. See Underneme.
Underput: Subject. Underputting: Subjection. Test.
Understond: To bear, support, sustain. p. 198, b. Underbonding of temptacion; Ability to withstand a temptation.
Undirfongen, Hen. 264. Undertaken. Undirfongiþ: Undertaketh. RR. 5709. See Fong.
Undirmelis, WB. 875. Times of Undern, V.
Undirspore: To heave up by putting a pole or leaver underneath. MR. 357. See Spere.
Undisþitons: Without spight. Ch. Dr. 674. See Desþite and Disþite.
Undo: To explain. RR. 9.
Undoubtous: Undoubted. p. 396, a.
Undowne: Undone. Test.
Undren, as Undern.
Uneath, Uneth, Unethes, Unethis, Uneths: Scarcely, hardly. AS. Un-eaðe. See Eith.
Uneschuable: Unavoidable, p. 396, b.
Unese: Uneasiness, disquiet. Ch. Dr. 867.
Unfawe, Gam. 166. perhaps should be read unfawe (as it is in H. 1.) Unfown. But MS. Ch. reads the place thus;
Hee thoughte on his landis, that laye unfowe,
And his feyre ookis, that down were lithrowe.
Unfestlich: Sad. Sq. 386. See Festlich.
Ungilty: Guiltless, innocent. Tr. L. 3. 1020.
Ungodely: Uncivil. RR. 3741. Dishonourably. Bl. Kn. 386. See Godely.
Ungreable: Disagreeable, ungratefull; Ingratus, p. 359, a.
Unhap, Unhappe: Mishap, misfortune. Tr. L. 1. 553. MS. Sp. reads the place thus;
 —What maie this be to mene.
Unbardy: Cowardly, faint-hearted. Unhardy is unfely, MR. 1102. A coward is unfortunate, or Faint heart never won fair Lady.
Unbele: Misfortune. No. 1630. Want of health, sickness.
Unbide: To lay open, to discover. RR. 2168.
Unbolde: Of no account or value. Their servauntes be to them unbolde, Mo. 2413. "Their servants are little beholden to them, or get little by them, are little esteemed, unless they can find means to double their Lord's Revenues. Com.
Uniale Bal. 573. f. Smooth, plain, exact; from the Fr. Uni.
Unjoine: To disjoyn, separate; Dissociare, p. 384, b.
Universe, Tr. L. 3. 36. In universe; Universally, in general.
Universtie: The Universe, the World. p. 489, b.
Unkist: Not kissed. Tr. L. 1. 820.
Unknowable: Not possible to be known; Ignorabilis, p. 373, a.
Unkonninge, Unkunning, as Unconninge.
Unlace his male: Open his mail or packet. PT. 700.
Unlacid: Opened. PT. 67.
Unlettid: Uninterrupted, unmolested. Ch. Dr. 1829.
Unlovyn: Not to love, to cease to love. Tr. L. 5. 1697.
Unlust: Unwillingness, ill will, dislike. p. 203, b.
Unlustes, p. 513, b. l. 60. should be unlustie, or unlusty, as in p. 514, b. l. 13. Disagreeable. See Lust, Lustie.
Unmanhode: An unmanly action. Tr. L. 1. 835.
Unmeke: Uncivil, rude. RR. 590.
Unmete: Unmeet, unfit, improper. FL. 17.
Unmightye: Unable. Tr. L. 2. 858.
Unneth. See Uneath.
Unpacience: Impatience. RR. 4575.
Unpece: Want of peace, discord. p. 506, a.
Unperegall: Unequal; Impar, p. 374, a.
Unpin: To open. Tr. L. 3. 699.
Unpitous, f. for Impious; Impia, Boeth. p. 359, a. l. 26.
Unplite: To unfold, to explain; Explicare, p. 373, b.
Unpower: Want of power, weakness. p. 593, b.
Unpurveied: Unforeseen, unexpected. p. 365, b. Unprovided, not ready. AL. 382.
Unquert, Ber. 1323. f. Undeserved, unsought, unexpected. See Gl. V. in Unquirit.
Unreson: Unreasonableness. p. 514, b.
Unrest: Uneasiness, disquiet. Fr. 231, 1739. In p. 393, a. l. 67. the Translator seems to have taken inquires for a Noun, and so translated it unrest: Or else it may have been put in the margin as another sense of inquires; for the true sense of it is also in the Text, thou mayst saie, and if unrest be omitted, the sense will be plain and compleat.
Unrestie: Causing uneasiness. Tr. L. 5. 1354.
Unright: Wrong. Bl. Kn. 335. Falshood. Tr. L. 3. 986. But that Verse is better read in MS. Sp. Ca. and al.
Ne shulde of right none untrouthe in byr gesse.
 i. e. Should not justly suspect her of any falshood.
Unsad: Fickle. Fr. 2016. See Sad.
Unscience: Ignorance, want of knowledge. p. 398, a.
Unfely: Unhappy, unfortunate. MR. 1102. See Unbardy. Unfelynesse: Misfortunes. p. 390, a.
Unset: Not appointed. See Sieven.
Unshete: Opened. BD. 65.
 Unshrive,

Unshrive, Mo. 2691. for Unshriven: Not confessed.
Unsicke: Not sick, in good health. Ch. Dr. 1203.
Unskilfully: Unreasonably. Not unskilfully; Not without cause; Non injuria, p. 378, a.
Unslakid: Unslacked. No. 827.
Unsleep: Having had no sleep. Ch. Dr. 1834.
Unsolempne: Uncommon, unusual; Not famous; Incelebris, p. 361, a.
Unspedefull: Unsuccessfull, ineffectual. p. 403, b.
Unspere: Unlocked, unbolted. RR. 2654. See Spere.
Unstanchd, Unstanchable: Insatiable, unquenchable; Inexhaustible; Inexplebilis, inexhaustus, Boeth.
Unswiſt: Most uncertain. Ch. Dr. 892.
Unswell: To sink down or fall after swelling. Tr. L. 4. 1146.
Unsweet: Not sweet, stinking. Fa. L. 1. 72.
Unwall: Short, of a low stature. Mo. 2014. See Toteth.
Unthank, Unthanke, Tr. L. 5. 699. Ill will; Mischance.
Unthank come on his hand, MR. 974. A curse on his hand. See Thanke.
Unthrift: Prodigal, indiscreet. See Thrifty.
Unthrive: Ill success, misfortune, disappointment. CN. 142.
Untill: To, unto.
Unto: Untill. AB. 647.
Untrende, Mo. 2536. some read the place, ſeken the wool untrend: But the Edition 1602. and al. have it, Of hem ſeken the woll to rend, that is, He takes hold of, and embraces the sheep, as the cook does, to cut him in pieces; to rend the wool off his back, when he hath taken him. Com.
Untratable: Untractable, inexorable. p. 373, b.
Untrist: To be mistrustfull, to be jealous or diffident. Tr. L. 3. 841.
Untrouthe: Falshood. Tr. L. 5. 1098.
Untruſt: Uncertainty. Bal. 236.
Unuſage: Disuse; Inſolentia, p. 372, b.
Unware: Sudden, unexpected. La. 428. Unawares. Tr. L. 1. 550.
Unweld: Unwieldy. RR. 359.
Unwenmid: Pure, unblemished. No. 236.
Unwetingly: Unknowingly, ignorantly.
Unwiſt: Unknown. Tr. L. 2. 1294. Ignorant. Ib. 1400.
Unwiſt, CM. 118. Folly, want of Witte, V.
Unwitting: Not knowing, ignorant. Unwitting of this Dorigene; Without the knowledge of Dorigene. Fr. 2482.
Unwote: Knoweth not. He ne unwote nat; He is not ignorant; Non neſciat, p. 402, b.
Unwrappe: To discover, lay open, La. 103.
Unwrie: To uncover. Tr. L. 1. 859. See Wrie.
Unwurſhip: Disgrace, a dishonourable thing. p. 484, b.
Unyd: United. Ber. 2990.
Unyoldin: Without yielding or surrendring one's self. Prol. 2726.
Voide, Voidin: To empty. Fr. Vnider. To depart; To remove, to drive away, to put away; To leave, quit, forſake; To diſmiſs; To caſe. RR. 2922.
To frustrate, or make void; Evacuare, p. 403, a.
Voidid: Gone out of the room. Tr. L. 2. 912; L. 3. 233.
Volage, Fr. Fickle, light, unconstant, raſh. Mo. 1816. RR. 1284.
Volatily, No. 2580. Wild fowl. Sp. Fr. Volaille, Fowls.
Volipere: A kercher. Sp. A wrapper for the head. MR. 133. From the Fr. Envelope, To wrap up.
Volome: A volume. WB. 681.
Voluntie: Will, pleasure. RR. 5276. Fr. Volonté. Of volunté; Wilfully, for the nonce. Bl. Kn. 300.
Vomes: Foam, froth; Spumis, p. 396, a.
Vouchideſafe: Vouchsafed. ABC, H. 1.
Vouchſafin, Tr. L. 2. or rather (as MS. Sp.) Vouchethſafe: Vouchsafeth.
Vouch ye ſave: Vouchsafe ye.
Vounde ſtone, RR. 7113. Free-stone. Sp. See Sk.
Up, Sq. 1899. MR. 1182. for Upon. In La. 796. instead of On pain, &c. MS. Ch. hath Uppeyne; which seems to be the genuine reading. Up paine for to be ded, RR. 667. Upon pain of death.
Upbrayd: Upbraided. Hyp. 304.
Upperſt: Uppermost, highest. Boeth. p. 360, a.
Uppeyne. See Up.
Upheſe: Heaved, or lifted up. Prol. 2430.

Uphap: Perhaps. p. 489, a.
Upbent: Taken up or lifted.
Upreiſd: Raised up. Di. 238. Extolled. Boeth.
Upright ſignifies Straight (whether lying down, or ſtanding up) in oppoſition to Crooked. Dr. Ch. 451.
Uprift: Riſen up.
Upſwale: Swelled up.
Upſaſe: Gave up, ſent up.
Urchons: Urchins. RR. 3135.
Ure, Bl. Kn. 152, 303, 483. Fate, deſtiny, chance, hap; Uſe. Sp. Contracted from the Lat. Uſura, Uſe. Or from the Fr. Heure, Hora; whence Bonheur, Malheur, Good or Bad fortune. See Sk. Ured: Fortunate. I was well had good fortune. Ch. Dr. 144. Enured is uſed in the ſame ſenſe, Ib. 796.
Uſage, Fr. Uſe, experience. Prol. 2450. Custom. No. 2580.
Uſant: Uſing, wont, accuſtomed. MR. 833.
Uſauces: Uſages, cuſtom. p. 377, a. l. 31.
Uſen: To enjoy. p. 373, b.
Uſerere: An uſurer. Ib. 5691.
Uſure: Uſury. RR. 5797.
Utter, Utir: Outward, external. No. 509. The outer-moſt. Tr. L. 3. 665. Utterliche: Utterly. Ib. L. 2. 1710.
Uttereſt: The utmoſt, uttermoſt, or outermoſt.

W.

W Achet, MR. 213. Sky-colour. Sk.
Wade, Tr. L. 3. 615. He told a tale of Wade, or (as in MS. Sp.) the tale; A Romantick Story, famous at that time, of one Wade, who performed many ſtrange Exploits, and met with many wonderful adventures in his Boat Guingelot. Sq. 940.
Waferers, No. 1993. qu. Wayfarers: Way-faring men, vagabonds.
Waft about, Gam. 1556. Wandered about, went up and down; f. Caſt about, contrived: But inſtead of he waft about, H. 1. and MS. Ch. have, he was faſt about.
Wage: Wages, hire. BD. 243, 684.
Wailid: Changed, old. Sp. Choice, picked out, ſelected.
Wailid wine, CCr. 29. Choice wine. See Sk. and Gl. V. in Wale.
Waimenting: Lamenting, bewailing. Tr. L. 2. 65. But Ib. 68. it is better to read (as it is in MS. Sp. and al.) chytering, i. e. chattering; it being very improbable that the Poet ſhould uſe the ſame word at the end of two Verſes rhiming to one another, which ſeldom or never happens, unleſs the word is uſed in different ſenſes.
Wake: To watch. Fr. 636.
Walachie, Dr. Ch. 1024. Wallachia, a Province tributary to the Turk, bordering upon Poland, part of the ancient Dacia.
Wall, Mo. 2023, 2238. ſeems to ſignify a Well.
Walnote ſhale: A walnut ſhell. Fa. L. 3. 191.
Waloweth up: Vomith, or caſteth up; Eruſtare, p. 371, a.
Waltring: Weltring, toſſing, tumbling or rolling about. MR. 508. MS. Ch. hath it Walwyng, i. e. Wallowing.
Walſome: Loathſome. Sp. Hatefull. Mo. 1168.
Wan, Prol. 444. Won, or gained.
Wane or wax, No. 1539. Decrease or increaſe.
Wanger: A male, or budget. Sp. A pillow. No. 3417. AS. Pangene; from the AS. Pang, The cheek.
Wangis: The Grinders. MR. 922. from the AS. Pang, The cheek; qu. Cheek-teeth. See Sonin.
Wangtothe, Mo. 1956. The Wanges are the great teeth, which in a dog are called Fangs. See Wangs.
Wanbope: Deſpair. p. 480, b.
Waniſheth: Vanitheth. Teſt. L. 2. The w and v are often confounded in the MSS.
Wantruſt: Diſtruſt, diffidence, jealousy. p. 488, a: 500, b. Tr. L. 1. 805.
Wapid: Troubled, ſorrowful. An. 217. See Ambapid.
War,

- War*, as Ware.
Warrantise, Bal. 896. f. The same with Warrantise, V.
Wardain: A Guardian, a Keeper; One that is upon Guard. Tr. L. 3. 666. Wardainis, Wardinis: Guards. WB. 1216. Keepers; Judges, or Arbitrators. Gam. 553.
Wardcorps: A Life-guard-man. WB. 359. Fr. Garde de corps.
Wardrobe, Wardrope, No. 3081. A house of office. Fr. Garderobe.
Ware: Wary, cautious. Prol. 311. Also, Wore or did wear. FL. 340.
Wariangles, Fr. 144. "A kind of birds full of noise, and very ravenous, preying upon others, which when they have taken, they use to hang upon a thorn or prickle, and tear them in pieces and devour them: And the common opinion is, that the thorn, whereupon they thus fasten and eat them, is afterwards poysonous. In Staffordshire and Shropshire the name is common. Sp.
Warie, Warren: To curse. La. 373. Tr. L. 2. 1619. AS. Peþman, Peþgan. To grow weary of. Tr. L. 5. 1377. My life I warie; I am weary of my life; Tedet me. Also, To worry.
Warin: Warned, cautioned. Tr. L. 1. 647.
Warishe: To cure, heal, ease; To be healed, to mend, recover. p. 147, b. Fr. Guerir. Warishing, p. 148, a. Warison, RR. 1537. Cure; Recovery. Fr. Guerison.
Warne: To encourage; To assure. Fr. 2094. To hinder, forbid. RR. 5840. To deny, refuse. Ib. 3652, 3730. To refrain, forbear.
Warnishe, p. 498, b. l. 58. f. A Guard; To guard.
Warnfore, p. 152, b. 153, a. To fortify; To defend.
Warrantise: Guaranty. On warrantise, AL. 406. For certain; I'll warrant you.
Warray, Warrey, Warrie: To make war upon, to disturb, or molest; To worry. AS. Peþgan, Laceffere, molestare.
Wariangles, as Wariangles.
Wase: A wisp. Ber. 1617.
Wassell bread, Prol. 147. Fine Cymnel. Sp. Bread or cakes made of the finest flower. For the original signification of the word see Versteg. Chap. V.
Wate: To know. RR. 5399.
Watynge strete, Fa. L. 2. 431. See Galaxie.
Watti's pack, RL. 67. To bear Watti's pack, seems to have been a Proverbial expression signifying, To be duped, fooled, or imposed upon.
Wave: Wove. Ph. 138.
Wave: A wave. RR. 4712. Wawis: Waves. Ib. 3776.
Wawy: Waving. Ch. Dr. 695.
Wax. See Wane.
Wayn: To weigh. LW. 398. Waylb: Weigheth. Luc. 109.
Wayuin: To depart, to turn. Sq. 999.
Waywarde: Froward; Cruel. Magd. 237.
Webbe: A weaver. Prol. 364. AS. Peþba.
Wed, Wedde: A pawn, a pledge. AS. Peþ. To wedde; In pawn. No. 2631.
Wede: Weeds, apparel. No. 2342. Mo. 2151. Wedis: Weeds. Tr. L. 1. 947.
Week: Wicked. Tr. L. 2. 1273. See Wicke.
Weelful, as Welefull.
Weened: Thought.
Weer, for Were, Ber. 2833.
Wegging: Wagging, moving. Tr. L. 2. 1745.
Welkid: Weakened. RR. 4737.
Weilub: Bewaileth. Tr. L. 5. 211.
Weine: To wane, to decrease. RR. 2080.
Weive, Weivin: To wave, put off; To refuse, neglect, forsake. Tr. L. 2. 284. To move to and fro; To let go, to drive away. Boeth. Instead of Weivub, Tr. L. 4. 602. MS. Sp. hath, Flieth from.
Wekin: To weaken; To lessen, or abate. Tr. L. 4. 1144.
Wekid: Weakened; Tired.
Welaway: An expression of grief or surprise. Welaway the sound, Tr. L. 3. 1701. Welaway the while, Ib. L. 4. 1. Alas the time! Welaway for to sing: To make a woful cry, or lamentation. See Gl. V.
Weld, Weldin: To wield, rule, manage, govern, command. Fr. 683. AS. Fealban. Weldid, Welt: Ruled, govern-

- ed. Welding: Management; Power. p. 156, b.
Weldy: Nimble, active. Tr. L. 2. 636. Ca. and al. read, so worthy.
Wele: Health; Welfare, prosperity. La. 176. where instead of livin welle, it may be better read, live [or livin] in welle, as in MS. Ch. and al. Also, Wealth, riches. AS. Peþan.
Weleful, Welful: Blessed. La. 452. Happy; Healthy.
Welefulnesse, Weleneffe: Happiness, Prosperity. Boeth.
Welke: Did walk, walked. Ch. Dr. 828.
Welkid, No. 2254. Withered. Sp. or rather, Full of wheals or wheals. Welked: Shortened, impaired. Gloss. to Spenser's Works. See Welknith.
Welkin: The Sky; The Firmament. Dr. Ch. 339. AS. Peþen, from Peþalc, The Revolution of Celestial Bodies.
Welknith, Hyper. 214. f. Turneth; changeth; from the AS. Fealcan, To revolve, to rowl up and down, &c. See Gl. V. in Walkyn.
Well, Wellin: To flow; To spring. Tr. L. 4. 709.
Wellynge: Flowing; Springing. p. 480, b. See Welknith.
Wellis: Wells, springs. Tr. L. 5. 1373.
Well-willy: Well-wishing, bearing good will, favourable. Tr. L. 3. 1263.
Wellynge. See Well.
Welmsith, RR. 1561. Rifleth. Sp. From the AS. Peþallian, Scatwirth. Sk.
Welny: Well nigh, almost. Dr. Ch. 3.
Welplich: Like a whelp. PT. 481.
Welle: Governed, ruled; Had the power, command, or use of. Mo. 122. See Weld.
Welshed: Wealthy, rich, Test.
Wel-thewid: Having good qualities, or morals; Bene moratus, Boeth. See Thewis.
Wem, Sq. 141. Wemme, RR. 930. A spot, a blemish; A fault. AS. Peþem, Peþemme. Also, Hurt, damage. Sk. Wemleß: Unspotted, innocent. Pars.
Wend, Wende, Wendin: To go; Went. Tr. L. 2. 1654. Thought; from Wene, V. Wendin her delight, Tr. L. 4. 683. — her disport, Ib. 724. Thought to divert her. Wende conne: Thought to have conn'd; or got by heart.
Wende: Guess, conjecture. Bl. Kn. 463.
Wende, for Winde, or (as in MS. Sp.) Wynde, i. e. Turn, revolve. Tr. L. 3. 1547.
Wene, Wenin: To think, suppose, imagine. AS. Peþan.
Wene: A supposition, doubt. Withoutin wene; Doubtless.
Wengereffes, for Vengereffes: Revengers. Boeth.
Wenstow, for Wenest thou? Thinkest thou? WB. 311.
Went: A doubt, a thought; from Wene. Going, passing. Tr. L. 5. 605. A way, a passage. Tr. L. 3. 788. Fa. L. 1. 182. Gone. p. 491, b. from Wend, To go. Also, A turn. Tr. L. 2. 63. from the AS. Peþan, To wind, to turn. Want. FL. 150.
Wepelie: Weeping, mournful. Test.
Wepen, Wepin: Weapons. Mo. 3032. Ar. 255.
Wer: War. Ch. Dr. 2110. Also, Were.
Werbelles: Warblings. p. 492, a.
Werch, Werchin: To work, to do.
Werdie, Hyper. 19. as Wierdis.
Were, Where: Doubt, delay. Withoutin were; Without doubt. RR. 1776. His herte in joche a where is set, Ib. 5699. His heart is in such a maze or uncertainty. In joche a were, Hyper. 125. In such confusion. Also, A wear. Tr. L. 3. 35. AF. 138. To wear.
Weren, Werin: Were.
Werie: Weary; faint. RR. 440. Wered me, Tr. L. 5. 584. should be read (as in MS. Sp.) werred, or (as in Ca. and al.) werred me; i. e. made war upon me: See Warrey.
Werke: Work; A deed; To work.
Werne, for Weren: Were.
Werne, Wernin, as Warne.
Werre: War. In his Lordis werre, Prol. 48. He served in the wars under his Lord, from whom he held by Knight-Service. Also, Grief, sorrow, Tr. L. 5. 1392. Dr. Ch. 616. Perhaps for Were, V. Also, for Werrey, ABC. P. 4.

Werrey, See Warray.
Wers: Worfe. Werft: Worst.
Werth, Cr. 385. CCr. 886. Worth, deserving. Sp. and Sk.
 But perhaps it may be the same with Wierde: Fate or Destiny. See Wierdes.
Weryin, Prol. 1545. or (as in MS. Ch.) Werrien, as War-ray.
Wesh: Washed. La. 454.
Westrin: To draw towards the West. Tr. L. 2. 906.
Westrich: Sets as the Sun. Hyper. 186.
Wesche: Watch. RL. 96.
Wete: To wet, to bath. Tr. L. 3. 1121.
Wete: Weten: To know, to understand. AS. Pitan.
Wetbir: The weather; A weather. Tr. L. 4. 1374.
Weve, Tr. L. 2. 1050. See Weive.
Wexacionne: Vexation. Ber. 2817.
Wexing: Waxing, increasing. Prol. 2080.
Wext: Waxed, grew.
Weymenting. See Waimenting.
Weyve, Weyvin, Gam. 1742. as Weive.
Whare: Where. Fr. 186.
What: Somewhat, wherewithall. RR. 6737. Ellis what;
 Any thing else. Fa. L. 3. 651. In Mo. 2417. it is mistaken for with, both being in the MSS. writ with the same Abbreviation. The sense of that passage is this; Since I can find no more English words to agree or rhyme to the word fall (with which almost every Stanza of the First part of this Tale ended) he would now make use of another word [amende] having much more to say upon the same subject.
Whele: A wheel. Tr. L. 1. 840. MS. Sp. hath it, will;
 but the other seems to be the genuine reading. See Ib.
 851.
Whelmin: To overwhelm, overturn, oppress. Tr. L. 1.
 139.
Wher, Where: Whether; Wherefoever. See Weres.
Wherethrough: Whereby, by which means. RR. 3733.
Wherto: Wherefore, to what end.
Whiche: Who, what, what sort or manner of. p. 153, a.
l. 70. Mo. 1570.
Whight: White. Bl. Kn. 2.
While: Time, space. The Devil quit him his while, Ar.
 342. The Devil him in his turn. In the same while; At the same time. Bl. Kn. 624.
Whil're: Ere while, some time before. No. 1349.
Whilis and whilis: One while and another; Now — then. Cr. 224.
Whilke: Which.
Whilome: Formerly, a long time ago.
Whiso: Why so. Dr. Ch. 30.
White wordis: Fair words. Tr. L. 3. 1573.
Whitun: To grow white and clear. Tr. L. 5. 276.
Who, for How. p. 206, b. 1. 68.
Whyle, as While.
Wiche: A whitche, a kind of chest.
Wicke: Bad; Stinking, noisom. Also, Counterfeit. Sp.
 Contracted from Wicked.
Wide where: Every where, far and near. Tr. L. 3. 405.
Wierdes: The Fates, or Destinies, Parce. Tr. L. 3. 618.
AS. Pypd, Fate, Destiny. See Gl. V. in Weird.
Wifehode, Wivehode: The duty or affection of a wife;
 Dutifulness. Fr. 3005.
Wifely: Becoming a wife. Fr. 1459.
Wight: Weight. Tr. L. 2. 1385. Any person, He, or She.
AS. Wyht, Animal, creatura. Nimble, active, swift.
Mo. 381. RR. 4761. CL. 1300.
Wik, Wike, Wikk, as Wicke.
Wike: Week. Tr. L. 2. 1273.
Wild fire, p. 198, b. Brenninge of wild fire; Highly seasoned.
Willyfully: Willingly. Bl. Kn. 554.
Wilfulneß: An immoderate desire of revenge. p. 153, b.
 But in p. 363, b. 1. 3. and p. 366, a. 1. 27. it should be read Welefulneße; Felicitas.
Willers, Mo. 2720. Wilfull, or wily men. Com.
Willy: Willing, favourable. Willy fond at all; Found favourable on all occasions. Bl. Kn. 628.
Wilne: To will.
Wimple: A woman's hood, or veil. "It is most commonly taken for a linnen plaited cloth, which Nuns and Religious women wear about their necks. Bl. Peplum is translated Wjnpill, by Dougl. Also, To cover, hide, veil one's self. Wimpled: Covered, wrapped up in a Wimple. Prol. 472.

Winde: To go. Fl. 263. See Wend.
Windir: To trim, or adorn. RR. 1020. See Sk.
Windlas: A machine for weighing Anchors. It is used more generally for any Machine for lifting up heavy Bodys.
Wine ape, Mo. 1621. "Vinum Apianum (says Sp.) which "maketh one in such taking, that he cannot with a
 "straw bit a broad fawn: The cause is for that after
 "the drinking thereof unmeasurably, one thing seem-
 "eth two to the eyes, &c. But as all Wines drunk to excess have this effect, it may as well be read as it is in this Edition, Wine, you ape; for which correction no doubt Mr. Urry had good Authority.
Winers, p. 515, a. 1. 46. Welked winers: Withered vine branches. Sk. Perhaps that passage should be read
 —welked wivernes and venomous serpentes. See Welkid and Wivere.
Winlas, Sq. 204. See Windlas.
Winning: Gaining, getting riches. Mo. 2758.
Winrid: Wrinkled, or rather Grey or hoary, as the Winter. RR. 1018.
Wirch: To work. Prol. 2761.
Wirid, Ber. 1512. for Wiered. See Werrey, or Warray.
Worry: To worry. RR. 6264.
Wisy, Wissy, Wissily: Certainly, verily, truly.
Wise: To direct. See Wisse. Instead of But thou wise, thou wost, &c. Tr. L. 1. 1053. MS. Sp. hath it thus;
But thou woste, thou mayst, thou canst, thou art all;
Wise: Manner, custom. In his birdis wise, Tr. L. 2. 920.
 After the manner of a bird. It is often printed for Wis, Dr. Ch. 550, 683. and Wisely for Wissy. See Wis.
Wische: Washed. RR. 96.
Wishin: To wash; Washed. Also, To wish.
Wist: Washed. ABC. Z. 2.
Wissil: A weazel. MR. 126.
Wisse: To direct, shew, teach, instruct. WB. 1008. Tr.
L. 1. 623. Mo. 2175. AS. Pijtjan.
Wissily. See Wis, &c.
Wisse, Prol. 2285. Wishin: Washed.
Wissy. See Wis.
Wist, Wisin: Knew. AS. Pijtjan, To know.
Wis, Tr. L. 2. 312. Wite, RR. 7661. Wisten, Ib. 2693.
 To know. AS. Pijtjan. See Witte.
Wit, Wite: To blame; To charge one with, to impute.
AS. Pijtjan, Culpere. Also, A fault. AS. Pijtje. It
wol be wit to me, Ber. 652. It will be imputed to me.
Wite all thy self the care, Tr. Wite thy self thy care. Ca. and al. f. leg. Wite thy self all the care; Thank thy self for all the trouble that shall ensue. It should be wittid hir; She should be blamed for it. Ber. 644.
Wittholde: To retain; To employ one, as a Chirur-gion, &c. p. 148, a. To stop. Mo. 108.
Witthoutforthe: Without. p. 383, a.
Witthain: Withsay; To contradict; To deny, renounce.
Wittheten: Opposed. See Witthute.
Witthsey, as Witthain.
Witthute: To contradict, withstand, resist. p. 498, b.
Witthstane: Do withstand, hinder. Boeth. p. 365, b.
Witist: Blamest. See Wis, Wite.
Witless: Senseless.
Witnesfully: Better attested; Testatus, p. 391, b.
Witte: Sense; A good disposition of mind; Ingenium, p.
 368, b. Thought. Tr. L. 4. 1425. To my witte; In my opinion, As far as I know, To the best of my understanding, To my thinking. Fr. 2421. Fa. L. 2. 194.
Witten. See Wit.
Witterly: Certainly. It is frequently in MS. Ch. for utterly.
Wittes, p. 154, a. Wittis: Senses.
Wissing: Knowledge; Knowing.
Wive: To wed, marry.
Wivehode, as Wifehode.
Wively, Fr. 2071. as Wifely.
Wivere, Tr. L. 3. 1012. A kind of Serpent much like to a Dragon. Sp. A wivern.
Wlate: To hate, to loath. Mo. 3039. AS. platian, Nauseare.
Wo: To plague, to torment. Also, Wofull. RR. 312.

- I wold be wo*, CL. 34. I would be sorry. Mourning; Wo is me. Mo. 518. Wo begon, or bygon. See Begon.
Wo be ye, Mo. 2274. f. for Who be ye.
Wodde: Wood. Fr. 909.
Woddish: Groweth mad. No. 478.
Wode: Mad. In a wode sentence, No. 461. In a wrong opinion. Wodely: Madly, furiously.
Wodebende: Woodbind, honey-suckle. Bl. Kn. 129.
Woden: To grow mad, to rage; Seviunt, p. 389, b.
Wodewale, RR. 658. Witwall or Golden Ouzel, a Bird of the Thrush-kind.
Wol, Woll: Will. Also, Wool.
Wollin: Will.
Wolveshede, Gam. 1387, 1407, 1430. There was anciently a price set upon the Heads of Wolves, as of Foxes, Pole-cats, and other noxious Beasts and Vermin; from whence Out-laws came to be called Wolves-heads, as being out of the protection of the Laws, and liable to be killed by any that would take them, if they made any resistance, or fled. See Selden de Synedriis Ebrorum. L. 2. Cap. 2. Sect. 3.
Womanbende: The sex, dignity, good qualities or virtues of a woman. Fr. 2096.
Womanly: Becoming a woman. Dr. Ch. 850.
Won, No. 3013. Wonne, Prol. 337. Usage, custom, manner. Also, Got, begot. Hyper. 3.
Wonde: To turn back. Sp. Perhaps Turn or change its nature, from the AS. penban, To turn, bend, change. That it almost to wonde, CMV. 102. That it almost bent.
Wonde, Ph. 26. Wonidin, Th. 7. Dwelt, inhabited; Stay'd, abode.
Wondir: Wondrous. Prol. 2075.
Wondirliche, Wondirly, Wondirfly: Wonderfully, wondrously.
Wone: A habitation, a house. Fr. 841. Also, Store, plenty. RR. 1673. A full grete wone, Ar. 276. A very great company. AS. punian, Habitare, frequentare.
Woned, Tr. L. 1. 511. Wonnid, Dr. Ch. 150. Wont.
Wonne, Tr. L. 4. 1181. A remedy. Sp. See Won. Also, To dwell, inhabit. See Wone. Woning, Prol. 390. Dwelling.
Wood: Mad. Prol. 184. Woodneß: Madneß. Woodman: A madman.
Woof: A wolf. Prol. 2049.
Woofte: Knowest. See Woff.
Wopen: Wept. Boeth.
Worch, Worchin: To work.
Word, AL. 88, 207, 306, &c. A Matro.
Words, for Worlds, Tr. L. 2. 420. as it is in MS. Sp. and al.
Wordleß: Speechless. Ch. Dr. 514.
Worship: Honour.
Worth, Worthe: Is, be; Eft, fit, fiat. AS. peopðan, To be, to become. Wo worth, Tr. L. 2. 344, &c. Cursed be. Worthé hym full wele, Gam. 955. Happiness attend him. Wo worth that day; Cursed be the day. Tr. L. 4. 763. But the place is thus read in MS. Sp.
And curfd be that day which that Asgrue
Me of her body bare to bene on lyve.
Worth up, p. 367, a. Get up, mount. Lat. Ascende.
So Tr. L. 2. 1011.
Worthie, p. 157, a. l. 55. If it be worthy, al. if he be worthie.
Worthied: Honoured. p. 481, b.
Woff, Tr. L. 1. 1053. Thou knowest. See Wist. Woffow, for Woreft thou? Knowest thou?
Wot: Know. That ye wot, Tr. L. 2. 1196. That you know of; but I should rather chuse to read it, as in MS. Sp.
How like [L. likyth] ye the lattare that he wrote?
Can he thereon? for be my trogh y note.
That is, How do you like the letter that he [Troilus] hath written to you? Doth he understand that matter? For by my troth I know not.
Wote, Wotte: To know. See Ware.
Would: Willed, permitted, suffered. p. 154, a. As himself hath would, Di. 284. As he pleased himself.
Woundes of Egypt: The Plagues of Egypt. Dr. Ch. 1207.
Wowe: To woo, to court. Tr. L. 5. 971. Wowid: Court-ed. Di. 322.
- Wovish*: Waveth, tosseth up and down. Teff. L. 2.
Wraie, Tr. L. 3. 285. Wray: To bewray, to discover.
Wrake, Cr. 307. Revenge, vengeance. See Wreke.
Wral: Bestow in brawling, or wrangling. Sp. and Sk.
In winning all ther wite thei wral, Mo. 2310. They strain their wittes to the uttermost to get all they can.
Com. Dougl. uses Wreil for Wriggle. See Gl. V.
Wrang: Wrung. Magd. 150.
Wrate: Wrote. Cr. 64.
Wrathe, Mo. 1657. Wratbin: To provoke. Wrathe The maught; Be not angry. Gam. Wratbed: Provoked, angry. p. 192, a.
Wrawe: Wrath, anger. Mo. 1623. Wrawneß, p. 203, b. Frowardneß. Sp.
Wray. See Wraie.
Wrech, Wreche: Revenge. Mo. 628. Tr. L. 5. 890.
Wrechis: Wretches.
Wrechidlice, Wrechidliche: Wretchedly, wickedly.
Wreke: To revenge. Sq. 474. See Anreke. MS. Ch. hath that Verfe thus;
For yee yowre self uppon your self wreke.
Wrekerie: Vengeance; Punishment. Boeth. It should be Wrekerie, p. 390, b. l. 64. A revenger.
Wrenches: Wiles or cunning sleights, snares, traps. See Somn. in pence.
Wrene, for Wrien: To hide. RR. 56. See Wrie.
Wreche, Tr. L. 2. 784. for Wreche, as it is in MS. Sp. See Wrech and Wreke.
Wrechileße, Mo. 1556. for Reicheleße, or (as MS. Ch.) Recheles, V.
Wretching, Tr. L. 3. 855. mis-printed for Dretching. See Drache.
Wreibe, p. 504, b. f. Corruptly for werscheth, i. e. worketh, acteth.
Wrey, Wrie, Wrien, Wrine: To hide. RR. 6795. To cover. Th. 29. Hid, concealed. Tr. L. 3. 621. From the AS. ppigan, Velare, or ppneon, Tegere, &c. Also, To discover. CMV. 91. From the AS. ppneon, Prodere. To incline, bend it's course. Tr. L. 2. 906. Wried: Turned off; from Wry.
Wright: Covered. Di. 276. See Perrey.
Wright: A carpenter. AS. ppnyhta, Opistex; whence Shipwright, Wheelwright, &c.
Wrine. See Wrey.
Wribe, Wribin: To wrest, to turn aside. Tr. L. 4. 986. But MS. Sp. Ca. and al. instead of Wribe, have Wry, V.
Wribin: Wreathed, twisted. FL. 57.
Wro: Grief, anger. Sp. Perhaps it may signify A shade, a cover. Mo. 2021. From Wrie, V. Wra, is Company, society. Gl. V.
Wrokin: Avenged, revenged. RL. 350. See Wreke.
Wronge: Wrung. Tr. L. 4. 1171.
Wrote, p. 192, b. l. 33. 34. f. To wallow in the dirt, to defile. Lidgate applies it to a worm working its way into a tree. Fall of Princes. L. 1. C. 19.
Or lyke a worm that wroteth in a tre.
Wrotbly: Wrathfully, angrily. Boeth.
Wroucht: Wrought. Tr. L. 3. 14. Ca. and al. Worthe, V.
Wry, Wryen. See Wrie.
Wrech: To work. RR. 6662. Perhaps it should be read merche, and cherche for church, in the foregoing Verfe.
Wust: Frighted, driven away. Mo. 3032.
Wycke, as Wicke.
Wyif: A wife.
Wylid: Plotted, combined, conspired. Ber. 1957.
Wyll: Will. Of ther wyll; Willingly, of their own accord; Alro, p. 377, a.
Wympel. See Wimple.
Wynyd: Whined. PT. 481.
Wysely, for Wysly, An. 290. See Wysly.
Wyshat, for Wub that, Ber. 2469.
Wym: Wine. Ber. 956. But it should rather be Wyme, to answer fyme, in the following Verfe.
- NB. Other words beginning with Wy, may be found in W.

Y.

Y From the Sax. ŷe, is most frequently prefixed to Verbs in the Perfect Tense, and very rarely to any other. This Initial addition of Y, or I, in many cases making the whole difference between the Old and the Modern word, the latter may be found by casting away the y or i: And therefore many such words are wholly omitted in this Glossary. It is also put sometimes before Nouns, but very seldom, as Ylike, for Like, Prol. 594. In some of the oldest MSS. it is very often used for the First Person, I: Hence perhaps arose that mistake in Tr. L. 2. 1595. Leŷt ye too long ydwell, for, Leŷt I (or y, as in MS. Sp.) to long ydwell; and again, Ib. L. 3. 160. As ye can, for As y can, MS. Sp. See Z.

Yaf, Yafe: Gave.

Yall: To yell. Mo. 2326. To go. Sk. Yalie, RR. 4904. Goeth. Sp.

Yape, Yaper. See Fape, Faper.

Yard: A rod. Prol. 149.

Yare: Ready. Tb. 43. AS. Geappe.

Yates: A gate. Yates, Yates: Gates.

Yete. See Bete.

Ybled: Caused to bleed. Tr. L. 3. 1530. The whole Verse is thus in MS. Sp.

And with ŷuch voys as ŷogh his heart bled;

where, if we read ybled, the Verse will be compleat, and the sense much more natural than in the other Reading.

Yblede: To bleed. Mo. 2291.

Yblent: Blinded, deceived. RR. 1610.

Ybore: Bore or born, carried. Prol. 380.

Ybourdid: Jested. AF. 589. Well ybourdid; A pretty jest. See Bourde.

Ybrayid: Drawn out. Ber. 3201. from the AS. Bjaeban, Exerere, ŷtringere. See Braide.

Yceŷŷe: To cease, desist. Tr. L. 2. 692.

Ycloutid: Patched up with clouts. RR. 223.

Ycongerid: Conjured, bewitched. PT. 489.

Ycorve: Cut. Prol. 2015. See Kerve, and Throtycorve.

Ycothe: Could; Understood. RR. 771.

Ycouchit: Set. Ber. 2565. See Couchen.

Ycraŷid: Broke, cracked. Dr. Ch. 324. Fr. Ecraŷe.

Ydamnid: Condemned. Ar. 154.

Ydeles: Dealeth, distributeth. RR. 5419.

Ydey: To dye. Tr. L. 2. 172.

Ydide: Dyed. Hen. 190.

Ydight: Dressed, adorned, furnished, ordered. Tr. L. 5. 541. Equipped. Phyl. 87. See Dight.

Ydill: Idle. Luc. 18.

Ydo: Done; Ceased.

Ydolafter: An Idolater. Pars.

Ydradde: Dreaded, feared. Tr. L. 3. 1653.

Ye: Yea, ay, yes. Ye wiŷŷe, Tr. L. 2. 887. Ye ywis; Yes surely.

Yeare: Ready. Ph. 43. See Yare.

Yedding, Prol. 237. (Furgandi) of brawling (some say) of gadding up and down (others) of loud singing. Sp. It is yeddingis in MS. Ch. and al.

Yede, RR. 5151. Yedin: Went.

Yef: If. Ber. 2246. Also, To give. Mo. 2897.

Yeft: A gift.

Yelde, Yeldin: To yield, to give.

Yelke, p. 518, a. That yelke, f. for That ilke: That same. See Ilke.

Yelp: To prate, to talk idly. Tr. L. 3. 308.

Yelte: Yoldeth. Tr. L. 1. 396.

Yeme, Gam. 1633. f. Altogether, one and all; from the AS. Gemæne, Common. MS. Ch. reads that Verse thus; Yee jonge men take yeme; and H. 1. Take jonge men yeme.

Yen, Ber. 1313. Yene, Ch. Dr. 352. Eyes.

Yer: Ere, before. Mo. 1968.

Yerde: A rod; A scourge. Tr. L. 2. 154. A court-yard. Ib. 820. Also, Rule, direction. Ib. L. 3. 137. Ca. and al. read ŷwerde instead of yerde, Ib. L. 2. 1427.

Yerne, MR. 150. Shrill. Sk. Earnest, eager, diligent;

Nimble, quick; Earnestly; Presently, quickly. RR. 6719. Soon, early. Tr. L. 3. 377. AS. Geopn. Also, To gain, deserve, to profit, obtain. Ib. 152. CL. 368. AS. Capman, Mereri, conŷeqni, aŷŷeqni. See Cardiacle.

Yerning: Compassion; Relenting, compassionating. RR. 5951. AS. Capnunge.

Yerth: The Earth.

Yeten, Yetin: Got; Lay'd up. RR. 5702. Also, Eaten.

Yett, No. 1298. f. A throw, or cast. Fr. Jet. See Ib. 1293.

Yewe: Give. Also, If. La. 739.

Yewr, Yewr: Your.

Yew, Ber. 2638. Yewe, Ib. 720. You.

Yexinge: Sobbing. Sp. In MR. 1043. MS. Ch. hath He yixede, H. 1. and al. yexeth, instead of He galpiŷh. See Galp.

Yfaileth: Faileth; Fainteth. Tr. L. 1. 601. It is saileth in MS. Sp. ŷayliŷh in Ca. &c.

Yfall: Fallen. Prol. 25.

Yfaŷid his trowth: Falsified, or broke his word. Sq. 647.

Yfaŷiŷh: Proves false, deceiveth. RR. 5416. See False.

Yfarcid. See Farcid.

Yfare: Gone.

Yfere: In company, together. See Fere.

Yferid: Fared.

Yfleting: Floating, swimming. Fa. L. 1. 133. See Flete.

Yflitted: Paŷt, removed, transferred. Tr. L. 5. 1543. See Flit.

Yflowe: Fled. Gam. 265.

Yfoŷtrid: Fostered, bred up. MR. 838.

Yfrained: Asked, examined. See Fraine. Also, Refrained.

Yfrened, Yfrende: Eŷtranged. Mo. 2566. See Fremde.

Yfreibid, PT. 292. f. Cut liké Fret-work.

Yfretid: Inlaid, ŷet liké Fret-work. Ber. 3192. See Fret.

Yfrein: Devoured. Ar. 66. See Frete.

Yfrownid: Wrinkled. RR. 155. See Frownid.

Ygettin: Got. MR. 456.

Ygo: Gone. Prol. 288.

Ygrave: Engraven, carved; Dug.

Ygravid: Buried. Magd. 429. See Grave.

Ygrette: Greeted. RR. 7430. See Gret.

Ygrinte: Grindeth. Fa. L. 3. 708.

Yhallowid: Hallowed, kept ŷacred, celebrated. Luc. 192.

Yhalte: Holdeth, keepeth. RR. 4979.

Yhed, f. Yheved, i. e. Heaved, or liŷted up. Dr. Ch. 175. Hed yhed; f. Head to head.

Yhere: To hear. Tr. L. 4. 1313.

Yhered, or Yherde: Hairy. MR. 629.

Yheŷte: Heated. RR. 3709.

Yholde: Holden, accounted.

Yholdin: Obliged, bound, held. RR. 429. Beholden. Ar. 69.

Yhotin: Be called. CN. 185. See Hote.

Yiapid: Impoŷed upon, deceived. Mo. 1722. See Fape.

Yin: Eyes. Prol. 152.

Ying: Young. Gam. 295.

Yis, Ber. 1244. See Tue.

Yit: Yet.

Yled: Laden. Ber. 794.

Yleŷŷid: Eaŷed. Tr. L. 1. 1090. See Liŷŷe.

Ylete: To loŷe. No. 534. See Leŷe.

Yleye: Layn. PT. 648.

Ylich: Alike. Prol. 2528. Ylike: Like. Ib. 594.

Ylimed: Caught or taken, as birds are with bird-lime. WB. 934.

Yloggit: Lodged. PT. 304.

Yloke: Locked up, claipeɔ, embraced. Ber. 2472.

Ylome: Often. Ber. 580. See Lome.

Yloŷid: Looŷened. Gam. 830.

Ylough: Laughed.

Ylucidid, Bal. 604. Full ylucidid, for Fully lucidid; Very bright or ŷhining.

Ymedlid: Mixed. See Meddell.

Ymeint, as Meint.

Ymmagyŷŷ, for Imaginative, Ber. 2796. Thoughtful, Cunn- ing. See Imaginative.

Ymmemorat: Unmindful, forgetfull. Ber. 1892.

Ymoned: Bemoaned. Teŷt. L. 2.

Ymyrid, Ber. 2654, Bemired, puzzled.

Ynayid: Denied. Ber. 2095.

Ynde: Black. Sp. See Inde.

Ynempnid: Named.

Yode:

Yode: Went. R. L. 182. From Yede.
Tolde, Toldin: Delivered up. Tr. L. 3. 1217. Paid, requited. RR. 4556. Yielded. Tr. L. 1. 802. Yielding, submissive. Jb. L. 3. 95.
Tonghede: Youth. RR. 351.
Tore: Before, formerly. Naught yore ago; Not long ago. AF. 17.
Tove: Gave. CL. 688. From Yeve.
Touris: Yours.
Touibed, Mo. 2364. Youthede, RR. 4931. Youth.
Tow, Yowe: You.
Towith: Youth. Ber. 307.
Tpeint: Painted. Ch. Dr. 1845.
Tpeised: Weighed. Bal. 280. See Peice.
Tpight: Pitched down, fell. See Pight.
Tpkid: Picked, OC. Prol. 367. PT. 174. See Pike. Tpkid shoes; Peaked shoes. See Pikis.
Tpilt, PT. 559. seems to signify Beaten, struck; f. Pelted: But in Gam. 1771. it bears a very different sense; f. Put, placed. H. 1. hath it pilt. MS. Ch. pelt.
Tplegg: Pawned, put in pledge. Ber. 1033.
Tpocrisie: Hypocryfy. Mo. 2743.
Tqueint. See Queint.
Tquit. See Quit.
Traft, See Raft.
Trafid: Shaved. Ber. 2201.
Tre: Anger.
Treight: Reached. Fa. L. 3. 284.
Treke: Raked up.
Trent: Rent. On thy cross yrent, or rather on the cross, or (as in MS. Ch.) on a crosse yrente, al. to rent, La. 845. It is sometimes used in the same sense as Rive.
Trobin, Mo. 3234. Some Editions read it roben or robhen, and others roven, which may signify, To rove, or perhaps to be ravenous. In Com. the place is thus explained; "Because they are alike, that is, the Griffon and the Popish Clergy, and rob and raven every where by their kind, or with their kinds ravin, they and their kind are ravenous. The Pelican should begin to speak at Verse 3232. as it does in some Editions and in Com."
Trom: To run. Tronne: Did run.
Trowned: Whispered. See Rowne.
Tryvyn atwain: Burst in two. Bl. Kn. 577. See Rive.
Tsaine, Tsene: Seen.
Tse: Ice. Fa. L. 3. 40. Also, Seen.
Tseid: Seized. Ber. 1147.
Tseft: Ceased. Ch. Dr. 2166.
Tshent: Spoiled, &c. See Shent.
Tshet: Shut.
Tshrive, Tshriwen: Confessed.
Tse: Saw. Fa. L. 3. 339.
Tslake, as Slake.
Tslo, as Slo.
Tsmelde: Smelled. Fa. L. 3. 595.
Tsod: Sodden, boiled. Ber. 4856.

Tsod, for Tsoiled: Absolved. Mo. 2308. See Soile.
Tsuid: Befotted. Ber. 406.
Tsow: Sown. WB. 71.
Tspreint: Sprinkled; Dispersed. Prol. 2170.
Tstakid, PT. 292. f. Staked up, supported with stakes.
Tstake: Stuck; Confined. Gam. 649.
Tstrove: Dead. See Strove.
Tstrecht: Stretched. Fa. L. 3. 283.
Ttaks: Taken.
Ttelle, as Tell.
Ttemen, Fa. L. 3. 654. Ttemen: To bind, or lay up. Sp.
Tthe: To thrive, prosper. See The.
Tthewid well: Having good qualities. RR. 108. See Themis and Wel-thewid.
Ttwinn: Pulled, drawn. Fr. 299. See Twight.
Ttwinn. See Twin.
Ttyid: Tyed, bound. Cup. 226.
Tve: Ivy. Test. L. 3. p. 516, b.
Tvelles: Evils.
Tvellesse: Wickedness, badness.
Tvoire: Ivory. Dr. Ch. 946. Fr. Ivoire.
Twarry, Mo. 2457. f. as Warray. Some Editions have it warry, others varry; but that of 1687 vary (I know not upon what authority) They go away from the truth. Com.
Twede: Wore. RR. 875.
Twerne: To deny. Gam. 1310. See Warn.
Twerid, Bl. Kn. 666. See Warray.
Twete. See Wete: To know.
Twexith: Groweth. In Tr. L. 1. 950. instead of The rose ynexith fore and, &c. MS. Sp. has it,
The lillie wexyth white and smothe, &c.
Twis, as Iwis.
Twirch, as Wirch.
Twit. See Wit: To know.
Twrie, Twryen: Covered. See Wrie.
Twrong, as Wrong.

Z.

Z Or rather z, in the MSS. is often put for g, and gh, from its likeness to the AS. z; and for y, the g being in English frequently softened into y: But for want of a proper Type, it has been thought fit to keep the modern Orthography in this Edition, except in very few words, where z is put instead of z; as, Dispyt, which should have been Dispyt. See Gl. V. in Z.
Zedeories, p. 485, b. l. 51. This place is so corrupted, that it is not easy to imagine who is meant by this name.
Zenxis, No. 1532. A famous Grecian Painter.

A Translation and Explanation of the Latin in CHAUCER.

A.

AD adjuvandum me, Magd. 591. It is taken from Psal. XL. 13: LXIX. 2. Domine ad adjuvandum me respice, festina; O Lord make hast to help me.
Agnus castus; A Drug, the seed of the Chast-tree, a Plant growing in Italy, Sicily, &c.
Alma redemptoris mater. See O alma, &c.
Amor vincit omnia: Love overcometh all things. Prol. 162.
Angelus ad Virginem, MR. 108. The Angel's Salutation of the Blessed Virgin. Luk. II. 28. Ave Maria, &c.
A questio quid juris, Prol. 648. H. 1. and MS. Ch. read it Ay [i. e. Ah!] questio, &c. The Sumner it described rapping out Latin, and (among the rest) scraps of Law. The oldest Editions have it Aye, questio quid queris; but the other seems to be the true Reading. Questio juris and Questio facti, are known Distinctions in the Civil Law.
Associat profugum Tydens, &c. Tr. L. 5. 1497, &c. These Twelve Verses contain the Arguments of the Twelve Books of Statius of the War of Thebes, which the Poet comprehends in Three Stanza's of this Poem, beginning at Verse 1484. The Latin is more correctly printed in the Paris Edition of Statius, 1600.

*Argumentum Thebaidos Libb. 12.
Ex veteribus libris.*

*Ad sociat profugum Primus Tydeo Polynicen.
Tydea legatum docet, infidiasq; Secundus.
Tertius Hemonidem canit, et vates latitantes.
Quartus habet reges, ineuntes praelia, septem.
Mox furia seni Quinto narratur & anguis.
Archemori bustum, Sexto, ludiq; geruntur.
Dat Graios Thebis, & vatem Septimus umbris.
Ottavo cecidit Tydens, spes fida Pelasgis.
Hippomedon Nono queritur, cum Parthenopeo.
Fulmine percussus Decimo Capaneus superatur.
Undecimo se perimunt per vulnera fratres.
Argiam flentem memorat Duodenus, & ignes.*

Ave Maria; Hail Mary. p. 143, a. See Angelus ad Virginem.

B.

Benedicite! Bless ye. It is used by way of Exclamation, as we now say, Bless us! Taken perhaps from the Hymn beginning, Benedicite, omnia opera Domini. Benedictus: Blessed. CL. 1423. Perhaps alluding to Luk. I. 68.

C.

Cœli enarrant; The Heavens declare. CL. 1367. It is the beginning of Psal. XIX.
Confessio amantis; The Confession of a Lover. p. 479.
Confiteor, p. 197, a. I confess, The Confession.
Consumere me vis? Wilt thou destroy me? Magd. 504. The words of Job, Ch. XIII. 26. taken out of the Vulg. Lat. as the rest of the Quotations are. Consumere me vis peccatis adolescentia mea? Wilt thou consume me in the sins of my youth? Our Translation hath it, Thou makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.
Consummatum est; It is finished. Magd. 161. Our Saviour's words in giving up the Ghost. Job. XIX. 30.
Cor meum eructavit, Fr. 670. My heart hath belched out, or, (as it is in our Translation of Psal. XLV. in the marg.) boileth, or bubbleth up.
Corpus Domini; The Lord's Body. No. 1829, 2943.
Corpus Madrian, Mo. a. f. The holy Relicks of St. Maternus.
Cum iniquis deputatus est, Magd. 174. He was reckoned with the wicked; Or (as it is in our Translation) He was numbred with the transgressors. Isai. LIII. 12.
Cur me dereliquisti? Why hast thou forsaken me? Magd. 710. Our Lord's words on the Cross, out of Psal. XXII. 1.

D.

DE animalibus; Of Animals. p. 478, b.
De Accidia; Of Sloth. p. 203, b. See Accidie in the Gloss.
De Avaritia; Of Covetousness. p. 205, a.
De Invidia; Of Envy. p. 199, b.
De Ira; Of Anger. p. 200, b.
De Luxuria; Of Lechery. p. 207, b.
De septem peccatis mortalibus, et de eorum dependentiis, circumstantiis et speciebus; Of the seven deadly sins, and of their dependencies, circumstances and several Species. p. 197, b.
De polo antartico: From the South Pole. p. 500, a.
Dens hic, Fr. 506. God be here; a Form of Salutation.
Dolorem meum; My grief or sorrow. Magd. 33. The words are taken from the Lamentations of Jeremiah, Ch. I. 18. Videte dolorem meum; Behold my sorrow.
Domine labia, &c. O Lord, open thou my lips. CL. 1357. Taken from Psal. LI. 15. Domine labia mea aperies, & os meum annuntiabit laudem tuam; O Lord, open, &c.
Domine, Dominus noster; O Lord, our Lord. CL. 1365. This is the beginning of the first and last Verses of Psal. VIII.
Domini est terra, CL. 1371. The earth is the Lord's. Psal. XXIV. 1.
Dominus regnavit, CL. 1409. The Lord hath reigned. Psal. XCII. 1.
Domus Dedali, Fa. L. 3. 830. The House of Dedalus, i. e. The Labyrinth contrived and made by him, for Minos King of Crete, in which he and his son Icarus were afterwards confined.

E.

ExPLICIT carmen, &c. Here endeth the Poem of the Recommendation of Peace, composed to the Praise and Memory of the most serene Prince, King Henry the Fourth, by his humble Orator, John Gower.
Explicit liber primus, secundus, tertius, quartus; Here endeth the first, second, third, fourth Book. p. 277, 291, 305, 318.
Explicit pars prima penitentie, et incipit pars secunda; Here endeth the first part of Repentance, and beginneth the second part. p. 195, b.
Explicit proemium; Here endeth the Proem, or Prologue. p. 278, &c.

F.

Faciem tuam abscondis, Magd. 507. Thou hidest thy face. This seems to be taken from Isai. LXIV. 7.
Fuerunt mihi lacryma mea in deserto panes die ac nocte; My tears have been my bread in the wilderness day and night. Magd. 349, 350.

I.

Iesus filius Sirach, Sq. 1768. Iesus the Son of Sirach, the Author, or Collector of the Apocryphal Book of Ecclesiasticus.
Iesus Nazarenus Rex Judæorum; Iesus of Nazareth King of the Jews. p. 195, a. The Inscription put upon our Saviour's Cross.
Ignotum per ignotius; One obscurity explained by another more obscure. No. 1478.
In manus tuas, MR. 1179. Magd. 714. Into thy hands I commit my spirit. Psal. XXI. 5. Luk. XXII. 46.
In nomine Jesu, p. 202, a, &c. In [or At] the name of Iesus every knee shall bow. Phil. II. 10.
In principio; In the beginning. Prol. 256. They are the first words of St. John's Gospel; In the beginning was the Word, &c. As sikr as In principio, Mo. 1278. As sure as St. John's Gospel is true.
Inscimini, et nolite peccare, p. 200, b. Be angry, and sin not. Psal. IV. 4. Eph. IV. 26.

Jube

Jube Domine: Command, Lord. CL. 1374. The Poet profanely alludes to Math. XIV. 28.
Jubilare: O be joyfull. CL. 1412. The beginning of Psal. C. Jubilare Deo.

L.

Laudate: Praise ye. CL. 1416. Hallelujah is translated Laudate Dominum; Praise the Lord.
Libera me, Magd. 573. Deliver me. Job XVII. 13. and in several Psalms.

M.

Mea culpa, Tr. L. 2. 525. My fault; a Form of asking pardon.
Melius est nubere quam uri, RL. 364. It is better to marry than to burn. 1 Cor. VII. 9.
Minerva loquitur ad Parin; Minerva speaks to Paris. p. 557, b.
Montana Jude [i. Montana Judea] The mountainous parts of Judea. Magd. 321.
Mulier est hominis confusio: Woman is the confusion of Man. Mo. 1278.

N.

Non est aliud nomen sub celo, &c. p. 201, b. There is none other name under heaven, &c. Act. IV. 12.

O.

O Admirabile, CL. 1417. O wonderfull. Psal. VIII. 12.
O alma Redemptoris mater; O holy or pure [Virgin] Mother of our Redeemer; the beginning of a Hymn to the Blessed Virgin.
O Deus, Deus, non est dolor sicut dolor meus; O God, O God, there is no sorrow like unto my sorrow. Magd. 608, 609. The words seem to be taken from Lam. I. 12.
O pulchrior sole! O thou that art fairer than the Sun. Bal. 604.

P.

Pallas loquitur ad Parin; Pallas speaks to Paris. p. 557, a.
Pallas loquitur primò; Pallas speaks first. p. 557, a.
Pater noster, p. 435, a. The Lord's Prayer beginning with Pater noster, i. e. Our Father.
Placebo: I will please. p. 202, a.
Polus arcticus: The North Pole. p. 500, a.
Pone me juxta te, Magd. 574. Set me beside thee. Job XVII. 3.

Q.

Quia non est qui consoletur me, Magd. 514. Because there is none to comfort me. Lam. I. 2, 17.
Quia tulerunt Dominum meum, Magd. 30. Because they have taken away my Lord. Job XX. 13.
Qui cum Patre, &c. Who with the Father, &c. p. 214, b.
Quid malè feci tibi? What evil have I done unto thee? Magd. 500. Perhaps he alludes to those places in the Gospel, Math. XXVI. 52. Mar. XV. 14. Luk. XXIII. 22.
Qui gladio percussit; He that smiteth with the sword. Mo. 2185. He seems to refer to Math. XXVI. 52. Rev. XIII. 10.
Quod dilexi multum; That [or Because] I have loved much. Magd. 610. He alludes to the words of our Saviour concerning Mary Magdalen. Luk. VII. 47.
Quod sic repensè precipias me; That thou dost so suddenly cast me down headlong. Magd. 616. They are the words of the Vulg. Lat. in Job X. 8.

R.

Radix [omnium] malorum est cupiditas, No. 1848, 1940. Covetousness is the root of [all] evil. 1 Tim. VI. 10.
Remedium contra peccatum Accidia; Remedy against the sin of Accidy. p. 204, b. See Accidle in the Gloss.

Relevatio contra peccatum Avaritia; Relief [or Remedy] against the sin of Covetousness. p. 205, b.
Remedium contra peccatum Luxuria; Remedy against the sin of Lechery. p. 209, a.

S.

Sagitta tua infixæ sunt mihi, Magd. 602. Thine arrows are fixed [or stick fast] in me. Psal. XXXVIII. 2.
Salve Regina; Hail Queen. Bal. Lad. 216. The beginning of a Hymn to our Lady.
Sanctus Deus: Holy God. Mo. 2169. Sanctissimus: Most Holy. Ib. 2170.
Sed non respondet mihi; But he doth not answer me. Magd. 498.
Sequitur de gulâ: Here followeth [a Discourse] concerning Gluttony. p. 207, a.
Sequitur secunda pars penitentia; Here followeth the second part of Repentance, or Penance. p. 210, a.
Significavit, Prol. 664. "It is a Writ which issues out of the Chancery, upon a Certificate given by the Ordinary of a man that stands obstinately Excommunicate by the space of forty days, for the laying him up in prison without Bail or Mainprise, until he submit himself to the authority of the Church: And it is called so because Significavit is an Emphatical word in it. There is also another Writ of this name, directed to the Justices of the Bench, willing them to stay any Suit depending between such and such, by reason of an Excommunication alleged against the Plaintiff; because the Sentence of the Ordinary that did excommunicate him, is appealed from, and the Appeal yet depends undecided. Bl. L. D.
Solum [mihi] superest sepulchrum, Magd. 612. The Grave alone remains for me. Job XVII. 1.
Summum bonum; The chiefest Good. p. 359.
Suspensus in patibulo; Hanged upon a Gallows [or Cross] Magd. 168.

T.

Tablis Toletanis, Fr. 2829. Tabela Toletana, Alphon- sus's Tables to calculate the Motion of the Planets for the Meridian of Toledo. Sp.
Tanquam cera liquefens, Magd. 147. Like melting [or melted] wax. Psal. XXII. 14.
Tarditas: Slowness. p. 204, b.
Te Deum amoris; Thee the God of Love. CL. 1402.
Trabe me post te, Magd. 512. Draw me after thee. Cant. I. 4.
Tuum [ipsum] animam pertransibit gladius, Magd. 450. A sword shall pierce through thine own soul. Simeon's words to the Blessed Virgin, Luk. II. 35.
Tu autem; But thou—CL. 1401. It very often occurs in the Psalms.
Turpe lucrum: Filthy lucre. Mo. 2261.

V.

Ubi posuerunt eum; Where they have laid him. Job XX. 2.
Velociter exaudi me, Magd. 570. Hear me quickly. Psal. LXVIII. 18.
Venite: Come ye. CL. 1360. The beginning of Psal. XCV. Venite, exultemus.
Venus loquitur ad Parin; Venus speaks to Paris. p. 557, b.
Via Appia: A High-way or Causeway leading from Rome through Capua to Brundisium; so called from one Appius who made it.
Ut Achisophel ad Absalom; As Achisophel to Absalom. p. 202, b. The Poet seems to allude to 2 Sam. XVI. 21.

A Trans-

A Translation of the French in CHAUCER.

A.

A Moy qui voy; To me who see. AL. 308.

B.

B Alade de bon conseil [l. conseil] A Ballad of good counsel. p. 543, b.

Bien monesté; Well warned or advised. AL. 675.

Bien et loyalement; Well and dutifully or faithfully. AL. 88.

Bonne [l. bon] hostel; A fine, fair or good Palace. Fr. L. 2. 514.

C.

C Est sans dire; It is without saying. AL. 627.

Comment raison diffinist aunsete, p. 251, a. Corruptly for desinit amitié; How Reason defined Friendship.

Comment raison vient a l'amant, p. 247, a. How Reason cometh to the Lover.

D.

D Ont vient la desfinie [l. desfinée] Bal. Lad. 185. The destiny (or appointment) wherof cometh [to pass.]

E.

E N dieu est, AL. 489, 654. In God is—sc. my trust. See Ib. 655.

Entierement vostre; Intirely yours. AL. 616.

Estreignes moy de cœur joyeux; Embrace me with a joyfull heart. Bal. Lad. 231.

Et je scay bien que ce n'est pas mon tort; And I am sure it is not my fault. Bal. Lad. 236.

J.

J Ay en vous toute ma fiance; I put all my trust in you. Bal. Lad. 147.

Jay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour; I have quite lost my time, and my labour. Fort. 7. And so it should be read in p. 197, a.

Je serve Joveffe, Hyper. 224. I serve—Joveffe, f. l. Jovense, the Fem. of Jovneur, A Gamester, a Jester, one that plays the Wag; and it is either applicable to this Ballade, or to his Lady, whom he prays to accept in game the imperfections of it. Ib. 222.

Je voudray, Hyper. 198. Perhaps for Je voudrois; I would [fain.]

Je vous die [l. dis] sans dont [l. doute] I tell you without doubt, i. e. for truth. Fr. 574.

L.

L A belle dame sans mercy; The fair Lady without mercy. p. 442, a.

La belle margarete [l. marguerite] The fair Daisy. Bal. 588. See Margarite in the Gloss.

L'amant; The Lover. p. 424, &c.

La dame; The Lady. p. 424, &c.

L'ardent espoir en mon cœur point est mort,
D'avoir l'amour de celle que je desire;

The ardent hope is not dead in my heart to obtain the love of her whom I desire. Bal. Lad. 233, 234.

La priere de noire dame; The Prayer of [or, to] Our Lady. ABC. p. 588.

L'assemble [l. L'assemblée] de dames; The Assembly of Ladies. AL. 752.

L'envoy de Chaucer a les mariz [l. aux maris, or mariez] de nostre temps, p. 105. The Address of Chaucer to the married [persons] of our time. See L'envoy in the Gloss.

M.

M Eulx un, Hyper. 177. One best [in heart] Sp. f. Moulx, mol, or mou: Soft, tender.

O.

O Nques [f. ne] puis lever; I can never rise. AL. 598.

Or a mon [not amon] cœur; Now hath my heart. Bal. Lad. 193.

Or a mon cœur ce qui [l. qu'il] vouloit; Now hath my heart that which it desired. Bal. Lad. 192.

P.

P Leures pour moy s'il vous plaist amoureux; Weep if you please for me that am in love. Bal. Lad. 182.

Plus ne pourroy [f. pourray] I can do no more. AL. 364.

Q.

Q Ui bien aime tard oublie; He that loves well forgets late, or slowly. p. 413.

Qui est là? Who is there? No. 2722.

S.

S Ans que jamais: Without ever—sc. giving occasion. AL. 583.

Sans ose je dire; Without ceremony, without saying Ose-je dire; May or Dare I say it?

Si douce est la margarete [f. marguerite] So sweet is the Daisy. FL. 350. See Bargaret in the Gloss.

Sine [f. son] et mon joly cœur est endormi, FL. 177, 178. It seems to be the beginning of a French Song in use in Chaucer's time. f. l. Sur la feuille devers moy, son et mon, &c. Upon the Leaf by me, his and my pleasant heart is asleep.

Soyes assuré: Be assured, be of good cheer. AL. 666.

T.

T Ant me fait mal de partir de ma dame; So much does it grieve me to part [or, to be absent] from my Lady. Bal. Lad. 189.

Tant que je puis; As much as I can. AL. 208.

U.

U N sans changer: One without changing. AL. 590.

A short Account of some of the Authors cited by CHAUCER.

A

Æsculapius, is said to be an antient Physician before the Trojan War, very skillfull in that Art, which gave occasion to many Fables of his bringing the Dead to life again. Tosorthrus, the first King of Memphis in Egypt, was so called from his skill in Physick and Anatomy, concerning which he wrote several Books. See Hoffm. in Tosorthrus. There is a Book under that name entituled De morborum, infirmitatum, corporisque accidentium origine, causis, descriptionibus & curâ, printed at Strasburgh 1544. There was also a Philosopher of that name, who wrote something in Arithmetick.

Æsopus, a Philosopher born in Phrygia, in the time of King Cræsus, to whom he dedicated the Fables which he wrote.

Agathon, a Philosopher of Samos, who wrote several Histories. See Plutarch in Parall. minoribus.

Alanus, a Sicilian Poet and Orator, wrote, among other things, a Book De planctu Naturæ, i.e. Of the Complaint of Nature, partly in Prose, and partly in Verse.

Albumasar, otherwise called Japhar, a great Astrologer, wrote of sundry things in that Art.

Alcabitius, a Writer in Astronomy; as of the Conjunction of the Planets, &c.

Alhazen, an Arabian, wrote seven Books of Perspective.

Alphonse, see Petrus Alphonfus.

Ambrose, the worthy Bishop of Milan, in the year of our Lord 373.

Anselme, Archbishop of Canterbury, wrote of the Origine of the Soul, of Predestination and Free Will, of the Misery of Man, of Original Sin, &c. He flourished in the Eleventh Century.

Anticlaudianus is the name of a Book written by Alanus. Gesner.

Arion, a Greek Lyrick Poet, who flourished in the 38 Olympiad. Fa. L. 2. 497.

Aristotle, a famous Philosopher, Scholar to Plato, and Master to Alexander the Great: He was 345 years before Christ.

Arnoldus de Villa nova, wrote among other Works in Physick, Chymistry, &c. a Book called Rosarium Philosophorum.

Averroës, a Physician of Corduba, and a great Philosopher, who flourished about the year 1149.

Augustine, Bishop of Hippo in Africa, wrote more Books than ever did any in the Latin Church.

Avicen, a Physician of Sevil, wrote a multitude of Books in that Faculty.

B.

Basilius Magnus, Bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia in the Fourth Century.

Bernardus Abbas Clarevallensis, a Burgundian, wrote of the Contempt of the World, the degrees of Humility, of Grace and Free Will, of Conscience, and many other Subjects in Divinity. He flourished A. D. 1140.

Bernardus Gordonius, a Frenchman, Reader of Physick at Montpelier, wrote many things in that Faculty. He flourished A. D. 1498.

Boccace, a famous Italian Poet, born at Florence, Contemporary with Chaucer.

Bradwardine. See Thomas Bradwardine.

C.

Cassiodorus: Marcus Aurelius Cassiodorus of Ravenna, once Senator of Rome, afterwards a Monk and Abbot in lavenna, and Secretary to Theodorick King of Italy, was a very learned man, and wrote several things in Divinity, History, and other parts of Learning, and died about the year 562. Petrus Cassiodorus, an Italian, wrote that the Pope was Antichrist; and therefore was taken up out of his grave, and burnt about the year 1300.

Cato, a learned man amongst the Romans, flourished 182 years before the Incarnation. The Moral Disticks which go under the name of Cato, were written since his time.

Chrysippus wrote De Situ principatus Anima, which is confuted by Galen: He wrote many other Books, as Dio- genes Laertius says in his Life. He is often quoted by Athenæus, Stobæus, and Plutarch.

Claudian, a famous Latin Poet, born at Alexandria in Egypt: He flourished under the Emperors Theodosius and Honorius, in the Third and Fourth Centuries, being the most modern of the Antient Poets. He wrote, among other things, Four Books De raptu Proserpine, i.e. Of the stealing away of Proserpine.

Constantine the Monk wrote and translated many things in Physick; and amongst others wrote a Book De Coitu, quibus proffit aut oblit, quibus medicaminibus & alimentis augeatur, impediaturve. See Sq. 1327.

Corinna, a Theban Woman, and a Lyrick Poet: She wrote 50 Books of Epigrams, as Suidas and Pausanias report.

D.

Damasceus Presbyter, called also Manzarim, wrote in Greek 4 Books concerning the Orthodox Faith, and several other things in Divinity and other Sciences. He flourished in the Fourth or Fifth Century. Johannes Damasceus wrote some things in Physick. There was another Physician so called, who is said to have writ in the same Faculty.

Dante, called Dantes Aligerus, an Italian Poet, born in Florence. He flourished A. D. 1341.

Dares Phrygius wrote the History of the Trojan War in Greek, in which he himself was a Soldier. He lived 1123 years before Christ.

Diſſys Cretensis, or Historicus, wrote the History of the Trojan War, supposed to be translated into Latin by Q. Septimius Romanus in the time of Constantine the Great: But Vossius thinks that Work was not so antient, and that it was originally writ in Latin, though collected with very good judgment out of the Greek Writers. De Hist. Lat.

Dioscorides: There were two Physicians of that Name, and both Writers in their Profession; the one called Phacæ, or Lentinus, of Alexandria, lived in the time of Anthony and Cleopatra, and wrote of the Names of Medicines: The other, Pedacius Dioscorides of Anazarbus in Cilicia, lived under Nero, and wrote De materiâ medicâ, & Alexipharmacis. But they are confounded by some Writers.

G.

Galen, an excellent Physician of Pergamus in Asia, famous in the time of Trajan and the succeeding Emperors. Many of his Works are still extant in Greek. He dyed A. D. 140. in the 70th year of his Age.

Galfrius Monumethensis, or Geoffrey of Monmouth, translated a Book of the British History brought from Armorica, or Basse Bretagne, by Walter Mapes Archdeacon of Oxford, out of that Language into Latin; which he dedicated unto Robert Duke of Glocester. He lived in the Twelfth Century.

Galfrius de Vino salvo. See Gaulfride in the Glossary.

Gatſiden [John] called by some Johannes Anglicus, was a famous Philosopher, and Physician of Merton College in Oxford. He wrote a Book of Physick, entituled Rosa Medica. He lived about the Fourteenth Century.

Gilbertus Anglicus wrote a Book entitled, Practica & Compendium Medicinæ, much read by young Practitioners in Physick. Lel. de Script. Brit. p. 291.

Gregory, the first Pope of that name, surnamed the Great, wrote many Homilies and Comments, and other Works in Divinity. He flourished in the Seventh Century.

Guido de Columna, a Judge of Messina in Sicily, wrote the History of the Destruction of Troy in Latin after Dictys Cretensis (as he says) in the year 1287.

H.

Hali, an Arabian Physician, wrote a Book of the Composition of Medicines.

Helowis. See the Glossary. There is a Volume of Letters extant which passed between her and Abelard.

Hermes Trismegistus was Counsellor to Osiris King of Egypt. The Invention of Writing, Hieroglyphicks, the Laws of the Egyptians, and divers Sciences is attributed to him. There was another of that Name, a Disciple of Plato, who is said to have translated the Works of the former concerning Physick, Astrology and the Egyptian Theology, which are lost: Those that now go under his Name are supposititious.

Hieronymus Stridonensis [St. Jerome] wrote, amongst a multitude of other Books, some Discourses of Virginity and Monogamy.

Hippocrates of Coos, a most antient Physician, and Prince of all others, wrote many Books in Physick, which are extant. He flourished about 500 Years before Christ.

Homer, the famous Greek Poet, and the Father of Poets, lived about a Thousand years before the Incarnation of our Lord.

I.

Innocent, the Fourth Pope of that Name, born in Campania, lived in the Thirteenth Century. He wrote, amongst other things, a Book De utilitate humana conditionis.

Johannes Damascenus. See Damascenus.

John Som, or Some, a Carmelite, wrote some things in the Mathematics. See Lel. de Script. Brit. p. 347.

John Somar, or Somer, a Franciscan of Bridgwater, was a great Mathematician, and wrote several Tracts in Astronomy. Lel.

Josephus, a learned Jewish Priest, wrote in Greek Seven Books of the Wars of the Jews, and Twenty Books of their Antiquities, from the beginning of the World to the fourteenth year of the Emperor Domitian, in whose time he flourished.

Justinian, the Emperor, caused the Roman Laws, which lay scattered in above 2000 Books, to be collected into the 12 Books of the Code and Digests, and composed 4 Books of Institutes. He reigned in the Sixth Century.

Juvenal, a Latin Poet, famous for his Satyrs, flourished in the Reigns of the Emperors Domitian and Trajan.

L.

Lollius, an Italian Historiographer born at Urbino, who lived under the Emperors Macrinus and Heliogabalus, in the beginning of the Third Century, is said to have written the History of his own Time, and also the Life of the Emperor Diadumenus the Son of Macrinus. Tr. L. I. 395. Fa. L. 3. 380.

Lucan, a Latin Poet living in the time of Nero, wrote a Poem of the History of the Civil War between Cæsar and Pompey.

M.

Macrobius, a famous Critick and Antiquary, who, amongst other things, wrote a Comment on Cicero's Somnium Scipionis. RR. 7, &c. Mo. 1238. Dr. Ch. 283, &c. AF. 31, 111.

Martianus Capella wrote of the Seven Liberal Sciences, and 6 Books De nuptiis Philologiae & Mercurii; in the last of which he describes the Situation of Countries. Fa. L. 2. 478.

Maximianus. See Basse in the Glossary.

N.

Nicholas Lynne, a very learned Carmelite, was a very excellent Mathematician, and wrote several Tracts in Astronomy, and amongst others, Canones Tabularum.

Nigellus Wirker. See Burnel the Ass in the Glossary.

O.

Ovid, a famous Roman Poet in the time of Augustus.

P.

Pamphilus Presbyter, Kinsman to Eusebius, transcribed a great part of Origen's Works with his own hand, and wrote an Apology for him, and some other Tracts. He suffered Martyrdom at Cæsarea in Palestine in the Persecution of Maximus.

Petrarch, a famous Italian Poet, Cotemporary with Chaucer, and thought to be of his acquaintance. See Chaucer's Life.

Petrus Alphonsus, a Jew converted to the Christian Faith, wrote a Dialogue between Moses a Jew and Peter a Christian, against the Jews, and a Book of Science and Philosophy, and some other things. He flourished A. D. 1100.

Petrus Cassiodorus, a learned Italian Nobleman, did write to the Church of England, and perswaded them to cast off their obedience to the Roman Bishops, and to beware of their Tyranny, 1302. Sp. See Cassiodorus.

Ptolemy, an Egyptian Astrologer of Pelufium, who was famous in the time of M. Aurelius Antoninus. He wrote 8 Books of Geography, Almagestum in 13 Books, and 4 Books of Judicial Astrology.

Pythagoras, a famous Philosopher of Samos, lived 500 years before the Incarnation. He is at this day worshipped in India under the name of Brahma. See Hoffm. in Pythagoras.

R.

Rasis, an Arabian Physician, wrote many things in Physick.

Rufus, a Physician of Ephesus in the time of Trajan, wrote in Greek several Tracts in that Faculty.

S.

Seneca, a famous Roman Philosopher, Tutor to Nero, who suspecting him to be engaged in a Conspiracy against him, ordered him to chuse what Death he would dye: He chose to open a Vein, and accordingly bled to death in a Bath.

Senior Zarith wrote a Book of Alchymy. Gesner.

Serapion, an Arabian, wrote of the Composition of Medicines.

Statius. See State in the Glossary, and the Translation of the Latin in Chaucer, in Associat profugum Tydeus, &c. Strode, a learned man of Merton-College, Oxon. in Chaucer's time, and Tutor to his Son Lewis. See Chaucer's Life, and Strode in the Glossary.

Suetonius, lived under Trajan and Adrian, and wrote the Lives of the Twelve Cæsars.

T.

Tertullian wrote, amongst other things, a Book concerning the Attire of Women, &c.

Theophrastus Eresius, Disciple to Aristotle, amongst many other Works, wrote Moral Characters, wherein there is an Article of Niggardliness.

Thomas Bradwardine, Archbishop of Canterbury, flourished in the Thirteenth Century, and wrote a Book De Causâ Dei against Pelagius, which he dedicated to the Society of Merton-College. He also wrote many other Discourses; as, Of the Trinity, Of Predestination, tion, and other Subjects in Divinity; and also of Geometry, Arithmetick, and Proportions.

Titus Livius wrote the History of Rome, from the Foundation of the City to the Death of Drusus in 142 Books, many of which are lost.

Trotula, an antient Author, wrote a Book of the Cure of Diseases in and after Child-birth.

Tullius: M. Tullius Cicero, a Senator of Rome, Father of Eloquence, and pure Fountain of the Latin Tongue, flourished about 40 years before Christ's Incarnation.

V.

Valerius Maximus wrote to Tiberius Caesar a Book of the memorable Deeds and Sayings of Worthy Men, collected from the best Authors, and digested into Common places in 9 Books.

Virgil, a famous Roman Poet in the time of Augustus.

Vitellio, a learned Mathematician, wrote 10 Books of Perspective.

W.

William S. Amour, a Frenchman, wrote a Commentary on the Apocalypse, much inveighing against the Pope, and was therefore banished, and his Books burnt. Gesner says that he was a Doctor of the Sorbonne, and wrote Three Books against the Begging Fryars, entitled, De periculis temporum. He lived under S. Lewis.

Additions to the GLOSSARY.

Argumentis, Fr. 2833. See Expans yeres.

Attamed, Atame or Attame in Lidg. signifies To tast, to try; To attempt, undertake. Also To tell or declare; as, The trouth I dare attame. The truth to attame; I dare tell the truth, To tell the truth.

Bord. Concerning the Round Tables, to which Knights were formerly invited for the performance of Military Exercises, and the Ceremonies used upon those occasions, see Selden's Tit. of Hon. Part II. Ch. 5. §. 41.

Centris. See Expans yeres.

Cbeste: Strife. The nature of Cbeste is particularly described in Gower's Conf. Amantis, Edit. 1554. Fol. XLIX, b.

Clum: From the AS. Clumian, To mutter.

Collette, Fr. 2831. See Expans yeres.

Doseperis: Add to the Authors referr'd to in the Glossary, Selden's Tit. of Hon. Part II. Ch. 3. §. 17.

Entame seems to signify To hurt in Gower's Conf. Amantis, Fol. XI, b. If thou thy conscience Entamed hast; If thou hast wounded thy conscience.

Expans yeres. In Fr. 2829, &c. the Poet describes the Alphonfine Astronomical Tables by the several parts of them, wherein some Technical Terms occur which were used by the Old Astronomers, and continued by the Compilers of those Tables. Collect Years are certain Sums of Years, with the Motions of the Heavenly Bodies corresponding to them, as of 20, 40, 60, 80, 100, &c. disposed into Tables; and Expanse Years are the single Years, with the Motions of the Heavenly Bodies answering to them, beginning at 1, and continued on to the smallest Collect Sum, as 20, 40, &c. A Root, or Radix, is any certain Time, taken at the Author's pleasure, from which as an Era, the Celestial Motions are to be computed. By Proportional Convenientes are meant the Tables of Proportional Parts. Centre, Argument, and other Terms there used have peculiar significations in the Old Astronomers and the Alphonfine Writers, well known to Astronomers, which it would be too tedious to explain here, as well as unnecessary for common Readers.

Fese; To drive away. PT. 351. from the AS. Ferjan, Fugare.

Fret often signifies Adorned, garnished, &c. From the AS. Fretpan, Ornare, &c. Also an Ornament, &c.

Hokir: Abusiveness; from the AS. Hocer, Reproach, ignominy.

Loppe: The AS. Loppe signifies a Silkworm; and also a sort of Spider. Vide Ælfrici Gloss. p. 59, b.

Potenciall, Fa. L. 3. 5. should perhaps be Poetical.

Proportional Convenientes. See Expans yeres.

Reddour: Rigour.

Rotis, Fr. 2833. See Expans yeres.

Shapely: Proper.

Sinet, Synet, is often in Astr. put for the Zenith, or the Vertical Point in the Heavens, which is directly over our heads.

Tall. Instead of humble and thrall, CMV. 38. the former Editions had humble and tall: And Junius in his MSS. Additions to the Gloss. Goth. in Lord Harley's Library, says, the word signifies Obedient, obsequious, every way flexible. P. 368. in Antalans.

Weive: To avoid.

F I N I S.

ERRATA.

IN the Life of Chaucer, p. 3. l. 23. read Virgil. l. 32. Discourse. p. 4. marg. a. l. 2. in Oxfordshire. p. 6. l. 36. he took up. ib. marg. b. l. 8. T. R. p. 7. l. 48. in Oxfordshire. p. 4. l. 6. Fathers.

In the Testimonies. p. 2, a. l. 7. dele [.] l. 26. choysse. p. 3, a. l. 27. aftertith. l. ult. dele of. p. 5, b. l. 50. prostrate. p. 7, b. l. ult. put a (s) after relinquens. p. 8, a. l. 1. monte. p. 10, a. l. 10. own'd.

In the Preface. p. 7. l. 29. in a fair hand. p. 8. l. 43. purse, &c. p. 12. l. 60. Notices. p. ult. l. 21, 22. to run the risk. Before the Cut of Sir Thopaz, read The following Cut.

In the Royal Licence. l. 28. Hands.

In Chaucer's Works. p. 1. v. 23. read Hofstely. p. 2. 119. simple. p. 3. 187. bid. p. 7. 727. curtesie. 734. He mote. 741. spake. 749. us. p. 9. 939. thereaboutin. 1051. yellow. p. 11. 1308. your et. 1310. roukith. 1356. tell. p. 14. 1745. And. 1754. foche. 1806. wenin. p. 16. 2020. beris. 2052. of Mars. 2060. turnid. p. 22. 2917. raught. p. 26. 269. dele as. p. 31. 824. dele he. p. 32. 1061. flepist. p. 35. 1286. rift. p. 41. 622. seler is. p. 45. 1300. men. p. 48. 1774. wrake him of. p. 50. 116. dele to. p. 53. 428. cometh. p. 56. 845. the crosse. p. 58. 1075. hundred. p. 62. 437. dele and. p. 64. 640. hem. 671. Thus. p. 66. 742. the. p. 71. 1371. Than. p. 77. 203. told of it. p. 81. 790. dele [.] after plight. p. 82. 860. Elfquene. p. 91. 910. an. 545. God save me. p. 92. 569. this must. p. 103. 1890. your. p. 118. 349. as a man. p. 119. 449. dele [.] after n'is. p. 122. 800. fixe. p. 130. 1800. you. p. 138. 2506. It shall. p. 140. 2773. dele thing. p. 143. 3091. evangeliste. p. 150. b. l. 21. thy counsaile. p. 151. a. l. 36. but he have more love of the peple than drede. p. 152. b. l. 7. wickednesse. p. 155. b. l. 42. For. p. 158. a. l. 4. they. p. 159. a. l. 28. lordship. p. 164. 447. madin. p. 169. v. 1037. Nothing, God wote, but. 1047. lite. p. 172. 1385. Mermaide. p. 173. 1558. and. p. 175. 1644. In lifting. p. 176. 1840. ybraff. 1856. retcheless. p. 180. 2198. Eche one. 2221. riotours. p. 182. 2417. accomde with this. 2422. kende. p. 183. 2619. Hereto. 2623. understonde. p. 184. 2680. seke. p. 185. 2843. offren to now. 2869. shewe. 2876. thei. p. 186. 2888. this. 2961. ovirle. 2968. er [or ever] bite. 3006. making. p. 188. 3146. hem. p. 189. 3289. or flight. p. 196. a. l. 2. worlde. b. l. 32. or my praie. l. 51. shrifte, they. p. 198. b. l. 5. on other. l. 29. malison. p. 203. b. l. 59. doeth. p. 205. b. l. 12. rightfull. l. 35. of foche. p. 210. a. l. 13. it is mer. l. 48. lecherie. p. 211. b. l. 17. be shriren. l. 38. thou that shrirest. p. 216. v. 140. Portrayed. p. 217. 321. 343. forwe'full. 339. forwe. p. 218. 396. elden. p. 226. 1620. hath he set. p. 227. 1762. drewe. p. 228. 1949. bidding. p. 234. 2751. sleeth. p. 235. 2953. compendiously. p. 236. 3086. the. p. 237. 3202. well an high. p. 244. 4200. brade. p. 246. 4478. Thei doin. p. 253. 5560. gevith. p. 255. 5867. Thus. p. 257. 6044. fe. p. 259. 6405. plainin. p. 260. 6448. shriwing. p. 261. 6851. Or. p. 265. 7186. eyen fight. p. 268. 7637. It n'ere. p. 270. 234. skornin. p. 272. 432. bethe to me ben. p. 275. 814. he. p. 279. 229. ye it. p. 280. 420. worlde. p. 281. 462. slightly. p. 283. 761. knight that is. 800. hem. p. 290. 1672. And him with all. p. 295. 507. stonding. p. 297. 818. that is. 855. dretching. p. 298. 875. would him in forowe. p. 302. 1411. diddin. p. 308. 390. define. p. 310. 650. be ware. p. 312. 888. for to. 932. I him huter. p. 317. 1495. O gode. p. 318. 1626. a waie. 1655. Me glad. 9. clene. p. 319. 37. gan him to dresse. p. 321. 303. glede. p. 324. 769. throughout. p. 330. 1471. this Bore to se. 1567. he bad. p. 331. 1624. on e-will. p. 335. 242. penne and ink. p. 337. 65. forthwith. 131. gentilnesse. p. 339. 150. obervaunce. p. 341. 389. nat. p. 349. 92. the. p. 352. 72. for to be. p. 359. a. l. 9. overcome. p. 367. b. l. 1. sheweth. p. 368. a. l. 40. fairnesse. l. 42. 43. overwhelmeth. l. ult. rightfullie. p. 371. a. l. 5. piemente. p. 373. a. l. 9. festivally. b. l. 46. last. p. 374. b. l. 31. natheles. p. 376. b. l. 16. dele ut. p. 378. a. l. 55. ab ortu. b. l. 50. via devia. p. 379. a. l. 32. entrailes. b. l. 49. celebrite. p. 380. b. l. 51. in to [or two]. p. 381. b. l. 46. porismes. p. 386. b. l. 9. fyxe. p. 387. b. l. 10. that is. p. 389. a. l. 16. ne defoulet. p. 398. a. l. 46. wote. p. 399. a. l. 14. forme. p. 401. a. l. 7. in sensible. p. 402. a. l. 37. 38. by the propertie of. p. 403. a. l. 49. sie. b. l. 44. an [or on] high. p. 404. v. 30. whi so. p. 407. 526. amendes. p. 408. 638. hed. 668. I shulde. p. 410. 887. rought. p. 411. 1094. wolde. p. 412. 1254. ferthur. p. 413. b. v. 20. thralle. p. 414. 154. shove in at. p. 415. 180. shotir. p. 416. 363. The Ravin wife, the Crowe with, &c. 398. his shape. p. 417. 510. dele the. 540. these Egles. p. 418. 606. retche. 685. they. p. 420. 180. fayin. 185. 186. See Hylye in the Glosfary. 211. witte full. p. 422. 47. knowin. p. 425. 342. workis. 366. A will. 394. malice is set. p. 429. 739. a vauntour. 753. distain. 774. dele for. p. 431. 136. mete. 169. falle. p. 439. 741. substaunce. p. 441. b. l. 40. beddes. p. 442. b. l. 28. which is partie. l. 43. and it serveth. p. 443. b. l. 49. make of it. p. 444. a. l. 22. spirit. p. 446. b. l. 58. pole. p. 452. v. 159. on live. 209. offence. p. 454. 422. lesingoures. 458. Iment. p. 455. 553. sit. p. 457. 72. fere. p. 460. 327. Knowin. 371. counfaillid. p. 461. 397. rechales. p. 468. 35. fleyng. 47. ipake. p. 463. 206. amiddis. p. 467. 316. Goddesse. p. 468. 381. eke de Columpnis. p. 469. 616. tho. p. 470. 723. wickednesse. p. 473. 51. turvid. p. 475. 194. I sie. 284. threw. p. 476. 340. ware. p. 478. a. l. 39. understandyng. b. l. 22. hath. p. 480. b. l. 31. to meve when. p. 481. b. l. 3. sperkeland. p. 483. a. l. 7. on you. p. 485. a. l. 35. of mine. l. 42. 43. 44. dele in this cace to none other persone be committed, loke than (quoth she) p. 486. b. l. 5. conning. l. 67. to stretch to the. p. 490. a. l. 72. are. b. l. 9. chaunges, that. p. 492. b. l. 68. fide; beddes. p. 493. b. l. 9. secte. l. 59. manie. l. 66. that first. p. 496. a. l. 66. wightes. l. 67. thine? kinde. b. l. 17. men. p. 501. b. l. 7. failings. p. 502. b. l. 25. a wretch. l. 33. wretchednesse. l. 39. with gode forthgoing. l. 64. with her. p. 506. a. l. 17. rejoyce. l. 27. adew blis. p. 507. a. l. 24. make the knotte. b. l. 70. rightfully. p. 508. a. l. 13. solein. l. 31. constitution. l. ult. oyle. b. l. 30. frendship. p. 510. b. l. 64. withholde. p. 518. a. l. 40. I deny it ne. p. 520. v. 80. My bones. p. 527. 21. Bitterer. 91. abyce. p. 530. 9. and with faint. p. 531. 80. fel. p. 532. 61. n'ot. 82. oftir. p. 533. 12. he is. 82. Of Granlon, flour of. p. 534. 52, 53. to dele Astir, yf. p. 538. 111. in to. p. 539. 170. singin. 171. why ne wilt. 243. you. p. 540. 60. withholde. 116. fortune ne may. 547. 165. haboundaunce. p. 548. 222. blent. p. 549. 130. counsaile. p. 550. 113. wife-ly. p. 552. 240. ele. p. 554. 560. right well. p. 557. 794. then. p. 559. 1004. Me. 1027. algates. p. 560. 61. knew. p. 562. 284. this. 285. in mine. p. 563. 345. dele lady. 350. ye XX. 362. fal. 401. Firmely. p. 564. 491. dele of. 521. forthwith Rigour. 569. Goddes. 580. blissefull. p. 565. 628. Goddes. p. 566. 765. Guide me. p. 568. 984. erst. 1013. me. 1108. befene. p. 569. 1131. Soget. 1195. entent full. p. 570. 1311. with that. p. 571. 1404. onlocke. p. 575. 532. that ye. p. 576. 569. fare. 676. Far. p. 578. 887. wordleisse. p. 579. 1096. orderit. p. 587. 2177. Iwent. p. 589. T. 2. Fro. Z. 3. lessoun. p. 590. b. l. 46. mow. p. 591. a. l. 37. to here thrift. b. l. 51. seien. p. 592. a. l. 25. be ye. l. 35. payen. b. l. 50. take it. p. 594. v. 23. alreedy. 63. iwis. p. 595. 99. a rede ful even. 156. push. p. 596. 252. amayde. 292. and ystakid. p. 597. 341. ondo. 348. Iwis. 393. every man. p. 598. 458. atast. p. 599. 562. lene. p. 602. 304. his. p. 603. 405. lyve. p. 605. 619. wode man. 669. messager. p. 607. 838. hir mone. p. 608. 1057. world [wyde.] p. 609. 1097. our. p. 610. 1211. wrought. 1218. at the shippis. 1223. wode man. p. 611. 1302. bere. 1396. with percell. p. 613. 1566. were. 1576. afire. p. 614. 1730. yew. 1738. byhete. p. 615. 1883. wisdom. p. 616. 1982. byfall. 2042. afright. p. 617. 2051. braunche. 2155. so Geoffrey. p. 618. 2219. without, fare l. p. 620. 2461. fisnamy. 2475. yede. p. 623. 2936. chaungit. 1946. continuel—desperatioune. p. 624. 3082. stan dede.

In the Explanation of Abbreviations, &c. Col. a. l. 33. Compl. of tenus. 533. l. 52. Gamelyn.

In the Glossary. p. 4, b. l. 70. angre. p. 7, a. l. 16. mote. p. 11, b. l. 51. corrupted. p. 23, a. l. 32. D'owais. p. 26, a. l. 21. To embarasse, engage. p. 28, b. l. 14. There is no credit. p. 31, a. l. 20. Gasteridge-tree. l. 50. Particle. p. 33. b. l. 15. diceremur. p. 38, b. l. 22. Raked. p. 39, a. l. 10. See Wis. p. 45, b. l. 10. Merula. p. 46, a. l. 67. here. b. l. 21. Mistily. p. 51, b. l. 15. Pejorare. p. 52, a. l. 45. Tr. L. 2.—MS. Sp. p. 54, b. l. 20. A quire of paper. p. 56, a. l. 6. Reading. Some, &c. p. 61, a. l. 21. MS. Ch. p. 68, b. l. 29. Versefour. p. 70, b. l. 13, 14. I was well ured; I had, &c. p. 76, a. l. 35. sefe. b. l. 45. tuam. p. 77, b. l. 39. Tabula.

NOV 17 1971

